ELECTION RECAP

Turnout Varied Wildly Tuesday

BY MELISSA DAVLIN
mdavlin@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • The most important set of numbers in an election are the results.

The second? How many people showed up to determine those outcomes.

Local races, bond issues and closed primaries affected voter turnout throughout Idaho on Tuesday, with some counties seeing huge percentages and others recording abysmally low numbers.

Tim Hurst, chief deputy secretary of state, said official counts aren't in yet, but he estimated a statewide turnout of about 24 percent. That lines up with turnout in both Twin Falls and Jerome counties.

But some counties saw a flood of voters. Clark County, located in rural eastern Idaho, had a remarkable 303 of 435 registered voters show up to the polls.

That's nearly 70 percent — a big number that can partially be attributed to high-interest county races, said Clark County Clerk Velvet Killian.

In the Magic Valley, Cassia County saw nearly 50 percent of its registered voters cast their ballots. That matched a similarly high turnout in the 2010 primary.

Cassia County Clerk Joe Larsen attributed the turnout to high interest in local sheriff and county commission races. Add that to the hotly contested Senate race between incumbent Sen. Dean Cameron, R-Rupert, and newcomer Douglas Pickett in the newly formed legislative District 27, and voters had a lot of incentive to come to the polls, Larsen said.

Franklin and Bear Lake counties also had about 50 percent participation, Hurst said.

"The ones that we saw big turnouts in, there were local issues involved in those," he said.

But that wasn't the case everywhere.

Despite a contested sheriff's race, Blaine County had a turnout of about 13 percent, with some precincts reporting in the

OTTER EXPECTS GOP TO WEIGH PRIMARY AT STATE CONFAB

BOISE • Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter expects Republican leaders in June at the GOP convention in Twin Falls to debate the merits of the party's new closed primary election after Tuesday's record-low turnout.

Otter told The Associated Press Wednesday that discussion there will likely center on whether forcing voters to choose an affiliation, then disclosing it as a public record discouraged some from showing up at the polls.

Otter, who opposed the closed primary, believes it's the biggest reason why only

T.F. All-day Kindergarten Could Return, but at a Cost

Perrine Elementary seeks return of all-day class, but parents will have to chip in.

BY JULIE WOOTTON
jwootton@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • If parents want their child in an all-day kindergarten class next year at I.B. Perrine Elementary School, they'll have to pay for it.

The Twin Falls elementary school might offer one section of all-day kindergarten in the fall, but parents must pay $220 per month.

Principal Bill Brulotte said he sent out a flier last week to parents with incoming kindergartners about the proposal. At least 18 students must be signed up in order to offer an all-day kindergarten class.

He said Monday that parents of 12 or 13 incoming kindergartners have expressed interest.

"Some people are seeing if they can financially afford it or not," he said. A few scholarships will be available to help families with financial need.

It's the second time Brulotte has tried bringing back an all-day kindergarten class at Perrine Elementary. Last year, only three parents were interested — not enough to move forward with the proposal.

"This year, more parents are willing to pay," he said.

Brulotte said the goal is to let parents know before the end of the HAGERMAN • One Hagerman resident is tapping into conservation efforts to expand his duck-hunting opportunities.

John Shaw — a member of Ducks Unlimited — has allowed close to 30 acres of his Hagerman Wings Farm to be managed under a conservation easement.

"I love taking someone out duck hunting for the first time," Shaw said. "It's been a real passion for mine almost all my life."

Last November, Shaw approached the Southern Idaho Land Trust about converting a section of his 270-acre farm into an easement. Under the easement agreement, the property can't be commercially developed for the next 30 years. During that time, the property owner should protect the land's resources for the public's benefit.

The new easement is now a wetlands area for ducks and other types of fowl. And as owner of a duck-hunting club, Shaw made sure to build in duck blinds along the easement for additional hunting.

"I've got the water and Ducks Unlimited put the money up for the easement. It just all came together pretty easily," Shaw said. "It's something I've wanted to do for awhile."

Relay for Life Draws Participants from Across M.V.

BY STEVE KADEL
skadel@magicvalley.com

FILER • Amber Hilliard is ready for anything. It's her first year as team captain in the annual Relay for Life fundraiser, and the First Federal Savings Bank employee will be at Twin Falls County Fairgrounds throughout Friday night and Saturday morning.

"I'm going to stay all night," she said. "If someone on our team doesn't come, I'll take that spot. You need to have one team member on the track at all times."

Hilliard's team features 22 volunteers who will raise more than $6,000 for the American Cancer Society. The money comes from individual pledges and fundraisers such as a bake sale, auction and a big yard sale in the First Federal parking lot that Hilliard said was held "on a freezing cold Saturday."

single digits. Ada County, which had multiple contested legislative, county commission and sheriff's races, had 16.7 percent turnout.

Those low numbers might be due to disenfranchised voters unhappy with the newly closed Republican primary, which required voters to affiliate with the party before voting on their ballot. The Democratic primary remained open to all voters, regardless of affiliation.

Even in Clark County, Killian said many voters were unhappy with the new rule, and turnout may have been higher without it.

Races aside, both Larsen and Killian partially credited their counties' high numbers to politically active residents who are connected with their community.

"I think it shows the closeness of the Mini-Cass area," Larsen said.

in this year's Twin Falls County event, which has an overall goal of raising $220,000.

There is still time to take part. Anyone who wants to circle the fairgrounds track is welcome from Friday after the 5:45 p.m. opening ceremony until the final lap at 11:30 a.m. Saturday.

The luminary ceremony, always a highlight of Relay for Life, will be at 10 p.m. Friday. Other events include a hoola hoop dance competition at 11 p.m. Friday and a pajama parade at 6:30 a.m. Saturday. There will be music throughout the night, said event coordinator Jessica Laraway.

Lori Donaldson is the captain for Twin Stop's nine locations and has invited all 200 employees to take part. The team's fundraising has netted more than $5,000 at last check, she said, with more work under way until the event is over.

Twin Stop management gave its workers fundraising motivation by awarding prizes such as iPods to those bringing in the most money. But that wasn't the impetus volunteers felt in their heart, Donaldson said.

"We have lost employees and their family members to cancer," she said, adding that such personal experiences make participation in the Relay for Life especially meaningful.

Like Hilliard, Donaldson is anticipating a long night at the track filled with laughter, tears and lots of camaraderie.

"Everybody takes a time slot" to walk, Donaldson said. "I usually get what's left over."

Those who want to walk or simply attend and enjoy the entertainment are asked to leave pets at home. In addition, the event is tobacco- and alcohol-free.

Wendell Pool Management Replaced

BY BLAIR KOCH

For the Times-News

WENDELL • A public outcry didn't save Lisa Bailey's job as Wendell's pool manager.

At its May 9 meeting, the board of the Wendell Recreation District voted to ask Carolyn McRoberts of Wendell to become the swimming pool operations manager, and Jaci Lancaster of Bliss the swimming pool business manager. Both full-time positions are new.

The board is down to just two members — Chairwoman Lana Lamm and Anna Simmons — after it accepted the resignation of Scott Brown early in the meeting. Brown, who wasn't present, cited his job's heavy travel schedule for work as the reason for resigning.

Bailey, who had been the pool manager for two years, didn't attend the May 19 meeting. But she told the Times-News she was never officially fired.

The board hasn't publicly given a reason for not asking Bailey to return this summer, referring to it as a personnel matter.

Upon a request from Lancaster, former lifeguard Alyssa Nelson, 18, addressed the board regarding a private lifeguard party on July 1, 2011.

The party is described in minutes from a special meeting held by the board on Aug. 25. In an interview, Bailey confirmed that it occurred.

According to the meeting minutes, some of the lifeguards decided to "remove their swimsuits and proceed to swim." The minutes say alcohol might have been consumed at the party, though no one was cited for consumption.

Lifeguards at the party were interviewed by the recreation board in 2011. According to the meeting minutes, board members received different answers when asking where Bailey, the pool manager, was at the time — some lifeguards placed her in the pool at the time, while others said she was in the showers.

According to the minutes, Bailey said she was coming out of the restrooms and upon seeing two girls with their suit tops off, stopped the party immediately.

"The party was done. I talked with both of their parents and this issue with the board was supposed to be a done deal," she said in last week's interview.

At the May 9 meeting, Nelson told the board that four girls, not two as was claimed at the time, skinny-dipped, and said Bailey wasn't in the restroom when it happened but was swimming in the deep end of the pool.

Nelson, who didn't name the other three girls involved, said Bailey swam with them and when the girls got out of the pool undressed, Bailey took their picture.

"She was swimming with her camera," Nelson said.

After the meeting, Nelson told the Times-News she had "never told the truth about that night before."

Separately, Bailey said she is considering legal action.

"A police officer had access to my camera," Bailey said.

school year if the program will happen. The full-day class would be open to students in the Perrine Elementary attendance area and children of school district employees.

If the all-day kindergarten program becomes a reality, children would most likely have a different teacher during the morning and afternoon sessions.

Tuition money paid by parents would go toward paying for a kindergarten teacher's salaries and benefits.

Wiley Dobbs, superintendent of the Twin Falls School District, said he would consider all-day kindergarten classes at other schools if there's enough interest from parents in paying for it. He said it's a concern that not all families can afford to pay.

Twin Falls elementary schools don't offer all-day kindergarten this year, but did during past years — mostly for at-risk students.

The cost of running all-day kindergarten classes was covered by federal funding one year. During other years, parents paid a portion of the cost.

Dobbs said the district couldn't afford to keep the program this year due to state and federal funding reductions.

The Idaho State Department of Education gives school districts enough funding for half-day kindergarten classes. It's up to each district to decide whether to fund all-day programs.

"It would be better for us if the state would support it," Dobbs said.

ISDE spokeswoman Melissa McGrath said she doesn't have data on how many Idaho school districts rely on parent funding to provide full-day kindergarten programs. It's a local decision, she said.

In the Gem State, students aren't required to go to kindergarten.

But expectations for students are rising. Brulotte said "kids are working hard" in kindergarten.

"The difference is that what we teach kids in kindergarten is what we used to teach in first grade," he said.

about 23 percent of registered voters turned out. The figure won't be official until May 30, when voting-day registrations are factored in, but it will almost certainly fall short of the 25 percent turnout of 1988, said Secretary of State Ben Ysursa.

"I am really disappointed," Otter said, after meeting with Ysursa over preliminary numbers. "I can't help but to think, at least from my point of view, that there will be some discussion of the primary. It will be, 'What should we do? Should we make any changes?'"

In Ada County, Idaho's most-populous, saw only 16.7 percent of voters show up. Nez Perce County, which includes Lewiston, posted 13.5 percent turnout.

Canyon County west of Boise reported 25 percent turnout. That was on par with Twin Falls County and a bit better than Bonneville County, where election officials in eastern Idaho were reporting 23.6 percent.

Some conservative Republicans shuttered the GOP primary to all but registered voters in 2011 following a federal lawsuit, on grounds that requiring voters to publicly select a ballot would discourage Democrats and independent voters from "crossing ballot lines" to skew results toward candidates who didn't toe the GOP line.

Otter says the biggest complaint his office received in the election run-up came from those angry about violations of their privacy in the polling booth.

"I had to say, 'Wait a minute, I was the guy who wanted to keep it the way it was,'" Otter said. "You're shooting at the wrong target."

Jonathan Parker, Idaho GOP director, said Republican state convention delegates in Twin Falls starting June 21 will likely make a recommendation whether to open their 2014 primary or keep it restricted.

But it will only be a recommendation.

GOP central committee members, meeting likely in January 2013, would still have to agree to allow Democratic or unaffiliated voters to participate, something allowed by state law but only if party leaders agree.

"The whole purpose for closing the primary was not to purify the party, but was actually to uphold our constitutional right of association to allow Republican voters to select Republican candidates who will carry our banner forward in the November election," Parker said.

MAN ACCUSED OF SEVERELY INJURING ANOTHER IN MACHETE ATTACK

BY ALISON GENE SMITH
alismith@magicvalley.com

KIMBERLY • Twin Falls County sheriff's deputies say a California man used a machete to severely injure another man on Sunday.

Deputies were sent out to 3100 North Road and 3600 East Road, south of Kimberly, for a call about a disturbance and found a 52-year-old man with traumatic head and face injuries. After finding the man, deputies followed a trail of blood to a residence near the intersection.

Shortly prior to finding the victim, deputies responded to a vehicle crash at 4000 North Road and 3952 East Road. According to court documents, a white 2003 Ford F-150 involved in the crash was driven by Martin Hernandez-Vargas, 38, of Visalia, Calif.

"Vargas had left the scene of the accident and was attempting to evade law enforcement," the deputies' report stated.

Deputies believed the man was driving under the influence and took him to St.

Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center for a blood draw. He was later taken into custody for DUI and leaving the scene of an accident.

Court documents state a machete with a wooden handle that had blood and hair on the blade was found on the passenger floorboard of the truck, well within the reach of the driver.

When questioned about the incident, Vargas said he had recently moved into a small house on the property, where the victim lived in a trailer, according to the report. Vargas allegedly said the victim began making unwanted sexual advances after the two drank beer together, and he wanted to get away from the trailer.

Vargas said he did not remember if he hit or pushed the man on his way out of the trailer, court records state. He told deputies that when he got in the truck, he saw the victim outside with a knife.

Deputies said Vargas did not have any wounds or blood on his hands when they spoke with him, but did have a blood stain on his pants.

When a deputy visited the emergency room at St. Luke's, the victim was still unconscious and hospital personnel said he would not be able to talk for quite some time, the report stated.

According to the report, the man's injuries appeared to be caused by a sharp weapon, including an apparent broken jaw and a large cut. The deputy described the victim's face as being distorted.

A preliminary hearing for Vargas is scheduled for May 25.

Filer Examines Its Health Insurance

BY JOHN E. SWAYZE
For the Times-News

FILER • Changes in employee health care coverage has Filer City Council members reevaluating insurance policies.

The process began Tuesday evening, with the help of Balanced Rock Insurance agent Lori Bergsma.

One of the topics under consideration is a change in dependent coverage. Health care reform allows children to remain on a parent's insurance plan until they reach age 26. Filer needs to decide if it will continue paying for coverage up to that age, Bergsma said.

"The personnel policies need to reflect what we're actually doing," she said.

An insurance workshop to consider making policy changes is set for 5 p.m. May 29 in council chambers.

In other business, Larry Hall, director of Southern Idaho Rural Development, gave an update on Operation Facelift. Scheduled for June 11-22, the project's goal is attracting new business opportunities to Magic Valley communities by improving businesses' curb appeal with light carpentry or applying fresh paint to storefronts.

"We've got 10 cities participating this year," Hall said. "This is our second year and we've identified about eight different projects that could be done here in Filer. We could also use volunteers to help during those two weeks."

For more information, call the city at 326-5000.

City officials and the Filer Kiwanis Club are also preparing for the annual Filer Fun Days on June 22-24. Activities will include a parade, food vendors and games. The city recreation department is working on the possibility of a free swimming day and volleyball tournament at the city park.

Ghormley Rape Trial Begins

TIMES-NEWS

TWIN FALLS • A jury trial began Tuesday in the case of an alleged rape after a party in Twin Falls.

Daniel R. Ghormley, 25, of Buhl, pleaded not guilty on Feb. 8 to raping the woman. He was charged with the crime after Twin Falls police say forensic test results matched Ghormley's DNA to samples taken from his accuser the night of the alleged incident.

Police responded to St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center for a report of a sexual assault on May 22, 2011. The victim told police she had been raped while sleeping after a party and woke up with Ghormley on the bed beside her.

According to court documents, when the woman asked what happened, Ghormley told her she had a bad dream and he came to check on her.

The trial is expected to last through Friday.

“This should never have happened. I can't justify it. Unfortunately, these mistakes are self-inflicted.”

JPMorgan Chase CEO Jamie Dimon apologizing to shareholders for a $2 billion trading loss, an ill-timed bet on so-called credit derivatives

The President's 'Other Gospel'

It is one thing to talk about “fairness” when it comes to allowing gays and lesbians to marry; it is quite another to claim biblical authority for such relationships.

Scripture teaches that the marriage union between a man and woman is an illustration of how Christ and the church are one (Ephesians 5:32). It also teaches that since God made us, conceived of marriage and created sex to be enjoyed within the marital bond, He gets to set the rules and establish the boundaries for human behavior, not because He is a curmudgeon who wants to deny us pleasure, but because He knows what is best for us.

President Obama cited the “Golden Rule” about treating others as you would like to be treated, but in doing so he ignored the totality of Scripture and the Lord Himself, who alone gets to set the rules for human behavior.

The president says he is a “practicing Christian.” It is difficult to be one while simultaneously holding a low view of the Bible, which his position on several social issues might suggest.

The same Book that informs him about the Person he told Pastor Rick Warren in 2008 is his “Savior;” also speaks to the beginning of human life (he has done nothing to limit abortions), fornication between adults of the opposite sex (no word yet on his position on that subject), marriage, and adultery, which the Seventh Commandment and New Testament passages condemn.

I recently wrote that it is becoming increasingly difficult for people who believe the Bible is God's Word to impose their beliefs on those who disagree with them. But it is something altogether different for those who disagree to claim the Bible doesn't say what it says, in effect calling God a liar. President Obama apparently hopes there are sufficient numbers of biblical illiterates — and he could be right about this — that either won't notice his sleight of hand, or don't care.

Thousands of years of human history have sustained marriage between one man and one woman. Even human biology testifies to a natural order.

Genesis 2:24 says “...a man shall leave his father and mother and be joined to his wife. The two shall become one flesh.” Jesus, Whom President Obama likes to selectively quote when it suits his earthly political agenda, honored traditional marriage at a wedding feast in Cana (John 2:1). He also reaffirmed the Genesis passage in Matthew 19:5.

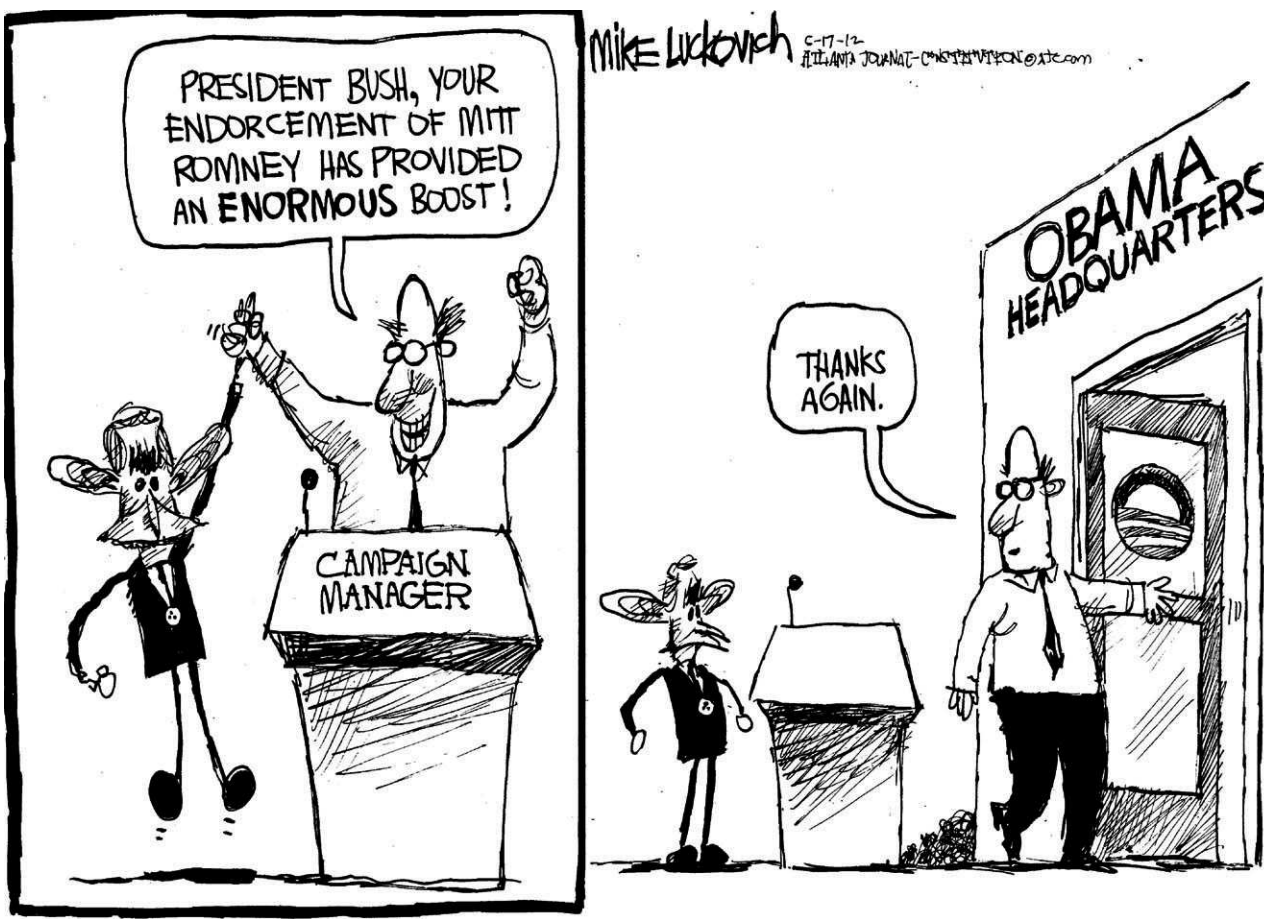

Paul, the Apostle of Jesus, wrote in Ephesians 5 about husbands and wives, male and female.

Liberal theologians have tried to modify, or even change, what is contained in the Bible and there are those in our time who are following their example with the issue of same-sex marriage. People are free to accept or reject what Scripture says. What they are not free to do is to claim it says something it does not. In modern times that's called “spin.” In an earlier time it was called heresy.

The Apostle John warns in Revelation 22:18-19 about the punishment awaiting anyone who adds to, or subtracts from Scripture. Deuteronomy 4:1-2 has a similar warning. The consequences aren't pretty. There are also warnings not to preach “another Gospel” (Galatians 1:8, 2 Corinthians 11:4, among others).

As he seeks to justify his position on same-sex marriage and other issues that are either questionable at best, or deny Scripture at worst, President Obama might be said to be preaching another gospel. This could possibly lead to a fissure in his solid support among African Americans, costing the president votes in November. It will also likely galvanize the culture warriors. Minorities mostly vote for Democrats, but they don't like their faith denied. That could cause some of them to stay home on Election Day, or even vote for Mitt Romney.

The negative reaction the president received from some of the African-American ministers he called last week after declaring his support for same-sex marriage should serve as a prophetic warning.

The Menace of Bipartisanship

Bipartisanship, the supposed scarcity of which so distresses the high-minded, actually is disastrously prevalent. Since 2001, it has produced No Child Left Behind, a counterproductive federal intrusion in primary and secondary education; the McCain-Feingold speech rationing law (the Bipartisan Campaign Reform Act); an unfunded prescription drug entitlement; troublemaking by Fannie Mae and Freddie Mac; government-directed capitalism from the Export-Import Bank; crony capitalism from energy subsidies; unseemly agriculture and transportation bills; continuous bailouts of an unreformed Postal Service; housing subsidies; subsidies for state and local governments; and many other bipartisan deeds, including most appropriations bills.

Now, with Europe's turmoil dramatizing the decade of entitlement cultures, and with American governments — federal, state and local — buckling beneath unsustainable entitlements, Congress is absent-mindedly creating a new entitlement for the already privileged. Concerning the “problem” of certain federal student loans, the two parties pretend to be at daggers drawn, skirmishing about how to “pay for” the “solution.” But a bipartisan consensus is congealing: Certain student borrowers — and eventually all student borrowers, because, well, why not? — should be entitled to loans at a subsidized 3.4 percent interest rate forever.

In 2006, Democrats, trying to capture control of Congress by pandering to students and their parents, proposed cutting in half the statutory 6.8 percent rate on some federal student loans. Holding Congress in 2007, and with no discernible resistance from the compassionately conservative Bush administration, Democrats disguised the full-decade cost of this — $60 billion — by pretending the subsidy, which now costs $6 billion a year, would expire in five years.

The five years are up July 1 and of course the 3.4 percent rate will be extended. Barack Obama supports this. So does Mitt Romney, while campaigning against a “government-centered society.” What would we do without bipartisanship?

The low 6.8 percent rate — private loans for students cost about 12 percent — was itself the result of a federal subsidy. And students have no collateral that can be repossessed in case they default, which 23 percent of those receiving the loans in question do. The maximum loan for third- and fourth-year students is $5,500 a year. The payment difference between 3.4 percent and 6.8 percent is less than $10 a month, so the “problem” involves less than 30 cents a day.

The 3.4 percent rate applies only to one category of federal loans, but because the Obama administration has essentially socialized the student loan business, federal loans are 90 percent of student borrowing and this “temporary” rate probably will eventually be made permanent for all federal student loans.

Unsurprisingly, Obama has used this loan issue as an occasion to talk about himself, remembering the “mountain of debt” he and Michelle had when, armed with four Ivy League degrees (he from Columbia, she from Princeton, both from Harvard law), they graduated into the American elite. The Atlantic's Conor Friedersdorf notes that if Washington is feeling flush enough to spend another $60 billion on education in a decade, it could find more deserving people to subsidize than a privileged minority of college students who are acquiring credentials strongly correlated with higher-than-average future earnings.

The average annual income of high school graduates with no college is $41,288; for college graduates with just a bachelor's degree it is $71,552. So the one-year difference ($30,264) is more than the average total indebtedness of the two-thirds of students who borrow ($25,250). Taxpayers, most of whom are not college graduates (the unemployment rate for persons with no college: 7.9 percent), will pay $6 billion a year to make it slightly easier for some fortunate students to acquire college degrees (the unemployment rate for college graduates: 4 percent).

Between now and July, the two parties will pretend that it is a matter of high principle how the government should pretend to “pay for” the $6 billion while borrowing $1 trillion this year. But bipartisanship will have been served by putting another entitlement on a path to immortality.

Campaigning recently at Bradley University in Peoria, Romney warned students about their burden from the national debt, but when he took questions, the first questioner had something else on her peculiar mind: “So you're all for like ‘yay freedom and all this stuff and yay like pursuit of happiness.’ You know what would make me happy? Free birth control.” While awaiting that eventual entitlement, perhaps she can land a subsidized loan so she can inexpensively continue to hone her interesting intellect.

Readers at Magicvalley.com responded to “Letter to the Editor: T.F. Council Should Say ‘No’ to Development”:

Andre Leonard: “Lacy, I think most Twin Falls residents would agree with you on this development issue. It's already a little like Mission Impossible to navigate on Blue Lakes.

“I suppose if more voters packed the next Council meeting and asked to speak for the allotted 2 minutes it may have an impact. There are 6 council members plus the Mayor. “Last time this issue came up, only Councilwoman Rebecca Mills-Sojka, voted against it.”

In response to the story, “Garbage Company Sues Heyburn over Commercial Contract,” one online reader wrote:

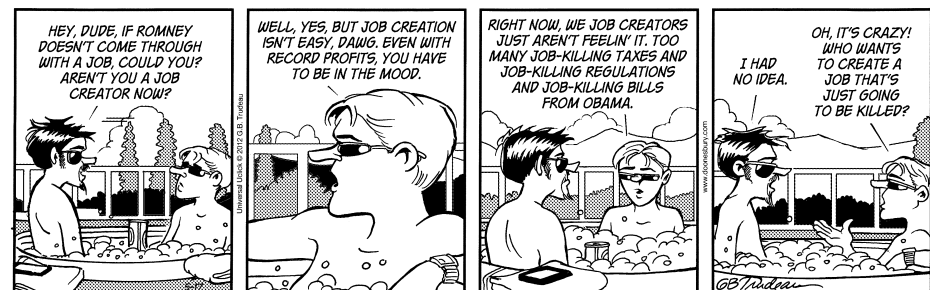

Warren Yadon: “It sounds to me and this is just my personal opinion, but to take a local company that employs 28 LOCAL individuals and kick them out after 14 years of service in order to give the bid to an out of town company based out of Texas with one local employee and pay an additional 21% more than the local company's bid.....to me it sounds like both bad advice from their legal staff and makes you wonder who is receiving what under the table.”

The online debate continues in response to “Letter to the Editor: Abortion Industry Wants Women to Remain Uninformed”:

magicvalleyresident: “I agree with Jim Bob, letting and forcing are two completely different things. “Ultrasound is unbiased science that delivers unbiased information. With that knowledge, a woman is empowered. So much so in fact, that she might exercise her freedom of choice and choose to terminate her business relationship with that doctor.” Tell me Julie Lynde, where is the woman's freedom of choice in the Ultrasound Bill?”

IDAHO BRIEFS

Suspect Dies in Nampa Standoff

NAMPA • Police in Nampa say a man is dead after pointing a gun at officers, leading at least one of them to shoot at him.

Police Chief LeRoy Forsman officers responding to a noise complaint at a Nampa apartment at 3:45 a.m. Wednesday found a man with a gun. The man said something the officers found threatening, so they backed down the hallway.

Forsman says the man pointed a gun at the officers and at least one of the three fired at the man.

The man locked himself in his apartment. He was found dead around 7 a.m.

An autopsy will determine the cause of death. His name has not been released.

The shooting is being investigated by the Canyon County Critical Incident Task Force.

House Race Closer than Expected

BOISE • Democratic U.S. House candidate Jimmy Farris is the winner of the Democratic nomination in Idaho's 1st Congressional District.

The former NFL player had a tougher-than-expected primary fight with a rival whose highest-profile campaign appearance was with a state judge.

Cynthia Clinkingbeard's run for Congress was largely dismissed after her March 16 assault arrest, where she was accused of threatening a Boise office-supply store's employees with a handgun.

Unofficial results posted by the Idaho Secretary of State show Farris winning with 53.1 percent of the vote to 46.9 percent for Clinkingbeard.

Farris declined to debate Clinkingbeard, saying he didn't feel it was appropriate given her struggle with mental illness.

Clinkingbeard called her arrest "a fly in the ointment" but refused to quit the race.

Farris faces U.S. Rep. Raul Labrador in November.

Idaho Gets Slice of Skechers Claims Pact

BOISE • The claims about Skechers seemed amazing: The shoes with the funny rocker soles would tone up your buttocks and help fight cellulite.

But they turned out to be sketchy, and Idaho residents who bought the shoes will be able to get a refund, thanks to the state's share of the $45 million legal settlement.

Idaho residents who purchased Shape-Ups, Tone-Ups or Skechers Resistance Runner shoes may seek payment by going to www.ftc.gov.

Idaho's slice isn't much — $76,152 — but it may be enough to get started on a gym membership.

Toddler's Cries Located Fleeing Driver

SANDPOINT • Authorities say a northern Idaho driver fled the scene of the accident on foot while carrying his 2-year-old daughter and was arrested after deputies followed the sound of the toddler's cries.

Bail was set Monday at $10,000 for 22-year-old Stephen Paul Hindsley.

Jail records show Hindsley remained held late Tuesday in Bonner County, where he is charged with driving under the influence and leaving the scene of an injury crash.

The Bonner County Daily Bee reports Hindsley crashed his truck Friday on a rural Sandpoint road and fled on foot, leaving behind a 16-year-old injured passenger. Hindsley told deputies he lost control of the truck after he was sideswiped by another vehicle.

Tamarack Suitor Faces New Charges

BOISE • The U.S. Department of Labor has filed a complaint accusing a former suitor of the Tamarack ski resort of violating federal retirement security laws during his failed bid to buy the property.

Agency lawyers filed the complaint in federal court in Boise Wednesday against Matthew Hutcheson of Eagle.

Hutcheson is already defending himself in federal court on 31 criminal counts, including allegations he diverted $5 million from retirement funds he was appointed to oversee.

Now, The Idaho Statesman reports that Labor Department officials say Hutcheson's misuse of the cash has left pension plans without enough money to pay benefits to participants.

Man Indicted in 2010 Idaho Bank Robbery

BOISE • A federal grand jury has indicted an Oregon man for his alleged role in a northern Idaho bank robbery two years ago.

Prosecutors say 31-year-old Bradley Monical, of Bend, Ore., was indicted Tuesday for robbing a Wells Fargo bank in Coeur d'Alene on August 27, 2010.

Monical faces up to 20 years in prison and fines up to $250,000.

Wildlife Group Sues for Details on Bat Disease

HELENA, Mont. • A wildlife advocacy group is suing the U.S. Forest Service for the release of documents that discuss the agency's plans to keep a disease that has already killed millions of bats in the U.S. and Canada from spreading to the Northern Rocky Mountains.

The Center For Biological Diversity filed its lawsuit Wednesday after the Forest Service withheld 13 pages of records from the advocacy group's Freedom of Information Act request.

Center spokeswoman Mollie Matteson says the documents may explain why the agency has not taken any action to prevent the spread of white-nose syndrome to Montana, Idaho and parts of Washington, North Dakota and South Dakota.

Agreement in Idaho Prison Lawsuit Could Cost $1.6M

BY REBECCA BOONE Associated Press

BOISE • Lawmakers will have to approve more than $1.6 million in staffing increases and other costs for the Idaho Department of Correction under an agreement designed to bring a decades-old lawsuit over conditions at a Boise-area prison to an end.

Idaho State Correctional Institution inmates and state officials signed the agreement Tuesday. It requires more nurses and other medical staffers at the prison, as well as improvements to the prison pharmacy and increased oversight.

The estimated cost is $1.63 million, according to Department of Correction figures. Department Director Brent Reinke said Wednesday he believes the Legislature will approve the budget addition.

"I think they're going to be quite supportive once we explain to them why it's important and what we're trying to accomplish in this settlement," he said.

The money will come out of taxpayers' pockets. While the department is insured by the state's insurer, Risk Management, costs from this type of court action aren't covered.

The lawsuit began in 1981 when inmates at the Idaho State Correctional Institution sued, alleging they were subject to violence and rape by fellow inmates, denied adequate medical care and forced to deal with extreme overcrowding. Over the next three decades they won several rulings designed to improve conditions, but the medical care has remained a contentious part of the lawsuit.

Last year, U.S. District Judge B. Lynn Winmill appointed a correctional health care expert to review the prison's medical care report back his findings.

Dr. Marc Stern told the court he found multiple problems, including nursing mistakes that likely resulted in the deaths of some inmates; overcrowding at the pharmacy site where some inmates pick up their daily medications; and terminal inmates sometimes being denied meals and left lying in soiled linens.

But the Correction Department and its medical contractor, the Brentwood, Tenn.-based Corizon, countered that Stern's report was inaccurate and contended it misrepresented the level of care at the facility.

Still, the department agreed to make several changes in subsequent settlement talks carried out with the help of a visiting federal judge. Both Corizon and the department will add medical staffers and other employees under the deal — Corizon is expected to add the equivalent of more than 10 fulltime positions and the agency is expected to add roughly 12 full-time positions. The cost of the new Corizon employees will be passed on to the state through the contract and is included in the $1.6 million estimate.

Jason Prince with the firm Stoel Rives is one of the attorneys representing the inmates. He said the prisoners who have been directly involved in the mediation process are satisfied with the deal.

Custody Fight over Tenn. Boy Continues

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) • The Idaho mother of a 6-year-old boy has waged a court battle for more than 4 1/2 years to wrest custody of her son away from an East Tennessee man who is not related to the child by blood, marriage or adoption but has raised him since infancy.

"Why don't I have my son back?" asked the child's mother, Kelly MacCord, a 33-year-old mother of four who lives in the rural town of Kamiah, Idaho.

How the red-haired boy named Ayden, who just graduated from kindergarten, wound up with the former soldier named Jon McMillan is a matter of dispute.

MacCord claims the Maryville man took the child shortly after his birth in Texas. McMillan, who has raised the boy as his own, says the mother gave the child to him and his wife, but changed her mind when the boy was 15 months old. He says if she prevails, Ayden will be wrenched from the only home he's ever known.

"He's my son," said McMillan, a 31-year-old Iraq war veteran. "He's my pride and joy. He's the reason why I get up every day."

A final decision may be nowhere in sight despite a recent appellate court opinion.

Anger, Drama at Ratko Mladic's Genocide Trial

BY MIKE CORDER
Associated Press

THE HAGUE, Netherlands • He's no longer the swaggering general who held Sarajevo "in the palm of his hand" during Bosnia's 1992-95 war. Yet as his long-awaited genocide trial began Wednesday, Ratko Mladic still managed to reopen old wounds with the flick of his hand.

Hobbled by strokes and wearing a business suit instead of combat fatigues, the frail, 70-year-old defendant had an angry exchange of hand gestures with the families of massacre victims in the public gallery, separated by the bulletproof glass in the courtroom.

"Vulture!" said one woman in the gallery.

Watching the war crimes trial on television in Bosnia, Mevlija Malic added: "Not even an animal would behave like that!"

U.S. AGENTS ON DEADLY HONDURAN MILITARY OPERATION

BY MARTHA MENDOZA
Associated Press

U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration officials said Wednesday that their agents were working with Honduran military forces aboard a helicopter during an anti-drug operation in which several people were reportedly slain.

Human rights organizations and Honduran news media say at least four people were killed and several more were wounded when forces aboard the helicopter fired on a boat Friday night in eastern Honduras.

"We were there in a support role, working with our counterparts," DEA spokeswoman Dawn Dearden said in Washington.

U.S. government officials, speaking on condition of anonymity because their statements had not been authorized, said Honduran law enforcement did not initiate the shooting, but rather returned fire after being attacked. The officials said the DEA agents did not fire.

When asked about the shooting, U.S. Embassy official Matthias Mitman in Tegucigalpa provided a written statement saying that "the U.S. assisted Honduran forces with logistical support in this operation" as part of efforts to fight narcotics trafficking.

The shooting took place on the Patuca River in northeastern Honduras in a region known as Gracias a Dios. National newspapers in Honduras quoted local officials as saying the victims were diving for lobster and shellfish.

The State Department says 79 percent of all cocaine smuggling flights leaving South America first land in Honduras, and the U.S. has been working with the Honduran military to stop the drug dealers.

The DEA has a Foreign-deployed Advisory Support Team based in Honduras, one of five in the region, according to congressional testimony. By the end of 2011, 42 Honduran law enforcement agents had been vetted to work with the DEA, according to State Department reports.

Revolution on Hold?

The revolutionaries who paved the way for Egypt's presidential vote now find they lack a candidate.

BY MAGGIE MICHAEL
Associated Press

CAIRO • A black smoke covered Cairo's Tahrir Square. Around a dozen protesters who had been holding a weeklong sit-in demanding an end to military rule had come to the conclusion their gathering was useless. So over the weekend, they splashed gas on their tents and banners, burned them to ashes and left.

Last year, Tahrir was the icon on the revolution, where hundreds of thousands massed daily in the uprising that ousted longtime authoritarian ruler Hosni Mubarak in the name of democracy. Now, it has seen better days, dirty and littered with trash. Street vendors sell everything from sandwiches to socks during the day. At night, young men peddle hashish.

Ahead of Egypt's historic election for a new president next week, Tahrir Square's woes reflect the disarray of the protest movement that called for a democratic transformation in the Arab world's most populous nation.

The revolutionary leaders, largely secular and leftist, have no viable candidate in the race. Instead, the vote has boiled down to a choice between former members of Mubarak's regime, who the revolutionaries believe will keep the old system intact and will not challenge the military's grip on politics, and Islamists, who they worry will impose an equally authoritarian system but based on religion.

The youth groups behind the revolution are left divided and muddled over the election and how to handle the post-election era. Some groups call for a boycott of the vote.

Many in the movement believe that the real confrontations are still to come when they press their agenda on whatever new government emerges.

But they are divided even on how to do that. Some question the reliance on protests since Mubarak's fall. Activists staged multiple protests in Tahrir the past year that repeatedly turned in to bloody clashes with police and the military. But they often failed to reach a unified list of demands or create a cohesive political movement. And the turmoil turned sections of the population against them, guided by a persistent military line that the protesters were to blame for chaos.

"We are left with an orphaned revolution. The people don't know what the revolution wants to do," said Rami Sabri, a member of the Popular Socialist Alliance, a newly formed party.

Support from Egyptians craving stability amid the turmoil and economic woes has vaulted two former regime figures to front-runner status — ex-foreign minister Amr Moussa and ex-prime minister Ahmed Shafiq. The latest polls have them slightly on top, though the polls' reliability is unknown.

Religious constituencies have elevated two Islamists: the Muslim Brotherhood's Mohammed Morsi and a moderate, Abdel-Moneim Abolfotoh.

The revolutionaries who intend to vote have been split. Some — including Wael Ghonim, the Google executive famed for his role in the Facebook page that helped launch the anti-Mubarak revolt — have backed Abolfotoh, drawn by his open views and strong backing for the uprising.

Another favorite is the youngest of the 13 candidates, Khaled Ali, a labor activist known as "the lawyer for the poor."

Ali is a distant underdog in the polls and has almost no chance of winning. But his candidacy is aimed at showing Egyptians that the revolution does have a face.

"Give the revolution a chance to rule," the 40-year-old Ali proclaimed at a recent rally.

During the 18-day uprising that led to Mubarak's fall on Feb. 11, 2011, the protesters' slogan was "bread, freedom and dignity."

Many Will Profit if Pakistan Reopens NATO Supply Routes

BY RICHARD LEIBY
The Washington Post

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan • U.S. commanders in Afghanistan want to get war supplies rolling across Pakistan's borders again. So do Pakistanis in places both high and low — from officials trying to balance the nation's budget to black marketeers who stand ready to plunder the NATO-contracted trucks and oil tankers expected to shortly resume passage into Afghanistan after nearly six months of closed border crossings.

The deal isn't quite sealed, but Pakistan is set to announce its decision to again allow onto its territory the convoys that provision U.S.-backed international forces trying to wind down the decade-long war against the Taliban. Pakistan's decision, after months of political posturing and delicate negotiations, is likely to ease strains between Washington and Islamabad. For its renewed cooperation, Pakistan would reap higher tariffs and a payout of at least $1.3 billion in withheld Coalition Support Funds for its contribution to the fight against militant Islamic extremists.

Officials on both sides say the agreement won't provide Pakistan the full apology it wants for an incident in which U.S. jets and helicopters mistakenly bombed two outposts on the Afghan border in November, killing 24 Pakistani soldiers. The deaths prompted Pakistan's decision to close the borders.

World Leaders Set for Busy Weekend in U.S.

BY JULIE PACE
Associated Press

WASHINGTON • More than two dozen world leaders will join President Barack Obama in an extraordinary weekend of back-to-back summits to tackle Europe's mounting economic woes and solidify plans for winding down the decade-long war in Afghanistan.

The Group of Eight economic summit and the national security-focused NATO meeting will be infused with politics from every angle. For Obama, the summits are a unique election-year opportunity to show leadership on the world stage without having to leave the U.S.

But with some new faces around the conference tables, Obama and the other leaders will be confronted by the stark reminder of the political turmoil from Asia to Europe that cost several of their old counterparts their jobs.

Since late 2011, public frustration with Europe's debt crisis has led to the ouster of leaders in Italy, Spain, Greece and most recently, France. Two other members of the G-8, Britain and Japan, have had leadership shake-ups since Obama took office.

Obama is fighting for his own job in a campaign expected to hinge on the economy. He has had the good fortune of being able to hold both summits this year in the U.S., allowing him to tailor the meetings around his election-year messages of expanding the economy, creating jobs and ending the war.

The summit locations rotate annually for each organization.

Leaders from the world's eight leading industrialized nations arrive in the Washington area on Friday for meetings at Camp David, the wooded presidential retreat in Maryland's Catoctin Mountains. Immediately following the G-8 summit, Obama and most of the other leaders will fly to Chicago Saturday evening to join other heads of state from NATO.

Obama originally planned both meetings for Chicago, his hometown. But the White House abruptly scrapped those plans in March, announcing with little explanation that the G-8 would shift to Camp David.

Syrian Leader Says Terrorists Are Behind Recent Unrest

BY ELIZABETH A. KENNEDY AND ZEINA KARAM

Associated Press

BEIRUT • In his first interview since December, Syrian President Bashar Assad insisted Tuesday his regime is fighting back against foreign mercenaries who want to overthrow him, not innocent Syrians aspiring for democracy in a yearlong uprising.

The interview with Russian TV showed Assad is still standing his ground, despite widespread international condemnation over his deadly crackdown on dissent.

“There are foreign mercenaries, some of them still alive,” Assad said in an interview broadcast Wednesday on Russian state news channel Rossiya-24. “They are being detained and we are preparing to show them to the world.”

Assad also cautioned against meddling in Syria, warning neighboring nations that have served as transit points for contraband weapons being smuggled into the country that “if you sow chaos in Syria you may be infected by it yourself.”

He did not elaborate, but rebels and anti-regime activists say Syrian forces have mined many of the smuggling routes where weapons flow into Syria — mainly from neighboring Turkey and Lebanon.

Assad, who inherited power from his father in 2000, still has a firm grip on power in Syria some 14 months into a revolt that has torn at the country’s fabric and threatened to undermine stability in the Middle East.

The U.N. estimated in March that the violence has killed more than 9,000 people, and hundreds more have been killed since then as a revolt that began with mostly peaceful calls for reform transforms into an armed insurgency.

A group known as the Free Syrian Army is determined to bring down the regime by force of arms, targeting military checkpoints and other government sites.

A U.N. observer team with more than 200 members has done little to quell the bloodshed, and some even have been caught up in the violence themselves.

Six observers had to be evacuated from a northern town controlled by the opposition Wednesday, a day after a roadside bomb hit their convoy and left them stranded overnight with rebel forces. None of the observers was wounded, and it was not clear who was behind the attack.

The shooting started as the convoy arrived in the opposition area, said Ahmad Fawzi, spokesman for international envoy Kofi Annan.

“The U.N. observers were in their cars and heard the shooting but did not witness anyone being killed, nor could they ascertain the direction of the fire,” he said. “At the same time, the bomb exploded near one of the vehicles, damaging the hood.”

Fawzi said people who had gathered around the observers ducked behind the vehicles, and according to one observer apparently some people were injured when the bomb exploded.

When the shooting subsided, he said, the observers left their vehicles and proceeded on foot to a Free Syrian Army location where they spent the night.

The U.N. said the team was treated well during their stay with rebels and returned to their base in Hama on Wednesday.

Rivals Airbrush Anti-Romney Words

BY NANCY BENAC

Associated Press

WASHINGTON • Remember Newt Gingrich calling Mitt Romney a liar? Michele Bachmann saying Romney’s un-electable? Rick Santorum calling Romney “the worst Republican in the country” to run against President Barack Obama?

They’re hoping you don’t. And acting like it never happened (even though most of their words are just clicks away online.)

One by one — with the exception of holdout Ron Paul — the GOP also-rans have coughed up endorsements of their onetime rival. And as they do, they’re pulling rhetorical backflips to distance themselves from their former harsh assessments of Romney.

Don’t try this at home, folks. It takes a professional politician to pull it off with a straight face.

A sampling of the also-rans’ anti-Romney rhetoric when they were candidates and their obligatory niceness after endorsing Romney:

Rick Santorum

The former Pennsylvania senator still doesn’t have trouble curbing his enthusiasm for Romney. He waited a month after dropping out of the race to endorse Romney, then emailed his tepid endorsement in the dead of night. He finally got out the E-word in the 13th paragraph of his 16-paragraph statement.

Then: “He is the worst Republican in the country to put up against Barack Obama.” Santorum later said he was referring to Romney’s standing on health care reform.

Now: “There are many significant areas in which we agree: the need for lower taxes, smaller government and a reduction in out-of-control spending. We certainly agree that abortion is wrong and marriage should be between one man and one woman. I am also comfortable with Gov. Romney on foreign policy matters, and we share the belief that we can never allow Iran to possess nuclear weapons. And while I had concerns about Gov. Romney making a case as a candidate about fighting against Obamacare, I have no doubt if elected he will work with a Republican Congress to repeal it and replace it.” — Endorsement emailed to Santorum supporters.

Newt Gingrich

Gingrich didn’t formally endorse Romney when he dropped out of the race but spoke well of him and later said that was close enough. The guy who promised not to run down his GOP opponents at the start of the race had some withering things to say about Romney during the heat of the campaign. Gingrich, a former House speaker, would rather you forget that now, though: His anti-Romney videos on YouTube, once public, are now private. The man who repeatedly branded Romney

a “Massachusetts moderate” now calls him a “solid conservative.”

Then: “Someone who will lie to you to get to be president will lie to you when he is president.” Asked if he was calling Romney a liar: “Yes.”

Now: “I’m going to campaign for him, I favor him over Obama. I went through, like, seven different issues where I favor him. I’ll do everything I can to help elect Romney. ... As far as I’m concerned, I’ve endorsed him.”

Michele Bachmann

Bachmann waited four months after dropping out before she endorsed Romney. The congresswoman from Minnesota campaigned with him in Virginia earlier this month but didn’t bring up health care in their joint appearance.

Then: “He can’t beat Obama because his policy is the basis of Obamacare. The signature issue of Obama is Obamacare. You can’t have a candidate who has given the blueprint for Obamacare. It’s too identical. It’s not going to happen.”

Now: “One thing that Mitt Romney has demonstrated, he will repeal Obamacare. That’s a big compare and contrast between Barack Obama. We will never get rid of socialized medicine, which is Obamacare, under Barack Obama. Mitt Romney has committed himself to repealing Obamacare. ... A lot of people know Mitt Romney’s positive agenda.”

Novel Alternative Presidential Ticket Falls Short

BY MATEA GOLD AND MELANIE MASON

Tribune Washington Bureau (MCT)

WASHINGTON • An ambitious effort to launch an alternative presidential ticket this fall has foundered, done in by its inability to attract a top-tier candidate and the grassroots support necessary to power its novel online nominating process.

Despite the backing of heavyweight political and business leaders and a $15-million effort to get on the ballot across the country, Americans Elect announced Tuesday that none of its potential candidates mustered the minimum support needed to qualify for the group’s primary.

That leaves the organization in an odd and unprecedented situation: It is already on the general election ballot in 29 states — giving it greater reach than the Green Party — but it does not have a ticket.

The group’s leaders are meeting Wednesday to consider their options and plan to make an announcement toady. In a statement, Chief Executive Kahilil Byrd said there was “an almost universal desire among delegates, leadership and millions of Americans who have supported AE to see a credible candidate emerge from this process.”

But nominating a candidate without a primary would require the board to change its rules, a move that could trigger criticism that the process was being changed in mid-stream.

Darryl Sragow, a veteran Democratic strategist and one-time political director of the group, said that it would be “incredibly frustrating and disappointing” to abandon the 2-year-old, $35-million project now. But he cautioned that any changes to the process would have to be done carefully, adding that “there will be shots fired at the Americans Elect candidate based on how that candidate got the nomination.”

It’s a deflating scenario for a group that pledged to break the lock of the Democratic and Republican parties and field a viable independent presidential candidate, selected through a secure online nomination convention.

But Americans Elect’s secretive process — including its refusal to identify its donors — and top-down approach hobbled its attempts to trigger grass-roots enthusiasm. Historically, third-party or independent bids like that of H. Ross Perot in 1992 have gained momentum because of the individual running, not merely the concept of an alternative.

Evacs and Drills Pared near US Nuke Plants

BY JEFF DONN

Associated Press

Without fanfare, the nation’s nuclear power regulators have overhauled community emergency planning for the first time in more than three decades, requiring fewer exercises for major accidents and recommending that fewer people be evacuated right away.

Nuclear watchdogs voiced surprise and dismay over the quietly adopted revamp — the first since the program began after Three Mile Island in 1979. Several said they were unaware of the changes until now, though they took effect in December.

At least four years in the works, the changes appear to clash with more recent lessons of last year’s reactor crisis in Japan. A mandate that local responders always run practice exercises for a radiation release has been eliminated — a move viewed as downright bizarre by some emergency planners.

The Nuclear Regulatory Commission and the Federal Emergency Management Agency, which run the program together, have added one new exercise: More than a decade after the 9/11 terrorist attacks, state and community police will now take part in exercises that prepare for a possible assault on their local plant.

Still, some emergency officials say this new exercise doesn’t go far enough.

These changes, while documented in obscure federal publications, went into effect with hardly any notice by the general public.

Michael Mariotte, director of the anti-nuclear group Nuclear Information and Resource Service, normally tracks such rules very carefully. This time, he learned of them from an Associated Press reporter.

“Unless there are public interest groups out there pointing to the things these agencies are doing, they generally prefer to be operating in quiet, especially if it’s likely to be controversial,” he said. “A typical American does not read the Federal Register.”

The Web archives of FEMA and the NRC show no news releases on the changes during December 2011 and January 2012. The revisions took effect Dec. 23, at the peak of the holiday season when Americans tend to focus on last-minute gift shopping and social gatherings.

An AP investigative series in June exposed weaknesses in the U.S. emergency planning program. The stories detailed how many nuclear reactors are now operating beyond their design life under rules that have been relaxed to account for deteriorating safety margins. The series also documented dramatic population growth around nuclear power plants and limitations in the scope of emergency exercises. For example, local authorities assemble at command centers where they test communications, but they do not deploy around the community, reroute traffic or evacuate anyone as in a real emergency.

The latest changes, especially relaxed exercise plans for 50-mile emergency zones, are being flayed by some local planners and activists who say the widespread contamination in Japan from last year’s Fukushima nuclear accident screams out for stronger planning in the United States, not weaker rules.

FEMA officials say the revised standards introduce more variability into planning exercises and will help keep responders on their toes. The nuclear power industry has praised the changes on similar grounds.

Onsite security forces at nuclear power plants have practiced defending against make-believe assaults since 1991 and increased the frequency of these drills after the 2001 terrorist attacks. The new exercises for community responders took years to consider and adopt with prolonged industry and government consultations that led to repeated drafts. The NRC made many changes requested by the industry in copious comments.

Federal personnel will now evaluate if state and local authorities have enough resources to handle a simultaneous security threat and radiation release. Their ability to communicate with onsite security officials during an attack also will be evaluated during exercises.

Study Finds Java Drinkers Live Longer

BY MARILYNN MARCHIONE
Associated Press

MILWAUKEE • One of life's simple pleasures just got a little sweeter. After years of waffling research on coffee and health, even some fear that java might raise the risk of heart disease, a big study finds the opposite: Coffee drinkers are a little more likely to live longer. Regular or decaf doesn't matter.

The study of 400,000 people is the largest ever done on the issue, and the results should reassure any coffee lovers who think it's a guilty pleasure that may do harm.

"Our study suggests that's really not the case," said lead researcher Neal Freedman of the National Cancer Institute. "There may actually be a modest benefit of coffee drinking."

No one knows why. Coffee contains a thousand things that can affect health, from helpful antioxidants to tiny amounts of substances linked to cancer. The most widely studied ingredient — caffeine — didn't play a role in the new study's results.

It's not that earlier studies were wrong. There is evidence that coffee can raise LDL, or bad cholesterol, and blood pressure at least short-term, and those in turn can raise the risk of heart disease.

Even in the new study, it first seemed that coffee drinkers were more likely to die at any given time. But they also tended to smoke, drink more alcohol, eat more red meat and exercise less than non-coffee-drinkers. Once researchers took those things into account, a clear pattern emerged: Each cup of coffee per day nudged up the chances of living longer.

The study was done by the National Institutes of Health and AARP. The results are published in today's New England Journal of Medicine.

Careful, though — this doesn't prove that coffee makes people live longer, only that the two seem related. Like most studies on diet and health, this one was based strictly on observing people's habits and resulting health. So it can't prove cause and effect.

But with so many people, more than a decade of follow-up and enough deaths to compare, "this is probably the best evidence we have" and are likely to get, said Dr. Frank Hu of the Harvard School of Public Health. He had no role in this study but helped lead a previous one that also found coffee beneficial.

NATION/WORLD BRIEFS

Iran Hangs Alleged Israeli Agent

TEHRAN, Iran • At the gallows, the condemned prisoner Tuesday repeated the allegations Iran lodged against him: That he was trained by Israel's spy agency to carry out one of the first attacks on Iranian scientists in a suspected shadow war against Tehran's nuclear ambitions.

"The end of the road has nothing except repentance — and rope," Majid Jamali Fashi was quoted as saying just moments before he was hanged for the January 2010 bombing that killed Tehran University physics professor Masoud Ali Mohammadi.

The execution inside Tehran's Evin Prison — and Iran's state-sanctioned coverage of his purported last words — are connected to a world of alleged covert operations and assassination plots that have stretched from the Black Sea to Bangkok, and yet have somehow not disrupted efforts at nuclear talks between Iran and world powers, which are expected to resume next week in Baghdad.

House OKs Its Anti-domestic Violence Bill

WASHINGTON • The House has passed Republican legislation to renew an anti-domestic violence law.

Wednesday's vote to reauthorize the Violence Against Women Act for five years followed an emotional debate over whether the House GOP bill would better protect women from violence and sexual assault than a Senate-passed version. The White House, most Democrats and a long list of advocacy groups say the House version doesn't go far enough to protect battered immigrants, Native Americans or gays.

The 1994 law has been renewed twice with wide bipartisan agreement. But this presidential and congressional election year gender politics bred controversy and the House and Senate must now reconcile their versions.

House Republicans said their bill did more to protect taxpayer money from fraud.

China TV Blames Dalai Lama for Fiery Protests

BEIJING • China has released a documentary accusing the Dalai Lama of orchestrating a wave of self-immolations by Tibetans, in its most elaborate attempt so far to shape international opinion about the protests against Chinese rule.

The documentary shown globally by state broadcaster China Central Television features police surveillance footage of the fiery protests. Mostly lone Tibetans are seen ablaze on small town roads before being blasted by security forces with fire extinguishers or covered with blankets.

All told, the piece, titled "The Dalai clique and self-immolation violent incidents," marks the government's most extensive effort to cast blame on the exiled Tibetan spiritual leader for protests that have touched Tibetans emotionally and presented an image problem for Beijing.

Chinese Activist Applies for Passport

BEIJING • A blind Chinese activist who sparked a diplomatic crisis by fleeing into the U.S. Embassy last month filled out a Chinese passport application and posed for a photo Wednesday, moving forward in his bid to study in the United States.

Paperwork for Chen Guangcheng, his wife, and two children was completed in the hospital where the family of four has stayed since he left the embassy in Beijing two weeks ago.

The Chinese Foreign Ministry has said Chen is free to study abroad like any other Chinese citizen, but security officials have kept him under virtual house arrest in his hospital room for two weeks. Until Wednesday, there was no clear sign that the government would let him apply for a passport.

Mladic

Mladic is accused of commanding Bosnian Serb troops who waged a campaign of murder and persecution to drive Muslims and Croats out of territory they considered part of Serbia. His troops rained shells and snipers' bullets down on civilians in the 44-month-long siege of the Bosnian capital, Sarajevo, and killed 8,000 Muslim men and boys in Srebrenica in July 1995, Europe's worst massacre since World War II.

"The world watched in disbelief that in neighborhoods and villages within Europe a genocide appeared to be in progress," prosecutor Dermot Groome said at the U.N. court in The Hague.

Twenty years after the war that left 100,000 dead, Bosnia remains divided into two ministates — one for Serbs, the other shared by Bosnian Muslims and Croats — linked by a central government.

Mladic fled into hiding after the war and spent 15 years as a fugitive before international pressure on Serbia led to his arrest last year. Now he is held in a one-man cell in a special international wing of a Dutch jail and receives food and medical care that would likely be the envy of many in Bosnia.

But the fact that he is jailed and on trial is seen as another victory for international justice and hailed by observers as evidence that — more often than not — war crimes tribunals get their indicted suspects, even if years later. In another court Wednesday in The Hague, former Liberian President Charles Taylor faced a sentencing hearing after being convicted last month of aiding rebels in neighboring Sierra Leone's civil war.

That is heartening news for the International Criminal Court, which has indicted the likes of Sudanese President Omar al-Bashir for genocide but appears nowhere close to having him arrested.

In a demonstration of Bosnia's continuing ethnic divide, Mladic's entrance in court was applauded by people who gathered in the Serb stronghold of Pale to watch the trial on TV.

"Mladic is our hero. It's sad that we see him there," said Milan Ivanovic, a 20-year-old law student.

Groome told the three-judge panel that Mladic was hand-picked by Bosnian Serb leader Radovan Karadzic because of his skills as a military commander, but also "because Karadzic believed he was willing to commit the crimes needed to achieve the strategic goals of the Bosnian Serb leadership."

He signaled that prosecutors would use Mladic's own words against him in the trial, drawing on the former general's wartime diaries, radio intercepts and appearances on television during the war.

In one such TV appearance, Mladic showed a news team around the Serb artillery dug into hills overlooking Sarajevo and denied any involvement in war crimes — foreshadowing his defense now that his actions were intended only to protect Serbs.

"I did not take part in any crimes. I have only defended my people," Mladic said. He denies wrongdoing but has refused to enter pleas to the 11 charges against him in The Hague.

A Mountain Biker's Heaven

Want to ride? A mountain bike group and Bureau of Land Management is pushing to officially authorize about 40 miles of trail at Indian Spring.

BY ALISON GENE SMITH
 alismith@magicvalley.com

KIMBERLY • For years mountain biking enthusiasts have flocked to a system of bike trails south of Kimberly known as the Indian Spring trails. Members of bike clubs and casual mountain bikers alike use the popular trails along with hikers, runners and people on motor bikes and ATVs.

Now the Bureau of Land Management and the International Mountain Biking Association are working to officially authorize the trails.

Why Authorize?

"What we have out there is a network of about 40 miles of user-created trails," said Mike Courtney, field manager at the BLM's Burley office.

Since the trails were never authorized by the BLM, Courtney is unable to approve applications for organized events such as races on the trails.

"I can't authorize them on a system of trails that's not legitimate," he said.

IMBA and its local affiliate, the Southern Idaho Mountain Biking Association, approached the BLM to find out how to make the trails official, and improve them in the process.

"They assessed the current network of trails and made recommendations about which trails are sustainable in the current conditions and which to eliminate or reroute," Courtney said. "They went a little further and said here's an opportunity to develop 20 more miles of trails."

Authorizing the trails will also help them stay in better shape for riders.

"Once it's official, then we'll be able to maintain the trails," said Mike Goudy of the Spoke and Wheel Bike Shop in Twin Falls.

This can be anything from keeping brush off the trails to keeping stream crossings safe for riders, he said.

The Process

Representatives from IMBA are scheduled to begin flagging the trails, both new and established, this week, Goudy said.

PHOTOS BY ED GLAZAR • FOR THE TIMES-NEWS
Mike Goudy, owner of Spoke and Wheel Bike Shop in Twin Falls, looks out over Indian Spring trails on Sunday south of Kimberly. The International Mountain Biking Association is working with the Bureau of Land Management to officially authorize the trails.

"We've got to do clearance work. The International Mountain Biking Association will flag those routes that they looked at last year and potential new routes," Courtney said.

Once the trails are marked, Courtney's staff of scientists will spend the next year trekking the trails on foot, looking for issues that could clash with a heavily used bike trail.

How to Get There

Mike Goudy, owner of Spoke and Wheel Bike Shop in Twin Falls, leads a ride every Sunday at 2 p.m. at Indian Spring, leaving from the parking lot at Indian Spring Road. Rides vary depending on the skill level of attendees and the weather. Want to ride? Here's how to get there:

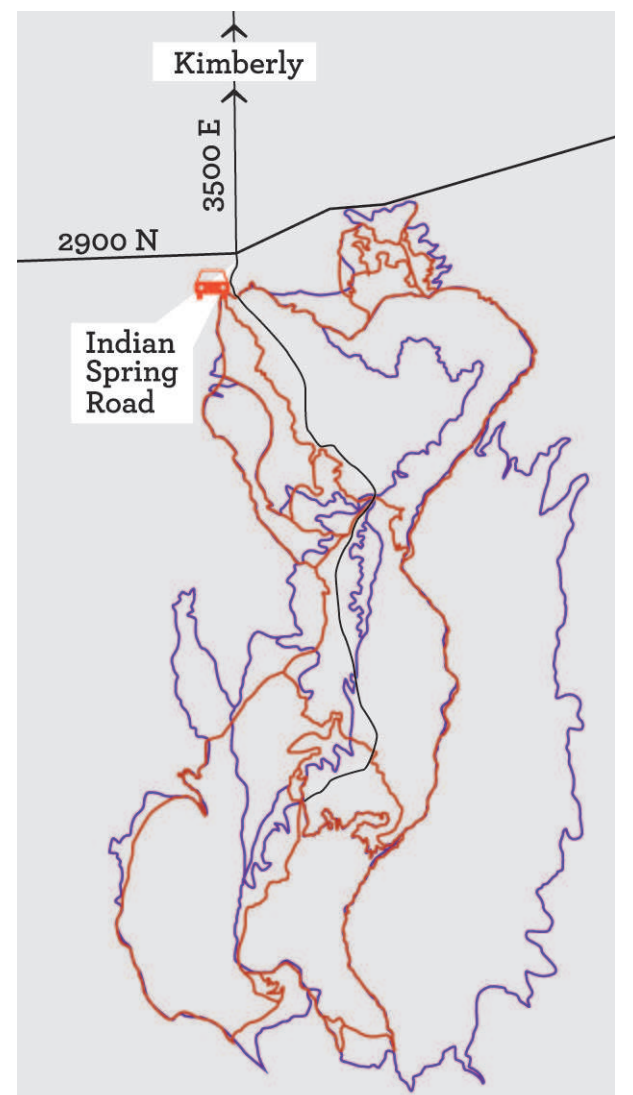

Start in Kimberly, on Main Street going south. Main turns into 3500 East Road. Follow this for about 8 miles going south. Then cross 2900 North Road onto a dirt road with a cow guard called Indian Spring Road. Follow Indian Spring for a quarter-mile until you reach a parking lot on your left. "You can't miss it," Goudy said.

Information: 734-6033.

Mike Goudy rides his mountain bike on trails Sunday near Indian Spring.

"They're looking for resource conflicts," Courtney said. "They'll look for sensitive plants and the same with wildlife."

Pedestrian Access Closed to Auger Falls

TIMES-NEWS

TWIN FALLS • Installation of a new sewer pipe along the access road to Auger Falls trailhead in the Snake River Canyon is continuing, and officials emphasize that pedestrians and cyclists are temporarily banned from the road along with motorized vehicles.

Twin Falls Parks and Recreation Department Director Dennis Bowyer said open trenches and movement of heavy equipment make it too dangerous for anyone to access the trailhead. He estimated the work will be completed by early July.

Canyon Springs Road remains open to its turnoff to Canyon Springs Golf Course.

Kids: Learn to Tie a Fly

TIMES-NEWS

TWIN FALLS • If you've thought fly-fishing was just for adults, think again. The same holds true of fly-tying: It's not something for only grown-ups.

Beginning June 4, the College of Southern Idaho's Community Education Center will offer the non-credit enrichment course, "Kids Fly Tying," taught by life-long angler Dennis Brauer.

In this course, children in fifth grade and up will learn the basics of fly tying as well as some of the creative aspects of the art.

The course will be offered 4-5:30 p.m. Mondays and Wednesdays June 4-27 at the College of Southern Idaho. Cost to register is $30, and there is a $10 supply fee, payable to the instructor.

Equipment will be provided, if needed, but feel free to bring your own.

To register: 732-6442 or communityed.csi.edu.

It's Time to Get Involved with Upcoming Wildlife Summit

I'm hearing about a statewide gathering sponsored by the Department of Fish and Game this summer called the Wildlife Summit. Will it be something like the previous Wildlife Congress?

Gary Hompland
Ask the Officer

Idaho's most ardent fish and wildlife advocates. The Wildlife Summit is designed to bring together diverse user groups to help identify issues and guide the Idaho Department of Fish and Game's efforts in future challenges. Constituent groups and individuals will help department staff understand and focus on issues important to them. Participants will form a core of fish and wildlife users open and willing to understand diverse values. The Summit will explore the similarities as well as differences of diverse groups to discover areas of common ground and help the department develop strategies for future fish and wildlife management direction. The schedule for the Wildlife Summit is Friday, Aug. 24 through Sunday, Aug. 26. The primary meeting site will be in the Treasure Valley with satellite opportunities throughout the state in each region. As plans are firming up they will be publicized so participant can select the venue nearest them. The Wildlife Summit is a unique opportunity for the citizens of Idaho to be involved in the future of our fish and wildlife resources and the future of the Idaho Department of Fish and Game. Please get involved! If you have any questions, call the Magic Valley Regional Office at 324-4350. Gary Hompland is a regional conservation officer for the Idaho Department of Fish and Game.

COEUR D'ALENE • The North Idaho Centennial Trail is getting a facelift. Thanks to a hefty grant from the Idaho Parks and Recreation Department, almost all of the popular walking and bicycle trail will be re-sealed this summer. Cracks along the trail will be filled in, and spots where tree roots lift the trail enough to make riding uneven will be smoothed out as well. "This is a huge deal for us," said Charlie Miller, North Idaho Centennial Trail Foundation manager, on landing the grant that will make the work happen this summer. "We've never gotten something this substantial up in this part of the state." Teamwork between several recreation-loving agencies helped land the $117,500 state and federal grant, more than half of the project's total. The Joint Powers — comprised of Coeur d'Alene, Post Falls and Kootenai

County — and the NICTF are aiming to pitch in around $52,000 between them as matching money for the one-time funds. The Centennial Trail last was sealed around 2005. Parts of the trail will be re-striped where it crosses roadways and intersections. Timber Turner, riding his bicycle on the trail Monday, said the maintenance work is needed, considering the amount of foot and wheel traffic that leads to wear and tear. "It gets a lot of use in the summer," he said. "It really is an attribute to the community." When it's completed, the updated trail should boast a "darker, richer" black hue, Miller said. And rides on it, "will be smooth as butter," he added. Kootenai County Parks and Waterways successfully secured that grant. The Coeur d'Alene Parks Department will administer it and the work contract, according to Doug Eastwood, Coeur d'Alene parks director. The KCPW is one of several agencies that meet regularly to help maintain the outdoor recreation lane. "It's in very good hands," Eastwood said of the trail, and the teamwork behind it. Trail work could be completed within 30 days, beginning at the end of the month. Parts will be closed, and re-routed, incrementally. On weekends, the entire trail will be opened. Work will cover 17 miles of the 23-mile trail, leaving out the Class 2 portions that are bike lanes on streets with vehicle traffic. The Prairie Trail, which connects with the Centennial Trail, will also be resealed as part of project. The NICTF would pay $24,000 for that. "Just having a trail at all is awesome," said Penny Swanlund, strolling the public space on her lunch break Monday. "All this waterfront area." And getting it resurfaced with mostly grant money, she said, is "even better."

Idaho's Free Fishing Day Scheduled

JEROME • Mark your calendars for June 9, which is Free Fishing Day in Idaho. Anglers of all ages and skill levels, residents and nonresidents, are invited to fish that day anywhere in the state without a fishing license. Do note, however, that all other rules, such as limits or tackle restrictions, remain in effect. The Idaho Department of Fish and Game, at special locations around the state, will provide equipment; and fishing experts will be on hand to help novice anglers learn the ins and outs of fishing. Information: 324-4950.

Conservation Officer, Others to Receive Idaho Medal of Honor

BOISE • The Idaho Department of Fish and Game's Paul Alexander will receive the Idaho Medal of Honor for saving the life of a man whose car went into Black Canyon Reservoir. While on patrol along the reservoir a little after 5 p.m. on April 15, Alexander, a senior conservation officer, saw a vehicle in the water. When he turned around to investigate, the vehicle was completely submerged and the driver was struggling to swim to shore. After the man had gone under a third time, Alexander dove into the 40-degree water and swam 30 yards to pull him back to the surface and to safety. Alexander is one of 10 peace officers and two firefighters who will receive the Idaho Medal of Honor for their extraordinary heroism above and beyond the call of duty. conflicts could cause changes to the planned trails. "If bike trails are proposed to go through sage grouse areas, we might want to think about mitigation on that trail," he said. An archeologist, a botanist and a wildlife biologist will physically walk all the trails throughout the next year, a task that must fit in between their regular duties. "That's a lot of walking," Courtney said. Once the trails have all been walked, the team will write an environmental assessment which will analyze the impact authorizing the trails could have on the surrounding environment. "Out of that document will come a decision," Courtney said.

More Room to Ride

If everything goes as planned, Nathan Fuller, the president of the local SIMBA group hopes to be out helping to build trails next spring. "We'll have 20-plus miles more to ride and it won't just be mountain bikes," he said. "It's a big benefit for the recreation crowd in the area." Along with more miles of trails, the plans include adding bathrooms and smaller tracks for beginners and children. "It'll be a huge benefit for families," Fuller said. "It'll appeal to a wide range of people." The reroutes will undoubtedly make the trails more popular, Goudy said. Along with constructing easier trails, some will be made more difficult for advanced riders, he added.

RICH SIMPSON • FOR THE TIMES-NEWS

As columns about archery unfold, Rich Simpson will want your input on topics, techniques, regulations, people and products that will help unravel the intricacies of the archer's world.

The Archer's Challenge

Sometimes the seeds of a great idea or a grand adventure are sown with the passing of a casual comment.

My epiphany came last weekend when my wife — almost as an afterthought — mentioned that it would be nice to have the freezer filled with elk steaks and roasts again this fall.

Perhaps it's been the distractions of a demanding job or the pressures of a growing family. But for whatever reason, I hadn't chased elk since moving back to Idaho from the elk-rich Wind River Mountains near Lander, Wyo. Now thanks to my good wife's suggestion, I'm ready to make up for those long years of neglect. This fall, however, I'll be hunting the rutting beasts with a stick and a string rather than my trusty Model 70 .338.

At this point I need to preface the remainder of today's column by admitting that as an archer I am a complete novice — a beginner's beginner.

Even though I spent several falls still-hunting shimmering quaky hideouts and snaking through dank rut-scented north slope tangles, I never released an arrow at an elk. One fall a friend of mine and I did manage to cow call a decent five-point into an aspen patch, but I let down the string when the young stud hung up at 50 yards — too far to confidently thread a broadhead through the heavy cover.

What I'm planning — subject to your interest and input — is to pen a series of columns designed to introduce wannabe and fledgling archers to the sport.

We'll be approaching this intriguing and somewhat intimidating sport through the eyes of a novice — me — by visiting and conferring with local experts on equipment selection, shooting facilities and techniques, and proven hunting strategies. And as the columns unfold, I'll be soliciting your input on topics, techniques, regulations, people and products that will help unravel the intricacies of the archer's world for those of us that are new to the game.

If you think that you might want to participate in one of Idaho's many big game archery hunts this fall, now is the time to get started. For information on seasons, hunt areas, tags and fees, pick up a Fish and Game pamphlet at your local sporting goods store. To obtain an archery tag, all bowhunters must possess a valid hunting license, show proof that they have completed an approved bowhunter education course or provide evidence of having been licensed for an archery-only hunt in Idaho or another state, or complete an affidavit to that effect.

The state's Bowhunter Education Course averages 12 classroom hours plus a field experience day. As an alternative to the traditional classroom format, the Idaho Department of Fish and Game offers Internet-based Hunter and Bowhunter Education courses for individuals 10 years and older. Internet learners also are required to complete the six- to seven-hour field day to demonstrate safe and appropriate bow hunting behaviors. For details, visit fishandgame.idaho.gov.

The fun begins with the next column, so please join me here in the great Outdoors as we unravel the mysteries of the ancient art of pursuing game with a stick and a string. Good shooting!

Fishing

Dunn, who supervises the Sun Valley Ski Patrol, works as a fly fishing guide for Silver Creek Outfitters during summer. But he also has his own guide service — Flyfish Bhutan and Beyond, the only Western guide excursion taking fly fishermen into the Himalayas.

His slide presentations before the Wood River Valley chapter of Trout Unlimited, which combine pictures of 50-pound Golden Mahseer trout with cultural photos of Bhutan's towering Punakha Dzong palace and prayer flags strung beneath waterfalls, have drawn standing room-only crowds.

And his free slide show at 6 p.m. May 23, at The Community Library in Ketchum is expected to draw a big crowd, as well.

"There's no experience like fly fishing in the Himalayas. It's a trip for the truly adventurous — someone who wants to be on the cutting edge of global fly fishing," said Dunn, who returned from a month-long trip Monday evening.

Dunn began fishing Bhutan in 2007 — shortly after the so-called "Land of the Thunder Dragon" located at the eastern end of the Himalayas opened itself up for tourism. The number of visitors has climbed from 9,000 to 38,000 in five years, Dunn said, but tourism is still tightly controlled.

Dunn was introduced to Bhutan by Ketchum kayaker and filmmaker Gerry Moffat whose American-Bhutanese corporation wanted Dunn to access the "fishability" of the kingdom for a recreational lodge it was building.

The few fly fishermen who venture to Bhutan find themselves alone on the rivers because the Bhutanese people's Buddhist beliefs do not permit them to fish.

"The Bhutanese do not fish, although their land is full of rivers and those rivers are full of fish," said Dunn.

The catch-and-release fishing that Westerners enjoy targets brown trout stocked by the British empire and snow trout, which exceed two feet and are feisty fighters.

The star, however is the golden mahseer trout, which Dunn says is the hardest fighting freshwater fish in the world, thanks to the fight it must put up in streams running off the world's tallest mountains.

"It's challenging to present a fly to these fish without spooking them," he said. "But a dedicated angler has an exceptional chance at landing one."

This past month's expedition was Dunn's first into the Indian Himalayas.

"Where we went was very remote," said Dunn, who charges clients $4,400 on up for an experience that includes sleeping on beds in tents and meals of chicken, yak cheese and vegetables.

"It took five days from the time we left Ketchum traveling by plane, train, automobile, raft and foot to our first cast."

Dunn proposed to his wife Debby, who grew up in Twin Falls as Debby Boyd, during one fishing expedition to Bhutan.

Debby had hooked a huge trout, which eventually broke off taking her fly with it. After proposing, Bryant returned to fishing and landed that same trout, finding her fly in the corner of its mouth.

Debby recounted showing a woman who was walking to temple how to cast on the side of the road.

"They're not allowed to fish in the river because it's against their religion. But they're very curious about us. The people are incredibly

Fly Fishing Presentation

Bryant Dunn will present a free slide show on fly fishing in Indian, Thailand and Bhutan at 6 p.m. Wednesday, May 23, at The Community Library, 415 Spruce Ave. N., in Ketchum.

The presentation is part of the library's new "Fly Fishing Week," which offers three events spotlighting the sport that is so popular among Central Idahoans, said Program Director Lauren Zondag.

Other events include a free screening of Robert Redford's movie, "A River Runs Through It," at 6 p.m. Tuesday, May 22. The Idaho Conservation League's Water Associate Marie Callaway Kellner will present a program on what makes Idaho's rivers so special and what is being done to keep them pristine at 6 p.m. Thursday, May 24.

kind and generous — always smiling and you feel very safe, very spiritual, there," she said.

Ketchum fly fisherman Erik Boe echoed her enthusiasm: "The culture, the adventure, the camaraderie and the fishing waters that few others have ever seen, let alone fished, are priceless"

U.S. Economy Picks Up after Spring Slump

BY CHRISTOPHER S. RUGABER

Associated Press

WASHINGTON • Maybe the U.S. economy's strength this winter wasn't just weather-related after all.

Home construction is near a three-year high. And factory output has risen in three of the year's first four months.

The data released Wednesday suggest growth in the April-June quarter is off to a good start, helped by falling gas prices and solid hiring gains. Fears of a spring slump are easing.

"It's all very encouraging," said Paul Ashworth, chief U.S. economist at Capital Economics. "Things look good at the moment."

Builders broke ground in April at a seasonally adjusted annual pace of 717,000 homes, the Commerce Department said. That nearly matches January's pace, the best since October 2008.

Construction rose for both single-family homes and apartments.

Some economists have noted that a warm winter led companies to move up some hiring and accelerate other activity — including homebuilding — that normally wouldn't occur until spring. That gave the appearance that the economy had strengthened in January and February and weakened in March.

But Ashworth noted that the overall trend in housing starts has been running at roughly the same annual pace — approximately 700,000 — over the past six months. That's 100,000 more on average than the pace for the previous six months.

Ashworth said the higher level suggests demand is increasing and the mild winter had less effect than some economists had thought.

"We expect starts to strengthen further this year," Ashworth wrote in a note to clients.

Even with the gains, the rate of construction for all homes is only about half the 1.5 million annual pace that most economists consider healthy. But the increase, along with rising builder confidence and stronger job growth, is a sign that the home market may finally be starting to recover nearly five years after the housing bubble burst.

ASSOCIATED PRESS

A construction carries a load of wood to a new home as they frame the house in Chester, Va., Wednesday.

Single-family home construction is now 39 percent higher than its recession low. And developers are also anticipating more sales. Permits for single-family home construction rose 2 percent last month.

The growth in single-family home construction is important because those homes make up roughly 70 percent of the market. Since the recession, homeownership has declined while demand for apartments has surged.

Economists say continued job gains could quickly reverse that trend.

"Homebuilders are reporting stronger demand," Ian Shepherdson, an economist at High Frequency Economics, said in a note to clients. "And while rental demand means the multi-family sector is much stronger than single family, that will change as the labor market improves further."

U.S. manufacturing, one of the strongest areas of the economy since the recession ended nearly three years ago, also rebounded in April after a March lull.

Factory output is now 18.3 percent higher than its low hit in June 2009, the month the recession ended. It's only 6.1 percent below its pre-recession peak.

Factories are busier in part because automakers are selling more cars and trucks. Half of the April increase in factory output reflected a 3.9 percent jump in the production of motor vehicles and parts. That was the fifth straight gain at auto plants.

Production also rose at a wide range of companies in April, from makers of computers and electronics to aerospace and furniture factories.

The modest gain shows that U.S. manufacturers aren't cutting back in the face of Europe's financial crisis and slower growth in China.

Faster output at U.S. factories has been a key reason employers have added 1 million jobs over the past five months. It's also helped lower the unemployment rate from 9.1 percent in August to 8.1 percent last month.

Manufacturing companies have added 167,000 jobs in that stretch. That's roughly 17 percent of the job gains, even though manufacturing represents less than 10 percent of the economy.

More jobs, along with record-low mortgage rates and low home prices, are making home buying more attractive to some Americans.

Lower Oil Prices Ease Load on Consumers and Obama

BY JONATHAN FAHEY AND PAUL WISEMAN

Associated Press

NEW YORK • A threat that's been hanging over the economy is starting to look a lot less menacing.

Oil and gasoline prices are sinking, giving relief to businesses and consumers who a few weeks ago seemed about to face the highest fuel prices ever.

President Barack Obama's re-election prospects could also benefit, especially if prices keep falling as some analysts expect. A majority of Americans disapproved of Obama's handling of gas prices in an AP-GfK poll early this month. But that was before the full effect of the recent drop had reached drivers.

The average U.S. retail gasoline price has dropped 21 cents a gallon to $3.73 since hitting a 2012 peak of $3.94 on April 6.

The economy could gain, too. Consumers who spend less on fuel have more to spend on other purchases, from autos and furniture, that could help drive economic output and job growth.

The price drop will likely boost consumer confidence. It also comes at a timely moment: Ahead of the Memorial Day weekend, a busy one for travel and entertainment spending.

"It's extra money in the wallets of most American consumers, and that's going to help," said James Hamilton, an economist at the University of California, San Diego who studies oil prices.

Lower oil prices also mean cheaper diesel and jet fuel for shippers and airlines.

Crude oil, which is used to make gasoline, is at a seven-month low of $92.81 a barrel. It's down nearly 13 percent since May 1. Behind the steady drop are larger fuel stockpiles, easing fears about Iran and expectations of lower demand as the global economy slows.

The average national gasoline price is expected to fall as low as $3.50 a gallon this summer. It could even dip near $3 in some states. The national average is being propped up by refinery problems in California that have lifted prices well above the national average there, according to Tom Kloza, chief oil analyst at the Oil Price Information Service.

A 50-cent drop in the gasoline price would save consumers roughly $70 billion over a year.

Verizon in $63 Billion Faceoff with AT&T Over Family Plans

BY OLGA KHARIF

Bloomberg News

PORTLAND, Ore. • Verizon Wireless and AT&T are each preparing to roll out shared-data pricing plans this year. Whoever makes the first move will transform the way the industry charges for wireless service.

The new shared plans, which may be announced as early as next month, would let customers split one bucketful of Internet data between their phones, iPads and other wireless devices, providing an economical option for families, small businesses or people with a lot of Web-connected gadgets.

Getting the approach right could reduce customer turnover and get more users to embrace data plans, which brought in $62.7 billion industrywide last year, according to trade group CTIA. A wrong move would lower the amount of money that subscribers pay, while increasing network traffic and the cost of maintaining networks.

"They are watching each other," said independent wireless analyst Chetan Sharma, who covers telecommunications from Issaquah, Wash. Once one U.S. carrier introduces a shared data plan, the rest of the industry, including Sprint Nextel and T-Mobile, won't be far behind, he said. Consumers have a growing appetite for data plans, which let people surf the Web and use other Internet functions on their devices. Apple's iPhone has fueled demand by making it easy to use data-intensive features, such as online applications and the Siri voice-activated personal assistant.

While U.S. carriers already offer family plans to consumers, they're more focused on calls. Each user and device is typically assigned an individual data plan, often at $10 to $50 apiece.

For carriers, the rewards of offering shared data can be huge, said Reade Barber, a vice president at Rogers Communications, Canada's largest wireless carrier. His company would know: It adopted the strategy in 2009.

"The number of people using data at Rogers just exploded," he said. More than 25 percent of Rogers' family-plan subscribers use shared data plans. "We attracted a lot of new users of data."

The approach can entice consumers who only pay for voice or texting plans to pony up for data, bringing extra money to carriers. Or a family might shell out more for their data plan to let the kids have Internet access on their phones. Families may boost monthly bills by $15, said Susan Welsh de Grimaldo, an analyst at Strategy Analytics in Newton, Mass.

OBITUARIES

Sept. 21, 1947-May 14, 2012

JEROME • Charles Bluford Wilson Jr., 64, of Jerome, passed away Monday, May 14, 2012, at his home.

He was born Sept. 21, 1947, in Madison, Ind., the son of Charles Bluford Wilson Sr., and Addie Mae Sandiford Wilson. He was raised in Kentucky and attended schools there. Charles enlisted in the United States Marine Corps and served his country in Vietnam, where he earned two Purple Hearts. During a visit home, he married his sweetheart, Lynda Oldham, on Dec. 14, 1968, in Bellflower, Calif. Following an honorable discharge, they settled in California, where Charles worked for many years as a project manager at the Naval Air Station. He enjoyed working with sheet metal and welding. He was extremely organized and was especially fond of all kinds of animals. Charles will be remembered as a wonderful husband, father, grandfather, brother and friend who will be missed dearly.

He is survived by his wife, Lynda Wilson of Jerome; their children, Christina Wagner of Jerome, Heather (Jeff) Wilson-Rios of Oakley, Calif., and Charles D. (Angie) Wilson of Filer; five grandchildren; three sisters, Toby Bilbro, Judy Wilson and Betsy Bilbro, all of Kentucky; and many extended family members and friends. He is preceded in death by his parents.

The funeral will be conducted at 11 a.m. Friday, May 18, at the Jerome LDS 2nd Ward Chapel, 50 E. 100 S. in Jerome, with Bishop Norm Kump officiating. A visitation will begin one hour prior to the service. Interment with military honors will follow in the Jerome Cemetery. Arrangements are under the care of Farnsworth Mortuary of Jerome.

Hilda Mae Haynes

Feb. 27, 1935-May 13, 2012

RUPERT • Hilda Mae Haynes of Rupert, returned to her Heavenly Father on Sunday, May 13, 2012, due to a lingering illness.

Hilda Mae was born Feb. 27, 1935, to Dewey D. "Jake" Davis and Lola Mae Windes in Manchester, Okla. Lola and children later moved to Burley, Idaho, in 1943, where Lola met and married J.R. "June" Hogge, who became a loving father to Hilda Mae and her siblings: Helen Louise Davis, J.E. "Sonny/Dave" Davis, Keith Henry Davis and Anna Christine Hogge. Hilda became a member of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, when she was 15 years old and deeply loved and cherished the gospel in her life. Hilda then met the love of her life, Wayne Haynes at the Burley roller rink. They became quite the roller rink dancing couple; they loved to skate. Wayne and Hilda were married Sept. 24, 1951, in Burley, Idaho. They were later sealed for time and all eternity in the Idaho Falls Temple on March 6, 1976. This year, they would have celebrated their 61st anniversary. Wayne and Hilda lived in Burley and later moved to Paul for a while, where Wayne worked on the family farm until 1960, when they moved to Heyburn for a year and then to Rupert, where they currently reside.

Hilda worked at Ore-Ida and then at Magic Valley Foods when it opened until 1985. She also worked at May's Country Living, where she found her calling working, giving and sharing her love with those who needed taken care of. Hilda was an angel to all those who knew her. She touched so many lives in the time she was here on earth. Her grandchildren adored her and loved being around her. Hilda loved the gospel and held numerous callings in the church; den mother, scout leader, Relief Society secretary, and visiting teaching supervisor. Hilda and her companion, Esther Chandler, were faithful visiting teachers for 25 years, never missing the monthly visits to their assigned sisters and tending to their needs. In Hilda's later years, she became dear friends and helper to Marie Norby and Clara Shelton, whom she grew to love dearly. Hilda was always willing to deliver a meal to anyone in need. She sacrificed much for her family and her church, because she just loved doing it.

Hilda is survived by her husband, Wayne Haynes; her children, Robert (Sara) Haynes of Burley, Teresa (Bill) Baldauf of Arizona, Dennis Haynes of Burley and Steven (Terra) Haynes of Washington; 12 grandchildren, Brandon (Jamie), Trevor (Karie), Jason (Julie), Cory (Cassie), Kelli, Jenna, Tyler, Holly, Makenzie, Courtney, Josh and Brady; and 12 great-grandchildren; her siblings, J.E. "Sonny/Dave" (Maureen) Davis and Christine (Gene) Simons, both of Twin Falls; and nieces and nephews, Christy, Jody, Carol, Kenneth, Eric, Aaron and Dawn Michelle. They were all the light of Hilda's life. Hilda was preceded in death by her parents; her brother, Keith Davis; sister, Helen Davis Boswell; and a grandson, Nathan McKague.

Funeral arrangements are being taken care of by Hansen Mortuary of Rupert. The viewing will be held from 6 until 8 p.m. Sunday, May 20, at Hansen Mortuary, 710 Sixth St. The funeral will be at 11 a.m. Monday, May 21, at the Rupert LDS 1st Ward Chapel, with Bishop Clint Crane officiating. Burial will follow at the Paul Cemetery.

In lieu of flowers, contributions can be made in honor of Hilda's endless giving to others to The Humanitarian Services, in care of LDS Philanthropies, Joseph Smith Memorial Building, 35 E. South Temple St., No. 2E, Salt Lake City, UT 84150.

Bessie Bingham

Aug. 26, 1921-May 16, 2012

BURLEY • Bessie Irene Tinsley Bingham, age 90, of Burley, passed away at her home Wednesday, May 16, 2012.

She was born Aug. 26, 1921, in Burley, Idaho, the fourth child of William Edwin and Almeda Jolley Tinsley. She was the youngest child in the family. She had one brother and two sisters. The family moved to the Unity District of Burley in 1931. Bessie attended Burley schools, except for fifth and sixth grades when she attended school in View. She graduated from Burley High School and from Albion State Normal School, receiving a teaching certificate. She taught school for one year at Vernon in a one-room school five miles from Ashton. She had five grades in one room.

Bessie married the love of her life, Dee Rex Bingham, during her Christmas vacation on Dec. 25, 1941. This was just 18 days after the attack of Pearl Harbor. Their marriage was solemnized in the Logan Utah LDS Temple on Oct. 20, 1942. They farmed in the Unity area for two years prior to her husband entering the United States Army in December 1943. She followed her husband soldier while he was stationed in Abilene, Texas; Denver, Colo.; and Brigham City, Utah. She returned to Burley while Dee Rex was sent to Europe. Upon his honorable discharge, they returned to the life of farming and owned and operated farms in the Pella area of Burley and in Jerome.

In May of 1977, Bessie seemed to have extra time on her hands and decided to enroll in the Overland Beauty College. She received her license in cosmetology and used this talent for family and friends.

She was a lifelong member of the LDS Church and served in various areas of the church, including Relief Society, Young Women, Primary and was a sought after as organist, pianist and music director. She and Dee Rex received a mission call in November of 1982, to act as the rotating couple at the church sites in Palmyra, N.Y., of the New York Rochester Mission. They then served a second mission in the Australia Perth Mission and spent several years serving as workers in the Boise Idaho Temple.

Bessie is survived by her husband, Dee Rex Bingham of Burley; her children, Kendall (Connie) Bingham of Sigurd, Utah, Randy (Janet) Bingham of Burley, Loren (Adele) Bingham of Hazelton, Dee Ann (Dennis) James of Burley, Steven (Deborah) Bingham of Twin Falls and Dean (Debbie) Bingham of Jerome; 30 grandchildren; and 73 great-grandchildren. She was preceded in death by her parents, one brother, two sisters and four great-grandchildren.

The funeral will be held at 11 a.m. Monday, May 21, at the Burley LDS Stake Center, 2050 Normal Ave. in Burley, with Bishop Mark Dowdle officiating. Burial will be in the Gem Memorial Gardens. Friends may call from 6 until 8 p.m. Sunday, May 20, at the Rasmussen Funeral Home, 1350 E. 16th St. in Burley, and from 10 until 10:45 a.m. Monday at the church.

The family suggests memorials be directed to the LDS Church Perpetual Education Fund.

Agnes 'Pauline' Hildreth

Aug. 3, 1941-May 15, 2012

TWIN FALLS • Agnes "Pauline" Hildreth, 70, of Twin Falls, joined her Heavenly Father on Monday, May 15, 2012, with her loving family by her side after a lengthy battle with cancer.

Polly was born Aug. 3, 1941, to John and Deloris Searcy in Los Angeles, Calif. She graduated from Porterville High School. On Aug. 12, 1960, she married the love of her life, Patrick C. Hildreth. To this union was born the pride of Polly's life, Deborah P. Hildreth Masters and Bryon P. Hildreth. She spent the early years of their marriage being a devoted wife, mother and homemaker. In later years, they purchased a cleaning business where she worked side by side with her husband. In 1974, they moved to Grand Junction, Colo., and then to Twin Falls, Idaho, in 1979.

She had an overwhelming amount of love for her Lord and Savior Jesus Christ and spent her life serving the Lord and sharing the gospel. She was an amazing woman who trusted and never lost faith in her maker. She belonged to the Magic Valley Jubilee, where she sang praise and worship, which she loved to do. She was also a member of the Bible Study Fellowship. "Well done, thy good and faithful servant!" (Matthew 25:21)

She is survived by her loving husband of 51 years, Pat Hildreth; one daughter, Debbie (Jeff) Masters; one son, Bryon (Rachel) Hildreth; five grandsons, Ross (Tosha) Masters, Joshua Masters, Colin Masters, Cooper Hildreth and Jacob Hildreth; one great-grandson, Hesson James Masters; and two brothers, Wes (Patricia) Searcy and Lee (Ricki) Searcy. Preceding her are her parents; one brother, August Searcy; and two sisters, Jeanette Kinyon and Mary Black.

The family would like to thank Hospice Visions and staff for their wonderful services and would like to express a heartfelt thank you to Loralyn, Adrianna, Vidi and Midge Fisher for all the tender loving care that they gave to our precious wife and mother.

The funeral will be held at 10 a.m. Monday, May 21, at Parke's Magic Valley Funeral Home, 2551 Kimberly Road in Twin Falls. A viewing will be held from 2 to 4 p.m. Sunday, May 20, at the funeral home.

Those wishing to share condolences may do so at www.magicvalleyfuneralhome.com.

SENIOR

Q. I used to laugh a lot, but since my husband became ill there doesn't seem to be much to smile about.

A. You are entitled to a smile, and even to a good laugh! It may seem odd to discuss laughter and humor in serious caregiving situations, but studies show that humor helps reduce stress. Using your sense of humor reduces risks and helps you have a healthier life. Plus it is free! Finding the humor in everyday situations helps you ease tensions, get control, and reduce embarrassment in awkward moments. When you laugh, your whole body is involved. As the body relaxes, tension decreases. Laughter stimulates your heart and digestion rate. Laughter increases oxygen in the bloodstream which benefits the entire cardiovascular system. It may be hard to find much to laugh about some days. But using your sense of humor can turn many difficult situations around, and make you a better and healthier companion.

Postives Plenty for College of Idaho's Decision to Bring Back Football

THE NEWS: The College of Idaho's Board of Trustees overwhelmingly votes to bring back football to the Caldwell school, starting in the 2014 season.

THE MUSE: First, a little personal history. This corner didn't know the College of Idaho even existed prior to moving here last summer. And it knew nothing about the quality of the school until talk surfaced recently that school leaders were considering bringing the sport back.

It reminded me of a story legendary in University of Oklahoma circles. The Sooners were long a collegiate football power when, in 1964 before a state legislature budget hearing, University of Oklahoma President George L. Cross said, "We want to build a university of which the football team can be proud."

Today, OU, as it's universally known, is one of the top state universities in the country. Among public schools, it ranks first in per capita enrollment of National Merit Scholars and in the top 10 in Rhodes Scholar graduates. It's safe to say that Cross' "vision" has been largely fulfilled.

With the College of Idaho, this story is turned on its head somewhat. It has already attained acclaim in

Time Set for Boise State-BYU Game

TIMES-NEWS

ESPN announced Wednesday that Boise State's Sept. 20 home football game against Brigham Young will kick off at 7 p.m., one of three games to be broadcast by the family of ESPN networks this fall.

The game against BYU joins the season opener against Michigan State (Aug. 31, 6 p.m., ESPN) and the Dec. 1 season finale against Nevada (time and channel TBA) on ESPN's list of Bronco broadcasts. Only back-to-back games against New Mexico (Sept. 29) and Southern Mississippi (Oct. 6) have yet to have any television details announced.

The remainder of the Broncos' schedule will be broadcast on either the NBC Sports Network or CBS Sports Network, both of which are cable channels.

ISU Escapes APR Hit

The Idaho State football team, which received a one-year postseason ban for low academic progress rates for the 2011 season, will not have any such penalty or loss of scholarships this year, the school announced in a press release.

Schools below the NCAA-mandated benchmark of 930 can expect penalties of varying degrees, dependent upon their score. Although the NCAA has not yet released its official APR scores, Idaho State is confident it will exceed the benchmark and as a result, have its full allotment of scholarships and practice time, as well as postseason eligibility — the latter being a moot point in 2011 as ISU went 2-9.

Seahawks Fullback Robinson Promotes Fitness in Richfield

Michael Robinson found eager ears, inquisitive questions during his Fuel Up to Play 60 stop.

BY PATRICK SHELTRA
psheltra@magicvalley.com

RICHFIELD • Michael Robinson's first trip into this rural Idaho town was as jarring as the blocks he lays on defenders as the Seattle Seahawks' fullback.

"Oh man, I had no idea. I've never been here before," Robinson said. "Riding in, you see the (sign) that says 'Population 482,' you're kind of like, 'Whoa. OK! I didn't even know there were towns this small.'

It didn't take long for Robinson, who grew up in Richmond, Va., to feel right at home.

The six-year NFL pro was in town as part of the United Dairymen of Idaho and Idaho Dairy Council's Fuel Up to Play 60 campaign, designed fight childhood obesity by encouraging school-aged children to reap the benefits of regular exercise and good eating habits.

One side of the high school gymnasium was packed with enthusiastic students from kindergartners to soon-to-be-graduating seniors, and they relished the opportunity to get a brush with fame.

"I'm glad I'm here and I can tell the students are really, really juiced up about it," Robinson said before he spoke to the students for more than 30 minutes. "It's for a good cause."

Richfield's efforts, spearheaded by athletic director and head football coach Garr Ward in the Play 60 campaign drew the notice of the dairy council, which selected Richfield as one of two schools in the entire state to host

IDAHO STATESMAN

BOISE • Boise State may have found a solution to its Big East problem — just in time.

In order to move its football program to the Big East (and a much-larger TV contract that presumably will come with it), Boise State needs a stable home for its non-football teams. The Broncos were slated to join the WAC, but that league is down to five other members and facing more challenges.

Enter the Big West, a California-based non-football league that is adding Hawaii and San Diego State and was Boise State's conference home in the late 1990s.

The league will "entertain" adding Boise State and has sent the Broncos the equivalent of a membership application, Commissioner Dennis Farrell said.

"We're open to at least explore the possibility," he told the Idaho Statesman on Tuesday, one day after the league concluded meetings.

Boise State needs eight votes from the league's 10 2013-14 members to be accepted into the conference. Those schools are Long Beach State, Cal State Fullerton, UC Santa Barbara, Cal Poly, UC Riverside, UC Irvine, Cal State Northridge, UC Davis, San Diego State and Hawaii.

There is no timetable for a decision, but Boise State faces a July 1 deadline to withdraw from the Mountain West.

Lawrie Joins List of Baseball's Wildest Rants

ASSOCIATED PRESS

Helmet tossing and bat banging have become all the rage, it seems. Yet Brett Lawrie and Bryce Harper still have a long way to go before hitting our list of baseball's wildest rants and raves.

These Guys All Rank

George Brett Has a player ever looked more crazed on a ballfield than Mr. Pine Tar? Seriously, ever? Arms waving, eyes bulging and screaming with every step, the Royals star charged from the Yankee Stadium dugout after umpire Tim McClelland called him out in 1983. It took other umpires, teammates and even opponents to settle down Brett, and nearly a month to officially finish the game. Almost 30 years later, it might be the most-replayed meltdown ever. "I went a little ballistic," he said.

Lou Piniella: He earned his place forever when he went batty — make that baggy — in 1990 while managing the Reds. Upset by a call at first base, he flung his hat at umpire Dutch Rennert's feet and was ejected. Not-so-Sweet Lou then picked up first base and tossed it into the infield. Not completely satisfied, Piniella grabbed the bag again and threw it into right field. "Some guys were saying they should make it a new Olympic sport," Cincinnati first baseman Hal Morris said at the time.

Billy Martin vs. Reggie Jackson: The Bronx Zoo at its best, circa 1977. Upset after he thought Jackson loafed for a fly ball, Martin tried to embarrass the famed outfielder by pulling him in the middle of an inning. At Fenway Park, no less, during a nationally televised game, when national TV was something special. Martin was waiting for Jackson in the dugout, jaw clenched, looking ready to tangle. Jackson stood with his arms apart as Martin fumed, and they avoided coming to blows.

Roger Clemens vs. Mike Piazza: The Rocket had beaned Piazza three months earlier and tension was high at Yankee Stadium as they faced each in the first inning in Game 2 of the 2000 World Series. When Piazza's bat shattered, Clemens grabbed the jagged barrel and slung it in front of the Mets star as he ran toward first base, narrowly missing him. Players from both sides came onto the field, without incident. Clemens claimed he simply threw the broken wood to the batboy. "It was bizarre," Piazza said.

Roberto Alomar: A great career was marred by what happened late in the 1996 season. Angered by a called third strike, the Baltimore star got into a venomous argument with plate umpire John Hirschbeck and then spit in his face. The next day, upset by Alomar's remarks, Hirschbeck bolted into the Orioles' clubhouse in Toronto. The spitting, some feel, cost him first-ballot election to the Hall of Fame. "I regret every bit of it. I apologized many times to John," Alomar said after getting enough votes this year.

Lee Elia: A light-hitting shortstop, he left his mark on the majors with his mouth. All in little over 3 minutes, too. Beaten down after another loss in 1983, the Chicago Cubs' manager unleashed a tirade that, at best count, included almost 50 pieces of profanity. Mostly, he took off on the booing fans at Wrigley Field. More or less, he said: "Eighty five percent of the world is working. The other 15 come out here." Elia apologized to the team and city soon thereafter, and was fired later in the season.

Earl Weaver: For someone who tore up rule-books and pointed the bill of his cap backward to go nose-to-nose with umpires, what the Hall of Fame manager did in 1977 seemed downright mild. But the Baltimore skipper was sure he was right, and pulled the O's off the field in Toronto down 4-0 in the fifth inning over a dispute about the tarp at Exhibition Stadium. The only forfeit in Orioles' history came during a pennant race. As for his argument with ump Marty Springstead, Weaver said: "The man gets incoherent."

Lenny Randle vs. Frank Lucchesi: Randle sometimes shows up in highlight reels for the time he got on his hands and knees and tried to blow a trickler down the third-base line into foul territory. But there was nothing funny about his confrontation with the Texas manager in 1977. Having lost his starting job, Randle began arguing with Lucchesi during batting practice and then punched him in the face, breaking his cheekbone. The Rangers suspended Randle for 30 days and soon traded him away.

Disco Demolition Night: What began as a playful promotion ended up as a near-riot at Comiskey Park in 1979. The idea was for fans to break despised disco records to the ballpark, and they'd be put in a box and blown up in-between games of a Detroit-Chicago doubleheader. An overflow crowd turned rowdy and overran the field, setting fires and forcing Game 2 to be called off. Said Mike Veeck, in charge of team promotions for the White Sox: "I grew up when people were marching for civil rights, marching against the war. I didn't think they would be marching because they hated the Bee Gees."

Phillip Wellman: Haven't heard of him? Well, you've probably seen him. He was managing the Double-A Mississippi Braves in 2007 when his tantrum went viral. Peeved that an umpire ejected his pitcher for using a foreign substance, Wellman threw his hat and started shouting. He piled dirt on the plate and drew an outline of the dish. Later, he yanked up a pair of bases, got down on his belly to pretend he was crawling, threw the rosin bag at the umpire and blew kisses to the crowd. Oh yeah, that guy.

Wednesday's event.

The school received $4,000 in grant money and used it to upgrade exercise equipment at the school and buy a smoothie machine for healthy snacks for its athletes, among other things.

Robinson gave three pieces of advice to his audience — to eat breakfast every day (Robinson's favorite cereal is Fruit Loops), to eat fruits and vegetables whenever possible and to go outside and be active.

Then he turned it over to the students to ask questions.

Most of them were pretty harmless, like what Robinson's favorite color, animal and fruit and vegetable. For the record, it is Seahawk Blue, the English bulldog Robinson owns, and nectarines, bananas and broccoli.

Others were a little more inquisitive, such as Robinson's salary ("A lot more today than when I was 18"), the size of his house ("It's a small house in Arizona.") and whether he dreaded going up against a particular opposing player ("I fear no man. You can't play this game in fear").

A faculty member asked Robinson about the importance of doing well in school. The gymnasium went silent.

After emphasizing how temporary his current profession is — NFL contracts are not guaranteed and the average playing career is accepted as being between three and six years — Robinson reflected back on his college days.

"The best thing I got from Penn State was not playing for Joe Paterno and not getting drafted by the NFL," Robinson said, "but the two degrees I earned (in public relations and broadcast journalism)."

After fielding about two dozen questions, Robinson conducted a touchdown dance-off between a handful of students and gave the winner an autographed Seahawks cap and football. The other participants received a football, and Robinson handed a banner to Ward in Seahawks' colors with the number 12 on it, to signify the 12th Man and honor the boisterous Seahawks fans who watch the team play in the fall.

"We thrilled to be teamed up with Play 60 because we're committed to our youth here in Idaho," said Julie Lund, a member of the United Dairywomen of Idaho's board of directors. "The Idaho Dairy Farm family loves to promote activity and fight against childhood obesity. We're very proud of the sponsorship that we have with the Seattle Seahawks."

The Big West was one of the conferences that Boise State considered joining last fall, but the league was not interested. Farrell said there is more "openness" to adding the Broncos now. That could have something to do with San Diego State and its strong basketball program.

The Aztecs are set to join Boise State as football-only members of the Big East next year. However, if the Broncos were to remain in the Mountain West for lack of a good home for its other sports, the Big East could opt not to keep San Diego State, which would push the Aztecs back to the Mountain West in all sports and deprive the Big West of a long-coveted member.

San Diego State Athletic Director Jim Sterk has acknowledged aiding Boise State. Farrell said San Diego State has "some sensitivity to Boise State's situation."

Hawaii, which is joining the Big West in July when its football program heads to the Mountain West, is paying travel subsidies to offset additional costs for the Big West members. Boise State could do the same or forego league revenues to help gain acceptance.

The Big West does not sponsor three Boise State sports: wrestling, women's gymnastics and women's swimming and diving.

Boise State declined comment Tuesday.

Hot Marlins Extend May Streak

ASSOCIATED PRESS

ATLANTA • Giancarlo Stanton hit a two-run homer and possibly saved two runs with a diving catch and the Miami Marlins beat the Braves 8-4 on Wednesday night, adding another win to their impressive May record.

Miami is 12-3 this month after a slow 8-14 start in April. The Marlins (20-17) moved three games over .500 for the first time this season.

PADRES 4, DODGERS 2
SAN DIEGO • Chase Headley homered, doubled and drove in three runs, and San Diego rallied to beat Los Angeles, helping lefty Clayton Richard snap a personal five-game skid.

NATIONALS 7, PIRATES 4
WASHINGTON • Adam LaRoche broke open a tight game with a three-run double for his 1,000th career hit after homering for No. 999, and Gio Gonzalez took over the NL strikeout lead from teammate Stephen Strasburg by fanning 10 in seven innings as Washington beat Pittsburgh.

PHILLIES 9, CUBS 2
CHICAGO • Carlos Ruiz hit a tiebreaking solo homer in the eighth inning and Philadelphia used Hector Luna's first career grand slam to pull away against Chicago.

REDS 6, METS 3
NEW YORK • Todd Frazier homered twice, Brandon Phillips hit a tying single off Jon Rauch in the eighth and Cincinnati beat New York.

TORONTO • Edwin Encarnacion hit a three-run homer, J.P. Arencibia added a two-run drive and Toronto beat New York.

INDIANS 9, MARINERS 3
CLEVELAND • Ubaldo Jimenez overcame a shaky start to get the win and Cleveland pounded out a season-best five doubles to beat Seattle.

Seattle starter Felix Hernandez (3-3) gave up 10 hits and six earned runs in only 3 2-3 innings. He and Jimenez combined for a 34-minute, 59-pitch first inning that ended with Cleveland ahead 4-1.

TWINS 11, TIGERS 7
DETROIT • Jamey Carroll hit a two-run double in the sixth to give Minnesota the lead, and the Twins outlasted sloppy Detroit, which made four errors in the first three innings.

RANGERS 4, ATHLETICS 1
ARLINGTON, Texas • Yu Darvish pitched 7 2-3 strong innings and Adrian Beltre had a two-run homer to help Texas beat Oakland.

academic circles, earning favorable rankings from U.S. News and World Report, Forbes Magazine's America's Top Colleges and the Princeton Review. But how many people outside of Idaho actually know this? Football isn't going to make the school universally known like it did for Oklahoma, but it can help present an image of the school in front of people who know little or nothing about it.

From a football perspective, high school sophomores and juniors who have a firm grasp of reality and know their athletic limitations now have a place in which they can get a good education, close to home, all while continuing to play the sport they love. Carroll College in Montana is a power at the NAIA level and its roster featured more than three dozen Idaho products this past season, when it reached the NAIA title game.

How many of those players had to convince themselves to move so far from home, or outright lamented the prospect? Better yet, how many kids' dreams of playing college football were stashed away like so many yearbooks in the attic when they weren't Division I caliber?

By offering football, the College of Idaho has ensured that those numbers will shrink. For those of us who love the game, that's a good thing.

THE NEWS: College of Southern Idaho baseball player Billy-Bob Ward is arrested and charged with three felony counts of delivery of a controlled substance, i.e. anabolic steroids.

THE MUSE: Taking a big-picture view and trying not to single out anyone at CSI, can we really say this is surprising? For all the efforts Major League Baseball has made to distance itself from the Steroid Era and ensure that steroid use isn't as rampant in the sport as it was a decade ago, the developments at CSI show there is only so much smaller organizations can do to keep their programs free of the problem. If it is happening at CSI, it is probably happening at several other junior colleges as well.

That is not an excuse or justification for what happened at CSI. On the other end of the spectrum, there are probably those who will have knee-jerk reactions toward the CSI coaching staff and head coach Boomer Walker, and conclude either that the program is out of control or that Walker is out of touch with his players.

This corner is not as immersed in the culture of CSI baseball as others who have been around longer. But when Walker says his program is not one that places winning first, second and last, he sounds sincere and believable.

Retroactively or otherwise, CSI must have a zero-tolerance policy toward steroid use. How it goes about discovering and dismissing from school those who use steroids is a matter it will have to resolve largely on its own. But with the charges levied against Ward, it has been given a head start in its search.

ISU's APR score last year was 888. So long as the Bengals' two-year score is 930 or its four-year score is 900, the program will continue to operate penalty free.

Bruins' Byce Signs With Walla Walla

Another Magic Valley product will continue her collegiate playing career at Walla Walla Community College.

Jade Byce, a middle blocker on Twin Falls' state-qualifying volleyball team, will join schoolmates Eric Harr (men's basketball) and Josie Jordan (women's basketball), as well as Canyon Ridge softball player Karly Hudelson, at the Washington state school next season.

Byce won't be seeing any immediate playing time as she is rehabilitating a surgically repaired knee.

"Jade has a lot of potential as a collegiate player," WWCC coach Tim Toon said. "She will be small by middle blocker standards but she can compete with the bigger players because she is smart.

"Twin Falls High School has been a great training ground for our volleyball program here at WWCC," Toon said.

Byce was a two-year starter for the Bruins and an all-Great Basin Conference selection in her senior year. WWCC is coming off a runner-up finish at the NWAACC championships as it went 35-10.

Ex-Pilot Crane Inks With EOU

Michael Crane, a Glenns Ferry alumnus who has played the last two seasons at Walla Walla Community College, has signed to play with NAIA Eastern Oregon, joining his volleyball-playing sister Alisha, who is entering her senior year at the La Grande, Ore., school.

Crane averaged 8.1 points on 55 percent shooting from the field and 6.9 rebounds per game from his guard-forward position. The 6-3 sophomore played a key role in the Warriors' 19-10 season, scoring in double figures 11 times, with a season-high of 18 against the Linfield junior varsity. Twice, he grabbed 18 rebounds in a game.

Olympic Torch Headed to U.K., Beckham

ASSOCIATED PRESS ATHENS, Greece • Time to get out the cameras: Britain's most photogenic man will be bringing the Olympic flame back from Greece. David Beckham is joining officials at a handover ceremony Thursday in Athens...

Derby Runner-up Is Preakness Favorite

ASSOCIATED PRESS BALTIMORE • Just like in the Kentucky Derby, Bodemeister is the favorite in the Preakness. This time, Bob Baffert intends to justify the odds. Despite finishing second in the Derby, Bodemeister was installed as the 8-5 favorite for Saturday's second leg of the Triple Crown...

Graphic showing the 137th Preakness Stakes post positions with Bodemeister in the 7th position and other horses listed.

The Trip to Britain

The torch always travels first class, gets its own seat and its own guard. This time it's on British Airways flight 2012, placed in a miner's lantern for the safety of everyone else on the plane.

Parties, Parties Everywhere

Best thing about the Olympic torch relay: there are street parties and community events everywhere it goes, night after night. Brits like a good party — this is a country where the pub remains a cherished institution and a good pint is never too far away.

From West to East, South to North

A total of 8,000 people will carry the torch during the 70-day relay that begins at Land's End — the furthest point west in England — and reaches the Shetland Islands, off Scotland's northern coast. It also goes to Ireland as a special gesture of goodwill.

The Torchbearers

Who carries the torch? Nice people. Thousands of community organizers, cancer survivors, disabled children, veterans and other local heroes will each do a stint. Olympic organizers hope

LEGAL NOTICE DECISION MEMO

Special use Permit -Virginia Tech Small Seismometer Line Boise, Payette, Salmon-Challis, and Sawtooth National Forests On May 14, 2012, Cecilia R. Seesholtz, Forest Supervisor of the Boise National Forest, made a decision to issue a special use permit to Virginia Polytechnic Institute and State University (i.e. Virginia Tech) for the temporary installation of a small seismometer transect line, running roughly east to west across the Payette, Boise, Salmon-Challis, and Sawtooth National Forests. The Boise National Forest Supervisor has been designated by the Intermountain Regional Forester as the authorized officer for the proposed seismometer line to be installed on these four National Forests in Idaho.

The small seismometer transect line will enter the Payette National Forest in sec. 23, T. 14 N, R. 6 W., of the Monroe Butte area and travel east exiting the Sawtooth National Forest in sec. 25, T. 11 N., R. 16 E., of the Holman Creek area. Seismometers would be temporarily deployed every 100-500 meters along approximately 160 miles of roads and trails on National Forest System lands within the four National Forests identified above.

The small seismometers would be placed in small, hand dug holes of approximately 6 inches deep, 6 inches wide, and 18 inches long. Seismometers would typically be placed in areas previously disturbed by road construction. Where previously disturbed areas are not obvious, seismometers would be placed on the immediate edge of the road or trail segment. The placement of seismometers would occur between July and September of 2012, they would be set out for a period of 2 to 8 days and then immediately retrieved and the holes filled no later than October 1, 2012.

Implementation is tentatively scheduled to begin mid- to late-summer 2012 and is expected to be completed in the fall of 2012.

This decision is subject to appeal pursuant to Forest Service regulations at 36 CFR 215. Appeals must meet the content requirements of 36 CFR 215.14. Only individuals or organizations who submitted comments or otherwise expressed interest in the project during the 30-day notice and comment period may appeal. Appeals must be postmarked or received by the Appeal Deciding Officer within 45 days of the publication of the legal notice of this Decision in the Idaho Statesman, the newspaper of record for Boise National Forest, the designated lead National Forest for this project (2010 October 05 - 27/20-1 correspondence). It is anticipated that the legal notice will be published in the Idaho Statesman, on or about, May 17, 2012. The Idaho Statesman legal notice publication date is the exclusive means for calculating the time to file an appeal. Timeframe information from other sources should not be relied on.

The Appeal Deciding Officer is the Intermountain Regional Forester. Appeals must be sent to: Appeal Deciding Officer, Intermountain Region USFS, 324 25th Street, Ogden, Utah 84401; or by fax to 801-625-5277; or by e-mail to: appeals-intermtn-regional-office@fs.fed.us. E-mailed appeals must be submitted in rich text (rtf) or Microsoft Word (doc) format and must include the project name in the subject line. In cases where no identifiable name is attached to an electronic message, a verification of identity will be required. A scanned signature is one way to provide verification. Appeals may also be hand-delivered to the above address, during regular business hours of 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Mountain Time, Monday through Friday, excluding holidays.

If no appeals are filed within the 45-day time period, implementation of the decision may occur on, but not before, 5 business days from the close of the appeal filing period. When appeals are filed, implementation may occur on, but not before, the 15th business day following the date of the last appeal disposition.

For further information, contact Elaine Alexander at the Boise National Forest Supervisor's Office; 1249 South Vinnell Way, Suite 200; Boise, ID 83709; by telephone at 208-373-4100; or email at ealexander@fs.fed.us.

NOTICE OF PROPOSED CHANGE OF WATER RIGHT TRANSFER NO. 77387

JEROME CHEESE CO, PO BOX 485, JEROME, ID 83338 has filed Application No. 77387 for changes to the following water rights within JEROME, BINGHAM, GOODING County(s): Right No(s): 36-7337F, 36-2554B, 36-2461B, 36-16907, 36-16909, 36-16911, 36-16380, 35-14253; to see a full description of these rights and the proposed transfer, please see www.idwr.idaho.gov/apps/ExtSearch/WRFiling.asp. The purpose of the transfer is to change a portion of the above rights as follows: Application proposes transferring a 67.2-acre (0.83 cfs & 200.1 afa) portion of a groundwater irrigation right from a farm located approximately 6.5 miles east of Jerome and converting it to year round commercial use at an existing cheese factory located approximately 1 mile south of Jerome. The portion of groundwater right will be combined with three existing groundwater rights (that currently allow for the diversion of 2.7 cfs & 615.0 afa for commercial use) at the cheese factory and will be diverted from two existing wells. No new wells will be drilled. In order to mitigate impact to hydraulically connected reaches of the Snake River, 9.3 acres from two groundwater rights diverting a combined total of 0.17 cfs and 37.2 afa will no longer be irrigated.
 For additional information concerning the property location, contact Southern Region office at (208) 736-3033. Protests may be submitted based on the criteria of Idaho Code Sec. 42-222. Any protest against the proposed change must be filed with the Department of Water Resources, Southern Region, 1341 Fillmore St, Suite 200, Twin Falls ID 83301 together with a protest fee of $25.00 for each application on or before June 4, 2012. The protestant must also send a copy of the protest to the applicant.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

"The smiler with the knife under the cloak."
 — Geoffrey Chaucer

Today's deal reminds me of an expression my grandmother used to use: "He was so sharp, he cut himself."
 The exact auction was different at the various tables, but East frequently opened three diamonds and South overcalled four spades. West leads the heart king and switches to the diamond eight. Plan the play.
 You are not sure whether East has six diamonds or seven for his opening pre-empt at favorable vulnerability, so it looks dangerous to duck the diamond. The problem is that if you win and play a spade to the queen and another spade, West may win his ace and play a second diamond. Now a third round of diamonds may promote a trick for his presumed spade 10.
 One declarer, alert to this danger, found a neat solution. At trick three, he crossed to dummy's club ace and played the heart queen, discarding his second diamond from hand. This play was designed to cut the communications between his opponents' hands so they could no longer get the trump promotion.
 Or could they? While declarer had neatly protected himself against an imaginary danger, he had created a new and fatal problem. The real layout was as shown in the diagram.

When West won the heart ace, he continued with a second round of clubs. He then won the first round of trump with the ace and gave his partner a club ruff. One down!
 Note that almost any other "normal" line of play would have succeeded.

ANSWER: I like to play that the one-spade rebid shows at least four clubs. (With only three clubs and 4-3-3-3 pattern, I rebid one no-trump over one heart.) Accordingly, I can raise to two clubs with a clear conscience. With the spade king instead of the queen I might have bid three clubs instead, but this hand looks just short of invitational values.

Times-News Classifieds 208-733-0931 ext. 2

Today is Thursday, May 17, the 138th day of 2012. There are 228 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight:
On May 17, 1937, Teddy Hill and His Orchestra recorded "King Porter Stomp" for RCA Victor's Bluebird label in New York; making his recording debut was trumpeter Dizzy Gillespie.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:
In 1510, Early Renaissance painter Sandro Botticelli died in Florence, Italy; he was probably in his mid 60s.
In 1792, the New York Stock Exchange had its origins as a group of brokers met under a tree on Wall Street.
In 1849, fire erupted in St. Louis, Mo., resulting in the loss of three lives, more than 400 buildings and some two dozen steamships.
In 1912, the Socialist Party of America nominated Eugene V. Debs for president at its convention in Indianapolis.
In 1939, Britain's King George VI and Queen Elizabeth arrived in Quebec on the first visit to Canada by reigning British sovereigns.
In 1946, President Harry S. Truman seized control of the nation's railroads, delaying - but not preventing - a threatened strike by engineers and trainmen.
In 1954, the U.S. Supreme Court, in Brown v. Board of Education of Topeka, unanimously struck down racially segregated public schools.
In 1961, Cuban leader Fidel Castro offered to release prisoners captured in the Bay of Pigs invasion in exchange for 500 bulldozers. (The prisoners were eventually freed in exchange for medical supplies.)
In 1971, "Godspell," a contemporary musical inspired by the Gospel According to St. Matthew, opened off-Broadway at the Cherry Lane Theatre.
In 1980, rioting that claimed 18 lives erupted in Miami's Liberty City after an all-white jury in Tampa acquitted four former Miami police officers of fatally beating black insurance executive Arthur McDuffie.

In 1987, 37 American sailors were killed when an Iraqi warplane attacked the U.S. Navy frigate Stark in the Persian Gulf. (Iraq apologized for the attack, calling it a mistake, and paid more than $27 million in compensation.)
In 1992, orchestra leader Lawrence Welk died in Santa Monica, Calif., at age 89.
Ten years ago: Former President Jimmy Carter ended a historic visit to Cuba sharply at odds with the Bush administration over how to deal with Fidel Castro, saying limits on tourism and trade often hurt Americans more than Cubans. Joe Black, the first black pitcher to win a World Series game, for the Brooklyn Dodgers in 1952, died in Scottsdale, Ariz., at age 78.
Five years ago: President George W. Bush and retiring British Prime Minister Tony Blair held a joint news conference at the White House, during which Blair allowed not a single regret about the Iraq war alliance. World Bank President Paul Wolfowitz announced he would resign at the end of June 2007, following controversy over his handling of a pay package for his girlfriend. Trains crossed the border dividing the two Koreas for the first time in more than half a century.
One year ago: Queen Elizabeth II began the first visit by a British monarch to the Republic of Ireland, a four-day trip to highlight strong Anglo-Irish relations and the success of Northern Ireland peacemaking. Former California Gov. Arnold Schwarzenegger issued a statement confirming a Los Angeles Times report that he had fathered a child with a woman on his household staff more than a decade earlier. (Schwarzenegger and his wife, Maria Shriver, had announced their separation on May 9, 2011.) Baseball Hall of Famer Harmon Killebrew, 74, died in Scottsdale, Ariz.

SUDOKU

Sudoku is a number-placing puzzle based on a 9x9 grid with several given numbers. The object is to place the numbers 1 to 9 in the empty squares so that each row, each column and each 3x3 box contains the same number only once. The difficulty level of the Conceptis Sudoku increases from Monday to Sunday.
