TWIN FALLS • Students from across the Magic Valley - from Burley, to Wendell to Twin Falls - packed the College of Southern Idaho Fine Arts Auditorium Tuesday to discuss how drugs affect their lives.

Several agencies, including the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare, Twin Falls County Juvenile Probation and The Region 5 Advisory Committee on Substance Use Disorders joined to sponsor and host the four-hour event to teach students about marijuana and other drugs, including synthetic marijuana known as spice or Hayze.

Monte Stiles, a former federal and state prosecutor turned drug educator, spoke to the students about what he saw on the job

Reservoir Managers Face Climate Hurdles

ASSOCIATED PRESS

BOISE • Scientists say climate change is making it tougher for Idaho reservoir managers to forecast weather, control floods and manage water for farming, recreation and Future challenges were foreshadowed recently, when two days of record high temperatures, accompanied by record rainfall in the same week, pushed a surge of water in the Boise River.

That forced dam managers with the Bureau of Reclamation to boost water they were sending out of Lucky Peak Dam upstream from Boise to levels not seen since 1998.

Dam managers say that if the reservoir behind the dam had been full, there could have been problems managing the water. Ron Abramovich, of the Natural Resources Conservation Service, says this phenomenon - a warm spring, heavier rains and more unpredictability - is all something to expect more of as the climate changes.

"A lot of people think global warming is going to be a gradual increase in temperatures," said Abramovich, a water specialist. "It may be a roller coaster, kind of like the stock market."

Idaho water managers have about a hundred years of data to base their conclusions on. That information shows that runoff used to begin in early April.

But now, it's starting in late March. Droughts and wet years have come and gone over the past century on the Boise River, said U.S. Geological Survey hydrologist Greg Clark. But the past 30 years have generally been drier. With the snowpack melting earlier, that leaves flows lower in the late summer and fall in the tributaries above reservoirs and in rivers without dams.

TWIN FALLS • Thousands of dollars that Idaho House Republicans donated to help re-elect their colleagues have been funneled into political action committees that seek to unseat multiple GOP incumbents.

The House Victory Fund is a pool of Republican Party money that House leadership normally uses to fund its incumbents' re-election bids.

But over the last year and a half, House leadership has moved at least $30,000 of that fund to a company and three political action committees that now endorse 40 Republican primary candidates, including some seeking to unseat GOP incumbents.

TIMES-NEWS

TWIN FALLS • A former assistant manager accused of stealing money from the Twin Falls Walmart he worked at changed his plea to guilty Monday in Twin Falls County 5th District Court. A trial was scheduled to begin May 16.

Patrick Dee Howard, 29, pleaded guilty to grand theft for stealing more than $100,000 in cash from a store safe and then fleeing to Orlando, Fla.

According to Twin Falls police, Howard was arrested in Florida by the Orange County Sheriff's Department on suspicion of felony grand theft. Walmart contacted investigators in mid-December to report the alleged theft. Howard tracked to the other side of the country, as he reportedly flew from Salt Lake City back from Florida. He is scheduled to be sentenced on June 25.

Utah Man Pleads Guilty to Vehicular Manslaughter for Jerome Crash

TIMES-NEWS

JEROME • A Utah man accused of causing the death of a Hailey woman pleaded guilty to an amended charge of misdemeanor vehicular manslaughter Monday in Jerome County 5th District Court. A trial in the case was scheduled to begin May 16.

Byrus Lyndon Gatewood, 47, of West Valley, Utah, was driving a Volvo semitrailer in June 2011 when he struck Dayle Fowler, who was outside her car, and crashed into several vehicles that were stopped for construction. The crash happened approximately 2 miles north of the U.S. Highway 93 and Idaho Highway 25 intersection in Jerome County. Fowler, 62, was pronounced dead at the scene.

Police say Gatewood had been adjusting his radio prior to the crash, but in a written statement, Gatewood wrote that he had looked down for a second prior to the crash, but didn't mention adjusting the radio.

According to police testimony, Gatewood's truck was moving at 63.7 miles per hour, much faster than the 45 mph construction zone speed limit, when he hit Fowler's SUV. Drugs and alcohol, along with cellphone use, were ruled not to be factors in the crash.

Gatewood is scheduled to be sentenced June 11.

Spartac LLC, Free Enterprise PAC, Idaho Land PAC and GunPAC are all owned by Republican operative Lou Esposito. All of the political action committees endorse the same 40 candidates.

Moyle

The most striking example: John Blattler, who is running against House Majority Caucus Chairman Ken Roberts Roberts, R-Donnel-

Roberts once supported Esposito's operations, and donated $1,000 to one of his funds in 2011. Now, Esposito's political action committees are trying to help the more conservative Blattler defeat Roberts.

In April, House Speaker Lawerence Denney moved $10,000 from the House Victory Fund to GunPAC. House Majority Leader Mike Moyle contributed $5,000 to the same fund.

That's no mistake, Moyle told the Associated Press. The two are trying to take Roberts out.

"He lied to me last year and tried to take me out of leadership," Moyle told the AP. "He let me know that if he comes back, he would try it again. I'm going to send a little love his way, so people know how he votes and how he is. When somebody threatens me, I take it seriously. It's nothing personal. But he's made it clear, he doesn't like me."

This isn't the first time House Victory Fund money has been shifted to these funds.

In 2011, the House Victory Fund contributed $5,000 to Spartac LLC and $15,000 to the Free Enterprise PAC. Over the course of six months in 2011, Free Enterprise PAC funneled $22,300 into Spartac LLC in eight separate contributions. Rep. Maxine Bell, R-

Jerome, contributed $400 to the House Victory Fund in 2011. Bell said although leadership decides how that money is spent, they have traditionally used it to help incumbents.

Bell said she didn't know about the feud between Moyle and Roberts, nor did she know how the fund money had been spent. "That's unfortunate, I think," Bell said. Rep. Stephen Hartgen, R-Twin Falls, contributed $250 in 2011. "It did not occur to me at the time that that money would be used to pit candidates against sitting House members," Hartgen said. "And frankly, I don't think that's a good idea." House Assistant Majority Leader Scott Bedke said he hadn't been consulted on the contribution against Roberts or the other incumbents, but said he would have advised against

"For the past six years, we've worked well as a leadership team. And I cannot condone any of these tactics," Bedke said.

"My responsibility as a member of the leadership team is to get as many Republicans elected to office as we can in the general election," he added. "This is counter to that objective."

Bedke contributed $1,000 to Roberts' re-election campaign, as did Rep. Fred Wood, R-Burley. Both also made contributions to the House Victory Fund.

Other targeted incumbents are Rep. Eric Anderson, R-Priest Lake; Rep. George Eskridge, R-Dover; Rep. Christy Perry, R-Nampa; Sen. Shawn Keough, R-Sandpoint; Sen. Patti Anne Lodge, R-Huston; and Sen. Dean Cameron, R-Rupert.

Cameron said Moyle and Denney's actions are unprecedented.

"I've never heard of incumbent leadership members challenging other members, either in their own body or in the Senate,"

Bedke said that while he believed time could heal the rift, the donations hurt morale among House Republicans, whom he referred to as a family. "All the caucus members are asking this right now," he said. "Who is next?"

In the second half of the day students had the chance to ask questions anonymously to a panel of 12 people including law enforcement, drug rehab employees, a doctor, educators and fellow students.

Students wrote on cards or sent text messages to three designated numbers, asking everything from how to help a friend get off drugs to if any of the panelists had tried drugs.

Sean Eckrote, a Twin Falls High School student on the panel, received a loud round of applause after sharing his personal experience with drugs.

Eckrote said the main reason he tried drugs was for fun or just to experience what it was like. The effect was more negative than he expected, he said, especially spice.

"It's more powerful than you can handle," he said.

Brent Evans, the drug-free workplace coordinator at St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center, talked about his experiences trying things he shouldn't have as a teen, and encouraged others who have tried drugs to talk about it.

"You're not being a hypocrite if you've learned," he said.

Nor are you less of a friend for confronting someone about their drug use, police said.

"If you know someone using spice, have a serious conversation with them," said Capt. Bryan Krear with the Twin Falls Police Department. Krear suggested going to a school counselor, but if nothing else works, to get police involved.

"If you're a real friend you owe it to them," he said.

Dr. Matthew Larsen, the director of emergency medicine at St. Luke's Magic Valley, fielded several questions from students about what he sees in the emergency and what the most dangerous drugs are.

Statistically speaking, misuse of prescription drugs is the top killer of people between the ages of 15-45, he said, but added that different drugs affect each person in a different way.

In the ER, Larsen said he sees several cases a week of people who are on spice. No one that he knows of has died from taking spice locally, but related emergency visits are up, he said. People often come in with underlying mental conditions and it turns out they've also been smoking spice, which exacerbates their condition.

CSI: Welding Students can Finish Work Next Week

TIMES-NEWS

TWIN FALLS • Although this is the last week of the semester, welding technology students at the College of Southern Idaho will be able to finish incomplete work next week.

CSI spokesman Doug Maughan said interim instructors don't have a set ending date for their time with the college.

That means welding students who need to finish their work will be able to get into the welding lab starting Monday.

Maughan said registration is also underway for both summer and fall welding classes. Interim instructors are scheduled to teach summer classes.

The college's regular, full-time instructors

Juan Martinez and Kent Parish – were placed on paid administrative leave April 12 and college administrators continue to investigate a personnel issue.

In order to keep the program running, CSI hired a few interim instructors last month.

Jim Schlund, a longtime CSI instructor who retired from the college's diesel technology program, is overseeing the program.

At the end of last month, the college also hired Brian Sprinkle and Alvin Hill as instructors.

Hill is a Certified Welding Inspector. He can sign off on students' end-ofsemester projects.

Before his arrival, welding students went a couple of weeks last month without anyone available to sign off on projects.

That affects things besides farmers' irrigation water. It affects fish, for instance, especially since the water is getting warmer and potentially less hospitable for native species, said Clark, associate director for the Idaho Water Science Center in Boise.

And recreationalists could start to notice, too.

On the Boise River, longer periods of high spring flows to prevent flooding delays the floating season. On rivers such as the Middle Fork of the Salmon, low late-season flows limit the number of days for whitewater rafting.

The Bureau of Reclamation wants new forecasting models to help it manage water.

But with money tight and the federal government cutting back on research spending, maintaining even the status quo is going to be a challenge.

north of the Snake River Canyon.

Case in point: Money for the 100-year-old Boise Middle Fork streamflow gauge is in doubt, Clark said. But these long-term stations do provide data that might otherwise be missed, he said.

The agency is sponsoring research by Boise State University hydrologist Mel Kunkel, whose new modeling technique looks at all of the cyclical "signals" scientists have discovered in the Pacific, including El Nino and La Nina weather patterns and annual temperature shifts.

This year, when others were predicting a drier year, Kunkel's model for the Boise River predicted significantly higher precipitation.

At least so far, it turns out he's right: Between 110 percent and 150 percent of average amounts fell in the Weiser, Payette, Boise, Clearwater, Panhandle and Henrys Fork, according to the Natural Resources Conservation Service in Idaho's most recent water supply report.

Latah County to Offer $300K for Fed Building

MOSCOW-PULLMAN DAILY NEWS

MOSCOW • Latah County commissioners plan to counter a $1.9 million price tag on the Moscow Federal Building with a $300,000 offer to the U.S. General Services Administration in the hope it will spur a negotiating process.

The offer is based on past GSA auctions, the 2003 sale of the St. Maries Federal Building and an argued cost savings to federal agencies should they be allowed to keep their current office spaces and not seek more expensive commercial property space, said B.J. Swanson, director for the Latah Economic Development Council.

"I'm trying to show the savings by leaving it as it is," Swanson told commissioners Monday, adding federal agencies in the Federal Building alone could pay $2 million more on commercial office space over the next 10 years if forced to leave. GSA recently reduced rent for federal agencies to below commercial value per square

GSA gave the county until Wednesday to decide whether to seek a qualifying federal agency to sponsor a public benefit conveyance of the building or continue negotiating a price for the surplus property. Commissioners opted to make a counteroffer when it was learned the county would still have to pay for the portion of the building not being claimed through conveyance, including about $700,000 just for space filled by the post office. The county is too small for one federal agency to efficiently use the entire building, she added, and GSA sees the post office as a quasi-independent corporation.

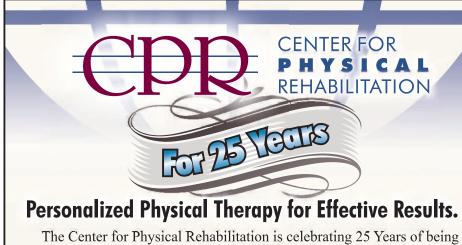

"I like that offer," said Commissioner Stroschein, "but I want to give them some latitude to let them know we're negotiable.... Boy, they sure were strong on their set figure."

Swanson drafted a letter to GSA slated for approval by commissioners Wednesday that includes a price comparison for other buildings the federal agency is selling at public auction and said $300,000 is a "good faith offer." All six buildings listed are more than the 48,390square-foot Moscow building and the highest bid for a 65,000-square-foot building in Olivehurst, Calif., is $650,000.

"I think $300,000 is more than fair," said Commissioner Dave McGraw.

"If they don't accept it, I guess we go to auction," added Stroschein.

If GSA puts the Federal Building up for public auction online, the county faces being evicted from there office space it currently leases there in as soon as 30 days after negotiations end.

DEQ Sends Emissions Notices by Mistake

IDAHO PRESS-TRIBUNE

NAMPA • Idaho's Department of Environmental Quality mistakenly sent emissions testing requirement notices in Canyon County and Kuna to owners of vehicles made between 2008 and 2012. Vehicles made between those years are exempt from the testing program.

The agency will send follow-up letters to about 680 vehicle owners who got the mistaken notices to let them know they don't have to get emissions tests.

Owners of cars made in those years will be reimbursed if they already had emissions tests, DEQ Regional Administrator Pete Wagner said. So far only a few have, he said.

"I'm sincerely sorry that this happened, and we're doing everything possible to rectify the issue and to ensure that it doesn't occur again," Wagner said.

DEQ has contacted emissions testing stations and told them not to test the newer vehicles. DEO notified the Department of Motor Vehicles about the mistake. Wagner also sent letters about the error to local elected officials.

The mistaken testing notices were sent out last week and the follow-up letters were sent out Friday, Wagn-

Officials to Resume Salmon Effort at Dworshak Reservoir

LEWISTON (AP) • The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers is preparing to restart a project that calls for adding liquid fertilizer to the Dworshak Reservoir to balance nutrient levels and hopefully spur growth of kokanee

The agency released an environmental impact statement Monday that concludes the addition of liquid fertilizer would not have a significant impact on the 55-mile long reservoir in north central Idaho.

"We are trying to get our guys going this week for an application," Paul Pence, Dworshak Dam and Reservoir natural resource manager for the corps, told the Lewiston Tribune.

In 2007, the corps and Idaho Department of Fish and Game started adding fertilizer to the reservoir as part of a five-year pilot project. The goal was to balance nitrogen and phosphorus levels and boost growth at the bottom of the lake's food chain.

They hoped the program would improve the health of the aquatic ecosystem and the positive effects would ripple up the food chain and lead to bigger, fatter kokanee.

The project began to produce incrementally positive results, but it also spawned a controversy over what some critics said was an unintended consequence - blooms of undesired bluegreen algae.

Some complained the algae was causing swimmers rash and affecting a downstream fish hatchery. Corps and fish and game officials said the fertilizer actually helped to suppress bluegreen algae, and U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service officials said problems at Dworshak National Fish Hatchery were unrelated to the program.

Ron Hanes, who lives in Orofino and is a critic of the project, filed a 60-day notice of intent to sue, claiming the agencies failed to secure the proper permits prior to starting the project. In the fall of 2010, more than three years into the project and before a formal lawsuit was filed, the Environmental Protection Agency said a national pollution discharge elimination system permit was needed to add fertilizer to the water.

Corps officials stopped the project and applied for the permit. Last year the EPA issued the permit and also determined the fertilizer was not responsible for the blue-green algae blooms or problems at the hatchery.

Corps officials determined an environmental analysis was needed before the project could resume. That process was completed Monday when the corps determined the project will not harm the environment.

Pence said fertilizing will continue for another five years.

"We have 3 1/2 years of data and things appeared to be going in the right direction, but it wasn't concrete enough so we are looking at another five years of data to analyze and then will decide if it's worth it," Pence said.

Joe DuPont, regional fisheries manager for the Idaho Department of Fish and Game in Lewiston, said there is some indication that years with high spring floodwater, such as 2011, might push nutrients out of the reservoir. If true, that could raise some long-term questions about the project.

"That is one of the big questions I have, how do big flow events influence the effectiveness of the project? If you have to reset every four or five years and it takes three years to get back to where you see a benefit, is it worth it?" he said.

2 Face Charges of Trying to Steal Copper

CALDWELL • Police in Caldwell have arrested two men they say were trying to steal copper wire for a business that had already lost an estimated $100,000 in copper wire to thieves.

Police say they caught 46year-old James Swain and 31-year-old Thomas R. Moore at the business at 2:30 a.m. Tuesday.

Investigators believe Swain and Moore are involved in other thefts and burglaries and that more people are involved. Police continue to investigate.

Swain faces charges of grand theft, burglary, conspiracy, and possession of a controlled substance while Moore faces charges of grand theft, destruction of evidence, conspiracy and resisting arrest.

HELENA, Mont. • Montana Lottery officials say a Great Falls man has claimed the $316,000 Wild Card jackpot from the April 21 drawing.

Robert Pearce purchased his ticket at The Cigarette Store in Great Falls.

Pearce's win was the first time since Sept. 7, 2011 that a Montana ticket has won the Wild Card jackpot. The game is played in Montana, Idaho, North Dakota and South Dakota.

The Wild Card jackpot is estimated at $120,000 for Wednesday's drawing.

Recumbent Bike Taken from Boise Man Found Damaged

BOISE • Police is Boise say they've found several pieces of a recumbent tricycle that was reported stolen from a man with a brain injury, and the company that makes the bike is offering any needed replacement parts.

Brian Gorman says his balance is very poor and the three-wheeled tricycle was his only mode of transportation. Gorman reported the tricycle missing on Sunday from the tree where he usually locks it.

Police say pieces of the tricycle were found in at least two separate locations Monday night.

Police spokeswoman Lynn Hightower says the investigating officer contacted the manufacturer in the United Kingdom and they offered any necessary replacement parts at no cost.

Gorman told KTVB-TV the tricycle was given to him two years ago.

Coroner: Alleged Mobster's Friend Killed Himself

MARSING • Authorities say a southwestern Idaho man charged with helping steal $162,000 in cash and gold from the home of an alleged mobster died of a self-inflicted gunshot wound to the head.

Owyhee County deputies found Kelly Verceles' body in the Marsing home of alleged mobster Enrico Ponzo on Feb. 1.

The 40-year-old Verceles was taking care of the home while Ponzo awaited trial on federal charges for his alleged involvement with the Mafia. He had been living in Idaho under an assumed name.

Coroner Harvey Grimme told the Idaho Press-Tribune that he completed a toxicology report and a psychological profile before ruling Verceles' death a suicide.

Verceles had been scheduled to appear in 3rd District Court on Feb. 10 for a change-of-plea hearing on conspiracy, burglary and grand theft charges.

Sex Offender to Remain Free Despite New Law

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) • ho faces nearly two dozen charges in Utah but has remained free because of a legal loophole likely will never face trial or be confined to an institution, a prosecutor said Tuesday.

"He falls into this gray area," Utah County prosecutor Craig Johnson said. "For criminal prosecution, we are in an indefinite holding pattern. The proceedings are stayed, perhaps forever."

Lonnie Johnson, 39, was charged in 2007 with 21 sodomy and sex assault counts after police said he had inappropriate contact with his stepdaughter and her cousin. A year later, however, a judge deemed Johnson incompetent to stand trial due to a cognitive disorder.

He spent about two and a half years at Utah State Hospital while doctors worked to make him well enough for trial. But last year they said he had shown little improvement.

Ryan Leaf Pleads Guilty to Stealing Painkillers

GREAT FALLS, Mont. (AP) • Former NFL quarterback Ryan Leaf pleaded guilty Tuesday to charges that he broke into a Montana home and illegally possessed painkillers, part of a deal with prosecutors that recommends he spend nine months in a secure drug treatment

The former San Diego Chargers quarterback and Washington State standout was shackled hand and foot and wore a black-and-white prison stripes as he told Cascade County District Judge Kenneth Neill that he needed treatment.

"I'm very much looking forward to the opportunity presented," Leaf said. "An intensive nine-month rehab facility is presently needed."

It was one of the few statements Leaf made in the hearing under questioning by his attorney, Kenneth Olson. Leaf admitted that he broke into a home in Cascade County on April 1.

Montana Wolf Hunt: Trapping, No Quota Among Proposals

BY MATT VOLZ Associated Press

HELENA, Mont. • Montana officials planning the state's upcoming wolf hunt are considering allowing trapping for the first time and eliminating quotas in an effort to reduce the number of wolves in the state.

Ranchers and hunters concerned about their livestock and big-game kills have complained the growing wolf population threatens their interests and they have pressured state regulators to do more to cut wolf numbers. In March, Montana Fish, Wildlife and Parks officials invited county commissioners from across the state to Helena to hear their ideas for improving the hunt's effectiveness.

The state wildlife agency has responded with a wolf-hunt proposal to go before the Fish, Wildlife and Parks Commission on Thursday in what promises to be a contentious debate over an animal that was protected under the federal Endangered Species Act until Congress removed those protections last The wildlife agency proposes doing away with quotas - last fall and winter, just 166 wolves were killed out of a 220-wolf quota and extending the season to Feb. 28. The agency also plans to ask legislators to rewrite state laws to allow the use of electronic calls and to increase the number of wolves a hunter or trapper can take from one to three.

But at the forefront of the debate will be whether to expand the hunt to allow hunters to trap wolves in addition to offering archery and rifle seasons. Animal-rights groups say they consider trapping unethical and they are prepared to fight the proposal.

"If we allow this to happen with trapping and snaring, what's next? Baiting, poisoning?" said Marc Cooke of the advocacy group Wolves for the Rockies. "I have a feeling that that meeting room in Helena is going to be packed on Thursday. It's going to be hot. It's going to be very hot?

Trapping will "unleash a wave of wolf hatred," and the traps will expose other wildlife to unintended death and injury, National Wolfwatcher Coalition officials wrote in comments to Fish, Wildlife and Parks. That, in addition to the other proposed changes, would "dramatically increase harvest levels," which could result in a population decline beyond what the state models predict, the group

Fish, Wildlife and Parks officials say in documents outlining the proposal that their population objective after the hunting season is 425 wolves. Their models predict 377 wolves could be killed in the hunt this year and the population would not drop below 490 wolves.

FWP Commission Chairman Bob Ream said that number probably won't be met without the legislative changes to allow electronic calls and to increase the number of wolves an individual hunter can kill. With the Legislature convening in January, lawmakers are unlikely to pass such a bill before February, and the proposed date to end the hunt is Feb. 28.

Wildlife officials will keep a close eye on the wolves killed in each district and will close down a wolf management unit if the hunt appears to be cutting too deeply, Ream said.

Ream said he also will suggest the agency develop an education component, such as a video, on how to more effectively hunt

The commission will take public comment on the proposal and make a final decision in July.

Kauffman the Best of Two Great Options

t's rare that voters get a choice between two fresh candidates.

And in District 25's House race, Republicans will end up with a fine candidate either way.

This editorial board found the race between Hansen's David Funk and Filer's Clark Kauffman to be one of the most difficult choices in this month's primaries.

Kauffman is a barley farmer, commissioner on the Filer Highway District, on the board of Filer Mutual Telephone and past chairman of the Idaho Barley Commission. Funk is both a farmer and dairyman, and has served on boards including the National Potato Board and the United Dairymen of Idaho board.

Both are keenly aware of local ag issues — for example, they each highlighted a recent situation where air emissions limits at Amalgamated Sugar's Paul plant required beets to be trucked over to Twin Falls. Both candidates felt that to be self-defeating, wasting resources and adding pollution, the opposite of what the emissions limits should do. Running on pro-business platforms, both are interested in pursuing new markets and adjusting regulation to help business — especially agribusi-

Funk is knowledgeable on a number of issues. He would encourage classroom technology in ways that benefit rural school districts with fewer resources - but remains concerned about how the student computers that will be passed out in last year's education reforms will be handled.

Funk sees a need to prepare for Medicaid changes as the federal government grapples with its budget, and worries that a comprehensive plan to repair the Eastern Snake Plain Aquifer has been ignored. And, he says the Legislature was a little slow to respond to the ethics issues of the past session, particularly in the case of former Sen. John McGee.

Kauffman, however, has expertise - particularly on transportation, on which the Magic Valley has lost its resident expert with Rep. Leon Smith's re-

Kauffman is especially familiar with the burden local highway districts have borne in recent years, but he's also well-informed on state highway matters. He's concerned about how the state will repay GARVEE loans if the future federal funding that currently covers those is reduced. And, he's bold enough to recognize the need to stop arguing and take action to improve our transportation network, calling for an increase in the gas tax to address Idaho's lingering roads backlog.

How to choose? Both men are in tune overall with their would-be constituents. But this is a chance for Jerome and Twin Falls county Republicans to have a strong voice in the roads debate as

Funk would be a solid conservative legislator, in the vein of many before him. Kauffman would go to Boise with a purpose. As such, we endorse Clark Kauffman to represent the GOP in District

Williams Seeks Another Commission Term

I would like to thank the citizens of Gooding County for the warm welcome I have received in my ongoing campaign for re-election as county commissioner. For the record, this letter is to review some of my background and experience.

I grew up in Twin Falls and Hagerman and have lived in Wendell the past 36 years. I worked for nearly 30 years as a photo-journalist for Gooding County Leader, Times-News, Ag Weekly and the Capital Press. My reporting in Gooding County included 12 years of meeting coverage of county commissioners, planning and zoning commissions, school boards, chambers of commerce and city councils in Gooding, Wendell, Hagerman and Bliss.

I believe it is important for commissioners to be well-educated and knowledgeable about governmental laws and county issues. Since taking office as commissioner in 2007, I have attended numerous seminars and workshops put on by specialty attorneys and other instructors. Topics include county legal procedures, planning and zoning issues, legislative issues affecting counties, health and human services, justice and public safety, and emergency preparedness. I continually work to stay informed, and to know and follow proper procedures.

As commissioner, I have represented Gooding County on the Region IV Development Association Board of Directors and am also in my sixth year on the Snake River Juvenile Detention Center Board of Directors, currently serving as vice chairman. My goals as commissioner have been to support our agricultural base and to develop policies that encourage economic growth. I also support policies that protect our natural resources and environment.

I would appreciate your continued support in the primary election on May 15.

Vote Johnson for Twin Falls Co. Sheriff

I am asking Twin Falls County voters to vote Jack Johnson on May 15.

I have had the opportunity to listen to Mr. Johnson speak on three separate occasions in the last month at various gatherings. It is quite apparent to me after the last time hearing him that he is a well-trained and citizen-oriented candidate. I have noticed a continual increase in knowledge on subjects brought up to Mr. Johnson, which proves to me he takes the concerns he is asked about and, in fact, looks into the subject, then when he speaks again has more knowledge and definite understanding about the particular issue.

Jack knows that he as the sheriff would have the exclusive constitutional power to keep the feds at the county border. No one but the county sheriff, period, holds that position. Jack knows as well the threat to the Second Amendment (right to bear arms) and believes in protecting the Second Amendment. Jack also knows when you accept federal money, there are always strings attached and would not be as accepting of federal money as others

Please vote Jack Johnson on May 15 for county sher-

Re-elect Roemer to Jerome Co. Commission

We are writing this letter in support of Cathy Roemer for Jerome County commissioner.

We get used to having people running for public office making promises to the voters that they will serve us. Later, it seems all too often they are more interested in serving themselves or their cronies at the expense of the taxpay-

We in the east end of Jerome County found ourselves in exactly that situation. A federal government agency and county commissioner decided that they wanted to locate a long 1,000-yard-plus shooting range for 50 caliber rifles just off Crestview Road. We had no objections to such a range in the area with the exception that the site for the proposed range was surrounded by 50 families and a major dairy operation. The longest kill recorded by one of these rifles was by a Canadian sniper in Afghanistan at 2,430 me-We attempted to contact our local commissioners and the only one that was readily available and listened to our concerns was Cathy Roemer. After several meetings and discussions over the project, it was decided that the range would be better placed two miles farther up the road and utilize an area of several hundred thousand empty Bureau of Land Management acres. Common sense and a concern for the safety of the citizens was the priority that Cathy Roemer brought to this discussion. Without her efforts, we would no doubt be wearing armor plating in going about our daily tasks today.

We the undersigned are grateful that we have an official like Cathy Roemer who understands the principle of true, honest and sincere public service. We ask that, for the good of Jerome County, you vote to re-elect Cathy Roemer on May 15.

Examine Candidates' Merits, not Mudslinging

Kudos to the Times-News

for coming out with jeers for the mudslinging that has been going on for the last several weeks in reference to the Twin Falls County sheriff's race. My folks told me that if you don't have something good to say about a person, don't say anything at all.

Tom and Jack have both been good friends of mine for years and were always excellent to work with as Twin Falls County sheriff's sergeants while I worked for the Idaho State Police. I have talked to both of them and they both are uncomfortable with the mudslinging and mistruths being told by some of their supporters. Let your candidate win by their merits and cease this unprofessional behavior as it tends to give all of law enforcement professionals a bad name. DOUG MCFALL

Know Your Precinct Before Going to Polls

Now that the redistricting process is complete after the 2010 Census, many of the precincts in Twin Falls County have been redrawn and different polling places to vote have been assigned.

The public needs to know about these changes, so I made a website with an index map of all the new Twin Falls precincts and individual precinct maps at the street level showing the boundaries and the polling place for each precinct map.

The website is at: www.TF-12.org.

It is easy for a person to locate which precinct they are in, and to learn if their polling place has changed. Please remember to vote on May 15. Your vote is valuable; please do not waste it.

Brackett Best Bet for District 23

Sen. Tim Corder knows that it is not the truck driver that determines his destination, but rather the customer. Granted, the driver should research and select the best route, particularly when hauling perishables, like free-

Sen. Corder's voting record shows him jumping the GOP guardrails. This trailblazer jumps the rail so often that Idahoconservatives.us ranks him the most liberal of Idaho's sitting republican senators. Corder's voting record says plenty about who he is, but his own words add greater clarity. A quote from his website dated Feb. 26, 2010, boldly declares, "moderates are the true conservatives." The GOP platform is not moderate. Self-proclaimed moderates like Sen. Corder throw up detour signs, roadblocks and speed bumps for the Republican Party. Perhaps this is what his moderate and Democrat constituents expect, but it is not what true Republican voters want.

Sen. Corder is a wordsmith. He spends a lot of time on social media artfully defending his off-road treks and bending the minds of his skeptics to accept him as worthy of the very GOP brand that is curiously absent from his campaign. Sen. Corder posted on his website, "As chairman of the Local Government and Taxation Committee, I must exercise discretion over what bills are heard or not." It was his "discretion" that held Gov. Otter's tax relief measure (H563) in committee for a month. He voted against it in committee, then against it again on the Senate floor. Ultimately, he pulled in behind the convoy and voted aye after realizing he was the only "Republican" standing with the Democrats in opposition.

Corder opposes stimulating the economy by dropping the corporate tax and lowering the higher end of the personal income tax. He believes that Idaho can reduce its sales tax to 3 percent if we eliminate tax exemptions for industry. Corder's concept of fairness in taxation would remove incentive for business to invest in Idaho. It does not matter how low the sales tax is if Idahoans are underemployed and cannot afford to shop for much.

Voters should suspend Sen. Corder's driving privilege on the GOP highway and place Republican Sen. Bert Brackett behind the wheel of the big rig representing District 23.

Johnson Best Pick for T.F. Co. Sheriff

Twin Falls County voters: It gives me a great deal of pleasure to write this letter in support of Jack Johnson.

While I am not a resident of Twin Falls, I would like to share with you my experience with Jack. Jack has been with the Jerome County sheriff's office for the past three-plus years as the department's chief deputy, the sheriff's right-hand man. During that time I have watched him interact with his deputies in a manner that is encouraging and per-

Jack is a very intelligent officer who knows the law and is willing to work hard to enforce it in order to protect his public. Jack shows respect for all with whom he works. He is a man who listens diligently to discussion and is insightful in his questions. He works well with the public as well as others in the courthouse. During commissioners meetings, Jack has brought issues to the board in a prepared and responsible manner so that business can be conducted appropriately and completely. On the occasions that I have had business to conduct with Jack, he has been extremely easy to work with and always willing to go that extra mile to complete our business in a professional manner.

I encourage you to vote for Jack Johnson for Twin Falls County sheriff. He is a law enforcement officer that holds high standards for professional integrity as well as practicing moral and professional ethics and will bring these qualities with him to the Twin Falls County Sheriff's Department. A vote for Jack Johnson will be a vote well cast.

Johnson a Pleasure to Support

We are lifetime residents of Twin Falls and we believe that it is time for a change. We would like to take this opportunity to express our support for Jack Johnson, candidate for the Republican nomination for Twin Falls County sheriff.

Jack has 27 years of experience in law enforcement and has the commitment and knowledge to be a good and effective leader. Jack has earned the respect of his fellow deputies as well as the respect of the officers from the other law enforcement agencies in southern Idaho.

Jack is willing to listen to the concerns of the people of the county and will take the actions necessary to restore the people's trust in the sheriff's office. Jack is a man with integrity.

It is our pleasure to support Jack, and we urge you to vote for Jack Johnson.

Pick Patrick in District 25

I would like to take this opportunity to weigh in on the candidate running for the District 25 Senate seat, Jim Patrick.

I think that when reflecting on the work that our state legislators provide us as Idaho citizens, it is important to find ways in which to quantify their performances. As a state representative, Jim has consistently carried numerous bills that are relevant to current economic needs, are clearly drafted and successful in passing both legislative bodies. From a performance perspective, Jim successfully carries more bills than the average legislator and has proven that he is able to understand the complexity of a very broad range of issues. Jim's successful appointment and subsequent involvement with the Joint Finance and Appropriations Committee proves that his legislative peers feel that he has the capability to effectively manage very large budgets. Contrary to reporting by the Times-News, Jim has been quite successful in working with germane committees through JFAC and understanding the entirety of the issues. Jim Patrick is a proven legislator.

I, personally, feel that he meets the performance criteria and standards that all Idaho citizens expect from a legislator. I have no doubt that he will be as effective in the Senate as he was in the House of Representatives, and strongly encourage you to vote for Jim Patrick, Idaho State Senate, District 25, in the upcoming May 15 primary election, and again in the November general elec-

Support Chatterton for Jerome Co. Sheriff

I have known Dan for nearly 16 years, and I've found him to be a very honest and trustworthy person, I've found him a valued friend and adviser. As a newly appointed deputy sheriff in 1996, I sought out Dan's experience and training to accomplish my duties to serve the citizens to the best of my abili-

Dan has a viable plan to save the taxpayers money and still bring in a new jail without added hardship to the citizens of Jerome Countv. Joe Skaug's letter to the editor wants you to believe that Dan Chatterton is a lawsuit waiting to happen. Any lawsuit that Dan brought against Jerome County or Jerome City was due to his being wronged by those respective administrations. Dan was asked to sign off on a search warrant that he could not attest to as being truth. He was asked to lie and he wouldn't. Dan has gone the extra distance to investigate and capture Jimmy Vurel Thomas, who was convicted for killing Steven Louder in Eden, as well as the investigation and capture of Sandra Jonas. Jonas murdered Meta Jones because she wanted to keep her ex-husband from marrying again. Dan has shown that he is willing to stand up for the citizens of Jerome County rather than allow those who commit violent crimes to escape justice.

And as far as Joe Skaug's statement that Sheriff McFall has improved relations between Jerome County and Jerome City, that's not hard. All you need to do is allow communication between the departments. In past administrations, Jerome County deputies were "punished" for seeking the help of Jerome City Police officers and detectives in finding and apprehending those persons who victimized others. I can attest to this.

Please support Dan Chatterton for Jerome County sheriff.

Re-elect McFall in Jerome County

To the citizens of Jerome County:

We would like to take this time to thank Sheriff Doug McFall for his commitment to the east end residents of Eden and Hazelton. Since Doug has been sheriff, we have had better law enforcement protection on the east end of the county. We have two resident deputies that live in and patrol the east end of the county, which has not happened in previous administrations.

Doug made good on his campaign promise four years ago when he said he will have a resident deputy. Doug is a man of with pride and integrity. On several occasions, Sheriff McFall has stopped by our house to visit with us and see if there is anything better his department could do. That has never happened in the past.

We will be voting to reelect Doug McFall for Jerome County sheriff and ask the residents of Jerome County to do the same

Vote for Individual Liberty and Freedom

The Environmental Protection Agency revealed its true police state enforcement tactics by telling how to control us by "crucifying" us. Its unscientific bureaucratic regulations are destroying our economy by implementing the United Nations Agenda 21 (Sustainable Development) hoax of man-caused global warming. Congress should abolish funding to EPA and United Nations.

May 1 is the International Communist holiday. Occupy Wall Street demonstrations are a communist tactic to cause anarchy which has always led to totalitarian government. They want to destroy our free enterprise system and replace it with redistribution-of-wealth socialism which always leads to economic misery, loss of freedom and tyranny. Socialism is non-workable

For Congress, it is time for a change to a real conservative. Chick Heileson will be a constitutional voice for limited government. Rep.

David 🗯

Simpson has voted for bailouts, "stimulus" programs, subsidies for mortgage giant Fanny Mae and continues raising the debt

Sen. Bert Brackett should be re-elected as he has voted to support limited constitutional government. His opponent is called a moderate and moderates have compromised us into the economic disaster of today.

The sheriff is the most important political office because he stands between us and a federal police force. Twin Falls County has two higher qualified candidates, but Sheriff Carter has performed very well and deserves to be re-elected.

Cathy Roemer, Jerome County commissioner, deserves re-election as she has taken a supportive stand for taxpayers by not only voting against a county employee pay raise due to a tough economy but also refusing to take her personal pay raise. Her opponent is a Democrat running as a Republican.

As a Republican committeeman candidate for Filer Precinct 1, I will work to restore limited pro-constitutional government, promote more individual responsibility and, with God's, help create an atmosphere of more individual liberty and freedom.

I would like to solicit support for Jack Johnson for sheriff in the coming primary election on May 15. I have known Jack for more than 20 years and know him to be a very honest, trustworthy and caring family man, married to Rhonda for 25 years. His qualifications for the job are many and extensive. He is highly trained in all aspects of law enforcement and holds numerous certifications in many different disciplines in his profession as a lawman. He is probably one of the most qualified officers to seek the office of sheriff we've seen in this county for many years. He's been in the profession for 27 years and has an impeccable record and reputation, having worked for the Twin Falls County Sheriff's Department most of those years and most recently as undersheriff in Jerome County for the past 31/2 years. Jack Johnson has been involved in the community for years in many ways, including working with youth organizations as a coach and Scout leader and service clubs, such as the Twin Falls Optimist Club. He is a fiscal conservative in both his personal and professional life,

He is a man of the highest integrity, has the desire, disposition and experience to do the job. I would encourage you to check him out at www.johnsonforsheriff.us and see for yourself.

Pick Heward for Cassia Co. Sheriff

I am writing this letter in support for Jay Heward for Cassia County sheriff. I have known Jay his entire career at the sheriff's office. I was on the hiring board when Jay applied for the job, and I have worked with him closely during that time. During the last 10 years, I have found Jay to be approachable and was always willing to help anyone who asked. What really impresses me about Jay's character is he really cares about the people involved in his cases, no matter what circumstances they are in. He treats everyone with respect, even the alleged sus-

There is a reason Jay is running for sheriff. He sees the bigger picture. He will be available to the public and have an open-door policy, which is so important in this position. He sincerely cares for the employees at the sheriff's office.

I retired one year ago and the morale was less than stellar when I left. There definitely needs to be a change in the sheriff's office. Law enforcement as a career is very stressful, even more if you don't feel you have support of the administration. Ask yourself, why would an employee feel compelled to run against the sheriff? There is a reason. Jay made a considerable commitment to run for sheriff to improve the relations with the Cassia County citizens and the officers who serve these citizens.

There needs to be a change and Jay is ready and willing to dedicate his time and efforts to improve the quality and morale of the Cassia County sheriff's office for everyone in the community. I encourage you to vote for Jay Heward for Cassia County sheriff on May 15. It is the right choice.

3 Bison Kept for Study; Hazing Next for Others

BY MATTHEW BROWN

Associated Press

BILLINGS, Mont. • Government workers are set to begin hazing hundreds of wild bison back into Yellowstone National Park this week after capturing a small group of the animals for use in a birth control

Ten bull bison were captured near West Yellowstone, Montana state veterinarian Marty Zaluski said Tuesday.

Seven were later released and three turned over to U.S. Department of Agriculture researchers. The government is studying whether birth control can reduce disease prevalence in the animals, many of which carry brucellosis.

Officials also are trying to rein in the park's burgeoning herds of bison, or buffalo. They periodically spill into Montana and ignite conflicts between advocates, wildlife ranchers and government agencies.

Yellowstone has one of the largest bison populations in the world, animals prized for their pure genetics. But thousands of migrating bison have been shipped to slaughter in the last decade to prevent transmissions of brucellosis to cattle.

Relatively few of the park's estimated 3,700 bison migrated out of the park this winter, avoiding another large slaughter. Yet with cattle returning to parts of Montana this week for summer grazing, state and federal workers plan to drive roughly 400 bison from the Hebgen Lake area back into Yellowstone.

The plans are drawing opposition from wildlife advocates and American Indian groups.

Montana-Wyo-Tribal Leaders Council asked Gov. Brian Schweitzer to intervene to stop the hazing. The organization of 11 tribes says the bison should be allowed to return to the park on their own.

Stephany Seay with the Buffalo Field Campaign, a West Yellowstone-based advocacy group said many of the bison are due to calve soon, making it a bad time to drive them miles into the park.

A state-federal agreement calls for the animals' return by May 15, although officials have let that date slide by several weeks during long winters.

The three captured bulls were to be sent to an Agriculture Department research ranch near Corwin Springs. The ranch already has about four dozen bison captured last

Yellowstone has awarded researchers a permit to take up to 108 bison and treat them with a chemical sterilization vaccine known as GonaCon. Zaluski said the most promising part of the study is its potential to help control brucellosis.

"Modeling has shown that to have impact on population growth, you would have to contracept a significant population of the animals," he said. "But to have an impact on disease transmission, you don't have to hit that many at all?'

Seay said the study offers yet another example of agencies interfering with Yellowstone bison at the behest of livestock interests.

"Birth control should not even be considered. It's just unthinkable, having a federal livestock overseer manipulating buffalo like this. It's not OK," she said.

Zaluski says researchers hope to capture up to three more bison for the study this spring

Autopsy: Ultra-marathoner Who Died During Run Had Heart Disease

BY SUSAN MONTOYA BRYAN

Associated Press

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. • Ultra-marathon runner Micah True died from heart disease while on a routine 12mile run in late March in the mountains of southwestern New Mexico, according to an autopsy report released Tuesday.

The report showed that True, 58, had cardiomyopathy, a disease that results in the heart becoming enlarged. While medical examiners couldn't point to the cause of the heart disease, they said True's left ventricle, which pumps oxygenated blood to the rest of the body, had become thick and was dilated.

Chemical tests showed that True was mildly dehydrated and had caffeine in his system. He also had some abrasions on his elbows, forearms, knees and shins.

True's body was discovered March 31 along a stream in a remote part of the Gila Wilderness. The search for him began days earlier after he failed to return from a run. Friends had theorized that he stopped at the stream to wash up after a fall while running on the rugged terrain.

True's girlfriend, Maria Walton of Gilbert, Ariz., has said he was hypoglycemic. She said last month that without proper nutrition, "he would get dizzy or feel lightheaded. Not anything life endangering."

A disciplined eater, True would occasionally splurge and drink two beers between the hours of 5 p.m. and 7 p.m. when he wasn't running, Walton said. When friends would ask him if he had a vice, he would answer: "Vanilla ice cream," that Walton said came from a small market near where he died.

love of running. He had been involved in ultra-marathons for years, but it wasn't until he became friends with the indigenous Tarahumara of northern Mexico that the direction of his life came into sharp focus. The Tarahumara are known for their extreme running named

Blanco''

True would spend much of the year living among the Tarahumara, or Raramuri, as they are also known. It was in the canyons where True got rid of his running shoes, put on a pair of sandals and learned to run the way the Tarahumara do – easy, light and smooth.

True founded the 50-mileplus Copper Canyon race and directed it for the last several years to highlight the Tarahumara's culture and their love for running. This year had marked a record turnout for the grueling event, which sends participants, many wearing only sandals made of discarded tires, plunging into deep canyons and across mountains and rivers.

Friends said that True was healthy, so his death came as a surprise.

"This is a guy who could set out with a little bag of ground corn, a bottle of water in his hand and be gone all day. The day before he died, he did a six-hour run," said Chris McDougall, a friend of True and author of "Born to Run." The book chronicles True's efforts to develop the Copper Canyon race and draw international attention to the Tarahumara way of life and their love of running.

North Carolina Voters Approve Amendment on Gay Marriage

BY LYNN BONNER AND JAY PRICE McClatchy Newspapers (MCT)

RALEIGH, N.C. • North Carolina has become the 31st state to add an amendment on marriage to its constitution, with voters banning same-sex marriage and barring legal recognition of unmarried couples by state and local governments.

North Carolina is the last state in the south to add such an amendment, and supporters hoped for a resounding victory.

Incomplete returns show the amendment up 59.72 percent to 40.28 percent. Some large counties, including Durham and Mecklenburg have not reported results.

Primary turnout was heavy. Although there were many other races on the ballot, including primaries for statewide offices and congressional seats, the amendment appeared to drive much of the political discussion.

Marriage rights for gay couples has been a topic of national debate this year, and North Carolina's amendment and the campaigns for and against it drew international attention.

North Carolinians think of the state as progressive, but that's within the context of the rest of the South, said Andrew Taylor, a political scientist at N.C. State University. "This is a socially conservative state," he said.

The state has a 16-year-old law banning same-sex marriage.

At least two other states will be voting on gay marriage rights in November. Minnesota has a constitutional amendment on its ballot. Maine has a referendum to allow same-sex marriage. Voters in Maryland and Washington state may be asked to affirm new state laws allowing same-sex marriage.

Money from national interest groups poured into North Carolina. The National Organization for Marriage contributed $425,000 to the Vote for Marriage campaign, according to the latest reports, and the Human Rights Campaign and its affiliates contributed nearly $500,000 to the opposition Coalition to Protect All N.C. Families.

Officials Say Al-Qaida Bomber Was Informant

FBI is still analyzing the explosive, which was intended to be concealed in a passenger's underwear.

BY EILEEN SULLIVAN, MATT APUZZO AND ADAM GOLDMAN Associated Press

WASHINGTON • The CIA had al-Qaida fooled from the beginning.

Last month, U.S. intelligence learned that al-Qaida's Yemen branch hoped to launch a spectacular attack using a new, nearly undetectable bomb aboard an airliner bound for America, officials say.

But the man the terrorists were counting on to carry out the attack was actually working for the CIA and Saudi intelligence, U.S. and Yemeni officials told The Associated Press on

The dramatic sting operation thwarted the attack before it had a chance to succeed.

It was the latest misfire for al-Qaida, which has repeatedly come close to detonating a bomb aboard an airliner. For the United States it was a victory that delivered the bomb intact to U.S. intelligence.

The officials spoke to the AP on condition of anonymity because of the sensitivity of the operation. The cooperation of the would-be bomber was first reported Tuesday evening by the Los Angeles Times.

The FBI is still analyzing the explosive, which was intended to be concealed in a passenger's underwear. Officials said it was an upgrade over the bomb that failed to detonate on board an airplane over Detroit on Christmas 2009. This new bomb contained no metal and used a chemical - lead azide - that was to be a detonator in a nearly successful 2010 plot to attack cargo planes, officials said.

Security procedures at U.S. airports remained unchanged Tuesday, a reflection of both the U.S. confidence in its security systems and a recognition that the government can't realistically expect travelers to endure much more. Increased costs and delays to airlines and shipping companies could have a global economic impact, too.

"I would not expect any real changes for the traveling public," said House Intelligence Committee Chairman Mike Rogers, R-Mich. "There is a concern that overseas security doesn't match ours. That's an ongoing challenge."

While airline checks in the United States mean passing through an onerous, sometimes embarrassing series of pat-downs and body scans, procedures overseas can be a mixed bag. The U.S. cannot force other countries to permanently adopt the expensive and intrusive measures that have become common in American airports over the past decade.

The Transportation Security Administration sent advice to some international air carriers and airports about security measures that might stave off an attack from a hidden explosive. It's the same advice the U.S. has issued before, but there was a thought that it might get new attention in light of the foiled plot.

The U.S. has worked for years to try to improve security for U.S.bound flights originating at international airports. And many countries Please see BOMB PLOT, N2

Lugar's Loss Tempers Romney's Victories for GOP Establishment

Romney sweeps three Republican primaries, moving ever closer to sealing his nomination in an otherwise sharply polarized environment.

WASHINGTON • Six-term Indiana Sen. Richard Lugar was routed by the right flank of his own Republican Party on Tuesday, and North Carolina voters decided overwhelmingly to strengthen their state's gay marriage ban. It was a double-barreled show of conservative enthusiasm and strength six months before the nation chooses between Democratic President Barack Obama and GOP rival Mitt Romney.

Romney swept three Republican primaries, moving ever closer to sealing his nomination in an otherwise sharply polarized environment. "We are experiencing deep political divisions in our society right now. These divisions have stalemated progress in critical areas," Lugar, a Capitol Hill diplomat and a deal-maker, said as he conceded to the tea party-backed GOP opponent who ended his nearly fourdecade career in the Senate. Lugar's foe, state Treasurer Richard Mourdock, had painted the Republican senator as too moderate for the conservative state.

North Carolinians voted to amend their state constitution to define marriage as between one man and one woman, effectively outlawing gay unions through a ballot measure pursued by the

The highly charged and hardfought contests overshadowed Romney's continued progress toward the GOP presidential nomination. He won the Republican presidential primaries in Indiana, North Carolina and West Virginia on Tuesday, drawing close to the 1,144 delegates he needs to clinch the nomination. He won at least 59 delegates, with 37 still undecided. He had 915 delegates, 229 shy of what he needs to become the formal nominee.

Senate GOP Blocks Obama's Student Loan Proposal

BY LISA MASCARO

Tribune Washington Bureau (MCT)

WASHINGTON • The battle over President Barack Obama's plan to keep interest rates low on federal student loans escalated Tuesday as Senate Republicans blocked a Democratic proposal to tax higher-income individuals to pay for it.

Republicans also want to avoid raising the rate on college loans, but would pay for it by eliminating a public health fund in Obama's new health

The stalemate comes as both parties turn routine legislative votes into campaign debates. They can joust over the issue until July, when rates on new undergraduate student loans for 7 million students are set to double to 6.8 percent. But the showdown carries risks for both parties at a time when middle-class families are struggling with college costs and Americans are tired of the brinkmanship in Congress.

The Senate majority favored the bill, 52-45, but fell short of the 60 votes needed to overcome a GOP filibuster. No Republicans supported the bill, but retiring Sen. Olympia Snowe of Maine voted present.

The White House called the outcome "extremely disappointing."

Democrats contended the GOP was more sensitive to tea-party conservatives and anti-tax stalwarts than to the financial needs of ordinary Amer-

New Border Patrol Strategy Targets Repeat Crossers

ASSOCIATED PRESS

SAN DIEGO • With border crossings at a 40-year low, the U.S. Border Patrol announced a new strategy Tuesday that targets repeat crossers and tries to find out why they keeping coming.

For nearly two decades, the Border Patrol has relied on a strategy that blanketed heavily trafficked corridors for illegal immigrants with agents, pushing migrants to more remote areas where they would presumably be easier to capture and discouraged from trying again.

"The jury, for me at least, is out on whether that's a solid strategy," Chief Mike Fisher told The Associated

The new approach is more nuanced. Outlined in a 32page document that took more than two years to develop, agents will now draw on intelligence to identify repeat crossers and others perceived as security threats, said Fisher.

"This whole risk-based approach is trying to figure out who are these people? What risk do they pose from a national security standpoint? The more we know, the better informed we are about identifying the threat and potential risk," he said in a recent interview.

During testimony before a House Homeland Security subcommittee Tuesday, Fisher was repeatedly asked why the new strategy didn't include any specific "metrics" that could help members of Congress and the public better understand if the border is secure.

"How can you possibly measure if the border is secure at all?" asked Texas Republican Michael McCaul.

Fisher defended the strategy, saying it will help agents use the resources at the border to better understand what is really happen-

'Where Wild Things Are' Author Sendak Dies

Communities attempted to ban him, but his books sold millions of copies and his curmudgeonly persona became as much a part of his legend as "Where the Wild Things Are," which became a hit movie.

BY HILLEL ITALIE Associated Press

NEW YORK • Maurice Sendak didn't think of himself as a children's author, but as an author who told the truth about childhood. "I like interesting people and kids are really interesting people," he explained to The Associated Press last fall. "And if you didn't paint them in little blue, pink and yellow, it's even more interesting."

Sendak, who died early Tuesday in Danbury, Conn., at age 83, four days after suffering a stroke, revolutionized children's books and how we think about childhood simply by leaving in what so many writers before had excluded. Dick and Jane were no match for his naughty Max. His kids misbehaved and didn't regret it, and in their dreams and nightmares fled to the most unimaginable places. Monstrous creatures were devised from his studio, but none more frightening than the grownups in his stories or the cloud of the Holocaust that darkened his every page.

"From their earliest years children live on familiar terms with disrupting emotions – fear and anxiety are an intrinsic part of their everyday lives, they continually cope with frustrations as best they can," he said upon receiving the Caldecott Medal in 1964 for "Where the Wild Things Are," his signature book. "And it is through fantasy that children achieve catharsis. It is the best means they have for taming wild things.

Rarely was a man so uninterested in being loved or adored. Starting with the Caldecott, the great parade marched on and on. He received the Hans Christian Andersen award in 1970 and a Laura Ingalls Wilder medal in 1983. President Bill Clinton awarded Sendak a National Medal of the Arts in 1996 and in 2009 President Obama read "Where the Wild Things Are" for the Easter Egg Roll.

Communities tried to ban him, but his books sold millions of copies and his curmudgeonly persona became as much a part of his legend as "Where the Wild Things Are," adapted into a hit movie in 2009. He seemed to act out everyone's fantasy of a nasty old man with a hidden and generous heart. No one granted the privilege could forget his snarly smile, his raspy, unprintable and adorable dismissals of such modern piffle as e-books and publicity tours, his misleading insistence that his life didn't matter. "I didn't sleep with famous people or movie stars or anything like that. It's a common story: Brooklyn boy grows up and succeeds in his profession, period," he told the AP.

Sendak's other books, standard volumes in so many children's bedrooms, included "Chicken Soup With Rice," "One was Johnny," "Pierre," "Outside Over There" and "Brundibar," a folk tale about two children who need to earn enough money to buy milk for their sick mother.

"This is the closest thing to a perfect child I've ever had," he told the AP.

Besides illustrating his own work, he also provided drawings - sometimes sweet, sometimes nasty for Else Holmelund Minarik's series "Little Bear," George MacDonald's "The Light Princess" and adaptations of E.T.A. Hoffman's "The Nutcracker" and the Brothers Grimm's "King Grisly-Beard." His most recent book that he wrote and illustrated was "Bumble-Ardy," a naughty pig party which came out in 2011, based on an old animated skit he worked up for "Sesame Street:"

In recent months, he had said he was working on a project about noses and he endorsed — against his best judgment — Stephen Colbert's "I am a Pole (And So Can You!)", a children's story calculated to offend the master. Colbert's book was published Tuesday.

"His art gave us a fantastical but unromanticized reminder of what childhood truly felt like;" Colbert said in "His art gave us a fantastical but unromanticized reminder of what child-hood truly felt like."

Stephen Colbert

a statement. "We are all honored to have been briefly invited into his world."

Somebody up there has a sense of humor: As of Tuesday evening, "I Am a Pole" No. was Amazon.com's best-seller list, outranking "Where the Wild Things Are" at No. 19.

Sendak also created costumes for ballets and staged operas, including the Czech opera "Brundibar;" which in 2003 he put on paper with his close friend, Pulitzerwinning playwright Tony Kushner. He designed sets for several productions at New York City Opera and he wrote the libretto for composer Oliver Knussen's opera adaptation of "Where the Wild Things Are," which premiered at Brussels' Theatre de la Monnaie in 1980 as "Max et les Maximontres."

Even Romney, the former Massachusetts governor, was essentially ignoring the primaries. He spent the day campaigning in Michigan, where he castigated Obama as an "old-school liberal" whose policies would take the country backward. And Romney didn't weigh in on the primary outcomes or Lugar's defeat.

The results of Tuesday's far-flung voting gave clues about the state of the electorate - and illustrated the political minefields facing both Republican and Democratic candidates - with the presidential contest well under way. The results were a warning to incumbents. They also highlighted tea party enthusiasm.

And, in one state at least, they indicated that wedge issues are still a force even with an electorate focused on economic concerns.

Also, there was an indication of just how unpopular Obama is in some parts of the country.

A man in prison in Texas was getting nearly 4 out of 10 votes in West Virginia's Democratic presidential primary against Obama, who faces no serious primary challenger. The inmate, Keith Judd, is serving time at the Beaumont Federal Correctional Institution in Texas for making threats at the University of New Mexico in 1999.

Within minutes of Lugar's loss, Democrats were already painting Mourdock as too extreme for the state.

Tea party groups were crowing about the win, and Mourdock urged supporters to donate to his general election campaign, saying: "We left everything on the table to win the primary." He will face Democratic Rep. Joe Donnelly in November.

Republicans need to gain four seats to take control of the U.S. Senate, and a Lugar loss "gives Democrats a pickup opportunity," Sen. Charles Schumer, D-N.Y., said.

Earlier in the day, Lugar, 80, made clear he would stand by Tuesday's outcome, ruling out running as an independent. "This is it," he said.

With 98 percent of precincts reporting, Lugar had just under 40 percent of the vote to Mourdock's just over 60 percent.

Playing out in a conservative state, the race illustrated the electorate's animosity toward many incumbents and anyone with deep ties to Washington. That was clear when Lugar, who hasn't faced questions about his residency in decades, found himself on the defensive over whether he lived in Indiana or northern Virginia. Lugar also was cast as too moderate for the conservative GOP in Indiana, and he took heat for his work with Democrats on issues such as nuclear nonproliferation, underscoring deep polarization in the country as well as a split in the GOP between the establishment wing and the insurgent tea party.

In a statement, Obama praised his former Senate colleague as someone "who was often willing to reach across the aisle and get things done."

Turmoil in Europe Pushes Stocks Lower in U.S.

NEW YORK (AP) • Political uncertainty in debt-hobbled Europe spread to financial markets Tuesday and pushed stocks lower in Europe and the United States. The Dow Jones industrial average was down almost 200 points at its low point for the day before recovering most of its loss to finish down 76. It was the average's fifth straight decline. European indexes closed near their lowest levels in months, and the euro neared a five-month low against the dollar. Prices plummeted for commodities like oil and copper that depend on the health of the world economy.

FDA Review Favors First Drug for HIV Prevention

WASHINGTON (AP) • A pill that has long been used to treat HIV has moved one step closer to becoming the first drug approved to prevent healthy people from becoming infected with the virus that causes AIDS.

The Food and Drug Administration said Tuesday that Gilead Sciences' Truvada appears to be safe and effective for HIV prevention.

It concluded that taking the pill daily could spare patients "infection with a serious and life-threatening illness that requires lifelong treatment."

On Thursday a panel of FDA advisers will consider the review when it votes on whether Truvada should be approved as a preventative treatment for people who are at high risk of contracting HIV through sexual intercourse.

Summer Gas Prices Unlikely to Set Record

Government slashes forecast for average gas prices to $3.79 per gallon for the season.

BY CHRIS KAHN

Associated Press

NEW YORK • Gasoline prices likely won't set any records this summer, thanks to a recent drop in the price of oil. The government on Tuesday slashed its forecast for average gas prices to $3.79 per gallon for the summer driving season. That's down from an initial estimate of $3.95 and below 2008's record average of $3.80. The Energy Information Administration's revised forecast is encouraging news for the economy. Some economists blame high pump prices for soso consumer spending this year. They were also seen as a factor in the loss of 35,000 retail jobs in February and March.

Gasoline prices soared 20 percent from January to early April.

A few analysts warned drivers they could pay as much as $5 this summer, eclipsing the 2008 record of $4.11 per gallon.

Not anymore. The price of benchmark crude has dropped about $8 per barrel since early April. Retail gas prices have followed, falling 17 cents since reaching $3.936 on April 5.

"It's almost like a tax cut," said Jared Bernstein, a senior fellow Center for Budget and Policy Priorities. EIA's prediction means that motorists will spend about $10.7 billion less on gasoline than previously anticipated.

Last year, drivers paid an average of $3.71 per gallon from April to September, a period the government considers the peak driving season.

Gasoline will likely become less of a campaign issue. Republican presidential candidates hammered at President Obama as prices jumped this year, even though presidents have little sway over pump prices. If gasoline gets even cheaper, experts think it will likely get knocked from the top tier of campaign issues.

"To not have gas prices nipping at your heels in an election is obviously favorable to the incumbent," said Bernstein, who was formerly an economic adviser to Vice President Joe Biden.

It's still a bit of a mixed bag for the president. Part of the reason oil prices have declined during the past month is sluggishness in the U.S. economy, highlighted by a disappointing jobs report last week.

Europe helped sink oil prices as well. Some European countries are in recession and election results in France and Greece over the weekend threaten to derail the eurozone's plan for recovery.

Oil is down nearly 12 percent since peaking near $110 per barrel in February. As oil prices fall, it becomes cheaper for refineries to make gasoline and other fuels, and some of that savings eventually gets passed along in the form of cheaper pump prices.

Gasoline prices have tracked oil lower. The national average for gas is now $3.76 per gallon, according to auto club AAA, Wright Express and Oil Price Information Service. That's 20 cents cheaper than a year ago.

CALDWELL (AP) • An Idaho frozen food company has agreed to pay the Environmental Protection Agency $84,000 for failing to report its possession of hazardous chemicals to safety officials.

The EPA said Monday the Caldwell facility of Rhodes International, Inc. stored large quantities of the toxic gas anhydrous ammonia from 2006 to 2009. Agency officials say the company, which makes frozen cinnamon rolls and other breads, failed to properly notify state and local emergency departments it was storing the chemicals – a violation of the Emergency Planning and Community Right-to-Know Act.

Anhydrous ammonia is a pungent gas that attacks skin, eyes, throat and lungs, causing serious injury or death.

BofA Sends out Home Loan Modification Offers

ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES • Homeowners with a Bank of America mortgage have good reason to check the mailbox.

The lender said Tuesday it has begun mailing out letters to customers who may qualify to have their home loans reduced as part of a multistate settlement over alleged foreclosure abuses.

The Charlotte, N.C.-based company estimates that more than 200,000 of its customers could potentially be in line for a reduction in the principal balance on their mortgage.

Some customers could receive letters from the bank as early as this week that invite them to provide financial information as part of a review process for the program. The bank plans to have mailed out most of the letters by the end of the third quarter.

Bank of America estimates that customers who end up receiving the loan modifications will save, on average, 30 percent a month on their mortgage payments.

To qualify, borrowers must owe more on their mortgage than the property is worth, and be at least 60 days behind on payments as of Jan. 31.

Bank of America will reduce the amount owed by the homeowners by as much as $100,000 in some cases. Only mortgages that are currently owned by Bank of America will qualify.

U.S. Employers Post 3.74 Million Jobs in March; Most in 4 Years

BY MARTIN CRUTSINGER Associated Press

WASHINGTON • U.S. companies in March posted the highest number of job openings in nearly four years, a sign that hiring could strengthen in the coming months after slowing this

The Labor Department said Tuesday that employers advertised 3.74 million job openings in March. That's up from a revised 3.57 million in February and the most since July 2008, just before the financial crisis erupted.

The increase in U.S. job openings suggests that weaker hiring gains in March and April could be temporary. It usually takes one to three months for employers to fill openings.

Even with the increase, roughly 12.7 million people were unemployed in March. That means an average of 3.4 people competed for each open job. While that's far better than the nearly 7-to-1 ratio when the recession ended. In a healthy job market, the ratio is usually around 2 to 1.

Last week the government said employers added just 115,000 jobs in April and 154,000 in March. That was a sharp decline from December through February, when the economy added an average of 252,000 jobs per month.

job growth in March and April may reflect a payback for unusually warm winter. The warmer weather probably exaggerated job growth in the winter months and is now making the spring gains look smaller.

Jared Franz, an economist at T. Rowe Price in Baltimore, said that increase in job openings was evidence that "steady labor market healing continues."

Steven Ricchiuto, chief economist at Mizuho Securities, said the report was consistent with gains of 175,000 jobs per month.

Tuesday's report, known as the Job Openings and Labor Turnover survey, or JOLTs, showed that more people quit their jobs in March.

More quits are a good sign because most people quit in order to move to a new job. Rising quits suggest workers are finding more opportunities in the job market.

Nearly 4.36 million people were hired in March, slightly fewer than in February. The JOLTs report measures gross job gains, while the monthly jobs reports are net figures that are calculated after subtracting layoffs and

The increase in openings reflected gains in two sectors vital to the economy's health: manufacturing and construction. In March, factories advertised 55,000 more openings, while construction firms posted 23,000 more openings.

However, government job openings decreased by 26,000. The majority of the decline was at the state and local level, where governments continue to face budgetary pressures.

Yahoo Director on Hot Seat to Leave Board

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) • A Yahoo director embroiled in an investigation into an inaccuracy about CEO Scott Thompson's academic credentials is surrendering her seat on the troubled Internet company's board. Patti Hart says she decided to not to seek re-election to Yahoo's board to focus on her job as CEO at gambling machine maker International Game Technology. She confirmed her departure in a Tuesday statement issued soon after her exit strategy was first reported by All Things D, a technology blog affiliated with The Wall Street Journal.

Yahoo Inc. offered no immediate comment on Hart's decision.

Hart becomes the first casualty of a dust-up caused by the recent exposure of a bogus college degree that has periodically appeared in Thompson's official biography.

Hart led the Yahoo committee that hired Thompson in January.

The bio included a computer science degree that Thompson never received from Stonehill College, a Catholic school near Boston. Thompson was graduated from Stonehill in 1979 with a bachelor's in accounting, an accomplishment correctly listed in his bio.

The fabricated degree appeared in various summaries about Thompson before Yahoo lured him away from his previous job running eBay Inc.'s online payment service, PayPal. Those earlier falsehoods have raised questions about whether Thompson deliberately allowed the deception to perpetuate and why Hart didn't insist on a more thorough background check.

Hobbs Picked as Site of Scientific Ghost Town in $1-Billion Project

ASSOCIATED PRESS

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. • A scientific ghost town in the heart of southeastern New Mexico oil and gas country will hum with the latest next-generation technology but no people.

A $1 billion city without residents will be developed in Lea County near Hobbs, officials said Tuesday, to help researchers test everything from intelligent traffic systems and next-generation wireless networks to automated washing machines and self-flushing toilets.

Hobbs Mayor Sam Cobb said the unique research facility that looks like an empty city will be a key for diversifying the economy of the nearby community, which after the oil bust of the 1980s saw bumper stickers asking the last person to leave to turn out the lights.

"It brings so many great opportunities and puts us on a world stage," Cobb told the Associated Press before the announcement.

Pegasus Holdings and its New Mexico subsidiary, CITE Development, said

Hobbs and Lea County beat out Las Cruces, for the Center for Innovation, Technology and Testing.

The CITE project is being billed as a first-of-its kind smart city, or ghost town of sorts, that will be developed on about 15 square miles west of Hobbs.

Bob Brumley, senior managing director of Pegasus Holdings, said the town will be modeled after the real city of Rock Hill, S.C., complete with highways, houses and commercial buildings, old and new. No one will live there, although they could as houses will include all the necessities, like appliances and plumbing.

The point of the town is to enable researchers to test new technologies on existing infrastructure without interfering in everyday life. For instance, while some researchers will be testing smart technologies on old

That said, there are still plenty of people with a hankering for homegrown produce. His business is developing a community garden and offering small-scale farming classes.

"We have a lot of support and feel pretty good about what we're doing," Springs said.

Vendor Training Today

Think you might be a farmers market vendor this season?

South Central Public Health District offers a workshop titled "Food Safety Training for Growers and Food Vendors at the Farmer's Market." It's set for 1-5 p.m. today at the district's Twin Falls office, 1020 Washington St. N.; registration begins at 12:30 p.m. Cost is $15, and snacks are provided.

Topics include food safety regulations for market vendors, safe canning practices and good agricultural practices for reducing the risks of microbial contamination in fresh produce.

Banana Breakfast with a Jolt

THE WASHINGTON POST

A jolt of lime perks up the homey, mellow flavor of baked bananas. If you have vanilla yogurt on hand, mix it with a little cinnamon, cardamom or a combination of the two and serve as an accompaniment.

Adapted from "A Taste of Australia: The Bathers Pavilion Cookbook," by Victoria Alexander and Genevieve Harris (Ten Speed Press, 1995).

Spiced Baked Bananas

6 servings.

1/3 cup water 1/2 cup packed dark brown sugar (may substitute palm sugar)

5 1/3 tablespoons (1/3 cup) unsalted butter

2 tablespoons freshly squeezed lime juice (from 1 or 2 limes) Pinch ground cardamom Pinch ground cinnamon 6 ripe bananas 2 ounces shredded coconut, toasted (see note)

Preheat the oven to 355 degrees.

Combine the water and brown sugar in a saucepan over medium-high heat, stirring until the sugar has dissolved. Bring to a boil and cook for a minute or two, until the liquid thickens and becomes syrupy. Remove the saucepan from the heat; add the butter, lime juice, cardamom and cinnamon, stirring until the butter has melted.

Peel the bananas. Arrange them in a single layer in a 9-by-13-inch or similar-size baking dish and pour the syrup mixture over them. Bake for 10 minutes, then carefully turn the bananas over and bake for 5 to 10 minutes, depending on their size and degree of firmness.

To serve, transfer the bananas to individual plates and cut them diagonally into large or thin slices. Drizzle evenly with the syrup and sprinkle with the coconut.

Note: To toast coconut, cook it in a small skillet over medium-low heat until the coconut is light brown and fragrant, stirring frequently to prevent burning. Transfer to a

Berbere: What It Is and How to Use It

OFF THE BEATEN AISLE

MATTHEW MEAD · ASSOCIATED PRESS

BY J.M. HIRSCH

Associated Press

Imagine the best Southern barbecue. Cooked up in northern Africa.

That's what this week's ingredient - the Ethiopian seasoning blend known as berbere — tastes like. And it's as good as it sounds.

Berbere is the flavor backbone of Ethiopian cooking, a cuisine built around heavily seasoned meats and stews served with a spongy flatbread called injera. Berbere ties all of that together, doing duty as a dry rub for meats, a seasoning for stews, lentils and grains, even as a tableside condiment.

As with so many traditional seasoning blends, what goes into berbere can vary by region, town, even by house. But most versions begin with a base of ground chilies, ginger, fenugreek, cumin, cloves, coriander, cardamom, black pepper and salt.

The result is a fiery, bright red blend that tastes equal parts barbecue, curry and Southwestern steak rub. It sounds kind of crazy, but that's a flavor combination that just begs to be in so many classic American dishes.

In the U.S., berbere most often is found as a dry powder, though it sometimes is a paste in Ethiopia. The powder can be added directly to just about anything, or heated briefly with oil and minced garlic and onion. The latter makes a great starter for chili or pulled pork.

You'll find berbere at just about any online or bricksand-mortar spice shop, as well as at many larger grocers (check the international section as well as the spice aisle). When you use it, take it easy. This stuff is deliciously spicy, so add a little, then taste and adjust from there.

The good news is that you don't need to know squat about Ethiopian food (though it's totally worth getting to know) to enjoy berbere. Use is as a steak rub, in meatballs and meatloaf, or as rub for roasted chicken. # Chopped Chicken Burgers with Berbere and Goat Cheese

This technique for using chopped (rather than ground) chicken keeps the burgers moist and flavorful. The prosciutto mixed into it helps, too. Be warned that when you form the patties, they will be very moist and messy. But once they hit the grill, they will hold together without trouble. If you'd rather used ground turkey for convenience, this same seasoning blend will be delicious in that, too. Start to finish: 20 minutes. Servings: 4.

Scrape the sides of the bowl and pulse again if any large pieces remain unchopped. Transfer the meat to the bowl with the egg mixture, then mix well. Form the meat into 4 loose patties. They will be moist and not hold together well. Use a spatula to carefully place the burgers on the grill and cook, covered, for 4 to 5 minutes. Flip the burgers — they should be firm enough to move easily now — and cook for another 4 to 5 minutes, or until a thermometer reads 165 degrees at the center of the burgers.

INTOXICATING OPTIONS FOR THE GLUTEN-INTOLERANT

BY GREG KITSOCK

Special to The Washington Post

The gluten-free-beer movement began as a trickle about five years ago, with Lakefront Brewery releasing its New Grist and Anheuser-Busch responding with Redbridge lager. Since then, it has widened into a stream, with additional breweries debuting barley-less brews safe for the wheat-intolerant and for celiac disease sufferers who can't ingest common brewing grains without wreaking havoc on their digestive systems.

The culprit is gluten, a blend of gummy proteins found in barley, wheat and rye. The substance triggers an autoimmune reaction in an estimated 1 in 133 Americans, according to the National Foundation for Celiac Aware-

Fortunately, Mother Nature is generous in supplying alternative fermentables. Sorghum is the most common, but brewers of gluten-free beers also use millet, buckwheat, rice, tapioca and honey. The Goose Island brewpub in Chicago's Clybourn neighborhood has crafted a beer from quinoa, while Harvester Brewing in Portland, Ore., uses crushed chestnuts as a raw ingredient.

New Planet Beer in Boulder, Colo., markets sorghumbased brews.

"It was one of the most bittersweet days of my life," says founder Pedro Gonzalez of his celiac disease diagnosis in 2003. A special diet restored his health but left him with a craving for simple pleasures like a frosty mug. Unhappy with the gluten-free beers on the market, Gonzalez hired several professional brew masters to formulate his beers. His lineup consists of Tread Lightly Ale, a golden ale flavored with orange peel; the aggressively hopped Off Grid Pale Ale; and 3R Raspberry Ale, which won a bronze medal in 2010 at the Great American Beer Festival in Denver.

Gonzalez contract-brews his beers but plans to open a half-barrel "demo" brewery where he can test new recipes. What other styles would he like to brew? "How many categories are there at the GABF?" he asks. "Over 100? I'd like to have over 100 categories of gluten-free beer!"

Sam Calagione, president of Dogfish Head Craft Brewery in Milton, Del., isn't gluten intolerant, but he crafted Tweason'ale after reading the plaintive e-mails of drinkers who wanted a "gluten-free beer with gusto." Made with sorghum, strawberries and buckwheat honey, the effervescent brew comes off as a cross between a mead and a pink champagne. Calagione plans to release the beer four times a year, in between seasonal brews. Look for four-packs to reappear in late May.

Many gluten-free beers finish with a cidery twang, a taste that some drinkers refer to as Belgian. The Green's line, brewed at the DeProef Brewery in Lochristi, Belgium, is actually fermented with a Belgian yeast strain and undergoes a second fermentation in the bottle. Of the three brands imported by Merchant du Vin of Tukwila, Wash., the best is Endeavor Dubbel Dark Ale, with sweet, roasty, molasseslike notes.

BY CANDICE CHOI Associated Press

NEW YORK • Russians prefer their Lay's potato chips dusted in caviar and crab flavors. The Chinese like their Oreos stuffed with mango and orange cream. And in Spain, Kellogg's All-Bran cereal is served floating in hot coffee instead of cold milk.

Americans might get squeamish at the thought of their favorite snacks being tweaked. But what works in the U.S. doesn't always work everywhere.

In other words, Lee Linthicum, a market researcher, says: "It can't be some generic mix of spices that might fool an American?"

Food makers long have tinkered with their products to appeal to regional tastes, but getting the recipe just right is becoming more important than ever. That's partly because people in developing nations such as China and India are gaining more of an appetite for American-style "on-the-go" foods as they work longer hours and have less time to cook. But it's mostly because snack makers increasingly are looking for growth in other parts of the world as sales slow at home.

Growth in the snack food industry has been virtually flat in the U.S. for the past two years, according to market research firm Euromonitor. Meanwhile, combined sales in China, Brazil and Russia three major developing markets - rose 15 percent in 2010 and 11 percent last year to $17 billion. That's half the size of the U.S. market but it's grow-

Snacks in a Different Land

The challenge for snack makers is that people in other countries have different tastes. Consider the Oreo, which Kraft Food Inc. introduced in China in 1996. Sales of the vanilla cream-filled chocolate cookie sandwich were respectable there, but the Chinese didn't completely take to it.

So Kraft decided to tweak the Oreo. But executives of the Northfield, Ill.-based company knew that they had to proceed with caution. "When you have a brand that's 100 years old, you don't mess with the recipe thoughtlessly," says Lorna Davis, head of the company's global biscuit and cookies business.

In 2006, Kraft began offering the Oreo as a wafer, a popular cookie throughout Asia. It is made up of cream sandwiched between crispy wafers. The plan was to help familiarize more Chinese customers with the brand. Three years later, the company decided to go a step further.

Kraft worked with a panel of consumer taste experts from around the world to identify the characteristics of the Oreo — including color, crunchiness, bitterness, color - that were likely to appeal to Chinese tastes. Executives learned through research that the Chinese don't like their treats as big or as sweet as Americans do. So the company rejiggered the recipe to create a cookie that was a tad smaller and a touch less sweet.

To test the new recipe, hundreds of Chinese consumers tasted the new Oreo. It was a hit. "It made us realize the smallest of details make a big difference," Davis says.

But the company wasn't finished. After noticing sales of Oreos were lagging in China during the summer, Kraft added a green tea ice cream flavor. The cookie combined a popular local flavor with the cooling imagery of ice cream. The green tea version sold well, and a year later, Kraft rolled out Oreos in flavors that are popular in Asians desserts raspberry-and-blueberry and mango-and-orange.

The result? The Oreo now is the top-selling cookie in China with a market share of

Cucumber and Caviar Chips

For the first time last year, revenue from PepsiCo's international snacks division surpassed revenue in North America. To achieve that, PepsiCo has had to adjust its

In 2005, PepsiCo's food division began a quest to make its Lay's potato chips more appealing to local tastes in Russia. It wasn't easy. Russians still like packaged versions of a Soviet-era snack stale bread slathered in oil and baked to a crisp.

"Potato chips were not big in the Communist time, so it's something we're gradually building," says Marc Schroeder, who heads Pepsi-Co's food division in Russia.

To get a better sense of what Russians like, employees traveled around the country to visit people in their homes and talk about what they eat day-to-day. That was a big task. Russia has nine time zones and spans 7,000 miles, with eating habits that vary by region.

The findings were invaluable for executives at the company's Purchase, N.Y. headquarters. In the eastern part of the country, PepsiCo found that fish is a big part of the diet. So it introduced "Crab" chips in 2006. It's now the third most popular flavor in the country.

A "Red Caviar" flavor does best in Moscow, where caviar is particularly popular. "Pickled Cucumber;" which piggybacks off of a traditional appetizer throughout Russia, was introduced last year and is already the fourth most popular flavor. Other favorites include onion, bacon and "sour cream and herbs," which is a bit sweeter than the American version.

As for the classic Lay's an American favorite – Russians still aren't biting.

"They find it a very boring flavor," Schroeder said.

A Warm, Healthy Chowder for Cool Spring Evenings In a large pot over medi-

BY ALISON LADMAN

For The Associated Press

When you're out all day playing in the warm spring sun, you don't want to come home to the laborious task of making a complex meal. The solution is a quick soup.

For this spring fish chowder, we opted for flavorful sweet potatoes in addition to the regular white variety. Be sure to leave the skins on, as that's where much of the fiber and nutrients reside. For some more color and to round out the dish, we added a bell pepper, scallions and a touch of lemon.

To keep the calories and fat in check, we use fat-free half-and-half as the soup's base. Skim milk also would work, but the texture wouldn't be nearly as creamy.

You can use any kind of white fish you prefer. Flounder is a great option for a very tender fish. Haddock has a bit more body. Whichever fish you choose, use care once you add it to the soup. As it cooks it will want to fall apart. So stir gently.

My kitchen sink stinks! I've cleaned all around it, all over it, above it and below! It still stinks! I'm ready to rip it all out and get a new sink. Any advice for me, Lori, before I go to that extreme remedy? Lori Chandler "STUCK WITH A SINK STINK!!" Cleaning Center owner 734-2404 nswer:

Wait! Before you go to all that work and expense of replacing your sink, let me help. A smelly sink originates from the garbage disposal. Odors are caused by food residue stuck to its walls and non-moving parts. I have a specially designed garbage disposal brush that has a sturdy round base to clean the bottom, and bristles up the side to clean around the top. Combine that with my powerful deodorizer, DISPOSER CARE, that uses safe, natural bacteria and enzymes to foam away grunge and odor, leaving a lemon fresh scent. Now relax, your stinky sinky days are over.

Asian Technique Meets Hispanic Ingredients

BY ELEANOR HOH

For The Associated Press

Stir-fry and salsa aren't traditional companions on the plate, but that doesn't mean there can't be a little common ground.

As a wok cooking teacher, I'm constantly looking for new ways to use my wok, including with cuisines other than Asian. And it turns out the Hispanic world has a wealth of ingredients and classic recipes perfectly suited to this cooking style.

Though I grew up in Hong Kong - where I watched local cooks use huge cast-iron woks to prepare classic street foods such as choutofu (stinky tofu), stuffed peppers, curried octopus and roasted chestnuts - I now live in Miami,a city rich with Cuban culture. I've noticed many similarities in cooking techniques, ingredients and seasonings between the cul-

Cuban-style paella, for example, is similar to Asian fried rice. Even the paella pan resembles a wok.

Look more broadly across Hispanic cuisines and examples are plentiful. Churros and Chinese crullers are both crispy deep-fried dough sticks. Fillings for quesadillas, fajitas and tacos are basically stir-fried beef, chicken or pork.

In Peru, which has a sizeable population of Chinese immigrants, there is even an Asian-Peruvian fusion dish known as chifa, a mash-up of the term "chow fan," which refers to Chinese fried rice. Chifa - basically fried rice with native Peruvian ingredients, often leftovers, and soy sauce — has become an integral part of Peruvian cuisine.

One of the most common ways to cook in a wok is to do so briefly at very high heat. This is why ingredients often are cooked in batches according to how long they should take. For example, vegetables go in until just tender, but still lightly crisp, then are removed from the pan. Next, the meat is cooked until nicely seared, then everything is combined.

This same approach works with Hispanic ingredients. It can be as simple as stir-frying some onion, peppers and other vegetables, then setting those aside. Add some thinly sliced beef, pork or chicken with Hispanic seasonings and cook that. When the meat is ready, combine everything and use as a filling for tacos.

But woks can do more than stir-fry, and that versatility is what makes them so useful for other cuisines. Because of their shape and wide opening, woks are great for deep frying, steaming, stewing, toasting spices and nuts, even baking.

For example, a wok can fry up churros as easily as wonton-wrapped dumplings or spring rolls. It also can be used to fry plantains. And in both cases, the attachable wire rack that clips to the side of the wok is excellent for draining excess oil from the fried foods.

Don't have a paella pan? Use a large wok. It also does a fine job with arroz con pollo – brown the chicken, cook the sofrito and tomato sauce, then add the rice and other ingredients. I've even made tortilla omelets in my wok. Start by stir-frying the vegetables in the wok, then add the mixture of egg and cheese. Set the entire thing in the oven (set on a wok ring) and bake.

Wok Picadillo

A cast-iron wok over gas heat is the best choice. But in a pinch, a large castiron skillet can be substituted. A stainless or carbon steel wok also can be used, though you may find you need to use more oil to prevent sticking. Never use nonstick woks for highheat frying; they aren't made to tolerate extreme

Because speed is essential when cooking at high heat in a wok, it's important to have all ingredients prepped ahead. If you are using a small wok or a skillet, you may need to cook the meat in two batches. Avoid crowding the pan, as this cools it. The meat also should be cooked in two batches if your stove is electric, which does not maintain temperature as well as gas.

Stainless steel spatulas with a wooden handle and curved edge work best with steel or cast-iron woks. This dish is best served with rice, especially red or brown. Start the rice cooking as you prep your ingredients so everything is ready at the same time. Start to finish: 30 minutes. Servings: 4.

1 tablespoon tamari or

MSG-free soy sauce 1 teaspoon medium turn it to the heat. When the wok is hot drinking sherry 2 teaspoons of cornstarch

2 pinches white pepper 1 pound 90 percent lean ground beef 1 tablespoon canola or other high-heat oil, divided

1 medium yellow onion, finely chopped 1/2 medium green bell pepper, cored and finely chopped

1/2 medium red bell pepper, cored and finely chopped 2 cloves garlic, diced

2 plum tomatoes, finely chopped 1/4 cup diced green olives with pimentos 1/4 cup raisins 2 teaspoons ground

1 teaspoon dried oregano

1 teaspoon paprika Juice of 1 lime Sprigs of fresh cilantro, mint or parsley, to serve

In a medium bowl, whisk together the tamari, sherry, cornstarch and white pepper. Add the ground beef and mix until thoroughly incorporated. Set

Set your wok over high and let heat for 1 minute. Add 1/2 tablespoon of the oil and heat until it shimmers. Add the onion and both bell peppers. As soon as they hit the wok, immediately stir them around the pan. Cook for 5 minutes, or until the onions and peppers are just barely cooked and still firm and colorful.

Transfer the vegetables to a plate. Use paper towels to dry the wok, then reagain, add the remaining 1/2 tablespoon of oil and heat until it shimmers. Add the garlic first, then immediately add the ground beef.

Use the back of the spatula to spread the beef across the wok as if frying a wide burger. Let the meat sear on one side until golden brown. This gives your meat a crispy exterior with juicy interior. You can test for doneness by flipping beef in the center of your wok where the heat is the hottest. If it is golden brown, flip all the beef and start breaking it up with your spatu-

Once the beef is just cooked (when you don't see any red, about 7 minutes), return the onionpepper mixture to the pan. Add the tomatoes, olives, raisins, cumin, oregano and paprika. Mix well, then reduce heat to medium and fry for 5 minutes. Stir in the lime juice. Serve spooned over rice and topped with fresh cilantro, mint or parsley. # HOW DO BREAD CRUMBS BREAK DOWN?

BY KATHLEEN PURVIS

McClatchy Newspapers

Question: Would you address the different kinds of bread crumbs? Panko makes crispy crusts, but can I use it in meatballs? Or is it best to use dry crumbs or make your own?

Answer: Since panko, the Japanese-style bread crumbs, appeared in markets about 10 years ago, they've become a favorite with cooks for their fluffy, crispy texture, particularly on fried foods. Even though the crumbs are larger, I've used them successfully in most recipes that call for crumbs, including meatballs, meat loaf and crab cakes.

Making your own bread crumbs is great way to keep from wasting bread. Toss extra bread into a blender or food processor, grind it up and then put in a resealable bag in the freezer. If you don't have time to do that, just freeze the bread and rub it on the coarse holes of a cheese grater whenever you need a few tablespoons of

In recipes, the crumbs that come in a canister are usually called dry bread crumbs. They're much finer than either fresh or panko-style, so they're usually used to add bulk to a mixture or to act as a binder.

Shirley Marie Farwell Faught

Nov. 12, 1927-May 7, 2012

POCATELLO Shirley Marie Farwell Faught was born Nov. 12, 1927, in Rupert, Idaho, to Albert Moors Farwell and Wanda Strother Farwell. Shirley went to heaven Monday, May 7, 2012.

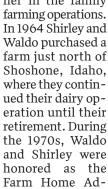

Shirley was the youngest child and was raised with her brothers, William and Max Farwell, and her two sisters, Mary Farwell Bronson and Alice Farwell Swanson. She spent her childhood on the family dry farm in Heglar, Idaho, in Cassia County. She grew up learning the work ethic that comes from living on a wheat farm and sharing responsibility for the family's success each year. Shirley attended this farming community's one-room school, which operated for the local farm children. When it was time to begin high school, Shirley would live with a family in Burley, Idaho, where she would attend Burley High School. She graduated from Burley High School in 1945. After graduation from high school, Shirley traveled to Waxahachie, Texas, where she attended Southwestern Bible Institute and junior college. She studied to become a teacher and, for one year, taught in a oneroom school house. She soon decided, however, that she was not cut out to deal with a bunch of kids on a daily basis. As a result, she moved back to Burley, Idaho, where on Oct. 11, 1947, she married Waldo Faught and proceeded to have seven kids of their own! Shirley and Waldo were married for 64 years.

She is survived by her husband, Waldo; their seven children, Daniel Faught and his wife Sherry, Kennith Faught, Phyllis Oldenhouse and her husband Ken, Wanda Ownbey and her husband Dennis, Patrick, Patti Sanchez and her husband Guillermo, and Judith Holguin and her husband Manuel. She is also survived by 16 grandchildren, Heather, Brent, Brian, Misty, Nathan, Ileen, Chris, David, Rebekah, Dennis Jr., Lydia, Cliff Jr., Joey, Annie, Alicia and Manuel Jr. She is further survived by 11 greatgrandchildren and one on the way.

During her married life, Shirley raised her children in Burley, Idaho; Chicago, Ill.; Ogden, Utah; Rupert, Idaho; Paul, Idaho; and Shoshone, Idaho. Shirley was always an active part-ho "Farm Family of the Year." Shirley also worked for the U.S. Postal Service in Shoshone for many years. She was always very proud of her work at the post office. After retirement from the farm and the postal service, Shirley loved to travel and, with other family members, visited Alaska, Chile, Costa Rica, Hawaii, New England, Missouri, Arkansas and Canada.

The cornerstone of Shirley's life was her faith in Jesus Christ. She lived out that faith each day making certain that her children were always in church and church activities each week. She and Waldo were lifelong members and supporters of the Assembly of God Church. Shirley's seven children grew up with a heritage of love, support and faith. While each of her children branched out into different livelihoods and parts of the world, she was always supportive of each of us as individuals. While we AL-WAYS had the benefit of her opinions, it was understood that in the final sense, we were each to use the sense of responsibility that she instilled in us to chart our own course. Her love, wisdom, approval and yes, even those opinions, have always been treasured, valued and sought after in each of our lives. While we are saddened at her passing, we rejoice in her heavenly homecoming and know that we will be together again as our family will continue eternally.

Funeral arrangements are under the direction of Downard Funeral Home of Pocatello, Idaho. Services will be held in Burley, Idaho, at Morrison-Payne Funeral Home, 321 E. Main St. in Burley, Idaho. A viewing will begin at 10 a.m. Saturday, May 12, with a funeral following at 11:30 a.m. at the funeral home.

The family wishes to thank the staff at Emeritis Highland Hills Assisted Living Residence and Encompass Hospice for their care and assistance at this difficult time.

Putting the Ale in Cocktail

BY DANIEL FROMSON

Special to The Washington Post

At Boundary Road in Washington, a new Brooklyn-esque den of exposed brick and farm-to-table hanger steaks, the Five & Dime cocktail begins with a squeeze-bottle squirt of translucent goo. When I ordered one recently, a bartender shook the egg white with artisanal root beer liqueur and maple syrup, strained the mixture into a glass, added malty Otter Creek porter and placed it on the bar. My neighbor eyed it as if afraid it might scuttle into his lap. "Beer and egg," he said.

But it tasted great: a smooth, sweet, herbal riff on a root beer float, with a milkshake-like head and lingering flavors of coffee and roasted barley. It was also a prime example of how some bartenders have been increasingly blurring the line between craft beer and craft cocktails, turning out drinks with enough creativity and variety to please the beerobsessed while wooing the beer-indifferent.

Such concoctions have grown into darlings of the national mixology scene, served at places such as Chicago's the Aviary and New York's wd-50.

At Rogue 24 in D.C., Bryan Tetorakis has been experimenting with beer cocktails since December. For his Cherry Coffee Stout, he mixes a cherry-and-coffeeflavored syrup with coffeeinfused brandy Duchesse de Bourgogne, a Flemish sour ale that contributes tart cherry notes.

Another cocktail, the Trippel Dubbel, grew out of his desire to accent the citrus and coriander notes in Saxo, a blond ale from Belgium's Brasserie Caracole. Tetorakis adds the beer to tangerine or orange-kumquat syrup, lemon juice, rye whiskey and Gran Classico Bitter, a liqueur made with bitter orange peel and rhubarb.

"It's got the bitterness," he says. "You can tell that there's whiskey in there, and it's also smooth and creamy. It's approachable to a lot of people." Key word: "approachable." Although some beer lovers recoil at the thought of other ingredients tainting their sacred substance, some take delight in the fact that the beer cocktail often functions as beerdom's Trojan horse. It's a means of slipping the goods into enemy terri-

Such is the case at Washington's the Queen Vic, which opened last spring with an array of unintimidating beer cocktails that mostly echo traditional twoingredient British recipes like the Black and Tan. In the La Manche, a nod to the other side of the English Channel, aromatic St-Germain elderflower liqueur transforms a moderately bitter English India pale ale into a burst of honey and tropical fruit.

Pomegranate Fizz

1 serving. One of six seasonal "hoptails" on the menu at Virtue Feed and Grain in Alexandria, Va., this is fruity and sweetsour. The beer creates the fizz, along with an inch of thick foam. This recipe calls for a raw egg white. If you are concerned about the risk of salmonella, use a pasteurized egg. The beer must be opened an hour before you make the drink.

Wipe out the skillet. Add the oil and swirl to coat; place over medium heat. When the oil is hot, add the onion, garlic and tomatoes; cook for 5 minutes, stirring a few times, then crumble in the saffron threads. Add the paprika, coriander, cumin seed and cloves, stirring to incorporate. Cook for 2 minutes, then add the chickpeas and their liquid. Increase the heat to medium-high and bring to a boil, stirring, then add the chopped kale and the salt. Reduce the heat to medium; cook for 10 minutes, using tongs to incorporate the kale. Stir occasionally; the liquid should be barely bubbling and the stew should be fra-

Cut the lemon in half and squeeze 2 tablespoons of juice into the pan, taking care not to let any seeds fall in. Coarsely chop the cilantro to yield 3 tablespoons. Stir the lemon juice and cilantro into the stew. If desired, use a potato masher to crush some of the chickpeas. Taste, and adjust the seasoning as needed.

O'Brien Enjoys Rare Trip Back to Campus

The Olympic gold medalist and Vandal alum speaks at rededication of track that bears his name.

BY DEVIN ROKYTA

The Moscow-Pullman Daily News

MOSCOW • It had been several years since Dan O'Brien had visited Moscow prior to making an appearance Monday at the University of Idaho's rededication of its newly renovated track and field complex - aptly named the Dan O'Brien Track & Field Complex.

Since selling his Moscow home in 2002, his trips to the Palouse have been fewer and fewer over the years, with his last coming two years ago as he cleaned out a storage unit with remnants of his life on the Palouse. He now calls Arizona home, where he lives in the Phoenix area, and is a private trainer and volunteer coach at Arizona State University.

The track and field star has basked and mostly excelled in the national spotlight since his days on the Palouse, winning four world championships and an Olympic gold medal in 1996 – after failing to make the 1992 Games as a decathlete following three straight faults in the pole vault, and despite a great deal of hype through a Reebok advertising campaign. He'll even be inducted into the Olympic Hall of Fame this summer.

But being in a constant spotlight may have been something that the younger version of O'Brien couldn't have handled. That made Moscow a perfect fit.

SALT LAKE CITY • As the seconds ticked down Monday in Game 4 of what would be a first-round playoff sweep, Utah Jazz forward Derrick Favors cursed all the way off the court.

It was a sign that while goals may have been met, no one was satisfied.

Less than 24 hours later, Jazz brass and teammates echoed those sentiments as exit interviews were conducted and lockers cleared for the summer.

Yes, the team surprised some by finishing above .500 and reaching the playoffs. But there is plenty of room for improvement with four players 22 or younger and key veterans returning.

Plus, with the financial flexibility to add a few key pieces, the Jazz were setting their sights even higher next year — with enough wins to earn home-court advantage in the postseason.

"I'm very confident all of us have the same goals and the same mindset of getting better as a team," center Al Jefferson said Tuesday. "We got a little taste this year. Now

The only ones not happy were those who found themselves on the outside looking on in the end, notably veteran guard Raja Bell and swingman C.J. Miles. Bell is under contract another year but said he wants out and blasted coach Tyrone Corbin as "unprofessional" for not communicating with him. Miles, a free agent next year, struggled with injury and with finding his shooting touch and also did not play in the postseason.

Others had only praise for Corbin, who was thrust into the difficult position of replacing Hall of Fame coach Jerry Sloan and seeing superstar point guard Deron Williams traded last season then dealing with last summer's lockout.

The Kimberly senior will be able to do both after signing a letter of intent Tuesday to participate in women's basketball and rodeo at Treasure Valley (Ore.) Community College.

"It's an awesome feeling. I never really thought it was possible. Growing up, I always thought I would have to choose and wouldn't be able to do both," Cornie said. "It's a great opportunity."

"I really enjoyed working with Dave last year and he set us up for success down the road," Alsterlund said. "But my major stamp I want to put on this program is getting these kids ready for life after high school. Less than 1 percent of high school athletes play college football, so we need to make them positive members of society."

On the field, Alsterlund will move away from the double-wing offense employed by Slotten.

"We're going to expand on our concepts and principles set last year, but we're going to have a lot more than the double-wing next year," Alsterlund said. "We have a lot of great athletes coming back next year so we have to utilize our strengths.

Alsterlund envisions his team ultimately being a "60-40 team" with regard to runpass ratio.

"We could throw the ball at any point in the game if we feel like we have a good matchup," he said.

Martinez struck out 13 and allowed just two baserunners in the opener - a hit batter and an error while John Acord went 4-for-4 and drove in three runs to provide more than enough offense for the Glenns Ferry ace.

"All his pitches were working, his curveball was getting over for strikes. That's the best he's pitched all year," Glenns Ferry coach Dennis Uhl said of Martinez's second nohitter of the season.

In Game 2 Willis threw three inning of two-hit ball, while Isaacson finished it off and scored three times to help his own cause.

Glenns Ferry (18-6) advances to next week's 2A state tournament in Orofino. The Pilots will open up against the runner-up from District II.

"I started out great, birdie-birdie on the first two holes but I tripled the third and had to really fight to get back to 2-under," Curtis said. "I knew that 70 was going to be in contention, but there were a lot of good golfers out here and I knew (Meyerhoeffer) was one off me, and another guy was 2under at one point. I'm excited?

Twin Falls didn't have anyone shoot worse than a 5-over 77, as the Bruins flexed the muscles of their depth and talent for their fifth consecutive district title, shooting a combined 291. Earlier in the season they had two five-man teams that beat all the other conference opponents at a meet in Twin Falls. "It was hard, because all of us shoot really close. It came down to the guys who had experience and who would play well at districts and state," said Meyerhoeffer, one of four Twin Falls golfers who competed Tuesday that were on the title-winning team a year ago his twin brother Connor Meyerhoeffer is making his first appearance.

The rival schools, which finished first and second at last year's Class 4A championships, filled the top seven positions to send both teams to the state meet and crowd out any individual hopefuls from the other schools.

There will be a repeat state appearance by both girls teams as well, though Wood River made it as adventurous as possible.

Senior Jennie Williams, who had major ankle surgery in the fall, reinjured herself at a home tournament last week and was advised against playing.

But she opted for a doctor's-note-permitted golf cart, took off her walking boot and, her left ankle wrapped in a huge white brace, carded an 82 to finish tied for second and get the Wolverines back to state. "I really wanted to get back to state, but I wanted to do it as a team because it's more fun than qualifying as an individual," Williams said. "Our goal is to do well both for me individually and as a team, but we'll see how it goes. I'm going to take it easier up there ... I pushed as hard as I could so we could get there."

BALTIMORE • Josh Hamilton became the 16th player to hit four home runs in a game, launching a quartet of two-run drives against three pitchers in a history-making performance that carried the Texas Rangers to a 10-3 win over the Baltimore Orioles on Tuesday night. Hamilton homered off Jake Arrieta in the first and third innings, added another off Zach Phillips in the seventh and topped it off with a one-for-thebooks shot against Darren O'Day in the eighth. During the last at-bat, Hamilton took a mighty hack and missed, lined a foul into right-field seats and then sent an 0-2 pitch over the center-field wall.

He also doubled in the fifth inning. His 18 total bases is a new single-game American League record, and his eight RBIs are a career high.

The last player to hit four home runs in a game was Carlos Delgado on Sept. 25, 2003, for Toronto against Tampa Bay. Two of the 16 to hit four homers in a game did it before 1900.

"We bounced back quicker than anyone thought we would," said backup point guard Earl Watson, still on crutches after late-season knee surgery. "Everyone thought we'd be a rebuilding process for five years. So we're ahead of schedule, but that doesn't mean we stop. We keep pushing."

That means this summer will be key for players such as Favors, rookie center Enes Kanter, rookie guard Alec Burks and even second-year pro Gordon Hayward, whom coaches want to participate in the summer league with the team in Orlando, Fla.

Jefferson said he also plans to return to Santa Barbara, Calif., for a specialty training program, and is bringing Favors and Kanter with him. "I can see him and Derrick just dominating the league like Tim Duncan and David Robinson did at one point in time - if they can stay together," Jefferson said. That's what made the playoff experience invaluable for guys like Favors, who won't turn 21 until July.

By Game 4 against San Antonio, Favors had earned a starting role, and didn't disappoint, with 16 points, 10 rebounds, two blocks, two steals and an assist.

"He's going to be something special," Jefferson said. "I just hope I'm his teammate for the rest of my career. He's going to get better and better and when he gets some great post moves and when he learns how to use his athleticism instead of running over people ... he'll be trouble."

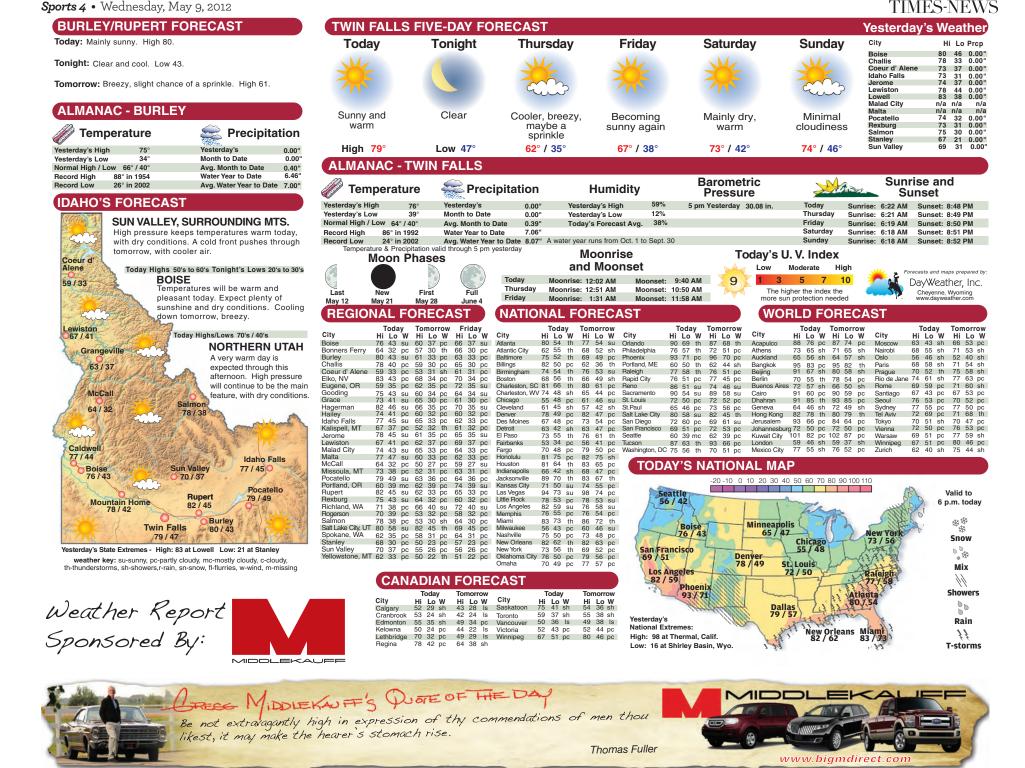

The Jazz showed they can play with a Big 3 lineup, with Jefferson, Favors and Paul Millsap moving to small forward. Corbin said it was too early to say if that's the direction the team would go next season.

Jefferson and Millsap are both under contract next year, scheduled to earn $15 million and $7.2 million, respectively.

At point guard, Devin Harris also is under contract and set to earn $8.5 million. General manager Kevin O'Connor said the team will explore whether Harris also could be a small shooting guard next year or a second point guard.

"What you saw, when we were successful, he played well," O'Connor said of Harris. "When you have the ball in your hand and you're the quarterback, you get blame or the credit."

think, have had a negative effect on my competition," O'Brien said.

"... I always felt Boise State was always the flashy college in the state. Here, I loved training here because nobody really knew what I was doing and I would show up at those big meets and just do very well. ... It always felt like my choice to go here was I'm here to work, I'm here to get better. It wasn't about the flashy school."

He also had a chip on his shoulder from feeling like an underdog, a role that is certainly familiar to the UI.

"It just felt right because I always felt like an underdog growing up in Klamath Falls (Ore.) and I get here and I've got the same feeling," he Even outside of the bright spotlight, O'Brien still had his early troubles. He redshirted his first year at UI and didn't compete for the university until his senior year, as he struggled in his personal life and the classroom, the latter of which made him ineligible to compete.

But O'Brien eventually straightened up with the help and tutelage of people like former UI track and field coach Mike Keller, one of several role models whom he said made it "like having mom and dad around all the time." "It really worked for me," he said. "... Honestly, I was really taken care of here."

It was the seed of a great career that lasted until 2004, although he'll now admit he probably should have called it quits much earlier.

"For a long time it wasn't that I didn't know how to do anything else, I didn't want to. I wanted to be on the track and that was the time of my life I enjoyed the most: Waking up and training," he said. ...I definitely Brett Favred it as long as I could before I realized my back, my feet, I can't handle it. It was kind of a sad day, but I felt so much better afterwards. Getting back into track as a coach was the thing that kind of flipped the switch for me."

Being back in Moscow and seeing the plaque outside the Dan O'Brien Track & Field Complex bearing his name brings back fond memories of his time in Moscow and the heyday that followed.

"I've got a lot of great memories here in Moscow," he said.

As Moscow does of him.

DEAR ABBY: I have heard that your dessert recipes are fabulous and I'd like to have them. I saw a column in which you mentioned your cookbooklets. I hope I'm correct about this, because I'd be interested in getting them. I have your booklet of poems and essays, which I have read and enjoyed many times.

columns.

Would you print your personal favorite dessert recipe and let me know how to get vour cookbooklets? Warmest wishes to you, Abby, and thank you for all your

- ANITA B.

IN NEW JERSEY DEAR ANITA: You are welcome. It's hard for me to choose just one recipe because I have a notorious sweet tooth, and my cookbooklets contain more than a few that I have enjoyed many times. However, because you asked for my personal favorite, it would be one that not only I have enjoyed, but also one I have made for friends as gifts - Regency Brownies With Chocolate Frosting. (Because the recipe yields 4 1/2 dozen, I confess I usually keep the "extra" six to munch on myself.)

BROWNIES

1 cup butter (2 sticks) 4 ounces bittersweet chocolate

2 cups sugar 4 eggs

1 cup all-purpose flour

1 teaspoon salt 2 cups chopped walnuts

1 teaspoon vanilla FROSTING

1 cup heavy cream 8 ounces bittersweet chocolate, finely chopped Preheat oven to 350 de-

Line the bottom of an 18by-12-by-2 (or 1)-inch baking pan with baking parchment paper and spray generously with butter-flavored cooking spray.

In the top of a double boiler, over medium hear, melt butter and 4 ounces chocolate. Reserve.

In a large bowl, beat sugar and eggs until fluffy. Add flour and salt, mixing well. Add chocolate mixture. blending thoroughly. Stir in nuts and vanilla.

Pour into prepared baking pan. (Batter should be about 1/2 inch thick, NOT MORE.) Bake for 35 to 40 minutes or until top is crisp and toothpick inserted in center comes out clean. Cool before pouring frosting over the top.

For the frosting: Bring cream to a boil, stirring constantly. Place chopped chocolate in a medium bowl; pour boiling cream over the chocolate and stir to blend well. Spread thin layer of warm frosting over top of brownies in pan. When cool, cut into 2-inch squares.

My cookbooklet set contains not only many easyto-prepare crowd-pleasing recipes, but also tips on entertaining. It can be ordered by sending your name and address, plus check or money order for $14 (U.S. funds) to: Dear Abby - Cookbooklet Set, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, IL 61054-0447. Shipping and handling are included in the price. If you're a serious chocolate lover, these brownies will make your toes curl, and that's a promise. With summer coming and families gathering for the holidays. now's the time to dust off your favorite picnic and barbecue recipes. My dessert recipes have started many a family tradition.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

"Give me a fruitful error any time, full of seeds, bursting with its own corrections. You can keep your sterile truth for yourself." — Vilfredo Pareto

The fifth session of the 2011 Cavendish began with Levin-Weinstein (who had won the title in three of the last four years) having what seemed like a nearly insuperable lead over the pack. The tournament had thus far featured wild deals, but the first three deals of the final session were quiet. Not so for the fourth.

At one table, an American international player sitting North made the mistake of overcalling two clubs, then, after his opponents had reached four hearts, reopening with a bid of five clubs. He was doubled there, and the defenders collected an easy 500 not bad, since four hearts had no play at all because of the defense's club ruff.

Of course it was possible for North-South to do better than defend four hearts or go for a big penalty. Look at what happened to the eventual winners. Kit Woolsey, South, heard his partner, Fred Stewart, bid two clubs, then double four hearts for takeout.

He removed to four spades and, when doubled by West, ran to five diamonds. Nobody doubled that contract — which was just as well, since it proved to be unbeatable! On a top-heart lead, Woolsey ruffed in dummy, played the club ace, ruffed a club, then crossed to a top diamond and ruffed another club. East followed suit, while West could not overruff the diamond 10. Then declarer drew the last two trumps, ran the clubs, and had 12 tricks for a remarkable plus-620.

ANSWER: There are two reasons to bid just one heart and not jump to two hearts. The first is that with bad hearts and scattered defensive values, you are unsuitable for a pre-empt. The second is that using a jump by a passed hand as weak when you did not pre-empt initially seems a poor use for the call. I prefer to use it as fit-showing — five decent hearts and at least four clubs with a maximum pass.

IF MAY 9 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: The next four to six weeks are an excellent time to make key decisions and launch crucial plans. Look for a helping hand or an important opportunity while you have the wisdom and resources to plan sagely for the future and when you have the best chance to make significant changes that will benefit your life. By the end of June, your ambitions could get the best of you and while you may work harder than ever and make progress, this is not a good time to change jobs or careers. Romantic outings or an exotic vacation might be ahead in November. You will receive cosmic assistance next February to help you overcome adversities.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Cooperation is paramount. You can wrap a business opponent or worthy competitor around your little finger. Because you are willing to make compromises, you will end up with a bigger share of the pie.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A big-hearted, generous attitude may draw others closer. You may bask in the happy feeling of a job well done even if appreciation from others is lacking. Good deeds may be their own reward.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Put together a deal that has been waiting for your decision. Anything meant to be will work out smoothly. If it isn't in your best interests to complete the contract the cosmos will give you a clear message.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Bits and pieces add up. You might not be able to save the world from global warming, but you can do your bit for the planet. Adopt a homeless kitty, plant a tree or write a check to a worthy charity.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Leaders lead. Earn respect by showing that you are dedicated to your family, team, cause, or company. This is a good time to put an important agreement into motion or strike an advantageous bargain.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You never know what you will run into. Although accidents happen, sometimes they might turn out to be happy accidents. If you need advice, listen to those who have studied the subject thoroughly LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Give your opponents their due. A wise fox knows it can't outsmart the hounds on their own turf. This might be a good time to turn an old enemy into an ally by offering a white flag or a handshake.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Where there is wisdom there is a way. Let a close companion or partner lend a helping hand. Advice might prove to be invaluable. An opportunity worth taking may show up in the next few SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Smiles may act as shock absorbers to take the pain out of bumps in the road. Everyone needs a few minutes to laugh and enjoy a carton or a joke. Whimsical nonsense promotes well-

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You can talk your way into the winner's circle. A meeting of the minds and some hearty pats on the back can lead to bigger and better things. Make money, as well as love, the old-fashioned AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Keep your finger on the pulse of moneymaking ideas. Once you get into the rhythm and understand how to strike a beneficial bargain, you can enter into profitable agreements during the next few days.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Whatever you are capable of conceiving, you will be able to achieve. Keep a notebook handy, thoughts and ideas may be exploding like fireworks. The quick illuminations will quickly disappear.
