A $3.2 million bond issue to fund most of the costs associated with building a new Burley Public Library fell well short of the 66.7 percent supermajority approval mark it needed to pass. Construction of the 15,450-square-foot library on Parke Avenue would have begun in March 2013.

Brackett Tops Corder in Race of Senate Incumbents

BY MELISSA DAVLIN
mdavlin@magicvalley.com

Brackett

TWIN FALLS • Sen. Bert Brackett, R-Rogerson, won the Republican primary against Sen. Tim Corder, R-Mountain Home, for the District 23 Senate seat.

Redistricting put Brackett and Corder in the same legislative district, forcing them to face each other in one of the only incumbent races in the state.

Both Brackett and Corder earned respect from their Senate colleagues throughout their careers.

Corder served as chairman of the Senate Local Government and Taxation Committee. Brackett served on the Joint Finance-Appropriations Committee.

Though Brackett and Corder voted the same on almost all bills, they differed on key issues, including the Students Come First education reforms in 2011 and the pre-abortion ultrasound mandate in 2012, both of which Corder opposed. Brackett branded himself the more conservative candidate and called Corder a "wildcard moderate."

Corder maintained that he represented his constituents, not the Republican party.

On Tuesday evening, Corder said he was disappointed and surprised. Corder had a strong showing in Elmore County, where he lives, but Brackett beat him in Owyhee and Twin Falls Counties.

As far as a future in politics, "I can't see that happening," Corder said.

Brackett couldn't be reached for comment. He'll face independent Bill Chisholm for the Senate seat in November.

TWIN FALLS SHERIFF RACE

ASHLEY SMITH • TIMES-NEWS

Twin Falls County Sheriff Tom Carter talks with the sheriff's office spokeswoman Lori Stewart Tuesday morning.

Carter Retains GOP Nod

BY ALISON GENE SMITH
alismith@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • Sheriff Tom Carter prevailed Tuesday in the first challenge this year for his seat, winning his GOP primary race against challenger Jack Johnson.

Carter received nearly 57 percent of the vote, while Johnson — currently chief deputy in Jerome County — had just more than 43 percent.

Carter will next face independent candidate Kelly Hassani in the general election in November. Hassani was a Twin Falls County sheriff's detective until he said he was fired from his job Monday, after being on disability for two years for a neck injury due to an on-duty car accident.

Whether he won or lost, Carter said he is a firm believer in the electoral process.

"My number one interest is Twin Falls County, whether I'm running it or someone else," he said.

As the incumbent, Carter said he won't take the general election for granted, and he'll go right back into the campaign just as aggressively as in the primary.

"When I won four years ago the guy I ran against didn't think he could lose," Carter said. "I don't want to fall into that trap."

Four years later, Carter said he had to overcome obstacles he hadn't had before, like the Times-News editorial board endorsing his opponent.

"I had to go around obstacles like the endorsement, no matter how foolish it was," he said.

All in all, Johnson said he thought he ran a good campaign. But sitting about 1,000 votes behind at 11 p.m. Tuesday, he knew it wasn't looking good.

"I wish him good luck," Johnson said of his opponent.

Carter spent the evening at home awaiting the results while Johnson had a small get-together at a supporter's house in Twin Falls.

Throughout the campaign, both men expressed a need for more police presence in schools and to work harder to solve drug and property crimes. They also touted their fiscal responsibility.

Cameron Leads Pickett for M-C Senate Seat

BY MELISSA DAVLIN
mdavlin@magicvalley.com

BURLEY • It's a close race for the Senate seat in District 27. As of 11 p.m. Tuesday, incumbent Sen. Dean Cameron had the edge on challenger Doug Pickett, with all of Minidoka County's precincts and 20 of 26 in Cassia County.

Cameron solidly beat Pickett in Minidoka County, but the race was closer in Cassia County.

As there is no Democrat or independent challenger for that seat, whoever wins will serve for the next two years.

After Sen. Denton Darrington's retirement this session, Cameron would be the longest-serving senator in the Idaho Legislature. Cameron is co-chairman of the Joint Finance-Appropriations Committee, which sets the budget for the state.

Pickett, an Oakley rancher, based his campaign on the need for fresh faces in the Senate. He cast himself as the true conservative in the race.

M.V. Voters Back 7 School Levies

BY JULIE WOOTTON
jwootton@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • Voters gave a nod of approval Tuesday for supplemental levy measures in six Magic Valley school districts.

Voters approved levies for the Shoshone, Richfield, Wendell, Valley, Filer and Castleford school districts.

In Filer, voters passed a new two-year, $500,000 annual levy. Nearly 700 voters supported the measure — about 57 percent.

Superintendent John Graham — who was celebrating his birthday Tuesday — called the results "the best birthday present ever." He thanked voters for their support.

"It's very heartening that in this economy... they demonstrated that education is a priority," he said.

In Shoshone, voters renewed a two-year, $300,000 annual levy. It passed with 253 voters in favor of the measure, while 141 voters voted no.

Jerome Co. Jail Funding Fails Again

BY STEVE KADEL
skadel@magicvalley.com

JEROME • Voters rejected a proposal to build a new jail in Jerome County for the fourth time Tuesday by a narrow margin.

The $10.7 million bond issue needed supermajority 66.7 percent approval to pass, but came up with only 63.2 percent with nine of 11 precincts counted.

"That (supermajority) is tough to get," said Sheriff Doug McFall. "Jerome County has to come up with a solution, though."

Commissioner Charlie Howell agreed, saying, "The frustrating part is you can get a majority but not a supermajority."

The funding measure's passage would have cost a Jerome County resident with a $100,000 home about $31 per year.

McFall pointed out during the campaign that the county spent $250,000 in 2011 to transport prisoners to jails in other counties due to lack of space in the current county jail. He estimated a new jail also would have reduced the per-day cost to house a prisoner from $47 to $41.

Grouse Task Force Focuses on Wildfire, Invasive Species Threats

BY KIMBERLEE KRUESI
kkruesi@magicvalley.com

JEROME • Tom Perry is running out of time for objections.

"If you adamantly oppose something, please suggest an alternative," he said to a 16-member group of wildlife managers, politicians, and various industry representatives.

As co-facilitator to Idaho's newest sage grouse task force, Perry is helping lead the group toward suggestions that could improve Idaho's plan for managing the threatened bird.

The group has met across southern Idaho for the past six weeks. With its final meeting one week away, pressure to come up with a final end product is growing.

In 2010, the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service decided that sage grouse warrant protection under the Endangered Species Act, but held off from actually listing the species. A year later, a federal judge approved a settlement that would require federal officials to make final listing decisions for 250 candidates for protection.

The deadline for the sage grouse is 2015.

The U.S. Bureau of Land Management has responded to the new deadline with a national strategy that would require improving its conservation efforts across the Western states. Like Idaho, Wyoming, Nevada, and Utah have all appointed task forces charged with improving each state's sage grouse management tools. Idaho's advisory group is based off of Wyoming's task force, which was the first to submit and adopt its new sage grouse plan.

On Tuesday, Idaho's group met in Jerome to brief each member on what the subcommittees were suggesting, and to figure what's left to do before the group meets for the last time in Idaho Falls.

The group kicked off the discussion by focusing on the impacts of infrastructure in core sage grouse habitat areas. They also discussed what types of regulations are needed to make sure the habitat remains protected.

However, the conversation quickly became riddled with questions of how long the management plan would be in place before it should be improved and how much plans should limit private landowners.

"Infrastructure is tricky," said John Robison, public lands director for the Idaho Conservation League.

"Whatever we had on the books before wasn't working."

Reducing the risk of wildfires and the spread of invasive species continue to be group's primary goals.

The task force's suggestions

If You Go

The final task force meeting begins at 8 a.m. May 23 in Idaho Falls. The meeting is scheduled to take place at the Idaho Department of Fish and Game Upper Snake Regional Office, 4279 Commerce Circle, Idaho Falls.

will likely include responding to wildfires more quickly. One possible way to do this is allow ranchers and farmers to help put out wildfires. Right now, the BLM and other federal agencies forbid private citizens from responding to wildfires on federal land.

"We've stopped forest fires in northern Idaho from getting out of hand, we can stop range fires," said Virgil Moore, director of the Idaho Department of Fish and Game. "We know what to do but the problem is a lack of money, but I'm confident that if we submit a plan, we will get the resources to solve the problem."

McFall Easily Earns New Term as Sheriff

BY STEVE KADEL
skadel@magicvalley.com

McFall

JEROME • Incumbent Jerome County Sheriff Doug McFall easily turned back challenger Dan Chatterton on Tuesday to earn another four-year term in the job.

McFall led with 71 percent of the vote to Chatterton's 29 percent with nine of 11 precincts reporting.

McFall said the big margin "made me feel good. I ran on my merits and I believe in doing the right thing for the county, not bringing a personal agenda."

The two men took different stances during the campaign on the heated issue of a new jail. McFall supported building a new facility while Chatterton preferred a regional jail.

Chatterton said it would be better to join other small counties to share costs.

"Do we really want a mini-prison in every community?" he asked Tuesday night.

Kauffman Lands District 25 House Seat

BY KIMBERLEE KRUESI
kkruesi@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • Legislative newcomer Clark Kauffman of Filer has won a spot in the Idaho Legislature.

Kauffman faced David Funk of Hansen for the District 25 House seat. The race remained neck-and-neck throughout the entire night, but Kauffman eventually pulled ahead and secured the House seat with just little more than 2,200 votes. Funk received close to 1,800 votes.

"It's been a real roller-coaster," Kauffman said. "It's been a learning experience from the beginning, but I would like to thank everybody who supported me, especially my wife."

Kauffman decided to run for the House seat after Rep. Sharon Block decided not to run for re-election and retire.

Along with being a barley farmer, Kauffman serves as a commissioner on the Filer Highway District and past chairman of the Idaho Barley Commission.

"Clark was a great opponent," Funk said, who is a farmer and dairyman. Funk also serves on the National Potato Board and United Dairymen of Idaho board.

"It's been a great race," he said.

Burley Voters Nix Library Funding

BY LAURIE WELCH
lwelch@magicvalley.com

BURLEY • Burley voters declined Tuesday to approve a $3.2 million bond issue to build a new library in the city.

The unofficial ballot count showed 818 votes, or 51.22 percent, in favor of the bond issue and 779, or 48.78, percent against. The bond issue required a supermajority or 66.7 percent voter approval to pass.

City officials had planned to replace the current 5,192-square-foot facility with a new 15,450 square feet building on city-owned property at the corner of 17th Street and Parke Avenue.

The bond issue would have been used to pay the bulk of the anticipated $3.8 million costs.

Garbage Truck Fire Closes Highway 25

TIMES-NEWS

JEROME • Idaho Highway 25 was closed part of Tuesday due to a garbage truck on fire, emergency dispatchers said.

The highway was closed near the Jerome County Airport shortly before 2:30 p.m.

No injuries were reported, and it's unclear how the fire started.

Jerome County sheriff's deputies, Jerome police and the Jerome Rural Fire Department responded to the scene.

Highway 93 Crash Sends Two to Hospital

TIMES-NEWS

JEROME • A Tuesday evening crash sent two men to St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center after they collided at the intersection of U.S. Highway 93 and E. 400 South Road near the Flying J Travel Plaza in Jerome.

Cyrus Bullers, 84, of Jerome, was traveling eastbound on 400 South in a 2010 Ford Fusion. As he attempted to turn northbound on U.S. 93 he was struck by Corbin Clark, 20, of Boise, who was traveling southbound on U.S. 93 in a 1995 Toyota Camry.

"I do not believe alcohol was a factor and I do believe seat belts were worn," said Cpl. Michael Faller with the Idaho State Police. Faller added he did not yet have specific information on injuries.

Faller said the front end of the vehicles collided, but it wasn't really a head-on collision.

"When the cars connected the force pushed both vehicles basically off the roadway," he said.

Clark's vehicle went across the lanes of traffic into a barrow pit, while Bullers' vehicle turned around and came to a stop on the side of the road, Faller said.

"There wasn't anything flying or spinning," he said.

Twin Falls School Trustees Hear Budget Proposal

BY JULIE WOOTTON
jwootton@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • Twin Falls School District administrators are worried about the role of declining reserve funds in next school year's budget.

Fiscal Affairs Director Bob Seaman told school trustees Monday night that there will be tough decisions to make as carryover funds continue to drop.

"The difficulty will become that we're running out of carryover to spend," he said.

Trustees heard a presentation on next year's preliminary budget, but didn't take action. Trustee Paul McClintock wasn't at the meeting.

The district plans to carry over about $918,000 into next year's budget. But by the end of next year, reserve funds are expected to drop to about $532,000.

Superintendent Wiley Dobbs said he doesn't expect state funding levels to bounce back soon. In order to address that, he said there are a few options.

The district could pursue an emergency levy next year. School districts are allowed to pass a tax levy in the fall without voter approval if average daily attendance rates are higher than the previous year.

Dobbs said other options include evaluating the future amount of the supplemental levy or making "Draconian" cuts to programs.

In spring 2011, Twin Falls voters approved a two-year, $7.5 million ballot measure. The district will decide during the coming school year about how much levy funding to pursue in 2013.

Nest year's school district budget projects $39.3 million in revenues, down slightly from this year's budget.

When it comes to expenses, about $25.24 million is budgeted to spend on employee salaries and $8.89 million on benefits next year.

"We have made an effort to keep the salaries and benefits as high as possible," Seaman said.

Next year's budget, he said, includes step increases for school employees who gain a higher level of education or more experience.

The budget also factors in the cost of filling two positions that are currently vacant. The district will hire a

During their Monday night meeting, school trustees:

- Approved next year's school calendar. Students will start Sept. 4 and get out June 5, 2013.

- Approved a right-of-way change for a project at Eastland Drive and Elizabeth Boulevard near Bridge Academy. Kirk Brower, district facilities manager, said it's a city of Twin Falls project without a cost to the district. It will include eventually constructing a right turn lane from Elizabeth Boulevard to Eastland Drive.

Currently, there are safety issues with the intersection, Brower said.

CenturyLink to Award $3k Nonprofit Grant

TIMES-NEWS

WENDELL • CenturyLink will award a $3,000 grant to nonprofit organization Camp Rainbow Gold.

Students in Robert Moore's social studies class at Wendell Middle School researched nonprofit organizations in their area and chose Camp Rainbow Gold to receive the grant.

The camp is for Idaho children diagnosed with cancer and their families.

CenturyLink will award the grant at 9:30 a.m. today at Wendell Middle School. It's through the company's Middle School Philanthropy program.

Wendell Middle School was one of eight middle schools in Idaho that participated in the program to determine how to each distribute $3,000 to a nonprofit organization impacting their community.

A total of $24,000 will be awarded to organizations throughout the state.

"We're extremely happy that it passed," Superintendent Rob Waite said.

In Wendell, voters renewed a two-year, $155,000 annual supplemental levy. The measure received 315 yes votes and 171 no votes.

"We're really happy," Superintendent Greg Lowe said about the results.

Both ballot measures passed for the Valley School District in Hazelton. The school district's new five-year, $300,000 annual plant facilities levy received support from about 68 percent of voters.

Money will be used for school building maintenance.

Voters also renewed the district's two-year, $300,000 annual supplemental levy.

Superintendent Arlyn Bodily said he appreciates the support from voters.

"It's pretty neat that they'd do that," he said, adding that he realizes times are tough.

In Richfield, the majority of voters agreed to renew a two-year, $225,000 annual supplemental levy.

In Castleford, voters renewed a two-year, $300,000 annual levy. About 70 percent of voters were in favor of the measure.

New Polling Places, Primary Rules Cause Confusion

BY MELISSA DAVLIN
mdavlin@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • Even with bright red signs directing voters to the new polling spot at Harrison Elementary School, some voters still parked at the old polling place across the street and walked.

A handful of new polling places added another layer of confusion to a primary election with plenty of changes, including a closed Republican election that required voters to affiliate with the GOP. But despite the changes, poll workers said Tuesday's election was going smoothly overall.

Because of redistricting, some precincts and polling places changed. In Twin Falls County, the county clerk sent postcards to voters affected by the shifts, but not everyone noticed the cards, said poll worker Lorraine Haralson.

The bigger issue, Haralson said, was the closed Republican primary. Some didn't understand the rules, and others just didn't like them.

"They don't like having to declare," said poll worker Karen Thompson.

That said, the process went more smoothly than expected.

Milton and Sandra Barus have worked at polling places for about 12 years. Both had braced themselves for more questions, but most knew what to expect.

"I thought we'd have to do a lot more explaining," Milton Barrus said. And even those who needed help were patient and great to work with, said worker Sam Sites.

Suzanne Wilkin said though she had to look up her new polling place, she received enough information from the newspaper and Secretary of State's website to make her decision before she arrived.

"The process was really easy," Wilkin said.

Simpson, LeFavour Winning in Idaho's 2nd Congressional District

BOISE (AP) • Democratic U.S. congressional candidate Nicole LeFavour will face seven-term Republican U.S. Rep. Mike Simpson in November after both were well on their way to winning the 2012 primary election.

In voting Tuesday, LeFavour beat token candidate Jack Wayne Chappell

LeFavour

of Buhl. Simpson bested tea party-backed Marvin "Chick"

Heilesen, who also ran unsuccessfully in 2010.

Though they weren't running head to head, Simpson's early vote totals show the daunting challenge faced by LeFavour, a retiring four-term Idaho state lawmaker, in the general election.

With about a quarter of precincts reporting, Simpson's 69 percent Republican support included nearly 19,000 votes.

By contrast, LeFavour's 82 percent Democratic support included only about 4,500 votes.

That difference illustrates how far more eastern Idaho Republicans went to the primary polls than did Democrats.

GOP Conservatives, Moderates Lock Horns in Panhandle

BY KEITH KINNAIRD
Bonner County Daily Bee

SANDPOINT • The power struggle between ultra-conservative elements of the Bonner County Republican Central Committee and its more moderate counterparts heated up en route to Tuesday's primary election.

Allen Hacker, a conservative and former Sandpoint mayoral candidate, filed formal complaints Saturday with Bonner County Prosecutor Louis Marshall, Idaho Secretary of State Ben Yursa and Idaho Attorney General Lawrence Wasden. Hacker alleged that moderate precinct committeeman candidates are running afoul of electioneering laws by claiming to be incumbents and endorsing certain candidates on the GOP ballot.

However, there is ample evidence the committee's conservative faction employed similar tactics to get their people elected to committee posts and other elected offices.

Chief Deputy Secretary of State Tim Hurst said he is aware of the Hacker complaint, but said it's unclear whether the contents of the moderates' entreaties amount to a violation of the law.

"Sometimes it's referred to as the 'dark side of the First Amendment,'" said Hurst.

Hurst said his office lacks the resources to actively investigate the claims, but said the matter is being reviewed by the sheriff's and prosecutor's offices.

"They're going to have to make the call as to whether there's a law that's been broken and if they want to prosecute it," Hurst said.

Although Republicans say there is nothing in party bylaws which forbid incumbent committeemen and committeewomen from using their positions to endorse candidates, the practice is frowned upon because it breeds infighting and creates an appearance of dysfunction within the GOP.

Bonneville Co. Elections Supervisor Stepping Down

BY ZACH KYLE
Post Register

IDAHO FALLS • For 26 years, Bobbie Jockumsen missed family graduations, births and weddings because she was stuck in the Bonneville County Courthouse running elections.

Tuesday's primary was Jockumsen's last rodeo. She's retiring from the late and typically thankless nights that come with being Bonneville County elections supervisor.

"I will have 29 grandchildren, and it's time I played with my grandchildren," Jockumsen said. "I've had to work around elections for 26 years. It's time to go play!"

Nobody notices the people working behind the scenes when elections go smoothly. The ballots go out. The votes come in. When things go right, the elections office is quiet.

If things go wrong, it's a firestorm.

Recounts are fraught with potential for disaster. Jockumsen oversaw two, both in primaries for state representative seats.

In 1992, the recount not only upheld Jack Barraclough's win over Reed Hansen, it gave Barraclough the same five-vote victory margin as the first count.

The same thing happened in 2004, when Russ Mathews beat Lee Gagner by six votes in both the recount and original tallied.

Firestorms averted, County Commission Chairman Roger Christensen said.

"You haven't heard much about Bobbie, and that speaks volumes," Christensen said. "She just quietly does her job and has been very good at it. We'll miss her."

The job was a good fit for Jockumsen, who doesn't care for attention or dealing with the news media before and after elections.

"My whole philosophy is I don't care who wins," Jockumsen said. "I want to see the politician's name in the paper the next day. I don't want to see my name."

In the old days, Jockumsen worked until 3 a.m. in the days leading up to elections, tapping out ballots on an electric typewriter.

Election nights were always chaotic, especially when votes were taken at the courthouse and the line of people extended out of the elections office and snaked around the back of the building and through the front rotunda.

The job added a degree of difficulty last year when the Legislature mandated consolidated elections, meaning Jockumsen's office was responsible for city elections on top of county races.

That also meant retraining all of the chief judges, election clerks and election-day registrars in 49 of the county's 50 precincts.

With so much on her plate, Jockumsen laughs at the notion her office takes it easy between elections.

"We read Harlequins and eat bonbons," she said, jokingly.

Those who have worked around Jockumsen appreciate her humor and encyclopedic knowledge of elections procedures.

Who Will Be the Winner This Election Season?

In the religious world, they call it a “church split.”

People who have so much in common — a belief system, a striving to do what is right — begin to fight about the details or, worse, the personalities.

Before you know it, there are two churches on the block instead of one. Anyone who’s been through a church split knows that it does little to bolster the strength of the faith; it just generates a lot of hard feelings.

Politics is not a religion, nor is it sacred, but there does seem to be something of a “church split” going on in the Republican Party right now.

Spend time in Republican circles these days and you’ll hear the word “RINO” (Republicans In Name Only) dropped like some kind of McCarthy-era witch hunt of those who are not conservative enough. One local official even went so far as to list names from the podium at a party gathering of those elected officials and candidates who aren’t “real” Republicans.

The past two weeks, the Times-News front page has featured several stories about Republican infighting — stories of Republicans using PACs to fund campaigns that undercut fellow Republicans and stories of people fighting for precinct chairs with the expressed goal to take over the party.

One would think that in a state where Republicans dominate every political office that the party would be unstoppable — moving forward as a united front, getting things done, a shining example to the rest of the country. Instead, without an enemy, they have declared war on themselves.

The Republican Party is being fractured by infighting, with the majority of registered Republicans on the sidelines as bystanders to the destruction.

When the dust settles, we’re unsure who will come out as a winner this election season.

Definitely not the voter.

Maybe the Democrats.

Forego One Latte to Donate to Pet Food Pantry

I have established the Senior Citizens Pet Food Pantry fund at the Twin Falls Humane Society.

I started thinking about this months ago because I have heard from my friends how hard it is to buy their precious companions' food. It sometimes comes to buying themselves food or a small bag of food for their cat or dog.

I have a small dog that is my constant companion, listens to any problems that I may have, makes me laugh at her antics and gets me going in the morning. I don't know what I would do without her; she means the world to me. She is so small that I only need to buy her a small bag of food once a month.

I am lucky because I can afford it. Others are desperate to feed their pets. Therefore, I wanted to see a way to help my friends and seniors who need help in purchasing food for their pets. If anyone would like to donate to this worthy cause, please send any amount to the Twin Falls Human Society, Senior Citizens Pet Food Pantry, attention People for Pets, 420 Victory Ave., Twin Falls, ID 83301.

I challenge all you avid pet lovers to forego a cup of java or favorite latte in the morning and put that money toward this cause. Thanking you in advance for your donations.

There are Better Ways to Measure Economy

Every day, we hear from the government and media that the unemployment rate has dropped again because “X” (you pick a number) number of jobs were created last month. This number is always in the even thousands.

If anyone really knew the number, why not tell us the exact number? Instead, a better measurement of the economy would be to tell us the number of people who left the food stamp program last month because of all these new jobs. Someone in the government should be able to supply us with those precise numbers and exactly in which states the drop in food stamps usage occurred.

The price of oil is below $100 a barrel today. If Obama government can get the price of gasoline down from $4 to $2 a gallon before November, some believe it might get him re-elected. If he can cause it to come down, then he must be the reason it is sky high, and it will probably go to $6 after the election if he is re-elected.

The Twin Falls City Council would be wise to say “no” to the planned canyon rim development. We don't need the trucks, traffic and turmoil it would bring, along with obliteration of canyon view. The land should be kept for future park and trail purposes.

There is plenty of other land away from the canyon rim suitable for development.

THEIR VIEW

GOP's Spendthrift Ways

The following editorial appeared in the Baltimore Sun on Friday, May 11:

There's a tendency among some to shorthand the ongoing federal budget debate as between Republicans who want to reduce government spending and Democrats who don't. This isn't really the case, as recent actions in the House have demonstrated.

On Wednesday, the House Armed Services Committee took a close look at President Barack Obama's proposed $525.4 billion defense spending plan and decided that simply wasn't enough. The GOP-controlled committee voted to authorize nearly $4 billion more than what the Pentagon had requested for 2013.

How is that possible? Republicans are once again trying to save weapons systems that the military doesn't actually want. That's the kind of micromanagement that inevitably harms national security; Defense Secretary Leon Panetta has already warned that saving a low-priority weapon could result in harmful cutbacks to hardware the military actually needs.

But wait, you may say, that's just the authorization — the shopping list, if you will. Unfortunately, the House Appropriations Committee, which actually helps decide how much to spend, is moving in the same direction. Earlier this week, the defense subcommittee approved more than $3 billion in additional Pentagon spending in 2013.

What makes all this misplaced generosity toward the military-industrial complex all the more ludicrous is that the Pentagon still has the proverbial Sword of Damocles hanging over its head in the form of sequestration. Unless Congress and the White House reach some sort of budget compromise between now and the end of the year, automatic cuts will be triggered including more than $500 billion in future spending at the Pentagon, about $55 billion of it next year.

Needless to say, Democrats and Republicans alike are unhappy with that threat, but it's the GOP that seems most interested in sidestepping it. “We shouldn't be cutting national defense spending and imperiling our security to meet arbitrary caps,” was how Rep. Paul Ryan put it this week.

To which we can only say, Mr. Ryan is absolutely correct. The problem is, that “train wreck” budget plan is there for a reason. The plan was adopted last summer, when Republicans and Democrats failed to reach agreement on a deficit-reduction deal. The required cuts were meant to be as painful as possible to force the two sides into negotiation.

Idaho Agrees to Boost Prison Medical Staff

BY REBECCA BOONE
Associated Press

BOISE • The Idaho Department of Correction has agreed to increase staffing and dramatically increase medical care oversight as part of a long-running lawsuit over conditions at a prison south of Boise.

The agreement filed with the U.S. District Court in Idaho on Tuesday afternoon guarantees that the court will continue to review conditions at the Idaho State Correctional Institution for at least two more years before ending a decades-old lawsuit between inmates and the state. It also means the state will be expected to come up with enough money to hire more prison health care workers and to modify its contract with the Brentwood, Tenn.-based prison health care contractor Corizon.

Idaho Department of Correction Director Brent Reinke said the agreement represents a significant step forward in the case.

"Oddly enough, it was 31 years ago today when this all started," he said Tuesday evening. "Maybe the stars were aligned — I'm very, very grateful to move this forward today."

The case began in 1981

when ISCI inmates sued, alleging they were subject to violence and rape by fellow inmates, denied adequate medical care, subjected to poor diets and forced to deal with extreme overcrowding.

Over the next three decades, they won several rulings designed to improve conditions at the prison and the federal court continued to oversee operations to make sure the state was complying with all of its orders.

But U.S. District Judge B. Lynn Winmill was eager to end the court's babysitting role, and last year, he appointed correctional health care expert Dr. Marc Stern to review the health care at the prison and report back his findings.

Stern's report, filed with the court earlier this year, was damning. He said he found multiple problems, including nursing mistakes that likely resulted in the deaths of some inmates, that inmates with terminal illnesses or requiring long-term care were sometimes left in soiled linens and went without meals and that some emergency equipment was missing or not working properly.

Officials with Corizon and with the state countered that they didn't believe Stern's report was accurate and that it misrepresented the level of care offered at the prison. The state also has maintained that the original court rulings governing health care at the prison were so out-of-date that they didn't reflect current conditions and were impossible to enforce.

The agreement between inmates and the state is designed to address the concerns listed in Stern's report and to make the old enforcement plans current.

The agreement calls for some brick-and-mortar changes, such as a remodel of the prison's existing pharmacy building to reduce crowding. It also calls for both the Idaho Department of Correction and Corizon to increase staffing levels. Reinke said changes to Corizon's staffing level will have to be made through the state's contract with the company. Corizon is not a party to the lawsuit and so is not bound by the agreement.

Both sides have six months to get the changes up and running and incorporated into the court's existing compliance plan. Then the state will be subjected to two years of monitoring to ensure that all the terms are being met.

If the state performs satisfactorily during the two-year period, the lawsuit could come to a close at the end of 2014.

N. IDAHO MAN SENTENCED IN FATAL HAMMER ATTACK

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) • A northern Idaho man was sentenced Tuesday to life in prison for first-degree murder in the death of a 43-year-old neighbor following a violent hammer attack on her and members of her family nearly two years ago.

Larry Cragun of Bayview will serve at least 30 years before he's eligible for parole.

First District Court Judge Ben Simpson also sentenced Cragun to serve a minimum of 15 years in prison each for two counts of aggravated battery and one count of attempted first-degree murder, the Coeur d'Alene Press reported (<http://bit.ly/KcxaAG>).

The sentences will run concurrently.

Cragun pleaded guilty in March to killing Patricia Heath during the attack and severely wounding her mother-in-law, Lorraine Wallis, 59, who testified that she has had four surgeries after taking two hammer blows to the head. Wallis's son, Michael Heath, and grandson Jedidiah Heath suffered minor injuries.

The surviving family members testified during a two-day sentencing hearing that started Monday.

"I've been working hard not to remember that day," Jedidiah Heath said.

The family was watching television when police say Cragun, a neighbor, burst into the home holding a hammer and a knife, and starting to attack them. Cragun then went into town and told some people what he had done before calling 911.

Doctors who examined Cragun testified that he has had paranoid schizophrenia since at least 2001 and suffers from delusions and hallucinations. Cragun was diagnosed with cancer in 2008 and lost a testicle, which aggravated his paranoid delusions, said clinical psychologist Craig Beaver.

Cragun distributed fliers titled "Resist Socialism" around Bayview before the attacks, investigators said.

His mother, Valerie Benda of Sandpoint, testified Monday that around that time, her son also stripped the boxspring of his bed down to the metal frame, looking for a recording device he believed the government had hidden there. He also believed a demon had paid him a visit at his Bayview trailer home overlooking Lake Pend Oreille, and that hundreds of paid government agents were following him, she said.

"He was believing things that were not real," Benda said.

A doctor who evaluated Cragun before the attacks also found that he was suffering from paranoid schizophrenia, she said. Benda testified that she was concerned about her son's behavior and had to trick him into submitting to a mental evaluation.

However, he didn't have the money for the medication, said Benda, who apologized to Cragun's victims.

"I'm very sorry to the Health family ... for the pain my son caused you," she said.

John Gable of Boise conceded he had a Ruger .45 semi-automatic pistol when police contacted him in January at his apartment complex following a verbal altercation.

Gable isn't allowed to own any firearms after he was convicted in 1993 of racketeering.

After the 63-year-old man's guilty plea on Monday in U.S. District Court in Boise, he faces up to 10 years in prison and a fine of up to $250,000.

He'll be sentenced on July 30 by U.S. District Judge B. Lynn Winmill.

The case was prosecuted as part of Idaho's Project Safe Neighborhoods Program, which seeks to reduce gun violence in Idaho.

3 Researchers Awarded $2.5M in Grants

IDAHO FALLS • Three University of Idaho researchers have been awarded more than $2.5 million in nuclear research grants by the U.S. Department of Energy.

The Post-Register reports (<http://bit.ly/JAZ8K8>) that the grants to the researchers at the school's Center for Advanced Energy Studies are the most to any college in the DOE's Nuclear Energy University Program.

Supathorn Phongikaroon received an $820,000 grant to lead a project to analyze real-time concentrations of used nuclear fuels within high-temperature liquids.

Akira Tokuhiko was awarded $877,000 to partner to work on a hybrid energy conversion system using renewable energy sources for the next generation of nuclear power plants.

Tokuhiko will be working on that project with Vivek

Utgikar, who also received $870,000 to help in the development of new nuclear reactor systems, according to CAES.

Groups Appeal Ruling Halting Bison Moves

BILLINGS, Mont. • Environmental groups say they will ask the Montana Supreme Court to overturn a district court ruling that temporarily halts transfers of Yellowstone National Park bison to tribal and public lands.

Attorneys for Defenders of Wildlife and the National Wildlife Federation appealed the ruling Monday.

They are challenging a restraining order issued by Judge John McKeon after about 60 Yellowstone bison were moved to Montana's Fort Peck Indian Reservation in March.

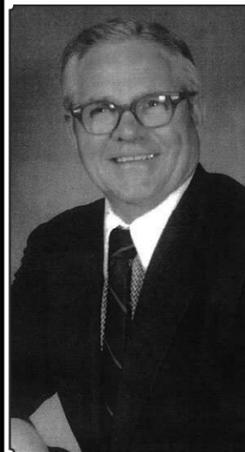

The groups want bison transfers to continue, including one for the Fort Belknap Reservation that was put on hold after McKeon's ruling.

The relocations are part of an attempt to establish new bison herds while curbing the periodic slaughter of the animals when they leave Yellowstone. Many ranchers fear the bison could spread disease and compete with cattle for grazing.

Lewiston Polling Place Moved Due to Dynamite

LEWISTON • Election officials in Lewiston say they moved a polling place after someone found 50 pounds of dynamite nearby.

Authorities made the switch Tuesday morning moments after someone cleaning an adjacent building discovered the explosives.

The Lewiston Tribune reports (<http://bit.ly/L86ich>) that voters once destined for the city's police training center were redirected to the Lewiston Community Center to cast ballots in Tuesday's primary election.

STAGE SET FOR KEY NEB. SENATE RACE

BY MARGERY A. BECK
Associated Press

OMAHA, Neb. • State Sen. Deb Fischer defeated two better-financed opponents Tuesday night to win the Republican nomination for U.S. Senate, setting up a fall matchup with former Democratic Sen. Bob Kerrey that could prove crucial in determining the balance of power in the chamber.

Fischer called herself an underdog in her race against two statewide office holders, Attorney General Jon Bruning and Treasurer Don Stenberg. But a flurry of late spending and endorsements injected some uncertainty into the race, which was closely watched because it represents one of the GOP's best chances of winning a seat.

Although Fischer had long been seen as a likely also-ran, every day she has seemed to bring in another endorsement. Last week it was 2008 vice presidential nominee Sarah Palin and Nebraska U.S. Rep. Jeff Fortenberry. On Monday it was former presidential candidate Herman Cain.

And possibly more important than the endorsements has been money — $200,000 spent by a super PAC funded by TD Ameritrade founder and Chicago Cubs co-owner Joe Ricketts, which paid for statewide television ads attacking Bruning and touting Fischer.

"It's always nice to get endorsements, but the voters make the decisions," Fischer told Omaha television station KETV earlier Tuesday. "Vot-

Seeking Logic in North Korea's Mass Spectacles

BY TIM SULLIVAN

Associated Press

PYONGYANG, North Korea • From across the city, they are summoned to pay reverence.

So on a chilly April evening, tens of thousands of people come to honor their new ruler, as towering statues of his father and grandfather are unveiled on a Pyongyang hilltop. The crowds bow before the statues in practiced unison and shake bright, fake flowers in choreographed praise. Some weep with joy to be in the presence of the baby-faced Kim Jong Un, who is now their Illustrious General, their Leader, their Supreme Commander.

For years, this is how the world has seen the people of this secretive nation: as Stalinist automatons in meticulously staged mass spectacles that glorify one-family rule. And there's plenty of truth in that.

But look closer. Go downtown on that April evening and mingle among the thousands of people walking to their trolley stops after the ceremony, when the streets are closed to traffic and crowds fill the night with laughter. Most have spent the entire day squatting in a hilltop plaza the size of a small cornfield, waiting to stand on cue and wave their flowers for a few minutes in well-practiced devotion. They should be exhausted.

Instead, young women walk arm in arm, young men eyeing them from nearby. Older women laugh as they swish along in the traditional Korean dresses modernized here into polyester hoop skirts. Across the street from Department Store No. 1, hundreds of people crowd sidewalk stalls to buy 1-cent servings of spring water ("Good for your health!" a saleswoman promises), served in metal cups that are rinsed in buckets and quickly used again.

In many ways, it's a vision of 1950s small-town America. Most men wear hats and ties, few women show even a hint of cleavage. There are no teenagers with mysterious piercings, no fights, no obvious drunks.

This is the complex reality of the spectacles, which exist at a particularly North Korean intersection of dogma, teatime and entertainment. They are blatant propaganda in support of the ruling family, but also a chance to look around for girlfriends. They are a source of widespread pride in a country best known for its isolation, but require dull practice sessions that can stretch on for days.

And in a place with little to offer in the way of nightlife, they even count as fun.

Movie theaters close early here, along with the bars. North Korean television broadcasts little but odes to the ruling family. Few people can afford the city's restaurants. Private parties are discouraged by the authorities, who frown on gatherings they do not control.

That leaves the rallies. "On days when rallies are held, people who participate can get together and talk over drinks after the event is over," says Kim Seong-min, 26, a university student now living in South Korea. "Rallies are chances to get together and feel the warmth of the community."

The ceremonies, like nearly all life in North Korea, revolve around the three men who have ruled the country since its birth in 1948: The founder Kim Il Sung, his son Kim Jong Il and now his grandson Kim Jong Un.

Toddlers learn songs proclaiming their love of Kim Il Sung. Official accounts say Kim Jong Il could control the weather, and that broken machinery would spontaneously function at his touch. The state media proclaims Kim Jong Un, who came to power late last year after his father's death and is believed to be in his late 20s; a living reflection of his two predecessors.

In the official tales, the Kims are kind and they are brilliant, they are strong and they are all-knowing.

The government, of course, is also deeply feared, with vast interlocking webs of intelligence agencies, informer networks and prison camps. Plenty of North Koreans proclaim their belief out of that fear, according to people who have managed to flee the country. Others pay fealty out of professional ambition.

But many people genuinely believe the propaganda; it is so all-encompassing that in many ways it would be hard not to. That makes the rallies as close to religious services as most North Koreans have ever seen.

Lightning Hits New French President's Plane

BY GREG KELLER AND SYLVIE CORBET

Associated Press

PARIS • Socialist Francois Hollande took over as France's president Tuesday and jetted off to Berlin hours later for talks on Europe's debt crisis — only to have his plane struck by lightning. No one was hurt.

It was a startling beginning for a man who promised to be a more "normal" president, and less flashy than his predecessor Nicolas Sarkozy, who was ousted by voters after a single term for his handling of a stagnant economy plagued by joblessness.

After a succession of rain-drenched and pomp-filled ceremonial inauguration events, Hollande took off in a Falcon 7X aircraft for Berlin. The plane was hit by lightning shortly afterward, and returned to the Villacoublay air base outside Paris as a precaution for inspection, President-elect Francois Hollande, center, Jean-Marc Ayrault, second right, and Paris' mayor Bertrand Delanoë, right, leave the City Hall of Paris, France, after a Tuesday ceremony.

Defense Ministry spokesman Gerard Gachet said.

Defense officials say the president and his entourage were transferred to another aircraft, a Falcon 900, and left shortly thereafter. That made Hollande about an hour and a half late for his first meeting with German Chancellor Angela Merkel.

Hollande was following a postwar custom for new French leaders to reach out to their German counterparts to solidify European unity. Right before leaving for Berlin, Hollande named a moderate, German-friendly member of his Socialist party, Jean-Marc Ayrault, as his prime minister.

Father: Ga. Woman with Flesh-eating Bug Wants Book

BY RUSS BYNUM

Associated Press

SAVANNAH, Ga. • A week ago, doctors gave her little chance of survival. Now a Georgia grad student who is battling a rare flesh-eating infection is alert and bored enough to ask for a book, her father told The Associated Press on Tuesday.

Aimee Copeland remained in critical condition at an Augusta hospital, unable to speak because of a breathing tube in her throat as she continued to fight the life-threatening disease that took hold after she gashed her leg in a fall from a broken zip line.

Doctors had to amputate most of the 24-year-old woman's left leg to save her life, and her father says she'll likely lose her fingers too. But he told AP that doctors now believe they'll be able to save not only the palms of his daughter's hands but her right foot as well.

Days ago she faced losing both of her hands and feet.

"This doctor can't fathom a reason for why she's improved the way she has," Andy Copeland said in a telephone interview. "Her spirits are extraordinarily high. I am absolutely amazed."

Copeland's father said his daughter seems aware that she's in the hospital after an accident. But for now, they're sparing her the details of her condition until after she has been removed from a respirator and is breathing on her own. That could come any day now.

"I'm not sure how much (she knows) as far as the leg and the hand amputations. I don't have those discussions with her," Copeland's father said. "... But if she asks we will tell her."

He said the family also wants to make sure a hospital counselor is available to help Copeland once she is informed of her condition.

Losing a limb is extremely difficult emotionally, and can be particularly difficult for young people, said Dr. Nadine Kaslow, chief psychologist at Grady Hospital in Atlanta.

"There is a process that they go through, a grief process," said Kaslow, who is not involved in Copeland's care. "There is shock, disbelief, anger, sadness and then a period of reconciling one to the situation and healing and figuring out how they are going to move forward in their life."

F-22 CONCERNS PROMPT NEW RESTRICTIONS

WASHINGTON • Facing a mysterious safety problem with the Air Force's most-prized stealth fighter, Defense Secretary Leon Panetta on Tuesday ordered new flight restrictions on the F-22 and summoned help from Navy and NASA experts. Some F-22 pilots have experienced dizziness and other symptoms of an oxygen shortage while flying, and Panetta's personal intervention signaled a new urgency.

YEMEN GETS US HELP VS. AL-QAIDA

SANAA, Yemen • Yemeni warplanes and troops backed by heavy artillery waged a four-front assault Tuesday against the strongholds of al-Qaida militants in the south, with U.S. troops for the first time helping direct the offensive from a nearby desert air base-turned-command center. Yemeni military officials said dozens of U.S. troops were operating from al-Annad air base.

Scalia Queries Criticized as Advocacy Against Obama Policies

BY GREG STOHR
Bloomberg News

WASHINGTON • In January, Supreme Court Justice Antonin Scalia accused the Environmental Protection Agency of "high-handedness." He was just getting warmed up.

Over the next 3 1/2 months, Scalia asked whether federal immigration policy was designed to "please Mexico," fired off 12 questions and comments in 15 minutes at a government lawyer in a case involving overtime pay, and dismissed part of Solicitor General Donald Verrilli's defense of President Obama's health-care law as "extraordinary."

Scalia's tone this year, particularly in cases involving the Obama administration, is raising new criticism over the temperament of a justice who has always relished the give-and-take of the Supreme Court's public sessions. Some lawyers say Scalia, a 1986 appointee of President Ronald Reagan, R, is crossing the line that separates tough scrutiny from advocacy.

"His questions have been increasingly confrontational," said Charles Fried, a Harvard Law School professor who served as Reagan's top Supreme Court advocate. While the justice has always asked "pointed" questions, in the health-care case "he came across much more like an advocate."

Scalia's approach is fueling the perception that the biggest cases this term, including health care, may be influenced by politics, rather than the legal principles that he and other justices say should be their guide. A Bloomberg News poll in March showed that 75 percent of Americans think the court's decision on the 2010 law will be based more on politics than on constitutional merit.

"Someone who had just tuned into the health-care argument might get the impression that the court is a much more partisan institution than it actually is," said David Strauss, a constitutional law professor at the University of Chicago Law School.

The week after the health-insurance argument, Obama showed a willingness to make the court an issue in his reelection campaign, saying a ruling striking down the law would be "judicial activism" by "an unelected group of people." The court will probably rule by the end of June.

Scalia, 76, declined to comment for this story, said Kathy Arberg, a Supreme Court spokeswoman.

The justice has never shied away from controversy. He once wrote that a colleague's reasoning in an abortion case "cannot be taken seriously." When the court expanded the rights of prisoners at the U.S. naval base in Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, he dissented by saying the ruling "will almost certainly cause more Americans to be killed."

In 2009, he told a college student she had posed a "nasty, impolite question" when she asked whether book tours by the justices undermined their case for banning camera coverage of arguments. In 2006, he flicked his hand under his chin, using a dismissive gesture he said was Sicilian, to show his disdain for a reporter's question.

Scientists Hunt Ways to Stall Alzheimer's Earlier

BY LAURAN NEERGAARD
Associated Press

WASHINGTON • Look for a fundamental shift in how scientists hunt ways to ward off the devastation of Alzheimer's disease — by testing possible therapies in people who don't yet show many symptoms, before too much of the brain is destroyed.

The most ambitious attempt: An international study announced Tuesday will track whether an experimental drug can stall the disease in people who appear healthy but are genetically destined to get a type of Alzheimer's that runs in the family. If so, it would be exciting evidence that maybe regular Alzheimer's is preventable too.

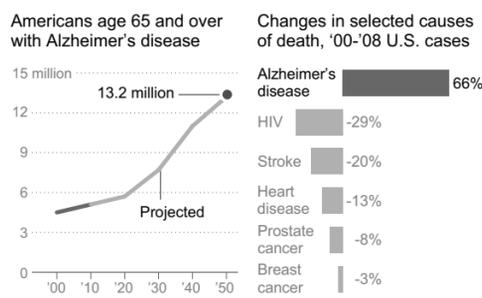

A second study will test whether a nasal spray that sends insulin to the brain helps people with very early memory problems, based on separate research linking diabetes to an increased risk of Alzheimer's.

The new focus emerges as the Obama administration adopts the first national strategy to fight the worsening Alzheimer's epidemic — a plan that sets the clock ticking toward finally having effective treatments by 2025.

"We are at an exceptional moment," with more important discoveries about Alzheimer's in the last few months than in recent years, Dr. Francis Collins, director of the National Institutes of Health, declared

Alzheimer's cases expected to rise

The Obama Administration will make an extra $50 million available for research, caregiver support and public awareness for Alzheimer's disease. The number of Americans with Alzheimer's and other forms of dementia is likely to grow as the baby boom generation ages and the proportion of the population over age 65 increases.

Tuesday.

But a meeting of the world's top Alzheimer's scientists this week made clear that meeting the 2025 deadline will require developing a mix of treatments to attack the different ways that Alzheimer's damages the brain — much like it can take a cocktail of drugs to treat high blood pressure or the AIDS virus.

Perhaps more importantly, it will require testing possible drugs before full-blown Alzheimer's sets in, when it may be too late to do much good. After all, Alzheimer's starts ravaging the brain at least a decade before memory problems appear. And doctors don't wait until the worst symptoms appear before treating heart disease, cancer or diabetes, noted Dr. Reisa Sperling of Harvard Medical School.

Nebraska

Kerrey easily won the Democratic nomination Tuesday against three lesser-known candidates.

Republicans need a net gain of four seats to win Senate control, and Democratic Sen. Ben Nelson's decision to retire left the GOP nearly certain of a pickup until Kerrey entered the race. However, Republicans remain confident they can beat the former Nebraska senator, governor and 1992 presidential candidate who served as a Navy SEAL in Vietnam and won the Medal of Honor.

Earlier in the race, much of the focus was on Bruning, the perceived front-runner, who has become well known as attorney general, and he has raised more than $3.5 million through the end of April.

"Nebraska seems to like underdogs, and I hope that continues through Tuesday," Fischer said Monday.

The other candidates repeatedly raised questions about how he became a multimillionaire while serving in relatively low-paying public office positions. Bruning has said he benefited by making what he called "passive investments" with friends who were financial managers.

Killer of 3 Tells AP: Nothing to Say to Survivor

BY JOHN CHRISTOFFERSEN
Associated Press

SOMERS, Conn. • The Connecticut killer who once called himself one of the most hated men in America said in a death row interview that he tries not to think about the murder of a suburban mother and her two daughters, suffers no nightmares and has nothing to say to the only survivor of the brutal 2007 attack.

Joshua Komisarjevsky told The Associated Press in his first interview since he was convicted that there isn't anything he could say to Dr. William Petit "that will restore the lives lost."

He also declined an opportunity to express remorse for the killings.

"I guess my reaction is not the reaction society expected," Komisarjevsky said.

Wearing a yellow prison jumpsuit, Komisarjevsky kept direct eye contact during the one-hour interview Monday, smiling at times as he spoke by telephone from behind a glass window at Northern Correctional Institution in Somers, Conn. He had the same short hair and facial stubble that he had during the trial, but the once-slender inmate has since put on 30 or 40 pounds, which he blamed on depression and lack of movement. He said he agreed to speak to a reporter out of curiosity.

By turns jovial and introspective, he made references to an afflicted conscience but said he fills his time in solitary confinement by drawing, watching television and reading and responding to hate mail as well as notes from supporters.

"Some days you're just overwhelmed by the isolation and the difficulties in communicating with loved ones, dealing with your own crisis of conscience," Komisarjevsky said.

Komisarjevsky, 31, was convicted last year in a crime that unsettled notions of suburban safety and featured prominently in Connecticut's death penalty debate.

He and his co-defendant, Steven Hayes, were convicted of killing Jennifer Hawke-Petit and her daughters. Hayes raped and strangled Hawke-Petit, while Komisarjevsky sexually assaulted her 11-year-old daughter, Michaela. Michaela and her 17-year-old sister, Hayley, were tied to their beds and died of smoke inhalation after the house was doused in gas and set on fire.

U.S. Retail Sales Cool After Warm-Weather Spree

WASHINGTON • Retail sales rose in April at the slowest pace of the year as Americans took a break from a shopping spree induced by unseasonably warm weather in prior months and an earlier Easter holiday.

The 0.1 percent gain followed a 0.7 percent increase in March, Commerce Department figures showed Tuesday in Washington. The April advance matched the median forecast in a Bloomberg News survey.

Sales of clothing declined, while purchases excluding cars, building materials and service stations — the category used to calculate gross domestic product — rose more than forecast.

THE DIGIT

$17.8 billion

Home Depot's first-quarter revenue rose • Home Depot, the largest U.S. home-improvement retailer, forecast that sales this year will slow from the first quarter because warm weather pulled forward purchases of plants and gardening equipment.

First-quarter revenue rose 5.9 percent to $17.8 billion, Atlanta-based Home Depot said Tuesday. That trailed analysts' $18 billion average estimate. Sales this year will advance 4.6 percent. Unusually warm temperatures accelerated sales of outdoor items, raising concern that second-quarter sales would slow. Profit this year will be $2.90 a share.

Shareholders Confront Subdued Dimon Over $2B Trading Loss

BY PALLAVI GOGOI
Associated Press

TAMPA, Fla. • The CEO of JPMorgan Chase offered a quick but blunt apology to shareholders Tuesday for a $2 billion trading loss that "should never have happened" and survived a push to strip him of the title of chairman of the board.

CEO Jamie Dimon, who in recent years has given expansive answers to questions about the bank's handling of foreclosures and loan modifications, was unusually subdued at the JPMorgan annual meeting.

He spent four minutes talking about the trading loss and steps the company has taken to address it, and just two more talking about accomplishments of the company over the past year.

The loss, disclosed Thursday, rattled investor confidence in the largest bank in the United States and in the ability of Wall Street to fight regulatory changes more than three years after the financial crisis.

Of the trade, an ill-timed bet on so-called credit derivatives, Dimon said: "This should never have happened. I can't justify it. Unfortunately, these mistakes are self-inflicted."

Speaking with reporters later, he added: "The buck always stops with me." Dimon won a non-binding shareholder endorsement of his pay package from last year, which totaled $23 million, according to an Associated Press analysis of regulatory filings.

Most of the shareholder ballots were cast in the weeks before Dimon revealed the trading loss. The pay package passed with 91 percent of the vote. The vote to strip him of the chairman's title won only 40 percent support.

Dimon was confronted at the meeting by shareholders upset about the trading loss. To some questions, he offered a simple, "OK, thank you."

The Rev. Seamus Finn, representing shareholders from the Catholic organization Missionary Oblates of Mary Immaculate, said that investors had heard Dimon apologize before for the foreclosure crisis and other problems.

"We heard the same refrain: We have learned from our mistakes. This will never be allowed to happen again," Finn said. "I can't help wondering if you are listening?"

Lisa Lindsley, director of capital strategies for an influential union of public employees that is also a major JPMorgan shareholder, said independent board leadership was in shareholders' best interest.

"An all-powerful CEO is his own boss," she said. "Looking for an infallible CEO is a fool's errand."

Twin Falls Sees Increase in Residential Construction Permits

Revenue from new homes, commercial projects outpaces 2011 mark.

BY STEVE KADEL

skadel@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • Residential construction in the city of Twin Falls continues to increase after the slowdown of a few years ago.

The latest figures from the Twin Falls Building Department show the number of single-family home construction permits jumped by 23 percent during the first four months of 2012 compared with the same period a year earlier. The estimated value of that work rose by 20 percent during the same time.

New commercial construction was strong, too, with the estimated value of work started from January through April of this year up 281 percent from the same four-month period in 2011.

The total value of commercial projects started from January to April was just more than $5 million, according to data from the city. That value was $1.3 million during those months the previous year.

The latest commercial construction figures don't include major new projects by Chobani or Glanbia, said Nicki Miller, administrative assistant for the Building Department. The city issued Chobani a commercial building permit, but the company is not included in the latest statistics because the city hasn't taken in revenues yet, she said.

"It looks like things are starting to come back a little bit," Miller said of the overall construction scene.

The city issued 74 permits for new single-family homes during the first four months of 2012 — 14 more than during the same period in 2011. Permits for residential remodeling or additions also increased, as did permits issued for plumbing projects. The city experienced a 6 percent increase in revenue from building, electrical, plumbing and mechanical permits in the four-month period of 2012 compared with last year.

FACEBOOK'S IPO

Poll: Half of Americans Call Facebook a Fad

BY TALI ARBEL
Associated Press

Half of Americans think Facebook is a passing fad, according to the results of a new Associated Press-CNBC poll. And, in the run-up to the social network's initial public offering of stock, half of Americans also say the social network's expected asking price is too high.

The company Mark Zuckerberg created as a Harvard student eight years ago is preparing for what looks to be the biggest Internet IPO ever. Expected later this week, Facebook's Wall Street debut could value the company at $100 billion, making it worth more than Disney, Ford and Kraft Foods.

That's testament to the impressive numbers Facebook has posted in its relatively brief history. More than 40 percent of American adults log in to the site — to share news, personal observations, photos and more — at least once a week. In all, some 900 million people around the world are users. Facebook's revenue grew from $777 million in 2009 to $3.7 billion last year. And in the first quarter of 2012 it was more than $1 billion.

Just a third of those surveyed think the company's expected value is appropriate, while 50 percent say it is too high. Those who invest in the stock market are more likely to see shares as overvalued, 58 percent said so. About 3 in 10 investors say the expected value of shares is fair. Facebook on Tuesday lifted the expected price for its shares to $34 to $38 apiece from $28 to $35 each.

But price worries won't necessarily stop would-be investors. Half the people surveyed say they think Facebook is a good bet, while 31 percent do not. The rest aren't sure. Americans who invest in stocks roughly agree, although investors who are more "active" — those who have changed their holdings in the past month — are more negative. Nearly 40 percent say Facebook would not be a good investment.

Screens outside the Grauman's Chinese Theatre on Hollywood Blvd. advertise for people to 'Become a Fan' of the Theatre on Facebook, as seen at the Los Angeles premiere of the film 'What to Expect When You're Expecting,' Monday, in Los Angeles. The social network's stock is expected to start trading on the Nasdaq stock exchange later this week after its initial public offering.

Lack of Trust in Facebook May Hold Back Ad Sales

BY PETER SVENSSON
Associated Press

NEW YORK • Facebook's reach is wide but not deep. Few users surveyed in an Associated Press-CNBC poll say they click on the site's ads or buy the virtual goods that make money for it.

More than 40 percent of American adults log in to the site — to share news, personal observations, photos and more — at least once a week. In all, some 900 million people around the world are users. But many of them don't have a very high opinion of Facebook or trust it to keep their information private.

If Facebook the company were a Facebook user, it would have a lot of virtual friends but not many real ones, the poll suggested.

Users' distrust limits the value of the site's ads. Advertisers want to target their messages to the people most likely to respond to them. And the more Facebook knows about us, the better it will be at tailoring those ads to our interests.

Yet in the poll of U.S. adults published Tuesday, only 13 percent said they trust Facebook "completely" or "a lot" when it comes to keeping their personal information private. A majority, or 59 percent, said they trust Facebook "only a little," or "not at all."

Users' desire for privacy and Facebook's need to target advertising aren't necessarily opposing interests. Facebook doesn't expose information about its users directly to advertisers. Instead, it effectively accepts missions to deliver ads to groups of people, like "moviegoers" or "people planning trips to Europe." It's up to Facebook to figure out how to find those people.

But the company doesn't seem to be connecting very well. In the poll, 83 percent of respondents said they "hardly ever" or "never" click on the ads Facebook serves up.

The ones who did click through were enough to yield the company $4.34 per user in advertising last year. That's up from $3.07 in 2009. So the company is getting better at making money from its user base, but it has a long way to go to fill out the market capitalization of nearly $100 billion implied in its IPO pricing.

Google, another online advertising company that walks a similar line between ad targeting and privacy, makes more than $30 per user, per year. People also like it more. In the AP-CNBC poll, 71 percent of respondents had a favorable opinion of Google, compared to 51 percent for Facebook.

GREEKS TO HOLD NEW ELECTION, MARKETS TANK

BY DEREK GATOPOULOS AND NICHOLAS PAPHITIS
Associated Press

ATHENS, Greece • Greece is headed for another month of political paralysis ahead of new elections in mid-June, after party leaders on Tuesday failed to reach an agreement to build a coalition government.

The protracted deadlock and the prospect of an anti-austerity party winning the new vote hammered Europe's markets on fears that the debt-crippled country could be forced out of the European single currency, triggering shockwaves throughout the 17-country eurozone.

"The country is unfortunately heading again to elections," Socialist party leader and former finance minister Evangelos Venizelos said after the talks under President Karolos Papoulias collapsed. "It is heading back to elections in a few days under very bad circumstances, because certain people coldly put their short-term party interests above the national interest."

Main European markets lost earlier gains, with the FTSE 100 index of leading shares shedding 0.6 percent, Germany's DAX down 1 percent and the CAC-40 in France 0.7 percent. Greek shares were clobbered further after days of heavy losses, with the Athens stock market initially diving 4.86 percent, to close 3.6 percent down.

The euro also fell, trading 0.3 percent lower at $1.2794.

Tuesday's meeting of five party leaders under Papoulias was a last-ditch effort to overcome the deadlock after a first election in May left no party with enough votes for a majority in parliament. Repeated attempts over nine days to cobble together a coalition government proved fruitless, as anti-austerity parties riding on a tide of popular discontent at protracted cutbacks failed to cooperate with mainstream pro-European politicians.

The political uncertainty has worried Greece's international creditors, who have extended the country billions of euros in rescue loans over the past two years. The election campaign was dominated by the debate over Greek's dismal financial state and the strict austerity measures taken in return for the bailout.

Overhaul Your Food Shopping, Cooking

TWIN FALLS • Naturopath Noreen Clark and podiatrist Dr. Craig Holman will teach a two-evening “Eat to Live” course for the College of Southern Idaho’s Community Education Center this month.

Students will learn about high-nutrition, low-calorie foods; ways to reduce the risk of heart disease, cancer, stroke and diabetes; and cooking skills based on a whole-food, plant-based approach to more healthy living.

Class will be 7-9 p.m. May 22 and 29 on CSI’s Twin Falls campus. Cost is $35 plus a $5 supply fee.

This Kimberly science class changes the way students view food — and potential careers.

KIMBERLY • Alyssa Stastny will never be able to look at cheese the same way again.

Stastny grimaced as her group’s queso fresco mixture, a white chunky liquid, splattered as it was poured over a cheesecloth.

After all, the recipe called for buttermilk and heated whole milk to be mixed with white vinegar. It’s not exactly a combination that sounds appetizing, but it’s a foundation for making the cheese. And as the ingredients heated and stood for 40 minutes until a curd formed, the mixture started to resemble bits of lard floating on vegetable oil — not the packaged products lining grocery store shelves.

Still, the lesson revealed something about the realities of food — and an attractive career field.

The cheesemaking process takes about 90 minutes from start to finish, but the Agriculture Food Science class at Kimberly High School had only 80 minutes on May 3.

Teacher Cody Porath assisted some groups by gently twisting globs of curd — a dairy product created by curdling milk using an enzyme — wrapped in cheesecloth, dispelling a milky substance called whey.

“Yes, food science has changed how I look at food forever,” Stastny said.

While she was not brave enough to sample her own product, Stastny enjoyed learning about the process.

“I think it’s better to have hands-on experience because I’m actually seeing how it’s made. It’s (a process) I wasn’t expecting. I had never heard of a junket before ... it’s an enzyme that makes the cheese clot.”

Three years ago, Kimberly High first offered the Agriculture Food Science class as an alternative to traditional home economics, which the school does not offer. Since its inception, the class has gone from 14 enrolled the first year to 46 students today.

Wanted: Food Scientists

The school’s food science class is among just a few of its kind in the state, Porath said.

The curriculum introduces students to the world of food production, a diverse industry that’s growing in Idaho and worldwide. Food scientists can work in a variety of positions that include vintners (winemakers), cheese makers, food safety experts, production developers, food chemists and meat specialists.

KIMBERLY • Chobani construction crews are missing out.

Just east of the yogurt manufacturing plant taking shape on Kimberly Road is a relatively undiscovered eatery offering filling fare. Open since September, Ray Jay’s occupies a clean and classy space in the small commercial development at Red Cap Corner.

Ray Jay’s hasn’t seen any surge of business from the Chobani site, despite a promotional delivery of free Philly cheesesteaks, restaurant co-owner Jamie Briggs said.

Well, all the better for you. Service is fast, and you’re likely to find Briggs and her husband, Randy, waiting the tables and cooking the burgers themselves.

Lighted by a wall of windows, the stone-and-tile interior relies on chic neutrals, interrupted only by a loyal red bulletin board for Kimberly Bulldog news. Tables outside have a strip of tidy landscaping to separate them from the parking lot.

At Jamie’s suggestion, I tried the most popular of Ray Jay’s eight burgers, the $7.95 California: a quarter-pound patty, bacon, cheddar and generous slices of avocado on a toasted bun. Tasty and satisfying.

The accompanying side salad was nondescript, but it came with a delicious housemade ranch dressing from the couple’s own recipe: buttermilk, mayo, cayenne, paprika and other ingredients that Jamie kept to herself.

There’s reason for her reticence: “We have people who come in and just want to buy a cupful of ranch,” she said.

Jamie wouldn’t disclose Ray Jay’s burger seasoning either, but she touts the restaurant’s use of never-frozen hamburger meat. “It makes all the difference.”

Also notable is Ray Jay’s use of local peppers and onions to pile on its Philly cheesesteaks; for $7 without a side, that’s a cheap way to get a lot of meat and vegetables.

Besides the burgers and five cheesesteak varieties, you’ll find a standard lineup of hot sandwiches. The Briggses dropped the portobello sandwich when they concluded it was confusing their meat-loving customers, but there’s still one surprise on this menu: a battered-veggie sampler of green beans, zucchini and dill pickle chips. Yes, the dills are battered and deep-fried, too.

“Today is the first time I tried them,” Jamie said Friday. “I don’t like them ... but there’s some people that just absolutely love them.”

TWIN FALLS • Since he was a boy, Shane Cook has wanted to open his own restaurant. At 37, he is seeing his dream come to pass.

“I’m putting a lot of time and money into this,” Cook said. “I’m trying to do it right.”

On May 11, Cook was at the century-old building — the former Paris Building east of the Orpheum Theatre — owned by Ken Fitzgerald. Cook was helping a crew remodel the 1,500-square-foot shop for a tentative May 25 opening.

Before long, Tim Stastny picked up the gun and, moving atop a scaffold pushed by Cook, spray-painted the overhanging air ducts. Cook pointed out the brown bricks of the building, which looked every bit of their 100 years, and the old wood that he plans to incorporate into parts of the remodeling.

he said.

Dinner in 35 Minutes: Chicken with Ginger, Orange

BY BONNIE S. BENWICK
The Washington Post

For those of you who haven't been keeping up with Olivia Newton-John, the Australian singer-actor has a whole lifestyle thing going on, including: a women's self-empowerment Web site called Liv.com; part-ownership of Gaia Retreat and Spa in Byron Bay, Australia; a skin care line; and a new cookbook called "Livwise: Easy Recipes for a Healthy, Happy Life" (Globe Pequot Press, April 2012).

Newton-John is a breast cancer survivor and has pledged that the proceeds from the latter will go toward the cancer and wellness center named for the singer in Melbourne, Australia.

Nutritionists, friends and chefs from Gaia contributed recipes as well. This one is probably not one of Newton-John's, as those titles begin with "Olivia's." Doesn't matter; she gets credit in my book. The stuffing is light, yet substantial enough to turn a single chicken breast half into a potential two-meal serving (depending on the depth of your appetite).

Serve with thin, steamed carrots and a salad.

Chicken With Ginger and Orange Stuffing

3 to 4 servings.

- 1 large navel orange
- 1-inch piece ginger root
- 1 scallion
- Leaves from 4 stems cilantro
- 1 small clove garlic
- Sea salt or kosher salt
- 2/3 cup fresh gluten-free or whole-wheat bread crumbs
- 1 large egg
- 3 boneless, skinless chicken breast halves (1 1/2 to 1 3/4 pounds total)
- Freshly ground black pepper
- 1 tablespoon olive oil

Preheat the oven to 400 degrees. Line a baking sheet with parchment paper.

As you prep the following ingredients, let them fall into, or place them in, a medium bowl: Finely grate half the zest of the orange to yield about 2 1/2 teaspoons, then cut the orange in half and squeeze its juice into the bowl (1/3 to 1/2 cup). Peel the ginger, then finely grate the flesh to yield 1/2 teaspoon. Trim the scallion, then cut the white and light-green parts crosswise into thin pieces. Finely chop the cilantro leaves. Crush the garlic with a little of the salt, using the flat side of a chef's knife to break the garlic down.

Add the bread crumbs and the yolk of the egg, mixing to incorporate and form a stuffing that barely holds together. (Reserve the egg white for another use, if desired.)

Trim any visible fat from the chicken breast halves; if chicken tenders are attached, trim off and reserve them for another use. Use paper towels to pat the chicken dry. Use a sharp knife to cut a horizontal slit into the thinner side of each breast half (at the center), to form a pocket for the stuffing. Divide the mixture evenly among the chicken breast halves, filling them so generously that each pocket does not close. If you have any filling left over, create 2 or 3 small mounds on the parchment paper.

Season the chicken breasts lightly all over with salt and pepper. Heat the oil in a large, ovenproof skillet over high heat, until the oil shimmers. Add the chicken to the skillet; cook undisturbed for 2 to 3 minutes so that it is lightly browned, then gently turn it over and cook for 2 minutes on the second side. Transfer the skillet to the oven; roast for about 15 minutes, so the chicken is cooked through and the stuffing looks slightly set.

For 4 servings, transfer the chicken to a cutting board and let it rest for 5 minutes before cutting crosswise into thick slices; divide among individual plates. Otherwise, place a stuffed chicken breast on each plate and serve warm.

Packaged Lunch Meat Carves Out a New Niche

BY MICHELLE LOCKE
For The Associated Press

Thin-sliced roasted turkey, prosciutto and soppressata no longer are the domain of the deli.

Food companies looking to capitalize on consumers' increasingly sophisticated tastes — and their need for speed at the grocer and at home — are carving out new directions in lunch meat with upscale options that are pre-sliced, prepackaged and ready to go right alongside the bologna.

They also are revamping the classics, offering new flavors and styles of basic deli meats, including better-for-you options like the new line of Oscar Mayer Selects.

"There has been a huge expansion of flavors," says Janet Riley, who has seen the trend as senior vice president for public affairs and member services at the Washington-based American Meat Institute — and as a mom. She was recently picking out ham for her son's lunch and was struck by "the smoked, the honey, Black Forest, the mesquite and all the other options."

Some prepackaged lunch meats now come in thicker slices, mirroring the choice at a traditional deli. Herbs and spices also are showing up in prepackaged products, boosting flavor and appeal. And there are the packages of sliced, dry-cured meats, such as soppressata and prosciutto, which used to be strictly deli items.

Meanwhile, producers have been cutting salt and removing artificial ingredients in response to customers' requests for a more natural product.

"There are consumers out there who are interested in products that have ingredients that are more familiar and recognizable," says Heather Buettner, senior director of new product development and innovation at Oscar Mayer.

The new Oscar Mayer Selects lunch meats follow last year's successful launch of Oscar Mayer Select Hot Dogs, a product that is among the tiny 0.5 percent of new products launched in the last decade to reach $100 million in their first year, according to data from Symphony IRI Group.

In addition to the hot dogs, new Selects products include five cold cuts and bacon. The company also announced that more than half of new products launched in 2012 will have no artificial preservatives. The company has a goal of reducing sodium by 20 percent across all products by the end of the year.

"This is important to consumers and therefore it's important to us," says Buettner.

The company already offers a Carving Board Meats line that are whole cuts roasted, sliced and packed to come closer to a homemade taste. That's been a hit, too, according to the company, with sales more than doubling to $58.6 million comparing 2011 to 2010.

The idea is to provide products that are closer to what someone might make at home, Buettner says. "With Carving Board, this is all about products that are as good as what you carve off your Thanksgiving turkey and just make for outstanding sandwiches any day of the year."

Food Science

The U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics predicts the employment of agricultural and food scientists will increase 10 percent from 2010 to 2020 — an increase equal to the average for all occupations. A demand for new food products and food safety measures is expected to drive job growth, and many scientists are likely to retire within the next 10 years, according to the bureau's findings.

There are often more jobs in food science than graduates to fill them, according to the School of Food Science at the University of Idaho and Washington State University.

"They've really put together a good food products program," Porath said of the 2008 merger between UI's former Department of Food Science and Toxicology and WSU's Department of Food Science and Human Nutrition.

Porath added that there are typically four jobs available for every graduate with a food science degree, and his class is a way of getting high school students to think about pursuing a career in food science.

"My dad is really pushing me to go into food science," student Conner Molyneux said, adding that he is considering architecture instead. "Often (cheese) is something you just pick up at the store. It's probably how people in big cities see crops."

Last year, Molyneux was a part of the four-member FFA team from Kimberly High who competed in the National FFA Food Science and Technology Career Development Event in Indianapolis. The team comprised of Molyneux, Stastny, Annie Fiala and Kourtney Keller took fifth overall.

Kimberly High has about 435 students and 111 of them are involved in FFA.

In 2010, another team from Kimberly took fourth place at the national event. Each year only one team of four students is selected from each state to compete at the national level. Kimberly High has represented Idaho in three of the past five years.

The competition is designed to prove basic knowledge of food science and test students using practical situations. Each team also participates in a project where they create a marketing plan for a product, which involves everything from food safety to sanitation.

"Food science is so broad ... the event exposes students to everything," Porath said.

Taste Test

As the final bell rang May 3, each lab group broke up the curds, adding salt to taste. A few brave students decided to sample their skills.

"It tastes like cheese, like string cheese," Molyneux assured his lab partners as some looked on in disgust.

In past classes, students have made leaven bread and mayonnaise. This year's class visited Cloverleaf Creamery in Buhl and Idaho Milk Products in Jerome. Each student has also earned food handler permits.

"It was awesome. I've never done it before," junior Landon League said of the cheese-making lab. League took the class because he is considering a career in culinary arts.

"I love food and food loves me," League said. "If you don't know (how ingredients are made), how are you going to know what you are working with? It's like the tools in the shop. You don't just jump in and use the tools before knowing what they are and what they do."

Make Your Own

How to make queso fresco; adapted from a Washington State University Cooperative Extension flier.

1. Sanitize all cheese-making utensils in a bleach-water solution (1 tablespoon bleach in 1 gallon of water).
2. Place one tablet of junket rennet (available at most supermarkets) into one cup of cold tap water. Stir until dissolved.

3. Mix 1/2 quart buttermilk with 1 quart whole, pasteurized milk and add 1 tablespoon of white vinegar; mix.

4. Heat to 90 degrees.

5. Remove from heat, add dissolved rennet, and mix for about two minutes.

6. Let mixture stand for 30 to 40 minutes until curd is firm.

7. Cut curd into 1-inch cubes and let stand for five minutes.

8. Heat curds and whey, without stirring, to 115 degrees; remove from heat and let stand for five minutes.

9. Slowly pour mix through cheesecloth (available in most fabric stores) in colander and allow to drain for 10 to 15 minutes.

10. Form curd into ball and gently twist the cheesecloth to squeeze out whey (excess squeezing leads to loss of product).

11. Break up curds into a bowl and add 3/4 teaspoons salt; blend well.

12. For dry cheese, squeeze cheesecloth again.

13. Consume as is or shape by pressing into a cheese mold.

14. Refrigerate and consume within one week.

Shop

Fitzgerald, who also was at the site May 11, had good things to say about what he saw happening.

"I think this is only the beginning," he said. "I think this will jump-start a lot of things downtown."

In his opinion, Fitzgerald said, at eateries that don't last long downtown the owners didn't invest much in their shops. They'll often move into a location just because it has a kitchen, instead of spending money to upgrade or remodel.

Cook, on the other hand, is doing things right. He's investing money and time to make his shop a successful one, Fitzgerald said, such as building his own kitchen.

Fitzgerald said he's visited a number of historical cities across the country and noticed that dining establishments, nightclubs and theaters attract crowds downtown, more than retail shops. He would like to see more eateries open downtown and one day wants to open a dance club in his building's basement.

Cook, who once managed a bagelry and worked for Cafe Rio in Twin Falls for a couple of years, said he's confident his previous customers will follow him downtown.

All of the sandwiches on his menu — some of them named after familiar local attractions such as the ham, bacon and Swiss cheese Auger Falls sandwich; the ham, pastrami, bacon and cheddar Balanced Rock; and the roasted turkey breast sandwich called the Perrine Bridge — will be made fresh daily and range from about $5 to $8. Cook will purchase most of the product locally — except for coffee beans from Salt Lake City, he said.

Cook plans to start with about five employees. He's worked most of his adult life in the food industry, he said, and

Honeycomb: What It Is and How to Use It

BY J.M. HIRSCH
Associated Press

It's time to think beyond the bear bottle.

Because honeycomb comes in way more forms than just plastic squirt bottles. My favorite? Honey in the comb, pure and simple.

And yes, the comb is totally safe to eat. People have been keeping bees — and eating the honeycomb — for several thousand years. But first, some honey 101. No, honey is not bee spit. But bee saliva does play a role.

When bees gather nectar from flowers, it is stored in a honey sac inside their bodies. During storage, the bee's saliva mixes with the nectar, which (shocker!) is made mostly from sugar. Enzymes in the saliva convert those sugars into honey.

The honeycomb comes into play when the bee gets back to the hive. The comb itself — a network of hexagonal cylinders — is made from the waxy secretions of worker bees. As these cylinders are filled with honey, they are capped with yet another layer of wax.

The bees do all this to create food for themselves. In fact, for every pound of honey gathered by people, the bees make and consume another eight.

Honey processors typically gather these wax combs, crush them and run them through a centrifuge to extract the liquid honey. But increasingly, you can find tubs of unbroken honeycomb at grocers and farmers markets. It's golden and waxy and sticky and the easiest way to extract it from the tub usually is a fork or spoon.

Honeycomb is totally worth seeking out. Kids love it. It looks cool. It tastes great. And you get to amaze the little ones with facts such as the distance a bee would fly to produce just one pound of honey (three times around the Earth).

But after you're done dazzling your kids with honey trivia, why bother with honeycomb when you could just squirt the liquid stuff from a plastic bear?

The answer is part textural, part versatility. Let's start with the latter.

Honeycomb can go places honey can't. While drizzling honey over a salad seems odd, topping a salad with crumbled goat cheese and hunks of honeycomb is a simply heavenly way to eat more vegetables.

Honeycomb also has a completely different texture than liquid honey. It's not like chewing on a candle. Rather, the wax gives the honey a pleasant body, transforming it from something merely absorbed by the other ingredients into something that stands on its own to contrast and enliven the rest of the dish.

Like liquid honey, honeycomb can be stored at room temperature for long periods. If you have a choice at the market, opt for darker colored honeycomb (and liquid honeys), which tend to have deeper flavors.

Ready to give it a try? For more ideas for using honeycomb, check out the Off the Beaten Aisle column over on Food Network: <http://bit.ly/JPXhCW>

Honeycomb and Brie English Muffin Pizzas

This recipe calls for just a touch of heat under the broiler. It's just enough to soften the brie and honeycomb, one of the most splendid food combinations. Start to finish: 15 minutes. Servings: 4.

- 1 tablespoon olive oil
- 1 medium red onion, thinly sliced
- 1 clove garlic, minced
- 1/2 teaspoon dried thyme
- Salt and ground black pepper
- 4 large whole-wheat English muffins
- 6 ounces brie, thinly sliced
- Honeycomb

Heat the oven to broil. In a medium skillet over medium-high, heat the olive oil. Add the onion, garlic and thyme, then saute for 5 minutes, or until the onion starts to get tender. Season with salt and pepper, then set aside. Split each English muffin in half and arrange cut side up on a baking sheet. Set under the broiler just long enough to lightly toast, about 1 minute.

Top each muffin half with a bit of brie, then spoon a bit of the onion mixture over each. Place under the broiler for another minute. Transfer the halves to serving plates, then top each with a spoonful of honeycomb. Serve immediately.

Bright ideas for growing your business

Biscuit recipes that don't call for buttermilk should be ignored.

You're Doing It Wrong: Biscuits

BY L.V. ANDERSON
Slate

Scan down a few paragraphs and you will see a recipe called "Biscuits." It calls for buttermilk, but it is not called "Buttermilk Biscuits." That's because to call it "Buttermilk Biscuits" would imply that there are other acceptable ways of making biscuits that do not involve buttermilk. There are not. If you're not going to use buttermilk, you should not make biscuits.

To be clear, biscuit recipes that don't call for buttermilk abound, with labels like "baking-powder biscuits" and "cream biscuits." Ignore these recipes. They inevitably result in disks that are shorter, drier and blander than buttermilk biscuits. You are literally better off popping open a can of Pillsbury Grands or stirring together Bisquick and milk than making baking-powder biscuits.

But there's no excuse to go the pre-packaged route, because buttermilk biscuits are nearly as easy and usually don't even require a trip to the grocery store. That's because the term "buttermilk" is less rigid than it sounds, at least when it comes to making biscuits: You can approximate a cup of buttermilk at home by mixing a cup of milk with a tablespoon of vinegar or lemon juice. You can even, if absolutely necessary, substitute plain yogurt for buttermilk — for the purposes of baking, it's roughly the same thing. What matters is that you use milk that has been acidified in some way: The acid activates the leavening power of baking soda to create soft, moist, pleasantly spongy biscuits.

You'll also need plenty of butter. Some swear by shortening because it results in a slightly flakier texture than butter. But shortening is flavorless, and its trans fats will probably hasten your death.

Apart from butter and buttermilk, the secret to great biscuits resides in technique. Don't overwork the dough. Stir it just until the liquid is incorporated, knead it just until it comes together, and try to avoid treating the scraps too roughly when you press them back together for the second rolling and cutting.

Speaking of rolling and cutting: The goal of biscuit-making is to maximize the fluffy insides, so don't roll the dough too thin — three-quarters of an inch is about right. Some say you should use a biscuit- or cookie-cutter with a sharp edge so you don't smush the edges of your uncooked biscuits, but I've been cutting biscuits with blunt-edged water glasses my whole life and have never had reason to complain. In this particular, follow your own heart.

Finally, when you place the uncooked biscuit rounds on the baking sheet, make sure they touch. Now is not the time to be giving your food space to breathe; the biscuits should be as tightly arranged as Fleet Foxes' harmonies. As they rise in the oven, their tops will brown and harden, but their abutting sides will remain soft, feathery, and white — just like the delicious insides.

Biscuits have a lifespan of a few hours at best, so, once they're out of the oven, eat them as soon as you can. This would be a difficult imperative if we were talking about baking-powder biscuits, but if you use buttermilk, you will find it no challenge at all to scarf them down right quick.

Biscuits

Yield: 15 to 18 biscuits.
Time: About 30 minutes.

- 2 1/2 cups all-purpose flour, plus more for kneading and rolling
- 3 1/2 teaspoons baking powder
- 1 tablespoon sugar
- 1 1/2 teaspoons salt

- 1/2 teaspoon baking soda
- 1/2 cup (1 stick) unsalted butter
- 1 1/4 cups buttermilk

Heat the oven to 450 degrees. Combine the flour, baking powder, sugar, salt, and baking soda in a large bowl. Add the butter and blend with a pastry cutter or your fingers until the mixture resembles coarse crumbs. Add the buttermilk and stir just until combined, then transfer the dough to a floured surface and knead 5 or 6 times.

With a rolling pin, roll out the dough until it's 3/4 inch thick. Cut into rounds with a biscuit cutter or glass and transfer to an ungreased baking sheet with the edges of the rounds touching. Gather up the dough scraps, roll them out, and repeat.

Bake until the biscuits are golden brown, 12 to 15 minutes. Serve hot or warm.

No Eggs? Give Your Hungry Family Cake Anyway

BY JULIE ROTHMAN
The Baltimore Sun

Ann Carter from Charleston, S.C., wrote in on behalf of her grandmother, who has lost a beloved recipe for what she called Panama Cake.

Her grandmother said she received the recipe from a fellow military family in the 1970s. She remembers that the cake was made with flour, sugar, shortening, raisins, nuts and spices, but did not call for any eggs.

David Hulteng from Crownsville, Md., saw Carter's request and thought that a recipe he had for Poorman's Cake sounded very much like what she was looking for. He said that he has had the recipe since the 1970s and has made it many times, receiving "rave reviews."

He said that it came from a monthly publication by the Lutheran Brotherhood Insurance Co. An introduction to the recipe in that publication said, "If you're fresh out of eggs and if your day's schedule looks full, Poorman's Cake is just the ticket for a hungry family."

This is a very easy recipe and makes a large cake that is wholesome and tasty, with or without a cream frosting. A note at the end of the recipe says it keeps well for shipment overseas if made in a coffee can and not frosted.

Poorman's Cake

Makes 12-16 servings.

- 2 cups sugar

- 1 cup shortening
- 2 cups water
- 2 cups raisins
- 2 teaspoons cinnamon
- 1/4 teaspoon ground cloves
- 1 teaspoon baking soda
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 3 cups flour
- 1 cup chopped walnuts (optional)

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Combine first four ingredients in a saucepan and bring almost to a boil. Simmer 15-20 minutes, until raisins are soft. Put aside until cool. Mix flour and spices and combine them with the thoroughly cooled raisin mixture. Pour into a greased and floured 13-by-9-by-2-inch pan. Bake for 35 to 40 minutes, until cake springs back at the touch.

Harriet Weixel

Feb. 5, 1927-April 19, 2012

CODY, Wyo. • Harriet Weixel, 85, of Cody, Wyo., died unexpectedly at home Thursday, April 19, 2012.

She was born on a farm near Cleveland, N.D., on Feb. 5, 1927, to George and Helen Robertson Williams. The Williams were a family of 10, and Harriet was the third child. She lived in Cleveland, N.D., for the first 23 years of her life. She was an active member and leader the Mount Pleasant and Pleasant Lassies 4-H clubs. On June 16, 1952, she married the love of her life, Elroy Weixel, who was in the Air Force stationed in Merced, Calif. When Elroy was deployed to Korea, Harriet served as a missionary for the Church of God in southern Japan from 1953 to 1954. She then attended business college in Portland, Ore., while Elroy attended college and became a minister. Upon graduation, she worked for the Oregon Fish and Game Department.

In 1959, she and her husband moved to Merced, Calif., and served together as the congregation's youth leaders. In 1961, they became youth leaders at a congregation in south San Francisco; Harriet also started to work for the Department of the Army. In 1968, she transferred to the Defense Language Institute on the Monterey Peninsula. In 1980, she was transferred to Fort Benjamin Harrison in Indianapolis, Ind., where she continued her career as a budget analyst until her retirement in 1989. Her husband, the Rev. Elroy Weixel, and she moved to Jerome, Idaho, to a Church of God. There, she worked for the city and also started her writing career. She wrote for the Twin Falls Times-News as its reporter.

Harriet and the Rev. Elroy went to Russia to teach the Bible in School 94 in the city of Chelyabinsk on the southwest corner of Siberia. While there, Harriet wrote a news story twice a month for publication in the Times-News. The governor of Idaho appointed her to a Jerome County commissioner's position, 1996 to 1997. In 2000, Harriet and Elroy moved to serve a congregation in Grand Rapids, Minn., where Harriet continued her reporting career for the Grand Rapids Herald-Review.

Then they served a congregation in Cody, Wyo., in 2008. There she wrote for the Cody Enterprise until March 2011. Harriet loved to serve people and always tried to find something encouraging to say to every person she met. She would get them to share something special about their lives. She believed every person has a story; she made them feel important and connected them with God.

Harriet is survived by her husband of 59 years, Pastor Elroy Weixel; two sisters, Kay (Norm) Aldinger of Jamestown, N.D., and Tiny (Alvin) Exner of Ypsilanti, N.D.; four brothers, Earnest (Mae) of Cleveland, N.D., Wilbert "Bill" of Gillette, Wyo., George P. (Lorraine) of Cleveland, N.D., and Roger (Jolana) of Chelsea, Okla.; and brother-in-law, Reinhold Weixel of San Bernardino, Calif. Harriet was preceded in death by her parents; two brothers, Almond Williams and James "Tuff"; one sister, Margaret Weixel; and two sisters-in-law, Delores (Headland) and Marge (Kinzle).

In lieu of flowers, please donate the Gideons or the Mountain View Church of God Improvement Fund in Cody, Wyo.

Maxime Joseph 'Max' Danos

Nov. 20, 1931-May 14, 2012

JEROME • Maxime Joseph "Max" Danos peacefully passed away at home Monday, May 14, 2012, at the age of 80 with his loving wife and family by his side.

He was born Nov. 20, 1931, in Lafourche Parish, La., to Maxime Paul Danos and Augustine Marie Danos. He had three brothers and four sisters. At the young age of 16, he joined the military, where he eventually met his first wife, Ruth Ann Shaw, in Washington State. He worked on the oil rigs with his brothers on the Gulf of Mexico and at Hanford Nuclear plant in Washington State. They finally settled on a farm and small dairy south of Filer on the Salmon Tract, where they raised their five children. They divorced in 1979.

He later married his loving wife, Leta Hager of Jerome, on Nov. 30, 1984. They have resided in Jerome since that time. Together they enjoyed many camping trips and mountain adventures; they enjoyed fishing together and spent many Friday nights dancing.

Maxime, known as Max or Uncle Jr. to most, loved his family very much. He was always ready for a good time and always made everyone laugh. He never ran out of a joke to tell or a feisty response to a conversation. He loved his Cajun roots in Louisiana and could never get enough crab or seafood to eat!!! His motto was, as they say in New Orleans, "Laissez les bon temps rouler," meaning "let the good times roll!"

Survivors include his wife of 27 years, Leta Hager Danos; sons, Pat (Christine) Danos and Dan (Kandra) Danos; his daughters, Linda, Laura and Mary; his stepchildren, Bryron (Elaine) Hager, Jim (Debbie) Hager and Darren Hager; 14 grandchildren; and 17 great-grandchildren; as well as many nieces and nephews, including his goddaughter, Gail Tamborella; his brothers, Wilman (Gertie) Danos and Wilbert Danos; and sister, Nelda (Danos) Muscarello. He was preceded in death by his parents; and siblings, Angele Cheramie, Anise Guidry, Viola Arceceaux and L.J. Danos.

A visitation will be held this evening, Wednesday, May 16, at Farnsworth Mortuary, 1343 S. Lincoln in Jerome, where family and friends may call from 6 to 8 p.m. A memorial service will be conducted at 11 a.m. Thursday, May 17, also at Farnsworth Mortuary, with the Rev. Dick Goetsch officiating.

A Salmon Dish with a Bit of Kick

BY STEPHANIE WITT
SEDGWICK

Special to The Washington Post

I'm not a fan of overly spicy food, but I do like a kick now and then. Here, that kick is provided by sweet chili sauce. It is used twice: first as a light glaze for the salmon, then as a flavoring agent in a sauce. Bok choy contributes color, texture and a slight note of bitterness, bringing balance to the dish. It's a beautiful combination of flavors and colors.

Buy fish fillets that are similar in size, either skin-on or skinless.

Sweet chili sauce is available in the Asian section of most supermarkets. The exact amount you'll need will vary based on the flavor of the brand you choose.

Orange-Chili Salmon With Baby Bok Choy

4 servings.

For the salmon:

Finely grated zest and freshly squeezed juice of 1 large orange (1 1/2 tablespoons zest, 1/3 to

1/2 cup juice)
1/4 teaspoon crushed red pepper flakes
1/8 teaspoon salt
2 teaspoons light brown sugar
Four 4-ounce salmon fillets, preferably center-cut
2 teaspoons olive oil
1 tablespoon sweet chili sauce

For the bok choy:

1 pound baby bok choy, well rinsed and still damp, cut crosswise into 1-inch pieces
1/2 cup no-salt-added or homemade chicken broth
Freshly squeezed juice of 1 large orange (1/3 to 1/2 cup)
2 teaspoons cornstarch
1 to 2 tablespoons sweet chili sauce

For the salmon: Combine the orange zest and juice, crushed red pepper flakes, salt and brown sugar in a shallow dish just large enough to hold the fillets, stirring until the salt and sugar have dissolved. Add the salmon, turning them to coat all over. Let sit at room temperature for 25 minutes, turning the fillets 2 or 3 times.

Preheat the oven to 325 degrees. Line a small, rimmed baking sheet or shallow dish with aluminum foil, then grease the foil with nonstick cooking oil spray.

Discard the marinade; use paper towels to lightly pat the salmon fillets dry.

Heat the oil in a medium or large nonstick skillet or saute pan over medium-high heat until the oil shimmers. Add the fillets (skin or skinned side up); cook for about 2 minutes, until the salmon is lightly browned, then carefully turn the fillets over and cook for 1 minute. Transfer to the prepared baking sheet. Brush with the sweet chili sauce. Bake for 5 to 8 minutes, until the fish is just cooked through; the time will vary according to the thickness of the fillets and your preferred degree of doneness.

For the bok choy: While the fish is in the oven, heat a large skillet or saute pan over medium heat. Add the damp bok choy and the broth. Cover and cook for 4 to 5 minutes, turning the bok choy a few times, until it wilts and is just tender.

Whisk together the orange juice and cornstarch to form a smooth slurry. Add to the skillet or saute pan, stirring until incorporated. As soon as the liquid has thickened to form a sauce, add 1 tablespoon of the chili sauce, stirring to incorporate. Taste, and add the remaining tablespoon of sweet chili sauce if needed.

Divide the bok choy among individual plates. Top each portion with the salmon. Serve immediately.

Wine Pairings to Toast the Legacy of Julia Child

BY MICHELLE LOCKE
For The Associated Press

Maybe it's in the way one cook browns meat, or another views dessert. Or it may be in the moments when a harried chef seeks perspective in the well-worn pages of "The Way to Cook?"

One thing's for certain, the late, great Julia Child remains a culinary lodestone in kitchens across America.

"She was one of our most influential teachers and was among the first Americans to bring the spotlight to traditional French cooking methods and show that food is something more than the sum of its parts," notes Thomas Keller, chef of the acclaimed The French Laundry and Per Se restaurants in the Napa Valley and New York.

To mark the century since Child's birth, we asked chefs and others in the food world to toast the moment by suggesting a wine pairing for a favorite Child recipe. What we got back were a lot of tasty contributions — and a flood of memories.

Gigot a la moutarde (herbal mustard coating for roast leg of lamb) and Chateaufort du Pape, Les Cedres, Paul Jaboulet Aine 2007, from Marc Murphy, chef/owner of Landmarc, Ditch Plains, N.Y., and judge on Food Network's "Chopped."

"My biggest influence was Julia Child's highly successful TV show and her ability to make even the most complicated dishes seem simple and effortless. Her passion for food was what I admired most. It really spoke to her audience and especially to myself as a French-influenced and inspired chef."

Salmon en croute (pastry wrapped salmon) with Chappellet Chenin Blanc, from Jan Birnbaum, chef, EPIC Roasthouse, San Francisco.

As a young cook, Birnbaum worked his way through "Mastering the Art of French Cooking" with some efforts more successful than others. One he remembers in particular was salmon en croute, a pastry-wrapped salmon, that was his first attempt at a simple butter crust.

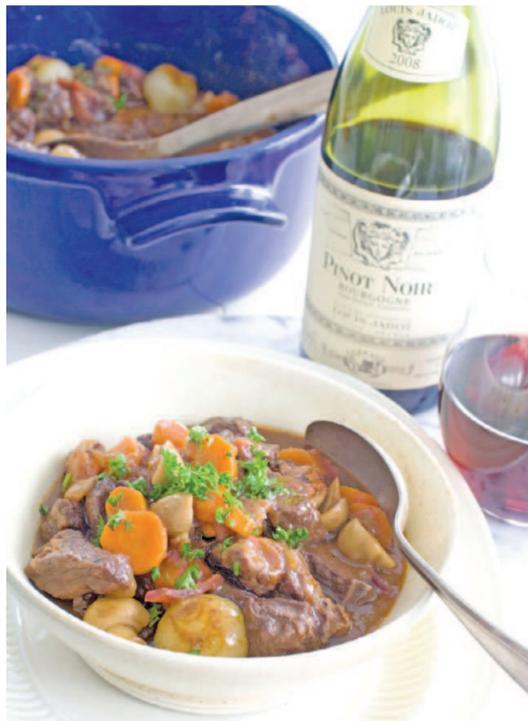

"I studied the cookbook until the pages were worn and sticky," he recalls. It turned out well, a golden, flaky crust encasing a succulent side of salmon steaming along with spinach and shallots. "It was as if Julia was there with me!"

A decade later in 1993, Birnbaum had the chance to meet Child in person when he worked with her on a segment of "Cooking with Master Chefs," and the accompanying video. Birnbaum also accompanied Child on a promotional tour for the series in California. People stood in long lines, many with stacks of eight or 10 books for her to sign. "When Julia walked into a room, it was clear that she was not only a celebrity, but a gem of a human being with a genuine, down-to-earth point of view. She was endlessly curious and taught me that any real cook is."

Roast duck with cracklings with Domaine Parent Premier Cru Les Epenots 2005, from Mike DeSimone and Jeff Jensen, authors of the recently published "The Fire Island Cookbook" and entertaining and lifestyle editors for Wine Enthusiast Magazine.

DeSimone and Jensen watched re-runs of Child's cooking show as children. They have a battered copy of "Julia Child's Menu Cookbook," which drove home the idea of "theme" dinners and eating meals over several courses, an influence that shines through in "The Fire Island Cookbook," a collection of summer dinner party menus. For a pairing, they picked a duck dish from the menu cookbook's birthday dinner chapter. "If you live in an apartment and make this dish and don't set off your own smoke alarm and the one in the hall, you are not trying hard enough!" they joke. Child recommends a pinot noir from Burgundy with the duck, they go further and recommend a particular pinot noir from Burgundy winemaker Anne Parent.

lais, from Ken Oringer, James Beard Award-winning chef with seven restaurants in the Boston area, including Clio.

"I grew up watching Julia Child and was lucky enough to get to know her well when I became a chef. She used to dine at Clio all the time and I have so many fond memories of her coming back to the kitchen to hang out. Back then in Boston, it was hard to find restaurants with bone marrow, foie gras and caviar, and she used to say she loved coming here because she could indulge in her favorites. I was invited to attend her 90th birthday party and they auctioned off items from her television set. I won the turkey baster — the one she was often seen using on camera! — and I still have it in my kitchen today."

Beef bourguignon with 2009 Domaine Mongeard-Mugneret Echezeaux Ville Vignes, from Jason Berthold, executive chef, RN74, San Francisco.

Berthold remembers watching Child's cooking shows on television as a child and young cook and remains impressed with her show on making beef bourguignon. "Browning meat, braising onions, cooking with wine, simmering stock and skimming fat, slow cooking, using beurre manie, etc. It is classic, important and serious."

Bouillabaisse with French rose, from E. Michael Reidt, executive chef, Area 31 Restaurant, Miami.

For Reidt, Child's writings and philosophy of cooking are things that "helped me keep things in perspective. When the whole modernist cuisine trend took off in the late '90s, it was Julia and Jacques Pepin who influenced me to stay the course, to stick with the basics I had studied and continue to focus on the product and its execution — to make sure no matter what the trend might be that my cooking always needed to have soul and substance."

Feuilletes aux poires (puff pastry with pastry cream and caramelized pears) with moscato d'Asti, from Katherine Thompson, executive pastry chef at L'Artusi and dell'anima restaurants, New York.

Thompson first made this dessert from Child's "The Way to Cook" as a 13-year-old and it's still her favorite. She brought a version of this to the L'Artusi menu about a year and a half ago, using crepes instead of puff pastry and gelato instead of whipped cream. She pairs it with a moscato d'Asti because the wine has hints of pear in it, and a little acidity and freshness that balances well with the rich caramel flavor of the dessert.

Can You Freeze Red Wine?

BY KATHLEEN PURVIS
McClatchy Newspapers

Question: Can I freeze red wine? I opened a bottle and only used 1 cup for a sauce, but I hate to waste the rest.

Answer: Wine purists may shriek, but yes, you can freeze wine. Some of the nuances will be lost, and you probably wouldn't want to freeze wine and then drink it. But for cooking, it should be fine.

The alcohol will keep it from freezing solid, so it may be more like wine slush. Freeze it in smaller amounts, like 1/2 to 1 cup or even in an ice cube tray. That's partly for convenience, so you can pull out what you need, but also minimizes the problem of the alcohol separating out, leaving some areas that are higher in alcohol and some that are lower.

On the subject of leftover wine, I came across a tip from the late, great food writer Sharon Tyler Herbst: Add extra wine to vinegar to make wine vinegar. Use up to 1 cup of wine to 1 quart of vinegar.

CSI's Ward Charged in Steroid Case

BY PATRICK SHELTRA
psheltra@magicvalley.com

Ward

TWIN FALLS • College of Southern Idaho baseball player William Robert "Billy-Bob" Ward was arrested and charged with three felony counts of delivery of a controlled substance, the culmination of a monthslong investigation by Idaho State Police into the alleged sale of anabolic steroids by the 21-year-old Ward to several of his Golden Eagles teammates.

As of Tuesday afternoon, Ward was being held in the Twin Falls County jail on $2,500 bond. His preliminary hearing is May 25.

Court records detail how police used a confidential informant, one who told detectives the names of four other baseball players who allegedly purchased steroids from Ward, whose supplier was located in his hometown of Las Vegas.

"For me, you hope any situation that happens, you can learn from it and hope to do better," CSI baseball coach Boomer Walker said. "This is an unfortunate one to have to do better (in)."

"We're still trying to figure out exactly what's going on," CSI Athletic Director Joel Bate said. "We're extremely disappointed with this turn of events and it has no place on our campus and we will do everything to get to the root of the problem."

Walker echoed his boss' sentiments when it came to Ward's status on the team.

Bruin Golfers Emerge on Top Again

BY DAVID BASHORE
dbashore@magicvalley.com

BLACKFOOT • Twin Falls made it harder than it needed to be. But the Bruins showed their mettle when things weren't going their way.

All five golfers grinded their way around Blackfoot Golf Course on Tuesday, not shooting as well as they did the day before but still plenty good enough to run away with their second consecutive team championship.

Twin Falls shot a 294 on the day and posted a 3-over 579 for the two-day tournament, 24 shots ahead of Middleton.

"We knew that winning was going to come from the back nine, if we could just push through," said Alec Perkins, who shot a 74. "A 17-stroke lead is a lot, and we knew if we made some mistakes we had a cushion."

Perkins led a determined charge for the Bruins, who shot three shots better than Middleton on the day.

Four golfers hovered between 2 and 5 over, backing up Kyle Miley, who was one of four golfers to shoot under par on the day, and one of two to do it on both days.

That was only good enough to get him in a three-way playoff for medalist honors. Lakeland sophomore Derek Bayley held his nerve better than Miley or Shelley freshman Tyler Fredrickson and won the playoff on the first hole.

"I had a long wait, and I knew even par had a chance (to land in the playoff)," said Bayley, who shot a 68 on Monday and slept on the lead. "When we got to the hole, the other two were saying how nervous they were, and I just wasn't that nervous. It's just golf."

Miley hit his tee shot right behind a tree, then jerked his second shot left and ultimately settled for third in the playoff.

He could have settled it in regulation but he three-putted for par on No. 14, after reaching the green in two.

"I just didn't hit the ball well or putt well today," said Miley. "I'm already looking forward to another chance to play against (Bayley) next year?"

Oyler's Hard Work Pays Off

BY STEPHEN MEYERS
smeyers@magicvalley.com

PRESTON • Last year, Filer golfer Jed Oyler was devastated the Wildcats didn't qualify for the state tournament.

So this season, he went to work.

He played countless hours of golf, worked with coach Filer coach Brian Dry and qualified last week individually for the Class 3A state golf tournament in Preston.

He made the most of his two days at the Preston Golf and Country Club, shooting a career-best 75 on Day 1 and bettering that score Tuesday with a 72 to finish in third place, District IV's highest finisher in the tournament.

"I guess I just feel accomplished," Oyler said, sitting in a patch of shade an hour after his round. "I was so devastated that we didn't make it to state last year, so this feels really good. Third place is pretty cool."

Oyler finished behind the Marsh Valley duo of Tanner Hunsaker and Dallin Davids, who shot two-day totals of 140 and 143, respectively.

Davids led after Day 1 with an even-par 71, with Hunsaker just a stroke behind, but Hunsaker ripped off a 68 Tuesday for his first state championship, taking the title away from last year's winner, Kade Crossland.

The Buhl sophomore struggled Tuesday, shooting a 76, going out of bounds on holes No. 10 and 14. He finished with a two-day total of 150 for sixth place.

"I missed a lot of the birdie putts I had out there today," Crossland said. "I tried to do my hardest and win it (again) but it just didn't work out this year. I felt more comfortable on the course today, but it just didn't happen. That's golf for you I guess."

WITHERING WAC A REVOLVING DOOR FOR DECADES

ASSOCIATED PRESS

SALT LAKE CITY • Mention the Western Athletic Conference to Hall of Fame coach LaVell Edwards, and he thinks back to Brigham Young's 1984 national championship with a junior quarterback named Robbie Bosco and a team that wasn't even ranked when the season started.

It's a high point that seems like ancient history now.

The football conference that once was so big it spanned four time zones and required quadrants to arrange its 16 teams, is withering. "I feel bad for the WAC," said the retired Edwards, an assistant at BYU when it and five other schools banded together in 1962 to form the conference. "That was a great conference. It had a lot of teams that were coming on the scene, getting better all the time."

This fall could very well be the league's last as a football entity as defections have decimated the WAC ranks.

Hawaii, Fresno State and Nevada jump to the Mountain West this fall. In 2013, Utah State and San Jose State also leave for the Mountain West, while Louisiana Tech heads to Conference USA.

Texas-San Antonio will play this fall in the WAC but decided to jump to Conference USA for 2013 as well.

Texas State also will play one season in the WAC before jumping to the Sun Belt in 2013.

That leaves two remaining football schools: Idaho and New Mexico State.

STATE GOLF NOTEBOOK

Bulldogs, HoChee Win Card Game

TIMES-NEWS

Matt HoChee's 73 on Day 2 of the 3A state tournament and Kimberly's third-place finish were both in doubt Tuesday afternoon at Preston Golf and Country Club.

During play at the state tournament each player is responsible for scoring one of their playing partners. A Kellogg player who was part of HoChee's foursome apparently gave HoChee a seven on the Par-3 No. 9, instead of a three.

Per Idaho High School Activities Association rules, after golfers complete their round, they meet with the tournament scoring manager, who double-checks each player's scorecard.

The dispute over HoChee's score started there, HoChee said.

"I told the guy I had a three on the hole and when we were going over our scores, the guy said that I had a three on that hole, but the scoring director said it looked like a seven and she scribbled a seven over it," HoChee said. "I was pretty mad, I was like, 'That's not my score at all.' To lose four strokes like that didn't feel good."

"I know I got a par on that hole because I hit a pretty good tee shot onto the green and two-putted," he said.

HoChee, with the assistance of Kimberly head coach Ryan Nesmith, addressed the scoring discrepancy with the Games Committee, which consists of a tournament rules official, an IHSAA representative and the host golf professional.

Nesmith was on the phone with Kimberly Athletics Director Brian Wilford when the Games Committee ruled to change HoChee's score on the hole from a seven to a three and his overall score Tuesday from a 77 to 73.

He finished fourth overall and Kimberly, at the time waiting for the other teams to get all its golfers scored, placed third.

"It feels really good that it was changed. I'm pretty happy now because of that," HoChee said. "I played pretty good today."

— Stephen Meyers

Super Seniors

Declo will graduate two seniors from its girls state championship team, winner Jacqueline Gibby and seventh-place finisher Ryley Payne.

"We peaked at the right time. All the girls played well both days and it starts with our seniors Jacqueline and Ryley and their work ethic," said Declo coach Dennie Smyer.

Payne saved her best for last, shooting a 99 in Tuesday's final round to break 100 for the first time in her life.

Declo also got season-best play from Chole Kidd (210) and Rachel Webb (208), who figure to be the team leaders next season.

"It's a good thing for all of us because none of us really have that certain thing that we've been good at. It's good to come together as a team and accomplish something together because none of us are like that amazing athlete."

Raft River junior Zach Zollinger shot a 4-over 76, two shots better than his first round, to finish runner-up behind Ririe's Tristan Coles, who won the tournament at 4-over 152.

"I'm pretty happy about it," Zollinger said. "I reached my expectations. My goal was top five and I got top two."

Declo's girls had the championship in the bag, leading by 49 strokes after the first day. But the Hornets didn't coast Tuesday, shooting three strokes better. Declo's 793 beat runner-up Nampa Christian by 95 strokes.

"It's super cool because

Jacqueline Gibby was the girls' medalist, even though her 91 on Tuesday was 10 strokes higher than her Monday round. With a huge lead, her mind started playing tricks on the back nine and she wound up winning by 14 strokes.

"On the back it started to get in my head and I started thinking too much," Gibby said.

"It's kind of hard to believe. I was thinking, Wow, because I knew I was doing OK."

Along with Declo's first team golf title in school history, Gibby is Declo's first-ever individual champ.

"Her work ethic is so good... It's just determination and grit," said Declo coach Dennie Smyer. "There are times we call off practice because of bad weather, and she goes. That's just how she is, and she expects the other girls to go, too. That's why they raised their level and that's why we're bringing home the blue Idaho today."

No Title, But Satisfaction Earned for Bruin Girls

dbashore@magicvalley.com

BLACKFOOT • As Katherine Reed drained a birdie putt on No. 18, her Twin Falls coaches and teammates burst into applause.

The championship dream was fun while it lasted. This was a chance to revel in success on her final high-school hole.

Sitting on a one-stroke lead overnight in the Class 4A golf championships at Blackfoot Golf Course, Bishop Kelly crushed Twin Falls' girls team championship aspirations to win the team crown by 14 shots over the Bruins.

Reed shot a final-round 79 to finish alone in third place, while teammate Sydney Lee finished fifth.

"That was a really neat moment on 18 when I sunk the putt. I enjoyed that," said Reed, who will golf at the College of Idaho next season. "It made finishing second easier to take that (the Bishop Kelly golfers) held their nerve. I didn't think they would sleep a wink last night with it being so close. Hats off to them for that. ... Second is a lot better than getting third last year."

Stephen Clements, kept up his strong play after a rough start on the front-9 Monday, to card a 72 and finish ninth, good enough for medalist honors.

The Bulldogs finished third with a team score of 641. Marsh Valley won its third consecutive 3A state title with 627 and Kellogg finished second at 635.

"It's awesome. We lost like three of our five (players) and they were our top three," Clements said. "We thought that this year might be a bit of a throw-away year, but it turned out pretty good. Third place is solid."

After getting into trouble with a triple bogey on No. 8 on Monday, Oyler played almost flawless Tuesday. He started the day with eight straight pars, bogeyed No. 9 and birdied the 176-yard Par 3

The Bruins came out shooting well like they did a day prior, but Bishop Kelly did one better when the Knights' fifth golfer, Jen Wilson, carded an 89. That allowed them to discard the 96 shot by another golfer, which helped them win comfortably.

Twin Falls didn't have the only nervous wait. Wood River senior Jennie Williams improved her Monday score by six shots, carding a second-round 84. But with a comparatively early tee time, the North Idaho College signee had an agonizing wait to see if her goals of finishing in the top 10 would be realized.

Eventually she got her wish, earning a ninth-place finish.

"I knew this was going to be my last high-school event, so I really just wanted to soak it in and have fun. That took a lot of the pressure off," said Williams, who competed in an ankle brace and walked around in a boot after, following an ankle injury last month. "I really wanted that top 10 so I could tell my college coaches that I finished in the top 10 of 51 girls, and show I'm ready to come in there hard right away."

13th. He hit into the water on the 423-yard 16th, but salvaged par after making his drop with a shot that landed a foot from the pin.

"I was really happy with that. It was a great recovery there," said Oyler, who played in the same group as Hunsaker. "I kind of came into the day playing for third because I knew those two (Hunsaker and Davids) were going to play good again. I've played with them before and they play pretty consistent."

Kaceelyn Pouttu of Kellogg ran away with the girls state title, shooting a 73 after a 72 on Day 1.

Filer golfer Lexi Meyerhoeffer rebounded from an off-day Monday to shoot an 89 and finished eighth.

Weiser won the team title with 755 points, Kellogg (759) finished second, Marsh Valley (812) was third and Snake River (816) placed fourth. Buhl finished seventh.

Today is Wednesday, May 16, the 137th day of 2012. There are 229 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight:
On May 16, 1868, the U.S. Senate failed by one vote to convict President Andrew Johnson as it took its first ballot on the eleven articles of impeachment against him.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:
In 1763, the English lexicographer, author and wit Samuel Johnson first met his future biographer, James Boswell.

In 1770, Marie Antoinette, age 14, married the future King Louis XVI of France, who was 15.

In 1866, Congress authorized minting of the first five-cent piece, also known as the "Shield nickel."

In 1910, the U.S. Bureau of Mines was established. (It ceased operations in 1996, its functions having been transferred to other agencies.)

In 1920, Joan of Arc was canonized by Pope Benedict XV.

In 1929, the first Academy Awards were presented. The movie "Wings" won "best production," while Emil Jannings and Janet Gaynor were named best actor and best actress.

In 1939, the government began its first food stamp program in Rochester, N.Y.

In 1948, CBS News correspondent George Polk, who'd been covering the Greek civil war between Communist and nationalist forces, was found slain in Solonica Harbor.

In 1955, American author and critic James Agee died in New York at age 45.

In 1961, Park Chung-hee seized power in South Korea in a military coup.

In 1975, Japanese climber Junko Tabei became the first woman to reach the summit of Mount Everest.

In 1992, the space shuttle Endeavour completed its maiden voyage with a safe landing in the California desert.

Ten years ago: Congressional Democrats demanded to be told what President George W. Bush knew about terrorist threats before Sept. 11 as the White House and its GOP allies defended the president for not disclosing intelligence that Osama bin Laden wanted to hijack U.S. airplanes. The remains of kidnapped Wall Street Journal reporter Daniel Pearl were unearthed in Pakistan.

Five years ago: Anti-war Democrats in the Senate failed in an attempt to cut off funds for the Iraq war. Britain's army reversed course and announced that Prince Harry would not be sent to Iraq with his regiment due to "specific threats" from insurgents. (The prince did end up serving in Afghanistan for 10 weeks, until word of his deployment got out.) British Prime Minister Tony Blair paid a farewell visit to President George W. Bush at the White House. Nicolas Sarkozy (sahr-koh-ZEE') took over from Jacques Chirac (zhahk shih-RAHK') as France's president.

One year ago: A judge in New York refused to release on bail the chief of the International Monetary Fund, Dominique Strauss-Kahn, who was accused of trying to rape a hotel maid. (The charges against Strauss-Kahn were later dropped.) The Vatican told bishops around the world it was important to cooperate with police in reporting priests who'd raped and molested children and asked them to develop guidelines for preventing sex abuse; however, victims groups immediately denounced the recommendations as "dangerously flawed." Endeavour blasted off on NASA's next-to-last shuttle flight commanded by Mark Kelly, husband of wounded Arizona Congresswoman Gabrielle Giffords.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE® Bobby Wolff

"Gold undiscovered (and all the better for being so)." — Horace

In this deal from the Blue Ribbon semifinals, David Berkowitz found himself in a very ambitious three-no-trump contract. His Precision one-club opening bid was overcalled with a natural spade, which kept his side out of the spade contract that they were surely destined to find without intervention. Larry Cohen doubled to show 5-8 high-card points, and then optimistically raised the one-no-trump rebid to game.

Even when you look at all four hands, it's hard to see a way to more than seven tricks. West led a fourth-best spade, which Berkowitz won in dummy with the six. The club 10 was ducked around to the ace, setting up Berkowitz's seventh trick. West persisted with spades, which Berkowitz won in dummy with the 10 to take a losing heart finesse. West got out with the heart jack, and now Berkowitz saw that he might be able to set up a heart for his eighth trick. And where there are eight ...

He won the heart ace, played off the club king (to remove West's exit card), cashed all the spades ending in dummy, and exited with a heart. West could take his good spade, but then had to lead a diamond away from his king. With the diamond queen scoring in hand, and the heart nine a winner in dummy, Berkowitz had his nine tricks — four spades, one club and two tricks in each red suit for plus 400 — almost all of the matchpoints.

ANSWER: It used to be that overcalls were limited in high cards to an opening bid and promised a good suit. Those days are gone; bidding anything else but one spade with this hand would be a severe distortion. At the one-level, overcall with either a good suit or a good hand whenever you can.

DEAR ABBY: Between juggling the joys and challenges of home life and staying productive at work, it's easy for women to make quick decisions now that could affect their health later on, or to miss early signs of medical problems altogether.

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

To help women take control of their health, the U.S. Food and Drug Administration's Office of Women's Health and the General Services Administration's Federal Citizen Information Center have created the free Healthy Women's Action Kit. It contains tips that can help women of every age. The topics include: buying contact lenses online, mammograms, hypertension, cholesterol, Pap tests, menopause and hormones, and more.

Abby, thank you for sharing this information kit with your readers, and for faithfully introducing all of us to ideas and information to help make our lives better.

—MARSHA HENDERSON, FDA ASSISTANT COMMISSIONER FOR WOMEN'S HEALTH

DEAR MARSHA: I'm glad to help get the word out to my readers during National Women's Health Week that the information is available for them at no cost.

Readers, among the topics Marsha didn't mention that are also included are a guide to help you quit smoking and facts about tattoos, osteoporosis, diabetes and health scams. The more we know, the better we can protect ourselves and the people we love.

The Healthy Women's Action Kits are easy to order. All you have to do is send your name and address to Healthy Women's Action Kit, Pueblo, CO 81009; go online to www.promotions.usa.gov/dearabby.html; or call (888) 8-PUEBLO (that's (888) 878-3256) weekdays 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. Eastern time. You can also read the publications online in PDF format, download them to your computer and print them. Don't wait, because supplies are limited.

DEAR ABBY: The man I'm in love with, "Butch," is an alcoholic. He refuses to get help and has become verbally abusive. He got a DUI and there's a warrant out for him because he didn't follow through on his court orders. I threw him out after he lost his job.

Butch is homeless now and has taken up with a homeless woman. When he's sober he's a totally different person, and that's the man I'm in love with. I'm devastated by his actions and I want him back.

I am so co-dependent I cry daily about this. I do go to meetings and I'm trying to move on, but I have no friends and don't know where to start to get a life. Butch's behavior is out of control, and it's only a matter of time before he winds up in jail. Could you please tell me what to do?

—LOST IN LOVE IN MONTANA

DEAR LOST IN LOVE: I'm sorry you're hurting, but pleased to know you are going to meetings. At some point they will help you accept that as much as you love the person Butch was, for the sake of your health and sanity you must "let go and let God." Your next step should be to give yourself less time to brood. Fill your non-working hours by volunteering — at a hospital, a library, a senior citizen's center. That's where you'll meet worthwhile, involved people and start building friendships with mentally healthy people. I promise you the more you put into it, the more you'll receive.

DEAR ABBY: Is there any medical reason why a man or woman needs to wear underwear?

—MICHAEL IN LADSON, S.C.
DEAR MICHAEL: There is no "medical" reason, but there is a sanitary reason, unless you are prepared to launder your trousers every time you wear them to prevent the accumulation of bodily secretions such as perspiration.

IF MAY 16 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Your intense ambitions get an opportunity to become a reality during the next four to six weeks. Life may offer you a chance to make permanent improvements to your health, your material security and your happiness. Since you work hard and deserve the best, don't be surprised if you receive a well-earned reward for your executive abilities. Even if you are in good shape, you could easily begin an exercise regimen this summer that propels you to peak condition. Avoid making major decisions or changes in August when you are easily fooled and your judgment is hampered. Have faith that everything you wish for, and that you deserve, will be handed to you on a silver platter by next spring.

HOROSCOPE
 Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A strategist uses more than muscle. You can uncover what your opponents fear most by observing the means they employ to intimidate you. You can be successful with dynamic executive decisions.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): The past can offer a pattern for the future. It is in your best interests to take care of existing obligations before taking on any new ones. If your way of doing things has brought success, repeat it.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You possess a knack for handling the devious details. Pay the bills or balance the checkbook. Spend time analyzing inner motives; be sure you don't want something just because someone else has it.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): There is no need to yield to pressure. Concentrate on work, career and reputation — even if an exciting new contact is in passionate pursuit. There will be plenty of time for amorous adventures in the future.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Put the pedal to the metal. This is a good time to pursue your financial goals by working strenuously rather than waiting for money to drop in your lap. You may earn or attain whatever you visualize.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Strike it big by taking small steps. Feed the piggy bank with spare change and carefully clip coupons. Over time, uncomplicated thriftiness will help you achieve the financial security you crave.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Praise and compliments are more empowering than criticism. Your high standards sometimes won't allow you to merely make casual comments, but when you see a job well done be sure to offer encouragement.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Let the passing fancies pass on by. Stick to those things that you know will engage your long-term passions. You may need to swat away distractions like flies to keep your mind on your work.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Hope springs eternal. Positive actions can balance the scales of justice in your favor. You might be able to heal a rift or solve a problem by asking for help from someone who has inside knowledge.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Valuable gems are forged under exceptional pressure. You are at your best when you maintain unrelenting mental focus on a fascinating subject. Opportunities could entail extra responsibilities.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You might be pressured to put money where your mouth is. Don't leak privileged information just to impress an attractive new romantic partner. Uncovering an ulterior motive might spoil a fantasy.

SUDOKU

Sudoku is a number-placing puzzle based on a 9x9 grid with several given numbers. The object is to place the numbers 1 to 9 in the empty squares so that each row, each column and each 3x3 box contains the same number only once. The difficulty level of the Conceptis Sudoku increases from Monday to Sunday.
