High-speed Chase Ends with Woman's Arrest

TIMES-NEWS

TWIN FALLS • A high-speed chase through two counties ended with a woman's arrest on Friday afternoon.

Laura Niehay, 26, was taken into custody after leading officers on a chase that exceeded speeds of 105 miles per hour. Niehay also goes by Laura Ansley, said Sgt. Rick Cowen of the Jerome County Sheriff's Office.

According to Capt. Jack Johnson of the Jerome County Sheriff's Office, the chase started on Bob Barton Road in Jerome County when an officer tried to pull over Niehay for speeding. She began driving down the middle of the road and blew through several stop signs, Johnson said.

The chase ended when the suspect drove into a field on the Rex Leland Highway in Gooding County, according to Johnson. Officers took her into custody after a short foot pursuit. Neither Niehay nor involved officers were injured, Johnson said.

Niehay has two felony warrants out of Twin Falls County: one for possession of stolen checks, and one for possession of a controlled substance, Cowen said.

Julie Atkins sat in the upper level of

For her son Mckain Jones, one of 218 seniors who received diplomas, she said the day marks a rite of passage.

"To me, it's the start of your life as an adult," she said. It's also most teenagers' first major accomplishment, she added.

Atkins said her son isn't sure what his next step will be, but he's interested in broadcasting.

Charter School in Gooding Touts Patriotic Focus

BY JESSIE L. BONNER
Associated Press

GOODING • At North Valley Academy in the heart of Idaho's dairy country, a typical school day might seem like an over-the-top Fourth of July celebration elsewhere.

The public charter school in Gooding touts itself as a "patriotic" choice for parents, with a focus on individual freedoms and free market capitalism. "We teach something about patriotism every single day," said Principal Cheri Vitek. "Every day in their classroom (students are) singing 'proud to be an American' and if they're not singing 'proud to be an American,' they're singing another song about America."

ASK ST. LUKE'S

Keep Safe in the Summer Sun

What can I do to keep my family safe from the harmful effects of the sun this summer?
— Tammy, Castleford

Answered by Melanie Gonzales, Community Cancer Education Coordinator, St. Luke's Mountain States Tumor Institute:

Everyone, no matter what skin color, should use sunscreen when outdoors, whether it is for recreation or work. It is important to also remember that skin damage from the UV rays of the sun occurs year-round. Some of the worst sunburns occur on a clear blue day on a snowy mountaintop where the snow acts as a sun accelerator.

With infants under 6 months of age, you should not use sunscreen. When outdoors, it is best to cover up babies with a hat, long sleeves, pants and socks to keep protected from the sun. After 6 months of age, apply a sunscreen with a sun protection factor (SPF) of 15 or above, every two hours. The higher the SPF number, the more protection you will have from the sun. Apply a cupped handful of sunscreen 20 minutes before going outside. Re-apply sunscreen every two hours to maintain that protection. A side note: If you go swimming or into the water, make sure sunscreen is re-applied after towel drying.

Eyes are also sensitive to the sun and can be harmed by the sun's UV rays. Get everyone a pair of sunglasses with UVA/UVB-protected lenses for the best protection against the sun. They are labeled that way.

The most damaging UVB rays of the sun are from 10 a.m. - 4 p.m. each day. Try to minimize time in the sun during these hours. You can keep the 5 S's in mind when wanting to add extra sun protection in addition to sunscreen: Slip on a shirt, slop on sunscreen, seek shade, slide on sunglasses, and slap on a wide-brimmed hat.

If you have darker skin or tend to tan easily and not burn, the same rules still apply — wear an SPF sunscreen of 15 or above to protect your skin from the sun's damaging UVA/UVB rays. Re-apply sunscreen every two hours for maximum protection.

Patriotic

True enough. On this day, neat rows of students wearing their red, white and blue uniforms belted out "God bless the USA" in the school cafeteria.

North Valley Academy's patriotism emphasis is a first for Idaho, but a number of charter schools nationally focus on similar concepts, said Jeanne Allen, president of the Center for Education Reform, a Washington, D.C.-based school choice advocate. The schools may not all present or teach in the same way, Allen said, but many "believe traditional schools have neglected teaching the importance of our nation's history, its free-market system."

North Valley Academy includes K-12th grades and was approved by the Idaho Public Charter School Commission in 2008. It opened amid some outcry from Gooding's traditional public school system, but not because of the new school's curriculum.

The local district lost roughly 10 percent of its total enrollment to the new charter school that first year — along with the funding that went with it — and the town of about 3,500 suddenly had two groups of students: Those who wear uniforms and those who don't.

Far from being deterred by any sense of divide, school founder Deby Infanger is planning a second patriotic-themed charter school in Idaho Falls, which has support from Mormon businessman Frank VanderSloot, a national campaign finance co-chair for Republican presidential candidate Mitt Romney. VanderSloot has offered to donate use of a property and refurbish a building to house the new school, Infanger said.

While the focus of the schools may mesh with conservative ideals, Infanger, who is also Mormon, said her aim is not political.

"I think there's been so much focus on this push back against capitalism, against Americanism, that people start thinking that everybody feels that way but they don't. That has not been our experience at all," Infanger said. "I have to reject the whole idea that being American is somehow controversial."

Even so, charter schools invite scrutiny when they focus on concepts that may be viewed as political, said Monica Hopkins, executive director of the American Civil Liberties Union of Idaho, which hasn't heard or voiced any concerns about North Valley Academy.

"But the public charter school commission has reason to be more proactive about investigating charter schools that go beyond ordinary public education," she said.

Hopkins cited Nampa Classical Academy, a former charter school in southwestern Idaho that tangled with state officials over use of the Bible and other religious texts in the classroom. Idaho's charter school commission closed the academy in 2010, citing troubled finances.

Infanger said she's not trying to advance a religious or a political ideology.

"We do a great job of not being political in the school," she said.

North Valley Academy's 250 students learn in classrooms named after the Founding Fathers and can recite all four stanzas of the Star Spangled Banner. They take a citizenship test in the eighth grade. Their school nickname: The Patriots. A few weeks ago the school held a "We Love America" open house.

The school's academics are based on the Core Knowledge program, a grade-by-grade curriculum outlined by conservative education theorist E.D. Hirsch Jr., a professor emeritus at the University of Virginia.

After the weekly assembly and singing, first-graders returned to their classroom and recited for a visitor the school motto in perfect unison from the first line, "We are patriots, patriots, patriots;" to the last, "We are proud of the red, white and blue."

Charter schools were authorized in Idaho with the idea that they could share new ideas with their traditional counterparts. But the focus on patriotism, freedom, and capitalism probably wouldn't transfer to a conventional classroom setting, Vitek said.

"I don't think that could take place in a traditional school, I just don't think that people would accept it," she said. "... I think it's because it's too political."

North Valley Academy's approach has been embraced by educators like Mike Savage, who left his job in a traditional classroom three years ago to work at the charter school as a math teacher and technology director.

"The only thing that was weird to me about it was that we could actually do it," Savage said.

Savage said he grew up with similar values. "We called it manners and respect and the right thing to do."

The school's small size resonated with Crystal Thatcher, 17, who previously attended a regular school. Now, in her patriotic-themed uniform, she relies more on personality to make friends, not on who's wearing the coolest clothes, she said.

"Since we are smaller, we're more of a community and we focus more on helping each other out," Thatcher said.

North Valley Academy was presented to the state as a charter school focused on patriotism and American history, not any particular political philosophy, said Tamara Baysinger, the director of Idaho's Public Charter School Commission.

Charter school commissioners may want to take a closer look at the school's focus on free-market capitalism and individual freedoms, she said.

"There's not necessarily anything wrong with it, but it may be something that the commissioners want to know more about."

Some family members and friends arrived at graduation with balloons and flowers.

Others found seats and fanned themselves with graduation programs to find relief from the heat.

Stan and Mary Crowley waited in the first row of bleachers for the ceremony to start. A few other family members sat in the row behind them.

Mary said her stepdaughter, Kimberly, wants to study nursing in the future.

The graduating senior's grandmother, Janice, was instrumental in raising Kimberly, Mary said.

The family celebrated their graduate's success Monday with a barbecue.

Graduates gathered outside the gym with their friends Friday night before the ceremony started.

School employees handed out a penny to each of the graduates to give to their principal, Brady Dickinson, when they shook his hand after receiving their diploma.

Graduating senior Sydney Bergen was one of eight valedictorians. Several gave speeches during the ceremony.

"Grades have always been important to me," Bergen said, adding that it was the way her parents raised her.

She recalled crying sometimes in elementary school when she got a bad grade.

Bergen was student body president, in the National Honor Society and in the health occupations program, among her many activities in high school.

"Seriously, I don't know how I got straight As," she said.

Bergen plans to go to Northwest Nazarene University and enter the medical field.

Friday's group was only the third graduating class in the young school's history.

Twin Falls School District Superintendent Wiley Dobbs said the class of 2012 was "instrumental in creating new traditions for decades to come."

As graduates entered the gym, they exchanged high-fives with the person they walked in with.

The class of 2012 chose Donell McNeal as the graduation speaker. Now a school administrator in a different school district, he was previously a counselor at Canyon Ridge.

The graduating seniors, he said, touched his heart "in the most profound matter."

The students care for one another and value their culture, he said.

His message to graduates was about "your success out there" in the real world.

McNeal said it's inevitable that grads will be afraid at some point.

"Just know that you are powerful beyond belief," he said.

Eight Students Graduate from Idaho School for the Deaf and the Blind

TIMES-NEWS

GOODING • Eight high school seniors graduated Thursday from the Idaho School for the Deaf and the Blind.

Also, two students were honored who completed their independent living skills programs at the Gooding school.

Graduating seniors planned their personalized ceremony with the help of school employees. The seniors invited Justin Osmond from the Olive Osmond Perpetual Hearing Fund to be the commencement speaker.

Osmond — a member of the well-known singing Osmond family — had significant hearing loss himself.

He shared with the students the importance of knowing who they are, never giving up and making an impact on the world as a person with hearing or vision loss.

Other graduation speakers included Mike Rush, executive director of the Idaho State Board of Education, and ISDB senior class president Kelly Aguilar.

Other ISDB graduates were Dylan Germain, Melissa Thomas, Hannah Mikesell, Alicia Paulin, Elizabeth Siddoway, Brooke Bone and Austin Briggs.

Idaho Power Rates Rise Slightly Overall

TIMES-NEWS

BOISE • State regulators Friday adopted seven Idaho Power Co. rate adjustments that combined, barely nudge the needle.

The changes, including an annual change for the cost of providing power, resulted in a .9 percent increase in rates for all customer classes combined, but a decrease of about .34 percent to the utility's residential customers, according to the Idaho Public Utilities Commission (PUC).

The largest change was the Power Cost Adjustment (PCA), which lowered rates the past two years. This year, however, it was increased by $70 million — almost entirely to cover new power purchases from wind farms required under the federal Public Utility Regulatory Policies Act, according to the PUC. Much of that increase was then reversed by a revenue-sharing agreement that applied extra funds to the PCA.

Other changes were related to costs associated with the early closure of an Oregon coal plant Idaho Power owns 10 percent of; depreciation related to utility equipment and removing mechanical electric meters; fixed costs the company can't collect due to energy conservation programs; and lost transmission revenue relating to a case before the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission.

Though rates barely changed Friday, Idaho Power customers could see a significant increase on July 1 if the PUC approves a request for the utility to raise $60 million to pay for part of its new Langley Gulch natural gas plant near New Plymouth. That would raise overall rates by about 7 percent.

Biologists Puzzling over Next Move for Wolf Pup

BOISE (AP) • State wildlife officials are uncertain about the future of a wolf pup that was found a week ago near Ketchum by a pair of tourists.

The animal remains in quarantine at Zoo Boise, where he is undergoing additional tests that Idaho Fish and Game biologists hope will confirm whether he is a wolf or a hybrid.

The pup was recovered last week in the Smoky Mountains northwest of Ketchum by two out-of-state campers. The tourists say they watched the pup for an hour and didn't see any signs of the wolf pack before bringing it to a veterinarian. Fish and Game officials spent two days trying to locate the pack, but questions remain whether the pack would welcome back the pup.

Suzanne Stone, a wolf expert with the Defenders of Wildlife, sought guidance from wolf biologists worldwide on whether the pack would accept the pup if he were returned. She was deluged with replies — from Europe, Africa, Canada and across the United States — that supported launching an aerial search and keep looking.

"We haven't given up yet," Stone told The Idaho Statesman. "We have weeks if we can find this pack."

For state wildlife officials, however, the lesson is simple: Anyone who sees what appears to be an abandoned wolf pup should leave it alone and let nature take its course.

Mike Keckler, spokesman for Idaho Fish and Game, said the parents likely were moving pups from a den to a rendezvous site, usually within a mile or two. The fact the tourists stayed and watched the pup for so long may have kept the rest of the pack away.

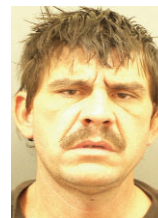

"They didn't know that the pack would have been right there," Keckler said.

Zoo Boise officials are reaching out to other zoos to find a home for the pup if biologists decide to keep it in captivity.

JUDGE MULLS IDAHO ANONYMOUS COMMENTS LAWSUIT

BY NICHOLAS K. GERANIOS

Associated Press

COEUR D'ALENE • A lawyer for a newspaper website argued Friday that people should be allowed to post anonymous comments on its blogs without fear of being identified and then sued.

But a Republican political leader in northern Idaho, who is seeking the identities of three individuals who commented anonymously about her, argued that she was libeled by a comment and has the right to sue for damages.

District Judge John Luster in Coeur D'Alene said he would rule later on whether a subpoena sought by Kootenai County Republican Central Committee Chairwoman Tina Jacobson against The Spokesman-Review newspaper should be quashed.

Jacobson is seeking the identities of three commenters, including one who suggested in a posting that she might have stolen money from the GOP.

"We're here for the rights of people to speak anonymously on the Internet," said Duane Swinton, attorney for The Spokesman-Review, based in nearby Spokane, Wash. "We're here as an advocate for First Amendment rights."

The newspaper has refused to turn over information about the commenters in a libel lawsuit Jacobson filed in April.

Jacobson is not suing the newspaper. Instead, she is suing a commenter who posts under the name "almostinnocent bystander," saying that handle was used to post false statements about her handling of local GOP funds.

Jacobson alleges that the newspaper is withholding the commenter's identity.

Attorney Matthew Andersen, representing Jacobson, said his client has the right to confront her accuser in court but cannot do so unless the newspaper releases the identity.

"In Idaho, being called a thief is a per se libelous statement," Andersen said. "She has been called a thief."

Five Wives Vodka, Rejected by State, will Sponsor Boise Music Festival

IDAHO STATESMAN

BOISE • Ogden's Own Distillery owners say overwhelming community support has caused them to reconsider pulling out of the Boise Music Festival even though Five Wives Vodka won't likely be available for purchase in Idaho.

"We are absolutely humbled by the support of the people in our neighboring state," said Steve Conlin, partner and vice president of marketing for Ogden's Own Distillery. "We've sold so many T-shirts to Idaho residents that we think it is only fair to give those proceeds back in sponsorship dollars."

More than 1,000 "Free the Five Wives" T-shirts were sold during the past three days and sales continue at a brisk pace, the company said. It will use the proceeds from Idaho sales of the shirts to sponsor the music festival at the level they had originally committed.

"We feel bad that we can't get the shirts out fast enough," Conlin said.

Despite the fact that Five Wives Vodka won't celebrate its entry into the Idaho market at the event, Underground Herbal Spirit, the company's other product will be there.

Conlin also said the company spoke with its legal council Friday morning and is considering options regarding the Idaho's disallowing of special orders of Five Wives Vodka. A decision regarding the next step is expect the first of next week.

"Honestly, we're getting a little tired of the description of our product that is being given by the state of Idaho and it is apparent that many people don't agree with Jeff Anderson," Conlin said. "We're a high-quality product at a great price. I'd like to see his tasting credentials to determine we're average. Our customers disagree."

The company is receiving a number of requests for online purchase. Due to many state laws, the company cannot ship directly, but is hoping to have an online distributor available in 26 states early next week.

Five Wives Vodka is made with Wasatch mountain spring water in Utah. It is distributed in Utah, Wyoming and will be added to Missouri and Texas within the next 30 days.

Fish and Game Officers Investigate Elk Killing

BY JOSEPH LAW

Rexburg Standard-Journal

REXBURG • Idaho Fish and Game officials are seeking the help of the public to solve a poaching case.

Andrew Sorensen, an Idaho Fish and Game officer, said that on Monday around 10 p.m. a pregnant cow elk was shot out of season and killed near Green Canyon Hot Springs.

He said the dead elk was discovered Wednesday morning and further investigation determined that witnesses had heard two gunshots and had seen a pickup in the vicinity of where the dead elk was found.

The dead elk was found in a dry farm area on a ridge a short distance west of the resort.

Sorensen said the poaching incident is being closely scrutinized.

"Poaching is a crime and it won't be tolerated," he said. "Especially for this area the elk population is already low. This is stealing from the people of the state of Idaho. The elk ivories were the only thing that was taken and the rest was left to waste."

Sorensen said elk have two upper teeth that are composed of ivory that are prized for making jewelry. He said the elk was carrying a bull calf that was nearly to term.

If anyone has any information they are requested to call the Idaho Department of Fish and Game.

Sorensen can be reached at 208-390-0632. The regional office number is 525-7290 and the Citizens Against Poaching hotline is 1-800-632-5999. Callers may remain anonymous, and they may be eligible for a reward.

Final Primary Tally Shows Turnout at Percent

BOISE • The final results for Idaho's primary election are in, and show that voter turnout was a little higher than initially reported but still at a record low of 24.4 percent.

The Idaho Secretary of State's office posted the official results from the May 15 primary online. The results show that just under 186,500 of Idaho's nearly 763,000 registered voters cast ballots during last month's election.

Voter turnout for the primary was initially reported around 23 percent, a record low that prompted some Republican leaders to predict a debate over the merits of the party's new closed primary at the state convention later this month.

The finalized voter turnout figure of 24.4 percent still falls short of the 25 percent record low set in 1988.

Fake Bomb Threat Traced to Europe

REXBURG • Authorities say a bomb threat that prompted the evacuation of an eastern Idaho high school has been traced to a phone call made from Europe.

The Rexburg Standard Journal reports the Jefferson County sheriff's office says phone records indicate two or more juveniles are responsible for making the fake threat that four bombs had been placed inside Rigby High School.

Authorities say the caller also warned that firearms had been placed inside the school.

Detectives now believe that the May 4 threat called into the Idaho school is connected to a similar incident in Florida. Officials in Jefferson County are working with state, federal and international authorities in pursuing charges against those responsible.

Hit Man in Murder-for-hire Case Released

COEUR D'ALENE • The hit man hired by northern Idaho attorney Edgar J. Steele to kill his wife in June 2010 has been released from federal custody.

The Coeur d'Alene Press reports 51-year-old Larry Fairfax of Sagle served nearly two years of a 27-month sentence after pleading guilty to charges that alleged he built a pipe bomb and put it under Cyndi Steele's car. He was released from federal custody Thursday.

Fairfax became a federal informant, recorded his conversations with Steele and testified at his trial. However, Fairfax didn't tell authorities he had already placed the pipe bomb on the car until it was discovered during an oil change.

The Federal Bureau of Prisons says Fairfax was released from prison to a halfway house on Feb. 2 and moved to home confinement on April 18.

Suicidal Man Dead, Shot by Police Officer

BOISE • Police in Boise say officers responding to the report of a suicidal man shot and killed the man after he moved aggressively toward officers with a handgun.

The Ada County Critical Incident Task Force is investigating the shooting, which happened around 10:30 p.m. Wednesday.

A woman called 911 to report that a man who had been drinking was suicidal and had access to weapons. Officers arrived to find the man standing in his driveway with a handgun.

The officers at the scene say one officer fired a round that struck the man in the abdomen. He died shortly before midnight at a Boise hospital. The coroner's office identified the man as 37-year-old Troy Epperley.

The four officers who were on the scene were placed on administrative leave, per department policy.

Online Ad Offered Toddler for Sex

BOISE • A 39-year-old Boise man has been arrested on suspicion of posting an online classified advertisement offering sex with a 3-year-old girl.

The Idaho Statesman reports Jason Lloyd Schaber faces charges of soliciting a minor for prostitution and felony lewd conduct after Ada County deputies found videos of Schaber having sexual contact with the girl during a search of his house Thursday.

The girl was placed in the custody of the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare.

The investigation into Schaber began in mid-April after Boise police were contacted by someone who saw the ad on Craigslist. Court records say investigators were able to trace the ad back to Schaber by mid-May.

Sheriff's spokeswoman Andrea Dearden said deputies are trying to determine if there may be other child victims.

Rep. Hart Asks High Court to Reconsider Income Tax Appeal

BY BETSY Z. RUSSELL
The Spokesman-Review

BOISE • Tax-protesting Idaho state Rep. Phil Hart is asking the Idaho Supreme Court to reconsider its dismissal of his state income tax appeal, saying the court should have given more consideration to his legislative privilege argument.

Hart appealed an order to pay more than $53,000 in back state income taxes, penalties and interest, but filed his appeal months after the 91-day appeal period had expired. He argued that because an Idaho legislative session fell just after the appeal period, his status as a lawmaker should entitle him to more time to file.

The Idaho Supreme

Court strongly disagreed, writing in its unanimous decision in April, "In this instance, Hart is just a taxpayer, with no greater privilege than his constituents."

The Idaho Constitution makes lawmakers immune from "any civil process" during or 10 days before legislative sessions. But the high court, in its April decision, wrote, "Hart's untenable argument flows from his misunderstanding of the word 'process. ... In this case, Hart was not obligated to do anything but pay his taxes."

In his bid for reconsideration, Hart's Coeur d'Alene attorney, Starr Kelso, wrote, "Requiring a legislator to defend himself from any action during a legislative session immunity period is an exercise of authority that invades the specific constitutional immunity granted to legislators intended to remove all distractions during the legislative session."

He also objected to the high court's decision to award attorney fees and costs for the appeal to the state of Idaho. "The award of fees punishes Appellant Hart, a legislator, for asserting a right," Kelso wrote.

He noted that Hart is a believer in the U.S. and Idaho constitutions who carries pocket editions of both with him, writing, "Hart's interpretation of Article III, Section 7 may be erroneous in the eyes of this Court, but it is not frivolous or groundless."

However, in the high court's decision, Justice Jim Jones, writing for the unanimous court, wrote, "Hart's position here is groundless."

Meanwhile, the state Tax Commission's attorney in the case, Deputy Attorney General Bill von Tagen, submitted an affidavit to the court documenting the state's costs and fees for the appeal at $10,747.

Hart, R-Athol, was defeated in Idaho's May 15 GOP primary in his bid for a fifth term in the state House. He also faces a federal lawsuit from the U.S. Justice Department seeking to foreclose on his Athol home for more than $500,000 in back federal income taxes, penalties and interest, and earlier this week he filed for bankruptcy.

OPINION

"We may have our differences politically, but the presidency transcends those differences."

President Barack Obama at the unveiling of former President George W. Bush's official portrait at the White House

CHEERS AND JEERS

CHEERS to the Twin Falls City Council for amending the city code to broaden the definition in-halants and prohibit the possession of inhalants with the intent to distribute. The sale and possession of spice / synthetic marijuana is a growing and ever-changing problem in this community. This is a creative solution to help our local law enforcement stay one step ahead of this issue.

CHEERS to the Joslin, Magic Valley Regional Airport management for being proactive in its pursuit of $500,000 in grant funding that could bring back a fourth daily flight through SkyWest Airlines. Last fall, SkyWest dropped its Twin Falls rotation from four to three daily flights. As part of the U.S. Department of Transportation grant, the Magic Valley business community would pay $55,000 in matching funds and the airport would pay $10,000 for marketing. A good investment.

JEERS to the Idaho state law involving the election of precinct committee chairpersons. In a year in which many primary races were contentious, among them were those fights to win positions as unpaid precinct chairs. Part of the infighting and post-election animosity relates to these precinct races being exempt from the state campaign finance and disclosure restrictions. In other words, supporters of a candidate for precinct chair are not required to include the "Authorized and paid for..." disclaimer in advertising. We don't think that's right; supporters of anyone whose name appears on a ballot ought to be required to say so in their advertising and campaign literature. We urge the state to change the law before the next precinct chair election.

CHEERS to rodeo fans at this weekend's District V scholarship and awards presentation following Saturday's finals. What an inspiring story. The announcer told the crowd that there was a tie for this year's girls' all-around title, but there was only one prize — a buckle and saddle. The saddle was valued at $1,325. The district didn't have the funds to purchase a second saddle, the announcer told the crowd, so the two girls would have to flip a coin. The crowd wouldn't have it. People started stepping to the podium offering $100 or more. Within minutes, there were enough donations for a second saddle. That's the kind of community we live in, folks.

She was born June 14, 1936, in Preston, Idaho, to Reed G. Stockdale and Jean Fife. She was raised in Franklin, Idaho, and attended Preston High School. After graduation, she attended Utah State University and later the LDS Business College in Salt Lake City, where she met the love of her life, Lynn Pettingill. A short time later, they were married and sealed for time and all eternity in the Logan Utah LDS Temple on Sept. 17, 1956. Lynn later acquired Kinetico of Magic Valley and Vacuum Cleaners of Idaho.

Elaine began working as a teller for First Federal Bank until their second child was born. In 1979, she did clerical work for Young's Dairy until her retirement. She loved reading and was a member of a literary club for 40 years, of which she was the oldest surviving original member. Sterling Otto Hanks

Sept. 27, 1918-May 30, 2012

RUPERT • Sterling Otto Hanks, age 93, of Rupert, passed away Wednesday, May 30, 2012, at Country-side Care and Rehabilitation in Rupert after a short illness.

Sterling was born Sept. 27, 1918, in Burley, Idaho, to Raymond and Sarah Ethel (Ottesen) Hanks. He was raised on the family farm in the Star's Ferry area and often recalled many happy memories with his family there. On Nov. 29, 1939, Sterling married Vernus Barr-Fewkes, and they enjoyed 69 years together until the time of her death in 2009. Together, they made their home in Rupert on the farm that they worked so hard to acquire.

Sterling set the standard high for his hard work ethic, honesty and integrity. After receiving an honorable discharge from the United States Army and moving back to Rupert, he worked 26 campaigns at Amalgamated Sugar in Paul while working his farm and renting additional ground from his neighbors. People would often comment that he had the cleanest farm on the project, and it carried over to his yard where you would always find him with a hoe in his hand weeding the flowers or with a chainsaw headed to top his trees. Sterling was a member of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints and had a strong testimony of the gospel.

Sterling is survived by his children, Connie Dil-worth and Melvin Hanks, both of Boise, Vernae Kehoe (Jim) of Denver, Colo., and Kathleen (Billy) McCann of Pocatello; daughter-in-law, Tammy Hanks of Rupert; sisters, Maxine (Gale) Searle and Phyllis Adams, both of Boise, and Katie Duke of Eagle Creek, Ore.; 14 grandchildren; and 17 great-grandchildren. The funeral will be held at 11 a.m. Monday, June 4, at Hansen Mortuary, 710 Sixth St. in Rupert, with Bishop Clint Crane officiating. Burial will be in the Pleasant View Cemetery in Burley. A viewing for family and friends will be held from 6 to 8 p.m. Sunday, June 3, and one hour prior to the service Monday at Hansen Mortuary.

The family would like to thank Minidoka Memorial Hospital and Countryside Care and Rehabilitation for their loving, compassionate care and suggests memorials to the Minidoka Health Care Foundation in lieu of flowers.

Artifacts Confirm Link between Idaho, Lincoln

BY BETSY Z. RUSSELL

The Spokesman-Review

BOISE (AP) • As a newly elected president, Abraham Lincoln sat for hours with plaster drying on his face to create a life mask that was used to fashion statues of the imposing man.

Five years later, in 1865, he sat for another life mask; the difference in his features is remarkable, showing him horribly aged by the Civil War.

Such an intimate look at the 16th president isn't easy to come by, but thanks to a major donation to Idaho by former state Attorney General and Lt. Gov. David Leroy and his wife, Nancy, those artifacts and others will go on display next year in a specially designed gallery in Boise. The new gallery will open during the celebration of the sesquicentennial, or 150th anniversary, of the creation of Idaho Territory — another accomplishment of Lincoln's presidency.

Leroy has spent years researching, writing and collecting the story of Idaho and Lincoln, who helped pick the new territory's name and appointed all its initial territorial officers, including its first governor — his close friend William Wallace, whom Lincoln subsequently nicknamed "Old Idaho."

Lincoln reported on the new territory in his 1863 and 1864 State of the Union messages, and even discussed Idaho territory business the day he died. During that meeting, he invited members of an Idaho delegation to join him that night at Ford's Theatre to see a play, but they declined.

"Idaho, more than any other state, is related to Abraham Lincoln," avers Leroy, who acknowledges that his claim arouses "considerable consternation" in Illinois, Kentucky and Indiana. "But I defend the claim, and am willing to contribute artifacts which support the claim in perpetuity."

The unique collection documenting Lincoln and his ties to Idaho includes original signed documents, photos, portraits, busts, a 1,500-volume library of works related to Lincoln, and even a lock of Lincoln's hair, taken at his autopsy by the surgeon general of the United States.

"Over the years, I have collected documents, tangible items, memorabilia that relates to that story of Lincoln and Idaho, Lincoln and the Rocky Mountain West," Leroy said. "I'm interested in attempting to continue to tell that story to generations of Idahoans."

Janet Gallimore, director of the Idaho State Historical Society, says she gets "goose bumps" thinking about what's in store. "David's collection is the finest collection of Lincoln material in the Intermountain West," she said. "I'm just so excited that we will be acquiring this fabulous collection for the public. A great amount of Lincoln's significance for Idaho is going to be presented to the public for the first time in an exhibition venue."

The new Lincoln Legacy Collection and Exhibition will be installed at the Idaho State Archives, a light-filled structure that stands just down the road in Boise from the historic Old Idaho Penitentiary, which was in use in territorial times.

The archives now function mostly as a research facility; the new Lincoln gallery will be its first permanent exhibit open to the public, and is expected to draw busloads of schoolchildren and other visitors.

"(Leroy's) vision was not just having it go to archives and no one gets to see it — his vision was to make it available to the public," Gallimore said.

A glassed-in gallery, 60 feet long and 20 feet wide, will be constructed in an area that now contains study carrels, just off the archives building's soaring lobby, with its glass walls facing the Old Penitentiary.

Visitors will enter a reproduction of Lincoln's office as president, complete with fireplace, painting of Andrew Jackson on the wall, and a reproduction of the table at which his Cabinet met and Lincoln signed the Emancipation Proclamation.

Two Camaro Show Cars Stolen in Post Falls

COEUR D'ALENE • Law enforcement officers in northern Idaho are investigating the theft of two 1967 Chevy Camaros from a Post Falls garage while the owner of the show cars was out of town.

David King tells the Coeur d'Alene Press the cars that were taken are worth an estimated $110,000. A black one with blue flecks in the paint is worth about $65,000 while a yellow one with black stripes on the hood is worth about $45,000.

King, who lives in Post Falls part-time, was in Colorado at the time of the thefts, which he believes happened between May 18 and 25.

King said a neighbor remembers hearing a loud car leave in the middle of the night, followed by another one 20 minutes later, but she couldn't remember which night.

Police: N. Idaho Burglar Falls Asleep on the Job

POST FALLS • A suspected north Idaho car burglar appears to have fallen asleep on the job.

Police say 33-year-old Jason D. Hill was arrested during the wee hours of Thursday morning after he was caught napping inside one of the vehicles he was trying to steal outside a Post Falls apartment complex.

According to authorities, Hill intended to hotwire the 1991 Honda Accord but his plan was foiled shortly after 4 a.m., when he was found asleep at the wheel by the vehicle's owner, who then called police.

Hill was wearing gloves and police say he appears to have been removing the car's stereo when he nodded off. He is suspected of breaking into four vehicles parked at the apartment complex.

Police say the vehicle Hill drove to the scene was stolen.

Inmate Is First Charged under Contraband Law

BOISE • An inmate housed at a prison facility in Cottonwood is the first to be charged under Idaho's new law intended to thwart the smuggling of contraband into lock-ups.

Prison officials say Joshua Combs has been charged with a felony after for allegedly being in possession of chewing tobacco and a cell phone. The charges were filed last month by the Idaho County Prosecutor.

The new law approved by the 2012 Legislature makes it a felony to smuggle in tobacco products and cell phones into prisons.

Earlier this year, Idaho Department of Correction leaders said cell phones pose a security risk and can fetch huge prices on the black market — in some cases smartphones with internet access selling for $1,200.

Combs faces up to five years in prison if convicted.

Court Makes It Tougher on Small-Time Gold Miners

BY JEFF BARNARD
Associated Press

A federal appeals court ruling Friday makes it tougher for small-time gold miners to work their claims on federal lands across the West.

The 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in San Francisco ruled in a split decision that the U.S. Forest Service has to consult biologists from other agencies before allowing miners to do anything that might harm salmon protected by the Endangered Species Act. The ruling overturned a District Court decision.

The case was brought by the Karuk Tribe in Northern California as part of a long-standing battle to protect struggling salmon from mining on the Klamath River. The tribe traditionally depended upon the salmon for food.

"The Forest Service's decision to place the search for minuscule flakes of gold above the needs of people who rely on clean water, and especially wild salmon, was unconscionable," Leaf Hillman, director of natural resources for the Karuk Tribe, said in a statement.

A mining group said the ruling makes it virtually impossible for people to use suction dredges on rivers through federal lands with protected species. The dredges are gasoline-powered vacuums that suck the gravel from river bottoms and concentrate the gold.

Jerry Hobbs, president of Public Lands for the People in San Bernardino, Calif., said most miners will not be able to afford the high cost of environmental reviews required to get approval. He predicted about 100 miners would go ahead and use their dredges illegally, because state and federal authorities are not likely to enforce any ban.

The ruling comes on top of a moratorium issued by the California Legislature against using suction dredges to mine for gold. The moratorium, which expires in 2016, grew out of another lawsuit brought by the tribe demanding tougher state controls over suction dredges.

The Forest Service had no comment.

The Klamath Tribe's lawsuit came after a district ranger on the Klamath National Forest in 2004 approved plans by the New 49ers gold mining club and three miners to use dredges to mine for gold.

The appeals court ruled that a low-level approval process known as filing a notice of intent amounted to an agency action covered by the Endangered Species Act. It also found that the mining clearly met the legal hurdle of "might affect" critical habitat for salmon, triggering consultation with biologists for the NOAA Fisheries Service, which oversees protected salmon. The court noted that consultation in some cases could be handled informally, without an extensive review.

A dissenting justice wrote that the mining was already approved by the 1872 Mining Act, and the approval of a notice of intent did not qualify as a separate agency action triggering consulta-

Grand Teton Bear Keeps to Herself

JACKSON, Wyo. • Any worries about the wellbeing of one of the most visible grizzly bears in Grand Teton National Park have been put to rest.

Since she began raising cubs in roadside areas in 2006, bear 399 has become a fixture for wildlife viewers in the park in northwest Wyoming.

But in the weeks since emerging from hibernation with her two 1-year-old cubs this spring, she was not seen in her usual places.

Park biologists then got a report that 399 had separated from her two cubs.

And a photographer reported to the Jackson Hole News & Guide that he spotted the bear recently and that her cubs are alive.

Park biologist Steve Cain speculates the family split up because an adult male grizzly drove off the cubs.

McKean, Newhouse Extend Super Stocks Battle Tonight

TIMES-NEWS

After Hannah Newhouse's win in the first race of the 2012 season Kris McKean put his foot down and captured victories in the next three Super Stocks main events. Among the drivers who will be trying to put the brakes on McKean's winning streak in tonight's race are Allen Williams, Willie Dalton and Kendel Woll. Newhouse, of course, is just as determined to end McKean's run with another trip of her own to the winner's circle.

With the Street Stocks, Paul Browne is the hottest driver in the division having captured three main event wins this season. But there is a lot of racing remaining in the year and competitors such as Jason Todd and Joshua Hunt are working each night to chip away the point standing advantage Browne has accumulated in the division.

Additionally, Hornets driver Lane Walker is defending his six-point lead over Jeff Peck while James Cole and Steve Hatke battle for their first main event win of the season.

Celtics Cut Heat Series Lead in Half

ASSOCIATED PRESS

BOSTON • Kevin Garnett had 24 points and 11 rebounds and Rajon Rondo scored 21 points with 10 assists to lead the Boston Celtics to a 101-91 victory over the Heat in Game 3 of the Eastern Conference finals on Friday night, cutting Miami's lead in the series to 2-1.

Game 4 is Sunday night in Boston.

Paul Pierce scored 23 points for Boston.

LeBron James scored 34 points, but the NBA MVP and the rest of the Heat went cold during a 7-minute stretch at the end of the first quarter and the beginning of the second, when Boston outscored them 15-0 to turn a six-point deficit into a nine-point lead.

James scored 16 points in the first quarter but had just four points with one rebound and one assist in the fourth, when Miami cut a 24-point deficit to eight. Mike Miller hit consecutive 3-pointers during an 11-0 run that cut the deficit to 95-87.

Miami still trailed by eight points, with the ball, when Dwyane Wade

Another Cartisser on CSI Spiker Staff

BY PATRICK SHELTRA
psheltra@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • The College of Southern Idaho volleyball program strengthened its family ties Friday as Jim Cartisser, a volunteer coach for the past five years, joined his wife and head coach Heidi as a full-time assistant. Jim Cartisser replaces Erin Mellinger, who left the program in March to take over the reins at Blinn College in Texas.

"We always kind of knew that if Erin left that I would be able to come back full time," Jim Cartisser said.

This is his second go-round as a full-time assistant at CSI, following a one-year stint in 2005, one year before his wife became head coach.

That prompted a career move into real estate, but when that market went south, he got back into volleyball. In addition to his volunteer duties at CSI, he has been the head coach and director of Club Canyon, a volleyball club in the Magic Valley that has developed and sent several players into the collegiate ranks.

He will maintain a strong influence in that program as director, but will no longer coach the team.

"Club Canyon, that's my baby and something I started," Jim Cartisser said.

As a volunteer coach, Jim Cartisser led the program's recruiting efforts but could not travel with the team. With five children and with Heidi Cartisser being the primary breadwinner, it wouldn't have been financially feasible for him to do so anyway. But with their children being a little older — they range in age from 13 to 4 — the timing is much better for him to accompany the team on road trips.

"As the (real estate) market tanked and Erin got closer to moving to a head coaching position ... we kind of decided that when she left, if it was a possibility, that I would come back," Jim Cartisser said.

"We are excited to have Jim on the staff," Athletic Director Joel Bate said. "Jim brings a wealth of experience to the program as an assistant coach and has dedicated himself to helping younger student athletes better themselves in the fundamentals of the game. He will be a great teacher and his recruiting talents and seeing the ability in the raw athlete is amazing."

Minico High School graduate Hayli Worthington has leaped ahead of all previous 400-meter hurdlers at Idaho State, holder of a school-record time in the event.

Minico's Worthington Is Bengals' Big Fish

The sophomore hurdler set a new ISU standard and won a Big Sky title in the 400-meter hurdles.

POCATELLO • While being recruited out of high school, a small-college coach warned Hayli Worthington that if she went to a NCAA Division I program she would be just another small fish in a big pond.

After two straight years of qualifying for NCAA West Regionals, earning a Big Sky Conference championship and breaking a school record at Idaho State, Worthington is proving she can make a huge splash.

Foremost, Worthington says the accolades aren't hers.

"It's not about my glory at all; it's for God's glory," Worthington said. "I think with that perspective and humility you definitely get blessed."

"When I look back at what's been accomplished in just two years, and what I expected from myself in the beginning, I'm really, really excited. I like ISU and the track program a lot. I really feel like I made the right choice."

A 2010 Minico High graduate, Worthington just wrapped up a stellar sophomore year in which she set the ISU record in the women's 400-meter hurdles with a time of 59.41 seconds.

"When I came to ISU I thought I would just be like a little fish in a very large pond and really not make a mark anywhere. I was pretty surprised and excited to get (the record)," Worthington said.

She set the mark while winning gold at the Big Sky championships on May 12 in Bozeman, Mont. The previous record holder, Jackie Poulson, was on hand to witness the feat, as Poulson is now a Bengal track coach.

"She was really funny about it. She's like, 'I think today is going to be the day you break my record,'" Worthington

Rousing Sermon Likely to Pass on Belmont

BOISE • Idaho colt Rousing Sermon appears as if he's going to miss out running in next week's Belmont Stakes.

The decision not to compete in the final leg of horse racing's Triple Crown is all about limiting the stress and strain caused by cross-country travel.

Tree Trop Ranches Horse Manager Dan Kiser says the only game-changer is if one of the three top favorites in the Belmont Stakes drops out.

But Kiser told The Idaho Statesman that trainers are concerned about flying the horse from a farm in California across the country for a third time this summer.

Rousing Sermon finished eighth in the Kentucky Derby, but was held out of the Preakness.

The horse is owned by Larry and Marianne Williams, who train horses at their ranch near Parma.

'Lucky Loser' Is Federer's Next French Foe

ASSOCIATED PRESS

PARIS • If it seems Roger Federer breaks one record or another every time he wins a match, that's because he does these days.

Then again, good as Federer is, he can't top this: His next opponent at the French Open, Belgium's David Goffin, is unbeaten in Grand Slam main-draw matches. (OK, so the kid's only 3-0, but still.)

Yes, before Federer can take on Novak Djokovic or Rafael Nadal at Roland Garros this year, he'll need to defeat Goffin, the first "lucky loser" — a player beaten in qualifying who sneaks into the field via someone's withdrawal — to reach the fourth round at any Grand Slam tournament in 17 years, and only the seventh to make it that far.

"Now I'm playing against Roger," the 109th-ranked Goffin said after beating Lukasz Kubot of Poland 7-6 (4), 7-5, 6-1 on Friday, "and I can't believe it."

A fresh-faced 21-year-old whose voice was barely a whisper and whose hands fidgeted during an extended interview session with reporters, the slender, 5-foot-11 Goffin matter-of-factly discussed displaying photos and posters of 16-time Grand Slam champion Federer in his bedroom as a child.

me, he plays almost perfect tennis. His technique is perfect. I also like him at the human level; he's a very good person on and off the court," said Goffin, who was able to make his Grand Slam debut because France's Gael Monfils pulled out with a knee injury. "I expect a very tough match on Sunday, of course. I don't really know how I'll prepare for it, but I'll try to have fun."

Informed that his next opponent is an unabashed fan, Federer grinned and replied, "Not the first time it happens."

Probably so. After all, the 30-year-old Federer has been winning major titles since 2003, when Goffin was 12. He's been winning Grand Slam matches since 2000, and Friday's 6-3, 4-6, 6-2, 7-5 victory over Nicolas Mahut was Federer's 235th, adding to his Open era record.

Federer happened to catch a bit of Goffin's second-round matchup against Arnaud Clement, the 2001 Australian Open runner-up who said this would be his final French Open.

The condensed scouting report?

"Nice game. Smooth ball-striker. And talented, obviously," Federer said. "Otherwise, he wouldn't be coming that far in this tournament."

That match against Clement went five sets, as did Goffin's first-round victory over 23rd-seeded Radek Stepanek — the only five-setters of his career. Against Kubot at intimate, 1,559-seat Court 7, Goffin was raucously cheered by flag-waving, chorus-singing supporters who made the short trip from Belgium.

From there, Worthington headed to the NCAA Division I West Regional Qualifier meet last weekend at the University of Texas. She advanced to the 400-meter hurdle quarterfinals where she finished 21st — better than her regionals showing as a freshman, but still short of qualifying for nationals.

"I should be very happy with what I did because I got to advance a farther step than I did last year, and I ran my second-fastest time of the year. But honestly I feel like anyone who goes to regionals is never going to be satisfied unless they're going to nationals," Worthington said.

A health education major, Worthington said regionals "was a great one to end on because it left me wanting more. I'm excited for summer training and getting ready to go again... Even if it's far-fetched to go to nationals sometime, there's always a glimmer of hope that anything can happen."

'Other' Rory Leads Memorial; 'That' Rory Misses Cut

ASSOCIATED PRESS

DUBLIN, Ohio • That other Rory — Rory Sabbatini — played his best golf in the worst weather Friday at the Memorial and made a surprising appearance atop the leaderboard. Right behind him was a Tiger Woods that looked all too familiar.

Sabbatini played bogey-free over his final 12 holes, and despite missing a 5-foot birdie putt on the 18th hole, put together a 3-under 69 in the cool, blustery conditions at Muirfield Village to take a one-shot lead going into the weekend.

Woods looked strong for the second straight day, though he also had another double bogey that slowed his progress. What pleased him was controlling his ball in the wind for plenty of birdie chances that led to a 69.

"I hit the ball well all day, and it was a day that I needed to," Woods said. "The wind was blowing out there, swirling in those trees, and it was just a tough day."

It was plenty tough for Rory McIlroy.

The U.S. Open champion, who returned to No. 1 in the world only four weeks ago, missed the cut in his third straight tournament. McIlroy was in good shape until a shot just outside a creek hit the bank and went backward into the water, leading to the first of two double bogeys on the back nine. He shot 79 and missed the cut by three shots.

SHOPRITE LPGA CLASSIC GALLOWAY TOWNSHIP, N.J. • Stacy Lewis and Mika Miyazato each shot a 6-under 65 at the Bay Course at the Stockton Seaview Hotel and Golf Club to tie for the first-round lead.

Paula Creamer and Mariajo Uribe are tied for third at 4 under. Maude-Aimee Leblanc is at 3 under, while seven players are another shot back, including Lexi Thompson and Christina Kim.

CHAMPIONS TOUR PRINCIPAL CHARITY CLASSIC

WEST DES MOINES, Iowa • Mike Goodes shot a 7-under 64 to take a two-shot lead after the first round.

Goodes opened the Champions Tour event with four straight birdies and closed with birdies on the 17th and 18th holes. Goodes shot a 30 on the front nine and tied his lowest overall round on the Champions Tour.

Jay Haas, who won in Iowa in 2007 and 2008, leads a group at 5-under 66 that includes South African David Frost and former Masters champion Larry Mize.

Devils Captain Parise Does What It Takes to Win

ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEWARK, N.J. • In the next month or so, New Jersey Devils captain Zach Parise is going to strike it rich — somewhere.

The 27-year-old Parise, who can become a free agent next month unless he re-signs with New Jersey, is one of those players that every team wants. He scores goals, works hard, is a good skater and is relentless on the ice. Nothing is more important to him than his team and winning.

Want proof? Take Game 1 of the Stanley Cup finals against the Los Angeles Kings Wednesday night. Parise showed talent and something surprising, a level of sneakiness few expected from an angelic-looking, clean-shaven boy scout skating alongside a grungy-looking, unkempt group of players in bushy beards.

With the game tied 1-1 early in the third period, Parise deftly reached out with his gloved hand while prone in the crease and shuffle-boarded a loose puck into the net, setting off a celebration at the Prudential Center in New Jersey.

Horns blared. Fans stood up and screamed. There was merriment all around.

Unfortunately for the Devils and their fans, referee Dan O'Halloran quickly waved off the goal, and re-play in Toronto upheld his ruling. The Kings would go on to win 2-1 in overtime on a goal by Anze Kopitar.

Parise had a sheepish grin on his face when asked what possessed him to basically throw the puck into the net behind Kings goaltender Jonathan Quick.

"I saw the puck was going behind the net and I wanted to keep it alive," Parise said Friday after the Devils worked out for about an hour in preparation for Game 2 on Saturday night.

As soon as Parise finished the sentence, he started laughing, knowing no one was going to buy the story.

"I couldn't get my stick," he added, "and I knew none of our guys could put it in at that point, soooo ..."

When somebody suggested he was hoping to get away with it, he laughed again.

"Maybe the video review wasn't working," said Parise, who rebounded from a major knee injury last season to score 31 goals, the fifth straight year he has scored at least 30 while playing a full season. "I don't know. I was just trying to keep it alive. I didn't have anything, so I was just trying to sneak it in."

Sometimes that's what it takes to win the Stanley Cup, although this time it didn't work.

It was a good try though, and it's that kind of an intangible that will make Parise so attractive on the open market. New Jersey general manager Lou Lamoriello will put together an attractive package to keep Parise, but there will be several more offers headed his way. Some other teams who may have interest include the Hurricanes, Red Wings and the Wild, as well as two teams Parise has met in this postseason: The Rangers and Kings.

"Guys want to win, that's all it is," Quick said. "I don't know if he thought he would be able to get away with it, actually it was a pretty slick move if you think about it. He did it pretty quickly and I didn't know if the ref saw it or not. But guys just want to win. They are doing whatever they can to win. I'd do the same thing if I was down the other end."

Richardson Leads Pre's Strong Hurdles Field

ASSOCIATED PRESS

EUGENE, Ore. • Jason Richardson is a thrill seeker, vowing to one day swim with sharks, cliff dive and bungee jump.

The world champion 110-meter hurdler is a romantic as well, hoping to "slip and fall in love and not get back up," learn to speak fluent Italian and read at least 50 of the classics.

Also on the 26-year-old's lengthy bucket list: write his own novel, become a millionaire by 35 and stand on an Olympic podium, maybe even this summer.

And he won't have to wait for the London Games to see just how realistic this last item just may be.

Richardson will compete today in the Prefontaine Classic, where a star-studded field awaits, including 2004 Olympic gold medalist Liu Xiang of China and American record holder David Oliver.

Cuban world-record holder and reigning Olympic champion Dayron Robles was scheduled to compete, but ran into visa issues and won't be in the field.

Up until last summer, Richardson was the hurdler that no one really knew. For that matter, he wasn't even the most well-known Jason Richardson, an honor easily belonging to the Orlando Magic shooting guard.

But this version of Jason Richardson is carving out his own identity after becoming a surprise world champion last August in South Korea.

Originally, he captured the silver, but was bumped up to gold when Robles was disqualified for smacking hands twice with Liu over the final few hurdles.

With that, Richardson was able to check an item off his wide-ranging bucket list.

So far, he's made more than 180 entries into a journal he stores on his computer. Constantly evolving and highly entertaining, the list represents a world of possibilities.

Jason Richardson, here gesturing at a May news conference for the Shanghai Diamond League track and field competition, could fulfill many of his bucket list items by medaling in the 110-meter hurdles at the London Olympics.

His yearnings range from artistic pursuits (learning to paint) to more comical endeavors (playing polo decked out from head to toe in Ralph Lauren Polo garb). Some adventures involve speed (driving on the autobahn), while others center around becoming more cultured (watching an opera).

There are also ambitious entries (climbing a mountain) and, of course, the very plausible — making the U.S. Olympic team for London.

Now that may be the most attainable one on his long list, which he concocted to ensure he enjoys each step of his journey.

"I've always said that I'd rather lose my wallet than my perspective," said Richardson, who runs with his long, braided hair tied back in a ponytail. "The bucket list is a really, really arrogant list, to be honest, of things that say, 'I want to be (awesome) and here are the reasons why!'"

He acknowledges he borrowed the concept from the characters played by Morgan Freeman and Jack Nicholson in the 2007 movie "The Bucket List."

Only, they waited until late in life to dig into their desires.

"Do I really have to wait until I'm dying to do a lot of things that I want to do now?" Richardson said.

Richardson is off to a flying start on his list, already reading George Orwell's "1984," zip-lining through a forest in Tennessee and attending Fashion Week in New York. He's also started another undertaking on his list: viewing the American Film Institute's top 100 movies. He recently rented "Citizen Kane," and can understand why it's No. 1.

Mayweather Surrenders to Begin Vegas Jail Sentence

ASSOCIATED PRESS

LAS VEGAS • Floyd Mayweather Jr. surrendered in a courtroom Friday to begin a three-month jail sentence for attacking his ex-girlfriend in September 2010 while two of their children watched.

Las Vegas Justice of the Peace Melissa Saragosa credited the undefeated five-division champion with attending weekly domestic violence counseling sessions — including one the day of the May 5 fight she allowed him to make — and with beginning to meet community service requirements she imposed in December. The judge then watched as Mayweather was handcuffed and taken away.

Mayweather didn't say a word.

"He'll be all right," Mayweather's friend, rapper 50 Cent, told reporters after arriving with Mayweather and speaking afterward with ring adviser Leonard Ellerbe outside the courthouse in downtown Las Vegas.

"It's an uncomfortable situation for everyone," he said.

Ellerbe declined to comment.

Mayweather pleaded guilty in December to reduced domestic battery charges in a hair-pulling, arm-twisting attack on Josie Harris, the mother of three of his children. The plea deal allowed him to avoid trial on felony charges that could have gotten Mayweather up to 34 years in prison if he was convicted.

"Everyone has a different version of the same story," said 50 Cent, whose real name is Curtis James Jackson III. He compared the dispute between Mayweather and Harris to the breakup of a marriage with children involved. Harris and their three children now live in Southern California.

"It's no different than anyone going through a divorce," the rap star said, "and how your friends can become your vested enemies."

Las Vegas police say that as a high-profile inmate, Mayweather probably will serve most of his time away from other prisoners in a small solo cell in the high-rise Clark County Detention Center.

Police released a statement Thursday saying visitation at the jail will be suspended Saturday for "inmate reclassification and housing changes." Officer Bill Cassell, a department spokesman, said the expected 6 a.m. to 6 p.m. lockout was not related to Mayweather's arrival.

Massive Cyber Attack on Iran Came from U.S., Report Says

BY ELLEN NAKASHIMA
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON • A damaging cyber-attack against Iran's nuclear program was the work of U.S. and Israeli experts and proceeded under the secret orders of President Barack Obama, who was eager to slow that nation's apparent progress toward building an atomic bomb without launching a traditional military attack, say current and former U.S. officials.

The origins of the cyberweapon, which outside analysts dubbed Stuxnet after it was inadvertently discovered in 2010, have long been debated, with most experts concluding that the United States and Israel probably collaborated on the effort. The current and former U.S. officials confirmed that long-standing suspicion Friday, after a New York Times report on the program.

The officials, speaking on the condition of anonymity to describe the classified effort code-named Olympic Games, said it was first developed during the George W. Bush administration and was geared toward damaging Iran's nuclear capability gradually while sowing confusion among Iranian scientists about the cause of mishaps at a nuclear plant.

The use of the cyberweapon — malware designed to infiltrate and damage systems run by computers — was supposed to make the Iranians think that their engineers were incapable of running an enrichment facility.

"The idea was to string it out as long as possible," said one participant in the operation. "If you had wholesale destruction right away, then they generally can figure out what happened, and it doesn't look like incompetence."

Even after software security companies discovered Stuxnet loose on the Internet in 2010, causing concern among U.S. officials, Obama secretly ordered the operation continued and authorized the use of several variations of the computer virus.

Over all, the attack destroyed nearly 1,000 of Iran's 6,000 centrifuges — fast-spinning machines that enrich uranium, an essential step toward building an atomic bomb. The National Security Agency developed the cyberweapon with help of Israel.

Several senior Iranian officials on Friday referred obliquely to the cyberattack in reaffirming Iran's intention to expand its nuclear program.

United Nations Rights Body Condemns Syria over Massacre

BY ELIZABETH A. KENNEDY
Associated Press

BEIRUT • The U.N.'s top human rights body voted overwhelmingly Friday to condemn Syria over the slaughter of more than 100 civilians last week, but Damascus appeared impervious to the crescendo of global condemnation following a string of horrific massacres.

Syria's most important ally and protector, Russia, voted against the measure by the U.N. Human Rights Council in Geneva. Russia has refused to support any move that could lead to foreign intervention in Syria, Moscow's last significant ally in the Middle East.

New bloodshed was reported across Syria on Friday, with troops firing on protesters and more execution-style killings coming to light, while U.N.-Arab League envoy Kofi Annan urged Syrian President Bashar Assad once again to stop the violence.

As Russian diplomats in Geneva dismissed the resolution as "unbalanced" and voted against the text, Russian President Vladimir Putin promised to press the Syrian government for an end to the violence and insisted a political solution was still possible despite mounting frustration over the lack of diplomatic progress.

"It requires a certain professionalism and patience," Putin said in Germany.

Russia, along with China, has twice used its veto power to shield Syria from U.N. sanctions.

Although Syria has come under deep international isolation since its forces launched a ferocious crackdown on dissent nearly 15 months ago, the May 25 massacre in a cluster of villages known as Houla has brought a new urgency in calls to the crisis.

"Syria is on the edge, it is on the edge of a catastrophic situation, if we can imagine one even worse than the current situation," British Foreign Secretary William Hague said on the sidelines of a conference in Turkey.

A majority of countries in the 47-nation rights council supported a U.S.- and Arab-led resolution condemning the "outrageous use of force against the civilian population" in Houla.

"We believe that the acts committed by the Syrian regime may amount to crimes against humanity and other international crimes, and demonstrate a pattern of widespread and systematic attacks against civilian populations," Hague said.

He said evidence from U.N. observers and independent witnesses confirmed that security forces shelled Houla and that "government militia then went house to house slaughtering entire families without compassion or mercy."

"Syria is on the edge, it is on the edge of a catastrophic situation, if we can imagine one even worse than the current situation."

British Foreign Secretary William Hague

Only Russia, China and Cuba voted against the resolution, with Uganda and Ecuador abstaining. The Philippines was absent.

The resolution blamed "pro-regime elements" and government troops for the massacre. But Moscow echoed the Syrian government's explanation for the killings, blaming rebels that the Kremlin says are trying to stir up a civil war.

Russian Foreign Ministry spokesman Alexander Lukashевич said the Houla massacre was a well-planned attempt to thwart a political solution to the crisis and "lead the situation in Syria to a new circle of gory violence."

Moscow's pro-Syria stance is motivated in part by its strategic and defense ties to Damascus, including weapons sales. Russia also rejects what it sees as a world order dominated by the U.S. Speaking late Friday in Paris, Putin said Russia was not backing the Syrian regime, but trying to "reduce the violence to a minimum."

"We are not for Bashar Assad or for his adversaries. We want to arrive at a situation where the violence is ended and the possibility of a civil war is completely avoided," he said.

U.S. Secretary of State Hillary Rodham Clinton said she doesn't quite buy the claim that Moscow is neutral in the Syrian conflict, saying in Oslo that Russia is viewed in the United Nations, in Damascus and around the world "as supporting the continuity of the Assad regime."

"The continued supply of arms from Russia has strengthened the Assad regime," and "that Russia has maintained this trade ... has raised serious concerns," she said.

Activists say as many as 13,000 people have died in Assad's crackdown against the anti-government uprising, which began in March 2011 amid the Arab Spring. One year after the revolt began, the U.N. put the toll at 9,000, but many hundreds more have died since.

Despite the relentless violence, the Houla massacre stands out for its sheer brutality. Many of the dead were women and children who were gunned down in their homes.

Since then, two other mass killings were reported, both on Thursday. Thirteen bound corpses, many apparently shot execution-style, were found in the eastern province of Deir el-Zour, near the Iraqi border. Gunmen also killed 11 people on their way to work at a state-owned fertilizer factory in the central province of Homs, activists said.

There is no clear idea of who carried out the killings, although both sides traded blame.

U.N. deputy spokesman Eduardo del Buey said the U.N. has sent two teams to the area of the reported killings. "We cannot yet confirm the reports but teams are right now working on this," del Buey said in New York.

Some Courts Are Ruling 'Gay' Is Not Slanderous

BY MICHAEL GORMLEY
Associated Press

ALBANY, N.Y. • One by one, courts around the country are deciding it's no longer slander to falsely call someone gay — a measure of how attitudes are changing in the era of same-sex marriage and gays in uniform.

While "gay" is still widely wielded as an insult, some judges have concluded that it is not damaging to anyone's reputation, just as calling a white man black is no longer grounds for legal action as it was a generation ago.

The latest ruling came from a midlevel New York state appeals court Thursday and was hailed by gay-rights activists as a small but meaningful victory.

The case involved a woman who was sued for allegedly spreading a rumor that an upstate New York man was gay in the hope of breaking up his relationship with another woman. In a 4-0 decision, the New York Appellate Division's Third Department threw out the lawsuit before it went to trial, noting changing attitudes about homosexuality.

Reversing decades of legal precedents, the court said the defamation claim was "based on a false premise that it is shameful and disgraceful to be described as lesbian, gay or bisexual."

"This word has been sort of de-fanged in some ways," said Curtis Houlihan, a consultant from New York City who is gay. "I suppose some would say this is empowering ... but that is not going to change the level of bigotry and discrimination in this country."

Feds to Rule on Cancer Aid for WTC Dust Exposure

BY DAVID B. CARUSO
Associated Press

NEW YORK • A federal health official is expected to decide within days whether to expand an aid program for anyone sickened by World Trade Center dust to cover cancer, a move that would be cheered by many former ground zero workers, but could also prove costly and come at the expense of people with ailments more conclusively linked to 9/11's toxic fallout.

An advisory committee recommended in March that the government open up the $4.3 billion program to people with cancers in 14 different broad categories, including nearly all of the most common forms of the disease.

To date, there is little hard evidence of unusual cancer rates among people exposed to the soot that fell on lower Manhattan after the attacks. But the panel, made up of occupational health specialists, toxicologists, union officials and health advocates, said there were enough carcinogens present at the site to create a plausible risk.

National Institute for Occupational Safety and Health director Dr. John Howard is scheduled to make a determination by Saturday, though his decision might not be announced until Monday.

Adding cancer to the list of covered conditions would make hundreds, or even thousands, of residents and rescue and recovery workers eligible for government-financed medical treatments and sizeable payments for lost wages and diminished quality of life.

But it might also put a severe financial strain on the program.

If Howard accepts the panel's recommendations in their entirety, there would likely be a surge of costly claims in a system now primarily helping people with conditions that aren't life-threatening, like asthma, chronic sinus irritation, sleep apnea or acid reflux disease.

The total number of people exposed to the dust is unknown, but 60,000 people have already enrolled in 9/11 health programs for people who lived or worked within the disaster zone, which covers most of Manhattan south of Canal Street.

Japan Making More Plutonium Despite Huge Stockpile

TOKYO (AP) • Last year's tsunami crisis left Japan's nuclear future in doubt and its reactors idled, rendering its huge stockpile of plutonium useless for now. So, the nuclear industry's plan to produce even more this year has raised a red flag.

Nuclear industry officials say they hope to start producing a half-ton of plutonium within months, in addition to the more than 35 tons Japan already has stored around the world.

That's even though all of the reactors that might use it are either inoperable or offline while the country rethinks its nuclear policy in light of the tsunami-generated Fukushima crisis.

Princeton University professor Frank von Hippel, a leading authority on non-proliferation issues, says there's no reason to produce more plutonium now, calling the plan "crazy."

Pearl Ganotisi takes her meal with a 24-ounce cup of soda in an American hamburger chain Friday in Manila, Philippines.

Around World, Bloomberg Soda War Hard to Swallow

BY CASSANDRA VINOGRAD
Associated Press

LONDON • New York Mayor Michael Bloomberg has proposed a ban on the sale of large sodas and other sugary drinks in restaurants, delis and movie theaters in the hopes of combating obesity. Under his plan, sugary drinks would be limited to 16 fluid ounces — almost half a liter.

Around the world, portion sizes are generally smaller. Perceptions of American overconsumption have been fueled by films such as "Super Size Me" and the spread of U.S. fast-food chains.

So while many global citizens reacted with a mix of incredulity, awe and disgust when confronted with some of the sizes of sugary drinks sold stateside, others were less surprised.

"I know what American culture is like — big portions, not necessarily health-conscious," Gordon Howard, who works in finance, said at a London wine tasting. "They supersize everything."

Like Howard, many people around the world say the notion of a 44-ounce cola doesn't hold much water for them — but neither did a ban.

London

The idea of drinking that much soda — or liquid of any kind — is "excessive" to 32-year-old Simon Robinson, but he said wouldn't care about Bloomberg's ban because he would never drink that much in the first place — even during a three-hour film.

"I would probably have to go to the bathroom and end up missing half the movie," Robinson said. "It's the people that either want that drink or think it's their right that are going to kick up a fuss."

Paris

Cafe owner Mourad Rahmani, 30, said he can't imagine such a debate in France. "The biggest size drink we have here is 0.5 liter," Rahmani said, raising an empty pint glass he'd been washing. While he would never think of ordering such a 44 ounce drink himself, Rahmani said he's against the ban. "It's a question of freedom. What's next? Ban hamburgers?"

Kampala, Uganda

"A person should have the right to decide what they want to eat and how much," said social worker Frederick Agaba. "This should not be the job of a mayor. In any case, this law would not make a big difference, as elsewhere someone could still take whatever amount of Coke he wants."

Manila

At Jollibee, a ubiquitous Filipino fast-food chain that's more popular than McDonald's, call center manager Joy Jimenez agreed with Bloomberg's move.

"Kids these days when they see that soft drinks are available, they will just drink and drink," she said. "It is part of government's responsibility to ensure the health of its citizens."

Jerusalem

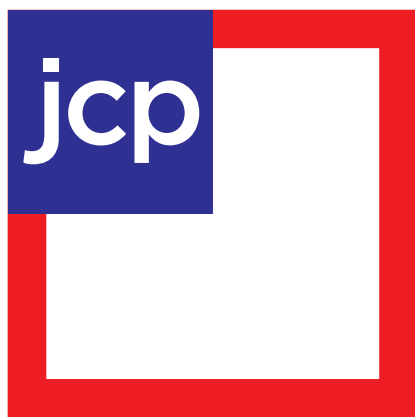

In Israel, Yair Foldes said that the New York measure might help address obesity.

"Here I don't think we have that problem but there it might help raise awareness," he said while waiting for a train.

Johannesburg

Shazia Suffla suggested that governments should instead provide more information about how to avoid diseases like diabetes and high blood pressure, and encourage restaurants to offer more healthy choices.

"I'm actually adapting to trying to eat healthily," she said while heading to a diner near her office to get a grilled chicken sandwich. "But people don't like to be told what to do"

Clover Trinity Installs New Pastor

BY JOHN E. SWAYZE
For the Times-News

BUHL • Derek Evans doesn't recall an exact moment when God began calling him into the ministry. He sees it as the result of faith and a commitment to the Gospel message that has grown over a lifetime.

Evans, 30, grew up in Texas City, Texas, and attended services with his family in the Lutheran Church. He credits those worship experiences with paving the way toward this Sunday's 3 p.m. service to ordain and install him as pastor of Clover Trinity Lutheran Church.

"The church was always a big part of my life and it was about the time of confirmation that I began to get a broad sense of the importance of ministry," he said. "I want to help people grow in their faith that same way by proclaiming the gospel, administering the sacraments, and discipling."

Evans and his wife, Becky, received a call to shepherd the 98-year-old Clover congregation on May 1. While in the seminary, he served a 2010 vicarage in Bellville, Ill., but this will be his first position as a pastor. He graduated from Concordia University in 2004 with a bachelor's degree in communication, before completing a master's of divinity at Concordia Seminary, St. Louis, in 2010. He currently is wrapping up work on a second master's degree in Sacred Theology.

"This congregation wants to continue its tradition of reaching out to the community, and I know the importance of developing relationships in the faith," Evans said. "I think my strengths are preaching and teaching, with an emphasis on Bible study."

Becky Evans spent her youth living in several places throughout the Midwest but claims Wisconsin as home, and the Lutheran Church Missouri Synod as a constant in her life. She attended Concordia University in River Forest, Ill., and graduated with double bachelor's degrees in sociology and Spanish in 2002. After studying for one year at the University of Salamanca in Spain, she worked for three years at an alternative school in Chicago and then five years as a social worker in St. Louis.

The couple was married five years ago and is expecting the birth of their first child in late June.

"We actually met through a matchmaking friend who thought we'd make a good match and he was right," Becky said. "After our baby is born, I plan on getting more involved in the congregation, complementing Derek's ministry strengths and helping out wherever I can."

Retailers, Customers Welcome Wash. Booze Sales

ASSOCIATED PRESS

Customers lined up Friday at retail stores across Washington to buy spirits for the first time outside state-run stores, and retailers highlighted their liquor deals with full-page newspaper ads, radio spots, banners and special events.

Many stores reported brisk sales on the first day of liquor privatization, but more than one manager bemoaned slim supplies with the same refrain: "Now, if we could just stock the shelves."

"The big guys are getting first choice, and we get what's left," said Chris Brown of Wray's Thriftway, an independent grocer with three stores in Yakima. "It's just difficult initially. Unfortunately, that's the norm anymore."

Danger Sign for U.S. Economy: Nation's Job Growth Disappoints

U.S. employers created 69,000 jobs in May, the fewest in a year, and the unemployment rate ticked up.

BY PAUL WISEMAN
Associated Press

WASHINGTON • The American economy is in trouble again.

Employers in the United States added only 69,000 jobs in May, the fewest in a year and not even close to what economists expected. For the first time since last June, the unemployment rate rose, to 8.2 percent from 8.1 percent.

It was the third month in a row of weak job growth and further evidence that, just as in 2010 and 2011, a winter of hope for the economy has turned to a spring of disappointment.

"This is horrible," said Ian Shepherdson, chief economist at High Frequency Economics, a consulting firm.

The job figures, released Friday morning by the Labor Department, dealt a strong blow to President Barack Obama at the start of a general election campaign that will turn on the economy.

They also deepened the pessimism of investors, who even before the report was released were worried about a debt crisis in Europe with no sign of solution and signs of a slowdown in the powerhouse economy of China.

The Dow Jones industrial average fell 275 points, its worst day of the year, and for the first time was down for 2012. The Standard & Poor's 500 index is almost 10 percent below its 2012 high, the traditional definition of a market correction.

Mitt Romney, who on Tuesday cleared the number of convention delegates required to win the Republican presidential nomination, told CNBC that the report was "devastating."

He called for an emphasis on energy development, pledged to "kill" the health care overhaul that Obama saw through in 2010 and said he would reduce taxes and government spending. The clearest fix for the economy, he said, was to defeat Obama.

"It is now clear to everyone that President Obama's policies have failed to achieve their goals and that the Obama economy is crushing America's middle class," said Romney, the former Massachusetts governor.

Obama, in Minnesota, pushed a proposal to expand job opportunities for veterans returning from Iraq and Afghanistan. He said that the economy is not creating jobs "as fast as we want" but vowed that it would improve.

"We will come back stronger," he said. "We do have better days ahead."

Alan Krueger, head of the president's Council of Economic Advisers, pointed out that the country has added jobs for 27 months in a row, including 4.3 million jobs in the private sector.

Underscoring the challenge for Obama with five months to go in the campaign, a May poll by The Associated Press and GfK, a research company, showed that 52 percent disapproved of Obama's handling of the economy while 46 percent approved.

Some financial analysts said that the dismal job figures put pressure on the Federal Reserve to take additional steps to help the economy, but it was not clear how much good the Fed could do beyond trying to inspire confidence.

The central bank has already kept the short-term interest rate it controls at a record low of almost zero since the fall of 2008, during the financial crisis, and pledged to keep it there through late 2014.

It has undertaken two rounds of massive purchases of government bonds, starting in March 2009 and November 2010, to help drive long-term interest rates down and stimulate stock prices. Another program to lower long-term interest rates, known as Operation Twist, was announced last September and ends this month.

But low interest rates, other analysts pointed out, are not the problem. An investor stampe into bonds on Friday drove the yield on the 10-year U.S. Treasury note as low as 1.44 percent, the lowest on record.

Fed Chairman Ben Bernanke testifies next week before a joint committee of Congress, and the Fed next meets June 19 and 20.

Complicating the challenge for the economy, tax cuts passed under President George W. Bush will expire after Dec. 31, as will a cut in the Social Security payroll tax. More than $100 billion in automatic spending cuts to defense and domestic programs also kick in Jan. 1. Less money in consumers' pockets next year and less spending by the government would be a significant drag on the economy.

Congress could extend the tax cuts, but Republicans control the House of Representatives, and they have no political incentive to help Obama in the November election by doing so.

The Congressional Budget Office has said the tax increases and spending cuts would cause the economy to shrink at an annual rate of 1.3 percent in the first half of next year. The economy grew at a 1.9 percent annual rate in the first quarter of this year.

And there is little significant action that the White House can take on its own.

The job figures in the United States added to evidence that the world economy is in peril again.

Wal-Mart CEO Says Co. Committed to Compliance

BY ANNE D'INNOCENZIO
Associated Press

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. • Wal-Mart Stores Inc. CEO Mike Duke said Friday that the retailer is committed to integrity in the wake of recent bribery allegations in Mexico.

Duke joined Chairman Robson Walton, the son of founder Sam Walton, at the company's annual meeting on Friday in pledging that Wal-Mart will get to the bottom of the allegations.

This comes after the world's largest retailer said in recent weeks that it is overhauling its compliance program and expanding its internal investigation into the accusations to other countries.

"We've all heard about the recent allegations about the company," Duke said to a crowd of about 14,000. "Let me be clear: Wal-Mart is committed to compliance and integrity everywhere we operate. I want to personally assure you, we're doing everything we can to get to the bottom of this matter."

Jim Walton, left, Alice Walton, center, and Robson Walton, right, greet each other during the beginning of the Walmart Stores Inc. shareholders' meeting in Fayetteville, Ark., Friday. The three siblings are the children of the late Sam Walton, founder of Walmart.

The meeting could have been a triumphant moment for the world's largest retailer, which is celebrating its 50th anniversary and seeing its U.S. results make a comeback. But instead executives spent much of the meeting reassuring shareholders that the company will be able to retain its integrity as it continues to expand globally.

The meeting, which capped a weeklong slate of Wal-Mart for potential violations. Investors are suing top executives. And some shareholders are calling for the removal of several board members, including Walton, Duke and former CEO Lee Scott.

Wal-Mart disclosed in a regulatory filing late Friday that several executives including Duke, Scott, and Walton are the target of 11 "derivative" lawsuits, a type of legal action that seeks to change corporate governance. The lawsuits charge that the executives neglected their responsibilities in handling the alleged bribery scandal. Wal-Mart also noted in its filing that a securities class action lawsuit was filed against the company on May 7.

Preliminary results from Friday show that all directors up for re-election were re-elected, although final results will be announced Monday. Descendants of Wal-Mart's founder own about 50 percent of Wal-Mart's shares, so activist shareholders have little chance of voting out the board members.

THE DIGIT

$250 million

Romney net worth remains near $250 million • A new financial report from GOP presidential candidate Mitt Romney shows that his personal fortune remains near $250 million, about the same as last year even after a mass sell-off of stocks from his vast investment portfolio. Romney's campaign said Friday that his assets ranged between $190 million and $250 million, and a tally by The Associated Press put the figure at the high end of that range. The new financial report from Romney describes sales over the past year of a large amount of stocks that had been managed through his blind trust. The stocks sold included such familiar corporate entities as Boeing, Volkswagen and Pepsico.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE

Bobby Wolff

"The great tragedy of Science — the slaying of a beautiful hypothesis by an ugly fact." — T.H. Huxley Today's deal sees South in a delicate no-trump slam, having carefully avoided the pitfall of playing six hearts, where the defenders can crossruff the first five tricks. Against six no-trump West finds the passive heart lead and declarer has 10 top winners. He can establish a spade trick easily enough, but if he assumes West has all the high spades, he will need to create an endplay or a squeeze for the 12th trick.

Most simple squeezes involve trying to take the rest of the tricks, but where, as here, one trick has to be lost after pressure is applied, the position is often more difficult to see.

The first step in the process is easy enough. Declarer cashes four rounds of hearts, then sets out on the clubs. West can discard two spades on the hearts without discomfort. However, the four rounds of clubs do put West under pressure. He stuffs two spades early, then a painful diamond, but in the six-card ending, he has three diamonds and three spades left. What should he do now? Since a spade is obviously fatal, West must hope his partner has the diamond jack, so discards a diamond.

Now declarer cashes the diamond ace and king, reducing West to his three spades. Declarer then leads a spade to his king, which West must win and lead a spade away from his jack. Declarer runs the spade around to his hand and has the rest of the tricks.

ANSWER: When you hold a balanced 10-count facing a minimum opening bid, your first reaction should not be to try for game. Reasons to bid on include extra trump length, a long side-suit or support for partner. In this case you have no aces and no support for partner's original suit, so pass looks clear-cut.

DEAR ABBY: My wife, "Angie," and I have been happily married for 11 years and have two wonderful kids. Angie has been working out the past couple of years and has achieved impressive results. She looks great. I fully support her in this and she knows it.

DEAR ALARMED HUSBAND: Your wife doesn't see herself the way you do. She does not accept that she has achieved her goal and regards herself as still a work in progress. This may be because she has low self-esteem, or she may have a condition called "body dysmorphia," in which a person can't stop thinking about a perceived flaw in his or her appearance.

DEAR ALARMED: The person she should be talking to about her weight issues is her physician. I recommend you suggest it to her to be sure her preoccupation isn't an unhealthy one.

DEAR ABBY: I'm a high school senior. My boyfriend has asked me to marry him and I said yes. I don't know if I may have said it too quickly or if I should have waited. My family keeps asking me if I'm "sure." Well, I want to be with him, but I don't know about marriage. Please help me. I don't want to make a big mistake.

DEAR CONFUSED: If you are unsure if you want to be married, you agreed too quickly. What you need to do is take a little time to decide what you want to do with your future. Before marrying, it would be wise to consider completing your education so you will be better able to contribute financially to your marriage partnership. If you do, you will need to focus on your studies for the next few years. If not, you should still postpone marriage until you have lived apart from your family long enough to establish emotional and financial independence.

DEAR ABBY: My estranged niece's high school graduation is coming up, and her father (my brother) has invited me to attend. He says she wants all her aunts (including me) to be there. I'm not sure I should go because she kicked us out of her life years ago when she went to live with her mom after her parents separated. She said many hurtful things to her mom about us at the time and said she wanted us out of her life. Please advise me.

Today is Saturday, June 2, the 154th day of 2012. There are 212 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight:

On June 2, 1953, Queen Elizabeth II was crowned in Westminster Abbey, 16 months after the death of her father, King George VI; it was the first such ceremony to be televised.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:

In 1886, President Grover Cleveland, 49, married Frances Folsom, 21, in the Blue Room of the White House. (To date, Cleveland is the only president to marry in the executive mansion.)

In 1897, Mark Twain, 61, was quoted by the New York Journal as saying from London that "the report of my death was an exaggeration."

In 1924, Congress passed a measure that was then signed by President Calvin Coolidge guaranteeing full American citizenship for all Native Americans born within U.S. territorial limits.

In 1941, baseball's "Iron Horse," Lou Gehrig, died in New York of a degenerative disease, amyotrophic lateral sclerosis; he was 37. The chief justice of the United States, Charles Evans Hughes, announced his retirement effective July 1, 1941.

In 1961, during a state visit to France, President John F. Kennedy, noting the warm reception his wife was receiving, jocularly described himself as "the man who accompanied Jacqueline Kennedy to Paris, and I have enjoyed it." Playwright and director George S. Kaufman, 71, died in New York.

In 1962, Soviet forces opened fire on workers in the Russian city of Novocherkassk who had gone on strike over food shortages; accounts of the death toll vary, although a retired general who said he opposed the action put the figure at 22 to 24 during a 1989 interview.

In 1966, the U.S. space probe Surveyor 1 landed on the moon and began transmitting detailed photographs of the lunar surface.

In 1979, Pope John Paul II arrived in his native Poland on the first visit by a pope to a Communist country.

In 1986, for the first time, the public could watch the proceedings of the U.S. Senate on television as a six-week experiment began.

In 1997, Timothy McVeigh was convicted of murder and conspiracy in the Oklahoma City bombing. (He was executed in June 2001.)

In 2004, the syndicated TV game show "Jeopardy!" began airing contestant Ken Jennings' 74-game winning streak.

Ten years ago: Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat offered Cabinet posts to militant groups as part of a government reshuffle. A fire broke out at Buckingham Palace, forcing the evacuation of hundreds of people and marred the four-day celebration of Queen Elizabeth II's 50 years on the throne. "Thoroughly Modern Millie" won six Tony Awards, including best musical. American journalist and columnist Flora Lewis died in Paris.

IF JUNE 2 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Plan for the future so that you can take advantage of advantageous cosmic conditions in July and August. During July, your command of business techniques can help you make smart financial moves — and in August, your cup might “runneth over” with opportunities and well-wishers who will lend you a hand just when you need it. That is an excellent time to make crucial decisions, launch important plans or become involved with someone who has your best interests at heart.

HOROSCOPE

Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): An exacting and critical mood prevails. This may spur you to further accomplishment. While it is not a good time to initiate new actions, it is a good time to organize and schedule future work.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Good will wins hearts. Your generous attitude and ingenious methods receive attention and may even save the day. There is a disapproving attitude towards anything untraditional or politically incorrect.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Romantic fantasies are fueled up. Sitting in front of the TV, however, will cause dissatisfaction. Find a suitable physical outlet. Literally breathe some fresh air into relationships with a bike ride or a walk.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Get your bearings. You can look at a map, but if it doesn't show “you are here” it might be useless. This weekend might be a good time to study your place in the universe — and in someone's heart.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Picky people quibble over the little things. As long as you are open-minded and fair with the big things, everything will run smoothly. Keep a firm grip on your wallet; you may be tempted to overspend.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Get pumped up without getting upset. You may be enthused about being out in public, but you don't need to think that every shopping spree is a contest to see who spends the most.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): The caged bird still sings. It is possible that you are feeling somewhat controlled by others or controlled by circumstances this weekend. You manage to find ways to circumvent restrictions in a positive way.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Respond to others with respect. The moon is traveling through your sign this weekend, so you may be more reflective than usual. Make an effort to be less competitive and more willing to compromise.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You juggle heartfelt romantic feelings with grinding ambition. Get a boost of confidence from those you love and care about this weekend. Don't dwell on problems left over from the workweek.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Traditions can change, evolve and grow. What is new, innovative and fresh today might be tomorrow's status quo. Trying something outside the normal routines can teach you a valuable lesson.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Seek group sports or activities that readily blow off steam. You may deal with some temperamental people this weekend, but can quickly find common ground. Challenge yourself, not others, to excel.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Compete to be complete. A deep determination to reach your goals might blind you to romantic possibilities. You may be tempted to spend the contents of your piggy bank. Major purchases should be avoided.
