T.F. Orders Developer, Petitioners to Mediation

Neilsen and Co., Canyon Park shopping center opponents will meet within 28 days.

BY MELISSA DAVLIN
mdavlin@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • There is still plenty of uncertainty about the Canyon Park shopping center.

On Monday, the Twin Falls City Council voted to send developers to mediation with petitioners who oppose parts of the planned canyon rim development.

The decision came after representatives from Breckenridge Homeowners Association and Concerned Citizens for Our Canyon presented a petition to the council that asked for mediation.

In their letter to the council, petitioners cited multiple complaints with the proposal, including concerns over traffic safety and aesthetics related to the planned development in north Twin Falls.

The council had mixed feelings on mediation. Councilmen Jim Munn and Shawn Barigar pointed out that every part of the development had already been thoroughly reviewed.

"We have vetted this in public," Munn said. "It's been clearly looked at. The mediation can serve absolutely no clear purpose in my mind."

Other council members disagreed, saying the canyon rim property is too important to the community to disregard citizens' concerns.

"I think we need to take a chance on this one, see if it can be resolved, and at least give it a shot and see if we can find a common ground between everybody," new Councilwoman Suzanne Hawkins said.

Because of the mediation order, the council voted to table further decisions regarding Canyon Park, including approving the final plat for the project.

JEROME JAIL BOND

Is Fourth Time a Charm?

Jerome County Sheriff Doug McFall gives a Thursday tour the Jerome County Jail in Jerome. The narrow hallways are a safety concern for employees in the 38-year-old lockup, one of the reasons why county officials seek voter approval of a $10.7 million bond issue to build a new county jail. Jerome County voters thrice turned down funding proposals for a new county jail. With more information and a $10.7 million price tag, county officials hope for a different result May 15.

JEROME • The scent of Thursday's freshly baked chocolate cake masked other smells that sometimes linger in the Jerome County Jail.

Box fans cooled the stagnant air while Mexican polka on the radio competed with a 24-hour TV news channel and towels strung from the ceiling drips from the pipes overhead. The sweet scent of cake offered a reprieve from the offense of sewage — a smell that sometimes wafts from the jail's drain pipes, County Sheriff Doug McFall said.

"Jerome County has been making do with what we've got for years," he said. Now, he hopes Jerome County voters will give jailers something new to work with.

On May 15, voters will be asked to approve a $10.7 million bond issue to fund a new jail. For the county to gain permission to sell bonds to fund the jail's construction, a 66.7 percent supermajority of county voters will have to approve the ballot measure. The first time the county put jail funding on the ballot, in 2009, the measure failed by only 25 votes.

But support slipped in the county's successive tries, as funding proposals again failed in May 2010 and

Jerome Co. Closer to Completing Poultry Rules

BY KIMBERLEE KRUESI
kkruesti@magicvalley.com

JEROME • Jerome County officials are closer to completing ordinances that outline regulations for poultry farms looking to settle in the county.

Currently, Jerome County's rules on confined animal feeding operations, or CAFOs, lack guidelines for large-scale poultry operations. The County Planning and Zoning Commission would like to amend that omission before potential poultry operators show interest in the county.

Last week, Jerome County P&Z held a public hearing on a proposed ordinance change that includes regulating not only poultry farms but any livestock contained inside a facility. The commission will review the proposal before sending it to the Jerome County Commissioners for final approval.

The county doesn't have any pending poultry applications right now, but it wants to be ready for future proposals, said Art Brown, Jerome County's planning and zoning administrator.

"This is directed at warehouse livestock," Brown said. "Right now, we only have one poultry operator in Jerome but in a way that's a good thing," Brown said. "We want this ordinance to be in place before we get the applications."

Brown estimated it could take up

EDEN MAN KILLED IN MONDAY ROLLOVER

TIMES-NEWS

BURLEY • An Eden man was killed early Monday in a crash on Interstate 84 northwest of Burley.

At about 5:46 a.m., Idaho State Police investigated the one-vehicle crash on I-84, about one mile west of the Burley exit.

Andrew Castello, 28, was traveling west in a 2006 Chevrolet Cobalt when he traveled off the interstate's left shoulder. Investigators say Castello moved back into the lane of travel and overcorrected, causing his vehicle to overturn in the median.

Castello was not wearing a seat belt at the time of the crash and died at the scene from injuries suffered.

Alcohol and weather are not thought to be factors, according to ISP.

The crash closed the northernmost westbound lane of I-84 while the investigation was completed.

Falls School District — are paying for the project. The school district will be responsible for utility and insurance costs.

“The Kiwanis donation helps us a ton to get started,” Wray said.

The facility will be named the “Twin Falls Kiwanis Club Athletic Training Facility.” The Kiwanis Club will present a check to school district administrators at 12:45 p.m. Thursday at the Turf Club.

The club raised funds over multiple years through its largest events: OctoberFest, a fireworks stand for the Fourth of July and MagicFest.

In order to pay for the building, Canyon Ridge volunteers still seek donations. Wray said during a school board meeting earlier this year that the project is estimated to cost $68,500. Since then, the building design has changed slightly to include changing rooms.

Canyon Ridge isn't alone in wanting an indoor athletics facility.

The original idea for an indoor baseball/softball facility came from Mike Donnelly, a parent with a similar proposal for Twin Falls High School. The district's school board approved the project in October.

Canyon Ridge followed in its crosstown rival's footsteps and against both projects, saying they would create an extra maintenance burden for district employees at a time when finances are tight.

Trustee Bernie Jansen voted against both projects, saying they would create an extra maintenance burden for district employees at a time when finances are tight.

Construction hasn't started on Twin Falls High's indoor athletics facility. Donnelly said Monday that construction won't begin until volunteers raise $60,000 — the project's cost.

Donnelly said volunteers have raised about $28,000 and are waiting to hear back about a few grants.

“It's going along just fine,” he said.

Stimpson said the Kiwanis Club hasn't been approached by anyone from the Twin Falls High project asking for a donation.

Five Seek Ketchum Council Spots

Two seats up for grabs after November change of government issue's failure.

BY KAREN BOSSICK
For the Times-News

KETCHUM • Normally, Ketchum voters don't pick City Council members in May.

That changed just for this year, after a bid to change the resort city's form of government failed in the November 2011 general election. Since a concurrent election of council members for the new form of government was voided, city voters will choose from five candidates to fill two seats on May 15.

Zions Bank commercial lender Charles Friedman hopes to keep the seat that Ketchum Mayor Randy Hall appointed him to in March, while one seat is open after Curtis Kemp decided not to seek re-election. The job pays $1,700 a month and includes health, dental, vision and long-term disability benefits and Idaho PERSI retirement benefits. Here's a look at the candidates:

Michael David

David said he's spent the past 17 years working with nonprofits, which gives him experience in getting groups to work toward a common goal. He would like to work with residents and businesses to make Ketchum “the friendliest town in the West once again.”

David said he'd live up to his campaign slogan, “Dialogue and Transparency,” by pressing for town hall meetings and the use of technology to gather public sentiment.

David points to a controversial proposal to put a transit center on East Avenue as one problem of transparency with the current council.

“We have to improve the perception that maybe everyone is not treated equally when a project comes through,” he said.

Charles Friedman

Friedman said his banking background gives him an understanding of the challenges small businesses are up against.

other social media. And he calls the proposed transit center on East Avenue the result of a propaganda campaign.

“They think we need one just because Aspen and Park City have one. These people have the belief that the automobile is the root of all evil. And when they get rid of it we will have utopia,” said Garcia, who gets around on a three-wheeled bicycle.

Garcia said he is as pro-development as it gets.

“I've supported every hotel proposal that's come around — loudly!”

Julie Lynn

Lynn says she is running partly because of the late Hailey reporter Roberta Mc Kercher's admonition that “you have to pay rent for the space you take up.”

Her work as a journalist gives her communication skills which, she said, is something the city needs.

“We need to get the word out about what is happening,” she said. “A lot feel they're not in the loop and we need to try to change that.”

Lynn said she doesn't believe the city needs a transit station on East Avenue, saying, “The current system is adequate.”

She believes the town can be more user-friendly for locals, visitors and businesses by improving walkability and signage and not limiting parking. Lynn stressed that she is a good listener and would be fair.

Jim Slanetz

Slanetz credits his two sons with prompting his efforts to improve Ketchum.

“I want to make a difference for them,” he said. “I go to a lot of meetings and I think it would be nice to have new faces.”

He adds that his status as a small business owner would help him represent that sector.

Slanetz said he would support more efforts to bring people from Boise to Sun Valley on buses.

“The ground transportation from Boise is not ridiculous — it's the same as going to Vail from Denver,” he said.

He says the much-debated transit center might be a good idea, “but it may be a better to have another location.”

to three months before the commissioners would vote on the ordinance change.

While Jerome County Commissioner Cathy Roemer agreed that planning for future poultry operators is a good thing, she doubted that the county will be hit with poultry operator applications in the near future.

“There's been discussion of this for a number of years and still nothing has come to fruition,” Roemer said. “There's nothing happening right now.”

Preparing for poultry operations has been a point of interest for both local and state officials since a 2008 vote in California banned the use of confining cages for poultry farms in the state, starting in 2015. While talk at the time was that California producers would quickly look to relocate, south-central Idaho has yet to see an influx of poultry business.

During the 2011 Legislative session, Idaho lawmakers approved transferring inspection and regulating authority from the Idaho Department of Environmental Quality to the Idaho State Department of Agriculture. This year, lawmakers went on to pass rules that tightened regulation guidelines, including approval on groundwater monitoring for repeat violation offenders.

Now, the region is just waiting on potential poultry operators to come to Idaho, Roemer said.

“I'm not sure if it'll ever happen,” Roemer said. “But we'll be prepared.”

About the Ordinance

The proposed ordinance outlines regulations for any large-scale livestock operation contained in one structure. The ordinance is similar to the county's version for dairy and beef cattle operations. Among its rules:

- Operators must apply for a permit if housing 1,000 or more animals in one structure.
- Livestock containment structures must be set back 50 feet from public roads, 50 feet from canals, and 300 feet from water wells.
- Untreated waste cannot be allowed to be applied directly to any land, but operators are allowed to use a fully enclosed waste disposal system on site, or contract with third parties to get rid of the waste. Visit bit.ly/KICAot to read the full ordinance.

Brackett Trial Again Delayed

TIMES-NEWS

TWIN FALLS • The trial for a Twin Falls man accused of sexually exploiting a 16-year-old girl has been delayed until August. The trial was scheduled to begin Monday.

Robert Benjamin Brackett, 43, is charged with eight felony counts of possession of sexually exploitative material which uses a child, six counts of sexual battery on a child aged 16 or 17 by committing lewd or lascivious acts, and one count of sexual battery on a child by making a photograph or recording.

Brackett was arrested in January 2011. Investigators claim to have found pictures of his alleged victim, a 16-year-old girl, on a digital camera at Brackett's residence.

According to court documents, Brackett allegedly engaged in sexual activity with the minor in his Twin Falls home on multiple dates in December 2010 and January 2011. He also allegedly detained the female at his home during a Jan. 9, 2011, argument.

Brackett has elected to represent himself and a four-day jury trial is now scheduled for Aug. 21, with jury selection on Aug. 17.

November 2010, by 1.2 percent and 7.2 percent, respectively.

"We need a jail to protect our citizens," Jerome County Commissioner Roger Morley said. "To be a responsible society we need a place to put those who offend the laws of our land."

The current jail doesn't cut it, Morley said. Regular citizens enter through the same door as inmates and the narrow hallways mean an inmate can reach out and touch a jail deputy as they walk by, no matter how close to the wall they walk.

"It has absolutely become a danger to the people working in there and it meets no Idaho jail standards," Morley said.

The jail, built in 1974, is run down, outdated and too small, Morley said. It holds about 30 inmates, but Jerome County consistently has 50 to 80 inmates to deal with. The overflow inmates are housed at other jails, sleeping on rented beds.

In 2011 the county spent $250,000 to house inmates elsewhere, and has spent $185,000 so far in 2012, Morley said.

Schematics for a proposed new jail, measuring 38,650 square feet, show it having 130 beds with room for future expansion, if needed. The excess beds could be rented out to other counties with more inmates than they can handle, reversing Jerome County's current situation, McFall said.

Dan Chatterton, who is running against McFall for Jerome County sheriff in the May 15 GOP primary, agrees the current jail isn't ideal, but says county voters have already made their decision.

"The voters have already spoken three times," he said. "What we're told by our elected officials is that people who voted need to be educated. It's almost a disrespectful way of saying you're not smart enough to vote on this?"

Chatterton's solution is to repair the problems in the current jail and make it last until a different answer is found.

A partnership with Gooding County once its new jail is built, looking into a private company to fund the construction of a Jerome jail, or simply building a smaller jail that would cost taxpayers less money are all possibilities, he said.

"Cut out the office space," he said. "That cuts out $2 million."

Money spent on transporting inmates to and from other jails may be expensive, but it is far less than it costs to run a new jail, Chatterton said.

Police tape and handcuffs adorn a bathroom stall at the Jerome County Jail Thursday in Jerome.

"If conditions are so horrible, why not close the jail and get people out of there?" he asked.

Many of the dangers commissioners and McFall warn of are just scare tactics to justify new offices and a fancier jail, Chatterton said.

"They'll say anything to get what they want," he said.

But with well-documented compliance issues, county officials have called conditions at the jail a potential disaster they've been lucky enough to avoid so far.

On May 15, voters will again have their say about how they value those issues.

IDAHO BRIEFS

Felonies for Unreported Child Crimes Not Supported

BOISE • Idaho prosecutors who have pushed lawmakers to impose tougher legal consequences on those who fail to report violent crimes have lost a key statehouse supporter.

During the last session, Republican Sen. Denton Darrington got behind a bill to make it a felony in cases when adults willfully fail to report abuse, neglect and violence against minors.

The bill never got a full hearing in the Senate Rules and Judiciary Committee, chaired by Darrington.

Darrington tells the Idaho Statesman the bill failed to win enough support among his fellow lawmakers, despite some high profile child abuse cases in Idaho in recent years.

Members of the Idaho Prosecuting Attorneys Association say Darrington's retirement from the Senate dims future hope in passing a tougher law.

Business Helps GOP Incumbents Facing Libertarians

BOISE • Pro-business groups have pumped $30,000 in late-breaking campaign contributions to Republican incumbents facing libertarian-leaning challengers in the May 15 primary.

Since May 1, for instance, Sen. Shawn Kough of Sandpoint received $5,000 from grocers, hospitals, insurers and real estate agents.

The head of the Idaho Association of Realtors, John Eaton, says groups like his have chosen sides with candidates they believe offer consistency for businesses.

CIA Thwarts 'Undetectable' al-Qaida Bomb Plot

BY ADAM GOLDMAN AND MATT APUZZO
Associated Press

WASHINGTON • The CIA thwarted an ambitious plot by al-Qaida's affiliate in Yemen to destroy a U.S.-bound airliner using a bomb with a sophisticated new design around the one-year anniversary of the killing of Osama bin Laden, U.S. officials said Monday.

al-Asiri

The plot involved an upgrade of the underwear bomb that failed to detonate aboard a jetliner over Detroit on Christmas 2009. This new bomb was also designed to be used in a passenger's underwear, but this time al-Qaida developed a more refined detonation system, U.S. officials said.

The FBI is examining the latest bomb to see whether it could have passed through airport security and brought down an airplane, officials said. They said the device did not contain metal, meaning it probably could have passed through an airport metal detector. But it was not clear whether new body scanners used in many airports would have detected it.

Sen. Dianne Feinstein, D-Calif., who heads the Senate Intelligence Committee, told reporters Monday that she had been briefed about an "undetectable" device that was "going to be on a U.S.-bound airliner."

There were no immediate plans to change security procedures at U.S. airports.

The would-be suicide bomber, based in Yemen, had not yet picked a target or bought a plane ticket when the CIA stepped in and seized the bomb, officials said. It's not immediately clear what happened to the alleged bomber.

White House spokeswoman Caitlin Hayden said President Barack Obama learned about the plot in April and was assured the device posed no threat to the public.

"The president thanks all intelligence and counterterrorism professionals involved for their outstanding work and for serving with the extraordinary skill and commitment that their enormous responsibilities demand," Hayden said.

The operation unfolded even as the White House and Department of Homeland Security assured the American public that they knew of no al-Qaida plots against the U.S. around the anniversary of bin Laden's death. The operation was carried out over the past few weeks, officials said.

"We have no credible information that terrorist organizations, including al-Qaida, are plotting attacks in the U.S. to coincide with the anniversary of bin Laden's death," White House press secretary Jay Carney said on April 26.

On May 1, the Department of Homeland Security said, "We have no indication of any specific, credible threats or plots against the U.S. tied to the one-year anniversary of bin Laden's death."

The White House did not explain those statements Monday.

The CIA mission was such a secret, even top lawmakers were not told about it as the operation unfolded, one U.S. official said Monday.

The AP learned about the thwarted plot last week but agreed to White House and CIA requests not to publish it immediately because the sensitive intelligence operation was still under way. Once officials said those concerns were allayed, the AP decided to disclose the plot Monday despite requests from the Obama administration to wait for an official announcement Tuesday.

The FBI and Department of Homeland Security acknowledged the existence of the bomb late Monday, but there were no immediate plans to adjust security procedures at airports. Other officials, who were briefed on the operation, insisted on anonymity to discuss details of the plot, many of which the U.S. has not officially acknowledged.

"The device never presented a threat to public safety, and the U.S. government is working closely with international partners to address associated concerns with the device," the FBI said in a statement.

It's not clear who built the bomb, but, because of its sophistication and its similarity to the Christmas bomb, counterterrorism officials suspected it was the work of master bomb maker Ibrahim Hassan al-Asiri or one of his proteges. Al-Asiri constructed the first underwear bomb and two others that al-Qaida built into printer cartridges and shipped to the U.S. on cargo planes in 2010.

Obama's Vague Gay Marriage Stance under Fresh Scrutiny

BY JULIE PACE
Associated Press

WASHINGTON • President Barack Obama's election-year vagueness on gay marriage is coming under fresh scrutiny.

Education Secretary Arne Duncan broke ranks with the White House on Monday, stating his unequivocal support for same-sex marriage one day after Vice President Joe Biden suggested that he supported gay marriage as well.

Obama aides worked to manage any political fallout. They said the back-to-back remarks by two top administration officials represented personal viewpoints and were not part of a coordinated effort to lay groundwork for a shift in the president's position. Obama aides also tried to use the latest flare-up in the gay-marriage debate to shine a light on GOP rival Mitt Romney's history of equivocating on some gay-rights issues, an attempt to turn a potential political problem into an opportunity.

Obama, who supports most gay rights, has stopped short of backing gay marriage. Without clarification, he's said for the past year and a half that his personal views on the matter are "evolving."

The White House held firm on Monday to that position, which polls show puts the president increasingly at odds with his party and the majority of Americans on gay marriage. But with Biden and Duncan's comments reinvigorating the debate, Obama is likely to face renewed pressure to clarify his views ahead of the November election.

Throughout his first term, he has sought to walk a fine line on same-sex marriage. He's trying to satisfy rank-and-file Democrats by supporting a range of gay rights issues without alienating crucial independent voters who could be turned off by the emotional social issue.

The president's aides acknowledge that his position can be confusing. In states where gay marriage already is legal, the president says married gay couples should have the same rights as married straight couples. But he does not publicly support the right of gay couples to enter into a marriage in the first place.

Duncan, a longtime friend of the president as well as a member of his Cabinet, made clear Monday that his position on gay marriage was not in lockstep with the White House. Asked in a television interview whether he believed gay couples should legally be allowed to marry, Duncan said simply, "Yes, I do."

His comments followed Biden's assertion Sunday that he was "absolutely comfortable with the fact that men marrying men, women marrying women and heterosexual men and women marrying one another are entitled to the same exact rights, all the civil rights, all the civil liberties."

Obama aides said Duncan was speaking about his personal views on the issue and was not under orders from the White House or the campaign to take his position.

As for Biden, White House and campaign officials said the vice president's remarks were no different from what he and Obama have said in the past.

"They were entirely consistent with the president's position, which is that couples who are married, whether they are gay or heterosexual couples are entitled to the very same rights and very same liberties," said David Axelrod, a senior adviser to the Obama campaign. "When people are married, we ought to recognize those marriages."

The latest political dust-up over gay marriage came just before North Carolina voters were to weigh in on a ballot initiative that would ban gay marriage in that state. Obama opposes the ban, as does former President Bill Clinton, who has recorded automated phone calls ahead of the vote. Obama was heading on Tuesday for Albany, N.Y., where lawmakers voted last year to approve gay marriage in that state.

'Lost' Star Matthew Fox Arrested for DUI in Ore.

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) • Actor Matthew Fox, star of the television series "Lost," has been charged with drunken driving in Oregon.

Police in Bend say the 45-year-old who lives in the Central Oregon city was stopped early Friday after an officer noticed a motorist failing to signal properly or stay within a lane of traffic.

During the stop, the officer decided Fox was driving under the influence and took him to the Deschutes (duh-SHOOTS') County Jail.

Fox was released Friday after he was booked into custody. He has a court appearance scheduled for June 17.

The authorities would not release the police report or any additional information.

Gassy Dinosaurs Helped Warm Earth

WASHINGTON (AP) • Potty humor just got prehistoric. A new study suggests that dinosaurs may have helped keep an already overheated world warmer with their flatulence and burps 200 million years ago.

The research published Monday in Current Biology suggests that large dinosaurs made a significant contribution to the greenhouse effect back then. Study author David Wilkinson of Liverpool John Moores University in England estimated that about 570 million tons of methane came from dinosaurs. That's similar to total atmospheric levels of methane today produced by livestock, farming and industry. Cows alone now produce nearly 100 tons a year of methane.

The study looks at the biggest — and presumably gassiest — dinosaurs, called sauropods. These were the long-necked plant eaters that munched on the top of trees. They were large animals that had food fermenting in their guts for long periods of time because of their giant size, said University of Maryland paleontologist Thomas Holtz, who wasn't part of the study.

Wilkinson said dinosaur gas was just one factor at a time when the world was quite tropical, about 18 degrees warmer than now (10 degrees Celsius). But he said some in the media and blogosphere have misinterpreted his study to say it was the main cause of ancient warming. In a phone interview, Wilkinson said it was only one of the causes, but dinosaur gas "is big enough to be a measurable effect."

What caused the ancient pre-human world to be so hot — just the way the dinosaurs needed it — was a variety of factors. Volcanoes spewed much more greenhouse gases than now, Holtz said. Swamps, water currents, shallow seas and plentiful plankton combined to raise greenhouse gas levels far higher than today, he said.

Santorum Endorses One-time Rival Romney

WASHINGTON (AP) • Rick Santorum is endorsing his one-time bitter rival Mitt Romney in a late-night e-mail to his supporters.

Santorum on Monday urged his supporters to join him in working with the effective Republican nominee to deny President Barack Obama a second term. In his message, Santorum reminded his supporters of areas where he disagreed with Romney during their slog of a primary.

Yet Santorum says that, in his words, "above all else, we both agree that President Obama must be defeated."

During their contest, Santorum bitterly clashed with Romney. At one point, Santorum called Romney the worst Republican in the country to challenge Obama.

New Mexico Governor Unveils Wildfire Warning System

BY SUSAN MONTOYA BRYAN

Associated Press

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. • New Mexico Gov. Susana Martinez and state forestry officials on Monday unveiled a new statewide email notification system for alerting residents of potential dangers from wildfire.

Martinez said the effort is aimed at raising awareness about the high fire danger around the state. With last year being the worst fire season in New Mexico's recorded history with hundreds of square miles charred, she said access to timely and accurate information will be key for limiting the risk this year.

"Whether it's here in the Albuquerque bosque, in rural or populated areas around our state or up in the mountains, we all have a duty to do what we can to inform, to help and to promote wildfire awareness," she said during a news conference at the Rio Grande Nature Center in Albuquerque.

New Mexico, Colorado, Arizona and other western states are bracing for a busy fire season given that drought conditions are spreading across the region. Many counties across the West have established emergency telephone and email notification systems to warn of wildfires, but New Mexico appears to have the only statewide notification system.

The creation of the email system comes six weeks after embers from a prescribed fire in Colorado sparked a blaze that killed three people, blackened 6 square miles and damaged or destroyed nearly two dozen homes.

In the case of the Lower North Fork fire southwest of Denver, county officials are revamping procedures following problems with an automated call system that was intended to send evacuation messages to residents.

In New Mexico, the State Forestry Division already pushes out fire notifications through its Twitter account and Facebook page, but officials expect thousands more to be reached through the email system.

State Forester Tony Delfin said it's a big job getting out information when there are multiple fires burning around the state, as was the case last year when New Mexico experienced two historic fires — the Las Conchas and Donaldson blazes.

"During the initial attack of a fire, the information needs to get out to the public," he said. "Prompt and accurate information can save lives."

State forestry officials said they were simply looking for another way to get more information to the public than what they could get across in a 140-character Tweet.

Residents can sign up on the agency's website. All that's needed is an email address, first and last name and county or zip code.

Whenever there's a fire on state land, those who are signed up will receive an email alert with details about the fire, its location, estimated size and any other important details such as potential threats to communities.

So far this year, nearly 150 fires have charred more than 7,600 acres in New Mexico. That's a fraction of what had burned by this time last year. Over the past two fiscal years, Delfin said some 1,440 fires have blacked more than 1 million acres on state and private property alone.

Forestry spokesman Dan Ware said the new email system is compatible with smartphones and tablets.

"We're trying to do as much as we can to cover the state and really anybody who wants this information," he said.

Martinez described the system as innovative, saying people with family members in other states will also be able to keep up with the latest fire information to find out if their loved ones are safe.

The governor also encouraged New Mexicans to sign up through the new nonprofit Housing for Emergency Evacuated and Displaced, or HEED, to host families displaced by wildfire. HEED evolved from last year's efforts by Kristin Derr to find temporary homes for those forced from Los Alamos during the Las Conchas fire.

Martinez talked about her visits to several emergency shelters last year and the hardship she saw in the eyes of many evacuees.

"It became apparent that some families, especially with small children and the elderly, had a more difficult time sleeping on the shelter cots, and it was difficult transitioning into the very strange circumstances of a shelter," Martinez said.

Idaho Among Loosest States on Payday Loans

BY ALEX MORRELL

Associated Press

BOISE • Saddled with hospital bills and desperate for quick cash to cover rent and other monthly expenses, Joel Rios turned to payday lending.

Getting a loan was easy. On his first visit to a Pocatello store, Rios had $500 in cash within 20 minutes of filling out paperwork. After that, qualifying for more loans took even less time. In one year, Rios recalls taking out 15 loans, and he's lost track of how many he took out during a two-year span.

The loans — which in Idaho can carry interest rates upwards of 400 percent — ultimately pulled Rios deeper into economic turmoil.

Multiple loans and their high interest rates sapped his ability to pay monthly bills, forcing him back to high-interest lenders. Late payments to lenders were followed by daily calls from collectors. Then in 2009, a panic attack he attributes to economic stress and illegal threats of jail from creditors landed him back in the hospital.

He filed for bankruptcy shortly after, citing in federal court records mounting medical and payday loans as the bulk of his debt.

"It's a vicious, vicious cycle," Rios said. "I was cornered."

Payday lending has come under fire in all corners of the country in recent years for targeting low-income residents who often get trapped in debt like Rios did. Some states have taken steps to protect consumers, with lawmakers in neighboring states like Montana, Oregon and Washington approving caps on interest rates or other consumer protections.

But Idaho, where payday lenders extended $185 million in loans in 2010, is a state with some of the nation's least restrictive rules and regulations. Earlier this year, state lawmakers killed legislation intended to better protect consumers from the growing industry.

Legislation co-sponsored by Rep. Elaine Smith, D-Pocatello, called for a 36 percent annual limit on loan interest. Smith got behind the measure after concerned constituents complained to her about a growing number of residents struggling with debt from payday loans.

"These people are getting into debt traps and they can't get out," Smith said.

The bill never got a full hearing in the House Business Committee.

Payday loans function like an advance on a borrower's future paycheck. The average customer takes out a two-week loan for several hundred dollars at high interest rates providing they can show proof of owning a checking account and earn a paycheck.

Critics claim the practice preys on the weak and vulnerable. But the payday industry argues that it provides a desired product that helps customers in a pinch pay bills or other expenses.

But aside from a $1,000 cap on a single loan, approved by Idaho lawmakers in 2003 and still among the highest caps in the country, the state has few of the consumer protections adopted in other states.

For example, the federal government and many states have capped loan amounts and interest rates, restricted loan lengths or limited the number of loans a person can get each year. The District of Columbia and 17 states have enacted double-digit interest rate caps, a restriction the payday lending industry complains has crippled their ability to successfully operate in those markets.

Several years ago, Congress capped interest on payday loans for active military and family at 36 percent annually.

Yet despite the increasing restrictions, payday lending has grown dramatically in the past decade.

The number of stores licensed in Idaho increased from 165 in 2003 to about 215 in 2010, according to the Idaho Consumer Finance Bureau, which regulates lending, mortgage and credit industries in Idaho. In 2010, nearly 500,000 loans were issued statewide at an average of $371 per loan.

The bureau relies on payday lenders to self-report and isn't tasked with analyzing the industry's trends.

Former Canyon County Worker Sentenced for Sexting

BOISE • A former employee in the Canyon County assessor's office has been sentenced to 30 days in jail and nine years of probation for arranging to have sex with a 16-year-old girl.

Prosecutors say Cooperdock was arrested last November when he arrived at the girl's school to pick her up for a sexual encounter.

Cooperdock will be prohibited from using or possessing alcohol, going into bars or having unsupervised contact with minors while on probation. The victim was granted a permanent restraining order.

Defense attorney Gerald Bublitz said Cooperdock's actions were an aberration

La. Man Denies Vehicular Manslaughter Charge

SANDPOINT • A 34-year-old Louisiana man has pleaded not guilty to misdemeanor vehicular manslaughter for a crash that killed a motorcyclist in northern Idaho late last summer.

The Bonner County Daily Bee reports Taj Patrick LeCompte of Elton, La., entered his plea via telephone Friday in Magistrate Court in Bonner County. He was allowed to appear by telephone because his pregnant wife was very near her due date.

Idaho State Police said LeCompte was southbound on U.S. Highway 95 south of Sandpoint when he turned into the path of a northbound motorcyclist.

LeCompte told investigators that he did not see 60-year-old Lawrence "Red" Barber until the "last split second" before the Sept. 8 collision. Barber died 10 days later at a Seattle hospital.

LeCompte has applied for a public defender.

His uncle Otto ran the dragline in Sunbeam, Idaho, gold dredging the Yankee Fork until it shut down. It now stands as a museum. At that time, they moved to Buhl, Idaho, where he went to school in the Buhl Fire House. Quitting school, he purchased his first Harley-Davidson, which was a 125 Harley Hummer. He rode it in the "Wall of Death" for $25 each show in the Circus. In the 1950s, that was real good money.

He moved to Butte, Mont., where he became a body and fender man in a body shop. He eventually moved back to Twin Falls, where he worked in the car repair business until he moved to Wendell and opened up his own body and repair shop. He retired in 2002, still doing some work on the side and residing in Wendell until his death.

At Wayne's request, there will be no service. Cremation arrangements are under the direction of Demaray Funeral Service, Wendell Chapel.

Rest in peace, Papa Wayne, you will be missed.

Condolences may be sent to the family by visiting the obituary link at www.demaryfuneralservice.com.

“Austerity can no longer be inevitable!”

New French President Francois Hollande, a leftist, in his victory speech Sunday after he defeated Nicolas Sarkozy

How to Be a True Values Voter

With the withdrawal of Rick Santorum and Newt Gingrich from the race, the Republican Party all but has its presidential nominee.

Jim Daly

Special to the Washington Post

That means our country’s major issues will be faced by former governor Mitt Romney or President Obama after the ballots are counted on Nov. 6. But before the ballots are cast, voters must first address two critical challenges.

The first is to vote through the filter of the morals and values by which we live. The second is to robustly engage the democratic process that allows us the right to choose our leaders and to do so in a way that demonstrates reverence for our system of government and respect for those who answer the call to serve in it.

We all know the issues in this year’s election: The economy. Jobs. The ongoing and multifaceted threat of terrorism. Abortion policy. Health care and what role the government ought to play in it. Whether same-sex marriage should be legalized nationwide. Immigration.

There is no shortage of deeply held, passionately articulated opinions on these matters. You talk about them with your friends and family. You see, read and hear them discussed and debated. Right now, as you’re reading this sentence, someone is being polled on some aspect of one of them.

But when you step into the voting booth the first Tuesday in November, what “they” wrote or said shouldn’t matter as much as what you think, feel and believe. With our right to vote comes a responsibility: to look inside our hearts and identify what we hold most dear, then check the box, punch the card or tap the screen next to the name of the candidate who most closely aligns with our values.

That’s where the real challenge comes in: Chances are neither Romney nor Obama will earn a perfect score when you go through this exercise. There is no way that every decision they’ve ever made, every bill they’ve ever supported or opposed, and every sound bite they’ve ever contributed to the 24-hour news cycle is going to line up exactly with your core beliefs. Some things the candidates have done or said might disappoint you. So your decision will come down to this: Which man most closely stands for what I stand for? Whom do I trust more, based on his public record and personal convictions, to lead the nation in the direction I hope to see it go?

Note that “values” do not equal “religion”; while for many of us, it is indeed our religious faith that informs our values, we must remember that we are electing a president, not a pastor, priest, rabbi, imam or elder. It is a civic, not spiritual, position with secular, not sanctifying, duties. What is of paramount importance in selecting an occupant for such an office is not whether he or she attends the same house of worship as we do; it’s whether he or she adheres to a moral and ethical code, rooted in natural law rather than doctrinal purity, that we believe offers a better vision for America.

This brings us to voters’ second challenge: to model something different than the rhetorical savagery that too often colors political discourse in the United States. Some people, on both sides of the ideological aisle, have become so consumed with winning a political “battle” that they’ve lost sight of basic virtues like the Golden Rule: Do unto others as you would have them do unto you.

It’s easy to argue with someone who holds a different worldview. But let’s not take the easy way out. Let’s look for points of mutual cordiality where they might be found. We may persuade some to our way of thinking by taking a reasoned approach. And even if we fail to change each other’s minds, we don’t have to call each other names.

This does not mean we stop ardently engaging the culture and advocating for the morals and values we hold dear. It does mean we do so in a way that recognizes the dignity and respect we all deserve as humans. We must remember that both names at the top of the ballot belong to human beings.

This is likely to become more difficult as the campaign grinds on and the candidates, and their surrogates, target the opposition’s jugular. That’s all the more reason for the rest of us to point to a better way. As the late British writer and aristocrat Mary Wortley Montagu put it, “Civility costs nothing, and buys everything.”

If recent trends hold, a little less than half the country will wake up Nov. 7 unhappy with the election’s outcome. But there is no reason any of us need to be unhappy about the process we personally follow to get there.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Kohl’s Should Reconsider T.F. Location

Dear Kohl’s: Choose an alternative site for your new store in Twin Falls. Preserve the visual treasure of the Snake River Canyon rim and build your store/strip mall away from the scenic edge.

I just signed a petition (<http://chn.ge/JQXbKc>) calling on you to rethink your plans. By locating on one of many other different properties available, you would preserve the unique visual environment by our famous Perrine Memorial Bridge.

Our city’s Canyon Rim Overlay District ordinance states: “Protect views, preserve and improve the aesthetic appearance of the canyon rim for the enhancement of the quality of life in the community.” Your plans would create a 200,000 square foot strip mall to be built 130 feet from the breathtaking rim. Worst of all, the backsides of the buildings would face the scenic promenade along the canyon used and valued by tourists and locals alike. Semis, truck docks and garbage facilities, even if screened, would give the rim environment an industrial quality that would have an adverse impact on the community and our visitors.

There are questions raised about the geological and public safety effects of your current plan. If, as your environmental green scene states, you’re “taking big steps to ensure we leave a smaller footprint,” then I believe this also applies to the sensitive canyon-side environment of the Snake River.

Reconsider your choice of an iconic and vulnerable overlook on the rim to put your store. No doubt you have a Plan B for the Twin Falls site. Or simply rotate the existing plan to the south of the rim property, keeping access to the trail and views open. Our community is ready to welcome you — we’ve been hoping to catch your attention for many years. Working with us to choose a more suitable site would prevent much disappointment and earn you the respect and gratitude of many happy residents and customers.

Re-elect Carter for County Sheriff

The current sheriff contest in Twin Falls County is intriguing to say the least. Not for the explosion of campaign signs or the “sign police” who actively monitor them nor the submission of career demeaning innuendos, rather, look what these two men bring to the table.

Together they have 55 years of law enforcement experience. They have similar views on how to provide the eminent law enforcement in our community. Sheriff Carter has proven himself a leader with attainable goals, primarily with success in team building within agencies, providing a broader range of uniform service. Mr. Johnson’s training credentials are indeed impressive and, agreeably, advanced personnel training improves the capabilities of officers.

Something inspired these men 27 and 28 years ago, respectively, to make law enforcement their careers. Both will probably agree that Twin Falls is not the same place it was back then. Improvements and change will always be required.

When Jack Johnson was a lieutenant for Twin Falls County, he provided training to officers. He lists this as his primary accomplishment and rightly so. Advanced training is a full-time ongoing position. It demands complete focus and development.

I have an extreme respect for good teachers; however, I want the sheriff’s focus to be on eradicating drugs, providing education to schools, and eliminating the costly expenditure of overcrowded jails. Budgeting will continue to be a work in progress, primarily with the current economy and continued growth of our community. Building budgets based on increased proficiency will allow more money allocated to the most critical areas, never hidden in antiquated methods of departmental credit card control.

Re-elect Tom Carter for sheriff, allowing him to provide progressive, forward-thinking leadership to the important issues at hand that really affect the quality of life in this community.

Heward for Cassia Co. Sheriff

My name is Cary Bristol. I retired from the Cassia

County sheriff’s office after serving the community for nearly 32 years. I was the chief deputy under Sheriff Jim Higenes when I retired.

As the sheriff, Jim Higenes wanted and kept an open sheriff’s office. Any citizen of the county could come to the office and meet with either Higenes or myself and had no problems getting into see us. After Higenes and I retired, there have been many changes to the sheriff’s office. It is not possible now to walk in and see the sheriff without going through a maze of locked doors and first checking with a dispatcher or receptionist, making it very difficult and uninviting.

The May 15 primary vote for sheriff will be a very important part of the election process. I know both candidates vying for this position. I feel at this point Jay Heward has the best interests and concerns for the people of Cassia County in mind. Heward is a truly caring individual for the people. I have seen him in action working with people as both a patrol deputy and an investigator. He deeply cares for what victims and individuals are going through when he deals with them. His many years of law enforcement experience will give him the abilities to be a very capable, caring sheriff.

I know Jay will make those changes that will make the sheriff’s office a more open place where one feels safe and secure, yet able to approach the sheriff and employees without being routed, rerouted and painstakingly removed from the openness which should be expected by the citizen of this county.

Please join me and retired Sheriff Jim Higenes on May 15 in supporting Jay Heward for Cassia County sheriff, a truly caring individual for the needs of Cassia County.

Williams Best Pick for Gooding County

I am writing this letter to encourage voters in Gooding County to re-elect Terrell Williams as county commissioner.

She has had six years of experience as a commissioner and is well informed about the extensive issues facing Gooding County.

Terrell is fair, compassionate and devotes a lot of time to do a good job.

Gooding County needs Terrell Williams, so be a proud supporter on May 15.

Elect Johnson T.F. County Sheriff

I have been researching the candidates for Twin Falls County sheriff and it has taken me a long time to make my decision on who to vote for. In the end, I had to decide in favor of Jack Johnson.

I am just a citizen of this county, and I have no horse in the race. I have reviewed their qualifications on the websites, which I found to be quite interesting. My research brought me to the conclusion that one candidate was much more qualified than the other.

Jack Johnson has a resume that would make many large county sheriffs drool. He is an instructor in 10 law enforcement disciplines and has numerous certificates from the Peace Officer Standards and Training Academy.

If you do your homework, as I have, I think you will come to the same conclusion. Please vote for Jack Johnson.

JOE JENNINGS

Wimberley for Buhl Precinct 2

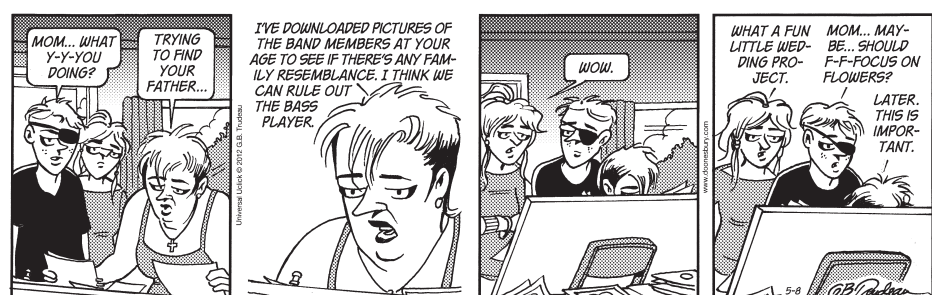

I would like to encourage the voters in Buhl Precinct 2 to consider casting their vote in the coming election for Republican Precinct Committeewoman Jan Wimberley.

I have known Jan for more than 20 years and consider her to be an extremely honest, forthright person of traditional conservative Republican values. Though not large in physical stature, Jan is a giant when it comes to the defense of her conservative/Christian values and ideals — values and ideals that are in tune with those of the vast majority of people in Buhl’s Precinct 2 and the state of Idaho.

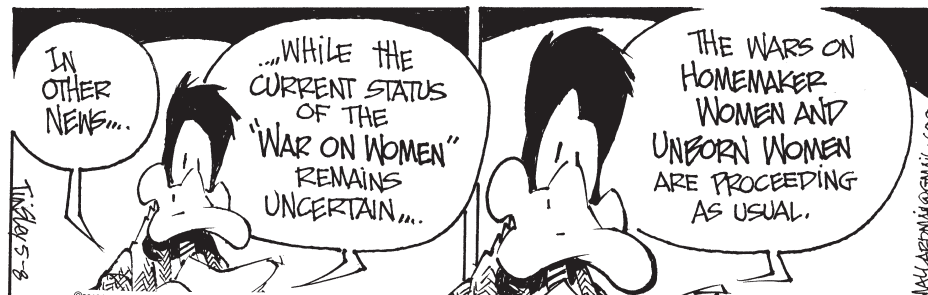

Jan has the drive and energy to represent Precinct 2 exceptionally well. If elected, the voters of Buhl Precinct 2 will know their voice will be heard in the Republican Party caucuses.

The amount U.S. consumer debt rose in March •

Americans swiped their credit cards more often in March and took out more loans to attend school. That drove the biggest one-month increase in U.S. consumer borrowing in a decade. Consumer debt rose by $21.4 billion in March from February, the Federal Reserve said Monday. It was the seventh straight monthly increase and the largest since November 2001. A measure of auto and student loans increased by $16.2 billion. A separate gauge of mostly credit card debt rose $5.2 billion after declining in January and February. Total borrowing rose to a seasonally adjusted $2.54 trillion.

Self-driving Cars Set for Test Drive in Nevada

BY MICHELLE RINDELS

Associated Press

LAS VEGAS • Nevada drivers could soon be sharing the road with vehicles that don't need them.

Department of Motor Vehicles officials said Monday they've issued Google the nation's first license to test self-driving cars on public streets, after conducting demonstrations on the Las Vegas Strip and in Carson City that show the car is as safe — or perhaps safer — than a human.

"It gets honked at more often because it's being safe," said Nevada DMV Director Bruce Breslow.

Self-driving vehicle technology works like auto-pilot to guide a car — in this case a modified Prius — with little or no intervention from a human operator. Laser radar mounted on the roof and in the grill detects pedestrians, cyclists and other vehicles, creating a virtual buffer zone around the obstacles that the car then avoids.

While some envision the robotic car dropping off its operator at the front of the mall and hunting for a parking spot on its own, Breslow said not so fast.

Nevada's regulations require two people in the test cars at all times. One person is behind the wheel, while the other person monitors a computer screen that shows the car's planned route and keeps tabs on roadway hazards and traffic lights.

If there's a glitch, the human driver can override the autonomous auto with a tap on the brake or a hand on the steering wheel.

Last summer, Nevada Gov. Brian Sandoval took the car for a spin in and around the state's quiet capital city. But Las Vegas Boulevard, where costumed superheroes routinely take the crosswalks and massive billboards angle for the attention of starry-eyed tourists, was perhaps best suited to test the car's main purpose.

"They're designed to avoid distracted driving," Breslow said. "When you're on the Strip and there's a huge truck with a three scantily clad women on the side, the car only sees a box."

So far, Google's applied to license three test vehicles. Breslow said the cars will display red plates and an infinity symbol to represent their status as vehicles of the future.

Once they're ready for the market — something Breslow guesses could come in three to five years — the plates will be green.

Cities Seek More Money from Tax-exempt Colleges

BY DAVID KLEPPER

Associated Press

PROVIDENCE, R.I. • Wary of tax increases, weary of layoffs and determined to avoid bankruptcy, Providence Mayor Angel Taveras had only to gaze up at his city's Ivy League campus to see a way out of the morass.

On College Hill sits Brown University, with a $2.5 billion endowment and property worth an estimated $1 billion. Brown would pay the city $38 million in property taxes each year — more than enough to solve the city's budget problems — if only it wasn't tax exempt.

And so city officials and state lawmakers applied some pressure, and last week Brown agreed to contribute $31.5 million to Providence over the next 11 years. The money comes on top of nearly $4 million the university already voluntarily gives the city every year.

The town-vs.-gown confrontation reflects a trend across the nation as cities desperate for revenue try to get more money out of tax-exempt institutions such as universities and hospitals.

These institutions argue they already contribute to a city's economy and quality of life through jobs, economic activity and community services. But as cities grapple with deficits and cash-flow crunches, they are succeeding in getting nonprofits to pay up.

"It's about all of us trying to help the city and the state grow," Taveras said. "If we want to see Rhode Island succeed, we will never get there without Brown."

David Thompson, vice president of public policy at the National Council of Nonprofits, wryly calls such agreements "mandatory volunteerism."

"It's 'We need money, you have money, and we're going to pressure you to do this unless you give us a voluntary payment,'" he said.

Baltimore officials, for example, threatened to tax hospital and university dorm beds before Johns Hopkins University and other tax-exempt institutions agreed to make contributions.

Boston, with one of the biggest concentrations of colleges, universities and research centers in the country, collects significant amounts of money from such institutions. Harvard, Boston University, Massachusetts General Hospital and several other institutions made $34 million in payments in lieu of taxes in 2010 in what the city says is the biggest such program in the nation.

In Lancaster, Pa., the city sends out letters every year asking nonprofit organizations to pay one-third of what would have been their tax bill. Lancaster General Hospital pays more than $1 million voluntarily, more than its taxes would have been, Mayor Rick Gray said.

"They said they feel they should be supportive of the community," he said. "We're certainly grateful."

Brown has enjoyed a tax exemption since colonial days but decided to kick in more money because it sees itself as a partner in Providence's economy and because it wants good relations with the city, said Brown University President Ruth Simmons.

"The idea that we have an endowment, a budget that will bear these kinds of costs is not correct," she said. Still, she said, it was obvious that this was "a time that requires we step up."

The use of payment-in-lieu-of-tax deals is on the rise. Such agreements have been carried out in at least 18 states since 2000, mostly in the Northeast, according to a study by the Lincoln Institute of Land Policy.

City leaders say it is a matter of fairness to taxpayers. As universities and other tax-exempt organizations expand, they consume more city services while taking property off the tax rolls.

Syracuse, N.Y., Councilman Patrick Hogan said hospitals in his city have recently embarked on big expansions, as have Syracuse University and another college.

"They've gobbled up property that used to be taxable," he said. "That just moves the burden of paying for fire protection, police, garbage collection and everything else onto the remaining taxpayers. I'm just saying it's time for them to kick in a little more to support these services."

Hogan said the city may have to tax commuters if the nonprofits don't agree to pay more.

Cities have found other ways of generating money from tax-exempt organizations. Chicago, for instance, recently announced it would begin charging nonprofits a water fee.

Religious organizations and small charities are also tax-exempt, but there is little talk of targeting them for contributions. Going after churches is a political non-starter, and nonprofit community organizations don't have much money to offer.

GOP PLAN SHIELDS PENTAGON, CUTS SOCIAL PROGRAMS

BY ANDREW TAYLOR
Associated Press

WASHINGTON • Moving to protect the military from a crippling wave of budget cuts next year, a key House committee voted Monday to cut instead food aid, health care and social services like Meals on Wheels.

The measure would require federal employees to contribute more to their pensions, saving taxpayers more than $80 billion over the coming decade, while illegal immigrants would be denied tax refunds from the $1,000 per-child tax credit. There's no companion legislation moving in the Democratic-controlled Senate, and the proposal doesn't stand a chance of making it to President Barack Obama's desk for signature.

But the vote was a symbolic swipe at Obama in an election year focused on the economy.

The cuts approved by the Republican-controlled Budget Committee total more than $300 billion over the coming decade. The panel approved them on a party-line 21-9 vote; the full House is scheduled to vote on the measure on Thursday.

The proposed reductions in the bill are but a fraction of those called for in the broader, nonbinding budget plan that passed the House in March. They are aimed less at taming trillion-dollar-plus deficits than preventing the Pentagon from absorbing a 10 percent, $55 billion automatic budget cut in January because last year's deficit "supercommittee" couldn't reach a deal.

Another Testicle Ticket Written in South Carolina

SPARTANBURG, S.C. (AP) • For the second time in a year, a motorist has been ticketed in South Carolina for displaying a replica of testicles on a vehicle.

A Spartanburg County sheriff's deputy stopped a truck Sunday evening after noticing the "anatomically correct" display on the rear bumper. The incident report says the driver removed the display after being stopped but he was arrested for driving without a license. He was also given a warning ticket for having an obscene display.

Last July, a Berkeley County woman was ticketed for having a similar display on the back of her truck.

That case is to go to trial in municipal court in the town of Bonneau. That trial has been delayed three times and no new trial date has been set.

Army: No Bullet Wound Found in Soldier Skype Death

BY PAULINE JELINEK
Associated Press

WASHINGTON • Army investigators said Monday they found no bullet wound or evidence of foul play in the death of a soldier in Afghanistan who died during a Skype video chat with his wife.

Capt. Bruce Kevin Clark collapsed while speaking to his wife on May 1 from his base in Tarin Kot, Afghanistan, southwest of Kabul. His wife, Susan Orellana-Clark, has suggested that Clark was shot, citing a hole visible in the closet behind him that she believed was a bullet hole.

Investigators said an initial probe showed no trauma to the body except that Clark broke his nose when he fell forward. Orellana-Clark said he didn't seem alarmed before he collapsed.

Christopher Grey, a spokesman for the Army Criminal Investigation Command, said Monday that the investigation is still under way.

"But the important thing is that there was no bullet wound, no trauma," except that Clark's nose was possibly broken when he fell on his desk, Grey said in a telephone interview.

"We can positively say that Captain Clark was not shot," Grey later said in a statement.

An autopsy was done Friday but it could take several weeks to get results of toxicology and tissue testing done at that time, Paul Stone, a spokesman for the Armed Forces Medical Examiner, said Monday.

Groomer's Slaying Presents a Kentucky Derby Whodunit

BY BRETT BARROUQUERE
Associated Press

LOUISVILLE, Ky. •

The bourbon had been stashed away and the hats returned to closets by the time someone found a groomer's body inside a barn at Churchill Downs, hours after the running of America's most famous horse race.

Other workers on the backside of the track — a different world from the pageantry seen on race day — were left to wonder if a killer was among them: Why did someone want 48-year-old Adan Fabian Perez dead? How was the Guatemala native killed? And why did his killer leave him in a barn, a few stables away from where I'll Have Another would bask in the glory of winning the Kentucky Derby?

Authorities have no suspects. An autopsy was done, but the coroner refused to release the results.

"Everybody wants to catch the guy who did that," said Faustino Aguilar, a 29-year-old exercise rider with six years of experience at the track. "They do it once, they may do it more."

Jo-Ann Farmer, chief deputy coroner in Louisville, said an autopsy revealed injuries on a body found in a barn at Churchill Downs at about 2:50 a.m. MDT Sunday, roughly 10 hours after the race. Farmer refused to release more details, saying she was withholding information pending the investigation into the death.

The Kentucky Derby is known for stylish hats, lots of bets, mint juleps and wild parties. But separated from the cheering fans by the dirt surface and the infield, the backside is a maze of green-roofed barns, horse stalls, thoroughbreds, bales of hay and about 200 mostly Hispanic people who live at Churchill Downs at any given time — either in dormitories on the edge of the property or in small apartments above some of the barns themselves. Police said Perez lived in quarters on the track.

A fence topped with razor wire separates the backside from a working-class neighborhood that surrounds the historic racetrack. On Monday, track security kept visitors without credentials outside the fence. But track workers wandered in and out, smoking cigarettes, talking on cellphones, and picking up lunch and gear from their cars.

Laura Belzia, a 38-year-old "hot walker" who's walked horses to cool them down after workouts for five years, said the backside of the track can sometimes be a rough place after the work is done and the lights go out. Belzia described occasional fights, but almost never fatal violence.

Belzia said some of her co-workers may be reluctant to talk to police, either out of fear of the person who committed the crime or because they are in the country illegally.

"Nobody is going to tell what happened," Belzia told The Associated Press. "Sometimes people here ... get scared and quit talking."

Officer Carey Klain, a police spokeswoman, and John Asher, a spokesman for Churchill Downs, said they didn't know Perez's immigration status.

Louisville Police Lt. Barry Wilkerson said the death appears to have nothing to do with the Kentucky Derby, but may be related to one of several fights reported that night.

"Was he (Perez) involved?" Wilkerson asked Monday. "We're not sure and that's why we're trying to get individuals who saw the altercation or know what happened to get them to speak to us to find if he was involved or not."

No End to Obesity Epidemic, 20-year Forecast Shows

BY LAURAN NEERGAARD
Associated Press

WASHINGTON • The obesity epidemic may be slowing, but don't take in those pants yet.

Today, just over a third of U.S. adults are obese. By 2030, 42 percent will be, says a forecast released Monday.

That's not nearly as many as experts had predicted before the once-rapid rises in obesity rates began leveling off. But the new forecast suggests even small continuing increases will add up.

"We still have a very serious problem," said obesity specialist Dr. William Dietz of the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

Worse, the already obese are getting fatter. Severe obesity will double by 2030, when 11 percent of adults will be nearly 100 pounds overweight, or more, concluded the research led by Duke University.

That could be an ominous consequence of childhood obesity. Half of severely obese adults were obese as children, and they put on more pounds as they grew up, said CDC's Dietz.

While being overweight increases anyone's risk of diabetes, heart disease and a host of other ailments, the severely obese are most at risk — and the most expensive to treat. Already, conservative estimates suggest obesity-related problems account for at least 9 percent of the nation's yearly health spending, or $150 billion a year.

Data presented Monday at a major CDC meeting paint something of a mixed picture of the obesity battle. There's some progress: Clearly, the skyrocketing rises in obesity rates of the 1980s and '90s have ended. But Americans aren't getting thinner.

Over the past decade, obesity rates stayed about the same in women, while men experienced a small rise, said CDC's Cynthia Ogden. That increase occurred mostly in higher-income men, for reasons researchers couldn't explain.

About 17 percent of the nation's children and teens were obese in 2009 and 2010, the latest available data. That's about the same as at the beginning of the decade, although a closer look by Ogden shows continued small increases in boys, especially African-American boys.

Does that mean obesity has plateaued? Well, some larger CDC databases show continued upticks, said Duke University health economist Eric Finkelstein, who led the new CDC-funded forecast. His study used that information along with other factors that influence obesity rates — including food prices, prevalence of fast-food restaurants, unemployment — to come up with what he called "very reasonable estimates" for the next two decades.

Part of the reason for the continuing rise is that the population is growing and aging. People ages 45 to 64 are most likely to be obese, Finkelstein said.

Today, more than 78 million U.S. adults are obese, defined as having a body-mass index of 30 or more. BMI is a measure of weight for height. Someone who's 5-feet-5 would be termed obese at 180 pounds, and severely obese with a BMI of 40 — 240 pounds.

BIG EAST LOSES COMMISSIONER

Watching members leave and campaign for new home was too much for Marinatto.

ASSOCIATED PRESS

STORRS, Conn. • Big East Commissioner John Marinatto resigned Monday after less than three years on the job, admitting he was drained by several high-profile defections and mounting pressure from school presidents upset with the departures.

Marinatto

Pittsburgh and Syracuse made plans to leave for the Atlantic Coast Conference in September, and West Virginia bolted for the Big 12 the following month. The Big East regrouped by adding Central Florida, Houston, Memphis, SMU and Temple for all sports and Boise State, San Diego State and Navy for football only.

Marinatto told The Associated Press on Monday that trying to guide the conference through realignment took a physical and mental toll on him.

He said he began talking to the conference presidents in mid-April about stepping down.

"I've been running a marathon not only for the last eight months but for the last 2 1/2 years," he said. "As fulfilling as it can be, it is equally draining. All the assets are in place right now (in the Big East). It's probably time for a commercialized kind of perspective. Clearly the collegiate model is dead."

'Hawks' Magic Runs Out, Minico Advances

RUPERT • Cinderella didn't quite make it to the dance.

Canyon Ridge, the fifth seed in the Class 4A District IV baseball tournament which previously upset the third and fourth seeds, was tied 3-3 with No. 2 Minico in the sixth inning Monday.

"The magic ran out," said Riverhawks coach Travis Tarchione.

Minico exploded for 10 runs in the bottom of the sixth to earn a 13-3 run-rule victory.

Brayden Winmill sparked Minico's rally with a two-RBI poke, and later ended the game with his second hit of the inning, a run-scoring double.

"I knew we had to get some runs in. I was sitting breaking ball and he gave it to me," said Winmill. "I didn't hit the ball hard, but luckily I got it through a hole. The infield was playing in, so I knew I didn't have to do a lot, just riddy up."

Spurs Put Quick End to Jazz's Playoffs

ASSOCIATED PRESS

SALT LAKE CITY • Manu Ginobili broke out of his shooting slump with 17 points to lead the San Antonio Spurs to an 87-81 victory over the Utah Jazz on Monday night and a sweep of their first-round Western Conference series.

Ginobili was 0 for 8 from beyond the arc in the first three games. But after Utah pulled within 61-58 with 3:18 left in the third, he hit consecutive 3-pointers then added another as the Spurs regained control, taking a 76-58 lead early in the fourth.

The Jazz went scoreless for more than 8 minutes during a 15-0 Spurs run. Utah made a furious charge late and was within 83-79 on Al Jefferson's putback with 49 seconds left.

But Ginobili's fastbreak layup after a steal by Tony Parker sealed it.

Utah's Big 3 lineup with Derrick Favors at power forward kept the Jazz close, but San Antonio's bench made the difference, outscoring the Jazz's reserves 47-10.

Top-seeded San Antonio advanced to the second round and awaits the winner of the Memphis-Los Angeles Clippers series, which may not be settled until Sunday.

The Spurs are on a 14-game winning streak and looking to make amends for a first-round upset by Memphis last year.

The Jazz have lost eight straight playoff games as they were swept by the Lakers in the second round two years ago. It was only the second first-round sweep in Jazz history, the other coming in 1989.

The young, inexperienced Jazz put up a fight at the end, but it was too little too late.

The Spurs won Game 1 by 15 points, Game 2 by 31 and Game 3 by 12, relying on MVP candidate Parker and the deepest bench in the league.

Kimberly's Clements gets a trim, shreds Canyon Springs to win district title by eight shots.

BY PATRICK SHELTRA

TWIN FALLS • Kimberly's Stephen Clements isn't one to apply superstitions to his golf game.

That might change. With a couple of weeks of purely dreadful golf leading into Monday's Class 3A District IV championships at Canyon Springs Golf Course, the Bulldog senior trimmed his locks substantially and destroyed the field with a 2-under-par 70, beating the field by eight strokes and easily qualifying for next week's state tournament at Preston Golf Course.

"I had a big ol' afro and I got a haircut," Clements said. "I was kind of messing around a little bit ... and it was a good way to get a little mojo going."

While Clements cruised to victory, there was a little drama for the remaining two spots. Defending state champion Kade Crossland and Kimberly's season-long top golfer Matt HoChee shot 78, along with Filer's Jed Oyler.

But since state qualifying rules taking the top three players and ties, all three were assured of playing next week. As far as earning a medal, a sudden-death playoff sorted things out.

Raft River's Zollinger Has Magic Touch

BUHL • Clear Lake Country Club will eat golfers alive if they let it. The key is to navigate as best you can and rally down the stretch.

Raft River's Zach Zollinger did that better than anyone Monday, overcoming a rough front stretch to eagle No. 17 and finish with a four-shot win in the 2A District IV golf championships.

"You know where you're at on the course, and I thought high 70s would probably be close to winning," said Zollinger, who at 76 was the only player on the course to break 80. "I struggled at the start, but that eagle really helped me relax and play 18 more loosely."

Zollinger qualified for his third 2A state championships, this year's edition being held at the Highland Golf Course in Pocatello. He finished ninth last season and said he's targeting a top five finish this time around.

Sierra Harr won't get a chance to defend her 2A girls golf title, but she'll help defend Castleford's boys team title after she shot a second-best 80 to lead the Wolves to another district team title.

Harr was in contention early but struggled through the four-hole stretch that seems to get the best of everyone at Clear Lake - Nos. 7 to 10. She kept it together to lead Castleford to a team 344, 14 shots better than Gooding, with Declo three shots behind the Senators.

Walk-off Home Run Lifts Buhl to Victory

TIMES-NEWS

BUHL — The Buhl softball team blew a seventh-inning lead but Cassidee Kippes rescued the top-seeded Indians from extra innings by working the count full and hitting a one-out home run to straightaway center field for a 5-4 victory in the Class 3A District IV tournament.

“I’ll take that any day of the week in an elimination game in the district tournament,” Buhl coach Derrik Brinkman said.

He’d probably pass on what happened in the seventh, although he admitted it could have been worse.

Caitlyn Roe, who hit a first-inning three run homer for Filer to open the scoring, came up in the top of the frame with runners on first and third with two outs. Brinkman called for an intentional walk, but Roe poked a pitch that wasn’t wide enough outside the strike zone to the opposite field for a game-tying single.

Kippes hit the first of her two home runs in the fifth, drilling a two-run shot to tie the game at 3-3. Kendyl Hamilton, after a Filer error, lined a double to give the Indians the lead.

Buhl (16-7), which lost home-field advantage to Kimberly in a May 4 loss, now must beat the Bulldogs twice on Wednesday to earn a spot in the state tournament.

"I just try to forget about the previous holes, and that seems to help me focus better on the one I'm playing," said Harr, who added she's still shooting for a top three finish at state next week. "I just told myself it didn't matter how I shot, as long as I was shooting for the team." The top three boys teams and top two girls teams qualified for the state meet. In addition, individuals from non-qualifying teams that finished in the top eight boys and top five girls also qualified.

Zollinger and Valley's Justin Johnson qualified as individuals for the boys' competition, while Gooding's Corri Pierson advanced from the girls' met. Jacqueline Gibby helped Declo pull off the double in the girls' competition. She shot an even 100 to win medalist honors by 12 shots over teammate Chloe Kidd, and the Hornets ran away with the team championship ahead of Valley. "It was a little rough, but I'm proud of how we did," said Gibby, who won't be playing Highland for the first time. "It's tough but I think I and the team can do even better there than we did here."

struggling offensively, the Spurs bench picked up the slack. "We've been a deeper team this year than we usually are and it sure came in handy tonight," Spurs coach Gregg Popovich said. Ginobili, who missed 32 games because of injury in the regular season, shot just 6 of 26 in the first three games but came up big when the Spurs needed him most. Tim Duncan added 11 points and was the only other starter in double figures for the Spurs. Stephen Jackson added 11 points and Tiago Splitter had 10 for the Spurs. Jefferson led Utah with 26 points on 13-of-19 shooting, and had 10 rebounds. Devin Harris added 19 points but shot just 6 of 17. Favors, making his first postseason start, added 16 points and blocked shots by Parker and Splitter. Gordon Hayward, who finished the regular season strong, shooting .507 from the field and 49 percent from 3-point range over the final 13 games, went 0 for 7 overall on Monday. Utah's first two players off the bench, Alec Burks and Utah's Paul Millap and San Antonio's Tim Duncan, center, and Gregg Popovich make their way through the handshake line after the Spurs finished off a sweep of the Jazz.

Josh Howard, were a combined 0 for 10 from the field. Before the game Jefferson conceded that the Spurs simply were the better team, and the best in the NBA. On Monday they showed why. Still, the Jazz made a game of it after trailing by as many as 21 points in the fourth quarter. "Some people thought it was over and the Jazz ran it right at us," Popovich said. "They don't quit. They are a class team and a class organization and (coach) Ty (Corbin) is continuing that." The Spurs are seeking their fifth NBA title, having won in 1999, 2003, 2005 and 2007, going through the Jazz for the last of the championships. San Antonio has won the last two playoff series with Utah after losing three during the 1990s when the Jazz had a different Big 3 with coach Jerry Sloan, Karl Malone and John Stockton. The Jazz are in the midst of a youth movement, with four players 22 or younger — and all getting valuable playoff experience. While the Spurs may have a week to rest before playing their next game, the Jazz will be clearing out their lockers Tuesday — some perhaps for good. San Antonio's bench outscored Utah's 33-4 in the first half, with DeJuan Blair, Stephen Neal and Jackson getting six points apiece while Ginobili, Matt Bonner and Splitter had five each.

Crossland "chucked" his second shot on the 536-yard par-5 No. 1 hole, but put it to within 4 feet of the cup for an easy eagle. Oylar three-putted for par, but HoChee made his birdie putt to capture the third-place medal. With two of the top four scores, Kimberly edged Filer by three shots in the team competition, 326-329. "It's definitely a lot funner with the team," HoChee said. "If I was going there individually, I'd pretty much be alone and I wouldn't really take it that seriously at state, but now that I'm going with my team, I'm definitely going to take it more serious. "It all came together one day where it counted," HoChee said. HoChee welcomed a teammate finishing ahead of him for a change.

"He pulled it together," HoChee said of Clements. "It's great. I'm really proud of him." "He probably played 54 holes at least over the weekend," Kimberly coach Ryan Nesmith said, noting that Clements was very disappointed with his recent play. "But the haircut ... yeah, it was all the haircut." "Off one, I hit a pretty good tee shot," Clements said. "I started off good and I felt like I played solid all day. I was expecting Kade and my teammate HoChee to shoot better than 78; they've been shooting even (par) rounds all year." On the girls side, Lexi Meyerhoeffler, Filer's lone golfer, won with a 95. Buhl easily won its two-horse race with Kimberly, beating the Bulldogs by 70 shots. The Indians also had the girls' second medalist in Karlie James, who shot 123, one stroke better than teammate Kristen Graffee.

Marinatto became the third commissioner of the Big East on July 1, 2009. He had served as the conference's senior associate commissioner since 2002 and spent 14 years as the athletic director at Providence College. "John helped build the Big East into what it is today, and played a critical role in our successful expansion efforts, and for all of that we thank him," said

Judy Genshaft, President of the University of South Florida and the chair of the conference. But privately, many in the conference were unhappy by the defections of Pitt and Syracuse, and some blamed Marinatto for being caught off guard, having just turned down a television contract offer from ESPN last spring. Former Commissioner Mike Tranghese, who retired in 2008, said his successor "inherited a very, very difficult situation." "I said that when I left that's one of the reasons why I did leave," he told The Associated Press on Monday. "The conference was susceptible to being raided." "When something goes wrong, the person in that chair is the one to take the hit." Connecticut President Susan Herbst was asked if the league's presidents had sought Marinatto's resignation. "It was entirely John's decision," she said in an email to The Associated Press. "Let me add: He did a stellar job this past year, enabling the Big East to move forward. We are strong now, thanks to his efforts and tireless work in a very fluid environment." The news caught some Big East schools off guard. "You're never surprised in our business about things, but I would be less than honest to say I saw this coming," said Bill Bradshaw, Temple's athletic director. "Yes, in our business you're never surprised. But John's a first-class individual, straightforward. A good man. High integrity. A nice person. Whenever someone resigns, it's something you reflect."

in the district tournament, Canyon Ridge's season came to an end. "We rode it as long as we could and just came up a little short," said Tar-chione. "We did well. When things went wrong (during districts) we didn't let them snowball. The first time things have snow-balled was that last inning." That snowball quickly turned into an avalanche. Minico sent 13 batters to the plate in the bottom of the sixth, scoring its 10 runs on seven hits, three walks and two Canyon Ridge errors. Nick Redder, Tanner Anderson and Tanner Harper each had run-scoring hits in the inning. Andrew Frank earned the complete-game victory on the mound. "The focus right now is getting our butts to state," said Winnill. "That's our main focus now, because our goal is to win a state championship

PUBLISH: May 8, 15, 22 and 29, 2012

DEAR ABBY: I have been with my boyfriend "Paul" for four years. We have a child together, and we each have a child of our own. We have lived together for three years, and our family life is great. However, when I was pregnant with our son, Paul contacted an ex on a social network. One day he left his computer open, and I saw that their conversations were less than innocent. I was upset and I said something immediately.

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

We have stayed together, but ever since then I'm having a hard time trusting Paul. Because he had also been calling the woman, I now check our phone records. Yesterday I found a text of his to a former boss's daughter. Paul was telling her how "hot" she is.

Abby, am I overreacting when I think Paul is going to cheat?

— ALARMED IN NORTH CAROLINA

DEAR ALARMED: You're not overreacting. Paul is cheating on you emotionally, and doesn't appear to be entirely committed to your relationship. In fact, it appears he is looking for some outside adventures. You should not only be concerned, you should also be furious about what he's doing. This won't stop until YOU draw the line.

DEAR ABBY: My parents divorced during my junior year of high school. I am now a sophomore in college. I have done my best to maintain a good relationship with Dad, although I chose to live with my mother during the custody battle.

Since the divorce, Dad has verbally, emotionally and financially abused me to the point that I no longer want him as part of my life.

I miss having a father figure, even though no amount of counseling could ever mend our broken relationship. We went through two years of counseling, and the only thing I learned was that Dad believes he has done nothing wrong and my feelings about him are because of Mom.

How can I get over the pain and hurt my dad has caused me?

— HEARTBROKEN IN MICHIGAN

DEAR HEARTBROKEN: It will probably take one-on-one counseling for you to establish enough emotional independence to toughen up. Your father's unwillingness (or inability) to take responsibility for his mistakes is an indication that, as much as you may need and want a father, he will never be the parent you would like him to be. It will take time and work on your part to get beyond this loss — and it IS a loss — so the ideal place to begin your journey would be by talking to a psychologist at the student health center.

DEAR ABBY: My 6-year-old cousin wanted to make a lemonade stand, so my sister and I helped her, but she got discouraged because nobody would buy any. She was so angry she started yelling, then she crossed the line and dropped the F-word. My sister and I were shocked that a 6-year-old would know that word. She said her classmate told it to her. (They're in kindergarten.)

We told our parents, but we're not sure if we should tell her mother because she might think my sister and I taught it to her. Should we tell her mother or let it slide hoping she will forget the word and move on?

— NOT SURE IN SAN DIEGO

DEAR NOT SURE: Your parents should tell your aunt about the incident, just in case your cousin doesn't "forget" the word. That way her mother can explain to her that there are certain words polite people don't use because they are unacceptable.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE Bobby Wolff

"One-half of the world cannot understand the pleasures of the other."

— Jane Austen

This deal came from the final match of the teams event at the Cavendish last year, won by Lou Ann O'Rourke, who retained her team's lead by defeating Roy Welland in the head-to-head match.

Welland had to fight to limit the damage here. His decision to lead his singleton club against four hearts, playing for ruffs, created an opportunity for declarer — one that would not have existed if the lead had been two top diamonds, which is what Steve Weinstein had done in the other room. All that that declarer could do was ruff and set up the clubs, then rely on a favorable spade position. When none was forthcoming, he was down one.

However, against Welland's club lead, declarer Eric Greco took the club ace, drew trumps, then cashed a second top club to find the bad news. He next led a diamond to the 10, jack and queen. It looks routine for West to exit by leading a second top diamond for declarer to ruff. But had Welland made that play, Greco would have pitched a spade instead of ruffing. That would have endplayed West, who would have to lead either spades or diamonds, allowing declarer to avoid losing a spade trick.

Welland saw this coming, so he underled his diamonds on the second round of the suit to Bart Bramley's eight. Declarer could now do no better than ruff and eventually play for the spade king inside or some unlikely endplay from the spade spots. Down one, and a flat board.

ANSWER: It looks simple just to jump to six no-trump, assuming that you have enough high cards for this to make. However, a far better call is to explore with five no-trump. This is not the grand-slam force — it offers the choice of slams. It suggests the values for slam and asks partner to propose a strain at the six-level. He might have either five spades or four clubs, in which case you'd prefer not to play no-trump.

IF MAY 8 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: During the next four weeks, your ambition and business savvy are accentuated in a positive way, but you will still have time to find exciting new interests. Groups and clubs will be filled with people who can expand your mind and free you from the ordinary routines in the early summer. Something you have always wished to do may become a reality. Tread carefully in August and September when you may be too involved in other people's business and sparks could fly. The question of right and wrong can be a puzzle you will be hard pressed to solve. In February, your popularity will soar and a new romance is definitely a possibility.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Social activities are like air: Breathing is an absolutely essential element but much more is needed to remain alive and vital. Don't fritter away valuable time socializing until all your tasks are completed.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You possess the power of your convictions. Be sure to act in accordance with high-minded standards. Those in close association may follow your beliefs and proposals like lambs to the slaughter.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Love can take its time. Affectionate Venus is in your sign and preparing to turn retrograde, so seems stuck in one place. A casual relationship that begins now might have a chance to grow and develop.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): The more you have, the more you will be expected to give. It is time to quit hoarding and think of ways to share with others. This doesn't always mean money or possessions, as thoughts and feelings also are valuable.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Don't bare your Achilles' heel when running to the forefront. Do everything possible to protect vulnerabilities. Maintain a sense of humor during a difference of opinion. Some assurances are not reliable.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): When push comes to shove, you must remember to apologize if it is necessary to shove. If you assess past financial failures analytically, you can sow the seeds of future success. Perform a good deed.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Resign your self-imposed position as general manager of the universe. You cannot control everything and everyone. The only thing you have the power to control is your own actions and thoughts.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You won't need to run away to the circus to be appreciated. You possess a juggler's skill at keeping home and family affairs running smoothly while making positive headway in the career sector.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Gullibility can be an asset. Your innocence and incorruptibility may protect you from being a pawn in someone's strategic plan. As a team player, others feel obligated to safeguard your interests.
