Growing Number of Idaho Grandparents Raising Children

BY KIMBERLEE KRUESI

TWIN FALLS • When Cathye Sexton first agreed to take care of her grandson, she thought it was only going to be for six months. Her daughter was caught in the middle of substance abuse problems and it was quickly spiraling out of control. Henny, her 8-month-old grandson, just tested positive for methamphetamine. The courts wanted to place the grandson in a safe environment and Sexton was the best relative nearby to take care of him. “When I first got him, I was petrified,” Sexton said. “I didn’t know how to be a parent. It had been 35 years since I had taken care of a kid.” At the time, Sexton hoped her daughter would become stable enough to take back her son after a few months. But it never happened. Sexton, like many of the thousands of family members taking care of relatives in Idaho, didn’t know where to turn for help. But she isn’t alone, according to a report from the Annie E. Casey Foundation. The Baltimore-based foundation is calling on government and communities to raise better support for “kinship care”

REMEMBERING A LOCAL LEGEND

TWIN FALLS • For Rodney Hopwood, remembering a legend is not so different from reciting poetry. “The smell of dew in the morning, the taste of dust and the anticipation of the horses waiting to ride,” said the longtime rancher and cowboy with a quiet but clear voice. “These things Henry and I share.” Hopwood is the type of cowboy you expect to find telling stories around an evening campfire. However, on Monday, he stood among a small crowd at the Twin Falls Cemetery, offering his respects to a legendary cowboy, Henry Harris.

Donations Coming in for Burley Ag Building

BY LAURIE WELCH

BURLEY • Students might soon find relief from overcrowded and poorly equipped classrooms in the agricultural sciences department of Burley High School as the Mini-Cassia agricultural community steps forward to help build a needed classroom and livestock arena.

“The really great part of this is there won’t be any taxpayer money used to build this,” said Lex Godfrey, one of three agricultural science instructors at the school.

Godfrey said although student enrollment at the school has declined in recent years, the number of students enrolling in agricultural science classes, especially the animal sciences, is on the rise.

Godfrey said the department is really tapping into the subpopulations at the school, including Hispanic and female students.

“They are really finding a home out here,” Godfrey said.

Seven years ago, the increased demand for agriculture classes necessitated hiring a third instructor in the department, but that third teacher doesn’t have his own classroom.

The local dairy boom has driven some of the student interest in ag-based classes.

Godfrey said in order to accommodate the growing interest, the Burley High School ag department

KETCHUM • Tiny flags fluttered above more than a hundred gravesites in the Ketchum Cemetery as some 125 people gathered Monday morning to pay their respects to American veterans.

An empty seat draped with a black MIA/POW flag reminded them of their own Army Sgt. Bowe Bergdahl, who was captured nearly three years ago in Afghanistan. Bergdahl is America’s only POW in the Afghanistan and Iraq conflicts.

“Our country is still occupied in war. Not only are our men and women in danger, but their loved ones have many concerns,” said Barbara Corwin, who serves as chaplain for the David Ketchum Post American Legion, one of Idaho’s largest American Legion chapters. “Hear our prayer for those who put the welfare of others ahead of their own. ... Help us to shape a world where we will lay down the arms of war.” Lt. Col. URA Plans Special Meeting Today on Chobani Credit

TIMES-NEWS

TWIN FALLS • The Twin Falls Urban Renewal Agency will hold a special meeting at 3 p.m. today to discuss extending and increasing its line of credit with Chobani by nearly $6 million.

URA Executive Director Melinda Anderson said the URA and Chobani signed a line of credit agreement last year for $17.3 million. The reason: Neither the city nor the URA had the money to make required infrastructure improvements, including water system work, for Chobani to move in.

So the URA borrowed the money from Chobani at a 3 percent interest rate. But because the bond money is taking longer to come in than expected, the agency hopes to extend the maturity date on the loan from June 1 to July 30 to give it extra time.

Some of the water projects ran into unforeseen expenses, Anderson said, so the agency is also trying to increase the credit line to about $23 million.

The URA meets at Twin Falls City Council Chambers, located at 305 3rd Ave. E.

families and also improve awareness of existing resources.

According to the Annie E. Casey Foundation report, in Idaho, an estimated 7,000 children are currently in kinship care, up 100 percent from a decade ago. Almost 400 children are in kinship foster care homes, representing almost 30 percent of foster children in Idaho.

As the amount of children placed with relatives other than their parents grows, caregivers face several challenges when it comes to providing basic needs. For example, caregivers tend to be older, single, unemployed and on a limited income. Obtaining legal authority for health and educational decisions can be costly and sometimes it requires parents to sue their children for sole custody for the grandchild.

"There's a lot of grieving involved when grandparents become parents," said Deb Lattin, a local resource and service navigator for the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare. "You're grieving the loss of your child because you're usually going up against your child in court. You're also dealing with the loss of being a grandparent."

Lattin said it's not unusual for caregivers to not know they can access support from programs

By the Numbers

The number of grandparents serving as parents across the Magic Valley has continued to grow. As of 2011, here is the number of grandparents raising grandchildren by county:

Blaine County: 134
Cassia County: 408
Gooding County: 238
Jerome County: 439

like Temporary Assistance for Needy Families.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture estimates that it costs $990 per month to raise a child. TANF offers kinship caregivers a little more than $300 per month to help cover the costs. However, both the Annie E. Casey Foundation and Lattin are encouraging programs to provide more resources to kinship caregivers.

"The federal government already has a solid framework in place for serving these families, and several states — such as Washington, Arizona and Pennsylvania — have taken steps to actively support extended family and friends as they assume their new caregiving roles," said Robert Geen, director of family services and systems policy at the Foundation in a statement. "Every state and community needs to adopt such changes, especially addressing the needs of lower-income kinship families."

It took Sexton several months before she became aware of financial and emotional support options available to her. The experience spurred her to become an AmeriCorps VISTA (Volunteers in Service to America) worker to help raise awareness for caregivers who might not know what's available to them.

"I didn't go to Health and Welfare when I first got Henny," Sexton said. "I didn't know what to do. I'm not working to make sure other people don't have to go through that."

Sexton has been taking care of Henny for three years. She says the transition hasn't been easy, but there are moments that make it worth it.

"Just the other day, Henny went up to my husband and asked to be picked up," Sexton said. "So he did and they walked out the door. Henny had his arms wrapped around him so tight and I just thought, this is why we're here. We're here for him."

and then quickly moved to cow punching and breaking horses. Eventually, he became ranch foreman and supervised white cowboys — a feat almost unheard of for a black man in that era.

Harris died in 1937 but today's ranching community still reveres Harris' fairness and reputation throughout the West.

After riding in some of the same parts of the country as Harris once did, Hopwood said he feels a special connection with the honored cowboy.

"Being a cowboy is not an easy life," he said. "It does something to you inside. I suspect Henry would feel the same way."

Those who gathered on Monday to remember Harris came from across southern Idaho. Some were history buffs who came with the hopes of learning a new story not told in a history book. While others came because they were related to Henry.

"I wouldn't be here today if it wasn't for Henry," said Geraldine Wilson, Harris' great niece who traveled with her daughter from Los Angeles to attend the day's ceremony.

Years ago, Les Sweeney of Payette campaigned to have Harris' accomplishments recognized. With Sweeney's help, Harris was inducted into the Buckaroo Hall of Fame in Winnemucca, Nev. in 2008 and into the National Hall of Fame in Fort Worth, Texas in 2009.

"He left a legacy of accomplishments," Sweeney said. "He was known and respected by everyone who knew him."

turned out all of the slugs were empty of explosives, save for one that contained a message written in Czech: "This is all we can do for now."

Crawford added that his base recently lost a pilot in Asia. For people like the pilot's young widow, he noted, "Memorial Day is every day. You can't get it out of their minds."

Attendees of the service, which has included Arnold Schwarzenegger in some years, jumped up from their seats to watch a fly-by of A-10 Thunderbolts from the Idaho Air National Guard. The Warthogs thundered across the sky, their dark bodies standing out against the freshly fallen snow on the mountain tops.

Afterward, attendees filed out in the field to inspect the decorated graves of men like A.H. Dolzhide, who fought in the Mexican War and eventually had a mining town and summit in the Smoky Mountains named for him. Other popular gravesites include those of Ernest Hemingway and his son Jack Hemingway, who convinced his superior officer that the fly-fishing rod that he strapped to his leg when parachuting behind enemy lines was a cleverly designed radio antenna.

Jack Hemingway spent the end of World War II in a German prisoner-of-war camp.

"As we go on our way, let us reflect that life is short ... so be swift to love and make haste to be kind," said Post Commander William Cassell.

T.F. Council to Discuss Airport Grant, Spice, Real Estate Swap

BY MELISSA DAVLIN
mdavlin@magicvalley.com

T.F. City Council

TWIN FALLS • The Twin Falls City Council has a packed schedule tonight.

At its weekly 5 p.m. meeting, the council will consider amending the city's controlled substance ordinance, a land swap with Twin Falls County, and a request to hire a grant writer who might help secure additional funds for the Magic Valley Regional Airport to potentially expand its flight schedule with SkyWest.

The meeting, normally held on a Monday, was postponed one day for the Memorial Day holiday.

This past fall, SkyWest shaved its Twin Falls schedule from four to three flights daily. But at a meeting earlier this month, airline representatives and Magic Valley business leaders discussed adding back that fourth flight - potentially a 30-seat Brasilia turbo-prop, or, less likely, a 50-seat regional jet service, according to agenda materials.

According to a letter submitted to the council by City Manager Travis Rothweiler and Airport Manager Bill Carberry, a $500,000 grant from the U.S. Department of Transportation, combined with a minimum of $50,000 in contributions from the Magic Valley business community, would help establish a revenue guarantee program with the airline.

A proposed agreement with Mead & Hunt, grant writers out of Oregon, says the contract would cost the city $14,950. The deadline for the grant application is June 11.

The council will also consider amending the city's controlled substance

When: 5 p.m. tonight
Where: City Council Chambers, 305 3rd Avenue East

statute to specifically include synthetic marijuana, known by names like spice and Hayze. The proposed change would make it illegal to possess inhalants or associated paraphernalia.

Also tonight, the council will hold a public hearing on disposing of two underutilized city properties, including selling a parking lot near First Federal Bank to the Twin Falls Urban Renewal Agency, and trading city-owned land near the Rock Creek Canyon with Twin Falls County. The city has discussed the land swap with the county to acquire nearly three acres at Blake Street North and Shoup Avenue West. If the deal goes through, those three acres could potentially become a community garden or a dog park.

In other business, the council will consider:

- Restarting the bid process for the Radio Communications Tower Project.
- Approving bids for two road repair projects, totaling $763,520.29.
- Appointing Craig Manning and Tom Reynolds to the Parks and Recreation Commission.

plans to construct a free-standing classroom and lab building. In the second phase of the project, they plan to construct an enclosed 80 foot by 60 foot livestock arena.

Godfrey said school district budget constraints means the department can't take students on field trips anymore and they must find ways to bring the types of information learned during field trips into the classroom with their current facility constraints. The livestock arena will provide more opportunities to do that, he said.

Godfrey said the total projected cost for both phases is about $250,000 if it were put out to bid, but donations of materials and services could pay for the majority of costs.

About $50,000 has already been donated by agricultural-related businesses and community members.

The high school partnered with Gary Jones Construction, which is drawing up the plans and Pacific Steel & Recycling, which has committed to match funds garnered through scrap metal donations to the project. Ag students are helping with the scrap metal project. The department was awarded a $5,000 grant from Northwest Farm Credit Services, which will be applied toward the project and is currently seeking other grant opportunities.

Burley High School student Bretin Sanders, 18, has taken agricultural science classes since his freshman year. He constructed two trailers this year in an ag welding course.

"Before I started taking classes in the ag department, I didn't know how to weld or even how to read a tape measure," Sanders said. "I think it's a great idea that they are adding on. Our classes are always packed full and one of our teachers doesn't even have a classroom."

Dugout Dick's Central Idaho Caves Filled in by BLM

IDAHO FALLS (AP) • The caves excavated above the Salmon River in central Idaho by a well-known recluse who lived in them for more than six decades have been filled in with dirt and lava rock.

The Bureau of Land Management said workers filled about a dozen caves that were the home of Richard "Dugout Dick" Zimmerman shortly after his April 2010 death at age 94.

Agency spokeswoman Elizabeth Townley said the U.S. Department of Interior had an agreement with Zimmerman allowing him to live on public land. The land reverted to BLM control after his death.

The caves posed a safety hazard because support timbers were starting to crack and ceilings were close to collapsing.

"We reclaimed the caves," Townley told the Post Register. "It was a huge undertaking. They were extremely unsafe."

She said the memory of Dugout Dick will live on through a cabin that remains at the site, and the agency plans to put up interpretive signs within a year.

Zimmerman became known as Dugout Dick when he crossed a wooden bridge over the Salmon River in 1947 and built a makeshift home on the side of a hill. He spent the rest of his life there, fashioning one cave dwelling after another and furnishing them with castoff doors, car windows, old tires and other leavings.

Townley said those items, as well as bicycles, spoiled food and jars and jugs filled with human waste, were removed.

Some of his caves were 60 feet deep, and he earned spending money by renting them for $2 a night. Some renters spent one night; others chose the $25 monthly rate and stayed for months or years.

Born in Indiana in 1916, Zimmerman grew up on farms in Indiana and Michigan, the son of a moonshiner with a mean streak. He rebelled against his domineering father and ran away at a young age, riding the rails west and learning the hobo songs he later would play on a battered guitar for guests at his caves.

He lived in a cave by choice. When a friend moved him to a care center in Salmon at age 93 because he was in failing health, he walked out and hitchhiked home.

U.S. Considers Returning Wyo. Memorial to Philippines

BY TREVOR BROWN
Wyoming Tribune Eagle

CHEYENNE, Wyo. • The future of a Cheyenne war memorial is again in question.

The U.S. Department of Defense is conducting a new review of the long-standing request to return the Bells of Balangiga back to the Philippines.

The three bells were taken as war trophies from the Philippines town of Balangiga in 1901 after an unprovoked Filipino insurgent attack there that resulted in the death of at least 48 U.S. soldiers.

Two of the three bells have been on display at F.E. Warren Air Force Base — formerly an Army post — for more than a century.

Department of Defense spokeswoman Maj. Cathy Wilkinson confirmed this week that the Pentagon is in the process of talking with officials here and abroad about potentially returning the bells.

She said the bells have a deep significance to many people in the United States and the Philippines, which she called an important treaty ally and friend of the United States.

Although some facts are in dispute, many claim the Filipino guerrillas used the bells in 1901 to signal the surprise attack on soldiers from the 9th Infantry Regiment.

Troops from Fort D.A. Russell, which would later become F.E. Warren, helped put down the insurrection and captured the bells as war booty a few years later.

The Filipino government has continuously asked for the return of the bells, and the dispute has raised tensions between the two countries.

Negotiations to return the bells or reach a compromise failed during President George W. Bush's and President Bill Clinton's administrations.

Much of the pressure to keep the bells in Wyoming has come from veterans' groups and elected state officials, who argued the bells are an important memorial to the U.S. soldiers who died in the attack.

Search Resumes for Idaho Pilot Missing in Oregon

LAKEVIEW, Ore. • Air and ground crews are again searching southeastern Oregon and northern Nevada in an effort to find a pilot who has been missing since Thursday.

Sheriff Tim Evinger of Klamath County said Monday that an Oregon National Guard helicopter is joining the search.

The pilot, 48-year-old Tony Nicholls of Meridian, flew to Lakeview, Ore., on Thursday afternoon to drop off two children. He then departed Lakeview on a return flight to Idaho.

Evinger says there were snow showers and gusty winds in the region at the time of departure.

There is no control tower at Lakeview. Evinger says radar and cell phone records indicate the last known location for the four-seat aircraft was near Hart Lake in the area of Plush, Ore.

Former CEO Gets Jail Time for Embezzlement

POCATELLO • The former chief executive officer of a Pocatello nonprofit that employs people with disabilities has been sentenced to 10 days in jail and 10 years on probation for embezzlement.

Former New Day Products & Services CEO Nancy John also was ordered to repay at least $20,000 when she was sentenced on May 19.

District Judge Steven Dunn said another hearing will be held to determine John's full restitution. John's attorney said about $21,000 was taken, but the nonprofit says up to $175,000 is missing.

John was fired in early 2010 and charged after an 18-month investigation. She pleaded guilty to one count of felony theft in March.

New Day Products trains the disabled in job skills and sells products such as picnic tables and storage sheds. It also offers bulk mailing and janitorial services.

Meridian Man Charged with Exposing Others to HIV

MERIDIAN • Police in Meridian say a 37-year-old man was arrested over the weekend on suspicion of knowingly exposing two sexual partners to the virus that causes AIDS.

Craig Hinckley of Meridian was arrested Sunday morning. His first court appearance is set for Tuesday.

Investigators say both victims told investigators Hinckley did not reveal he was infected with the human immunodeficiency virus until after he had sex with them. One victim met Hinckley online in March and the second met him at a party on Friday. Police said the victims were 19 and 20, but did not say if they were male or female.

Detectives are concerned there could be more victims.

Mont. Panel Calls for Pipeline Safety Improvements

BY MATTHEW BROWN
Associated Press

BILLINGS, Mont. • A state panel created to help prevent a repeat of last year's oil spill into the Yellowstone River is calling for pipeline technology upgrades by companies and more money for government inspectors.

Those recommendations are in a report due for release Tuesday by the governor-appointed Pipeline Safety Review Council.

But none of the panel's recommendations is binding — and most fall outside state government jurisdiction, council chairman Richard Opper said.

Montana Gov. Brian Schweitzer formed the council in the wake of a 1,500-barrel crude oil spill last July from an Exxon Mobil pipeline near Laurel. An estimated 70 miles of the Yellowstone's riverbank were contaminated.

The spill came after local officials had repeatedly warned the pipeline was at risk. It was one of several major accidents in recent years that underscored lax government oversight of the nation's sprawling pipeline system.

Federal inspectors working with the state later found dozens of river crossings in Montana and northern Wyoming where erosion had left pipelines exposed to hazards. Companies including Exxon Mobil, CHS and Conoco Phillips spent tens of millions of dollars on improvements and other work on at least 18 crossings.

Opper said that put the state in a much safer position than prior to the Exxon spill, which came during record spring flooding across Montana.

A computerized mapping system set up by state and federal officials since the spill will also help, Opper said. He said the mapping system will give state and local officials instant access to the specifics of pipelines should accidents occur.

One landowner whose property was contaminated in the Exxon Mobil spill said she was disappointed with the council's recommendations.

Alexis Bonogofsky, who runs a goat ranch along the river near Billings and works for the National Wildlife Federation, said the panel was "going out with a sputter" after months of work by state agencies.

"I'm shocked that this is what they're releasing after a year of what seemed to be an in-depth analysis of the problem," she said. "These recommendations don't mean anything."

Angelina was very helpful + courteous + nice. She answered all our questions, if she couldn't she went and found out.

Pope's Butler Pledges to Cooperate with Vatican Scandal Probe. The biggest scandal to rock the Vatican in decades widened Monday with the pope's butler, arrested for allegedly having confidential documents in his home, agreeing to cooperate with investigators. Few believe butler Paolo Gabriele worked alone to leak dozens of documents shedding light on power struggles, corruption and intrigue inside the highest levels of the Catholic Church. Gabriele, the pope's personal butler since 2006, was arrested Wednesday evening after Holy See documents were found inside his Vatican City apartment. He remains in custody in a Vatican detention facility, accused of theft, and has met with his wife and lawyers. Italian media reported Monday that a cardinal is suspected of playing a major role in the scandal. However, the Vatican spokesman, the Rev. Federico Lombardi, denied the reports categorically. He said many Vatican officials were being questioned but insisted "there is no cardinal under suspicion."

N. Korean Farmers Cite Grave Drought; Aid Unlikely

BY KIM KWANG HYON
Associated Press

NAMPHO, North Korea • North Korea is reporting a serious drought that could worsen already critical food shortages, but help is unlikely to come from the United States and South Korea following Pyongyang's widely criticized rocket launch.

North Korea has had little rain since April 27, with the country's western coastal areas particularly hard hit, according to a government weather agency in Pyongyang. The dry spell threatened to damage crops, officials said, as the country enters a critical planting season and as food supplies from the last harvest dwindle.

In at least one area of South Phyongan Province where journalists from The Associated Press were allowed to visit, the sun-baked fields appeared parched and cracked, and farmers complained of extreme drought conditions. Deeply tanned men, and women in sun bonnets, worked over cabbages and corn seedlings. Farmers cupped individual seedlings as they poured water from blue buckets onto the parched red soil.

"I've been working at the farm for more than 30 years, but I have never experienced this kind of severe drought," An Song Min, a farmer at the Tokhae Cooperative Farm in the Nampho area, told the AP.

North Korea has suffered chronic food shortages for the past two decades because of economic and agricultural mismanagement as well as natural disasters. A famine in the 1990s killed an estimated hundreds of thousands of people.

The country's past appeals for food aid have been met with some skepticism, however, amid concerns that aid would be diverted to the military and Pyongyang elite without reaching the hungry.

The U.S. government suspended food handouts to North Korea in 2009 after Pyongyang expelled foreign food distribution monitors.

In February, the U.S. reversed course and agreed to provide 240,000 metric tons of food aid in exchange for a freeze in nuclear and missile activities.

However, the deal collapsed after North Korea launched a long-range rocket last month in what it called a failed attempt to send a satellite into space to study the weather.

The launch was widely criticized by the United States and others as a thinly disguised attempt to test missile technology in violation of both the U.S. food deal and U.N. bans on North Korean ballistic tests.

North Korea's dry spell is expected to last until the end of the month, the country's State Hydrometeorological Administration said.

Bureaucrats and workers have been mobilized to irrigate farms, repair wells and keep water-pumping equipment operating, state media reported.

Seedlings are being moved from seed beds to the fields, where they need enough moisture to form strong roots, Percy Misika, the Food and Agriculture Organization's representative for China, North Korea and Mongolia, said Monday from Beijing.

"Any dry spell at this critical time means the seedlings are definitely going to wilt away, and there will be no harvest at the end of the day," he said.

RUSSIA CONDEMNS ALLY SYRIA OVER MASSACRE OF 108

BY ELIZABETH A. KENNEDY AND LYNN BERRY
Associated Press

BEIRUT • A weekend massacre of more than 100 people emerged as a potential turning point in the Syrian crisis Monday, galvanizing even staunch ally Russia to take an unusually hard line against President Bashar Assad's government.

Analysts said Russia may be warning Assad that he needs to change course or lose Moscow's support, which has been a key layer of protection for the Syrian government during the uprising that began in March 2011.

Russia has grown increasingly critical of Damascus in recent months, but Foreign Minister Sergey Lavrov's latest comments were unusually strong. Although he said opposition forces have terrorists among them, he put the blame for 15 months of carnage primarily on Assad's government.

"The government bears the main responsibility for what is going on," Lavrov said in Moscow following a meeting with British Foreign Secretary William Hague. "Any government in any country bears responsibility for the security of its citizens."

Alexei Malashenko, a Middle East expert with the Carnegie Moscow Center, said Lavrov's comments suggest Russia may be backing away from its long-standing support for Damascus.

"Bashar Assad is driving himself and Russia into a corner," Malashenko said. "Bashar has definitely gotten the sense that he may lose Russia's sympathy, and he may step back a bit."

It is not clear whether Assad's forces were exclusively to blame for the slaughter of 108 people Friday in Houla, a collection of poor farming villages in Homs province. The United Nations said 49 children and 34 women were among the dead; some had bullet holes through their heads.

The U.N. Security Council blamed Syrian forces for artillery and tank shelling of residential areas, but it did not clearly state who was responsible for the close-range shooting deaths and "severe physical abuse" of civilians.

Activists from the area said the army pounded the villages with artillery and clashed with local rebels. They said pro-government gunmen later stormed the area, doing the bulk of the killing by gunning down men in the streets and stabbing women and children in their homes.

The Syrian government rejected that account entirely, saying soldiers were attacked in their bases and fought back in self-defense without leaving their bases.

Moscow's pro-Syria stance has been motivated in part by its strategic and defense ties to Damascus, including weapons sales. Russia also rejects what it sees as a world order dominated by the U.S.

Losing Russian support could be disastrous for Assad because his crack-down has left him almost completely isolated internationally. Russia and China have stood by him so far, using their veto power to block U.N. resolutions against him.

The Syrian conflict is among the most explosive of the Arab Spring, in part because of Syria's allegiances to powerful forces, including Lebanon's Hezbollah and Shiite powerhouse Iran.

Activists say as many as 12,000 people have been killed since the uprising began. The U.N. put the toll as of March, a year into the uprising, at 9,000, but many hundreds more have died since.

Activists reported fresh violence Monday, saying troops shelled several neighborhoods in Hama, killing at least 24 people.

Brotherhood Scrambling to Broaden Support

BY HAMZA HENDAWI
Associated Press

CAIRO • The Muslim Brotherhood is scrambling to broaden its appeal to liberals, leftists and Christians after official results Monday showed that the Islamist group's candidate will face ousted autocrat Hosni Mubarak's last prime minister in next month's runoff for president of Egypt.

Violence flared late Monday when several hundred people ransacked the Cairo campaign headquarters of the ex-premier, Ahmed Shafiq. They smashed windows, threw out campaign signs, tore up posters and set the building on fire, according to witnesses and security. No one was hurt. The office is in a Cairo residential neighborhood.

The Brotherhood's candidate, Mohammed Morsi, will go head-to-head against Shafiq, also a former air force commander, in the June 16-17 runoff. They were the top vote-getters in last week's first round of voting.

Announcing the final results, election commission chief Farouq Sultan said that Morsi won close to 5.8 million votes, or almost 25 percent, while Shafiq garnered 5.5 million votes, or nearly 24 percent. Finishing third was leftist candidate Hamdeen Sabahi with 4.8 million votes, or about 21 percent.

To get the support it needs, the Brotherhood must tone down its religious rhetoric and offer far-reaching concessions, such as protecting the right to protest and strike, election-watchers said.

None of the 13 candidates had been expected to get the more than 50 percent of the vote needed to win outright. Still, Morsi's top finish was a surprisingly strong showing, because he was widely viewed as a weak candidate and because the Brotherhood's popularity has eroded recently because of a series of missteps.

Soon after the election commission announced the results, several hundred Sabahi supporters gathered in Cairo's Tahrir Square, the birthplace of last year's uprising, chanting slogans against the military, Morsi and Shafiq. Similar numbers gathered in the Mediterranean port city of Alexandria, where some of the protesters tore down a large Shafiq poster.

Turnout among the country's 50 million registered voters was more than 46 percent, Sultan said.

Shafiq is widely viewed as an extension of the Mubarak regime, and the Morsi-Shafiq runoff is the most polarizing contest possible. In many ways, it mirrors the conflict between Mubarak, himself a career air force officer like Shafiq, and the Islamists he jailed and tortured throughout his years in power.

The U.S.-educated Morsi appears willing to broaden his appeal but has offered few specifics.

He has vowed to be a "president for all Egyptians" — a nod to minority Christians who voted overwhelmingly for Shafiq. He has pledged to work to realize the goals of the revolution, a promise designed to appease the pro-democracy youth groups behind the uprising that toppled Mubarak. And he has pledged a national unity government.

Pro-democracy activists say that the Brotherhood did not join their 2011 anti-Mubarak uprising until it became clear it had irreversible momentum and that it later abandoned them during their protests against military rule so as not to lose the goodwill of the generals who took over from Mubarak.

But the alternative — Shafiq — will be hard for them to accept.

"Leftists and liberals can hold their noses and vote for Morsi," Hamid said. "The Muslim Brotherhood is moving to the center and not everyone who did not vote for Morsi in the first round was actually voting against him."

Michigan Wildfire Destroys Nearly 100 Buildings

NEWBERRY, Mich. (AP) • Homes and cabins make up a third of the nearly 100 structures destroyed by a wildfire burning across more than 30 square miles of Michigan's Upper Peninsula, officials said Monday.

The lost property includes Pike Lake Resort near Pike Lake in Luce County.

"I was still hoping that they would stop it," owner Diane Ricketts said of the fire. "With my husband gone, I'm not going to rebuild. We're just going to go on and take it day by day and see what's going to happen."

The Duck Lake Fire began with a lightning strike last week and burned more than 22,000 acres, or 34 square miles, but was 51 percent contained by Monday, according to the Department of Natural Resources.

Parts of Michigan are extremely dry and thirsty for rain. Fireworks and outdoor burning are banned in 49 of the state's 83 counties, especially in northern Michigan.

The DNR said 95 structures have been destroyed, including 34 homes or cabins. No injuries have been reported.

Fire managers explained the firefighting effort to about 200 people Sunday in Newberry, a community closest to the fire, 75 miles northwest of the Mackinac Bridge. The strategy includes aircraft dumping water.

"I didn't know what to expect," said Dennis Nezhich, a DNR spokesman. "People were very polite, they listened."

U.S. Army Spc. Mike Ballard stands with Apollo, his service dog, during an archery shooting session, Friday, in Puyallup, Wash.

Service Dogs Help Wash. Soldiers Battling PTSD

BY RACHEL LA CORTE
Associated Press

OLYMPIA, Wash. • When the walls shrink and the panic sets in, Specialist Mike Ballard reaches for his service dog, Apollo, to help him get through his worst symptoms of the post-traumatic stress disorder that is a remnant of an explosion in Afghanistan that ended his career as an Army medic.

"The room starts to breathe in and out. You get really dizzy and instantly sick to your stomach," Ballard said, describing his worst symptoms. Apollo, a 2-year-old short-haired collie, is always near Ballard, so that when an episode begins, "I can just sit there with him and pet him."

"It starts lowering my blood pressure and I get more focused simply petting his fur," he said. "There was a point when I had to see my psychiatrist at least once a week, and now with Apollo, the anxiety level has come down so much she's only on an as-needed basis."

Ballard, 41, was just a few months into a tour in Afghanistan in August 2009 when the Stryker in which he was riding rolled over the top of a roadside bomb. The explosion broke the medic's right femur and destroyed his left knee. He had emergency surgery in Kandahar before being flown back to the United States, and is now a part of the Warrior Transition Battalion at Joint Base Lewis-McChord, which helps injured soldiers recover from their physical and emotional injuries from war.

Ballard received Apollo through a program that's been in place at the battalion since 2009. Last year, the base partnered with Bellingham-based Brigadoon Service Dogs to bolster the effort to pair dogs with soldiers returning from combat who suffer from postwar side effects, including PTSD.

So far, 12 dogs have been placed at the base, six of which came from Brigadoon, but officials hope to see that number increase as more soldiers learn about the program and the number of dogs being trained increase. Brigadoon, which has provided service dogs to the civilian population since 2004, expanded to veterans last year, and has now partnered with the state Department of Corrections for a pilot program that has prisoners training dogs for the first six months before they return to Brigadoon for specialized training.

That training program at Cedar Creek Corrections

Center, which has been in place a few months, is currently training five dogs.

Because the wait time for a dog is usually around a year, the hope is that by outsourcing the early training to the prisoners, more dogs will be available for soldiers.

Ballard heard about the base's service dog program after he was diagnosed with PTSD, and started the training process after meeting Apollo about a year ago. It wasn't until Apollo graduated from his training earlier this year that he went to live with Ballard full time.

Because Ballard has issues with walking, Apollo helps keep him balanced, and also picks things up off the ground for him. But more importantly, Ballard said, Apollo is keenly attuned to how he feels.

"He's my battle buddy now," Ballard said. "He's got my back and I've got his."

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) • Johnny Tapia, the five-time boxing champion whose turbulent career was marked by cocaine addiction, alcohol, depression and run-ins with the law, was found dead Sunday at his Albuquerque home. He was 45.

“It’s difficult to imagine that the Syrian government would not only shell and mortar but also use point-blank execution against 40 plus women and 30 plus children under age 10. This is definitely the atrocity that has to be investigated.”

THEIR VIEW

Obama Should Seize the High Ground

During a recent discussion in Seattle with a group of educators, one of them surprised me when she pointed out that even though their state did not win President Barack Obama’s education “Race to the Top,” that program was critical in spurring education reform in Washington state. As I listened to her analysis, the thought occurred to me: I wonder how Barack Obama would do if he ran for president as himself ... How he would do if he ran for re-election on all the things he’s accomplished but rarely speaks about.

Thomas L. Friedman

The New York Times

Barack Obama is a great orator, but he is the worst president I’ve ever seen when it comes to explaining his achievements, putting them in context, connecting with people on a gut level through repetition and thereby defining how the public views an issue.

Think about this: Is there anyone in America today who doesn’t either have a pre-existing medical condition or know someone who does and can’t get health insurance as a result? Yet two years after Obama’s health care bill became law, how many Americans understand that once it is fully implemented no American with a pre-existing condition will ever again be denied coverage?

“Obamacare is socialized medicine,” says the Republican Party. No, no — excuse me — socialized medicine is what we have now! People without insurance can go to an emergency ward or throw themselves on the mercy of a doctor, and the cost of all this uncompensated care is shared by all those who have insurance, raising your rates and mine. That is socialized medicine and that is what Obamacare ends. Yet Obama — the champion of private insurance for all — has allowed himself to be painted as a health care socialist.

Think about this: Obama didn’t just save the auto industry from bankruptcy. Two years later, he also got all the top U.S. automakers to agree to increase mileage for their vehicle fleets to 54.5 miles per gallon by 2025, from 27.5 mpg today. As Popular Mechanics put it, this “is the largest mandatory fuel economy increase in history.” It will drive innovation, save money and make America less dependent on petro-dictators. Did you know Obama did this?

Finally, how did Obama ever allow this duality to take hold: “The Bush tax cuts” versus the “Obama bailout”? It should have been “the Bush deficit explosion” and the “Obama rescue.” Sure, the deficit has increased under Obama. It was largely to save the country from going into a Depression after a Bush-era binge that included two wars — which, for the first time in our history, we not only did not pay for with tax increases but instead accompanied with tax cuts — plus a 2003 Medicare prescription drug bill that we could not afford, then or now. Congressional Democrats also had a hand in this, but the idea that Bush gets to skate off into history as a “tax-cutter” and not as a “deficit buster” is a travesty. You can’t just blame Fox News. Obama has the bully pulpit.

But Obama is running even with Mitt Romney not simply because of what he didn’t say, but also because of what he didn’t do. As the former Obama budget director Peter Orszag notes, to get the economy moving again, what we’ve needed for the past two years is a plan of “combined boldness” — another stimulus focused on infrastructure that would grow jobs and enhance productivity combined with a credible, bipartisan plan for trimming future growth in Medicare and Social Security and reforming taxes to get our long-term fiscal house in order, as the economy improves.

In sum, Obama’s campaign right now feels as though it were made in a test tube by political consultants. It’s not the Obama we admire. Rather than pounding the country with “I have a plan” — a rebuilding stimulus plus Simpson-Bowles — which would be an Obama-like message of hope, leadership and unity that would put him on higher ground that Romney can’t reach because of the radical GOP base, Obama is selling poll-tested wedge issues. I don’t think it’s a winner for him or America.

Online Comment: Hoping to See More Grant Funded Projects

In response to the story, “Grant to Help Jerome County’s ADA Compliance” a reader at Magicvalley.com wrote:

Voter Apathy Defeated Burley Library Bond

The defeat of the Burley City Library bond in the May 15 primary election presented an ultimate irony. Cassia County Clerk Joe Larsen described the county’s voter turnout as “phenomenal” for a primary election with nearly 50 percent of its registered voters showing up to vote. The irony represented by the defeat of the bond lies in the numbers. A majority of those who voted were in favor of passing the bond, but because of the “simple majority” status, there simply were not enough votes to allow construction of a new library in Burley.

The litmus test now being presented is how determined are Burley citizens to add a classically beautiful library to its present collection of outstanding public facilities such as the King Fine Arts Auditorium and the Skaggs Memorial Athletic Facility to name a few.

Sadly, voter apathy contributed to the defeat of the bond issue this time, but a few “jump starts” in the right places could remedy that situation when the next attempt comes around. There will also be the naysayers who give logical but extremely pedestrian reasons for by-passing a library of this caliber. It may be necessary to solicit donations from various sources to ratchet up the available monies for the project, but there are many citizens who are willing to expend the effort to do so, perhaps some of them will abandon their previous voters’ apathy to win a such a valuable prize for their community.

A community’s library represents the cornerstone of its collective cultures. We can settle for no less.

We’re forgetting True Meaning of Memorial Day

Decoration Day: This was a day to remember men and women who served their country as members of the armed forces of the United States of America. Three years after the Civil War, an organization of former Union soldiers, the GAR, the Grand Army of the Republic, established Decoration Day as a time for the nation to decorate the graves of war dead with flowers and to remember their sacrifices.

As a young Boy Scout, I took part in similar ceremonies in a small Midwest town. We decorated graves with flags, stood at attention, while my friend John played a sorrowful version of taps. The town was changing though, because of war in Europe, the draft, shortages, and the country was still recovering from the Great Depression. After church, the guys hung around Maynard’s Drug Store, played touch football on the Village Green or hitched over to the next town to see a movie.

With the attack on Pearl Harbor, the town reacted. Everything was serious now; most of the single men soon left. Visits home were rare; some never got back before heading overseas. More than 150 men and women were “in the service.” Maynard’s displayed letters, photos, newspaper clippings and maps in the store window. Soon the window was filled. As months, then years passed, the window told the story of promotions, transfers, battles, casualties, then missing or killed in Action.

On May 30, 1948, I took part in another Decoration Day ceremony, the dedication of a World War II memorial for 17 soldiers who did not return. I knew them all. Now we celebrate another “Decoration Day,” only now it’s called Memorial Day and is celebrated on a Monday to create another three-day weekend. Instead of remembering the sacrifice of so many, we are more concerned with how to enjoy the time off!

I will never forget my lost friends.

Real issue is the Lack of a Dog Park in Twin

This is a response to Robin Waters’ very unfair (and untrue) complaint about dog owners not being responsible when letting their dogs run in the ball fields. (There are so many dog lovers in this town that want a “dog park!”)

Why didn’t Robin W. complain about all of the litter (including food) that is left laying on the ground after any game or practice. And what about the players that bring their dogs to the games, do they clean up after their dogs?

Maybe Robin W. should be asking the heads of the city/county what’s taking so long to get the “land swap” done so that site (corner of Blake Street North and Shoup) could be fenced, etc., and used before summer ends. And until that happens, why can’t the “responsible” dog owners share the ball fields (when not in use) and keep the dog poop picked up?

Thank you.

Toys, Candy a Useful Tool in Wars Overseas

The Magic Valley has had its fair share of our military either killed or badly wounded. For the past three to four years, I have been collecting small clean 1-inch to 2-inch stuffed animals, pens with caps, and store-bought hard candy individually wrapped to be sent to the members of the military in Iraq and Afghanistan to give children. In return, the children have been telling the givers where the IED (bombs) are buried. This saves lives and our military from being wounded, losing limbs or use of them.

I get the items to northern Idaho, where they are then sent off to be shipped overseas. If you would like to help, contact me please at (208) 733-9248. This is a cell phone with limited minutes. If I don’t contact you until 9 p.m. or on the weekend, don’t worry, I will.

Thank you to all who have helped either through donations of these items or have collected items to be sent to our military.

€32 billion

Bankia, Spain's fourth-largest bank, is estimated to have €32 billion in toxic assets • Conservative Spanish Prime Minister Mariano Rajoy insisted Monday that the country's banking sector would not need an international rescue as concern over the bailout of nationalized lender Bankia sent its stock price plummeting while Spain's borrowing costs soared.

Bankia was effectively nationalized earlier this month when the government converted €4.5 billion in rescue funds it gave last June into shares.

The lender's shares fell 28 percent on opening in Madrid on Monday.

RIM Loses another Senior Executive

TORONTO (AP) • Struggling BlackBerry-maker Research In Motion Ltd. is losing another senior executive as its chief legal officer is retiring from the company after 12 years.

RIM said Monday that Karima Bawa had been in discussions about her retirement for some time and plans to stay on to help with the transition once a replacement has been hired. The departure comes amid reports that RIM may announce a major restructuring that could result in thousands of job cuts. It also follows the departure last week of Patrick Spence, RIM's head of global sales. A number of executives left earlier this year, including founder Mike Lazaridis and co-chief executive Jim Balsillie. Lazaridis remains on the board.

Tony Blair Says He Ducked Fight with UK Media

BY RAPHAEL SATTER
Associated Press

LONDON • Former Prime Minister Tony Blair said Monday that he couldn't stand up to the Britain's media tycoons while in power, telling an official media ethics inquiry that doing so could have dragged his administration into a political quagmire.

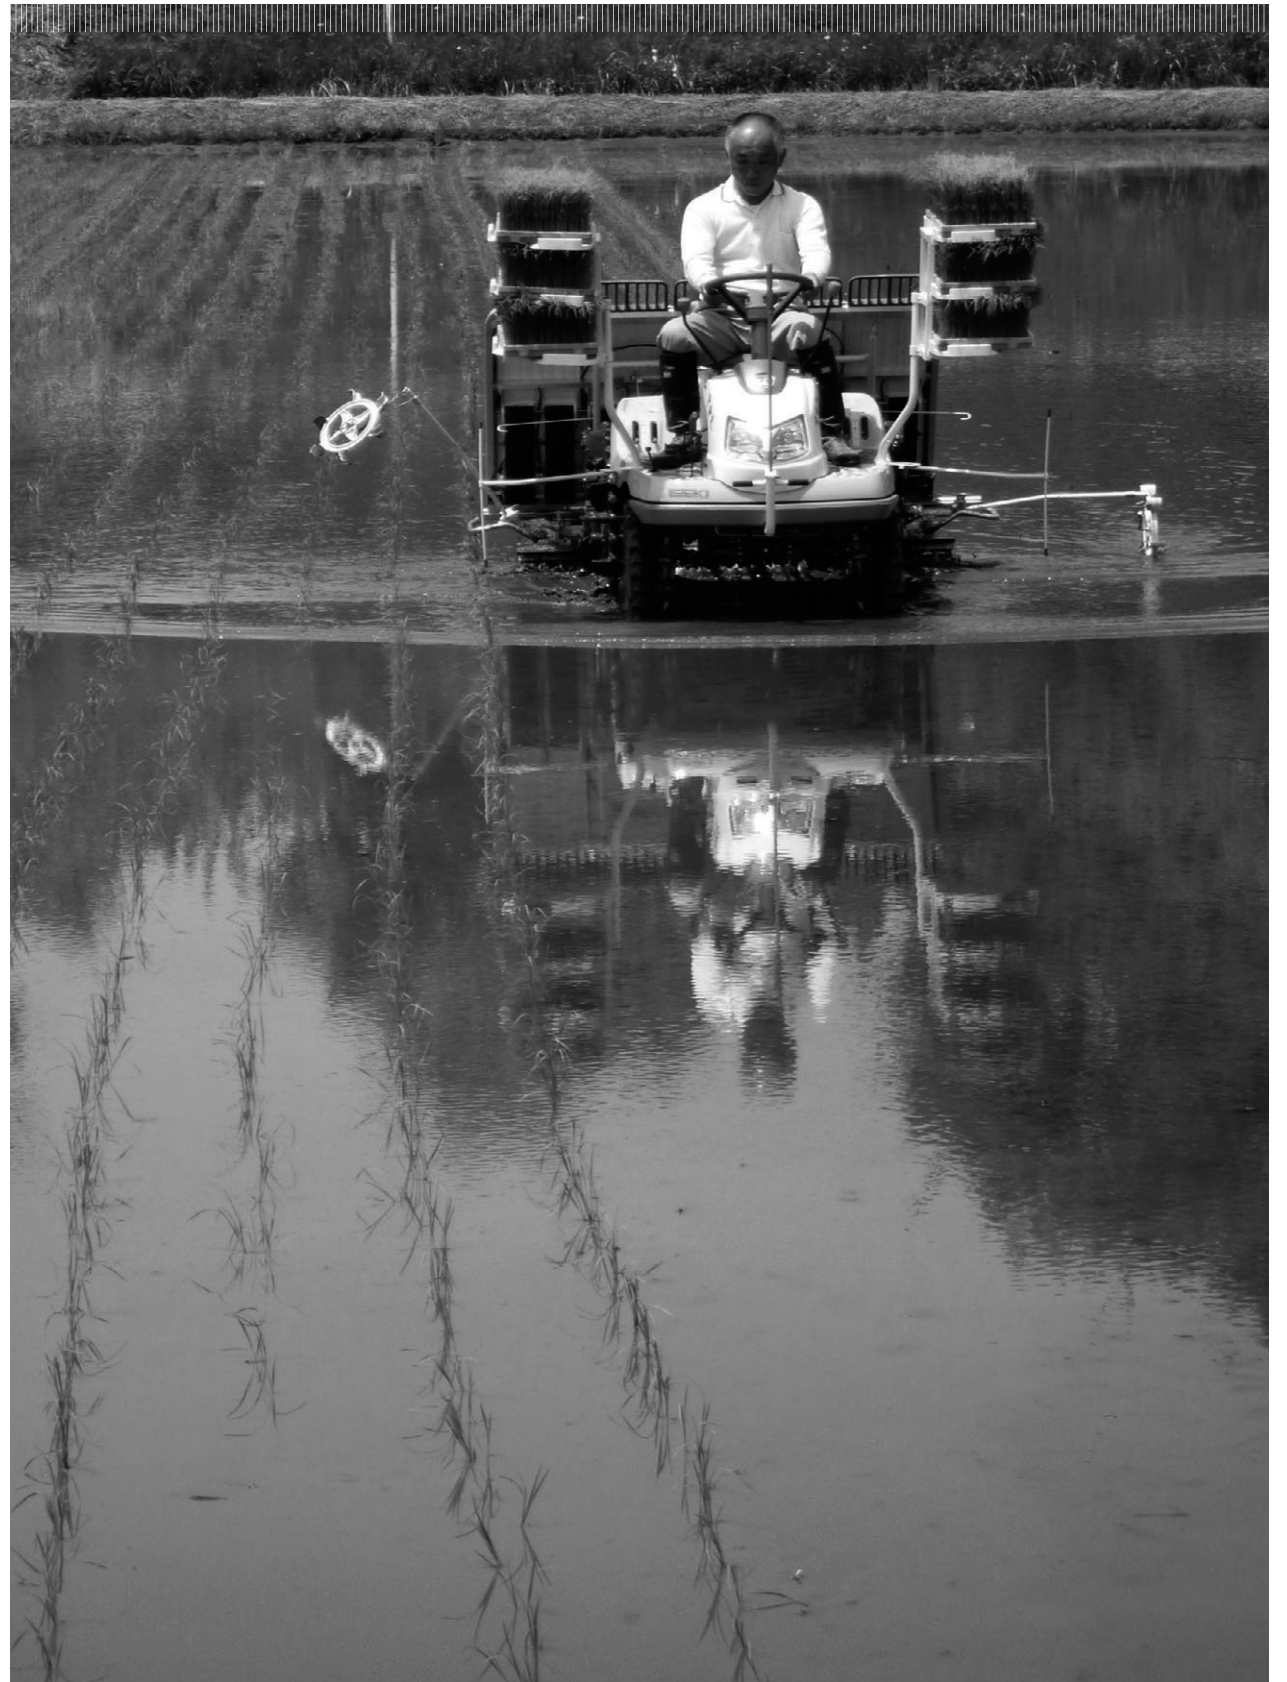

Blair's testimony, briefly interrupted by a heckler who burst into the courtroom to call him a war criminal, shed light on the canny media strategy used to create the "New Labour" image that repackaged his party as more mainstream and business friendly, bringing it back to power after 18 years in opposition.

Blair, who was premier from 1997 to 2007, enjoyed strong press support in his early years, including backing from media mogul Rupert Murdoch's influential newspapers. But he found himself isolated near the end of his decade in power due in large part to his unpopular decision to join the U.S.-led invasion of Iraq.

The greying ex-prime minister said he long had concerns about what he once described as the "feral beasts" of the media but had to tread carefully where press barons were concerned.

"I took a strategic decision to manage these people, not confront them," he told Lord Justice Brian Leveson, who is leading the inquiry. "I didn't say that I feared them ... (but) had you decided to confront them, everything would have been pushed to the side. It would have been a huge battle with no guarantee of winning."

Leveson's inquiry was set up following revelations of phone hacking at Murdoch's News of the World tabloid, a scandal which has rocked the British establishment and raised questions about whether top politicians helped shield Murdoch — and the media in general — from official scrutiny.

Japan Farmers Plant, Pray for Radiation-free Rice

BY YURI KAGEYAMA
Associated Press

FUKUSHIMA, Japan • Last year's crop sits in storage, deemed unsafe to eat, but Toraaki Ogata is back at his rice paddies, driving his tractor trailing neat rows of seedlings. He's living up to his family's proud, six-generation history of rice farming, and praying that this time his harvest will not have too much radiation to sell.

That conflict is shared by several thousand farmers in more than 7,000 hectares (17,000 acres) of Fukushima, where some of last year's harvest exceeded government safety standards because of radiation released when the March 2011 tsunami set off the world's second-worst nuclear accident.

For their rice to be sold, it will have to be tested — every grain of it.

"All I can do is pray there will be no radiation," Ogata, 58, said last week, wiping his sweat during a break in his 1.5-hectare paddy 60 kilometers (35 miles) from the Fukushima Dai-ichi nuclear plant. "It's not our fault at all, but the land of our ancestors has been defiled."

Rice farming is almost sacred in rural Japan, and the government protects farmers with tight restrictions on imports. Many farmers are too close to the nuclear disaster to return to the fields, but others have gotten the go-ahead, even with the risk their harvests would end up being too radiated to ship.

Hopes are high in this major agricultural northeastern prefecture (state) that farmers will meet the unprecedented challenge of producing safe-to-eat rice in contaminated soil.

"All I can do is pray there will be no radiation. It's not our fault at all, but the land of our ancestors has been defiled."
Toraaki Ogata

Following orders from the government, they have sprinkled zeolite, a pebble-like material that traps radioactive cesium, and added fertilizer with potassium to help block radiation absorption. That work is part of the 100 billion yen ($1.3 billion) Tokyo has allocated for decontamination efforts this year.

There had been no time for that last year. Tens of thousands of bags of rice from that harvest were too radiated to be sold. The government bought those crops, which sit in giant mounds in storage.

Rice planting has been banned in the most contaminated areas, but the government allowed it at some farms in areas that produced contaminated rice last year, including Ogata's. After the October harvest, their rice will be run through special machines that can detect the tiniest speck of radiation.

Ogata is filled with uncertainty. Though the government recently set up a system to buy and destroy his crop from last year, he has no assurances that it will do so again if this year's rice can't be eaten.

He also doesn't know which experts to believe. Scientists often come to Fukushima to discuss radiation at neighborhood meetings, but some say there will be no health effects at all, while others say tens of thousands may get sick.

Radiation is expected to decline year by year. But Ogata and other farmers acknowledge they are in for a long haul. Japan has a safety limit of radiation exposure at 1 millisievert per year, although some areas in Fukushima measure higher at about 20 millisieverts. A 20-kilometer (12-mile) no-go zone was set around the nuclear plant, displacing some 100,000 people.

Right next to the no-go zone, in Minami Soma, 135 farms have been granted special permission to plant rice as an experiment but on the condition that all rice, regardless of radiation levels, will be destroyed.

"We couldn't even plant last year. We are doing everything we can as a whole town so we will be growing rice next year," said Yukio Nishi, a Minami Soma agricultural cooperative official.

The government toughened its restrictions on radiation in rice and other food from April to 100 becquerels a kilogram (2 pounds) from the emergency 500 becquerels set in March last year. The limits are lower for milk, baby food and drinking water.

Medical experts say risks from low-dose radiation can't be ruled out, but it may be impossible to prove whether a person got cancer from radiation or something else.

Exposure is cumulative and differs among individuals, depending on size and age, diet and habits. Certain foods, such as mushrooms and bamboo shoots, tend to be high in radiation. And children are more susceptible to radiation-related sicknesses.

ATHENS, Greece • Greek stock markets rebounded strongly on Monday from a 22-year low on hopes a pro-bailout party will win crucial national elections next month, which would avoid a catastrophic rift with international creditors and keep the struggling country within the euro currency union.

The main stock index in Athens soared to close up 6.9 percent, with the battered bank sector chalking up solid gains.

Four polls published Sunday reversed previous trends to indicate that conservative New Democracy could come first in the June 17 vote, slightly ahead of the anti-austerity radical left Syriza party. Although the conservatives would still fall short of a governing majority, the surveys suggested they could form a coalition government with socialist PASOK, which have also pledged to stick to Greece's austerity commitments.

Banks also received a boost Monday: The country's four largest lenders received promised support of €18 billion ($22.62 billion) to compensate for losses suffered in a massive debt restructuring deal earlier this year. The announcement was made by Greece's Financial Stability Fund after the Athens bourse closed.

Debt-crippled Greece is being kept afloat by huge international rescue loans, granted on condition of harsh cutbacks and reforms that slashed living standards.

The austerity, however, also caused huge popular resentment toward New Democracy and PASOK, the two parties that accepted the terms. Voters expressed that anger clearly in May 6 elections, giving a boost to anti-bailout parties. But the election proved inconclusive, with none of the parties able to form a coalition government, leaving Greece to hold another ballot next month.

Obama Says Vietnam Vets too Often 'Denigrated'

BY KEN THOMAS
Associated Press

WASHINGTON • President Barack Obama paid tribute Monday to the men and women who have died defending America, pointing to Vietnam veterans as an under-appreciated and sometimes maligned group of war heroes who remained true to their nation despite an unwelcome homecoming.

"You were sometimes blamed for the misdeeds of a few," Obama said at the Vietnam War Memorial. "You came home and were sometimes denigrated when you should have been celebrated. It was a national shame, a disgrace that should have never happened."

Marking Memorial Day at both the black granite wall honoring more than 58,000 soldiers who died in the Vietnam War and earlier at Arlington National Cemetery across the Potomac River from the capital, Obama noted that for the first time in nine years, "Americans are not fighting and dying in Iraq," and the nation was winding down its role in the conflict in Afghanistan.

"After a decade under the dark cloud of war, we can see the light of the new day on the horizon," Obama said to an audience gathered at the Arlington amphitheater lined with American flags under a warm, brilliant sun.

In this election year, Obama said the nation must remain committed to providing for the families of fallen soldiers and help returning service members seeking a job, higher education or health care benefits.

"As long as I'm president, we will make sure you and your loved ones will receive the benefits you've earned and the respect you deserve," Obama said. "America will be there for you."

Obama said sending troops into harm's way was "the most wrenching decision that I have to make. And I can promise you I will never do so unless it's absolutely necessary."

As he seeks re-election, Obama has reminded audiences about the end of the war in Iraq and the move to bring all troops home from Afghanistan by 2014. And in a campaign ad released last week, he credits U.S. servicemen who helped in the raid that killed Osama bin Laden.

Veterans could play a significant role in the 2012 election.

A poll released Monday by Gallup found that 58 percent of veterans support Mitt Romney and 34 percent back Obama.

The results were based on a sample of 3,327 veterans who are registered voters and had a margin of error of 2 percentage points.

GA. WOMAN BATTLING FLESH-EATING BACTERIA SPEAKS

ATLANTA (AP) — A young Georgia woman battling a flesh-eating disease could hardly believe it when she was able to speak Sunday for the first time since she was taken to an Augusta hospital more than three weeks ago, her father said Monday.

"Hello. Whoa. Wow, my mind is blown," were Aimee Copeland's first words Sunday morning to her sister and mother, her father said in a phone interview Monday with The Associated Press. Andy Copeland was in church at the time and had to wait until a later visitation time Sunday evening to hear his daughter's voice.

The 24-year-old developed necrotizing fasciitis after cutting her leg in a May 1 fall from a homemade zip line over a west Georgia river. Her left leg, other foot and both hands have been amputated.

When her father finally got into Copeland's room around 5 p.m. Sunday, he asked her how she felt. He said he was thrilled to hear her respond, "It feels weird being able to talk."

Copeland began breathing on her own early last week and the ventilator was wheeled out of her room on Thursday, the same day she was able to sit up in a chair on her own.

Mitt Romney Promises to Maintain U.S. Military Power

BY STEVE PEOPLES
Associated Press

SAN DIEGO • Former Massachusetts Gov. Mitt Romney, on the brink of clinching the Republican nomination, promised Monday to maintain an American military "with no comparable power anywhere in the world."

Romney spoke a day before Texas voters were likely to give him enough delegates to formally clinch the Republican presidential nomination, a formality that cements his status as President Barack Obama's general election opponent.

"It's a big day tomorrow," Romney said late Monday. "I'm looking forward to the good news."

Texas' Tuesday primary offers 152 delegates, and Romney is just 58 delegates shy of the 1,144 needed to become the nominee. Romney will be in Las Vegas on Tuesday attending a fundraiser hosted by celebrity real estate mogul Donald Trump.

The Stellar and the Strange From Prep Golf 2012

While covering the Class 2A state golf championships in Pocatello two weeks ago, I was surprised by how many people stopped me to ask, “Have you heard any updates from 4A? What did Twin Falls shoot today?” Any recap of the District IV golf season has to begin and end with Twin Falls. That’s exactly what we’ll do.

Bruin Repeat

When I told folks at the 2A tournament that Twin Falls’ No. 5 golfer shot a 1-over par on Day 1, someone joked, “I bet they made him walk home.” The Twin Falls boys are so good, it’s not even funny. The Bruins won their second consecutive 4A state championship, beating the runner-up by 24 strokes. Kyle Miley tied for medalist honors individually before finishing third in a playoff. Alec Perkins, Matthew Frank and Connor Meyerhoeffer each finished in the top 10 and Alec Meyerhoeffer was just one stroke away. Get used to hearing those names. Twin Falls returns all five golfers next season, along with several others who make up the best JV golf team in the state.

Twice as Nice

Twin Falls wasn’t the only local team to earn a title repeat. The Castleford boys squad scored back-to-back titles in Class 2A, led by Mitch Howard’s fourth-place finish. The Wolves began the second day six strokes behind the leader, but their top four golfers — Howard, Sierra Harr, Tanner Allred and Mike Peckham — were a combined seven shots better in their Day 2 rounds.

Dude Golfs Like a Lady

If it wasn’t for her long sparkly earrings and the pony tail sticking out the back of her hat, no one would have noticed Castleford sophomore Sierra Harr was playing against the boys — and beating most of them. After winning a state title as a freshman, Harr wanted to improve her game. Since Castleford doesn’t have enough female golfers to field a full team, Harr was allowed to join the boys team. Harr finished runner-up at districts and seventh at state. Her two-day state tournament total of 164 would have won the girls competition by eight strokes — and that’s playing from the men’s tees.

Sneed, DBU Make NCAA Baseball Tournament

TIMES-NEWS

TWIN FALLS • Cy Sneed and the Dallas Baptist Patriots are dancing. Dallas Baptist was handed an at-large berth into the NCAA Division I baseball tournament on Monday, assigned a second seed in the Waco, Texas, regional. The Patriots (39-17) will open up against third-seeded Texas-Arlington, while fourth-seeded Oral Roberts and top-seeded Baylor — the No. 4 national seed — are also in the regional. This is Dallas Baptist’s third overall NCAA Tournament appearance in seven years at the Division I level. The Patriots made the super regional for the first time last season, losing to California in the final series before the College World Series in Omaha, Neb. Sneed, a 2011 Twin Falls High School graduate, has an 8-4 record and a 3.98 ERA as one of the Patriots’ top three starters. The freshman leads the staff with 81 1-3 innings pitched and is second with 70 strikeouts. Dallas Baptist was the only team with local ties to make the 2012 field. Utah Valley, which boasts former CSI players Preston Olson, Willie Pratt, Taylor Burely and Chris Kerns among its players, as well as former Burley catcher Kody Moon, was one of the last teams left out despite leading the nation in wins (47-12) and posting an impressive win streak of 32 games. Utah Valley plays in the Great West Conference, which doesn’t receive an automatic berth to the NCAA tournament.

Twin Falls junior Kyle Miley is the Times-News’ 2012 male golfer of the year.

INTERNAL MOTIVATION FUELED KYLE MILEY

Miley shook off an early-season 81 to finish as the best golfer for the state champion Twin Falls Bruins.

BY DAVID BASHORE
dbashore@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • Kyle Miley’s road to becoming the 2012 Times-News male golfer of the year didn’t start in varsity competition. Early in the season, Miley shot one of the worst rounds of his prep career, an 81 at the Blue Lakes Invitational. That left him fighting it out with two other golfers for two spots on the Twin Falls varsity squad for the next tournament — three others had already qualified by virtue of winning and tying for second in that tournament. Miley is arguably the Bruins’ most talented golfer, but his 81 weighed against his qualifying chances. Illustrating the depth of the two-time state champions, the junior didn’t make the varsity five for the Burley Invitational.

“I basically had to make up strokes on everyone, and I had to beat three other people that I was behind after Blue Lakes,” Miley said. “The 81 motivated me a little bit, made me want to practice harder and show people that I wasn’t going to shoot 80s the rest of the year. I wanted to go back out there and show everyone that I actually could play.” Miley responded in a big way, shooting a 64 in the JV portion of the tournament. Because the Times-News has a policy of not printing results from junior varsity competition, Miley’s feat never appeared in the sports section. He made sure he didn’t miss out the rest of the season, though — Miley never shot worse than 76 after the 81. It marked a complete turnaround in his season.

Honorable Mention

Stephen Clements, Kimberly Matt HoChee, Kimberly Mitch Howard, Castleford Jed Oyler, Filer Zach Zollinger, Raft River

“It told me that I can actually put a number out there, even when I’m struggling. I can go and reflect on that, remind myself that I can do that even when I’m not playing well,” he said. Eventually, Miley led the Bruins to their second straight state title and finished the 4A state championships with a 4-under 240, which tied him with two others in the lead. He three-putted one hole after reaching the green in two, which would have won him the tournament outright. But as he stood on the 18th green needing to drill a four-foot putt to force a playoff, he hearkened to the practice

TWIN FALLS • Ty Martin, the lumbering brick wall of a running back, took the hand off deep in North territory early in the second quarter, attracting eight South defenders. The scrum bottled up the Hagerman running back at the line of scrimmage, but that was all part of the plan. Martin — who has never thrown a pass in his football career — was somehow able to retreat away from the defense and muster a wobbly lob to a waiting Xavier Strick, who zig-zagged his way 97 yards down the

Stevens Wins Exergy, Stakes Claim to Olympic Berth

ASSOCIATED PRESS

BOISE • Evelyn Stevens won the Exergy Tour following a final-stage breakaway, firmly cementing her claim to a berth on the U.S. Olympic team for the London Games.

Stevens, of Boulder, Colo., took second place in a sprint with Germany's Claudia Haeusler after the 46.7-mile stage. But the 29-year-old Stevens finished far enough ahead of the pack to beat Amber Neben, of Lake Forest, Calif., for the overall title.

After Neben, Canada's Clara Hughes finished in third place after five days of racing. Stevens, Neben and Hughes all ride for the same team, Specialized-lululemon.

Stevens, a former Wall Street associate, takes home $10,000 for the overall win. She bought her first racing bike in 2008 and then became a cycling phenomenon.

"It's an honor to race here and it's an honor to represent the United States, hopefully," Stevens said. "I'm a little bit later to the sport of cycling, so hopefully people can hear my story and realize it's never too late or never too early."

The Exergy Tour wound its way through southwestern Idaho, making stops in the Snake River wine country, the mountains above the historic mining region surrounding Idaho City and concluding on the tree-lined streets just north of Boise's downtown.

The race had been anticipated as a showdown between three U.S. women: Stevens, the 2011 U.S. time trial champ; Neben, the 2008 world champion; and 2008 Beijing Olympics gold medalist Kristin Armstrong, from Boise. But Armstrong crashed on the first day, suffering a broken collarbone.

Stevens turned pro in 2009 after consulting with 1984 Olympic gold medalist Connie Carpenter.

"She called me and asked me, 'Should I quit my day job,'" remembers Carpenter, who works as an analyst for the Exergy Tour.

"I asked her, 'Well, how much money are you making at your job now?'" Carpenter said. "But it turns out it was a good decision."

As a post-race press conference, Stevens said she had no regrets about leaving the investment fund where she worked until 2009, Gleacher Mezzanine.

"This is a lot better than investment banking," she said.

Armstrong was relegated to watching her teammates on Exergy 2012, instead of racing for the title.

After undergoing surgery Friday, Armstrong said she'd already pedaled her bicycle around her Boise neighborhood and was planning to train in a wind tunnel in San Diego later this week.

"I was going to take a break after the Exergy Tour, anyway," Armstrong said, before Monday's final stage.

Armstrong believes her own Olympic time trial hopes are intact, after beating Stevens in three races earlier this year.

"As far as selection criteria goes, I don't have any worries in my mind," Armstrong said.

USA Cycling makes its selection on June 15. The United States will likely field a team of four riders, two of whom will ride the London time trial.

Like Armstrong and Neben, Stevens said she's hoping to be one of them. "I knew it was a big year, it's the Olympic year," Stevens said. "I kind of just did everything I could this off season, and this race season, I put my head down and let my legs do the speaking. If they have done enough speaking, to get me the spot, great. If not, then I think we have amazing women in America that can represent the U.S."

NBA PLAYOFFS

James' 32 Lift Heat Past Celtics

ASSOCIATED PRESS

MIAMI • A big early Miami lead was wasted. Once the Heat took control again, they simply ran away from the Boston Celtics.

And the NBA finals are now three wins away for LeBron James and the Heat.

James scored 32 points and grabbed 13 rebounds, Dwyane Wade scored 10 of his 22 points in the fourth quarter and the Heat beat the Celtics 93-79 on Monday night in Game 1 of the Eastern Conference finals.

Shane Battier, playing in the conference finals for the first time, scored 10 points and had 10 rebounds for the Heat, who wasted an early 11-point first-half lead before running away to break a halftime tie. Miami outrebounded the Celtics 48-33, and blocked 11 Boston shots.

It was those last two stats that had James lauding the night as a team effort.

"We get a lot of the press, we get a lot of the headlines," James said. "But our teammates, they do everything to help us win ball games."

Kevin Garnett scored 23 points and grabbed 10 rebounds for Boston, which got 16 points, nine rebounds and seven assists from Rajon Rondo and 12 points from Paul Pierce. Ray Allen shot just 1 for 7 from the floor for Boston, which was outscored by 10 in the first quarter and 11 in the third.

"On the road, you can't have two quarters of lulls," Celtics coach Doc Rivers said.

Game 2 is Wednesday night in Miami.

It's the third straight year the Heat and Celtics have met in the playoffs, the third straight year James has seen his post-season path go through Boston as well — the first of those matchups coming in 2010, his final run with Cleveland.

Each of those came in the first or second rounds, not this close to the NBA finals.

And while both sides would say there's a long way to go in this series, Game 1 winners have a decided edge in any best-of-seven, the conference final being no exception. In the most recent 10 postseasons, teams with 1-0 leads in conference finals have advanced 15 out of 20 times. One of the five instances of a team rallying from a one-game deficit was last year, when Miami ousted Chicago in five games.

field for the North's first touchdown in the 35th annual District IV Shrine North-South All-Star 8-man game at Twin Falls High School.

Martin and the rest of the North didn't look back after completing the trick play.

With a pounding running game spearheaded by Martin's Hagerman teammate, Johnathon Owsley, the North ran away in the contest, winning 30-14.

"They sent everybody and I took two steps forward and they were all over me and I took a step back and just lobbed it up there," Martin said. "I was afraid that I had left it short. He caught it and I was just looking in awe watching him run down the field."

Strick, another Hagerman player, caught three passes for 128 yards and the touchdown and also had two interceptions and a 23-yard fumble return to essentially ice the game with 7:26 remaining in the fourth quarter.

The effort earned Strick defensive player of the game honors for the North, but the award could have also gone to Owsley, who took home the offensive honors after running for 73 yards and two touchdowns.

Lined up as a defensive end for most of the game, Owsley contained the South's athletic runners Humberto Pacheco and "I just wanted to be really aggressive and I knew they had some really fast runners, so my main priority was to contain the edge and keep them inside so our big guys could get the tackle," Owsley said.

While Owsley and Co. pounded the ball on the ground, the deeper and more athletic South tried to go to the air.

Howard only had moderate success, throwing touchdowns to Lighthouse Christian's Brad Wall and Castleford teammate Cody Hansen, but his three interceptions kept the South from getting into rhythm.

"We felt really good that first drive, getting that touchdown, but they started blitzing that middle linebacker and three (guys) can't block four, so it was pretty tough back there," said Howard, the South's offensive player of the game. "It was still a lot of fun to put on the pads and play one last time."

Destry Weekes was named the South's defensive player of the game.

PARIS • Only 22, just recently a Grand Slam champion and ranked No. 1 for the first time, Victoria Azarenka is still learning to think like a top player.

So trailing by a set and one point from being down 5-0 in the second at the French Open on Monday, Azarenka's mind was filled with "a mix of things."

"Sometimes I felt it was not my day," she explained. "Sometimes I thought, 'Yeah, maybe I still fight, I still have a chance.' Sometimes it was like, 'You know what? Forget it. I don't want to do it.'"

And yet she did do it, listening to the most positive of those voices and beginning the climb back from a daunting deficit with a gutsy second-serve ace, of all things. Showing how far she's come from the petulance of earlier in her career, Azarenka took 12 of the last 14 games to beat Alberta Brianti of Italy 6-7(6), 6-4, 6-2.

"Before, maybe I would just give up and go home. I was kind of thinking there was a flight straight to Minsk," said Azarenka, who was born in the capital of Belarus. "But I didn't want to leave too soon."

She most certainly did not want to become the only top-seeded woman to lose in the first round of the French Open since the tournament started allowing foreign entrants in 1925. But she needed every bit of fortitude to right things while overcoming a whopping 60 unforced errors, far more than her 32 winners — a terrible ratio for anyone, let alone a player who considers herself a title contender.

"Bad days happen," Azarenka said with a shrug.

Baseball

The Wolverines won 40 of their last 41 games, and 45 of their last 49, but were victimized by a poor RPI.

Kyle Kallander, commissioner of the Big South Conference and chairman of the NCAA baseball selection committee, told the Associated Press the lack of quality non-conference opponents was a key factor in the Wolverines being left out.

"They did very well against that schedule, so what you've got to do is go out in your non-conference schedule and schedule stronger, and of course, you have to have some success against that schedule," Kallander said. "They did have a couple of good wins, no doubt, and scheduled a few very good teams in the schedule, but it wasn't quite enough for the committee."

Other teams with local ties that didn't make the cut included Washington (Jacob Coats, Twin Falls), Washington State (J.D. Leckenby, Buhl) and Nebraska (Travis Huber, CSI).

Crossland Crossroads

Last year's 3A state champion Kade Crossland of Buhl just didn't have it going at the state championships in Preston. He shot a 74 on the first day, just three shots off the leader. But a 76 on Day 2 dropped him to sixth place.

Good news is Crossland was just a sophomore and has two more years of high school golf remaining.

Accident Prone

If there's a Filer golfer in a freak accident, rest assured Times-News' David Bashore will be there reporting on it. This season he wrote not one, but two stories that included a Filer golfer, dialing 911 and a life flight helicopter.

Filer sophomore Lexi Meyerhoeffer was struck in the head by a golf ball this spring. Two summers ago, junior Jed Oyler nearly lost two fingers in a saw blade. Thankfully, both are OK. In fact, they're more than OK on the golf course. Meyerhoeffer finished eighth at the Class 3A state championship.

Meanwhile, Oyler shot a career-best 75 on Day 1 at state, followed by a 72 on Day 2 to finish third overall. He bested defending champ Kade Crossland in the process, the first time he had beaten the Buhl golfer.

Declo's First

Led by medalist Jacqueline Gibby and Top-10 finishers Ryley Payne and Rachel Webb, Declo earned its first-ever golf state title.

Peanutgate

Was Sydney Lee innocently eating a snack, or was her trail mix part of a sinister plot to knock out her competition? We may never know for sure.

The Twin Falls golfer opened her trail mix on the front nine during the Canyon Ridge Invitational at Canyon Springs Golf Course this season. Playing partner Jennie Williams of Wood River, who has a severe allergy to peanuts, caught a whiff and began to suffer a reaction.

Luckily, Williams survived that round. Rumors that Lee secretly spread peanut butter inside the cups prior to districts were later proven false.

Bruins Take Second

As most predicted, Bishop Kelly won the 4A girls state title — but Twin Falls gave BK a scare. Led by Lee and Katherine Reed, the Twin Falls girls were just one stroke back after Day 1. The Knights pulled away during Day 2, but the Bruins were good enough to finish second.

— French saying

Today is Tuesday, May 29, the 150th day of 2012. There are 216 days left in the year.

Today's Highlights:

On May 29, 1942, the movie “Yankee Doodle Dandy,” starring James Cagney as George M. Cohan, premiered at a war-bonds benefit in New York. Bing Crosby, the Ken Darby Singers and the John Scott Trotter Orchestra recorded Irving Berlin’s “White Christmas” in Los Angeles for Decca Records. Actor John Barrymore died in Hollywood at age 60.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:

In 1765, Patrick Henry denounced the Stamp Act before Virginia’s House of Burgesses.

In 1790, Rhode Island became the 13th original colony to ratify the United States Constitution.

In 1848, Wisconsin became the 30th state of the union.

In 1912, the ballet “L’Après-midi d’un Faune” (The Afternoon of a Faun), with music by Claude Debussy, premiered in Paris with Vaslav Nijinsky dancing the title role.

In 1917, the 35th president of the United States, John F. Kennedy, was born in Brookline, Mass.

In 1932, World War I veterans began arriving in Washington to demand cash bonuses they weren’t scheduled to receive until 1945.

In 1943, Norman Rockwell’s portrait of “Rosie the Riveter” appeared on the cover of The Saturday Evening Post.

In 1953, Mount Everest was conquered as Edmund Hillary of New Zealand and Tensing Norgay of Nepal became the first climbers to reach the summit.

In 1961, a couple in Paynesville, W.Va., became the first recipients of food stamps under a pilot program created by President John F. Kennedy.

In 1973, Tom Bradley was elected the first black mayor of Los Angeles, defeating incumbent Sam Yorty.

In 1985, 39 people were killed at the European Cup Final in Brussels, Belgium, when rioting broke out and a wall separating British and Italian soccer fans collapsed.

In 1987, a jury in Los Angeles acquitted “Twilight Zone” movie director John Landis and four associates of involuntary manslaughter in the movie-set deaths of actor Vic Morrow and two child actors, seven-year-old Myca Dinh Le and six-year-old Renee Shin-Yi Chen, who were killed by a falling helicopter.

Ten years ago: FBI Director Robert Mueller said there may have been more missed clues before the September 11 terrorist attacks, and suggested for the first time that investigators might have uncovered the plot if they had been more diligent about pursuing leads. Oxana Fedorova of Russia was crowned the 51st Miss Universe in San Juan, Puerto Rico.

Five years ago: President George W. Bush ordered new U.S. economic sanctions to pressure Sudan’s government to halt the bloodshed in Darfur. Cindy Sheehan, the soldier’s mother who’d galvanized an anti-war movement with her month-long protest outside President Bush’s ranch, announced her “resignation” as the public face of the movement. In Hudson Oaks, Texas, Gilberta Estrada, 25, and her four daughters were discovered hanging in a closet in their home in an apparent murder-suicide; Estrada’s 8-month-old baby survived.

One year ago: A week after Joplin, Mo., was nearly leveled by the deadliest tornado to strike the U.S. in decades, President Barack Obama visited the city to offer hope to survivors and promises of help. J.R. Hildebrand was one turn away from winning the Indianapolis 500 when he skidded high into the wall on the final turn and Dan Wheldon drove past to claim an improbable second Indy 500 win in his first race of the year.

IF MAY 29 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: If ambition is your middle name, it is wise to spell it out to everyone you meet. During the next several months, you may be discontented unless you can see progress in your material life. July is an especially good time to launch new projects or take the first steps toward a future plan. Not only is your luck better than usual, your judgment and vision of the future are sound. Don't pass up any opportunities that come your way. Relationship situations should hit a high note in August when both friends and lovers come closer.

HOROSCOPE

Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You snooze, you lose. You must stay on your toes under these stars. Your passion for competition might make you just a wee bit too defensive if you think someone is hornning in on your territory.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Don't dial up a dilemma. If things are going smoothly, there is no reason to rock the boat. You must fight off the urge to take a break from the boss, to make unneeded purchases or add financial obligations.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): The "two can play at this game" strategy might backfire today. You might be overly pumped up to act as a competitor when actively seeking a congenial compromise is the much better strategy.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Pay your social dues. An urge to mingle and socialize is still strong after a long holiday weekend. Work might even seem to interfere with your social life. It might be time to mix business and pleasure.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Whatever you put up with is what you will end up with. If something or someone is continually causing you a problem or concern maybe it is time to make a clean break. Out with the old, in with the new.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Play it footloose and fancy free. It is fine to do something far from the routine to satisfy an urge for stimulation. But be warned that what seems tantalizing under today's stars may lose its luster quickly.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): If you don't love 'em, you won't need to plan to leave 'em. The chances that a fascinating new person you meet today is your soul mate ranges from the realm of extremely unlikely to impossible.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): There are times when a well-played pawn is more powerful than a king. Enjoy yourself with new and exciting people and things, but do not expect feelings or friendships to have a lasting quality.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Nothing cures a fantasy like a strong dose of reality. As long as you concentrate on making money and stick to on-the-job training, you can remain focused. Relationships might mystify.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Rather than reacting, take the time to respond. You should know by now that the ability to be responsible is part of your character and that the word "responsible" is derived from the word "respond."

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A relationship could experience a breakdown or a breakthrough. It is up to you to give meaning to the surprises and challenges of everyday life. Partners may be restless for excitement you can't supply.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Some people are never more righteous than when they are in the wrong. In an effort to teach someone a lesson or offer a comeuppance, you might inadvertently break off a relationship permanently.

Classifieds... for all your needs. 733.0931 ext. 2

DEAR ABBY: I am a retired New York City police officer and a resource officer at two high schools in Brooklyn. I must comment on the letter you printed from "Worried About My Boy in Tulsa" (March 29), whose 7-year-old is bullied. If a child hits another child so hard that medical attention is required, it is an assault. The police should have been notified and appropriate law enforcement action taken.

DEAR ABBY Jeanne Phillips

The school then has cause to remove the violent child and have him/her placed in an education program better suited for violent children. The statute of limitations is not out, so the police can still be contacted as soon as possible by this parent.

- JIM C.

DEAR JIM: Many readers pointed out that this incident went beyond bullying into assault, and offered advice to "Worried" on this troubling but prevalent issue. Their comments:

DEAR ABBY: If "Worried's" son is injured at school again, she needs to take him to an emergency room and have the injuries documented. While there, she should call 911 and report the assault to the police. She should start the report with this sentence: "I'd like to report an assault on my child." If she says he is being "bullied," they may not take her as seriously.

- CONCERNED GRAN IN OKLAHOMA

DEAR ABBY: I am an attorney practicing law in California and have been involved in several bullying cases. The first step should be to ensure the child's safety. If the perpetrators are not being removed from the environment, the child needs to be. The cost of private schooling or the inconvenience of a school transfer would be part of a lawsuit for damages.

Second, the police should be notified. Third, they should get a lawyer who knows how to put the school on notice.

A lawsuit in this case is warranted if the school has known about the bullying but has done nothing about it.

- MIKE IN NEWPORT BEACH

DEAR ABBY: My son was bullied in elementary school. I spoke at length to his teachers and found out that he was exhibiting behaviors that triggered the bullying. He simply did not know how to interact with his peers. It wasn't my son's "fault"; he needed help with social skills.

It took several tries to find a counselor who connected - a wonderful man who taught him how to be a friend. The bullying stopped. Now my son is graduating from high school with many good friends. Kids can be cruel. They "smell" weakness and pick on those who are different. Sometimes the best we can do is help our children learn how to draw others to them, rather than be singled out as a victim or undesirable member of the team.

- BEEN THERE IN CHARLESTON, W. Va. DEAR ABBY: Please tell "Worried in Tulsa" to call all of her local TV stations and ask for an interview. That will probably get some action.

- LOU ANN W.

DEAR ABBY: My son was bullied during his entire year of kindergarten. That summer we enrolled him in a taekwon do program. After a few months he was a different person! The confidence and direction he learned were vital. He gained the inner strength to be sure of himself in the face of bullies.

Taekwon do teaches perseverance, self-control, modesty and indomitable spirit - qualities from which we can all benefit. I urge "Worried" to look around in her community for a taekwon do program with an instructor who specializes in teaching this art to children.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE® Bobby Wolff

"The imagination may be compared to Adam's dream — he awoke and found it truth." — John Keats

In the deal that follows, Joann Sprung found a fine defensive play that so deceived declarer that he wound up going down four tricks instead of scoring up over-tricks in his no-trump game. The deal comes from the first qualifying session of the 1993 Life Master Pairs. Sprung's partner was her husband, Dan.

Joann led her top heart, and dummy's jack held the trick. Declarer now led to his heart ace and led a club, no doubt intending to insert the nine, a play that would have enabled him to make his contract if East took his king. This is declarer's best play in the suit. West is far more likely to have a holding such as Q-10-x or K-10-x than she is to have K-Q-x.

However, on the first round of clubs, Joann played the queen! Declarer decided to duck, and Joann led another heart, captured by dummy's king. Declarer now led a spade to his jack and Joann's king, and she led the diamond king, ducked. She switched to a spade, and Dan won his ace and cashed his good heart.

Next came a diamond to declarer's ace, and South continued to go after clubs — but this time Joann played the 10! Declarer could have minimized his losses by winning the ace, but he inserted the jack and was chagrined to see the king come up on his right. Dan switched to a diamond, and Joann took two diamond winners before being forced to give declarer the last trick with her last club to his ace.

ANSWER: Nothing is perfect here, especially if you play that a new suit is encouraging but not forcing. I'd advocate that you play that a new suit in response to an overcall is forcing for one round if third hand has passed. Even if two diamonds is not forcing, it is still probably the best way forward.
