Twin Falls couple reunites with son given up for adoption 45 years ago.

BY MELISSA DAVLIN

mdavlin@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • In early April, Ron Black got a call at work from a stranger named Eric Barnes.

Ron, director of the College of Southern Idaho Refugee Center, had never heard of the man and assumed he was a member of the public with a question about refugees.

After introducing himself, Barnes said the five words that Ron had been waiting for 45 years to hear.

"I think you're my father," Barnes said.

That call set off a flurry of Skype chats, phone calls and a surprise reunion in St. Louis. Ron and his wife, Gael, were finally reunited with the son they had given up for adoption when he was an infant.

In 1966, Gael Whitley, a 19-year-old Bible college student, found herself pregnant. Her boyfriend, Ron, still lived with his parents, and her parents wouldn't allow her to bring home the baby. The young couple decided to give up the child for adoption. Gael's parents sent her to a home for unwed mothers in Denver, where she wasn't allowed to have contact with her sisters. She gave birth to a healthy boy and named him Alan Dale Whitley.

Before handing him over, Gael was able to hold him briefly.

"I placed him because I loved him," Gael said. "I didn't place him because I rejected him."

Six months after she gave up the boy for adoption, Ron and Gael married. In 17 years, they had seven more children: six boys and a girl. Ron represented Twin Falls in the state Legislature, then took over as director for the refugee center.

As the years turned into decades, the Blacks never forgot about their firstborn, and they

T.F. Council Returns to Canyon Park Development

BY MELISSA DAVLIN mdavlin@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • After council-ordered mediation between the developer and affected neighbors, the final plat for the Canyon Park development is back on the Twin Falls City Council agenda tonight.

The planned development, located on the Snake River Canyon rim near Golden Corral, was originally scheduled for final approval in early May. But after hearing concerns from residents, council members ordered mediation between the developers and neighbors. That mediation took place on May 8, according to a letter from attorney Gary Slette. After the official mediation and informal meetings with other citizens, developers agreed to a few provisions, including adding more landscaping and providing a detour route if construction blocks the nearby walking trail.

Though opponents have submitted petitions and letters to the council explaining their concerns, council members haven't been allowed to look at the input because they're making the decision as a quasi-judicial body rather than a council as they usually do. When they receive the letters, they've been advised to send them directly to city staff.

Those letters appear in the agenda packet for tonight's meeting. In the notes, residents cite a number of reasons for opposing the development, including aesthetics and concerns about geology of the canyon being able to support the strip mall.

The city will also hold a public hearing on increasing the fees charged at the city swimming pool. It's the first rate increase in four years, according to a letter to the council from Pool Manager John Pauley.

Pauley hopes to raise the rates by 5 percent for memberships and 25 cents for all daily admission prices. The increase would help pay for new programs and staff wages.

Also tonight, the council will consider:

• Appointing Dave Benefiel to the Traffic Safety Commission.

• Authorizing city staff to refinance two outstanding loans from the Idaho Department of Environmental Quality.

• Awarding a $1.2 million contract for work on the intersection of Eastland Drive and Addison Avenue to PMF Inc.

KETCHUM • Twelve vears ago, Daniel Suelo walked into a phone booth, took $30 out of his pocket, stashed it on the shelf and turned and walked away.

Since, he has lived without money.

He doesn't earn, receive or spend a single cent. He doesn't pay taxes or accept welfare, accepting only what is freely given. Yet he seems to get along just fine. His blog, "Zero Currency," receives tens of thousands of hits. And he's even the subject of a book titled "The Man Who Quit Money."

He says he may be without cents but he's not without sense.

New Fires Flare throughout Region

TWIN FALLS • Just as fire crews were mopping up the remainder of the 525-acre East Devil's Corral Fire on Sunday, three new blazes started in separate areas.

The largest - Balanced Road near Castleford - was estimated at 1,100 acres late Sunday, Bureau of Land Management spokeswoman Kyli Gough said. It began at 2 p.m. with the Bent and Bell fires south of Hagerman sparking at 4:46 p.m. and 5:28 p.m., respectively.

of Sunday's fires, with 25 percent of the Balanced Road fire contained by 5 p.m. Gough said she expects the Balanced Road fire to be fully contained by noon today.

A house was threatened by that blaze at one point Sunday, but it was protected and no damage was anticipated. Castleford Rural Fire Department joined BLM firefighters who had six BLM engines, a water tender and bulldozer to knock down the Balanced Road blaze.

Hagerman Rural Fire Department and BLM responded to the Bell and Bent fires, which Gough estimated at just a couple of acres on Idaho Department of Fish and Game land. Those fires were expected to be contained by Sunday night.

Meanwhile, BLM and U.S. Forest Service personnel returned Sunday to the East Devil's Corral Fire to make sure it did not flare up again, Gough said during an interview. They were to be released from that location south of Interstate 84 between Devil's Corral and Vineyard Lake by 7 p.m. Sunday.

Officials did not know all the details of that fire's origin as of Sunday. Jerome County Sheriff Doug McFall said the Devil's Corral blaze, which began at 1:40 p.m. Saturday, resulted from a fallen electrical wire sparking dry brush. However, McFall said talks with Idaho Power Co. representatives hadn't determined whether the high-tension power line fell because of vandalism such as gunshots or the result of natural causes.

If the line was damaged by a bullet or bullets, McFall said, it's possible the shots came several months ago and the line weakened over time.

No structures were damaged in that fire, although a haystack was consumed. No firefighters were injured in the response, Gough said.

Gael and Ron Black talk with their grandson Marcus Black, 3, at their home Saturday in Twin Falls.

On April 4 of this year, Carol Barnes received Eric's birth certificate in the mail while Eric was at work, and found they had been spelling Gael's first name wrong.

Hoping to surprise Eric, Carol and two of the couple's three daughters plugged the names into a search engine and quickly found information on the Blacks, including photos and a phone number.

Carol and the girls met Eric at a restaurant, where they presented him with everything they had found.

Ketchum where the two men addressed a packed auditorium.

Sundeen - who has written books on car camping and bullfighting in Mexico, as well as articles for New York Times Magazine and Outside - said he was reluctant to write the book when asked, even though he had met Suelo while working an itinerant river guide living out of his truck.

But as he realized that Suelo came from a good family and was not mentally ill, he became intrigued with how the man came to his beliefs while living off the land in Alaska and through a stint at a Buddhist monastery in Thailand. Many of Suelo's beliefs are based on age-old ideas, such as the Sabbath, which Suelo says was a "Quit Money Day."

"The Sabbath is not necessarily about giving up work but, rather, giving up work for money, giving up business," Suelo said, pointing out that the Hebrew word for work means "business."

One of its purposes was to let animals and poor people take freely of produce. When Jesus' disciples, who had no money or possessions, were gleaning food from fields, the Pharisees condemned them for "working" on the Sabbath when the very purpose of the Sabbath was to let poor people to take freely. The message Jesus and the apostles proclaimed was not necessarily to do away with the Sabbath but to make every day Sabbath, Suelo said, forgiving all debts, giving up possessions, freely giving and freely receiving.

"Other cultures practiced a Sabbath, as well as periodic times of forgiveness like Jubilee where all debts were forgiven," Suelo said. "The famous Rosetta Stone, in fact, is Ptolemy's announcement forgiving debt across Egypt."

Suelo said that he began giving up his possessions while battling clinical depression. As he began shedding things, his depression lifted.

"I finally got up the nerve to give up my last dollar and it felt very liberating," he said. "I still feel as if I have too much stuff. I'm carrying a backpack, sleeping bag and extra set of clothes on this tour. And I have pots and pans stashed in Moab."

By releasing his grip on material possessions, Suelo said he has become more cognizant of the things that come without a price tag, such as the light and warmth of the sun.

"Everything is a gift and we don't realize that," he said. "The point of living this way is not about being a survivalist. It's about acknowledging we're all dependent on each other and nature.

"This is the way people lived for thousands of years before money came into being. When I'm no longer worried about so-and-so getting more than I, when I'm no longer wanting credit for what I do, grace comes, balance comes?

Suelo added he doesn't believe money is evil. "But how is it that we're supposed to love our neighbor but, then, all of us have separate wash machines? What if we started sharing these things, instead? Get rid of money and use fewer resources and create more community."

Suelo raises questions about what we lose in a culture obsessed with money and examines the idea of "being in the world but not of the world," said Hailey resident Marty Lyon.

"My wife is there in her heart, but she lives with me," Lyon said. "Still, what this man has to say is very interesting. I would love to sit with him in his cave for two days exploring this further."

While he can't bring himself to quit money, Sundeen said he has made a few changes, such as riding his bike more, drying clothes on a line, and taking his money out of a national bank and putting it in a local credit union.

"These things seem small, but I think they're important," he said.

End of Life

residents get exactly the care they want at the end of their lives.

Idahoans now have access to a detailed form approved by the state to be filled out with the help of health care professionals. Once signed by a doctor or nurse practitioner, the document is legally binding. Patients can register the document with the secretary of state, making it available online to any provider.

Thompson got assistance with his form from workers at Boise's Life's Doors Hospice and Home Health Care.

"I don't want to be on garbage," life-support Thompson said. "I don't want to live longer than my kids. I've signed it all."

When many Idaho residents approach the end, they want to know that their wishes for care - or the lack thereof – are respected and followed.

For a while, that was a problem. As recently as 2002, Idaho received a Dplus grade from the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation when it came to looking after the wishes of elderly and dying patients.

Until 2007, Idaho offered only the form known as Comfort One, a do-not-resuscitate form. Such DNRs, as they are known, inform doctors and nurses when a patient doesn't want heroic measures to prolong life.

If a patient ended up in an emergency room on oxygen or in dire health and his or her heart stopped, doctors and nurses were not bound by the Comfort One document.

It was certainly good information and revealed some of the patient's wishes, experts said, but the fact that it wasn't a binding document was a problem.

"One of the things that everyone shares is the desire to relieve suffering," said Peter Kozisek, medical director for St. Luke's Regional Medical Center's palliative service and a member of the Idaho End-of-Life Coalition. "Our goals are to honor patients' directive for care."

In 2002, a coalition of Idaho associations of hospices and palliative care professionals decided to do something about the inadequate protections for the wishes of the sick and the dying.

In partnership with the Idaho secretary of state and other medical groups, the coalition created the Physician Orders for Treatment program, or POST.

Gov. Butch Otter signed the protocol into law in 2007.

The program is designed to help patients get exactly the care they want, said coalition member Rick Bassett.

From that nearly failing grade in 2002, Idaho rebounded to be among the states leading the country in the movement to improve the quality of end-of-life care.

Idaho's program is patterned on the one in Oregon, which embraced the end-of-life discussion early, said Dr. Theodore Walters, an oncologist medical director at Life's Doors who has practiced medicine since the 1970s.

At his home, Thompson relates a story that scared him and showed him the importance of clear end-oflife instructions.

When Thompson's brother was dying in the late 1990s, family members interceded. They kept him on life support for more than a month, a decision that flew in the face of his brother's wishes, Thompson said.

Thompson, who grew up in Arlee, Mont., was a rough-and-tumble cowboy who raised his sons and daughters there and in eastern Idaho. He retired in the mid-1990s, when he couldn't buck bales of hay any longer.

respiratory As and prostate problems take a toll on his health, Thompson's wife, Annette, assures him that she knows his wishes. But the experience with his brother made Thompson wary. Filling out Idaho's POST form "makes me feel better," Thompson said.

"I've told everybody, when I'm gone, put my hats and boots up there and let me ride."

The POST is a document that helps health care providers work with their patients to articulate their medical wishes. Once a primary-care provider signs it, the form is a physician's or - der that is in effect from emergency rooms to hospices.

"It does ensure the patient's wishes are honored anywhere within the health care system, which is really important," Kozisek said.

"It offers that insight with regard to, 'What do I want regarding my resuscitation wishes;' " he said. "You don't need to have a different order written when you come into the hospital. The POST suffices."

The form is comprehensive with several sections, Kozisek said. It includes specifics such as use of feeding tubes, antibiotics, intravenous products and blood products.

Its checklist has specific categories, including the traditional DNR request. But it also included is a section on medical interventions, allowing choices such as "comfort measures," "limited additional interventions" and "aggressive interventions."

For example, a patient can select to be treated "with dignity and respect. Reasonable measures are to be made to offer food and fluids by mouth." Or a patient can ask to be intubated and put on a ventilator.

The form includes space

"One of the things that everyone shares is the desire to relieve suffering. Our goals are to honor patients' directive for care."

Peter Kozisek, medical director for St. Luke's Regional Medical Center's palliative service and a member of the Idaho End-of-Life Coalition for "other instructions," which lets a patient provide other specific requests.

The POST form does not replace an advanced directive document such as a living will or durable power of attorney, which deal with other end-of-life issues and powers.

Clear instructions on a legal form also can help a patient's family resist taking all possible measures as a way to assuage their own guilt.

"A lot of people feel somewhat guilty that Dad or Uncle Joe are now dying and they didn't maybe pay enough attention to them," said Walters. "We have problems with family members coming in late and saying, 'You have to do everything you can.' If we can take that form out and say, 'This is what Uncle Joe signed,' they understand the patient has made that decision."

The form also helps in cases that don't involve end-of-life decisions, said Amy Stang, a certified hospice and palliative nurse and the program coordinator for palliative medicine at St Luke's.

If a person's religious beliefs preclude use of blood products, that person can use the form to emphasize that instruction.

Kozisek uses the "other instructions" space frequently to discuss goals with patients - "what they value, what gives life meaning, what is special to them, goals for the future."

"After patients have an opportunity to express themselves, then at the end we talk about medical interventions and whether those will help or hinder those goals," he said.

Patients can choose to register the form with the Idaho Secretary of State's Office, which maintains an online database accessible to any health care provider. Each patient gets a registration card with a code that accesses their record.

Walters, who is in the business of end-of-life care, directs his social and health care workers to help their patients with the form. But even Walters wasn't aware of the state's registry. He called it a "good idea."

That highlights another problem, organizers say: Many Idahoans and many physicians don't know about POST.

Recently, the coalition got a $35,000 grant for a twoyear statewide education campaign to do a better job telling doctors, nursing facilities and the public about the advance directive registry and POST. Idaho was one of five states to get the grant.

The publicity effort will concentrate on rural areas, where the least is known about the program.

"It is fantastic to see that Idaho is recognized as a leader. We will be mentors to other states," Bassett said. "As we move forward, we will have other states contacting us to see how we have overcome some of the barriers."

Moscow Federal Building Likely Headed for Auction

MOSCOW (AP) • The U.S. General Services Administration has passed on a $300,000 offer from Latah County to purchase a Federal Building in north-central Idaho's Moscow.

The county's offer expired Thursday, with the next step being an online auction.

GSA says the building needs more than $3 million in renovations and it's better off selling it. The GSA wants $1.9 million.

The Lewiston Tribune reports that the online auction would require up-front money, possibly as high as $50,000, to register as a bidder.

The county rents office space in the 53,000-square-foot building constructed in 1973. It houses the U.S. Post Office, U.S. Attorney's Office, U.S. Marshal's Office and other entities.

Idaho Statesman

BOISE (AP) • Becky Nourse had to avoid three antelope on Idaho 75 as she drove south May 19 through the panoramic valley surrounded by the peaks of the Sawtooth Range and White Cloud Mountains.

The weekend before Memorial Day, the road through the Sawtooth National Recreation Area was nearly deserted. A few hawks hunted the log-fenced meadows at the base of a forest of green and red lodgepole pines that rise into the snow-crested granite spires.

As Sawtooth National Forest supervisor, Nourse's job is to protect the 756,000-acre recreation area set aside by Congress 40 years ago because of its spectacular views, wildlife and fisheries.

But it's not her only job.

She also manages the rest of the 2.1 million-acre forest, which stretches south nearly to the Nevada border. She has had to deal with budget cuts that have left few rangers roaming the backcountry and nearly forced her to close the visitor center at Redfish Lake this year.

The U.S. Forest Service's lack of money and focused priorities has prompted some to question the 1972 decision to protect four mountain ranges, more than 1,000 lakes, 40 peaks higher than 10,000 feet and the headwaters of four major Idaho rivers as a recreation area instead of a national park. Parks generally get higher profiles, bigger budgets, and better visitor services and interpretive programs.

But Nourse, who worked as deputy ranger in the SNRA more than a decade ago, thinks Idaho's congressional delegation made the right choice. Led by Democratic Sen. Frank Church, Idaho leaders created a hybrid recreation area that has withstood the test of time.

"It's as much about what you don't see as what you see," Nourse said.

You don't see the valleys filled with subdivisions of second homes stretching out from towns filled with huge resort hotels, Walmarts and other chains — like in Jackson, Wyo., near Grand Teton National Park. Stanley has seen only minor development in the past four decades, retaining its small, mountain-town character. What you do see is the result of the vision of a few state leaders, activists and others who wanted the landscape preserved.

Pat Ford, president of the Boulder-White Clouds Council, which is dedicated to protecting the 500,000acre roadless area that lines the eastern side, hopes today's generation renews the vision.

Among his recommendations: Give the area more independence and standing so its quality is recognized and funded. And whatever the future holds, managers will have to account for the changes coming from global warming, he said.

"How can we prepare its lands, users and institutions for the hot, hard weather to come?" Ford said SNRA advocates must ask.

Church, Republican Sen. Len Jordan and Republican Reps. Jim McClure and Orval Hansen championed the law establishing the SNRA to protect fish and wildlife, halt significant new development and retain the area's pastoral character. Their efforts came after a fight by conservationists to stop an open-pit molybdenum mine at Castle Peak in the White Clouds.

Cecil Andrus made the mine fight the centerpiece of his successful 1970 gubernatorial campaign, broadening support for the area and laying the groundwork for the delegation's work.

But a combination of Idaho Falls nuclear workers and others who formed the Sawtooth Preservation Council didn't think the Idaho delegation was ambitious enough.

Boyd Norton, a conservation photographer and former nuclear engineer, remembers a meeting he and others had with Church.

"He said, 'Look, a national park is not in the cards,'" Norton said.

"Looking back, I think Frank may have been wrong about that," Norton said.

But a national park might have stopped hunting in the mountains. The pressure for the government to buy the more than 25,000 acres of private land within the boundaries — inholdings would have been strong.

"I did not support a national park because of the inholdings," said Andrus, who later became President Jimmy Carter's Interior secretary.

And he agrees with Church's assessment on whether the area could have been protected as a park:

"They never could have gotten the horses to do that," Andrus said.

A National Park Service plan presented at the time would have managed the valleys as national recreation areas and the mountains as a national park, said John Freemuth, a Boise State University political science professor and a former park ranger. The national recreation area designation allowed more flexibility.

The agency might have been able to accommodate inholders and allow hunting, although it rarely does that.

Visitors to a Sawtooth National Park would have seen a different place. As a national park, it inevitably would have attracted more visitors. Today about 1. 2 million people visit the SNRA annually.

Former N. Idaho Deputy Prosecutor Sues County

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) • A former deputy prosecutor in northern Idaho who says he was fired because of his age after refusing to take a psycho-sexual examination has filed a lawsuit claiming discrimination.

The Spokesman-Review reports that Kenneth Stone filed the complaint in May in U.S. District Court against Kootenai County Prosecutor Barry McHugh, the prosecutor's office and the county seeking unspecified damages.

Stone says he was fired on March 25, 2011, after refusing to take the exam he describes as being reserved for sexual predators.

An attorney representing the county says Stone was fired because he violated the county's harassment policies and the county has a zero-tolerance policy for harassment.

Syrian Leader Likens Bloody Črackdown to Surgery

BEIRUT (AP) • Syrian President Bashar Assad defended his government's crackdown on opponents Sunday, saying a doctor performing messy emergency surgery does not have blood on his hands if he is trying to save a patient.

In his first speech since January, Assad appeared unmoved by scathing international criticism of his ferocious response to the 15-month-old revolt against his rule, which has killed up to 13,000 people, according to activist groups. He also denied responsibility for last week's Houla massacre of more than 100 people, saying not even "monsters" would carry out such an ugly crime.

He said terrorists have pushed his country into war.

"When a surgeon in an operating room ... cuts and cleans and amputates, and the wound bleeds, do we say to him your hands are stained with blood?" Assad said in a televised speech to parliament. "Or do we thank him for saving the patient?"

Assad insisted the revolt was the work of foreign-backed extremists not reformers seeking change.

Zimmerman Back in Jail, Two Days after Bond Was Revoked

MIAMI (AP) • George Zimmerman, the former neighborhood watch volunteer charged with murder in the killing of Trayvon Martin, surrendered to police Sunday and was booked into a central Florida jail two days after his bond was revoked.

Zimmerman's legal team said in a tweet Sunday afternoon that he was in police custody. Circuit Judge Kenneth Lester revoked Zimmerman's bond on Friday, saying the defendant and his wife had lied to the court in April about their finances so he could obtain a lower bond.

About 40 minutes before the 2:30 p.m. Sunday deadline to surrender, the Seminole County jail website listed Zimmerman as an inmate. He was being held without bail and had $500 in his jail account, the website showed.

Seminole County Sheriff Donald Eslinger said Zimmerman turned himself in to two sheriff's office employees around 1:25 p.m. near the jail, and was then driven there. Zimmerman arrived in a white minivan and did not respond to questions from reporters as he walked inside, handcuffed and wearing blue jeans, sneakers and a button-down shirt.

"He is quiet and cooperative," Eslinger said at a news conference after Zimmerman's surrender.

Nigerian Airplane Crashes, Killing All 153 Onboard

LAGOS, Nigeria (AP) • A commercial airliner crashed into a densely populated neighborhood in Nigeria's largest city on Sunday, killing all 153 people on board and others on the ground in the worst air disaster in nearly two decades for the troubled nation.

The cause of the Dana Air crash remained unknown Sunday night, as firefighters and police struggled to put out the flames around the wreckage of the Boeing MD83 aircraft. Authorities could not control the crowd of thousands gathered around to see the crash site, with some crawling over the plane's broken wings and standing on a still-smoldering landing gear.

Harold Demuren, the director-general of Nigeria's Civil Aviation Authority, said all on board the flight were killed in the crash. Lagos state government said in a statement that 153 people were on the flight traveling from Nigeria's central capital of Abuja to Lagos in the nation's southwest tower just before the crash, saying the plane had engine trouble, a military official said. The official spoke on condition of anonymity as he was not authorized to speak to journalists.

The flight's pilots radioed to the Lagos control

Rescue officials feared many others were killed or injured on the ground, but no casualty figures were immediately available. Firefighters and local residents were seen carrying the corpse of a man from one building, its walls still crumbling and flames shooting from its roof more than an hour after the crash.

Laughs: A Part of the Game for 'Feud' Host Dawson

NEW YORK (AP) • Richard Dawson brought a unabashedly saucy, touchy-feely style to TV game shows as host of "Family Feud."

The British-born entertainer, who died Saturday at age 79 from complications related to esophageal cancer at Ronald Reagan UCLA Medical Center in Los Angeles, earlier had made his mark in the unlikely 1960s sitcom hit "Hogan's Heroes," which mined laughs from a Nazi POW camp whose prisoners hoodwink their captors and run the place themselves.

But it is as the kissing, wisecracking quizmaster of "Feud" that he will be remembered.

The show, which initially ran from 1976 to 1985, pitted a pair of families against each other as they tried to guess the most popular answers to poll questions such as "What do people give up when they go on a diet?"

Dawson made his hearty, soaring pronouncement of the phrase "Survey says..." a national catchphrase among the show's fans.

Egypt Prosecutor to Appeal Mubarak Trial Verdicts

CAIRO (AP) • Tied to a bed, Nasr al-Sayed Hassan Nasr was tortured for days with electric shocks during his 2010 detention for membership in the outlawed Muslim Brotherhood – one of tens of thousands of political prisoners under Hosni Mubarak's 29-year rule.

Handcrafted Eyewear Since 1984

Stripped and handcuffed in a painful position, Nasr described how security agents shocked his genitals, chest and other bodies parts. "They hadn't asked me a single question at this stage. They seemed to just want me to collapse," he told Human Rights Watch.

And, as with virtually all the abuses under Mubarak's regime, the perpetrators were never brought to justice.

The mixed verdict in Mubarak's trial Saturday is a painful reminder that 15 months after the authoritarian leader's ouster in a popular uprising, there has been no move to bring about full accountability for wrongdoing under his regime.

Mubarak, 84, and his exsecurity chief Habib el-Adly were both convicted of failing to stop the killings of some 900 protesters during last year's uprising and were sentenced to life in prison.

British Queen Leads 1,000strong Jubilee Flotilla

LONDON (AP) • The River Thames became a royal highway Sunday, as Queen Elizabeth II led a motley but majestic flotilla of more than 1,000 vessels in a waterborne pageant to mark her Diamond Jubilee.

In a colorful salute to the island nation's maritime past, an armada of skiffs and sailboats, rowboats and paddle steamers joined a flower-festooned royal barge down a 7-mile (11-kilometer) stretch of London's river.

With a crowd of rainsoaked spectators estimated by organizers at 1.25 million cheering from the riverbanks, the pageant was the largest public event in four days of celebrations of the monarch's 60 years on the throne. On Monday, the queen will join thousands of revelers at an outdoor concert beside Buckingham Palace, headlined by pop royalty including Paul McCartney and Elton John.

$20M California Trail Center Opens near Elko

BY MARTIN GRIFFITH Associated Press

RENO, Nev. • A $20 million federal facility devoted to telling the story of the covered-wagon pioneers' overland journey during the California Gold Rush has opened in Nevada.

About 700 people gathered for a grand opening ceremony Saturday at the U.S. Bureau of Land Management's California Trail Interpretative Center, located along Interstate 80 near Elko about 280 miles East of Reno.

It's the BLM's third trail center and the first federal facility devoted exclusively to the California Trail. The agency operates similar centers in Casper, Wyo., and Baker City, Ore., along the Oregon Trail.

The trail center's exhibits feature life-size dioramas, original artwork, interactive displays and multi-media presentations. They showcase a wide range of subjects, including a typical emigrant camp, the infamous Donner Party, the Gold Rush and American Indian tribes of Nevada and Utah.

"I've had some people say it's Smithsonian in quality and I truly do agree," center director David Jamiel told The Associated Press. "People are absolutely amazed when they walk through the door and see what we've done."

The trail center commemorates more than 250,000 adventurers who followed various branches of the California Trail across California, Idaho, Nevada and Utah between 1841 and 1869.

For the pioneers who turned left off the Oregon Trail for California's gold fields, the final one-third of their 2,000-mile trek marked the biggest challenge.

They were forced to cross the barren deserts of Utah and Nevada not only at the hottest time of the year but also when they were lowest on food and supplies. California's Sierra Nevada was the final obstacle before they reached the promised land.

The trail center's six galleries are organized by zones the emigrants encountered along the way: the Missouri River, the Great Plains, the Parting of the Ways (where the Oregon and California trails branched), the Great Basin of Nevada and Utah, Nevada's Forty-Mile Desert and the Sierra.

A large diorama depicting how the animals and equipment of the pioneers were breaking down by the end of the journey is featured in the Forty-Mile Desert gallery. Dead oxen and mules lined the trail in the western Nevada desert, which was the greatest scene of suffering along the entire route because of its total lack of water and forage.

The Donner Party story is told in the Sierra gallery and at listening stations throughout the trail center. Many members of the party starved to death and others resorted to cannibalism to survive when stranded in the Sierra in the winter of 1846-47.

The trail center overlooks the junction of the California Trail and Hastings Cutoff, a supposed shortcut across Utah and a portion of Nevada that was blamed for putting the Donner Party behind schedule and leading to their entrapment by snow in the Sierra.

"From here, you're seeing basically the same landscape the emigrants saw 150 years ago," Jamiel said, adding a section of trail traversed by the pioneers is located on nearby ranch property.

The Great Basin gallery tells the story of the overland journey from the perspective of the Paiute and Shoshone tribes. Based on information from tribal volunteers, it notes how the flood of pioneers changed their lives forever.

"We try to present a balanced story without judgment so people can draw their own conclusions," Jamiel said.

Sen. Harry Reid, D-Nev., who secured funding for the trail center, said he has long been fascinated by the history of the California Trail and is pleased the facility will educate the public about its significance in the settlement of the West.

"I worked hard to preserve this important piece of American history," Reid said. "The trail center in Elko will become a major educational and cultural attraction in eastern Nevada that will diversify the region's economy."

Don Buck of Sunnyvale, Calif., a historian with the Oregon-California Trails Association, said the trail center is long overdue.

"People may not know a lot about it, but everybody has heard about the Gold Rush," Buck said. "There, they can go in and get a feel for it. There hasn't been anything on the California Trail of this magnitude at all. I think it will be a huge success."

Year-round operation of the trail center begins this week.

Wynona "Nona" Glauner, a resident of Hagerman, Idaho, died at home Dec. 29, 2011, from breast cancer. Her husband and son were by her side.

She was born Sharon Ann to John and June Mc-Cowan, Sept. 2, 1944, in Twin Falls, Idaho. After her father's death, she was adopted by Charles and Joy Laughlin in 1954. The remainder of her childhood was spent living at Laughlin's Island on the Snake River. She graduated from Melba High School in 1962. She then attended Boise Junior College and later Kinman Business University in Spokane, Wash. While in Spokane, she met Steve Glauner, her husband of 47 years. Nona spent the earlier part of their marriage raising their two children at home. Through the years, they resided in Nampa, Idaho, as well as Nyssa and Seneca, Ore. They moved to Wasilla, Alaska, in 1982. There Nona worked as a school aide at Wasilla Elementary, Swanson Elementary, and retired from Snowshoe Elementary in 1996.

Nona is survived by her husband,

Steve Glauner of Hagerman; their son, Steve Glauner Jr. of Filer, Idaho; daughter, Susanne Meyer of Wasilla, Alaska; eight grandchildren; one great-grandchild; brother, Chuck Laughlin of Caldwell, Idaho; and sister, Judy Clark of Ontario, Ore. She was preceded in death by her parents; and her sister, Debbie Olson.

A memorial service will be held at 11 a.m. Saturday, June 9, at the Community of Christ Church in Hagerman. Inurnment will follow at the Hagerman Cemetery. In lieu of flowers, the family suggests memorials be made to Nona's favorite charitable organization, The Salvation Army.

Arrangements are under the direction of Demaray Funeral Service, Gooding Chapel. Condolences may be sent to the family by visiting the obituary link at www.demarayfuneralservice.com.

Is Texting Ruining the Art of Conversation?

BY MARTHA IRVINE Associated Press

CHICAGO • Anna Schiferl hadn't even rolled out of bed when she reached for her cell phone and typed a text to her mom, one recent Saturday. Mom was right downstairs in the kitchen. The text? Anna wanted cinnamon rolls for breakfast.

Soon after, the 13-year-old could hear mom's voice echoing through the house.

"Anna," Joanna Schiferl called, "if you want to talk to me, you come downstairs and see me!"

Anna laughs about it now. "I was kind of being lazy," the teen from suburban Chicago concedes. "I know that sounds horrible."

Well, maybe not horrible, but certainly increasingly typical.

Statistics from the Pew Internet & American Life Project show that, these days, many people with cell phones prefer texting over a phone call. It's not always young people, though the data indicate that the younger you are, the more likely you are to prefer texting.

And that's creating a communication divide, of sorts the talkers vs. the texters.

Some would argue that it's no big deal. What difference should it make how we communicate, as long as we do so?

But many experts say the most successful communicators will, of course, have the ability to do both, talk or text, and know the most appropriate times to use those skills. And they fear that more of us are losing our ability to have or at least are avoiding — the traditional face-to-face conversations that are vital in the workplace and personal relationships.

"It is an art that's becoming as valuable as good writing," says Janet Sternberg, a professor of communication and media studies at Fordham University in New York who is also a linguist.

In the most extreme cases, she's noticed that more students don't look her in the eye and have trouble with the basics of direct conversation habits that, she says, will not serve them well as they enter a world where many of their elders still expect an in-person conversation, or at the very least a phone call.

On today's college campuses, the dynamic is often different. Forget about things like "office hours," for instance. Many professors say they rarely see students outside of class.

"I sit in my office hours lonely now because if students have a question, they email, often late at night," says Renee Houston, an associate professor of communication studies at the University of Puget Sound in Washington state.

"And they never call, ever." She recalls overhearing students chuckling about the way people older than them communicate.

"My parents left me a VOICEMAIL. Can you believe it?" one said, as if voicemail had gone the way of the dinosaurs.

This doesn't sound surprising or particularly troublesome to Lisa Auster-Gussman, who'll be a senior this fall at the University of Richmond in Virginia. For her, there are simply particular tools she uses to communicate, depending on the recipient.

Email is for professors, yes. Phone calls and maybe the occasional text are for parents, if the parents know how to do the latter.

"But I don't communicate much with older people. So much of my life is set up over text," says Auster-Gussman, who sends and receives an average of about 6,000 text messages a month.

Many are done as "group texts," sharing messages among eight college friends who live in the same building. The interactions are nothing more than you'd say in a casual conversation, Auster-Gussman says — but they are constant when they're not together. Recently, for instance, she went to a movie and came out to find 50 text messages waiting for her on her phone.

Meanwhile, last summer, when she was away from her boyfriend, she went days without talking to him on the phone, but texted with him several times a day.

"You're not even really talking to him," she remembers her perplexed father saying.

"But I felt like I was talking to him all day, every day," Auster-Gussman says.

Is there some aversion to talking on the phone? Not really, she says. It's just a preference. In this day and age, it's just what you do.

As Anna, the 13-year-old in suburban Chicago, sees it: "There are people you'll text, but won't call. It's just awkward that way.

"It's not about anything important — just a way to stay in touch with each other."

She and her closest friends also send each other videos of themselves and their surroundings — maybe of their dogs or something new in their bedroom. "People would probably say, like, 'Why don't you just call them?'" Anna says.

Experts say there is, of course, nothing wrong with casual conversation and fun between friends. One could argue that the constant banter - scores of texts each day - keep people more connected. The problem, some communication experts say, is that the conversation isn't particularly deep — and therein lies the problem, says Joseph Grenny, co-author of the book "Crucial Conversations: Tools for Talking When Stakes are High."

"The core problem has existed since we've had telephones — probably since the time of a telegraph," Grenny says. "We loathe having crucial conversations. We are paralyzed and do what we can to avoid them."

That applies to any generation, he says. Texting is just the latest way to do that.

Though they may not always be so good at deep conversations themselves, Grenny suggests that parents model the behavior for their children and put down their own mobile devices. He says they also should set limits, as Anna's mom did when she enforced the "no texting to people under the same roof" rule.

A bit of self-awareness helps, too.

Mary Ann Allison, an assistant professor of media studies at Hofstra University, has her students keep a log of their own communication habits.

"By paying attention to it, they say, 'Wow, it's a really different conversation when you're talking with someone and listening to them," Allison says. They key in on body language, facial expressions and tone of voice — all cues that you lose when you can't see or hear someone, or when you're distracted, even in person, by a gadget. cust St. N. in Twin Falls (Reynolds Funeral Chapel in Twin Falls).

After Gory Incidents, Online Talk about 'Zombies' Grows

After several gory incidents that have been reported around the country recently, online zombie talk has grown.

TAMARA LUS AND VICKI SMITH Associated Press

TAMPA, Fla. • First came Miami: the case of a naked man eating most of another man's face. Then Maryland, a college student telling police he killed a man, then ate his heart and part of his brain.

It was different in New Jersey, where a man stabbed himself 50 times and threw bits of his own intestines at police. They pepper-sprayed him, but he was not easily subdued.

He was, people started saygrowing, becoming a topic that the Internet couldn't seem to stop talking about.

The actual incidents are horrifying - and, if how people are talking about them is any indication, fascinating. In an America where zombie imagery is used to peddle everything from tools and weapons to garden gnomes, they all but beg the comparison.

Violence, we're used to. Cannibalism and people who should fall down but don't? That feels like something else entirely.

So many strange things have made headlines in recent days that The Daily Beast assembled a Google Map tracking "instances that may be the precursor to a zombie apocalypse." And the federal agency that tracks diseases weighed in as well, insisting it had no evidence that any zombielinked health crisis was unfolding.

The cases themselves are anything but funny. Each involved real people either suspected of committing unspeakable acts or having those acts visited upon them for reasons that have yet to be figured out. Maybe it's nothing new, either; people do horrible things to each other on a daily basis.

But what, then, made search terms like "zombie apocalypse" trend day after day last week in multiple corners of the Internet, fueled by discussions and postings that were often framed as humor?

A sign promoting zombie preparedness is seen in October 2011 in a hardware store in Omaha, Neb.

core, no conscience, no limits. "Vampires have kind of a romantic appeal, but zombies are doomed," Bird says. "Zombies can never really become human again. There's no going back.

"That resonates in today's world, with people feeling like we're moving toward an ending," she says. "Ultimately they are much more of a depressing figure."

The "moving toward an ending" part is especially potent. For some, the news stories fuel a lurking fear that, ultimately, humanity is doomed.

Speculation varies. It could be a virus that escapes from some secret government lab, or one that mutates on its own. Or maybe it'll be the result of a deliberate combination and weaponization of pathogens, parasites and disease.

It will, many believe, be something we've created and therefore brought upon ourselves.

Zombies represent America's fears of bioterrorism, a fear that strengthened after the 9/11 attacks, says Patrick Hamilton, an English professor at Misericordia University in Dallas, Pa., who studies how we process comic-book narratives.

Economic anxiety around the planet doesn't help matters, either, with Greece, Italy and Spain edging closer to crisis every day. Consider some of the terms that those fears produce: zombie banks, zombie economies, zombie governments.

When people are unsettled about things beyond their control – be it the loss of a job, the high cost of housing or the depletion of a retirement account - they look to metaphors like the zombie.

"They're mindless drones following basic needs to eat,"

Hamilton says. "Those economic issues speak to our own lack of control."

They're also effective messengers. The Centers for Disease Control got in on the zombie action last year, using the "apocalypse" as the teaser for its emergency preparedness blog.

On Friday, a different message emerged. Chatter had become so rampant that CDC spokesman David Daigle sent an email to the Huffington Post, answering questions about the possibility of the undead walking among us.

"CDC does not know of a virus or condition that would reanimate the dead," he wrote, adding: "(or one that would present zombie-like symptoms.)"

tion is required; 814-0407. Childbirth

The childbirth class of St. Luke's Jerome prepared childbirth series, 7-9:30 p.m. Thursday at the medical center, 709 N. Lincoln St., Jerome.

Topics: pregnancy, nutrition, relaxation and massage. Bring a labor support person, if possible. Mothers may enroll even if their babies will be born at a different hospital. The class is offered separately, or as part of the childbirth series.

"They've heard of these zombie movies, and they make a joke about it," says Lou Manza, a psychology professor at Lebanon Valley College in Pennsylvania, who learned about the whole thing at the breakfast table Friday morning when his 18-year-old son quipped that a "zombie apocalypse" was imminent.

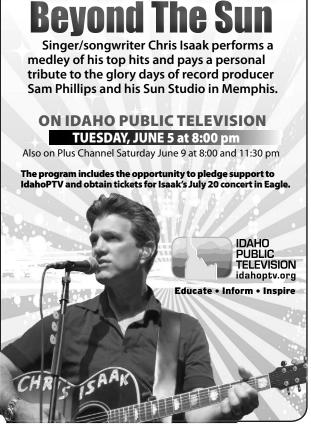

Symbolic of both infection and evil, zombies are terrifying in a way that other horrormovie iconography isn't, says Elizabeth Bird, an anthropologist at the University of South Florida.

Zombies, after all, look like us. But they aren't. They are some baser form of us slowly rotting and shambling along, intent on "surviving" and creating more of their kind, but with no emotional s you hear politicians talk about the economy this season, and next, bear in mind this question: Which economy?

Idaho's statewide unemployment rates, for example, get substantial notice in news reports when they come out each month, but county jobless rates often are a little more obscure. (We'll bypass for the moment the many questions associated with what those statistics include, and don't.)

As of March, for example, the statewide unemployment rate was 7.9%. (It fell by two-tenths of a point the next month; March is the most recent month for which all county statistics are available.) But it was not the same everywhere. In Adams County, it was 18.6%, while in $Ow yhee \ County-in \ the$ same region of the state, also a rural area and barely an hour's drive away - it was 4.9%. If all of Idaho were at 4.9%, it would not be said to have a significant unemployment problem at all; at 18.6%, Idaho would have slipped into serious depression.

This broad range isn't unusual. Go back preslump to March 2007, when the statewide rate was 2.8%, and you'll find numbers much smaller but also highly variable. Then, Clearwater County was at 7.2% (Adams was second), while the lowest jobless rate was 1.3% in Teton County.

split, wherein most jobs and money migrate to urban areas (which tend to rank toward the middle among Idaho's 44 in jobless rates) and leave rural counties, especially counties where population has been stagnant or has even declined. But "slow-population" described most counties both at high and low on the jobless list. And all of them rely a lot on resource industries of some sort.

Why the gap? Kathryn Tacke, an analyst with the state Department of Labor, pointed to the difference between the timber economy and the farm economy. In timber areas (Adams, Clearwater, Benewah, Shoshone, and several other high-jobless counties fit), recovery has been sporadic, as the national construction industry has been slow to return. But, she noted, with good prices for commodities like wheat and cattle, "it's actually been a pretty good time for farmers. And farmers have been spending money." That helps tamp down unemployment in rural southern counties like Franklin and Owyhee.

The splits run more ways, too. Ada and Canyon counties are seamlessly united in one dense popu-

CSI's Beautiful Campus Is a Great Place to Exercise

Are you anxious to lose a little of that winter fat that we all seem to gain over the year? I'd like to suggest that if you haven't taken a walk over at the CSI campus, you are missing a beautiful, peaceful place to walk.

The grounds are so well kept by Randy Dill and his great ground crew. A good place to start your walk/or park your car is in the library/gym parking lot. Then head to the gym area and walk through the campus by the fountain and refection ponds, then stroll through the rose garden and then walk east toward the Herrett Museum. Notice all the diversity of trees, plants and flower plants.

We Need to Have a Class on Bicycle Etiquette

What is wrong with people? Have they forgotten the rules of bicycle riding?

In the last two weeks, I have had to jump out of the way of a bike rider four times. These people were riding their bicycles on the sidewalk. I have yelled at these people, telling them that they are not to ride on the sidewalk, but they just cuss at me or flip me off.

We need to have a class on the proper use of a bicycle. These people need assistance. Sen. Risch was the first one to contact us so we continued working with his assistant, Carrie.

I would also like to thank our local Veteran's Affairs representative, Cheryl Ringenberg, for her dedication and service. We have struggled since Oct. 3 for a resolution to this ongoing saga, and we now have finally found assistance for my mom.

My family and I would like to extend our heartfelt thanks to these awesome government employees. They are an example of the greatness we can achieve when you have compassionate employees. Thank you so much from the family of Cassidy Riggs, World War II veteran.

(The growth of high-end resort areas slowed during the slump.)

In the last few years, the same set of counties have bunched together at the high and low ends. Adams, Clearwater, Benewah, Valley (since collapse of the Tamarack resort development) and Shoshone have been high-jobless, consistently, often in close to that order. The low-jobless counties much of the time since the slump has begun have included Owyhee, Oneida, Franklin and Bear Lake.

This seems to belie the lation area, but Ada's unemployment rate in March was 7.2%, while Canyon's was 10.1%. The specific mix of industry patterns, and probably government employment, likely have a lot to do with it.

This is all a lot more specific than you might think from the politicial rhetoric floating around and getting ever thicker.

Thanks to the Twin Falls Rotary Club and local junior high schools who spent a day rejuvenating the path with new bark. Maybe you will notice that CSI has installed several brand new exercise stations and one especially for people in wheelchairs.

Police: Bank Robber Had to Be Cut from Air Duct

OAK LAWN, Ill. (AP) • A wig-wearing man broke into a suburban Chicago bank vault and nearly made off with $100,000 but got stuck in an air duct and had to be cut out hours later, authorities said Sunday.

Charles Estell, 38, was found early Sunday hiding in an air duct in an office next to the bank, according Oak Lawn police to spokesman Michael Kaufmann.

The Chicago man had allegedly robbed the suburban bank Saturday afternoon, and pointed a gun at bank employees who confronted him in the vault, according to the FBI.

"I don't want to kill or hurt you," Estell said, according to the criminal complaint. "I just want the money?

He allegedly stuffed $100,000 in a backpack and fled. Employees told authorities it appeared he escaped through the ceiling.

WSU Researchers Turn Battery Research on Its Head

BY JOEL MILLS Lewiston Tribune

PULLMAN, Wash. (AP) • To anyone frustrated by the maddeningly short time their cellphone battery holds a charge, help is on the way.

Washington State University materials engineering professor Grant Norton is leading a team that could triple the life of the lithium-ion batteries commonly used in consumer electronics. And strangely enough, it involves tiny tin "whiskers," and something akin to a shave.

"It's caused many, many millions of dollars in failures of microelectronic devices over many, many decades," Norton said of the growth of whisker-like structures that can lead to short circuits. "The earliest example that I found in the literature was radar problems back in the Second World War that were caused by tin whisker growth on the tinplated electronics?"

A rechargeable lithium-ion battery is composed of two electrodes - the cathode and the anode which are separated by an electrolyte. Lithium ions move from the cathode during charging, and are stored as energy by the anode. The reverse occurs during discharging to create an electric current.

Current lithium-ion batteries typically have anodes made from graphite, which only has about a third of the energy-storing capacity of tin. But the tin anodes suffer from whisker growth, which can short-circuit a battery.

Getting rid of the whiskers has consistently bedeviled engineers, including Norton and his team, which has worked on the problem for the better part of a decade.

But about 18 months ago, as Norton puts it, he decided to make lemonade from his lemons.

"We sort of turned the problem on its head," he said. "We've got these interesting structures, so let's find ways that we can use them, instead of looking at them as annoying structures."

Norton set out to deliberately create the whiskers, but in a controlled way so they wouldn't grow beyond their designed length. And he put a physical separator in the battery's electrolyte, providing another layer of protection.

And the best thing about the new structures, called "nanoneedles," is that producing them on a large scale should be cheap and easy through electroplating.

"It's a process that's been scaled up already," Norton said. "So we didn't have to reinvent the wheel in terms of a processing method. We're using something that is a very cost-effective way of making these coatings."

That also means battery manufacturers could simply replace their carbon-based anodes with Norton's new tin-plated anodes, and avoid costly redesigns.

He said the university has already filed patent applications for the technology, and talks have started with commercial electroplating companies. If all goes smoothly, Norton estimated the higher-capacity batteries could start appearing in consumer electronics like phones, laptops and digital cameras in a year, and in electric car batteries in about four years.

Report: NCAA Investigating ISU

ASSOCIATED PRESS

POCATELLO • An eastern Idaho newspaper is reporting that an NCAA investigation at Idaho State University was prompted at least in part by a letter written by a former interim men's basketball coach warning of a booster willing to pay quality basketball players money to get them to the school.

The Idaho State Journal reports that former interim coach Deane Martin sent the letter to Athletic Director Jeff Tingey on March 6, a day after Martin was told he didn't get picked as the permanent men's basketball coach.

The newspaper obtained the letter from a university employee. Martin writes that a booster told him "in the presence of another witness, that he wanted to insure that ISU got the best recruit we could, and he offered his support. Specifically (the booster) indicated that if it took a 'money handshake' from him to a coach or a recruit, to seal the deal, he was happy to do that."

Martin also wrote that the booster "has personally involved himself with the families of potential recruits, and made similar offers to them. He also has made those offers to junior college coaches, that it would be in their best financial interest to steer their players to Idaho State University."

The newspaper also obtained Tingey's emailed response to Martin: "As these are very strong and potentially slanderous statements, I am going to forward them to our university attorneys for their involvement."

Tingey also wrote that "so that the NCAA does not think we will 'sweep this under the rug' I will have our compliance office contact them."

After receiving Tingey's response, Martin sent the letter to the NCAA. Martin, Tingey and the NCAA declined to comment.

HE NEWS: Twin Falls High School alum Cy Sneed and his Dallas Baptist Patriots moved within a game of the NCAA Division I baseball tournament's super regionals. The Patriots play Baylor in an in-out game (winner advances, loser eliminated) today.

THE MUSE: Sneed's decision to sign with the Patriots and continue his career in the collegiate ranks, rather than sign with Texas after the Rangers selected him in the 35th round of major league baseball's amateur draft, was among the first news items that broke as this corner made the move to the Magic Valley some nine months ago. As it turns out, it was the right move for Sneed, and not just because of the success his team is having in the postseason. The 6-4 right-handed pitcher went 8-4 with a 3.98 ERA, striking out 70 and walking just 25 in 811-3 regular-season innings. He wasn't particularly sharp in his first postseason start, failing to record an out in the third inning of DBU's 11-8 victory Saturday against Oral Roberts, but as long as the Patriots keep winning, Sneed will get additional opportunities to show the kind of pitcher he really is.

THE NEWS: Twin Falls High School graduate Tim Leonard is named interim director of athletics at Southern Methodist University.

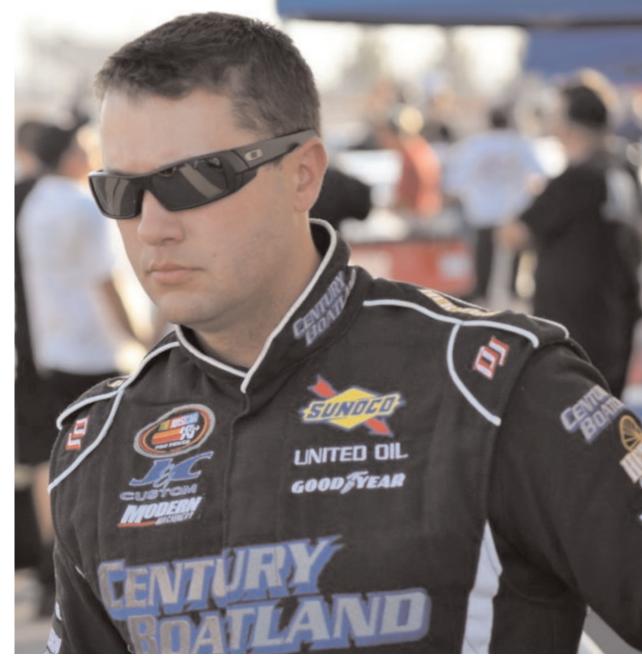

THE MUSE: First, kudos to the reader who called the Times-News a couple of weeks ago to make us aware of this development.

While this is a nice career advancement for the Class of 1987 alumnus ·

Leonard's son, Nathan, was kind enough to point out to me in a tweet that, despite the fact we're both 42, his father graduated a year

Leonard, who was SMU's senior associate athletic director under Orsini, ascended to the Mustangs' top spot after Orsini was fired after, according to Dallas media, losing a power struggle with SMU President R. Celtics Edge Heat in OT, Square Series

NBA

BOSTON · Rajon Rondo had 15 points and 15 assists, and scored the final three points of the Boston Celtics' 93-91 overtime victory over the Miami Heat on Sunday night that evened the Eastern Conference finals at two games apiece.

Getting a huge break when LeBron James fouled out for the first time since joining the Heat, the Celtics recovered after blowing an 18-point lead in regulation to move two games away from a third trip to the NBA finals in five years.

Kevin Garnett added 17 points and 14 rebounds for the Celtics, while Paul Pierce scored 23 points before fouling out. Ray Allen finished with 16 points.

"Stops," Rondo said when asked what was the difference in the tight game. "I think we executed offensively, came up with some lucky plays and we got stops at the end."

James had 29 points and Dwyane Wade scored 20 after another dismal start for the Heat, who host Game 5 on Tuesday.

In a game that started as a Celtics blowout and turned into a foul- and tension-filled fourth quarter, followed by the second overtime in this series, the Celtics held on when Wade missed a potential winning 3-pointer on the last possession.

"We knew they were going to Wade. I wanted to check him," Rondo said. "They set a great pick. ... We're lucky we got a stop."

He gave up the sport, but thanks to his friends dragging him to Magic Valley Speedway races, Gomez became a fan of high speed on four wheels instead of two.

"I had never really followed the sport at all, never watched NASCAR or anything," Gomez said. "But my friends took me to the races, and we had this guy come work for us who said he could get me in a car. I was like, 'Really?'"

That guy was Trent Champlin, a driver in the NAPA Pony Stocks division, and he helped Gomez get set up in a car for a couple races in 2006.

"He got me in the race car and it was pretty nerve racking not knowing what to do, but from there I was hooked," said Gomez, now racing in the NASCAR K&N Pro Series. "I remember that first year when I ran the Pony Stock, thinking 'Wouldn't it be cool to race things like this all the time?""

Gomez made his Pony Stocks debut in 2007 and hasn't looked back since. He currently sits seventh in the K&N Pro Series standings.

"Not where we want to be," Gomez said, but he is coming off three consecutive top-10 performances at Iowa Speedway, Brainerd International Raceway (Minn.), and Las Vegas Motor Speedway, and said his No. 22 Chevrolet is running great right now.

"For the most part, since we've unloaded, we've been

Newhouse Hammers Out Win at MVS

BY LINDA BRITTSAN For the Times-News

> TWIN FALLS • Kris McKean had one thing on his mind Saturday night: prolong his winning streak. Hannah Newhouse's mission? End it.

By making a pass and standing her ground, Magic Valley Speedway's youngest feature division driver not only stopped McKean's streak at three, the 15-yearold chalked up another win for herself.

McKean and Newhouse began the Commercial Tire Super Stocks main event race lined up alongside each other at the rear of the starting field. Kendel Woll took lead from Willie Dalton at Lap 9 but McKean, who had twice worked his way through the field, took over the front position at Lap 20. With Newhouse soon right on his bumper, McKean did all he could to keep her in his mirror but Newhouse kept up the pressure until she wrestled her way around him at Lap 34.

No sooner did she get the lead when the caution lights flashed for what would be the final time in the race. Taking the high side on the restart Newhouse again fought McKean hard for the finish line, but it was Newhouse taking the

Tiger Roars Back to Win Memorial

GOLF

DUBLIN, Ohio • Tiger Woods was at his best Sunday at the Memorial. He hit nearly every shot just the way he wanted, worked the gallery into a frenzy with one last charge over the final hour and left everyone buzzing especially Jack Nicklaus with a shot they will talk about for years.

Better yet was the timing of his 73rd win.

Woods tied Nicklaus for career PGA Tour victories at the tournament that Jack built. And the 14-time major champion suddenly looks equipped to resume his chase of another Nicklaus mark that is more significant - 18 major championships.

The U.S. Open starts in 10 days.

With a chip-in that even Woods called one of the toughest shots he ever made, he birdied three of his last four holes to close with a 5under 67 and turn a twoshot deficit into a two-shot victory over Rory Sabbatini and fast-closing Andres Romero.

Coming off a two-putt birdie on the 15th, Woods hit 8-iron over the green at the par-3 16th and into an impossible lie. It was buried in deep rough, the pin 50 feet away along a ridge. Woods hit a full flop shot, hopeful to give himself a reasonable putt for par. Far more likely was the ball going short and down a slope away from the pin, or coming out too strong and rolling into the water.

No one was thinking birdie, not even Woods, until he took two steps and delivered an uppercut when the ball fell in the right side of the cup.

Nicklaus was gushing from the broadcast booth. "The most unbelievable, gutsy shot I've ever seen," he said.

"Under the circumstances the circumstances being

Tiger has been struggling it was either fish or cut bait," Nicklaus said later. "He had one place to land the ball. He's playing a shot that if he leaves it short, he's going to leave himself again a very difficult shot. If he hits it long, he's going to probably lose the tournament. He lands the ball exactly where it has to land. Going in the hole was a bonus. But what a shot!

"I don't think under the circumstances I've ever seen a better shot."

Woods, who finished at 9under 279, won the Memorial for the fifth time. At age 36, he is 10 years younger than Nicklaus when the Golden Bear won his 73rd tournament at the 1986 Masters. Sam Snead holds the PGA Tour record with 82 wins.

It was vintage Woods at Muirfield Village, the fifth course where he has won at least five times. And it was the perfect way for him to end his worst stretch as a pro. After winning at Bay Hill in March, he tied for 40th in the Masters, missed the cut at Quail Hollow and tied for 40th at The Players Championship. Asked about the endless chatter about whether his game is back, Woods eventually sighed and said, "I'll let you guys figure that out."

Woods won for the second time this year and moved to No. 4 in the world.

In Sale's previous start, he struck out 15 in 71-3 innings at Tampa Bay.

Johnson Continues Dover Dominance

NASCAR

DOVER, Del. • Jimmie Johnson was the mane man at Dover.

Wearing an afro clown wig – tufts of green, red, yellow and blue could be spotted from the stands -Johnson had to admit it was hard to take him seriously while he played the role of race jester.

Some guys just have all the fun.

That especially includes on this track.

Johnson romped again at Dover International Speedway, racing his way into the track's history books on Sunday with his seventh win on the concrete, matching the mark held by Hall of Fame drivers Richard Petty and Bobby Allison.

No active driver owns the track like the five-time Sprint Cup champion. Johnson led 289 of the 400 laps and looked every bit like the driver who swept the two Cup races at Dover in 2002 and 2009. Johnson last won at Dover on Sept. 26, 2010. He also won the September 2005 race.

"God, I love this place," Johnson said as he took a victory spin.

Then it was off to goof around in Victory Lane. Johnson, crew chief Chad Knaus and other Hendrick Motorsports crew members wore the wacky wig seen in the talking-animal movie, "Madagascar 3: Europe's Most Wanted."

They had good reason to clown around. Throw in the All-Star race and that's a sweet four-race winning streak for NASCAR's top organization.

Johnson won at Darlington Raceway and Kasey Kahne won the Coca Cola 600. Johnson also won the non-points All-Star race during that span as the No. 48 Chevrolet is heating up as he chases a sixth Cup championship.

"I've never been one to pay attention to stats," Johnson said. "I just truth-fully never thought I'd be the guy who'd build up any cool stats. Here I am with some pretty cool stats with legends of our sport and guys that I've looked up to."

Johnson won his second race of the season – and first where he celebrated with a rainbow circus wig.

"I'm just proud of this hair," Johnson said. "The hair brought some speed to the team."

Petty needed 46 races to win seven times and Allison had 35 races. Johnson got to seven in his 21st start at the track known as the Monster Mile.

"You whipped 'em today," Knaus said over the radio.

Djokovic, Federer Advance at French

ASSOCIATED PRESS

PARIS • There was a moment, a little past 4 p.m. on a dank and dreary Sunday at the French Open, when the gray sky above appeared to be falling on some of the best of the best.

A listless Novak Djokovic, looking very little like someone ranked No. 1 and bidding to become the first man in 43 years to win four consecutive Grand Slam titles, was trying to work his way out of a two-set deficit the way out the door.

Asked afterward what she'll do to recover from the defeat, Azarenka replied sarcastically, "I'm going to kill myself," then added: "This tournament is over for me. What's to recover from?"

It seemed reasonable, if ever so briefly, to ask in the afternoon whether the tournament might soon be over in the fourth round for Djokovic and Federer, too. In the end, of course, the answer was no.

against 22nd-seeded Andreas Seppi of Italy on Court Philippe Chatrier.

Even more astonishingly, a flummoxed Roger Federer, owner of a record 16 major championships, was trudging to the sideline after dropping his first set 109th-ranked against David Goffin of Belgium, a 21-year-old kid thrilled merely to be sharing Court Suzanne Lenglen with his idol. Goffin, it must be noted, was a "lucky loser" -aplayer beaten in qualifying who got to make his Grand Slam debut only because someone else withdrew.

By that point, one significant upset already was complete Sunday: The No. 1-seeded woman, Australian Open champion Victoria Azarenka, was headed home after losing to No. 15 Dominika Cibulkova of Slovakia 6-2, 7-6 (4), busting a racket on Djokovic missed shots this way and that, then shook his head or yelled at himself or spread his arms wide with palms up as if to ask, "What's going on here?" He finished with 81 unforced errors in all, exactly his total for his first three matches combined. But Seppi's not nearly as accustomed to these stages or stakes, and Djokovic pulled out a 4-6, 6-7 (5), 6-3, 7-5, 6-3 victory, his 25th in a row at a major tournament.

He began to turn things around by breaking serve to begin the third set, and he kept on doing that, nine times in all.

The third-seeded Federer, the 2009 champion at Roland Garros, did that one better after his 5-7, 7-5, 6-2, 6-4 victory, giving Goffin a tap on the head and a pat on the backside when they were done playing, then hugging him at the crowd's behest during an on-court interview.

"He was cutting me off, I will say that," she said of the battle with McKean in the final laps. "But I let him know I was there. I let him have it and let him have it and then it worked out. We had an awesome car tonight, but I think I drove it extremely hard."

Brennan's Carpet Street Stocks driver Russell Dalton was leading the main event race until contact at Lap 13 with the No. 13 car of Jason Todd sent Dalton over the Turn 3 embankment. Landing upside down in the dirt, Dalton climbed out of the car unhurt but out of contention for his first main event win in the series. Ernie Hall battled with Paul Browne in the late laps before Hall took the win by .444 seconds. He was followed by Browne and Mitch Pehrson. Earlier in the evening Hall set another new qualifying record in the division with a time of 17.559 seconds around the one-third mile track.

Brenden Radabaugh led from start to finish for the win with the Quale's Electronics Jr. Stingers, while Jeff Peck took the lead at Lap 7 from Lane Walker to take the victory in the Magic Valley Pipe Hornets.

The newspaper reports that the letter contains the name of the booster, but would not make that name public pending the outcome of the NCAA investigation. Such investigations typically take several months before findings are released.

Martin became the interim men's basketball coach in December after head coach Joe O'Brien resigned after a 2-8 start. The team finished the season 9-20 overall. University of Montana assistant Bill Evans was named the head coach on March 8.

In the letter Martin wrote to Tingey with the allegations about the booster, he said "it is my obligation to report these matters to you. I trust that you will take the appropriate actions and report as required."

The NCAA investigation extends beyond just the men's basketball team, with investigators trying to determine which teams, if any, might have violated NCAA rules.

"It is certainly my hope that there have not been any NCAA violations," Martin wrote to conclude his letter. "But the mere fact that these actions are ongoing, and could be in the public domain would look very bad for Idaho State University, and its officers and officials?

BAYLOR BEATS DALLAS BAPTIST

ASSOCIATED PRESS

WACO, Texas • Freshman right-hander Austin Stone pitched 5 1-3 no-hit innings against red-hot Dallas Baptist and senior Dan Evatt broke the game open with a mammoth two-run home run in the third inning Sunday as Baylor won its third straight elimination game, 9-2, to reach the final of the Waco Regional.

The two teams will play again tonight for a berth in the Super Regional.

Making only his sixth career start, Stone (3-1) used offspeed pitches to baffle the Patriots, who hit .392 and scored 21 runs in winning their first two regional games.

Austin Elkins broke up the no-hitter when he cracked a double past first baseman Max Muncy with one out in the sixth, and Ronnie Mitchell followed with an RBI double to leftcenter to cut the lead to 6-1. Two batters later, Stone left to a standing ovation and reliever Ryan Smith struck out Landon Anderson to end the threat.

After scratching across single runs against starter Jay Calhoun (3-3) in the first and second innings, the Bears erupted for four more in the third on Evatt's blast and a two-run error by Patriots third baseman Kenny Hatcher.

An inning later, Evatt preserved Stone's no-hitter when he leaped above the nine-foot left-field fence to rob Boomer Collins of a homer.

Max Muncy and Cal Towey added home runs in the eighth inning for Baylor.

U.S. Men Fire Blanks Vs. Canada

TORONTO • The United States played a scoreless draw against Canada on Sunday night in its third exhibition in eight days.

The U.S. controlled most of the early action. Jermaine Jones' shot was blocked in the second minute and Clarence Goodson missed on a close opportunity about a minute later, sending an attempt wide to the left.

But the Canadians settled in and began to do some attacking of their own. Dwayne De Rosario shot wide right in the ninth minute.

Canada was seeking its first win against the U.S. since a 2-0 victory in Vancouver on April 2, 1985. The U.S. holds a 13-8-10 advantage in the series.

Orsini, according to Dallas media sources.

The school is conducting a national search for a permanent replacement, so it's quite possible that Leonard, who earned his undergraduate degree from Boise State and previously worked in the Broncos' athletic department from 1997-99, will soon be looking for another job. Too bad the Broncos aren't in the market for an athletic director, having replaced Gene Bleymaier with Mark Coyle late last year.

The best spot for the school's sports (and a good argument could be made to include football in the mix) is in the Mountain West Conference. The next-best option is the Big Sky. Although only the WAC ranks below the Big West, the latter remains a significantly better option. But what's next, enlisting BYU's help in joining the West Coast Conference?

THE NEWS: Boise State puts full-court press on Big West for an invitation for all of its non-football sports.

THE MUSE: Aren't you getting a little tired of this conference realignment tango? Especially tiresome is the dog-and-pony show put on by college sports officials who say they're trying to do what's best for their studentathletes. We all know that focus only comes into play once everything is done to maximize the potential and efforts of football student-athletes.

That Boise State could be a member of both the Big East and Big West only underscores the absurdity of today's age of conference realignment, in which regional ties are tossed out the window like so many footballs in 7-on-7 drills.

News sports writer Stephen Meyers leaves the Magic Valley to take a job with the Fort Collins (Colo.) Coloradoan.

THE MUSE: Stephen covered CSI basketball like January snow on the Sawtooths, so that should give you an idea as to his value to the Times-News.

We investigated means in which we could keep him here; unfortunately, kidnapping isn't permissible under Idaho law. But sometimes there are things more important than one's profession. Stephen leaves us not only with our fullest blessing, but our hopes that he can continue climbing whatever professional ladder he has set out to climb.

Good luck Stephen. You'll be missed.

Notice of Public Hearing on the Status of Funded Activities The City of Twin Falls received an Idaho Community Development Block Grant in the amount of $500,000 from the Idaho Department of Commerce. This funding is allocated to the State of Idaho from the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development. These funds are being used to upgrade electrical infrastructure to support the development of Agro-Farma, Inc.'s new dairy processing facility being constructed in the City of Twin Falls.

The hearing will include a review of project activities and accomplishments to date, a summary of all expenditures to date, a general description of remaining work and any changes made to the scope of work, budget, schedule, location or beneficiaries. The hearing has been scheduled for Monday, June 11, 2012 at 6:00 p.m. at the Twin Falls City Council Chambers, 305 Third Ave. E., Twin Falls, Idaho. Project information will be available for review at Twin Falls City Hall. Verbal and written comments will be accepted up to and at the hearing. Information provided at the public hearing will be available, upon request, five days prior to the hearing. Special accommodation or alternative formats for non-English speaking persons and persons with disabilities will be available, upon request, with minimum of five (5) days' notice prior to the hearing. The hearing will be held in a facility that is accessible to persons with disabilities. For more information, contact Travis Rothweiler, City Manager at (208) 735-7271. LEGAL NOTICE

The Idaho Department of Fish and Game was informed by the Bureau of Fisheries and Regional fishery managers that, through May 29, angler surveys indicate that about 30 percent of the State's harvest share of hatchery Chinook salmon 24 inches or more in length (adults) returning to the Clearwater River drainage has been harvested. Flows and water clarity in the Clearwater River are ideal for angling success and harvest rates are increasing rapidly. Angler preference is overwhelmingly in favor of management actions likely to extend fisheries in the Clearwater River until early July.

To slow harvest rates and increase the likelihood that the harvest share for adult hatchery Chinook salmon in the fishery will not be reached before early July, the adult portions of bag and possession limits must be reduced. Therefore the Bureau of fisheries recommends that, effective June 2, limits for adult Chinook salmon caught and kept in the Mainstem Clearwater River and the Middle Fork Clearwater River be changed to one per day and three in possession.

Pursuant to his authority under Idaho Code Section 36-106(e)(6) (A), the Idaho Department of Fish and Game Director hereby reduces the adult portions of daily and possession limits for Chinook salmon fisheries in the Mainstein Clearwater River from the Camas Prairie Bridge in Lewiston upstream to the South Fork Clearwater River and in the Middle Fork Clearwater River from the confluence with the South Fork Clearwater River upstream to the confluence of the Lochsa and Selway Rivers to one adult salmon per day and three adult salmon in possession effective at the start of fishing on Saturday June 2, 2012.

Copies of Order 12-11 are available at the Idaho Department of Fish and Game headquarters, 600 South Walnut, PO Box 25, Boise, ID 83707.

of foreclosing that certain Deed of Trust recorded 09/30/2008 as Instrument Number 228060, and executed by KENNETH G DENNING AND JEANETTE DENNING, HUSBAND AND WIFE, Grantor(s), in favor of MORTGAGE ELECTRONIC REGISTRATION SYSTEMS, INC., as Beneficiary, to RECONTRUST COMPANY, N.A., the Current Trustee of record, covering the following real property located in Gooding County, State of Idaho: LOTS 13 AND 14 IN BLOCK 14, WENDELL TOWNSITE, GOODING COUNTY, IDAHO, AS THE SAME IS PLATTED IN THE OFFICIAL PLAT THEREOF, NOW OF RECORD IN THE OFFICE OF THE RECORDER OF SAID COUNTY. The Trustee has no knowledge of a more particular description of the above referenced real property, but for purpose of compliance with Idaho Code, Section 60-113, the Trustee has been informed that the street address of, 330 6TH AVE WEST, Wendell, ID 83355 is sometimes associated with said real property. Bidders must be prepared to tender the trustee the full amount of the bid at the sale in the form of cash, or a cashier's check drawn on a state or federally insured savings institution. Said sale will be made without covenant or warranty, express or implied, regarding title, possession or encumbrances to satisfy the obligation secured by and pursuant to the power of sale conferred in that certain Deed of Trust. The default for which this sale is to be made is: Failure to pay the monthly payment due 06/01/2011 of principal, interest and impounds and subsequent installments due thereafter; plus late charges, with interest currently accruing at 6.750% per annum; together with all subsequent sums advanced by beneficiary pursuant to the terms and conditions of said Deed of Trust, and any supplemental modifications thereto. The principal balance owing as of this date on said obligation is $131,751.85, plus interest, costs and expenses actually incurred in enforcing the obligations thereunder and in this sale, together with any unpaid and/or accruing real property taxes, and/or assessments, attorneys' fees, Trustees' fees and costs, and any other amount advanced to protect said security, as authorized in the promissory note secured by the aforementioned Deed of Trust. Therefore, the Beneficiary elects to sell, or cause said trust property to be sold, to satisfy said obligation. NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT THIS FIRM IS ATTEMPTING TO COLLECT A DEBT AND ANY INFORMATION OBTAINED WILL BE USED FOR THAT PURPOSE, AND THAT THE DEBT MAY BE DISPUTED. THE ABOVE GRANTORS ARE NAMED TO COMPLY WITH SECTION 45-1506(4)(a) IDAHO CODE. NO REPRESENTATION IS MADE THAT THEY ARE, OR ARE NOT, PRESENTLY RESPONSIBLE FOR THIS OBLIGATION. DATED: 05/15/2012, RECONTRUST COMPANY, N.A., Name and Address of the Current Trustee is: RECONTRUST COMPANY, N.A., 1800 Tapo Canyon Rd., CA6-914-01-94, SIMI VALLEY, CA 80028-1821, PHONE: (800) 281-8219 TS # 12-0041038 FEI # 1006.159552 PUBLISH: June 4, 11, 18 and 25, 2012 did not come that you prayed for, but you should be grateful for the many things that showed up without even asking.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22):

It is impossible to edit the past, but you can upgrade your future. Today's full moon might bring the need for an adjustment in your thinking to the foreground. Flirtations may be taken to heart.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): When things come full circle. it is time to start over again. You would like to be in a position to call the shots. but today's Full new moon may change the focus of your efforts. Eat some humble pie.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): When nothing seems to go right, it is time to turn left. Today's full moon is in your sign, so you may be more aware of relationships and how they affect your well being. Adjust your demeanor.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You can be useful without feeling used. Cooperation is the key. Flash some credentials in front of key people to bolster your "street cred" if you think you are receiving the short end of the stick.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): It is rumored that opposites attract. The subject of your romantic attentions is likely to be a considerable challenge. Someone may be waving a red flag in front of a bull to deliberately start a chase.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): It isn't wise to be so busy making a living that you forget to have a life. Arrange for an athletic challenge, an outdoors game or something that requires physical exertion to occupy the body as well as the mind.

Wouldn't you like a job that fulfills you both professionally and personally? With Monster's new filtering tools, you can quickly hone in on the job that's right for you. So visit www.magicvalley.com, and you might find yourself in the middle of the best of both worlds.

Times News

DEAR ABBY: I'm divorced with a young son. My exhusband and I share joint custody, and for the most part it has worked well. My problem is that my ex is very bitter about our divorce and the fact I have moved on with my life. He constantly makes derogatory comments to me in front of our son and others.

It is bad enough that my son must witness this, but my ex has taken it a step further. He is the editor of a small newspaper and is now making disparaging comments about me in his column. He is trying to improve his image at my expense; however, I am unable to respond because he won't print a rebuttal in his paper.

The abuse continues despite the divorce, but now the audience is wider. Is this ethical journalism, and how can I put a stop to it?

- FRUSTRATED EX DEAR FRUSTRATED EX: Using a newspaper column to continue a personal vendetta over a failed marriage is not ethical journalism, although it may make for titillating reading. You do not have to tolerate his public sniping. Take the offensive clippings to your lawyer and ask him or her to write a strong letter to the publisher of the newspaper – because THAT'S who will be liable if there are grounds for a lawsuit.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I attended a wedding in September of last year. We purchased expensive crystal for the bride and groom, which cost us nearly $600. This was separate from the bridal shower gift we gave them in May. We have not received thank-you notes for either of these gifts.

My husband told me that you have said it's appropriate to send thank-you notes up to one year after the wedding. My mother taught me to send them as quickly as possible.

My sister had her wedding thank-you notes out in three weeks, and I had mine out in two weeks. My sister and I both worked and were setting up new households with our husbands, but we felt it was a priority. We wanted to ensure that our family and friends knew how much their thoughtfulness was appreciated.

Can you please clarify thank-you note etiquette? I am tired of wondering if my gifts were received and appreciated.

- DISGUSTED IN DELAWARE DEAR DISGUSTED: I have said in the past that a thank-you note anytime is better than none at all. However, good manners dictate that thank-you notes should follow within three months at the latest, and preferably within one month - regardless of whether the giver has been thanked verbally.

DEAR ABBY: I work in the medical field and have recently learned about a campaign that was launched in England. It urges people to store the word "ICE" (In Case of Emergency) in their cellphone address book, along with the phone number of the person you would want contacted.

It's such a simple idea, but it could be extremely helpful in an emergency situation. It would save ambulance crews and hospital staff precious time and ensure that a patient's loved ones are contacted as quickly as possible.

If you agree the idea is worthwhile, please mention it in your column and help to get this initiated in the United States.

– TANYA F., MIAMI DEAR TANYA: The idea is certainly worth considering; however, I would offer a minor adjustment. I would recommend that it be indexed under "Emergency Contact" rather than an obscure heading such as "ICE."

Times News

Today is Monday, June 4, the 156th day of 2012. There are 210 days left in the year. Today's highlight:

On June 4, 1942, the World War II Battle of Midway began, resulting in a decisive American victory against Japan and marking the turning point of the war in the Pacific.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:

In 1783, the Montgolfier brothers first publicly demonstrated their hot-air balloon, which did not carry any passengers, over Annonay, France.

In 1812, the Louisiana Territory was renamed the Missouri Territory. The U.S. House of Representatives approved a declaration of war against Britain.

In 1892, the Sierra Club was incorporated in San Francisco.

In 1912, Massachusetts became the first state to adopt a minimum wage law.

In 1919, Congress approved the 19th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution guaranteeing citizens the right to vote regardless of their gender, and sent it to the states for ratification.

In 1937, one of the first, if not the first, shopping carts was introduced by supermarket chain owner Sylvan Goldman in Oklahoma City.

In 1939, the German ocean liner St. Louis, carrying more than 900 Jewish refugees from Germany, was turned away from the Florida coast by U.S. officials.

In 1940, during World War II, the Allied military evacuation of more than 338,000 troops from Dunkirk, France, ended.

In 1954, French Premier Joseph Laniel and Vietnamese Premier Buu Loc signed treaties in Paris according "complete independence" to Vietnam.

In 1972, a jury in San Jose, Calif., acquitted radical activist Angela Davis of murder and kidnapping for her alleged connection to a deadly courthouse shootout in Marin County in 1970.

In 1990, Dr. Jack Kevorkian carried out his first publicly assisted suicide, helping Janet Adkins, a 54-year-old Alzheimer's patient from Portland, Ore., end her life in Oakland County, Mich.

In 1992, the U.S. Postal Service announced the results of a nationwide vote on the Elvis Preslev stamp, say ing more people preferred the "younger Elvis" design.

Ten years ago: President George W. Bush said the CIA and FBI had failed to communicate adequately before the Sept. 11 terror attacks; Congress began closed-door hearings into intelligence lapses. A panel of U.S. Roman Catholic bishops called for a zero-tolerance policy against priests who molest children in the future and a two-strikes-he's-out policy for those guilty of past abuse. Japan ratified the Kyoto Protocol, aimed at cutting emissions of heat-trapping gases.

Five years ago: President George W. Bush left on an eight-day European trip that included a Group of Eight summit in Germany. Military judges dismissed charges against a Guantanamo detainee accused of chauffeuring Osama bin Laden and another who allegedly killed a U.S. soldier in Afghanistan. Insurgents linked to al-Qaida issued a video in which they claimed to have killed all three U.S. soldiers captured in an ambush on May 12. (The bodies of the soldiers were later recovered.) A federal indictment accused Rep. William Jefferson, D-La., of receiving more than $500,000 in bribes (Jefferson was later convicted of bribery and racketeering).

One year ago: China's Li Na captured her first Grand Slam singles title, becoming the first tennis player from China, man or woman, to achieve such a feat; Na beat Francesca Schiavone 6-4.7-6 (0) in the French Open final. Former Secretary of State Lawrence Eagleburger, 80, died in Charlottesville, Va
