Idaho National Guard on the Hunt for Old Bombs

BY KATHLEEN KRELLER
Idaho Statesman

BOISE • Contractors and staff at Boise's Gowen Field are working to make sure the past doesn't come back to haunt them.

Using sound waves, digital maps and federal dollars, they are searching where bombs, grenades and ammunition were once stored.

Two areas are of special interest: a large field along Gowen Road that until the 1970s served as a munitions storage area; and the grounds around an old Marine Corps barracks.

The Idaho National Guard has Military Munitions Response Programs at military properties across the state, said Maj. Jim Hawkes, an environmental manager at the base.

The program cleans up former training ranges and munitions storage areas, making them safe for other purposes, Hawkes said.

The process started in the past decade and gained steam the past couple of years.

"It's a positive thing," Hawkes said.

TWIN FALLS • Children and adults put their bravery to a test Saturday at Tubbs' Berry Farm.

Honeybees circled in the air like mosquitoes on a summer evening as novice beekeepers and those with some experience arrived to purchase a special type for their hives, and to learn about the art from longtime beekeeper Kirk Tubbs.

Eight-year-old Kassy Kunzler, of Paul, showed no apprehension while watching the bee perched on her finger.

"That's cool," she said with a laugh. "He tickles."

The daughter of Kelly Kunzler could be nonchalant because she knew the secret: Male drones have no stingers. Only female worker bees will sting, if provoked.

"I hate to say this, but the drones don't do any work," Tubbs told his visitors. "They do one thing (mate) and then they die."

Dozens of people from as far away as Boise and northern Nevada and Utah drove to the farm to pick up a pack or two of the "hygienic" bees. Each container held 10,000 bees and cost $95.

Tubbs explained this type of bee is resistant to mites, which have been killing bees at an alarming rate since entering the U.S. about a

Lincoln Commissioner Hopefuls Focus on Budget Challenges

BY KIMBERLEE KRUESI

SHOSHONE • Three candidates are vying for the GOP nomination for Lincoln County Commissioners District 1 seat.

The position comes with a little over $15,000 stipend and includes medical benefits, and cell phone and mileage reimbursement. The position is currently held by Charles Ritter, who is seeking re-election during the November general election as an independent.

Candidates in the May 15 Republican primary are pushing a range of issues, but most agree that preparing Lincoln County's budget won't be an easy task.

Don Hudson has lived in the Magic Valley the least of all the candidates, but says he's been preparing for the position by attending the commissioner meetings.

Hudson said his main goal as commissioner is to make Lincoln County a better place to live. He plans to use his experience working with county su-supervisors while living in Virginia to help him guide budget decisions.

Hudson hopes the addition of the Chobani yogurt plant will provide more jobs for Lincoln County residents. If enough people from the county are hired, he would like to consider coming up with a carpool for future Chobani employees.

"If I get elected, I can sit in that chair and already know what the issues are," Hudson said.

Cresley McConnell said he's running because he believes he can help improve Lincoln County's community. One way he sees that happening is by cutting down the amount of litigation in the county by improving communication between county officials and the public.

Two Seek Lincoln Co. District 3 Nod

BY KIMBERLEE KRUESI
kkruesi@magicvalley.com

SHOSHONE • Come May 15, incumbent Lincoln County Commissioner Roy Hubert will face Betty Peyman for the GOP nomination in the commission's third district.

The two candidates are competing for a two-year term that pays a $15,000 annual stipend, medical benefits and mileage and cell phone reimbursement.

Hubert was appointed by Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter in mid-2011 when longtime Lincoln County Commissioner Jerry Nance stepped down to move to Oregon.

He says the knowledge he's gained working in the Magic Valley community for more than 50 years has proved valuable while working as commissioner.

"I've gone up to bat for what the people want," Hubert said.

During his term he said he's focused on improving senior housing organizations by finding funding for them through the Lincoln Chamber of Commerce.

If re-elected, Hubert wants to work with the Chamber to get many Lincoln dairies working with the new Chobani yogurt plant coming to Twin Falls this summer.

"We have 50,000 cows and we have the milk in our county, we need to get some of the jobs," he said.

For Peyman, she says her experience working on the Lincoln County Planning and Zoning Commission has raised her awareness of areas that need improvement.

If elected, she says she would advocate for more transparency and openness between the public and the commissioners.

CHRIS BUTLER - IDAHO STATESMAN - ASSOCIATED PRESS

A crew from United Metals Recycling finishes removing parts of the Hush House on April 24 at Gowen Field in Boise. The Hush House was used for testing jet engines. Experts have found contaminated soil under the structure.

The old bunkers and munitions buildings have been torn down. At Gowen, the former storage area is fenced off and empty, said Capt. Tony Vincelli, Idaho Air Guard spokesman.

"You can't really do anything with the area until the debris is cleared up," Vincelli said. "And the area hasn't been used in 40 years."

A contractor surveyed those sites with special equipment, identifying "anomalies" that show up as deep red swaths on a high-tech map.

Most likely, those red splotches are construction debris, said Senior Airman Heidi Caye, a base environmental expert.

"That's what we are hoping it is," Caye said. "But we have to make sure."

Between now and May 18, the base's environmental experts and a contractor will dig up those anomalies.

If contractors find any grenades, bombs or other dangerous materials, the area will be cordoned off and the explosives destroyed, Caye said.

"We are not expecting to find a bomb," she said.

Across the airfield on a Tuesday earlier this month, another contractor was using huge equipment to demolish and haul away an old "hush house." The building had been used to test jet engines.

Environmental studies showed that the soil beneath the structure could be contaminated with jet fuel. A nearby site was used to burn fuel, Caye said, before base managers ended that practice.

Once the last vestiges of the old building are removed, any contaminated soil will be scraped up and replaced, Caye said.

The work is being done under Department of Environmental Quality regulations, Caye said.

"It cuts down on the litigation when you communicate with each other," he said.

McConnell expects to face challenges working a shrinking county budget, but says he would look to see if the county could apply for grants for funding.

"I was always taught if you were going to complain about something, you better come with a solution," he said. "We can get a lot more done if we work together."

Finally, former Lincoln County Commissioner Rusty Parker said he originally submitted his intent to run for office because no other Republican was running at the time.

Now that he faces several opponents, he would like the chance to serve Lincoln County residents.

He said he believes the county is in a strong position financially and would like to keep it that way. He would also like to continue codifying the county's ordinances, a task he tackled while he was commissioner in 2001.

"We have to be careful in how we spend the taxpayers' money," Parker said. "I'm kind of out of touch with the budget, but I think I can get back in it. I think we can balance the needs of the county with what we have."

Magic Valley's Students of the Week

Academic • Minico Annelise Evans

Annelise, a senior, has maintained a 4.0 grade-point average and will graduate with honors. The National Merit Scholarship Corporation awarded her with a letter of commendation and she won the overall scholastic award from the Mini-Cassia Distinguished Young Women Program. She will attend Utah State University this fall with the intent of majoring in Elementary Education.

Annelise has captained Minico's Relay for Life team for three years, served as a board member of Minico's Key Club and served on the student council. She belongs to the National Honor Society, is active in the Young Republicans and participates with peer tutoring. She also mentors a child in the Lunch Buddies program. She feels one of her greatest achievements is her Young Womanhood Recognition and enjoys being active in her church.

Athlete • Xavier Erynne Pryor

Erynne, a senior, has danced for six years, three of those years at Xavier. She says dance is an integral part of who she is. "For me, dancing is an expression of the soul. It's a release and a way to articulate the things that words can't convey."

She began dancing at Motions School of Dance in Gooding, where she studied ballet and musical theater. At Xavier, she has taken classes in general dance, ballet, ballroom, modern dance, and choreography. A Making Dances class has "been especially helpful to learn to work with other people to create a piece," she said. "A lot of it, too, is learning different techniques in choreography and different ways to approach the creative process."

Erynne is an honors student at Xavier. For her senior Masterpiece Project she created a dance set to her original poetry. She plans to major in psychology and minor in dance in college.

Artist • Jerome Sabrina Cain

A 4.0 student, Sabrina is on track to be a valedictorian. She is an outstanding flute player and overall musician who has excelled at competition in both solos and ensembles. Sabrina is active, energetic and kind. Her leadership in the music program extends beyond her own performance and includes mentoring younger students. Sabrina will attend William Jewell College in Liberty, Mo., where she will major in music.

How are the AAA students chosen? We asked guidance counselors from schools all over the Magic Valley to work with the teachers at their schools to come up with some of the best and brightest students they could find.

New and veteran beekeepers from Idaho and surrounding states watch a hiving demonstration by Twin Falls resident Kirk Tubbs on Saturday.

Beekeepers

decade ago. The hygienic bees are rare enough that people will travel long distances to acquire them.

"Just like breeds in cattle, there are different breeds of bees," Tubbs said

That's what drew Fred and Elyssa Goins, of Marsing. There are bee vendors near their town, but none offering hygienic bees, which groom each other and knock off mites.

"We're trying to replace our white sugar with honey," Fred Goins said of their motivation to keep bees. The couple already dabbles in the activity and not entirely with good results.

"I don't mind them flying around," Elyssa Goins said, "but when he messes with the hives and I take pictures, I end up getting stung."

"I have fun and she takes the brunt," her husband agreed.

Tubbs uses bees to pollinate strawberries and raspberries on his farm. They can pollinate plants within a three- to five-mile radius before returning home.

He occasionally sells bees as a favor to other keepers, and to help beginners learn by conducting hiving demonstrations throughout the day. Tubbs got the hygienic bees from a northern California supplier, with the transaction taking a year to arrange.

Bee eggs hatch in three days and mature 21 days later. Their lifespan is only three to four weeks during the summer, so it's important to replenish the hive constantly. Bees know which hive to return to because they can smell their queen's scent, Tubbs said, even if two hives are side by side.

Russell Lintner, of Ketchum, purchased two packets of bees, and a $900 kit containing everything you need to get started — two suits to ward off stings, boxes to hold the hives, a smoker, and a frame. He manages property for a man who wants honey to alleviate allergies.

Lintner said keeping bees also encourages people to avoid using pesticides because they are harmful to bees.

"From what I've read, if we want to keep our bees we have to have a non-chemical environment," he said. "It's a dual benefit."

“I now have a new outlook on life.”

Last year, I went to a HealthFair screening. The ultrasound revealed that my right carotid artery was 75 percent blocked. The HealthFair technicians advised me to contact my family doctor immediately. A few days later, a vascular surgeon confirmed HealthFair’s findings, and I was told that I needed to have surgery on my carotid artery. The surgery solved the problem. I sing HealthFair’s praises regularly. I now have a new outlook on life and cherish every moment. Thanks for being there, HealthFair.

Idaho Federal Court Worker Honored for Her Service

BOISE • A long-time employee of the federal courts in Idaho has been honored by the legal community for her dedication to strengthening the effectiveness of the justice system.

Susie Boring-Headlee is the alternative dispute resolution coordinator and pro bono coordinator for Idaho's U.S. District Court, helping those in lawsuits reach settlements without going to trial and finding free or reduced-fee legal counsel for people who can't afford attorneys.

On Friday, the Idaho Fourth District Bar Association presented Headlee with the 2012 Liberty Bell Award, citing her volunteer work with organizations like the Citizens Law Academy and the Idaho Legal History Society.

U.S. District Judge B. Lynn Winnmill said Headlee's efforts made the court's mediation program a model for courts nationwide, calling Headlee a tireless advocate for the judiciary.

E. Idaho High School Requires Prom Date Screening

BLACKFOOT • A new policy at Blackfoot High School in eastern Idaho requires students fill out a guest form to bring a prom date if the date isn't a student at the school.

Principal John Pearce tells KIFI-TV that parents raised questions after previous dances.

The guest form says school administrators will contact the guest's school to check on behavior.

If the guest isn't a student, administrators will contact the Blackfoot High School student's parents to check on the guest's character.

Junior Brooklynn Miles notes the school handbook says prom is open to juniors and seniors and their dates without restrictions.

But Pearce says the school is trying to take the mystery out of who is showing up at the annual teenage rite of passage.

The school's prom is May 12.

BLM Wild Horse Citizen Panel Faces Conflicts

BY SCOTT SONNER
Associated Press

RENO, Nev. • This is not Boyd Spratling's first rodeo.

The new chairman of the U.S. Bureau of Land Management's Wild Horse and Burro Advisory Board has seen a lot in his 35 years as a veterinarian in rural northeast Nevada. But he admits, he's not sure what he's gotten himself into this time.

"This is one of those jobs where you will think, 'What was I thinking?'" Spratling told the eight other members of the citizen panel who nodded knowingly after backing him for the hot seat at last week's meeting in Reno.

The members of the advisory board face a complicated task of trying to balance the needs of the federally protected herds against competing interests of birds, livestock, ranchers and hunters while an ongoing drought and shrinking budgets limit their options.

"An incredibly difficult issue," said Joan Guilfoyle, the new national director of the BLM's Wild Horse and Burro Program. "It is probably in my mind the No. 1 land-management, human-dimensions issue in the country?"

By the end of last week's meeting, Spratling, of Deeth, Nev., was helping lead a complicated discussion of the latest research on reproductive drugs, vaccines and sterilization practices aimed at slowing the growth of horse herd populations that double naturally every five years if left unchecked.

The soaring cost of housing 47,000 horses removed from the range — significantly more than the 37,000 now estimated to be on public lands in 10 western states — has forced BLM to place more emphasis on population control and less on roundups. The $2 million in new spending within its $77 million budget for 2012 will be targeted at such research.

But in the meantime, the agency continues to struggle with myriad problems. Guilfoyle ticked off the biggest challenges, beginning with the fact the BLM believes there's still 10,000 more mustangs on the range than it can ecologically sustain.

Horse advocates disagree. They argue livestock should be removed from the range at a faster pace than the horses, which they say have a legal right to be there under the Free-Roaming Wild Horse and Burro Act of 1971.

But Guilfoyle insisted, "There is still a need to remove them to protect the range."

"Drought conditions are a big concern. Adoptions are still down," she said. "Long-term holding space — we are having a challenge getting enough of it. Short-term holding space is expensive because gas and hay is rising."

"Where do you put these animals? We only have so much money?"

And that doesn't address the emotional attachment some have to the mustangs.

"Some people think of them as pets," Guilfoyle said. "Some people think of them as wildlife, some think of them as livestock... some as pests. You have to remember it is viewed in so many different ways."

Leaders of some horse advocacy groups identify Spratling, past president of the Nevada Cattlemen's Association, as one of the "pro-livestock, anti-horse" members of the committee.

Spratling, who also served as a state wildlife commissioner for 10 years, said he is a strong advocate of protecting wild horses but believes the top priority must be maintaining the health of the range. He said his critics "know they can elicit emotion and a lot of these organizations, very honestly, they are looking to raise contributions."

Most controversial is the possibility of resorting to euthanizing or selling for slaughter some of the excess horses, especially the older ones. Current BLM policy — now under review by top administrators — requires those who purchase excess wild horses to sign papers promising they won't resell them for slaughter.

And while the agency has declined to utilize the option to date, current law gives the agency the authority to sell those animals "without restriction" in cases of some older horses that are offered for adoption three times unsuccessfully.

Ken Brown, field director of the Western Counties Association based in Murray, Utah, was among those who urged the panel last week to "reinstate the slaughter program."

Hugh Sanburg of the Colorado Farm Bureau said any horses held by the government in captivity for more than six months should be sold to the highest bidder "without limitation."

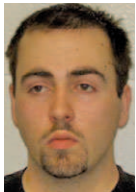

But Ginger Kathrens, founder of Colorado-based horse advocacy group The Cloud Foundation, warned panel members they would be messing with fire.

"Any recognition of this board to dispose of the wild horses would result in an unprecedented storm of protest and would undermine the efforts of those in BLM who truly work to forge a partnership with the public," she said. Joel Blakeslee of the Coalition for Nevada Wildlife said he's been following the issue since the 1970s and doesn't see any solutions on the horizon.

Canyon County Poised to Send Drone into Skies

NAMPA (AP) • Canyon County officials in southwest Idaho using federal grants have purchased a remote-control drone for aerial surveillance and public safety that can take still photographs, stream video and use thermal infrared video.

The county used U.S. Homeland Security grants to purchase the Draganflyer X6 drone for $33,500 and that should be flying in the next few weeks.

"I see it to be a huge benefit," Canyon County communications senior officer Christine McPartlan said. "It's a life-saving tool because if you're sending personnel into an unknown situation, you never know what's going to happen. As we get into this we'll be able to find more uses for it."

Officials said the drone can be used to help with investigations and surveillance of crime scenes, barricaded subjects, rescue missions and natural disasters.

The drone has six rotors, weighs about 2 pounds and is about 3 feet long. Its battery life is about 15 minutes. The device, according to the manufacturer's website, can maintain a location automatically by flipping a switch.

Steve Donahue of the Caldwell Fire Department said the Federal Aviation Administration must be notified before the drone is flown and it's limited to a height of 400 feet. He said the operator must also keep the drone in sight.

"Everybody is always hurting for money and personnel," he said. "We're looking at how can we do things smarter and faster."

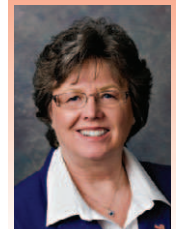

Officials said the drone won't fly over crowds or large bodies of water due to its short 15-minute battery life.

McPartlan said a search warrant would be needed to fly the drone over private property.

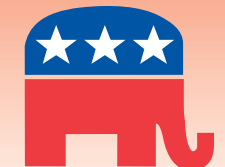

"We're not just going to go fly around people's private property and invade their privacy," McPartlan said. "We're obviously going to use this in a responsible way."

Donahue, McPartlan and county fleet manager Mark Tolman recently took part in a two-day training session in Saskatoon, Saskatchewan, to learn how to fly the craft.

OBITUARIES

James Eldon Jarvis

May 26, 1938-April 26, 2012

TWIN FALLS • James Eldon Jarvis, 73, of Twin Falls, died Thursday, April 26, 2012, at home, with his family by his side.

Jim was born May 26, 1938, in Eureka, Kan., the son of James Daniel and Mildred Jarvis.

He attended school and helped with the family farm until he enlisted in the U.S. Navy where he served for four years.

He married Lavella Myres on Nov. 4, 1959. Together they lived in Oregon, Payette, and Cascade, Idaho. They have two children, Marilyn and Rick. They were divorced in 1980. On Feb. 14, 2005, Jim married Patty Parks and they remained married until his death.

Jim was an avid elk hunter. He enjoyed sturgeon fishing and jet boating on the Salmon River. He also enjoyed taking a nap or reading a book beside a quiet camp; loved family barbecues, and homemade ice cream. He worked for a dairy in Corvallis, Timber Laminators in Payette, at the lumber mill, as a logger, and snowplow driver in Cascade. When he retired from Valley County Highway District he and Patty bought a home near Twin Falls and a winter home in Parker, Ariz. They enjoyed their time in both homes.

Jim is survived by his wife, Patty; his son, Rick and daughter-in-law Monique; his daughter, Marilyn and son-in-law Dave Kellerman; his sisters, Nelda Pape and Mary and brother-in-law Jim Van De Bogart; his brother, John Jarvis; and brother-in-law, Paul Pape. He is also survived by his grandchildren, Arianna, Ericka, James, Dominique, and Jessica.

He was preceded in death by his parents; his sister, Betty Pape; brother-in-law, Bud Pape; and his nephew, Darrin Van De Bogart.

A celebration of Jim's life will be held as a graveside service at 11 a.m. on Wednesday, May 2, 2012, with Pastor Andy Paz of the First Baptist Church in Filer officiating. Military honors by the Magic Valley Honor Guard and Idaho National Guard. At Jim's request there will be no public viewing. Services are under the direction of Trent Stimpson and staff at Reynolds Funeral Chapel, Twin Falls.

Condolences may be left for the family by visiting www.reynoldschapel.com.

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) • Bonner County officials who want federal protections removed from woodland caribou have hired the law firm that successfully argued before the U.S. Supreme Court a northern Idaho couple's wetlands dispute.

Jim Burling of the Pacific Legal Foundation tells The Spokesman-Review in a story published Sunday that attorneys will argue the southern Selkirk caribou herd isn't a distinct population and isn't eligible to be listed as an endangered species.

"There are millions of caribou to the north of us," said Mike Nielsen, a Bonner County commissioner. "I like caribou. They are majestic animals. I don't want to hurt them."

The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service has proposed designating more than 375,500 acres in the Selkirk Mountains as critical habitat for the endangered caribou. Most of the federal land is in Idaho's Bonner and Boundary counties and nearby Washington state's Pend Oreille County.

But commissioners in Bonner County said the plan will result in new restrictions on logging, snowmobiling and forest access. The county has agreed to pay the conservative, pro-property rights Pacific Legal Foundation $10,000 for representation and to petition for the caribou to be delisted.

The law firm represented Mike and Chantell Sackett in their lawsuit concerning an Environmental Protection Agency order that blocked construction of their new home near a scenic lake and threatened fines of more than $30,000 a day.

The Supreme Court ruled unanimously last month that property owners have a right to prompt review by a judge of an important tool used by the Environmental Protection Agency to address water pollution. The court rejected EPA's argument that allowing property owners quick access to courts to contest orders like the one issued to the Sacketts would compromise the agency's ability to deal with water pollution.

"We've been petitioned to delist the herd in the past," said Bryon Holt, a biologist for the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service. "We found that delisting is not warranted."

Woodland caribou, rarely-seen creatures that with their antlers stand as tall as a man, are struggling to survive in the United States, precariously occupying one remote area of the Northwest as a final toehold in the Lower 48.

Federal endangered species law requires that critical habitat be set aside for the caribou, and environmental groups went to court to force the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service to comply.

The agency last month extended the public comment period to May 21 on their proposal to create critical habitat for the caribou. Agency officials said requests from Idaho Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter, local governments and tribal officials prompted the decision to extend the deadline.

Effort Begins to Restore Whitebark Pine in Idaho, Montana and Wyoming

BILLINGS, Mont. (AP) • The U.S. Forest Service is attempting to grow whitebark pine that are resistant to blister rust as part of an effort to prevent the high-elevation tree from dying out in Montana, Idaho and Wyoming.

Workers have created a 15-acre nursery in the mountains south of Bozeman where seedlings resistant to blister rust are being grown, and limbs from older trees will be grafted onto the young trees to speed up seed production.

"Hopefully, they will be producing cones in four years," Jay Frederick, a wildlife biologist in the Beaverhead-Deerlodge National Forest, told the Billings Gazette.

He said it normally takes 30 to 50 years for the slow-growing whitebark pine to produce cones.

Grizzly bears depend on whitebark pine that produce high-protein nuts in the fall. The nuts allow bears to fatten up for hibernation. Besides bears, the tree is important to some 20 wildlife species and has been identified as a keystone species in the Greater Yellowstone Ecosystem.

The fenced nursery is costing about $20,000 a year for the next five years, and officials are hoping the trees will by then be producing seeds.

The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service acknowledged the tree is threatened but didn't list it as an endangered species because of other species with higher priorities.

Reasons for the decline, officials said, vary from a lack of forest fires that allow other trees to take over typical whitebark habitat, warmer weather that results in less snowfall and an environment where pine beetles can be more successful. The whitebark pine population has declined by 90 percent in some portions of the Northern Rockies, and experts say it faces the possibility of extinction in 120 to 180 years.

To turn things around, the Greater Yellowstone Coordinating Committee Whitebark Pine Subcommittee is regenerating trees from resistant seedlings as well as spraying existing trees with chemicals to ward off blister rust and pine beetle attacks.

"We're trying to maintain what we have and re-establish them where they don't exist," Frederick said. "But you won't see acres and acres of whitebark pine."

Plans call for 306 acres to be planted with seedlings in the Caribou-Targhee, Shoshone and other forests this year, followed by another 345 acres next year and 473 acres in 2014.

"We try to find micro-sites out of the wind and frost pockets to protect them from the weather," Frederick said.

Researcher Mary Mahalovich, based in Moscow, has been working for the Forest Service since 1998 examining the genetics of whitebark pine. She identified a strain resistant to blister rust that mostly came from northern Idaho and northwestern Montana where the trees first came in contact with the nonnative fungi in about 1925. Workers have planted seeds from about 1,000 of those trees in a Forest Service nursery in Coeur d'Alene.

"Even though whitebark pine has faced a quadruple whammy, we still have sufficient material for restoration," she said. "We just have to accelerate our production."

But Mahalovich said it's expensive, about $1,000 to $2,000 an acre to plant the trees. About 250 trees are planted per acre.

1000s Ticketed for Using Cellphones While Driving

CARSON CITY, Nev. (AP) • Thousands of Nevadans have been ticketed for violating a new state law prohibiting the use of cellphones while driving.

According to the Office of Traffic Safety, Las Vegas Metropolitan police issued 2,261 tickets in the first quarter of this year, while the Nevada Highway Patrol's northern command handed out 1,645 tickets.

Since the law took effect Jan. 1, the Nevada Appeal reports 1,007 drivers have been convicted of a first-time violation and four drivers have already been cited twice.

NHP Trooper Chuck Allen says hundreds of warnings also were issued the first three months of the new law.

Authorities say cellphone use while at a stoplight is one of the most common violations. They also attribute the problem to habit, saying drivers pick phones up when they ring.

2 S.W. Idaho Boys Killed in Single-vehicle Crash

Authorities say Jackson Sternberg and Dustin Williamson, both of New

Demolition Crew Discovers Old Cabin Inside a House

FARR WEST, Utah (AP) • A Utah man who started to demolish what he thought was a frame house discovered it was built around a pioneer-era log cabin.

Now, Randy Chambers plans to restore the cabin, which a history sleuth determined was built by an ancestor of his in the 1860s.

KSL reports that the cabin is a piece of history Chambers decided he'll keep.

Workers discovered the larger frame house was built around the log cabin after tearing down wallboard and finding more walls of hand-hewn logs.

The heavy logs were hidden from the outside by siding and additions.

The start of demolition also revealed an odd feature of the century-old frame house. It had two front doors.

What started out as a demolition has now turned into a mission by Chambers to preserve a piece of history.

He wanted to demolish the frame house adjoining his office to make space for a storage yard.

But as contractors started ripping out the plasterboard, they found more walls of a log cabin — and immediately recognized that demolition was going to be a much tougher job.

At first, "I thought it was a liability — because we didn't know how sturdy it was," Chambers said.

He began to wonder who built the cabin and when, and enlisted some help from somebody who collects property records and local history.

"That's the only log cabin I know of in existence in this town," Farr West historian Brian Taylor told KSL.

Taylor believes the cabin was built around 1868. But what he found next was more remarkable.

"It's a miracle," Taylor said. "There's just a series of miracles here."

The original owner, Leonidas Alfred Pritchett, just happens to be Randy Chambers' great-great-great-grandfather.

"I just wish the walls could talk so we could learn a little bit more about what happened," Chambers said.

In the early 1900s the new owners of the cabin decided it wasn't big enough. So they built a larger frame house around it.

Chambers says building a frame house around a log cabin isn't a good idea, "but I'm sure glad they did it."

RODEO

Weather Forces District V to 'Play Two'

BY DIANE PHILBIN
For the Times-News

GOODING • What good can a lot of deep sticky mud do to a rodeo arena?

For starters, when it's as bad as the DePew Arena at the Jerome County Fairgrounds was after heavy rain on Thursday, it gets the night of high school rodeo postponed and a substitute location has to be found. That was exactly the case for District V rodeo after the Friday night Jerome rodeo had to be moved to the dryer confines of the Gooding Fairgrounds for two rodeos on Saturday afternoon and night.

After the two rodeos, the girls all-around standings remained the same with Haillie Taylor from Hailey still maintaining the top spot followed by Darby Fox of Glens Ferry in second and Valene Lickley from Jerome third. Marlee Mussmann from Valley remained fourth and Jade Gorrell from Glens Ferry is sixth.

"I try to come out and place in all my events and I'm hoping to qualify for state," said the Glens Ferry senior. "Right before I'm ready to enter the arena, my mind set is that I know I can do it. It's just another job."

Asked what her favorite event of the four (barrels, breakaway, goats and poles) would be, brought a smile to Gorrell's face.

COLLEGE FOOTBALL

College of Idaho: Ready for Some Football?

School believes it can fill a niche for high school players who can't cut it at BSU or U of I.

BY JESSIE L. BONNER

CALDWELL • The College of Idaho discontinued its football program in the late 1970s, about five years before Marty Holly was hired as athletic director. Even by the time he went to work for the state's oldest private liberal arts college, the wound had not completely healed.

"It was quite a traumatic event for the school, dropping football," Holly said during an interview on campus.

At the time, it was necessary, he added, but that could be about to change.

College of Idaho officials have watched as Boise State University, roughly 30 miles east of the Caldwell campus, has turned into perennial Top 10 team.

They would like to see their school tap into some of the enthusiasm surrounding the Broncos by reviving their football program. The idea is College of Idaho could attract students who wouldn't make the cut at Boise State or the University of Idaho in Moscow, but could thrive at a small college.

These student athletes are now going to places like Carroll College in Montana and Willamette University in Oregon, Holly said.

"They are all coming into our backyard and taking out smart kids that in my opinion should be staying home so their families can see them play," he said.

The proposal to resurrect the college's long-dead football program is being

MAGIC VALLEY SPEEDWAY

LINDA BRITTSAN - FOR THE TIMES-NEWS

Scott Luttmmer is interviewed by Magic Valley Speedway announcer Terry Buell after his Pro Trucks main event win. Luttmmer won the Saturday night season opener for the second year in a row.

Moore's Slight Harsh, Understandable

THE NEWS: Boise State quarterback Kellen Moore goes undrafted in the NFL draft, signing an undrafted free agent contract with Detroit.

THE MUSE: The quickest way to reconcile any thoughts of perceived slight against the winningest college football quarterback of all time is as such: The NFL is a much different game than the college game and pro scouts don't look first at statistics but physical tools.

You say Doug Flutie was a short QB who thrived in the NFL? If Moore had Flutie's foot speed and elusiveness, it would be a good reference point.

Patrick Sheltra

While it's a tired argument when assessing the strength of Boise State as a team, the Broncos' level of competition should factor into the equation, even if only a small fraction, when scouting an individual player. Remind us again how two highly accomplished WAC quarterbacks in David Carr and Colt Brennan fared in the NFL?

Carr never lived up to his billing as the No. 1 pick in 2002, and Brennan is playing in the Canadian Football League. But say this for Moore, if there's a quarterback out there that can use his accuracy and football smarts to overcome a lack of size and speed to break the mold of the prototypical NFL quarterback, it's him.

THE NEWS: The Broncos have a program-best six players selected in the NFL Draft.

THE MUSE: As if head coach Chris Petersen needs another tool to entice recruits to come play to Boise State. Downright scary to realize this was Pete's first recruiting class, too.

It's understandable for some skepticism to exist over BSU's ability to be a national power in the post-Moore era, but if subsequent recruiting classes have even half the payoff as the 2007 class, the program will remain a fixture in the top 15. Minimum.

THE NEWS: Texas-San Antonio is headed to Conference USA in 2013, while other reports have Utah State and San Jose joining the Mountain West Conference. Additionally, Louisiana Tech is on a reported short list of three additional future C-USA members.

THE MUSE: For the sake of the athletics program at the University of Idaho, I hope Vandal leadership is

SAN ANTONIO • This was not another early playoff letdown by the San Antonio Spurs. For the first time in four years, they won a series opener.

But more important to them was Tony Parker looking like his old postseason self.

Putting together his best playoff game since 2009, Parker scored 28 points and the top-seeded Spurs erased four years of putting themselves in 0-1 holes to start the playoffs, beating the Utah Jazz 106-91 in Game 1 of their first-round series Sunday.

It marked the 11th straight win for the Spurs dating to the regular season, and kept the Spurs from being hounded by the same doubts that emerged this time last year when they also entered the playoffs as the No. 1 seed, only to be ousted by Memphis.

"I think everybody knows what happened last year," Parker said. "Everybody's motivated this year, but we don't even talk about it."

What Parker — and coach Gregg Popovich — have talked about is the All-Star's unremarkable series against the Grizzlies a year ago. Popovich told Parker that he thought his star point guard tried harder with the French national team last summer than in the playoffs, and Parker vowed to return with a different attitude.

He's making good on it so far.

The Jazz, meanwhile, hung close for three quarters in the franchise's first playoff game without Jerry Sloan since 1988. Paul Millsap led Utah with 20 points, but the Jazz couldn't keep up when

Luttmmer Shines as Trucks' First-night Star

BY LINDA BRITTSAN
For the Times-News

TWIN FALLS • Scott Luttmmer may wish every race was the first race of the season.

Driving for the ASA Pro Trucks Series Saturday night at Magic Valley Speedway, Luttmmer motored his way to an opening-night win for the second year in a row.

This time Luttmmer got to the victory lane by way of qualifying sixth and placing second in his heat race. Starting the main event from the second row, Luttmmer quickly went into the lead at lap four. Eight laps later the trucks of Jeff Pohlman and Doug Dugger tangled hard in turn four bringing out the only caution of the main event race.

Holding on to the front-runner position after the restart Luttmmer now had to concentrate on staying ahead of Jerry Rice and Hannah Newhouse. Fortunately for Luttmmer the pair fought for position for several laps before Rice settled into second. As the laps wound down, Rice tried to catch up to the No. 9 truck but Luttmmer's lead was too much for Rice to overcome before the checkered flag waved at lap 40.

Luttmmer said he didn't have much time to work on the truck before race day and had no idea how it would perform once he got to the track.

"I was a little worried when the caution came out because the truck hadn't been real great all day. But I thought if I could pull away from the field I would be alright. The last three laps I was just praying it would keep running because we blew the headers and it was misfiring."

Rice wound up finishing 1.464 seconds behind Luttmmer followed by Drew Reitsma, Newhouse and Johnny Pierre.

goats. "My horses are in good shape. Fonzy, my pole horse does have an attitude. He acts like running poles is just too much work."

Gooding rookie, Savannah Fleming, came into the Jerome rodeo tied with Crystal Ruby from Valley for the top girl rookie and eighth in the all-around standings. It just so happens that two of the freshman goals are to win the top rookie and finish in the top-ten in the all-around.

"Since I did okay last weekend, I felt like I had to keep improving this weekend," said Fleming who sat at the top of the goat standings after a first and second place finish a week ago in Glenns Ferry. Unfortunately, she didn't have the same kind of results in Gooding placing fourth and ninth in goats which dropped her to third in the goat tying standings and 11th in the all-around. She also added a tenth in barrels.

"As a freshman sometimes it's pretty easy to get discouraged competing against the older girls," said Fleming. "I'm still learning and practicing hard. I'm hoping to be able to make it to state like my sister, Jori did."

For Fleming, the lesson is a tough one but what comes out of a bad or the not-so-good weekend is to turn it into a good weekend.

Jared Parke from Gooding still holds down the top spot in the boys all-around and Gooding teammate, Brogan Bennett remains second.

The district moves to Shoshone next weekend with a 7 p.m. start on Friday night and a 2 p.m. start on Saturday.

Shake-up in District VI girls all-around

BURLEY • Another new leader emerged in the girls all-around standings in the District VI after Friday and Saturday rodeos.

Cara Vierstra from Filer picked up 69 points with two wins in goats, a first and second in breakaway, second and third in poles, and a fourth and fifth in barrels allowing her to take over the top position. Last week's leader, Macy Urrutia from Twin Falls dropped one spot to second.

After injuring her knee last week in Rupert, Oakley senior Jacee Bekee returned to action and finished with a fourth in poles and barrels and an eighth in breakaway. Bedkee had led the district girls all-around standings before the injury and is now in sixth place.

Jade Wadsworth from Kimberly still remains the leader in the boy's all-around. Wadsworth had wins in steer wrestling, calf roping and team roping with brother, Derek, who is second in the standings.

DUFNER NEEDS PLAYOFF TO BEAT ELS

AVONDALE, La. • Jason Dufner beat Ernie Els with a birdie on the second hole of a playoff Sunday in the Zurich Classic to win for the first time in 164 starts on the PGA Tour.

After entering the fourth round with a two-shot lead, Dufner shot a 2-under 70 at TPC Louisiana. Els had a 67 to match Dufner at 19-under 269.

After both players missed birdie putts within 8 feet on the par-5 18th, they went back to the 18th tee for the second extra hole, which Dufner won by hitting the green in two strokes and tapping home a short birdie putt after Els' birdie attempt from the fringe narrowly missed.

The 6-foot-3 Els, who goes by the nickname "The Big Easy," hasn't won on the PGA Tour since the 2010 Arnold Palmer Invitational at Bay Hill.

MOBILE BAY LPGA CLASSIC MOBILE, Ala. • Stacy Lewis won her second PGA Tour title, holding off hard-charging teen Lexi Thompson by a stroke.

Lewis, who held a five-stroke lead early in the day, reclaimed the edge with a birdie on No. 16, while the 17-year-old Thompson parred the final hole and had to wait.

Ernie Hall got his first win of the season in Street Stocks after coming from a mid-

When Hall crossed the finish line at lap 30 his closest competitor, Brandon Thomas, was nearly nine seconds behind him.

"The car was awesome tonight," Hall said. "We got the brakes fixed so this week we could drive deeper into the corners and it sticks there really well now."

In other racing action Jenna Quale assertively made her way ahead of Lane Walker late in the Hornets main event race. Walker soon reclaimed the front position and held on to the lead for his second win of the year.

The proposal to resurrect the college's long-dead football program is being touted as a way to boost enrollment, fundraising and the school's profile. As of June 30, the college's endowment boasted a $96.8 million balance, officials said.

"Do we want it bigger? Yes," Holly said. "Do we want more students? Yes. Do we want to tell our story so more people understand the quality that we are. Yes."

The latest attempt to resuscitate Coyote football has advanced further than past efforts — but is being met with strong skepticism from some students who think the violence of the game doesn't mix well with a liberal arts college that prides itself on academics.

The college has produced six Rhodes Scholars and is ranked among the nation's 200 best liberal arts colleges by U.S. News & World Report. It has about 1,000 students who pay an average of $22,000 a year in tuition.

"We have a really tight knit group here, and the bigger the school gets, I think the less that's going to happen," said 19-year-old freshman David Weatherby. He also questioned the need for football as a revenue generator for the college.

"It's mind boggling to me that we're really that poor," he said.

Trustees are expected to vote on whether to reinstate football in early May. School officials aren't releasing many details, such as how much startup funding they'll need and where that money will come from, before the vote.

But Holly is optimistic. He and school President Marv Henberg plan to meet with Frontier Conference officials in June. The conference, which is in the NAIA Division, hasn't extended a formal invite to the Idaho college but has offered a lot of encouragement, Holly said.

Government Keeps Picking Winners, Losers on the Farm

Here's the first thing to understand about federally subsidized crop insurance: In an era when direct payments to farmers are increasingly difficult to justify, crop insurance subsidies are becoming the main way in which public policy supports commodity crop farmers.

The farm bill negotiations taking place this week in the Senate Agriculture Committee will undoubtedly enshrine insurance subsidies — and fund them — at an unprecedented level. Look at any chart showing the rate of growth in federal spending on crop insurance over the past decade, and you will see what I mean.

Large corn and soybean producers that I know in my area love this program. They would go to the mat to defend the insurance subsidies as important vehicles of public policy. As one agriculture researcher recently told me, current insurance programs and federal subsidization levels have made it almost impossible for an Iowa corn producer to lose money in a given season.

There are many reasons public support for agriculture is critical to rural economies, to the security and stability of our nation's food supply, and to the American public. The point isn't to argue that support should be eliminated or even reduced; with 2 percent of the nation's population producing all the food, society has a strong interest in providing a safety net for this tiny minority.

But as a vegetable producer interested in seeing a diversity of crops return to parts of the Grain Belt, I am troubled by the U.S. Department of Agriculture's increasing reliance on crop insurance as the primary element of the farm economy safety net.

Here's the second thing to understand about the issue: Crop insurance subsidies have the effect of picking winners and losers among crops on the farm landscape. When the Agriculture Department rewards four commodity crops — corn, soybeans, wheat and cotton — with 75 percent of the public crop insurance subsidies, and when the absolute value of those subsidies is rising at a double-digit rate for yet another year, it's no wonder these crops dominate.

With Agriculture Department support and big money so firmly behind commodity crops, there are inevitably other crops — and producers — that are left out in the cold. As a practical matter, it is impossible for me to purchase insurance for any of my vegetable crops, federally subsidized or otherwise. In fact, in the first 15 years of its existence,

Jack Hedlin

Bloomberg News

my farm received not a single dollar of federal support of any kind.

Decades of research have demonstrated that Americans should be eating more fresh fruits and vegetables, and fewer processed foods sweetened with corn syrup. My farm's history of steady growth has shown that there is a huge market for quality fresh vegetables throughout the Midwest; the public is crying out for locally and regionally grown produce. Why then is federal policy so skewed?

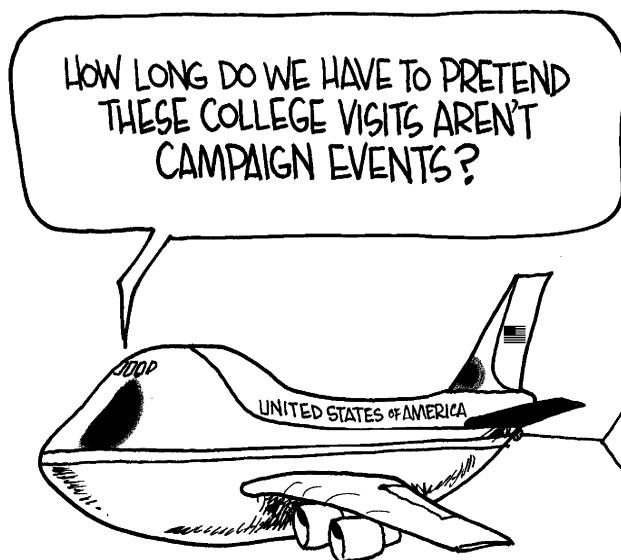

There is a glimmer of hope in the farm bill negotiations on Capitol Hill and lawmakers have an opportunity to address this issue. The Agriculture Department's Risk Management Agency created a pilot whole-farm revenue program in 2006, allowing farmers like me to insure revenue rather than crops.

The trouble is that a report released Tuesday by the Union of Concerned Scientists found that the program, as it stands, has significant design flaws. The policy's premiums are too high relative to the level of coverage, making the policy less effective. It's also not available nationwide, with Washington, Oregon and California accounting for almost 80 percent of the whole-farm revenue policies sold in the past two years.

Yet, research funded by the Risk Management Agency itself has demonstrated that a few critical changes to the program's structure could make it a viable tool to manage risk for farms like mine. Congressional negotiators should include whole-farm revenue insurance — and the funding for it — in this year's bill.

The crop insurance issue is ultimately one of fairness and public priorities. By directing so little money and attention to vegetables and alternative crops, Congress and the Agriculture Department are rewarding some farmers at the expense of others. Many of these neglected farmers are producing healthful crops for a part of the food economy that has been booming in recent years: local food. But federal policy has the effect of discouraging the production of fresh fruits and vegetables for local and regional markets.

If the American public wants to see more and better fresh produce options on supermarket shelves, it will want to see growers like me step up and take risks to expand their production. The way to do that is to correct the imbalances in federal crop insurance subsidies.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Editor's note: The Times-News will accept election-related letters until May 9.

Chandler Would be Approachable as Commissioner

I would like to recommend Wayne Chandler as Gooding County commissioner.

He has been a lifelong member of the community and has a good understanding of issues we face in this county. I first met Wayne when we were both students at the University of Idaho and, over the years, I have been associated with him as leaders in the Boy Scout organization and as a board member of the Northside Beet Growers Association. He has a sense of fairness and respects people and their opinions. He can ask the hard questions without being objectionable and has a genuine concern for the community. He has a disarming personality, which makes him very approachable. Most people would be very comfortable visiting with him on any issue.

For these reasons, I support Wayne Chandler as commissioner for Gooding County.

Stop Using Old News to Support Your Candidate

"Try all things. Hold fast that which is good." (Harlow Curtis)

Tom Carter has done an excellent job as sheriff of Twin Falls County. He's running for re-election, and he deserves your vote. He's got mine.

Tom is one of the good guys. What you see is what you get. He's an honest, decent pillar of the community and a hard-working champion of law enforcement, with no hidden agendas.

Speaking of hidden agendas, you fools writing to the paper in support of Tom's opponent keep dwelling on an incident from the past that was perpetrated by Tom's predecessor and opponent in the 2008 election. You forgot to mention that those accusations surfaced only after Tom threw his hat into the race against a person doing the accusing who attempted to use those accusations to slander Tom and get his POST certification revoked.

If your candidate has as great a resume as you claim, then let him run on it. Stop manipulating old news to embellish your own skewed cause, or at least have the decency to be honest and tell the whole story.

If your goal is to outshine Sheriff Carter, you're wasting your time. That dog won't hunt anymore. Tom's record speaks for itself.

Tom's first term has been a shot in the arm for Twin Falls County. He's the guy I want in my lifeboat.

Re-elect Sheriff Tom Carter. He's earned it.

About That Curious Early Morning Object in the Sky

Thank you for printing the report of the meteor that struck the earth on Sunday morning, April 22.

It was not only seen in Nevada and California but also here in Idaho. My house is on the rim of the Snake River Canyon four miles north of Buhl. I have an unobstructed view of the prairie to the north, west and south. I was looking out my bedroom window toward the Owyhee area at 8 a.m. that morning and watched the most brilliant object I've ever seen streak toward the earth at warp speed, as the Trekkies would say.

It was disc shaped and had a shower of sparks behind it. It was huge. I've seen many "shooting stars" and comets in Texas, but this object was unlike anything I have ever seen before. It was broad daylight and sunny, but the meteor, with its tail, was silver-white and so brilliant that it out-shone the sun. It brought to mind the descriptions in the Bible of angels when they appeared to men and the description of Jesus Christ at his Second Coming when his appearance will be so brilliant that it will be seen by the entire earth.

I watched for awhile to see if a fire had been started when it struck the earth, but nothing else occurred. I am pleased that you printed the story and gave us the information about the unusual event.

Is Taxpayer Money Paying for McFall's Campaign?

After my family and I helped put up campaign signs for Dan Chatterton's campaign for Jerome County sheriff and seeing the time and effort this takes to do, I wonder why Jerome County pays the costs of putting up Sheriff McFall's signs for him. If using the county's vehicle and gas for campaigning is running the office like a business, we are victims of poor management. Doesn't that qualify as a campaign contribution from Jerome County to the candidate?

My dad, Dan Chatterton, says that he would not do that if the shoe was on the other foot, but that different people have different ideas of what a sheriff should do with the taxpayer's cars and money. Some sheriffs never drive anything but their county cars, even off duty and doing personal errands. He thinks the voters have to decide if this is a worthwhile use of our taxes. One county commissioner told my dad that Sheriff McFall wanted the county to buy his personal vehicle from him for $30,000 so he could drive that as a county vehicle. Sheriff McFall felt that was a good use of our tax money. Maybe this is why Sheriff McFall uses the counties vehicles like his own; he thinks they are.

There are easier ways to save the department money without wasting valuable time clipping coupons and shopping on the Internet. Try campaigning on your own dime and park the county vehicles when you are not really on taxpayer business.

Kauffman a Careful Thinker, Community-minded Leader

I write in support of Clark Kauffman's candidacy for House Seat B in District 25 of the Idaho State Legislature.

In my role as executive director of Idaho's wheat and barley advocacy association, I have worked for and with Clark for more than five years.

I know of very few people, if any, who are as dedicated, fair and passionate as Clark. His resume exhibits a litany of volunteerism, all while raising a family, running a diversified farming operation and creating several successful spin-off small business ventures.

I have found Clark to be a careful thinker and open-minded in his approach to any issue. He brings a refreshing common sense touch and unmatched work ethic to anything he is involved in. His experience is vast, running the gamut from his service to our country as a Vietnam veteran, to his community involvement, to his leadership in organizations representing Idaho agriculture, transportation and telecommunications.

I can think of no better candidate to represent the constituents of District 25.

Young Grizzly Bear Captured in N.W. Mont.

KALISPELL, Mont. (AP)

Montana wildlife officials say they have captured a young male grizzly bear in a residential area north of Columbia Falls in northwestern Montana.

Montana Fish, Wildlife and Parks officials tell the Flathead Beacon that the 4-year-old bear captured on Friday was caught in a trap intended for a much larger grizzly that has been getting into garbage in the area.

Officials say they fitted the 230-pound bear with a radio collar and released it Saturday in the Whale Creek area of the North Fork of the Flathead River drainage.

Officials say the bear had not previously been handled by wildlife officials.

Study: Heavy Teens Have Trouble Managing Diabetes

LOS ANGELES • New research sends a stark warning to overweight teens: If you develop diabetes, you'll have a very tough time keeping it under control.

A major study, released Sunday, tested several ways to manage blood sugar in teens newly diagnosed with diabetes and found that nearly half of them failed within a few years and 1 in 5 suffered serious complications. The results spell trouble for a nation facing rising rates of "diabesity" — Type 2 diabetes brought on by obesity.

The federally funded study is the largest look yet at how to treat diabetes in teens. Earlier studies mostly have been in adults, and most diabetes drugs aren't even approved for youths. The message is clear: Prevention is everything.

"Don't get diabetes in the first place," said Dr. Phil Zeitler of the University of Colorado Denver, one of the study leaders.

A third of American children and teens are overweight or obese. They are at higher risk of developing Type 2 diabetes, in which the body can't make enough insulin or use what it does make to process sugar from food. Until the obesity epidemic, doctors rarely saw children with Type 2 diabetes. The more common kind of diabetes in children is Type 1, which used to be called juvenile diabetes.

Doctors usually start Type 2 treatment with metformin, a pill to lower blood sugar. If it still can't be controlled, other drugs and daily insulin shots may be needed. The longer blood sugar runs rampant, the greater the risk of suffering vision loss, nerve damage, kidney failure, limb amputation — even heart attacks and strokes.

The goal of the study was simple: What's the best way for teens to keep diabetes in check?

The study involved 699 overweight and obese teens recently diagnosed with diabetes. All had their blood sugar normalized with metformin, then were given one of three treatments to try to maintain that control: metformin alone, metformin plus diet and exercise counseling, or metformin plus a second drug, Avandia.

After nearly four years, half in the metformin group failed to maintain blood sugar control. The odds were a little better for the group that took two drugs but not much different for those in the lifestyle group.

Even so, Zeitler said doctors would not recommend this combination drug therapy because Avandia has been linked to higher risk of heart attacks in adults. Those risks became known after this study had started.

Another study leader from Children's Hospital Los Angeles, Dr. Mitchell Geffner, agreed that Avandia can't be recommended for teens, but said the study makes clear they will need more than metformin to control their disease.

"A single pill or single approach is not going to get the job done," he said.

Among all the teens in the study, 1 in 5 had a serious complication such as very high blood sugar, usually landing them in the hospital.

The results were published online Sunday by the New England Journal of Medicine and presented at a pediatric meeting in Boston. The National Institutes of Health funded the study and drug companies donated the medications.

The "discouraging" results point to the need to create "a healthier 'eat less, move more'" culture to help avoid obesity that contributes to diabetes, Dr. David Allen of the University of Wisconsin School of Medicine and Public Health wrote in an accompanying editorial.

Judith Garcia still struggles to manage her diabetes with metformin and insulin years after taking part in the study at Children's Hospital Los Angeles. She has to remember to watch her diet and set aside time to exercise.

"Trust me, I'm working on it," said the 19-year-old who lives in Commerce, Calif.

Kelsi Amet, a 14-year-old high school freshman from Patriot, Ind., knows how tough it is to keep her blood sugar from skyrocketing. Diagnosed at age 12, she takes metformin and gives herself insulin shots before school and at bedtime.

There are times when she has to miss class because she has to prick her finger to check her blood sugar or go with her mother to Cincinnati Children's Hospital Medical Center for check-ups.

"I try real hard and all of a sudden, I'm back to high blood sugar" levels, said Kelsi, who was not part of the research.

Developer Looking to Sell South Georgia Town

TOOMSBORO, Ga. (AP)

A developer in south Georgia is looking for someone to buy a small town.

Toombsboro, a small community with about 700 residents, has one convenience store, a florist, a custom cabinet shop and a post office. The Coastal Courier reports that developer David Bumgardner, who owns many of the properties in town, is putting them on the market.

Bumgardner bought some of the properties from preservationist Bill Lucado and snagged others at auction about a decade ago with the intention of turning Toombsboro into a quaint tourist town.

But his plans changed. Now Bumgardner and Lucado are putting the town up for sale again. Lucado thinks it would be a perfect fit for a movie production company seeking a set or a music company looking for a great venue.

Woman Survives 4 Days in Utah Desert Without Food

BY MARTIN GRIFFITH

Associated Press

A Maine woman who endured four days without food and shelter in the remote southern Utah high desert says her faith and medical background helped her pull through the ordeal.

Physician assistant Victoria Grover of Wade, Maine, was recovering in a Utah hospital after being rescued Saturday in a rugged section of Dixie National Forest, north of the town of Escalante.

She told reporters on Sunday that she set out on a short day hike Tuesday with no food and only light clothing, and her problems began when she broke a leg on the return hike about 2½ miles from the trailhead.

The 59-year-old Mormon church member says while she was hungry and experienced pain, the worst part of the ordeal was the freezing nighttime temperatures and boredom she endured.

Vt. House in Resolution: Thanks for the M&Ms

MONTPELIER, Vt. (AP)

The Vermont House has passed a resolution thanking one of its members for the peanut M&Ms.

Rep. Ken Atkins, a Winoski Democrat, has carried on a tradition since 1999 in which every time there's a pause in legislative action for a House roll call, he dumps a bunch of M&Ms into a glass jar on his desk and other House members gather around for a snack.

The retired teacher says he likes a snack during House action, and he used to tell his students not to bring a snack to class without enough to share.

Atkins says he tried putting out plain M&Ms with the peanut ones once, but no one took the plain ones.

Montana Looking for Fishery Damage from Oil Spill

BILLINGS, Mont. (AP)

The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service has collected samples from fish in the Yellowstone River as part of a process to determine whether the fishery was damaged by last year's oil spill and if Exxon Mobil Corp. should pay for restoration work.

Workers captured rainbow trout and shorthead redhorse suckers on Wednesday downstream of Laurel where the company's pipeline beneath the river broke last July, resulting in an estimated 63,000 gallons of oil entering the river. Less than 1 percent was recovered. The cleanup of the spill last summer cost an estimated $135 million after pipeline repairs were factored in.

"We're pre-assessing right now to see if there is enough evidence to do a full-blown study," said Bob Gibson, spokesman for Montana Fish, Wildlife and Parks.

The state agency caught the fish using a jet boat fitted with shocking equipment that sent an electrical current through the water, stunning the fish that were netted and then given to U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service technicians.

The technicians from the Bozeman Fish Health Center used a portable laboratory at the Duck Creek fishing access. It could be several months before lab tests are analyzed.

"It would be premature to say something right now," said Larry Peterman, who is overseeing the fisheries work for the Department of Justice.

The trout and suckers were captured because they feed in different parts of the river and will give researchers a better idea of how the oil spill might be affecting the river.

Fish, Wildlife and Parks also collected fish last fall and found some with lesions, bleeding and lost scales. But not all the laboratory testing has been completed and other tests must still be done.

Additional fish will be collected later this summer below Laurel and farther downstream.

"We'll take tissue, organ and blood samples and down the road those will be analyzed," Peterman said.

Mike Ruggles, a fisheries biologist with Fish, Wildlife and Parks, said any fish harmed in the oil spill have likely already died.

More Families Building Their Own Tornado Shelters

BY PHILLIP RAWLS, HOLBROOK MOHR AND JIM SALTER
Associated Press

MONTGOMERY, Ala. • When deadly twisters chewed through the South and Midwest in 2011, thousands of people in the killers' paths had nowhere to hide. Now many of those families are taking an unusual extra step to be ready next time: adding tornado shelters to their homes.

A year after the storms, sales of small residential shelters known as safe rooms are surging across much of the nation, especially in hard-hit communities such as Montgomery and Tuscaloosa in Alabama and in Joplin, Mo., where twisters laid waste to entire neighborhoods.

Manufacturers can barely keep up with demand, and some states are offering grants and other financial incentives to help pay for the added protection and peace of mind.

Tom Cook didn't need convincing. When a 2008 tornado barreled toward his home in rural southwest Missouri, Cook, his wife and their teenage daughter sought refuge in a bathroom. It wasn't enough. His wife was killed.

Cook moved to nearby Joplin to rebuild, never imagining he would confront another monster twister. But he had a safe room installed in the garage just in case.

On May 22, Cook and his daughter huddled inside the small steel enclosure while an EF-5 tornado roared outside. They emerged unharmed, although the new house was gone.

"It was blown away completely — again," he said. "The only thing standing was that storm room."

Generations ago, homes across America's Tornado Alley often came equipped with storm cellars, usually a small concrete bunker buried in the backyard. Although some of those remain, they are largely relics of a bygone era. And basements are less common than they used to be, leaving many people with no refuge except maybe a bathtub or a room deep inside the house.

The renewed interest in shelters was stirred by last year's staggering death toll — 358 killed in the South and 161 dead in Joplin. So far this year, more than 60 people have perished in U.S. twisters.

Safe rooms feature thick steel walls and doors that can withstand winds up to 250 mph. They are typically windowless, with no light fixtures and no electricity — just a small, reinforced place to ride out the storm. Costs generally range from $3,500 to $6,000.

Sizes vary, but most hold only a few people. They can be bolted to the floor of a garage or custom-fitted to squeeze into a small space, even a closet. Some are so small occupants have to crawl inside. A few are buried in the yard like the old storm shelters of the late 1800s and early 1900s.

Before the twister devastated Joplin, the Neosho, Mo., safe room manufacturer called Twister Safe had four employees. Now it has 20.

"Business has probably quadrupled, at least," owner Enos Davis said. "We're selling 400 to 500 a year now, compared to maybe 100 before."

Twister Safe's spike in business is even more impressive in Missouri, which does not offer grant money for safe rooms, opting to use its share of federal disaster money for community shelters.

Missouri's choice spotlights a debate in states seeking better tornado protection: Is disaster aid better spent on safe rooms in individual homes or on larger public shelters designed to protect hundreds or thousands of people?

The downside of public shelters is getting there. Even with improvements in twister prediction, venturing out into a rapidly brewing storm is perilous.

"I wouldn't get my family into a car and run that risk," Joplin Assistant City Manager Sam Anselm said. "If you have the opportunity to put something in your house, that's what we would encourage folks to do."

In January, more than 50 people sought safety in a dome-shaped public shelter as a tornado ripped through Maplesville, Ala. No one was hurt.

"The shelter did what it was supposed to do," Mayor Aubrey Latham said.

Since 2005, 31 community shelters have been built in Missouri using FEMA funds, and nine others are under construction, according to Mike O'Connell of the Missouri State Emergency Management Agency.

That number is about to grow. Joplin voters earlier this month approved a $62 million bond issue that will be combined with insurance money and federal aid to build storm shelters at every school. The shelters will double as gyms, classrooms or kitchens.

St. Louis Tent Collapse Raises Safety Questions

BY JIM SALTER
Associated Press

ST. LOUIS • St. Louis officials are expected to more closely scrutinize the large tents commonly set up near downtown stadiums after one of the temporary structures collapsed in high winds Saturday, resulting in the death of an Illinois man and dozens of injuries after a baseball game.

Sam Dotson, a spokesman for Mayor Francis Slay, said it's unclear if adequate regulations were in place and being followed Saturday or if the disaster was simply the result of people not paying attention to severe weather warnings.

"This tent was inspected, but we need to make sure there weren't modifications to it," he said.

The fast-moving storm ripped a large beer tent at Kilroy's Sports Bar from its moorings and sent it and debris hurtling through the air about 80 minutes after the end of a St. Louis Cardinals game. Seventeen people in the tent were taken to hospitals and up to 100 of the 200 gathered were treated at the scene, which was near Busch Stadium.

St. Louis police spokeswoman Schron Jackson on Sunday identified the victim as 58-year-old Alfred Goodman of Waterloo, Ill., but she didn't provide a cause of death. Dotson said a medical examiner will do an autopsy Monday and a preliminary cause of death likely would be released sometime during the day.

Dotson declined to identify any of the injured, saying only that they were taken to various local hospitals. Officials initially said five people had been transported in critical condition, but later announced all had been upgraded to serious.

Questions about the tent's safety — especially in dangerous weather — remain unanswered.

ASSOCIATED PRESS

A party tent from Kilroy's Sports Bar in St. Louis rests against a railroad trestle near the bar after storm winds blew through the area following a baseball game between the St. Louis Cardinals and Milwaukee Brewers at nearby Busch Stadium Saturday.

Building Commissioner Frank Oswald said Kilroy's was granted a tent permit on April 11 and it passed inspection a couple days later. He said the city of St. Louis requires tents to be able to withstand winds up to 90 mph.

Dotson said Sunday that the wind gust that destroyed the tent — shattering the aluminum poles and blowing the structure onto nearby railroad tracks — was measured at over 70 mph.

"I don't know if the storms have gotten worse or if we've just become more sensitive after Joplin and the storms in the South," he said, referring to tornadoes that killed hundreds last year. "We've had severe weather downtown by the ballpark before. People need to be aware of their surroundings and have a plan. If there are storms or watches, what are you going to do?"

Weaker al-Qaida Still Plots Payback for U.S. Raid

WASHINGTON (AP) • A year after the U.S. raid that killed Osama bin Laden, al-Qaida is hobbled and hunted, too busy surviving for the moment to carry out another Sept. 11-style attack on U.S. soil.

But the terrorist network dreams still of payback, and U.S. counterterrorist officials warn that, in time, its offshoots may deliver.

A decade of wars in Iraq and Afghanistan that has cost the U.S. about $1.28 trillion and 6,300 U.S. troops' lives has forced al-Qaida's affiliates to regroup, from Yemen to Iraq. Bin Laden's No. 2, Ayman al-Zawahri, is thought to be hiding, out of U.S. reach, in Pakistan's mountains, just as bin Laden was for so many years.

"It's wishful thinking to say al-Qaida is on the brink of defeat," says Seth Jones, a Rand analyst and adviser to U.S. special operations forces. "They have increased global presence, the number of attacks by affiliates has risen, and in some places like Yemen, they've expanded control of territory."

It's a complicated, somewhat murky picture for Americans to grasp.

U.S. Special Forces Help in Hunt for Warlord Kony

OBO, Central African Republic (AP) • Deep in the jungle, this small, remote Central African village is farther from the coast than any point on the continent. It's also where three international armies have zeroed in on Joseph Kony, one of the world's most wanted warlords.

Obo was the first place in the Central African Republic that Kony's Lord's Resistance Army attacked in 2008; today, it's one of four forward operating locations where U.S. special forces have paired up with local troops and Ugandan soldiers to seek out Kony, who is believed likely to be hiding out in the rugged terrain northwest of the town. For seven years he has been wanted by the International Criminal Court for war crimes and crimes against humanity after his forces cut a wide and bloody swath across several central African nations with rapes, abductions and killings.

Part of the LRA's success in eluding government forces has been its ability to slip back and forth over the porous borders of the Central African Republic, South Sudan and Congo. But since late last year, U.S. forces have been providing intelligence, looking at patterns of movement, and setting up better communications to link the countries' forces together so that they can better track the guerrilla force.

Sent by President Barack Obama at the end of 2011, the 100 U.S. soldiers are split up about 15 to 30 per base, bringing in American technology and experience to assist local forces.

Exact details on specific improvements that the American forces have brought to the table, however, are classified, to avoid giving Kony the ability to take countermeasures.

Police investigate the destroyed van that plunged over the Bronx River Parkway Sunday in New York.

SUV Plunges into NYC's Bronx Zoo Grounds; 7 Killed

Authorities say the out-of-control van plunged off a roadway near the Bronx Zoo, killing seven people, including three children.

NEW YORK (AP) • An out-of-control SUV barreled across several lanes of traffic on a highway overpass Sunday, then plunged more than 50 feet off the side of the road and landed in a ravine on the grounds of the Bronx Zoo, killing all seven people aboard, including three children, authorities said.

The SUV apparently flipped over a 4-foot-high iron fence before landing upside-down on the property of the nation's largest city zoo. The cause of the crash was unclear, and police haven't yet said how fast the SUV was traveling. A city official said the guardrail's height would be one of the safety issues investigated.

The victims were three girls, ages 3, 7 and 10, an 85-year-old man and three women, ages 81, 45 and 39, police said.

The 45-year-old woman was driving. The victims' names weren't immediately released.

The Honda Pilot was headed south on the highway that cuts through a working-class neighborhood when it bounced off the median, crossed all southbound lanes and hit the guardrail, police said.

"Obviously, the vehicle was traveling at a high rate of speed," FDNY deputy Chief Ronald Werner said. "It hit something that caused it to become airborne."

Obama, Clintons Deepen Political and Policy Ties

WASHINGTON (AP) • Once a tense rivalry, the relationship between President Barack Obama and Bill and Hillary Rodham Clinton has evolved into a genuine political and policy partnership. Both sides have a strong incentive in making the alliance work, especially in an election year.

For Obama, Bill Clinton is a fundraising juggernaut, a powerful reminder to voters that a Democrat ran the White House the last time the economy was thriving. For the spotlight-loving former president, stronger ties with the White House and campaign headquarters mean he gets a hand in shaping the future of the party he led for nearly a decade.

Obama's re-election campaign has put Bill Clinton on notice that he will be used as a top surrogate, further evidence of how far the two camps have come since the bitter days of the 2008 Democratic primary between Obama and Hillary Clinton, now his secretary of state.

The current and former presidents teamed up to address supporters in Virginia Sunday night, the first of three joint appearances at fundraisers for Obama's campaign. The Obama campaign expected more than 500 people at a reception at the home of Terry McAuliffe, a close adviser to both Clintons and one of the most ardent protectors of their political brand, with tickets starting at $1,000. Eighty people paid $20,000 a head for a dinner afterward.

Clinton told the crowd that Obama is "beating the clock" to restore the economy to health. Digging out of similar financial holes has historically taken five to 10 years, Clinton said.

Collision Suspected in Yacht Mishap That Killed Three

ENSENADA, Mexico (AP) • A 37-foot racing yacht was reduced to debris that looked it "like it had gone through a blender," a searcher said Sunday after the boat apparently collided with a larger vessel, killing three sailors and leaving a fourth missing.

The U.S. Coast Guard, the Mexican navy and civilian vessels scoured the waters off the shore of both countries for the missing sailor from the Aegean, which was taking part in a 124-mile race that began Friday from Newport Beach, Calif., to Ensenada, Mexico. The sailboat, carrying a crew of four, was reported missing Saturday.

It was California's second deadly accident this month involving an ocean race.

Race officials said they had few explanations for what may have happened to the Aegean other than it must have collided with ship like a freighter or tanker that did not see the smaller vessel. The Coast Guard said conditions were fine for sailing, with good visibility and moderate ocean swells of 6-to-8 feet.

If the smaller boat was bobbing around in light wind, the crew might not have been able to get out of the way of a larger ship, perhaps a freighter, said Rich Roberts, a spokesman for the Newport Ocean Sailing Association, the race organizer.

China Activists Lifted by Blind Lawyer's Escape

BY ALEXA OLESEN
Associated Press

BEIJING • The surprising escape of a blind legal activist from house arrest to the presumed custody of U.S. diplomats is buoying China's embattled dissident community even as the government lashes out, detaining those who helped him and squelching mention of his name on the Internet.

The flight of Chen Guangcheng, a campaigner for disabled rights and against coercive family planning, is a challenge for China's authoritarian government and, if it's confirmed he is in U.S. custody, for Washington too. Assistant Secretary of State Kurt Campbell began a hurried mission to Beijing on Sunday to smooth the way for annual talks involving his boss, Hillary Clinton, Treasury Secretary Timothy Geithner and scores of officials.

Though Chen — a self-taught legal activist described by friends and supporters as calm and charismatic — hardly seems a threat, security forces and officials have reacted angrily, detaining several of his supporters and a nephew who fought with officials after the escape was discovered is on the run.

Police showed up at the home of veteran activists

Zeng Jinyan and Hu Jia, who met with Chen last week while he was hiding in Beijing. Police took Hu away Saturday for 24 hours. They questioned Zeng for about a half-hour at home, sounding, she said, "very unhappy" about Chen's flight.

"They were really irritated," Zeng said. "It was a big shock for them!"

Ai Xiaoming, a documentary filmmaker based in southern Guangzhou city, said Chen's escape has had the biggest emotional impact on Chinese rights advocates since jailed dissident Liu Xiaobo won the Nobel Peace Prize two years ago.

"There are many people now drinking toasts to him for the way he broke through his captivity, his difficulties, and pursued freedom," said Ai. "It's what we all want for ourselves in our hearts. Chen Guangcheng is an example to us. If a blind person can break out of the darkness to freedom, then everyone can."

China's state-controlled media have so far ignored the story despite its gripping narrative and the serious implications it could have on Sino-U.S. relations. Anything vaguely related to Chen Guangcheng is an example to us. If a blind person can break out of the darkness to freedom, then everyone can."

A BRAND NEW WAY TO SEARCH FOR YOUR NEW HOME

IF APRIL 30 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: You can earn an "A" for effort during the next four to six weeks as you relentlessly pursue your ambitions. Not only do you have the right attitude to make your way up the ladder of success, you also have the necessary dedication to see any job through to completion. Stay well balanced; joining a club or organization might offer you the right kind of contacts that will help you grow on other levels, as well. Wait until November to launch crucial personal plans or to seek advice for your health. That is when you will find the support and guidance you need to overcome any potential problems.

HOROSCOPE

Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Remember that you can get further with honey than with vinegar. You can dwell on the negative or accentuate the positive to set the tone for the work place. Take care of current business before anything new.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): It's the unsung heroes who make the world go round. You may not win any awards, but it is your hard work and perseverance that make the machinery run smoothly. Keep up the excellent work.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Don't fan the flames. You can make a bad situation worse by adding your two cents, so for the good of all just stay out of it. You've got plenty to do without interceding in the troubles of others.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Keep your gun holstered. Not everyone is looking for a fight, so you shouldn't take offhand comments as an excuse to do so. Roll with the punches and maintain a pleasant and professional manner.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Don't take a chance. You could be struck by lightning, but most likely it's not going to happen. Play it safe and leave gambling in Las Vegas. You'll need patience to see your project through to completion.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Life can't always be fun and games. Today you may have some unpleasant tasks to take care of, but rest assured that the sooner you get these behind you, the sooner you can do what you want.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Keep moving forward. Don't let distractions divert attention from current goals. Ignore what goes on around you until you've accomplished what you've set out to do. Follow your head, not your heart.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): In a pond full of little fish, it's the big fish that get fat. Keep your head down and try not to draw too much attention, as making waves could make big fish hungry. Buy yourself a treat for the fun of it.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Even with the best of intentions, bad advice is still bad advice. Take what others tell you with a grain of salt and draw your own conclusions. Sometimes what people say is just so much hot air.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Unless you are a Shakespearean actor, avoid the drama. Even in adulthood, some people still choose to engage in high school backstabbing and confrontation. No matter what your age, you're above all that.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): The workplace is for work, not for spreading your social wings. Keep your nose to the grindstone and save the fraternizing and gab sessions for after hours. Remember that Big Brother is watching you.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Ride out the storm. You may find yourself in the midst of unexpected developments that leave plans in disarray. Just keep your head and do what you can to pick up the pieces. Things will be back to normal soon.

DEAR ABBY: My 11-year-old niece, "Nina," has no table manners. I was surprised at her inappropriate behavior because her parents are well-educated people who were raised with good table manners.

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

I didn't say anything when Nina slathered clotted cream on her scone with her fingers, but I was disgusted. I did suggest she use a spoon after she scooped rice out of a communal bowl with her hand. Both of these incidents happened in restaurants.

Is there anything I can do when I must eat with this child? I know it may have been wrong of me to correct Nina in front of her mother, but we were all eating from the same bowl. Should I ignore her ignorance of basic table manners and keep my mouth shut?

— LOST MY APPETITE

DEAR LOST YOUR APPETITE: By age 11, children should have mastered basic table manners. (Not eating with one's fingers is one of the basics.) Is your niece learning-disabled? If the answer is no, you should discuss this with your sibling. Nina is at an age when she needs to know what's expected of her when she's out in public.

DEAR ABBY: My son came out of the closet last year. My first reaction was to tell him it was OK. (I had already suspected that he was.) I love him dearly and we're a close family. His brothers and sisters also accept and love him.

My husband and I are now struggling because we're not sure how God really views gays and lesbians. To listen to some religious people, my son will go to hell. I can't believe that God would create a person to be this way, then turn His back on him.

I tried reading the Bible, but the wording was hard to understand. I don't want to talk to my pastor about it because, even though I have accepted my son for who he is, I still have trouble talking to people about it because I'm not sure how they'll react. Do you believe a gay person will go to heaven?

— SOMEWHERE IN THE U.S.A.

DEAR SOMEWHERE: I believe that entrance to heaven is based upon a person's character, not his or her sexual orientation. Today, because of modern scientific studies, we know more about homosexuality than was known when the Bible was written, and that sexual orientation is not a "choice."

DEAR ABBY: Our daughter keeps hinting that we should give her money for her in vitro fertilization. We have concerns based on many issues, but the bottom line is we're not sure if she can handle motherhood.

Our daughter's marriage is shaky, and she struggles with many of her relationships and commitments in life. She is basically disabled by anxiety. Not only do we believe we should stay out of this, but we also think they can afford the procedure themselves. We would be happy for them if they had a child, but we prefer to avoid the money connection. What do you think?

— UNDECIDED IN MISSOURI

DEAR UNDECIDED: If you give your daughter money, it would be better spent on counseling and medication to help her overcome her anxiety disorder. A baby will not fix a shaky marriage, and could very well complicate it. Because your daughter and her husband can afford to pay for it themselves, they should not be hitting you up to fund the endeavor.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

"It is incident to physicians, I am afraid, beyond all other men, to mistake subsequence for consequence."

— Samuel Johnson

Today's deal is from the 1960s British Bridge World Simultaneous Par Contest.

The directed contract was three hearts by South, and the required lead was the unbid suit, diamonds. East wins the opening lead with the 10, and has to decide on a plan at trick two.

The problem is that declarer must be denied diamond ruffs in dummy, but besides that, East should realize he must restrict the diamond discards from declarer's hand.

Ace and another heart apparently solves the first part of the problem: Dummy's hearts as a source of ruffs are removed. But that does not deal with part two. Declarer simply draws the last trump, then throws losing diamonds from hand on clubs. And if East passively exits with anything but a trump, declarer plays to ruff diamonds in dummy and emerges with at least nine tricks.

The card to defeat the partscore is the heart five. Appreciating that the heart ace is still lurking, ready to deal with dummy's second trump, South sees that playing for diamond ruffs is a hopeless plan. He cashes the club king and ace, then discards a low diamond on the club queen. If clubs break 3-3, all would be well. But as the cards lie, West ruffs the third club, returns a trump to East's ace, and there are still two diamond tricks to come — one down.

ANSWER: On auctions of this sort, when you have no easy lead (e.g., an honor sequence or a five-carder), you tend to look for safety. Here it feels right to lead hearts; dummy rates to have either one heart or two, and as long as partner has any heart bigger than the eight, you should not cost your side a trick. If dummy has a singleton or doubleton honor, you surely rate to build quick tricks for your side.

Today is Monday, April 30, the 121st day of 2012. There are 245 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight:

On April 30, 1812, Louisiana (formerly the Territory of Orleans) became the 18th state of the Union.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:

In 1789, George Washington took office in New York as the first president of the United States.

In 1803, the United States purchased the Louisiana Territory from France for 60 million francs, the equivalent of about $15 million.

In 1900, engineer John Luther "Casey" Jones of the Illinois Central Railroad died in a train wreck near Vaughan, Miss., after staying at the controls in a successful effort to save the passengers.

In 1911, a fire broke out in Bangor, Maine, destroying much of the downtown area before it was brought under control the next morning; two deaths were blamed on the blaze.

In 1912, Universal Studios had its beginnings as papers incorporating the Universal Film Manufacturing Co. were filed and recorded in New York State.

In 1939, the New York World's Fair officially opened with a ceremony that included an address by President Franklin D. Roosevelt.

In 1945, as Russian troops approached his Berlin bunker, Adolf Hitler committed suicide along with his wife of one day, Eva Braun.

In 1958, the American Association of Retired Persons (later simply AARP) was founded in Washington, D.C.

In 1968, New York City police forcibly removed student demonstrators occupying five buildings at Columbia University.

In 1973, President Richard M. Nixon announced the resignations of top aides H.R. Haldeman and John Ehrlichman, along with Attorney General Richard G. Kleindienst and White House counsel John Dean.

In 1980, Queen Juliana of the Netherlands abdicated; she was succeeded by her daughter, Princess Beatrix.

In 1997, the Senate approved the nomination of Alexis Herman to be labor secretary. ABC-TV aired the "coming out" episode of the situation comedy "Ellen" in which the title character, played by Ellen DeGeneres, acknowledged her homosexuality.

Ten years ago: Benevolence International Foundation, an Islamic charity based in suburban Chicago, and its director were charged with perjury; authorities accused the charity of supporting terrorists. (Enaam Arnaout) later pleaded guilty to racketeering, admitting he'd defrauded donors by diverting some of the money to Islamic military groups in Bosnia and Chechnya.)

Five years ago: A British judge sentenced five al-Qaida-linked men, all British citizens, to life in prison for plotting to attack London targets, including a nightclub, power plants and shopping mall with bombs. An Israeli government probe faulted Prime Minister Ehud Olmert for what it called "very severe failures" in Israel's war with Hezbollah militants in Lebanon. Actor Tom Poston died in Los Angeles at age 85.

One year ago: A Libyan official said Moammar Gadhafi had escaped a NATO missile strike in Tripoli that killed one of his sons and three young grandchildren. (There have been conflicting accounts about whether Gadhafi's relatives even died in the airstrike.) In Moscow, Japan's Miki Ando defeated Olympic champion Kim Yu-na of South Korea at the world figure skating championships originally scheduled for Japan, which had been devastated by an earthquake and tsunami.
