State of Emergency Lifted as Water Supply Returns to Normal

BY MELISSA DAVLIN

TWIN FALLS • After Monday's windstorm, the city of Twin Falls had to deal with a flood of problems.

On Tuesday morning, City Manager Travis Rothweiler declared a state of emergency after a Monday evening power outage at the city's main water station jeopardized water reserves. Though the emergency was lifted Tuesday afternoon, city officials are still keeping a cautious eye on the water supply.

At about 10 p.m. Monday, city public works officials received word that all four pumps at the Blue Lakes water supply station were down.

The Blue Lakes station supplies most of the water to the city of Twin Falls. The station doesn't have on-site backup generators, but two were brought in during the early morning hours.

What This Means for You

Though power is restored, the city of Twin Falls is still asking residents to be cautious about water use. Don't water your lawn until Thursday, even if you're on pressurized irrigation. Police will enforce the ban.

Lessons from an Emergency

TWIN FALLS • So now what?

As Twin Falls recovers from Tuesday's water crisis, City Council members are thinking of what they can do — and what they can afford to do — to curb future calamities.

This isn't the first time the city's pumps have failed, said city public information officer Joshua Palmer.

Wind Leaves Downed Trees and Damaged Equipment in Its Wake

BY ALISON GENE SMITH

TWIN FALLS • Law enforcement officials around the Magic Valley scrambled Monday night as calls poured in from residents dealing with power outages, downed trees and damage to homes and businesses resulting from the windstorm that slammed southern Idaho.

Twin Falls Police Lt. Craig Stotts said city firefighters were extremely busy Monday night with calls from residents reporting transformers going out, trees falling across power lines and lines sparking.

The storm caused the city to lose power to all four water pumps that feed into the city's water system. Power has since been restored, but officials are urging residents not to irrigate.

Timeline of a Crisis

MONDAY:

8:30 p.m.: Windstorm rolls through Magic Valley, causing property damage and power outages throughout south central Idaho.

10 p.m.: City of Twin Falls receives word that all four pumps at the Blue Lakes water station have failed.

TUESDAY:

4 a.m.: First backup generator arrives at Blue Lakes water station, putting one of four pumps back online.

5 a.m.: City officials call major industrial water users, including Glanbia, ConAgra, and Independent Meat Co., ordering them to halt operations.

7:20 a.m.: City Manager Travis Rothweiler declares a state of emergency for the city, prohibiting irrigation and industrial use.

8 a.m.: Second generator arrives on site, putting two more pumps online, though not at full strength.

8:30 a.m.: City officials ask Twin Falls restaurants to close until further notice.

9:30 a.m.: Power is restored, but declared emergency stays in place until water reserves are replenished.

Noon: City allows restaurants to reopen, and coordinates with industrial users to open gradually. Water reserve is replenished to 11 million gallons of its 18 million gallon capacity.

2 p.m.: City lifts emergency order, while reserving the right to reinstate bans and cautioning residents and businesses against using too much water. Irrigation is still banned until Thursday.

TWIN FALLS • As Twin Falls city officials watched water reserves drop to dangerously low levels, Amanda Hall poured another cup of coffee.

She knew the city was currently under a state of emergency after all four water pumps lost electricity the night before in a severe storm. But the Shot in the Dark barista wasn't instructed to stop serving coffee.

No one had contacted her about shutting down. She had read that there was a request from the city, she said, but she and her manager weren't in a rush to close the coffee shop's doors that morning.

"We thought about closing," she said. "But we didn't. And by the time we were going to close, the city said businesses could remain open."

During Tuesday morning's water emergency, city officials asked restaurants and industrial businesses to refrain from opening.

But many business owners didn't get the message. By the time city officials began asking restaurant owners to keep their doors closed, many owners were already at work.

Depot Grill owner Steve Soran said he didn't find out about the city's request to stop serving until almost two hours after the request was made.

He didn't shut the restaurant's

Fundraising Events to Benefit Castleford Family

TIMES-NEWS

CASTLEFORD • Several fundraising events are scheduled to help the Justin Clark and Dana Winson family who lost their house to a fire on May 24. The couple has four children ages 4, 5, 8 and 11.

A karaoke fundraiser will be held from 8 p.m. to midnight on June 8, at the King and Harts, 248 Main St. in Castleford. On June 9, Jade's Run, a biker poker run, will begin at noon in Twin Falls at Golden Corral and end in Castleford. A lasagna dinner will be held from 5 to 7 p.m. at the Castleford Community Center with $5 donation. In the evening at King and Harts, there will be live music and raffle tickets for more than 100 prizes. Tickets are three for $5. All the events are open to the public. For more information, call King and Harts at 537-6853.

Look in Sunday's People Section for a story about how the Justin Clark and Dana Winson family is picking up the pieces after a fire destroyed their Castleford home.

Elmore Co. Fire Causes Home Evacuation

BY KIMBERLEE KRUESI

GLENNS FERRY • For some Elmore County residents, Monday's windstorm wasn't the only event that kept them awake.

A wildfire located along Hill Road — south of U.S. Highway 30 and the Snake River — in King Hill caused county officials to evacuate three homes around 10:30 p.m., said David Kellerman, an Elmore County sheriff's deputy.

No homes were burned but some small structures did get damaged by the flames, he said.

While the exact cause of the wildfire is still unknown, Kellerman said it probably started from a spark that gained momentum after massive winds whipped through the county.

Crews from the U.S. Bureau of Land Management, Glenns Ferry Fire Department, Elmore County and Elmore County Search and Rescue responded to the fire.

Kellerman said the fire burned no more than 30 acres. It was contained and controlled by late Monday night.

CRASH NEAR FILER SENDS TWO TO HOSPITAL

TIMES-NEWS

FILER • Idaho State Police investigated a single vehicle rollover crash in Highway 30 just west of Filer at 6 p.m. Monday evening.

A report from ISP said Salome Hernandez, 43, of Buhl, and her passenger, Olivia Villicana-Guzman, 31, were headed west on Highway 30 when Hernandez saw an oncoming vehicle attempting to pass another vehicle, crossing into the westbound lane, the report said.

"Hernandez swerved off the right shoulder, causing her 1997 GMC Jimmy to go into a broad slide, roll twice and rest on its wheels on the north side of the road," the report said.

Villicana-Guzman was transported via ground ambulance to St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center while Hernandez was transported by family. Both women were treated and released, the report said.

According to ISP both women were wearing seat belts and the passing vehicle has not been identified but the case remains under investigation.

32 Districts Make Student Laptop List

Associated Press

BOISE • A mix of large and small school districts will be first in line when Idaho starts providing laptop computers for every ninth- through 12th-grader next year, according to a list obtained Tuesday by The Associated Press.

The state Department of Education selected 32 districts, allowing up to 47 high schools to participate when the laptops start going to students in 2013 under reforms championed by public schools chief Tom Luna.

The list includes big districts like Meridian and Boise in southwest Idaho, though they'll be limited on how many high schools can participate. Tiny school districts such as Culesac in the north and Kimberly in the south also made the cut, as did two charter schools.

The laptops will first go to every high school teacher this fall.

Idaho has yet to select the device that will be deployed into high school classrooms statewide. A May 25 deadline for computer vendors to submit bids to the state's Division of Purchasing has been extended until Monday.

Under Luna's reforms, Idaho is also becoming the first state in the nation to re-

Who's on the List?

Local school districts on the list for the first wave of student laptops next year include Kimberly, Minidoka County and Cassia County. Both Mini-Cassia school districts will be able to choose two high schools to receive laptops, according to the Associated Press.

The superintendent of each school district offered a short reaction to the announcement in a State Department of Education press release:

"We can now provide our students with equal access to the best educational opportunities that any other district in the state — or the country — can provide."

Scott Rogers, Minidoka County School District.

"We are anxious for the opportunity to leverage our experience with mobile devices to help develop the 21st century classroom, a vision that blends the efficiency of technology with the proven value of project-based learning."

Kathleen Noh, Kimberly School District.

"Providing high school teachers and students with mobile computing devices and greater access to electronic media presents an unprecedented opportunity for schools to fundamentally change and expand student learning."

Gaylen Smyer, Cassia County School District

quire high school students to take at least two credits online to graduate.

The sweeping changes, which also limited collective bargaining talks while introducing teacher merit pay, were approved by state lawmakers in 2011 and targeted by critics, who were successful in getting a repeal initiative on the November ballot.

Teachers who receive laptops this fall may have to return the devices if the referendum succeeds. That's because the technology and merit pay funding would likely be redirected into a rainy day account for public education, Education Department officials have said.

The laptops are one of the most visible pieces of Luna's Students Come First plan.

While the devices are expected to be deployed to one-third of students each year, reaching all high schools over the course of three years, Luna said he may ask the Idaho Legislature to shorten that timeline to two years.

"If the money is there, you may see us pursue in the next legislative session to speed up the deployment," said Luna, who envisions the first third getting their laptops in 2013, and the remainder being added in 2014.

More than 170 high schools serving 68,000 students wanted to be first part of the first batch, according to the state Department of Education. The program will be limited, however, to roughly 27,000 students in its first year.

Districts that wanted to be part of the first group were asked to submit an application to the state Department of Education that included a five-page, double-spaced essay on their plans for the devices. The applications were ranked, and then scored again based region.

With only a certain number of devices to be deployed in the first year, Luna said the formula aimed to provide some balance across the state, so that the computers weren't concentrated in any one area.

"We didn't want them to be gobbled up by the ones in the large urban areas," Luna said.

Public Invited to Comment on Fish and Game Wildlife Management

BY KIMBERLEE KRUESI
kkruesi@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • This summer, Idaho's Department of Fish and Game is hoping to gather as much input as possible on how the agency manages its wildlife.

"We want to renew the enthusiasm Idahoans have for wildlife," said Virgil Moore, the department's director, during a news conference. "We want to motivate Idahoans to stay involved and we want to build a broader base for support for wildlife."

Aug. 24-26, the department will hold a wildlife summit designed to bring together hunters, anglers, conservationists and others to submit suggestions on what issues the department should address.

Eventually, Fish and Game would like to update several of its management policies. However, the summit won't be the place where new policies are drafted, Moore said.

"One thing that won't change is our commitment to anglers and hunters," Moore said. "But as director for Fish and Game, it's important that we check in with our plan and make sure it's current."

Many of the policies were set in place in 1938, said Randy Budge, Fish and Game commissioner. It was a time when Idaho had fewer people and more wildlife habitat.

Today, Idaho is facing the opposite problem, Budge said. But even though Idaho's population has increased, hunter populations remained stagnant. As a result, the department is receiving fewer funds and might need to restructure how it meets managing fish and wildlife resources.

"The intent of the summit isn't to discuss funding mechanisms," Moore said. "It's to look to see if what we have in the (current management plans) is valid."

For more information on the summit, visit <http://fishandgame.idaho.gov/summit/>.

Highway 46 Resurfacing to Begin Thursday

TIMES-NEWS

BUHL • Paving on Idaho Highway 46 between Wendell and Buhl is scheduled to begin Thursday, the Idaho Transportation Department announced Tuesday.

The resurfacing project will start near 4300 North Road, about one mile north of Buhl, and will extend to the Snake River. South of Wendell, the project will begin at Interstate 84 and end just north of 3400 South Road.

The highway will be reduced to a single lane during the work. A pilot car will direct traffic through work zones and drivers should watch for flaggers and follow the posted 35 mph speed limit, according to an ITD press release.

The project will take about a week for both sections. The new asphalt will receive a seal coat later this summer, the release stated.

According to ITD, Highway 46 is one of three sections on this contract. Knife River Corp. of Boise is the contractor for the $1.75 million project.

News Groups Denied Injunction in Execution Case

Associated Press

BOISE • A federal judge on Tuesday denied a petition from The Associated Press, the Times-News and 15 other news groups that want a court to strike down Idaho's policy restricting full access to executions.

The news organizations filed a lawsuit last month over the portion of Idaho's policy that prevents witnesses from viewing lethal injections from start to finish.

The legal challenge came less than three weeks before the June 12 execution of Richard Leavitt, though the media had raised concerns over the policy with the Idaho Department of Correction after the execution of Paul Ezra Rhoades in November.

In his 20-page ruling, U.S. District Judge Edward J. Lodge denied a request for a preliminary injunction that might have required changes before Leavitt's execution. Lodge took issue with the timing of the injunction request filed May 24, saying there was no excuse for the news organizations waiting so soon before Leavitt is scheduled to die for the 1984 murder of Blackfoot resident Danette Elg.

"The claim was brought very late, and if granted, it would undoubtedly change the execution protocol and could disrupt the scheduled execution," Lodge said. "The public has an interest in viewing the whole execution process, but it also has an interest in seeing the judgment enforced without disruption."

The news organizations will appeal to the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, said their attorney, Chuck Brown.

An Idaho Department of Corrections spokesman said the agency has no comment on the case.

About 15 years ago, the pumps were out for a full day, he said.

But because the city's population was smaller, water reserves covered the outage while public works employees fixed the problem.

That's no longer the case. Within hours of the pumps failing on Monday and with no on-site backup generators, city water levels dropped to a dangerously low level.

Considering the situation, the city's response was impressive, said Councilman Chris Talkington.

"Cool heads prevailed," he said Monday evening, praising the city's outreach to residents and industrial users and banning all but necessary water use.

Though outages are a rare problem, Talkington said the city has no choice but to put backup generators at the water station.

"There's no doubt about it," he said. But, he added, "I anticipate it's going to be a multimillion-dollar expenditure. How we're going to pay for it, I don't have a clue right now. It's an incredibly large power requirement. It's not some sort of little home generator you get out of Home Depot."

Putting generators on the site isn't necessarily the answer, said Councilman Shawn Barigar. Considering the potential cost and how rarely outages happen, Barigar isn't sure taxpayers in Twin Falls would be happy with the expenditure.

That doesn't mean the city shouldn't do anything, Barigar added. Other options include increasing the city's water storage capacity and adding a reverse 911 system to alert citizens of an emergency.

Mayor Greg Lanting agreed that the situation needs to be addressed. Already, the council and city officials are discussing infrastructure needs as they gear up for their budget-setting process.

"All things will be on the table, I'm sure," Lanting said, adding that the council wouldn't take on extra costs without careful consideration.

"You don't take those decisions lightly, because they cause the increases in water and sewer rates to pay them back," Lanting said.

But, he added, the emergency on Tuesday demonstrated an acute need to address the situation before any more problems occur.

"It certainly pointed out that our system is more fragile than we'd hoped," he said.

Water Supply

Brad Bowlin, communications specialist for Idaho Power, said that during power outages, line workers put a bigger priority on fixing live power lines on the ground, as they are more dangerous than other types of outages.

"Any time we have something that poses an immediate threat to people, then we want to address that first," Bowlin said.

Because of the multiple outages caused by the storm, that put the power outage at the water station lower on the to-do list, said Ryan Baumann, water supply supervisor for the city of Twin Falls.

The two generators powered three water pumps at the station, but not at full power.

Under normal circumstances, the city is able to produce up to 18,000 gallons per minute. On Tuesday morning, that maximum production dropped to 3,700.

"That's just barely helping us maintain," said Robert Bohling, water superintendent for the City of Twin Falls.

If the water level dropped too low, the city would have to recalibrate the water system. That would take about three days, during which a boil order would be in effect.

To keep the crisis from escalating, the city ordered industrial users not to use water and asked residents to use water for only necessary purposes. Officials extended the ban to restaurants later in the morning, asking them not to open.

Some restaurants didn't get the message, and others chose not to comply, said Joshua Palmer, public information officer for the city.

All industrial users obeyed the order, he said.

Idaho Power restored power to the station mid-morning, but by then, the water reserves had been depleted so much that the state of emergency was still in place.

That state of emergency was lifted early afternoon, and the city allowed restaurants to reopen and worked with industrial users to stagger their water usage. Irrigation is banned until Thursday.

"We are all in this together and water use will be conditional as reservoir levels begin to rise," Rothweiler said in a press release. "We will continue to monitor this situation until storage is restored, which we believe will occur early (Wednesday) morning."

Outages

Idaho Power dispatched work crews to repair the broken power lines and fallen power poles starting Monday night. Tuesday evening, the utility estimated most affected customers would receive electricity that night or by noon today.

Since most of the outages are spread throughout the Magic Valley, it's difficult to pinpoint where every customer is located, said Brad Bowlin, a spokesman for the utility company.

"We have a lot of poles down with transformers on them," he said. "That takes some time to get around and it takes several people to repair it."

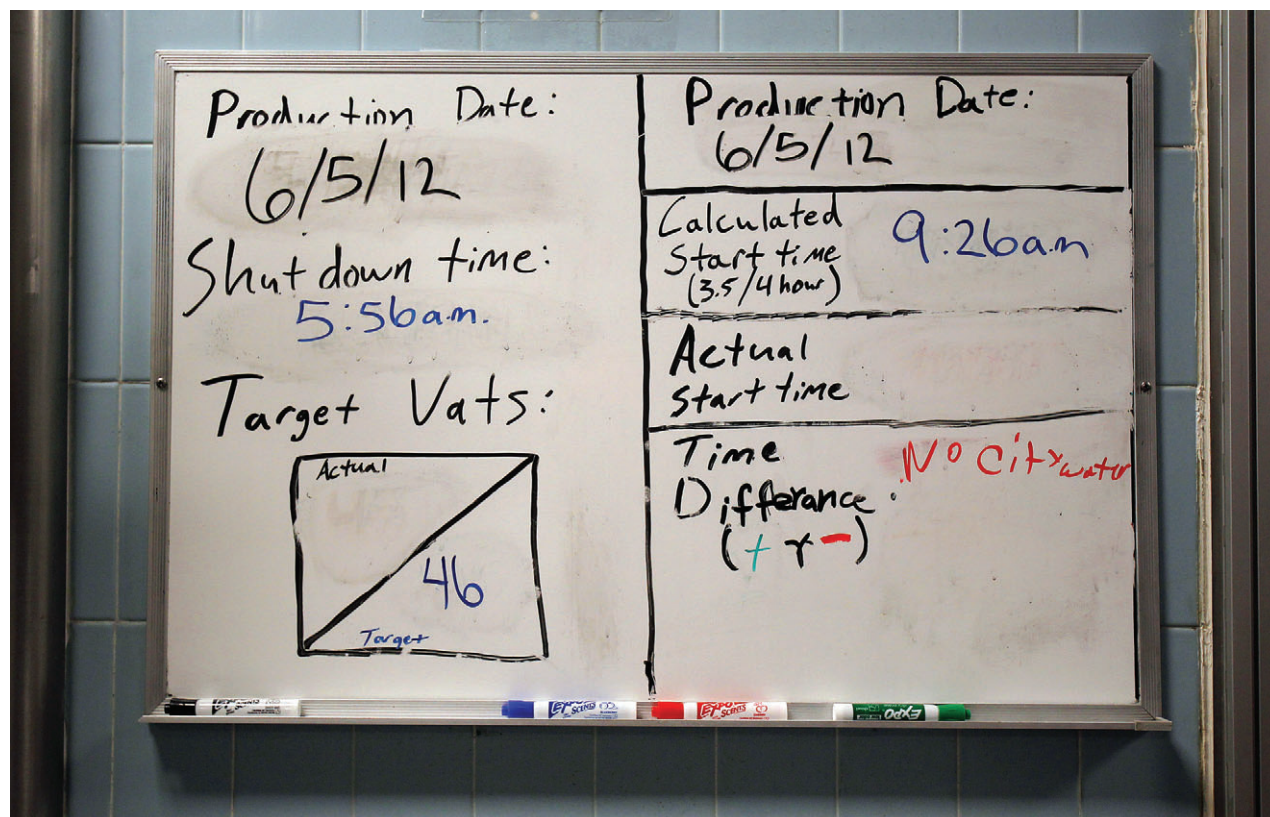

Crews from American Falls and Pocatello were called in to help repair broken power lines and replace fallen power poles.

"It's all hands on deck right now," Bowlin said.

Close to 52,000 customers across the utility's entire coverage area lost power as Monday's severe storm traveled through eastern Oregon and southern Idaho. By Tuesday evening, crews had restored power to 45,000 customers.

For those people still without power, Idaho Power encourages turning off all appliances and most lights that were in use when the power went off. Turning everything off helps protect appliances from experiencing voltage fluctuation damage caused by circuit overloads when power is restored.

doors but stopped serving glasses of water unless a customer requested one.

"I didn't even know," he said. "I had a coworker tell me about it and they found out on Facebook."

Montana Steak House was one of the few restaurants within city limits that did remain closed until the early afternoon.

"We never thought about not closing," said Jacque

Corbett, the restaurant's owner. "Although, it's kind of scary to see the city so unprepared for this kind of emergency."

Glanbia Foods' Twin Falls plant was one of the industrial businesses that was contacted before 8 a.m. to shut down its water use, said Whitney Beem, marketing manager for Glanbia.

Production was delayed by close to four hours. Employees sent some of the hundreds of pounds of Glanbia's incoming milk to its Gooding plant.

The world's largest producer of American-style cheese uses close to 2.8 million pounds of milk each day, said Rudy Jozelic, the plant's production manager.

"We didn't have to dump any milk," Jozelic said. "But if we had been closed all day, we would have asked the farmers to dump the milk."

By early afternoon, the city had lifted the state of emergency. However, city officials and the Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce request that businesses and residents remain frugal with their water use.

knocked on doors telling people to shut their irrigation off. At about 7 a.m. they obtained a list of areas scheduled to be watered.

"Officers drove through those areas and told people to shut their systems off," he said, adding that everyone who was asked complied without any issues.

"I think the main thing is people need to realize we're all in this together," Stotts said. "We just hope citizens understand the urgency of this."

Stotts said people who use city water should follow all announced guidelines until the system is back to normal operation in order to avoid more complications.

Jerome County

In Jerome County, Sheriff Doug McFall said there were numerous reports of power lines down and a few reports of fires. One home about four miles north of Jerome had large two trees taken down, along with power lines and telephone wires.

Franklin Building Supply at 515 Main St. in Jerome lost about 50 pieces of plywood, which blew into their customer parking lot and into South Date Street.

"Basically, we stock our plywood in the yard, which is all gated and fenced in," said Gary Wilson, the retail manager at the store.

Wilson said the wood was secured with nails driven through the top four or five pieces of each stack of wood, but the wind was powerful enough to send the stacks flying over the 8-foot fences.

"When I showed up this morning to open the store it was scattered everywhere," Wilson said.

Several employees cleaned the yard and parking lot area late Tuesday morning, but Wilson said he hadn't figured out the cost of the lost wood yet.

"It's surprising how strong the wind was to pick that up," he said. "It's heavy."

deputies responded to about 12 calls Monday night related to the windstorm, including kayakers needing rescue and a portable toilet in the road.

Sheriff's spokeswoman Lori Stewart said two kayakers were forced to take cover under the Perrine Bridge during the storm.

The two adult men were heading back to Centennial Park when the weather got too bad for them to continue, Lt. Daron Brown said.

The call came in at 10:05 p.m. from an Idaho Fish and Game employee, who was alerted by the men's relative, Brown said. The family member reported the kayakers were last seen between Shoshone Falls and some nearby docks.

Deputies found the men under the bridge and transported them back to Centennial Park. Neither needed medical attention.

"They were fine, they were just stranded," Brown said.

Deputies also responded to a small brush fire at 9:04 p.m. Monday near the elk ranch at the junction of U.S. Highways 30 and 93 near Filer. A report did not say how the fire started, Stewart said.

Other calls alerted deputies to limbs in the road, trees down and fallen power lines, Stewart said.

Shelley Edgar-Bonnes

Robert Bohling, water department superintendent for the city of Twin Falls, reviews data that monitors water levels in the city on Tuesday.

was sitting in her living room when a huge tree hit her house on Concordia Circle in Twin Falls at about 8:30 p.m.

"I was just sitting there watching TV when all of a sudden I heard the wind pick up," she said. "I thought the storm must be starting."

Just minutes later, Edgar-Bonnes said she heard a crack and a boom. Her husband, Dan Bonnes, came up from the basement and the couple took their three boys, aged 9, 7 and 3, to the basement for safety.

"We thought it might be a tornado coming through because it happened so fast,"

Eventually the wind calmed and the family went to bed. In the morning they found their 30-year-old tree completely uprooted and leaning against the house.

There is visible damage to her house along the gutter and an awning Edgar-Bonnes said she believed broke the tree's fall and kept it from crashing through a window.

For now, the tree is resting on the house while the family waits for their insurance company to assess the damage.

Neither she nor her husband has experienced something like this, Edgar-Bonnes said.

"We never would have thought of all the trees we have it would be that one," she said.

Monday's storm also delayed construction on Habitat for Humanity of the Magic Valley's latest Blitz Build.

The storm delayed crews from installing drywall for several hours, said Linda Fleming, local Habitat executive director.

"We should be able to make up that time," she said. "We're still shooting to finish on Friday."

Gooding County

In Gooding, police were also busy Monday night.

"We had a heck of a mess out here," said Gooding Police Chief Jeffery Perry.

Police fielded calls about downed power lines and large trees blocking roadways, Perry said.

A few trees struck homes, including one home in the 500 block of Utah Street with fairly severe damage, he said.

Many trees blocked entry into homes and large limbs crashed into vehicles and trailers, he said.

On Main Street, part of a roof blew off a business and hit a pickup truck, but the man inside the truck was not injured, Perry said. Police were unable to determine what business the roof came from, but Perry said now it's up to business and homeowners to call their insurance companies to figure out the next step.

"We don't investigate stuff like that," he said.

Mini-Cassia

"We had some big gusts, but it wasn't anything really substantial that did a lot of damage over here," said Minidoka County Sheriff Kevin Halverson.

Dan Kidd, line supervisor at United Electric, said there were few reported outages.

"Everything was back to normal by about 1 o'clock last night," Kidd said.

Twin Falls Fire Dept. Able to Respond during Water Crisis

mdavlin@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • Thank goodness for backup plans.

Though the city of Twin Falls' water supply was dangerously low on Tuesday, the Twin Falls Fire Department maintained the ability to fight fires, said Battalion Chief Jack Barnes.

The department has two backup tankers, called tenders, that hold 3,000 gallons each, Barnes said. In addition to that, each of the city's four fire trucks holds 1,000 gallons, and the department could have drawn from canals.

"So we have a fair amount of water on hand," Barnes said.

Though water usage varies on the situation, the average house fire requires about 500 gallons to extinguish, plus a little extra.

"A big warehouse or something, that's a different story," Barnes said.

But, he added, fire departments in neighboring cities would have pitched in with their own tenders.

"We had a backup plan to accommodate as best we could," Barnes said.

Twin Falls Schools Adapted Tuesday

BY JULIE WOOTTON
jwootton@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • As first-graders at Harrison Elementary School passed through the lunch line Tuesday, cafeteria workers passed out paper plates and plastic utensils.

"They like it," kitchen manager Lyllia McGlochlin said about the students' response. "It's something different."

As the city of Twin Falls and Idaho Power worked to restore power to four pumps feeding the city's water system, schools in the Twin Falls School District minimized their water use on the second-to-last day of the school year.

Superintendent Wiley Dobbs said he was in contact with city officials throughout the day, and decided with them to keep school in session.

"The city felt it helped manage the problem by keeping kids in school," he said.

But school employees were asked to conserve water in response to the city's low water levels.

At Harrison, McGlochlin said cafeteria workers used trays to serve breakfast. But once she received an email from the school district office, she put them away and switched to paper products for the rest of the day.

"It wasn't a big adjustment for us," she said.

Usually, cafeteria workers clean up the kitchen after meal times and run the dishwasher. But that task had to wait.

Maintenance crews also turned off sprinkler systems at all Twin Falls schools except Canyon Ridge High, where the sprinklers use canal water.

The College of Southern Idaho's campus was also open Monday, spokesman Doug Maughan said, and summer classes were in session.

Maughan said sprinklers were turned off at the Twin Falls campus by 7:30 a.m. But only 25 acres of the campus are irrigating using city water, he said, while the rest use canal water.

T.F. School District, Teachers' Union Reach Agreement

BY JULIE WOOTTON
jwootton@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • After six negotiation meetings, the Twin Falls School District and Twin Falls Education Association reached a tentative agreement Monday night on contracts for the 2012-13 school year.

The final meeting lasted nearly four hours, including several sessions where both sides met separately behind closed doors. Negotiations over teacher contracts began in early May.

District Superintendent Wiley Dobbs said Tuesday the agreement is a positive step in getting ready for the next school year.

"I think we were all able to openly discuss the issues that needed to be discussed," he said.

Twin Falls teachers who are members of the education association are scheduled to meet at 3:30 p.m. today at Roper Auditorium to vote on the tentative master agreement. If they ratify it, the agreement will go the school district's board of trustees June 11.

Some major points in the agreement include adding one more teacher workday to next school year's calendar, deciding on "triggering points" in the district's fund balance that would lead to adding back more days, and bringing back an employee assistance pro-

Agreement Highlights

- One more teacher workday will be added back to next school year's calendar. That means teachers will have 188 contract days.
- "Triggering points" in district funding will add more days back to the school district's calendar. That would depend on Twin Falls receiving extra revenue from the state, which Superintendent Wiley Dobbs believes unlikely.
- The district has a projected $918,000 fund balance for next year. If that hits $2 million fund balance level, it would restore one teacher work day that's currently furloughed; $2.3 million would return one professional day that's furloughed; And $2.9 million fund would restore funding for one more experience step.
- Teachers will receive pay increases for those who gain more experience or a higher level of education.
- The school district will bring back an employee assistance program, which will provide services such as counseling. Dobbs said the program hasn't been offered for about a decade.

gram that would provide services such as counseling.

"Anytime we can come to an agreement, I think it turns out well," association president David Gibson said about the negotiations process.

It was the second year of negotiations under Idaho's education reforms. The Students Come First laws limited the scope of negotiations for Idaho school districts and required that they take place in public meetings.

Now, teacher salaries and benefits are the only items that can be included in a master agreement.

After about 90 minutes of discussion during Monday's meeting, both parties spent the rest of the evening meeting separately and privately, then resumed public discussions.

Gibson said the sessions allow both sides to split up into different rooms to talk through the issues and brainstorm other approaches. Then the groups come back together to talk through proposals.

What of Students Come First?

Monday's discussion included what to do if voters repeal any of the three Students Come First laws during the November election.

Dobbs said Tuesday that if the laws are repealed, the district can reopen negotiations with the education association to discuss the impact to teacher contracts. Though not specified in the new agreement, meeting minutes will reflect the district's intent to follow that plan.

The education association wanted the school district to include language in the agreement to reinstate the 2009-10 collective bargaining agreement if Students Come First is repealed. Then, just salaries and benefits would be renegotiated.

But during the meeting, Dobbs said the school district received legal opinions saying it can't sign an agreement since negotiations are limited to salaries and benefits.

Monday, education association representatives also asked district officials if they'd publicly advocate for the repeal.

"I don't think we can make a decision in this setting," school board Chairman Dan King said.

He said he wants to build trust with the education association and work together on a variety of issues.

But "it's not appropriate to say how board members should vote," he said.

Gibson said he just wanted the school district's intent to get on board with the association.

He described the contract negotiations process over the past two years as "arduous" and said it has been divisive between teachers and school district administrators.

"The teachers are really feeling like it's us versus them," he said.

Investigator Scours Site of Tanker Crash

BY PAUL FOY AND SUSAN MONTOYA BRYAN
Associated Press

SALT LAKE CITY • Federal investigators said Tuesday mechanical failure forced an air tanker fighting a Nevada wildfire to make a crash landing, but they were still trying to determine what brought down another tanker of the same vintage in southern Utah, killing two pilots.

Both accidents happened Sunday, and a National Transportation Safety Board investigator was at the scene of the remote Utah crash

Tuesday, trying to determine what went wrong. The company that owns the Lockheed P2V said it believes a cockpit voice recorder survived the wreck and could yield clues to the plane's emergency before it went down.

Investigators also will interview the pilot of the tanker's "spotter" plane, the smaller aircraft assigned to guide the tanker as it dropped retardant, U.S. Forest Service chief Tom Tidwell said.

The P2V was once a Cold War-era submarine attack plane but for years has been a mainstay of the nation's aerial firefighting arsenal.

Two pilots were killed in the Utah crash — Todd Neal Tompkins and Ronnie Edwin Chambless, both of Boise, Idaho — but no one was hurt when the other P2V was forced to make a crash landing at Nevada's Minden-Tahoe Airport.

At a news conference Tuesday in Albuquerque, N.M., Tidwell acknowledged the need to modernize the country's firefighting fleet and said the Forest Service was asking contractors to upgrade to a more modern plane.

He added officials will "have to wait and see" what comes out of the investigation. But for now, "we wouldn't be flying these aircraft if we didn't think they were safe," Tidwell said.

Sen. Jon Tester, D-Montana, countered that the agency needs to act — and fast.

"These incidents indicate the need to swiftly replace the aging air fleet and begin contracting new planes for the Forest Service fleet," Tester wrote Tidwell in a letter released Tuesday. "Unfortunately, the Forest Service has yet to provide a long-term pathway for aircraft replacement."

Idaho Court Rejects Death Row Inmate's Appeal

BOISE (AP) • The Idaho Supreme Court on Tuesday rejected an appeal by a death row inmate scheduled to die by lethal injection on June 12.

The court ruled in a 10-page decision that the 7th District Court did not err in issuing a death warrant for 54-year-old Richard A. Leavitt entered on May 17 or in denying a motion by Leavitt to quash the death warrant.

Leavitt was convicted of the 1984 stabbing murder of Blackfoot resident Danette Elg. Prosecutors say he stabbed her repeatedly and then cut out her sexual organs.

Leavitt is being held at the Idaho Maximum Security Institution south of Boise with 15 other death row inmates.

If Leavitt's execution moves forward he will become the second person executed by the state in the last seven months.

Lessons Learned from Tuesday's Water Crisis

The phone rang at the Times-News around 10:45 p.m. Monday night. The city of Twin Falls was still in the first minutes of what would be a long 24 hours. A strong gust of wind blew down a power line and within an hour, the water pumps at the Blue Lakes water station went out one by one. By 11:15 p.m. all four pumps were down.

City crews worked through the night. The city was aggressive about getting their message out to local media and on its own website. The Times-News sent out email alerts late into the night, early into the morning and throughout Tuesday thanks to a stream of open communication from the city.

We published a story in print but most of the updates were online.

From what the city could tell, those who read the alerts were responsive — cutting back on watering, opening businesses later than usual even though it meant lost revenue.

Police went door to door asking people not to water lawns.

But the message didn't reach everyone. Those who didn't get a police visit, read the paper or go online didn't get the news — the city of Twin Falls was facing a water crisis.

It's safe to say that Tuesday was a wake-up call for city officials and for the community.

Together we learned two things — 1) there are holes in the Twin Falls emergency alert system and 2) there is no backup generator for the city's water supply.

The city asked restaurants not to open Tuesday; when we called one restaurant that was doing a brisk business, our phone call was the first they'd heard of the request.

The problem with living in a city that does not experience many natural disasters — tornadoes, floods, earthquakes — is that we are ill prepared to deal with a crisis as a community. We do not have a reverse 911 system to put out a warning call to every resident in the city or to a targeted portion of the population. We do not have a siren system. In an emergency, when seconds count — we have to rely on word of mouth and messages passed on the Internet. It's time to address that problem.

It's also time to really face the fact that Twin Falls has outgrown itself.

According to a Twin Falls spokesman, the city faced a similar issue about 15 years ago. But the population was much smaller then. (According to the U.S. Census, the population of Twin Falls is 44,125. Fifteen years ago, the population was 33,222.)

At that time, the power to the water pumps were out for a full day, but the population being what it was did not put as much pressure on the water supply. Fast forward to today with our growing population and increased industrial activity and the stresses on the water system have gone up.

This isn't a new problem, but it's one that will need to be addressed — especially as we continue to grow our population and are working to attract businesses such as Chobani.

On Tuesday, our city staff was reactively proactive. They were aggressive about reaching the community in any way they could. But after the dust settles, it will be time to examine the lessons learned this week.

During current budget talks, city staff is already discussing other massive infrastructure issues related to population growth, such as roads and our limited wastewater capacity.

The lack of backup generators and absence of an emergency alert system should be added to the list.

Twin Falls Doesn't Have Backup for Water System?

Stop Invasive Species before They Enter the United States

Idaho has enacted laws to try and stop the spread of invasive species into the state. Several of these species should not have even been in the United States to begin with.

As a leading import market, the United States receives hundreds of millions of live non-native animals each year. Under the current law, it takes an average of four years for the federal government to stop the import of those that are harmful and invasive. During this time, some of these animals can escape or be released. They cause widespread damage and cost taxpayers

A crucial step in protecting Idaho's wildlife, as well as that of other states, is to stop the invasive species before they even enter the United States. Recent invasions by imported animal species such as the Burmese python, Asian carp, northern snakeheads and red lionfish cost millions of dollars annually in efforts to control them. These costs could have been avoided, as well as unnecessary damage to wildlife and the ecosystem if authorities had considered their risks beforehand and restricted their importation.

To address this problem, Rep. Louise Slaughter (New York) and a bi-partisan group of co-sponsors introduced the Invasive Fish and Wildlife Prevention Act of 2012 (HR 5864) to stop the influx of damaging invasive species while still allowing trade in the vast majority of non-native animals that pose no risk of invasiveness or threat to the health of humans or wildlife. This animal import legislation is needed to stop non-native invaders.

Supposed Tea Party Leader Pulled Bait and Switch

Rusty Satterwhite, an organizer of "TEARS of the Patriots," poll-vaulted himself to a position of leadership of the not-yet-organized Tea Party movement and then on to the Ron Paul meet-up groups. Oh, Rusty talked the talk, giving constitutional speeches. He seemed to be a real Tea Party Indian decked out with feathers and war-paint and on board for the Ron Paul Rev-love-ution.

In 2010, the Ron Paul Republicans got more than 50 percent of the committeemen elected to the Twin Falls Central Committee, giving them the leverage necessary to get Ron Paul delegates to the state convention, but something happened.

The Paulers nominated Rusty, but he declined the position and gave his support to Gretchen. Gretchen secretly appointed Jim Fort as committeeman for the establishment, as the district attorney, Grant Lobes, and Jennifer, his assistant, both looked on.

Needless to say, the members of the "Tears of the Patriots" really did have something to cry about after Rusty did his Benedict Arnold act! A vote was taken, and it was tied because of Jim Fort. However, Gretchen voted for herself with the help of noncommitteemen, strangers and phony phone calls to fictitious attorneys for a surreptitious ruling that she could vote, breaking the tie, and defraud unsuspecting newly elected committeemen and stealing their meeting.

Rusty's reward for his dirty deed is to be appointed as chairman to the Idaho State Republican Convention, coincidentally being held in Twin Falls. This should guarantee that all Ron Paul supporters and delegates will be squelched in 2012. That is why Rusty and gang have banned videotaping in public meetings and threatened to have me arrested if I showed up with a camera and dared to expose the truth.

Charlotte Ann Stouder

Oct. 22, 1941-June 3, 2012

BUHL • Charlotte Ann Stouder, 70, of Buhl, passed away Sunday, June 3, 2012, at her home.

She was born Oct. 22, 1941, in Long Beach, Calif., the daughter of Ora John and Mildred Ann Hansen Range. As a youth, she was involved in 4-H with her projects including sewing and chickens, and she was also a high school leader. On her parents' chicken ranch, she helped in everything for taking care of more than 10,000 chickens

A celebration of life for Charlotte will be held at 11 a.m. Saturday, June 9, at the Living Waters Presbyterian Church, 821 E. Main St. in Wendell. Services will conclude at the church. A private family inurnment will be held at the Wendell Cemetery.

Funeral and cremation arrangements are under the care and direction of Demaray Funeral Service, Wendell Chapel. Condolences may be shared with the family by visiting the obituary link at www.demarayfuneralservice.com.

Charlotte married William "Bill" Charles Stouder on Aug. 26, 1961, in Anaheim, Calif. She has contributed to every community in which she has lived. She was a secretary in the sociology department at U.C. Davis to help put Bill through four years of veterinarian school. She took care of the book work for Bill's vet practice in Chino. Later, she delivered Meals on Wheels for the Pomona Presbyterian Church and was a school bus driver for Ontario Christian School. Both Charlotte and Bill were national officers in Mariners, a Presbyterian couple's organization. They also were part of a square dancing group. Charlotte was a member of Living Waters Presbyterian Church in Wendell, where she was an elder and in charge of the Fellowship Committee for three years.

Charlotte is survived by three sons, Bruce Stouder of Wendell, Gary (Charleen) Stouder of Wendell and Allan (Tilly) Stouder of Wendell; six grandchildren; five great-grandchildren; and her brothers, Gilbert (Antoinette) Range of Long Beach, Calif., and Wendell (Dodie) Range of Davis, Calif. OBITUARIES

Glen D Luke

June 21, 1964-June 3, 2012

MURTAUGH • Glen D Luke, age 47, passed away at the home of his parents in Murtaugh in the early morning of Sunday, June 3, 2012. He was loved by all, he brightened many a day, and he will be missed by his family and countless friends. Glen was special and brave and unforgettable.

Glen was born June 21, 1964, in Burley, Idaho. He was the third child and first son of Gordon and Eola (Dummer) Luke. His earliest years were spent in the Unity and Pella areas. He loved his family, life on the farm and working with his dad. At the age of 5, Glen received a severe head injury in an auto accident. He was in a coma for more than three months and the remainder of his life was impacted by challenges resultant from the injury.

Glen brought out the best in everyone he interacted with. He made us smile and laugh. He taught us patience and appreciation for the good things in life. Glen was proud of his family and they were proud of him. Glen knew no strangers and had more "best friends" than could be recounted — from all races and religions. He brightened the lives of all who met him. Glen lived in Burley and Island Park, two years in Piqua, Ohio, and spent the last 17 years in Murtaugh. Wherever he lived, he was well known.

He spent countless hours on a three-wheeled bicycle, stopped traffic on major highways, and clocked more miles on local canal banks than one can imagine. Glen's life was different — but remarkable.

He is survived by his parents, Gordon and Eola Luke; his siblings, Ann Bailey (Kirk), Pamela Johnson (Chris), Gary Luke (Susan), David Luke (Jody) and Susan Belliston (Matthew); and 23 nieces and nephews. Glen was preceded in death by his grandparents, Harold and Sybil Luke, and Oleen and Delora Dummer.

The funeral will be held at 11 a.m. Saturday, June 9, at the Burley LDS 3rd and 7th Ward Church, 2200 Oakley Ave., with Bishop Levi Perkins of the Murtaugh Ward officiating. Burial will be in Gem Memorial Gardens. Friends may call from 6 until 8 p.m. Friday, June 8, at the Rasmussen Funeral Home, 1350 E. 16th St. in Burley, and from 10 until 10:45 a.m. Saturday at the church.

Armando Santos Sr.

RUPERT • Armando Santos Sr., 77, of Rupert, passed away Monday, June 4, 2012, at his home peacefully in the arms of his son, Armando Santos Jr.

Armando was born to Manuel and Margarita DeLos Santos on March 13, 1935, in Eagle Pass, Texas. He married Romelia Castillion on Dec. 25, 1965, and together, they had two sons, Armando Jr. and Roberto "Bobby." Armando worked throughout his life as a truck driver, beginning with S&S Trucking and later, along with his two sons, owned and operated A. Santos and Sons Trucking. Armando enjoyed spending time with his family, restoring old cars and could always be found repairing something on the trucks.

About 12 years ago, Armando retired from truck driving and spent his retired days enjoying and spoiling his grandchildren, Kody, Kortney and Brandon. More recently, Armando's days revolved around being entertained and or entertaining his grandson, Darynt, and his four great-granddaughters, Monique, Anyssa, Alexia and Jenalie. Armando didn't get the chance to spoil his only great-grandson, Xzavian. Armando loved his great-grandbabies with all his heart and always had a smile watching them play and carry on. Every chance he got, he was outside sitting in his chair enjoying the nice weather and watching the great-grandkids play.

Armando's survivors include his loving and devoted wife of 47 years, Romelia of Rupert; his two sons, Armando Santos Jr. and Roberto "Bobby" (Tina) Santos of Heyburn; five grandkids, Kody (Amanda) Santos of Burley, Kortney (Tyler) Bradshaw of Rupert, Brandon Quibel of Burley, and Selestina and Darynt Santos of Heyburn; five great-grandchildren, Monique, Anyssa, Alexia and Jenalie Santos, all of Burley, and Xzavian Bradshaw of Rupert; two brothers, Manuel (Irene) of Burley and Rudy (Linda) of Boise; four sisters, Naomi, Maria Elena (Vincente) of Rupert, Myrna (Richard) of Rupert and Blanca (Frank) of San Antonio, Texas; one sister-in-law, Romelia of Rupert; and numerous nieces and nephews. He was preceded in death by his own parents; one brother, Guirillmo; and one brother-in-law, Fred.

The viewing will be held from 2 to 4 p.m. Saturday, June 9, at Hansen Mortuary, 710 Sixth St. in Rupert. At Armando's request, he will be cremated at a later date.

Romelia, Mando and Bobby would like to thank all their friends and family for all their love and support during this time of their loss. Everyone is greatly appreciated.

Our husband and father was a great man, and his family will greatly miss him.

Devin Lee Stimpson

May 28, 1980-June 2, 2012

HANSEN • Devin Lee Stimpson, 32, of Hansen, Idaho, passed away Saturday morning, June 2, 2012, from injuries sustained in an automobile accident in Kimberly.

Devin was born May 28, 1980, in Twin Falls, Idaho, the son of Galen and Sheryl Stimpson. He grew up in Hansen, where he attended school, graduating from Hansen High School in 1998. Following high school, he furthered his education at the College of Southern Idaho, where he earned his associate degree in accounting. He attended Boise State University for one year, then attended Eastern Idaho Technical College for a time before returning to College of Southern Idaho, where he received his registered nursing certificate in December of 2010. Devin worked as an RN at the hospital in American Falls for a few months until he received a position at St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center. He was currently working on the surgical floor at St. Luke's at the time of his death.

Devin was a member of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. He married Nicole "Nikki" R. Adams for time and all eternity on May 7, 2004, in the Logan Utah LDS Temple. They have three children, Kayson, Kenadi and Kambree and one more on the way. Devin enjoyed all sports, including golfing, fishing, archery, cooking and playing games with his kids and family. He was a fan of the Boise State football team and enjoyed coaching his kids' sporting events. He loved spending time with his kids and his best friend and wife, Nikki. His love was his family.

Devin is survived by his wife, Nikki of Hansen; his three children, Kayson William, Kenadi Lee and

Kambree Rene; his parents, Galen and Sheryl Stimpson of Hansen; his two sisters, Alicia Stimpson of Hansen and Dacia (Cameron) Anderson of Gooding; as well as his two brothers, Shayne (Tami) Stimpson of Meridian and Todd (Monique) Stimpson of Hansen. He is also survived by his grandma, Mildred Stimpson from Paul who resides in Hansen; his in-laws, Ted and Shelly Adams of Idaho Falls; brother-in-law, Chris (Rachel) Adams of Kennewick, Wash.; and sister-in-law, Becci (Josh) Wilding of Billings, Mont.; as well as many nieces, nephews, aunts, uncles and friends. He was preceded in death by his grandparents, Alvin Stimpson and Alma and Edith Blacker.

Devin was a good father, son, husband and friend and will be sorely missed by all who had the opportunity to know him. You will be in our thoughts and our hearts until we meet again.

The funeral for Devin will take place at 11 a.m. Friday, June 8, at the Kimberly LDS Church, 222 Birch St. S. in Kimberly, with Bishop Craig L. Giles conducting. Burial will follow at the Paul Cemetery. A gathering for family and friends will take place from 6 until 8 p.m. Thursday, June 7, White Mortuary, 136 Fourth Ave. E. in Twin Falls, as well as one hour prior to the service Friday at the church.

In lieu of flowers, contributions may be made to the Devin Stimpson Memorial Fund at any Wells Fargo Bank branch or given to funeral home staff. Services are under the direction of Trent Stimpson and staff at White Mortuary, Chapel by the Park, in Twin Falls. Condolences may be left for the family by visiting www.whitemortuary.com.

Positive Momentum

The News from St. Luke's

At St. Luke's Magic Valley and St. Luke's Jerome, we're doing great work every day to improve the health of people in our region and enhance communication with our community. I'd like to fill you in on the latest happenings at St. Luke's, from our hospitals to our clinics, to our community programs. Here's this month's news:

Our Health Foundations are our best support for community fundraising, and we congratulate the Magic Valley and St. Benedicts Foundation Boards for joining together to become one integrated Foundation. Together they will support St. Luke's and our community! The board's first big project is already underway—planning for our annual golf tournament on September 22. Want to get involved? Call (208) 814-0070.

St. Luke's Jerome engaged the local community in assessing the area's current and future health care needs. The St. Luke's team gathered feedback from four focus groups: the medical staff, the Hispanic/Latino community, St. Luke's Jerome employees, and community members and leaders.

In the past year, 12 new physicians have joined the St. Luke's family and made the Magic Valley their home. We are honored to welcome these dedicated primary and specialty care doctors to our community, and will continue to recruit top quality health care providers to our serve the people of our region.

We're one year old already! The first year in our beautiful new medical center and medical office plaza has just flown by. We celebrated our One Year Anniversary by thanking our employees, physicians, volunteers, students, and board members with a Family Barbeque and Fun Walk on May 19 at the hospital Food Court's outdoor patio.

Please feel free to contact me at (208) 814-0000 if you have any questions about St. Luke's, or if you have suggestions about how we can best serve our patients, their families, and our communities.

Here's to your best health,

James L. Angle, CEO

Venus begins to pass in front of the sun, as visible from New York, Tuesday.

EYES TURN SKYWARD AS VENUS TRAVELS ACROSS THE SUN

BY OSKAR GARCIA
Associated Press

HONOLULU • None of us will likely see Venus pass, like a moving beauty spot, across the face of the sun again.

From the U.S. to South Korea, people around the world turned their attention to the daytime sky on Tuesday and early Wednesday in Asia to make sure they caught the rare sight of the transit of Venus. The next one won't be for another 105 years.

"If you can see the mole on Cindy Crawford's face, you can see Venus," Van Webster, a member of the Los Angeles Astronomical Society, told anyone who stopped by his telescope for a peek on Mount Hollywood.

For astronomers, the transit wasn't just a rare planetary spectacle. It was also one of those events they hoped would spark curiosity about the universe and our place in it.

Sul Ah Chim, a researcher at the Korea Astronomy and Space Science Institute in South Korea, said he hoped people see life from a larger perspective, and "not get caught up in their small, everyday problems."

"When you think about it from the context of the universe, 105 years is a very short period of time and the Earth is only a small, pale blue spot," he said.

Israeli Army's Computer Expertise Helps Companies Find Hacker Talent

BY GWEN ACKERMAN
Bloomberg News

TEL AVIV, Israel • As the Flame virus wreaks havoc with Iranian computer systems, Israeli software companies say their country's expertise with such cyber weapons has created a pool of army-trained hacking talent to hire from.

Billionaire Gil Shwed, who served in an elite intelligence unit, says he has recruited from the military for his Check Point Software Technologies, the world's second-largest maker of security networks. Cyber-Ark Software, another specialist in cyber-defense that sold a stake to Goldman Sachs in December, finds top programmers in units that include the army's nine-year program for exceptional math and science students, Chief Executive Officer Udi Mokady said.

Israel is among the leaders in a global growth industry as governments seek to defend financial systems, power plants and other public resources against cyber threats. The ingenuity of hackers, long regarded as pests bent on penetrating computers for mischief and profit, has become a critical resource with military and commercial payoffs, as Israeli companies seek a share of an $18 billion market.

Israel hasn't said whether it created Flame. Vice Prime Minister Moshe Yaalon said it would be "reasonable" for anyone threatened by Iran to use cyber weapons.

Rated one of three countries best prepared to withstand digital attacks in a McAfee study, Israel is pouring resources into cyber warfare. Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu and Defense Minister Ehud Barak are scheduled to speak Wednesday at an international conference on cyber security at Tel Aviv University.

"This is an era that we're entering into where entire societies can be paralyzed by cyber attack, and Israel is no different," Netanyahu said on Feb. 19. "We are committed to being one of the three leading cyber powers of the world."

Israeli companies are benefiting. Check Point's shares, traded on the Nasdaq Stock Market, have jumped almost 70 percent in the past two years. Both its two main competitors, Cisco Systems and Juniper Networks, have fallen more than 30 percent in that period.

Al-Qaida No. 2 Killed by US Drone

BY REBECCA SANTANA AND KIMBERLY DOZIER
Associated Press

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan • A U.S. drone strike in northern Pakistan has killed al-Qaida's second-in-command, American officials said Tuesday, the biggest success so far in the controversial military program and a significant setback to a terror network that has lost a string of top figures since the death of Osama bin Laden last year.

Abu Yahya al-Libi was considered a media-savvy, charismatic leader with religious credentials who escaped from an American prison in Afghanistan and was helping preside over the transformation of al-Qaida from a close-knit group into an ideological movement aimed at winning converts — and potential attackers — around the world.

White House spokesman Jay Carney called al-Libi's death a "major blow" to the terror network.

Carney described al-Libi as an operational leader and a "general manager" of al-Qaida. He said al-Libi had a range of experience that will be hard for al-Qaida to replicate and brings the terror network closer to its ultimate demise than ever before.

Al-Libi was the latest in the dozens of senior commanders removed in the clandestine U.S. war against al-Qaida since Navy SEALs killed bin Laden.

A hero in militant circles for his 2005 escape from an American military prison in Afghanistan, al-Libi was elevated to al-Qaida's No. 2 spot when Ayman al-Zawahri rose to replace bin Laden shortly after the terror leader was killed on May 2, 2011.

Carney would not confirm how he was killed, but an American official, speaking on condition of anonymity to discuss intelligence matters, said it was in a drone strike Monday morning. Pakistani officials had previously said that eight militants died in a drone strike in the Pakistani village of Khassu Khel in the North Waziristan tribal area.

Militants and residents in the area told Pakistani agents that al-Libi was in the house when it was hit, Pakistani intelligence officials said. They said the mud and brick house was destroyed in the attack. A vehicle used by al-Libi was destroyed during the strike, said one of the officials.

A local Taliban chief said earlier Monday that al-Libi was not present at the house, though his guard and driver were killed in the attack.

The intelligence officials also declined to be identified because they were not authorized to talk to the media. The Taliban chief spoke on condition of anonymity for fear of being targeted by the Pakistani army.

The White House maintains a list of terrorist targets to be killed or captured, compiled by the military and the CIA and ultimately approved by the president.

The State Department's Rewards for Justice program had set a $1 million reward for information leading to al-Libi, who had filmed numerous propaganda videos urging attacks on U.S. targets.

The U.S. has carried out a flurry of drone strikes recently — seven in less than two weeks — some of which appear to have been trying to target al-Libi. The al-Qaida deputy appeared to have been wounded in one of those strikes, although there were conflicting accounts as to which.

Pakistani intelligence officials said al-Libi had been slightly injured in a May 28 attack in a village near Khassu Khel, where he then moved. The Taliban chief said the strike that wounded al-Libi was two days earlier in a different village.

As al-Qaida's de facto general manager, al-Libi was responsible for running the group's day-to-day operations in Pakistan's tribal areas and managed outreach to al-Qaida's regional affiliates.

Al-Libi, an Islamic scholar, was captured in 2002 and held by U.S. forces at the Bagram Air Base in Afghanistan until he escaped in 2005 in an embarrassing security breach. Almost immediately after reuniting with his Taliban and al-Qaida brethren he began appearing in videos released by the terror group.

Walker Survives Recall Election in Wisconsin

BY SCOTT BAUER
Associated Press

MADISON, Wis. • Wisconsin Gov. Scott Walker beat back a recall challenge Tuesday, winning both the right to finish his term and a voter endorsement of his strategy to curb state spending, which included the explosive measure that eliminated union rights for most public workers.

The rising Republican star becomes the first governor in U.S. history to survive a recall attempt by defeating Milwaukee Mayor Tom Barrett and the union leaders who rallied for months against his agenda.

Democrats and organized labor spent millions to oust Walker, but found themselves hopelessly outspent by Republicans from across the country who donated record-setting sums to Walker. Republicans hope the victory carries over into November and that their get-out-the-vote effort can help Mitt Romney become the first GOP nominee to carry the state since Ronald Reagan in 1984.

The recall was a rematch of the 2010 governor's race. Throughout the campaign, Walker maintained his policies set the state on the right economic track. Defeat, he said, would keep other politicians from undertaking such bold moves in the future.

"We're headed in the right direction," Walker said many times. "We're turning things around. We're moving Wisconsin forward!"

Barrett repeatedly accused Walker of neglecting the needs of the state in the interests of furthering his own political career by making Wisconsin "the tea party capital of the country." He said Walker had instigated a political civil war in Wisconsin that could be quelled only by a change in leadership.

"I will end this civil war," Barrett promised in a debate. "That is something the people of this state want."

Walker ascended into the national spotlight last year when he surprised the state and unveiled plans to plug a $3.6 billion budget shortfall in part by taking away the union rights of most public workers and requiring them to pay more for their health insurance and pension benefits. It was one of his first moves in office.

Democrats and labor leaders saw it as a political tactic designed to gut the power of his political opposition. State Senate Democrats left Wisconsin for three weeks in a sort of filibuster, as tens of thousands of teachers, state workers and others rallied at the Capitol in protest.

But the tea-party supported fiscal conservative remained steadfast: Walker believed his plan would help him control the state budget, and his opponents could not stop Republicans who control the state Legislature from approving his plans.

Next for Gay Marriage Ban: Supreme Court

SAN FRANCISCO • A federal appeals court refused Tuesday to reconsider a landmark ruling by two of its member judges that struck down California's ban on same-sex marriage, a move that finally puts the voter-approved measure on a long-anticipated path to the U.S. Supreme Court.

Backers of the ban, known as Proposition 8, "absolutely" plan to take the case to the high court now that it has run its course in the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, said Brian Raum, a lawyer with the Alliance Defense Fund, a Christian legal defense group.

Proposition 8 sponsors now have 90 days to petition the Supreme Court to review the finding that the ban violates the civil rights of gay men and lesbians in California.

Same sex unions briefly were legal in the state before 52 percent of voters approved the ban in November 2008.

UN: Syria Permits Aid Workers to Enter

GENEVA • Syria has agreed to allow humanitarian workers and supplies into four of its provinces hit hardest by violence, a promise of some relief in a nation where 1 million people need aid urgently due to the fighting, officials said Tuesday.

At the same time, however, Damascus plunged itself into further international isolation by labeling U.S. and European envoys as unwelcome in retaliation for earlier Western expulsions of Syrian diplomats.

The humanitarian deal requires Syria to provide visas for an unspecified number of aid workers from nine U.N. agencies and seven other non-governmental organizations, and to cut through the red tape that has blocked convoys from delivering food, medicine and other supplies, said John Ging, operations director for the U.N. Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs.

THE MARKET AT A GLANCE

Stocks Inch Higher as Investors Await Europe News

NEW YORK (AP) • As world leaders searched for a way out of Europe's mounting debt crisis, U.S. investors moved to the sidelines. The major market indexes closed modestly higher, after wavering between slight gains and losses throughout the morning. Trading volume was light and the stock moves were small. In Europe, markets were mixed. The Dow Jones industrial average rose 26.49 points, or 0.2 percent, to 12,127.95. The Standard & Poor's 500 index closed 7.32 points higher to 1,285.50. The Nasdaq composite index rose 18.10 points to 2,778.11.

Kia Recalls Nearly 73,000 Rios for Air Bag Problem

DETROIT (AP) • Kia Motors America is recalling nearly 73,000 Rio small cars to fix a problem with the front-passenger air bag. The recall affects cars from the 2006 to 2008 model years. A sensor inside the front passenger seat can crack and fail to detect whether a child is sitting in the seat. This means the air bag can inflate in a crash and hurt the child, the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration said Tuesday on its website. Cars are designed so air bags don't deploy if a child is sitting in the front passenger seat. Kia said in the documents that it doesn't know of any injuries stemming from the problem. The cars were built between Feb. 20, 2005 and Dec. 9, 2007. Kia will replace the sensor for free starting in July. Owners with questions can call Kia at (800) 333-4542.

Senate GOP Blocks Democrats' Equal Pay Bill

BY LAURIE KELLMAN
Associated Press

WASHINGTON • Senate Republicans have blocked a bill that calls for equal pay in the workplace. As expected, the vote Tuesday fell short of the 60 votes needed to advance the legislation. President Obama and his Democratic allies argue that the legislation is needed to protect people who try to find out how their pay stacks up against their coworkers. Republicans said it puts too much burden on employers. The vote was the latest effort by Democrats to protect their lead among critical women voters this presidential and congressional election year. Republicans are focusing on the No. 1 concern for all voters: jobs and the economy. Obama strongly supports the bill. Republican presidential hopeful Mitt Romney has not taken a stand but his campaign says he favors pay equity in the workplace.

ELECTRONIC ENTERTAINMENT EXPO

'NintendoLand,' 'Mario Bros.' Coming to Nintendo's Wii U

Nintendo unleashed 23 games for its upcoming console featuring a touchscreen controller at the Electronic Entertainment Expo, or E3, the gaming industry's annual trade show.

BY DERRIK J. LANG
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES • Nintendo is relying on a famous plumber, zombies and a virtual theme park to build buzz for the Wii U.

The Japanese gaming giant unleashed 23 games for its upcoming console featuring a touchscreen controller during a news conference Tuesday at the Electronic Entertainment Expo, the gaming industry's annual trade show.

Among the titles announced were the cooperative platform game "New Super Mario Bros. U" and the amusement-park-themed mini-game collection "NintendoLand." Nintendo also demonstrated the fantastical strategy sequel "Pikmin 3" and first-person undead-fighting game "ZombiU" from Ubisoft Entertainment.

The titles employed what the company is dubbing "asymmetric gameplay," which gives players using the 6.2-inch touchscreen controller called the Wii U GamePad a different experience than those armed with traditional Wii controllers. The Wii U will be compatible with previous Wii controllers, including the Wii Nunchuk and Wii Balance Board.

"When we launched the Wii at the press conference in 2006, people were still wondering what this thing is all about," said Reggie Fils-Aime, president of Nintendo of America, backstage after the press conference. "To make a comparison of where we are with the Wii U vs. the Wii, I think we're actually much further along. I say that because here at this press conference, we're able to show off over 20 games, and we've got fantastic third-party support."

Nintendo illustrated that "New Super Mario Bros. U" could be played on either a TV or the touchscreen controller, and that the latest installment in the brick-smashing, coin-collecting franchise would allow up to four players to play simultaneously with traditional controllers, while another could join in with the touchscreen controller to jab enemies and build platforms from afar.

"With the Wii U GamePad, we have the first dedicated personal screen in the long history of game machines," Shigeru Miyamoto, who created "Super Mario Bros." and "Legend of Zelda," said at the news conference through a translator.

Other games announced for the successor to the popular Wii console included the fitness title "Wii Fit U," a sing-and-dance-along game called "SiNG" and the word-filled puzzler "Scribblenauts Unlimited" from Warner Bros. Interactive Entertainment.

Nintendo Co. jumped ahead of rivals Microsoft Corp. and Sony Corp. to build hype at E3 by streaming an online video Sunday revealing that the touchscreen controller would be called the Wii U GamePad. The company also announced Sunday that it would release a traditional controller outfitted with two analog sticks called the Wii U Pro Controller, and that the Wii U's interface would be an online virtual hub called Miiverse.

Fils-Aime said Wii U users would be able to connect to the Miiverse, which is populated by cartoony Nintendo avatars called Miis, with Internet-enabled smartphones, tablets and other devices after the console's launch.

Microsoft and Sony showed off similar second-screen capabilities Monday. Microsoft unveiled an app called Xbox SmartGlass that would allow users to stream and share content across their TVs, tablets and smartphones using the Xbox 360, while Sony continued to hype what it calls "cross-play" between its PlayStation 3 console and PlayStation Vita hand-held device.

No price or release date was announced for the Wii U system, which was unveiled last year at E3. The tablet-like Wii U GamePad is equipped with an infrared transceiver, gyroscope and accelerometer. It also has a camera, stylus, two analog sticks and multiple buttons.

Fils-Aime said the Wii U console would work with two Wii U GamePads, but that feature was not demonstrated Tuesday.

Nintendo also previewed a trio of games for its 3DS handheld device starring its famous plumber siblings: "New Super Mario Bros. 2," introducing a golden Mario, "Paper Mario: Sticker Star" presenting a 2-D version of the protagonist in 3-D, and "Luigi's Mansion: Dark Moon" focusing on Mario's ghost-capturing brother.

Following the news conference at the Nokia Theatre, long lines of people snaked around the Nintendo booth inside the Los Angeles Convention Center as they waited to try "NintendoLand," which features mini-games inspired by 12 different Nintendo franchises, such as "Legend of Zelda," "Animal Crossing" and "Donkey Kong."

Buffett's Company Discloses Lee Enterprises Stake

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) • Billionaire Warren Buffett's company disclosed Tuesday that it owns about 3.2 percent of the stock of newspaper company Lee Enterprises Inc.

Buffett's Berkshire Hathaway Inc., disclosed that it owned 1.66 million shares of Lee's stock as of March 31.

The company made the disclosure after the Securities and Exchange Commission refused to let Buffett keep the investment confidential. The SEC often lets Buffett conceal investment moves while he's trying them because so many investors try to copy him.

Lee's stock surged 31 percent, or 36 cents, to $1.51 in after-hours trading after Berkshire disclosed its investment. It had closed Tuesday at $1.15, unchanged.

Last month, Berkshire announced a deal to buy 63 newspapers from Media General Inc. for $142 million. And Buffett has said Berkshire may buy more newspapers in the future despite the challenges the industry faces.

Lee, based in Davenport, Iowa, publishes the Twin Falls Times-News, St. Louis Post-Dispatch and other newspapers.

Eyes onto Mobile as Video Game Expo Starts in L.A.

The Electronic Entertainment Expo conference, which officially started Tuesday in Los Angeles, is still the place to showcase all the big blockbusters and flashy console games, but games for smartphones and tablets are increasingly in the minds of game developers.

BY BARBARA ORTUTAY
Associated Press

NEW YORK • Games for smartphones, tablet computers and Facebook are becoming essential for major video game companies even as the industry's largest U.S. trade show remains largely a showcase for their latest flashy console titles.

The Electronic Entertainment Expo conference kicked off in Los Angeles on Tuesday amid a startling reality for the industry: Revenue from traditional video games is on the decline, despite more people playing games than ever.

Even the companies best known for hardcore shooters and racing games can't ignore those dynamics in the age of "Angry Birds" and "Words With Friends."

For instance, Take-Two Interactive Software Inc., the company behind hardcore console games such as "Grand Theft Auto" and "BioShock," is unveiling several mobile games at the show this week. One of them is inspired by this year's presidential elections — "Comedy Central's Indecision Game."

Zynga Inc., whose games are played mainly on Facebook and mobile devices, will have a presence at E3 for the first time. Though the company isn't planning any announcements, it will be meeting with game developers at the conference.

In many ways, the video game industry itself is following the career trajectory of "Words With Friends" creator Paul Bettner.

Bettner had worked on hardcore video games such as "Halo" for some 15 years before the birth of the iPhone inspired him and his brother to create "Words With Friends." That game went on to become highly popular, famously credited with getting actor Alec Baldwin kicked off an airplane for not shutting it off at takeoff.

Now, when Bettner thinks about what games he wants to create next, he thinks about what games his wife would want to play.

"That's another way of saying what games does everyone want to play?" he says.

Nick Earl, the head of Electronic Arts Inc.'s mobile and social studios, sees all game labels bringing their best titles to mobile devices.

He cites EA's "FIFA" soccer games as a good example. Separate versions are available for game consoles and mobile devices.

Earl says the mobile versions help expand the gaming audience, with newcomers and returning players who have not been gaming for a while.

"The iPhone initially started out at pure mass-casual games, like 'Scrabble,'" he says. Now, the games are becoming more serious, more immersive and, especially on tablets, more like the games people are used to playing in their living rooms.

Players "want to be able to dive into the game regardless of what device they are on," Earl says.

While people typically buy traditional video games up front, paying as much as $60 a disc for the latest blockbuster, mobile games are generally free or cheap to play.

Actress Kaley Cuoco uses a mobile phone on March 23 as she sits with an unidentified man courtside at the NBA basketball game between the Portland Trail Blazers and Los Angeles Lakers in Los Angeles.

For free games, companies make money when gamers pay a few dollars here and there for optional virtual items and more in-depth experiences. Paid games typically cost less than $7.

Even if relatively few people end up paying, it's often enough because mobile games cost less to make and distribute than traditional games, which can cost tens of millions of dollars to develop.

Games for the iPhone, the iPad and Android devices are more popular than ever. Of the 10 most popular paid apps on iTunes, five are games.

By contrast, brick-and-mortar retail sales of video games discs, consoles and accessories declined in the double-digit percentages in the first four months of 2012, compared with a year earlier, according to the latest numbers available from market researcher NPD Group.

That said, the majority of the industry's revenue is still generated from traditional games. About two-thirds of the roughly $1 billion that people spent on games in April went to new, physical retail games, according to NPD.

That's one reason companies are still making new blockbusters. At E3, EA is showcasing games such as the shooter "Battlefield 3," "Need for Speed Most Wanted" and "Dead Space 3," for example. But mobile games offer the potential to tap into a new audience.

"Revenue is rising, but the number of players is rising faster," Gartner analyst Brian Blau says of the overall game software market. "Not all players are being monetized to the fullest extent."

Zynga, for example, has some 250 million people playing its games on Facebook each month, but only a small number of them pay money for the virtual cows, poker chips and other digital items.

Zynga partly makes up for it by releasing games and updates every couple of months rather than once or twice a year, as traditional game companies do. Its popular titles include "FarmVille," "Zynga Poker" and "Draw Something." Zynga has also bought Bettner's "Words with Friends" and employs him to create more titles.

If companies such as Zynga can get more people to pay, it could mean big opportunity for a genre that is still in its early stages.

For small-time game developers, the fact that it's much easier to create an iPhone game app than a blockbuster shooter for the Xbox is spurring new job prospects.

"A few years ago, independent developers couldn't support themselves making mobile games," says Joe Minton, the president of Digital Development Management, a talent agency for video game developers.

But mobile games are becoming so popular that now they can. He notes that in the U.K., most of the large console game companies are gone, and smaller mobile game developers have sprung up in their place.

One remaining hurdle might be attracting the most dedicated gamers.

Rob Pardo, vice president of game design at "Diablo III" developer Blizzard, believes mobile and social gamers moving to the hardcore realm would need to be a natural transition. It's not something the industry could force, but needs to be something that players themselves want.

"What I'm excited to see is when these social gamers start wanting something with higher fidelity and a little bit more gameplay, maybe they'll come to 'Diablo III' or 'Diablo IV,'" he said.

Wind Power Execs: Tax Credit Needed to Keep Jobs

ATLANTA (AP) • A stalled effort to renew federal tax credits for the wind power industry is making it hard to keep employees on the payroll and plan for expansion, a group of executives said Tuesday, but two high-profile Washington figures advised them not to expect help until after the November election.

The Production Tax Credit, the primary cost-saving policy for the industry, expires at the end of the year and the executives said their companies are already feeling the effects.

"The issue is, the longer you wait, the more critical (the tax credit) becomes," said Jan Blittersdorf president of Vermont-based NRG Systems, a 25-year-old company that manufactures goods for the industry. "This is really serious. This is the first time in 30 years we've had to do layoffs and once you start to dismantle this system it's hard to put it back together."

TO THE BERRY END

Lee Slack, who has picked berries at the Raugust Strawberry Farm since the 1980s, hugs owner Arlen Raugust, left, on Saturday.

For decades, the Raugust you-pick strawberry fields have been an iconic summer experience in Magic Valley. But this season — both early and short — will be the last one.

BY TETONA DUNLAP
tdunlap@magicvalley.com

JEROME • The sun beat down from a cloudless sky as Arlen Raugust picked strawberries to fill an order. His only defense from midday heat and wind was a Raugust Strawberry Farm cap as he stooped over dry dirt sprinkled with glistening, crimson fruits.

The best time to pick is the morning, when cool temperatures and overnight watering make the strawberries firm and plump. But Arlen and his wife,

Arlen Raugust

Connie, didn't have any pickers this year to help them; younger relatives have already retired from the fields, and their sons have moved to other states.

"They found easier ways to make a living," Arlen said.

So the couple did all the hoeing and harvesting this year, even in the heat of late afternoon. But they won't next year. The fields where generations of Magic Valley strawberry lovers have filled their own buckets each spring will grow hay instead.

CSI's Family Science Night Is Hands-on with Food

BURLEY • College of Southern Idaho science professor Bill Ebener will teach a hands-on "Family Science Night: Food Science" in both Gooding and Burley this summer, for CSI's Community Education Center.

It's for the whole family, and this is one night when Mom and Dad won't tell the kids not to play with their food. This class will also contain a short introduction to STEM (Science, Technology, Engineering and Mathematics) and give suggestions on how to incorporate its concepts into a family's routine and conversations.

The class will be 6-8 p.m. June 12 on CSI's Gooding campus, and 6-8 p.m. July 9 on CSI's Burley campus. Cost of $9 per person includes supplies. Register: communityed.csi.edu or 732-6442.

Class Teaches Kids Almost Homemade Cooking in Gooding

GOODING • Wendy Willet will teach a kids' cooking class, "Almost Homemade," next week in Gooding for the College of Southern Idaho's North Side Community Education Center.

She'll teach kids in fourth through seventh grades to cook snacks and meals with the taste of homemade — but the ease of 21st-century convenience. Class will be 10 a.m. to noon June 11 at the Extension Office kitchen in Gooding. Cost is $20 plus a $7 supply fee.

Some Great Options for Al Fresco Dining

BY ANDREW WEEKS
aweeks@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • A light breeze rustled the napkins as Marian and Clint Andrews finished their meal on the patio of Canyon Crest Dining and Event Center.

The food was good, the Wendell couple said. But so was the view — one of the reasons they made the 30-minute drive to eat at the Twin Falls restaurant. "We really enjoy both," Marian said.

Jade Sparrow and Chris Umbaugh sat nearby, waiting for their meals.

"I really like the view," Jade said. "The fresh air is nice."

While not all the places that offer al fresco dining have views of the Snake River Canyon or the Sawtooth Mountains, they all offer one thing in common: fresh air.

Got a hankering to eat outside? This isn't a complete listing, but here are some places in south-central Idaho for you to try:

Canyon Crest Dining and Event Center, Twin Falls

How many people can sit outside? The patio has room for about 120 people, said restaurant manager Chris Blom. It's rare that the patio is full, but tables are spread out on different levels so it wouldn't seem cramped if it were.

What's the atmosphere? "Last year we won first place in a Reader's Choice award for outdoor dining," he said. "Our patio oversees both golf courses, the Snake River Canyon and Perrine Bridge."

When is it open? The patio opens for appetizers and drinks at 3 p.m., and at 4 p.m. you can start ordering from the dinner menu.

What if it's chilly? "We have three fire pits, tiki torches and other heating for chili nights," Blom said.

Enjoying a spectacular view, Jean Nerrick-Eldridge and Larry Eldridge talk Saturday after a meal at Canyon Crest Dining and Event Center in Twin Falls. ED GLAZAR • FOR THE TIMES-NEWS

Anchor Bistro and Bar, Twin Falls

How many people? Anchor has room for around 50 people on its outdoor patio, manager Josh Popa said.

What's the atmosphere? Three large umbrellas, tall grasses and a Plexiglas wall characterize this patio along Blue Lakes Boulevard. "We also have some ottomans for people to sit on and enjoy the sun."

When is it open? "Pretty much whenever we are during nice weather," Popa said. "We open the patio in spring and summer, and close it down when it starts cooling off."

What if it's chilly? "Now that the weather is getting nicer, more people are wanting to eat outdoors," Popa said. "But if someone gets cold we have four heaters that we can move outside."

Contact: 733-6566.

River Rock Grill, Twin Falls

How many people? About 200 people can fit inside the restaurant and 24 on its outdoor sidewalk, owner Jane McCarron said. Tables and chairs wrap around the building on two sides; one faces Blue Lakes Boulevard, the other Magic Valley Mall.

What's the atmosphere? "We just opened last year, and I'm not sure that a lot of people know about it yet," McCarron said. "But I think it's nice. I have a couple of returning customers who really like it. ... We have red-and-white checkered tablecloths."

When is it open? The patio is set up by about Mother's Day and

Dinner in 35 Minutes: Asparagus Risotto

BONNIE S. BENWICK
The Washington Post

Rich-tasting and just right for working in the slender, new asparagus of the season.

Serve with a salad of peppery greens. Adapted from “The Naptime Chef: Fitting Great Food Into Family Life,” by Kelsey Banfield (Running Press, 2012).

Brown Butter Asparagus Risotto 4 servings.

4 cups no-salt-added homemade or store-bought chicken broth
1 pound asparagus, preferably of equal thinness
1 medium yellow onion
5 tablespoons unsalted butter
1 1/2 cups uncooked arborio rice
1/2 cup dry white wine
1/2 teaspoon kosher salt (optional)
1/2 cup freshly grated Parmigiano-Reggiano cheese
Pinch freshly ground black pepper

Bring a wide pot of water to a boil over high heat. Heat the broth in a large saucepan over medium heat.

Trim the asparagus by breaking off the tough ends (where they break naturally). Finely chop the onion to yield about 1 cup. Add the asparagus to the water and cook for about 3 minutes, until barely tender. Drain and cut crosswise into 2-inch pieces.

Heat 4 tablespoons of the butter in a large saute pan over medium heat. It will bubble and turn golden brown, smelling nutty. Keep the butter moving in the pan so its solids don't burn. Add the onion and stir to coat; cook for 4 or 5 minutes until it is softened and on its way to translucent.

Stir in the rice, then carefully pour in the wine, using a wooden spoon to scrape any browned bits from the bottom of the pan. Ladle 1/2 cup-increments of the hot broth into the pan, cooking and stirring each time until it is absorbed before adding the next. Use all the broth. The rice should be tender and creamy. Taste and season with salt if needed (keeping in mind that cheese will be added). Remove from the heat.

Stir in the cheese and the remaining tablespoon of butter, until the latter is completely incorporated. Gently stir in the asparagus pieces, then season with pepper to taste.

Divide among wide, shallow bowls. Serve warm.

BY MICHAEL HILL
Associated Press

Carbs? Calories? Fat? They are so very last decade. Dieters and would-be healthy eaters know the nutrient of the moment being tallied, sought and bought is protein.

Spurred by trainers, diet gurus and weight-loss plans, Americans are seeking more — and more unique — sources of protein, from almonds ground into milk and soy reshaped as pasta, to peas and whey turned into powders and shakes. And food producers are happy to oblige.

Powders and energy bars packed with 20, 30 or even more grams of protein per serving are selling briskly. Supermarket shelves once crowded with foods boasting of being high in fiber or low in fat now are jammed with claims of protein content. Yet this is happening even as Americans eat less meat, the go-to source of protein for generations.

“People are getting smarter about foods in general,” said Phil Lempert, a food marketing expert known as The Supermarket Guru. He sees higher meat prices driving people to other sources of protein, a movement that is becoming more pronounced this year.

“Longer term, I think you're going to see people starting to look at more vegetables and different combinations to create proteins like rice and beans.”

Amanda Perry — an on-the-go mom with two jobs and a 1-year-old — is a good example. She counts on lots of protein to keep her feeling full and full of energy. But she needs it to be portable, so she often mixes protein powder with almond milk, maybe a banana and some peanut butter.

“It's easily portable, which I think is awesome for busy people because you're on the run,” said Perry, a 31-year-old personal trainer who owns a gym in Chelmsford, Mass., with her husband. “You can't really take a chicken breast or a piece of steak with you if you're going to be out for several hours.”

Red meat, a rich source of protein, is going through an especially bumpy run. Prices are up, and so are health concerns about beef and its saturated fat content. Americans are expected to consume about 15 percent less beef per capita this year compared with 2007, according to Steiner & Co., an economic consultant to the food industry. Per capita consumption of all red meat and poultry is expected to be down by 10 percent over the same period.

But if forces are pushing people away from meat, health conscious Americans are simultaneously being lured to other sources of protein, such as nuts, beans, soy and seafood.

Protein has had popularity peaks before — think of the Atkins diet craze not so many years ago — though this time there are a chorus of voices touting the benefits of protein-heavy regimens like the Paleo Diet, which stresses the lean meats and wild plants eaten by our ancestors. And it's being helped along by accumulating evidence that plant-based protein can lower cholesterol levels and have other beneficial effects.

A trip down the grocery aisle shows food makers are tuned in to this trend and happy to engage shoppers about it, from Yoplait Greek yogurts (“2X protein”) to Boca meatless lasagna (“21 g protein”) to Perdue chicken breast tenders (“excellent source of protein”).

Like your protein concentrated? Analysts say sales are up for high-protein bars.

PORK INDUSTRY GIVES SOWS ROOM TO MOVE

TIM CARMAN
The Washington Post

About 12 years ago, whenever she took a flight somewhere, Temple Grandin would turn her seatmates into impromptu survey subjects. The noted animal scientist showed them two sets of photos: one in which sows were confined in gestation crates and another in which the female pigs roamed in indoor barns. None of the photos were inflammatory or designed to manipulate emotions, she says.

Grandin says two-thirds of the 30 or so people who saw the pictures had “a real problem with gestation crates,” those tightly confining steel cages that often don't provide enough room for pregnant sows to roll over. “No one in the general public thought it was wonderful,” Grandin says of the crates. Public referendums, she adds, would later confirm her informal survey, as with the 2008 ballot proposition in California where residents voted to ban, among other confinement systems, the gestation crate. The law passed with 63 percent of the vote.

It would appear that corporate America is catching up to public opinion. Since December, a string of fast-food chains, pork producers and other major companies have committed to raising sows without gestation crates or buying meat from suppliers that have dumped the confinement system. It started late last year when Smithfield Foods, the nation's largest pork producer, announced that 30 percent of its own sows would be moved from gestation crates to group housing by the end of 2011, a sign the company was at last fulfilling a pledge it had made in 2007.

In January, Hormel Foods decided to jump on board, announcing it would convert all of its company-owned farms to group sow housing before 2018. A month later, McDonald's promised to work with its suppliers to eliminate gestation crates, and two of the fast-food giant's competitors, Burger King and Wendy's, soon followed suit. Others have joined the movement this year as well: Denny's, Safeway and two food-service companies, the Compass Group and Bon Appetit Management.

Participants inside (and outside) the pork and restaurant industries say this seemingly sudden movement against gestation crates actually has been in the works for years, the result of a number of factors. Prime among them, as Grandin indicates, is public opinion. To date, eight states have passed laws prohibiting the crates, including Florida, Arizona, Colorado and Michigan. Some of those laws were approved in public referendums, like California's, which garnered more than 60 percent of the vote.

A Vegan Use for Jicama

THE WASHINGTON POST

This salad needs to be refrigerated for 20 to 30 minutes before serving. Adapted from “Pure Vegan,” by Joseph Shuldiner (Chronicle, 2012).

Jicama Salad

Makes 6 to 8 cups.

4 green onions or 7 scallions, white and green parts
Leaves from 1 bunch cilantro, coarsely chopped, plus a few leaves for garnish
1 medium jalapeno pepper, stemmed, seeded and coarsely chopped
1 cup vegan mayonnaise, preferably Vegemaise brand

Juice of 2 limes (2 to 4 tablespoons)
1 chipotle pepper in adobo
1 teaspoon salt
Freshly ground black pepper
1 large jicama (about 2 pounds)

Combine the onions, cilantro, jalapeno, mayonnaise, lime juice, chipotle pepper and salt in the food processor and process until smooth. Season the dressing with black pepper to taste. Peel the jicama and cut it in half. Cut each half into 1/8-inch-thick slices. Working with stacks of a few slices at a time, cut the jicama lengthwise into 1/8-inch-thick matchsticks, then crosswise into 1/8-inch dice. Transfer to a large mixing bowl.

Combine the jicama with the desired amount of dressing. (Depending on the size of your jicama, you might not use all of the dressing.) Cover and refrigerate for 20 to 30 minutes to allow the flavors to develop. Serve garnished with cilantro sprigs.

Per 1/2-cup serving (based on 8 cups): 120 calories, 0 g protein, 6 g carbohydrates, 9 g fat, 1 g saturated fat, 0 mg cholesterol, 250 mg sodium, 3 g dietary fiber, 1 g sugar.

Farm

Want that you-pick experience one more time at Raugust Strawberry Farm? Don't delay. The farm's berry season opened early and will be short.

After tossing a handful of strawberries into a bucket Thursday, Arlen paused and looked across a field his family has worked for more than 40 years.

"It's been coming for a while. We determined four years ago that this would be the last year," Arlen said.

Arlen's father, Valentine Raugust, started growing strawberries in Jerome in 1938, and Arlen took over the business in 1969.

"They retired when Dad was 60 and Mom was 54, and we took over when we were 20," Arlen said. "Now we are 64 this year and we figured we paid our dues."

It's not exactly retirement. They'll still farm, she'll still be a school cafeteria cashier and he'll still keep stats at Jerome basketball games. But Arlen and Connie look forward to traveling and fishing together, and Connie would like to garden — on a much smaller scale.

"It's really going to seem strange," Connie said. "After work at the school I come home and grab a hoe and we will be out there until after dark. It will be nice to have a regular supptime. The strawberries have demanded so much."

The Raugusts were even busier this season because their strawberry crops matured faster than in the past. The fields were ripe for picking May 26, and usually the farm doesn't open until early or mid-June. The berries' early arrival might be because the Raugusts used last year's field, instead of rotating to a different patch of land, but they didn't expect such an early start.

"It's like an Easter egg hunt, berries are everywhere," Arlen said.

Usually the couple kept a book filled with names of people who wanted to come pick or have berries picked for them before crowds swarmed the fields. Last year that list had 250 to 300 names on it. This year there were only 48.

Arlen predicts another week and the strawberries will be done, so the sooner pickers come out, the better.

"Once we start advertising we have no control over it," he said. "When they're on, they're on, and when they're gone, they're gone."

Kathy Groves, 63, still remembers the first time she was able to pick strawberries at the farm. Children younger than 12 weren't allowed in the fields.

"You were certainly excited when you were old enough to go to the patch," Groves said.

That was 51 years ago, and Groves still visits the strawberry patches every year, bucket in hand, eyes honed on the plumppest and reddest of the bunch. Last week she went one last time, with her husband and 88-year-old father. Together they picked 10 gallons, and Groves plans to make freezer jam and strawberry sauces.

"I'm very sad ...," Groves said. "We are losing two things, an opportunity for young people to learn how the Earth provides food and not just the grocery store. We are also losing a major business."

The strawberry can be a sweet business, but it's not without thistles and weeds.

Before the weather warms, Arlen is often up all hours, tending to the strawberries so they don't freeze. It's been that way for so many years that he often finds himself awake at night even when he doesn't need to be.

The cost of plants has also increased since the days of his father's strawberry farm. Gone is the time when he could transplant his own strawberry plants. Today's plants are tissue culture hybrids made in a lab and sold in nurseries, and planting a four-acre field can cost around $3,700, Arlen said. Then factor in small-business worries such as workers' compensation, the price of machinery and hoeing for 60 hours a week, and you're in the strawberry business.

"All of these things bite into the product, and the last few years it felt like we were doing a public service," he said. "We can afford to eat at McDonald's but not at Applebee's. You do make a good living, if you are frugal with your money?"

Despite the peaks and valleys, the Raugusts' strawberry fields have been a popular icon, attracting customers from beyond Idaho's borders.

"I think I'm going to miss the people I see once a year. You know them on a first-name basis and you visit with them," Connie said. "But there has to be life after strawberries."

The farthest visitors came from Samoa when a high school exchange student's family came to visit. They thought strawberries grew on trees.

"It amazes me how many people travel through. I'm going to write a book called 'Dealing with the Public,'" Arlen said.

"I come out with my mom and my aunt and we have fun," said Veronica Lancaster, 15, of Jerome.

Lancaster has visited Raugust Strawberry Farm for three years, since she turned 12. Friday, she picked one last time with her mom and a friend. Her 10-year-old brother had to sit in the car while the three filled buckets.

"It sucks, we won't have such good strawberries anymore," Lancaster said. "The strawberries are wonderful, they are amazing."

Barbara Miller of Eden has picked off and on for the past decade. "I come when I need berries. I enjoy the nice weather, when the wind doesn't blow."

With only an hour or so under her belt — hunched over the foliage hunting for signs of ruby red — Miller was ready to retire for the day. She'd picked six gallons the day before and now had added four more buckets to her haul.

"The dirt isn't so bad, it's the berry juice that stains your hands, but they are so sweet ...," she said. "They are going to be missed very much!"

How many people? La Fiesta's small patio can accommodate up to about 24 customers, manager Moises Segovia said.

What's the atmosphere? This covered patio sits near a parking lot at the restaurant. It's not really scenic because of the sea of nearby cars, but on a warm evening it's like having a picnic, Segovia said.

"I think just being outside is nice," he said. "I think it's kind of like being at home, like when you want to eat in your backyard."

When is it open? The patio is available for use whenever the restaurant is open during the summer, 11 a.m. to 10 p.m. Monday-Thursday and 11 a.m. to 11 p.m. Friday-Saturday.

What if it's chilly? Sorry, no fire pits or heaters on this patio. Move inside.

What's the atmosphere? Visitors get a view of the nearby Sawtooth Mountains. That — and the food, of course — is the big draw, Becky said. Oatmeal pancakes are popular for breakfast, and a turkey, bacon and avocado sandwich at lunch.

When is it open? Outside dining is open as long as the bakery is, 7 a.m. to 2 p.m.

What if it's chilly? There are no fire pits here, so eat inside.

Stanley Hotel, Stanley

How many people? About 40 people can sit outside on the wraparound patio at Sawtooth Hotel, owner Kelly Kerns said. The restaurant is open to hotel guests as well as those just stopping by for a bite.

What's the atmosphere? The food is the main draw, Kerns said, noting that much of it is organically grown in Idaho. But eating outside against the shade of the Sawtooth Mountains is another.

The restaurant accommodates large groups, and outfitters often stop by. But those with 10 or more in their party must call ahead, Kerns said.

When is it open? 5-9:30 p.m. Thursday-Monday. "Right now we're open five days a week," Kerns said. "But we plan to open seven."

What if it's chilly? "Sometimes we'll have some fire pits going," Kerns said. If you eat inside, you can still see the mountains through large windows.

A Healthy (but Creamy) Potato Salad for Summer

BY ALISON LADMAN
For The Associated Press

So you're having a barbecue and you want to keep it at least a little healthy.

You've got the lean chicken breasts marinating and ready for the grill. You've got a colorful tossed salad filled with the season's bounty. You've got corn on the cob for grilling and fresh watermelon and strawberries for nibbling. That's a good start.

But you also know that no American summer barbecue is complete without a creamy and rich potato salad. Except you also know just how unhealthy a potato salad smothered in mayonnaise can be. The good news is that you can enjoy a great potato salad without sacrificing your commitment to healthy eating.

Here are our tips for making that happen.

First, make sure you leave the skins on the potatoes. Potato skins contain much of the potatoes' fiber, as well as heaps of vitamins and minerals, including a crazy amount of potassium (even more than bananas).

Second, replace the commonly added hard-boiled egg. While eggs do add plenty of protein, if you're barbecuing it's unlikely that protein deprivation is your problem. And egg yolks also add plenty of unnecessary fat. So we replaced the egg with chopped canned artichoke hearts, which have a similar texture and a wonderfully subtle flavor that complements the potatoes.

Third, and possibly most important, you need to overhaul the mayonnaise dressing. Adding just 1/2 cup of regular mayonnaise can add 800 calories and 90 grams of fat to the salad. And really, who stops at just 1/2 cup? You certainly could dress a potato salad in a light vinaigrette, but we wanted to stick to the traditional creamy salad for this recipe.

So we reached for one of our favorite no-fat creamy dairy products, Greek yogurt. It is a versatile, healthy ingredient that adds significant creamy flavor and texture.

We finished with a handful of fresh herbs and some tangy vinegar to punch up the flavor, then we had a potato salad we could be proud of setting out on our (healthy!) barbecue table.

Creamy Potato Salad with Artichokes and Herbs

Start to finish: 1 hour (20 minutes active). Servings: 6.

- 2 pounds red potatoes, cubed
- Salt
- 1 tablespoon white balsamic vinegar
- 5.3-ounce container fat-free plain Greek yogurt

- 1/4 cup low-fat sour cream
- 3 scallions, thinly sliced
- 1 tablespoon Dijon mustard
- 2 teaspoons minced fresh dill
- 2 teaspoons minced fresh thyme
- 1/4 teaspoon garlic powder
- Ground black pepper
- 4-ounce jar chopped pimentos
- 14-ounce can artichoke bottoms, drained
- 2 ribs celery, diced

Place the potatoes in a large pot, then add enough cool water to cover by 1 inch. Add 1 teaspoon of salt, then bring to a boil and cook for 10 to 15 minutes, or until just tender when pierced with a fork. Drain the potatoes and spread out on a rimmed baking sheet. Sprinkle with the vinegar and set aside to cool.

Meanwhile, in a large bowl, combine the yogurt, sour cream, scallions, mustard, dill, thyme and garlic powder. Season with salt and pepper, to taste. Stir in the pimentos, artichoke bottoms and celery. Once the potatoes have cooled, gently stir in until thoroughly coated. Chill until ready to serve.

Per serving: 190 calories; 10 calories from fat (5 percent of total calories); 1 g fat (0.5 g saturated; 0 g trans fats); 5 mg cholesterol; 38 g carbohydrate; 7 g protein; 7 g fiber; 670 mg sodium.

Try Phyllo Dough and Leftovers in Quiche

BY SUSAN M. SELASKY
Detroit Free Press

Just when you thought you couldn't stand to look at another egg, there's a carton staring at you in the refrigerator. Or perhaps you have leftover asparagus, the harbinger of spring often served as a spring side dish.

One quick and easy way to use both is to make a quiche.

The main part of a quiche is a custard mixture of eggs, milk and/or cream, cheese and some seasonings poured into a partially baked pie shell. Other ingredients like sauteed mushrooms, onions or other vegetables or things such as ham, sausage or seafood often are added to the custard. Or they are set in the bottom of the pie crust before pouring the custard in.

Quiche can be served with a side salad of mixed greens tossed in a light vinaigrette for lunch or dinner. Quiche is also a good make-ahead-and-reheat dish that is easy to make, especially if you use a store-bought crust.

Many quiche recipes call for using a single pastry crust made with butter and shortening.

In today's recipe, phyllo dough is used. If you're not familiar with phyllo (Fee-loh) dough, it's delicate, tissue-thin sheets of pastry. It's used a lot in Greek and Middle Eastern dishes or pastries.

Phyllo works great, is a nice change to the standard pastry crust and a way to reduce the fat. One sheet of phyllo has 1 gram of fat. Today's recipe calls for 8 sheets of phyllo, which accounts for 8 grams of fat in the crust. A typical store-bought pastry crust has 65 grams of fat for the entire crust.

What scares people away from using phyllo is the sheets have a tendency to tear. This does happen, but all you need to do is wrap or top it with another sheet of phyllo over the tear.

Most recipes call for brushing the sheets with melted butter and layering on top of each other. When you brush the sheets, do so in streaks and don't saturate the sheets or they will get soggy, tear or fall apart when you stack them. You also can spray them with nonstick spray.

Most grocery stores sell phyllo frozen for about $3. Athens is a common brand. Buy the box with the smaller size sheets (about 9-by-14-inch). This smaller size comes packaged in two separate rolls and is individually sealed. And it's much easier to work with.

Always thaw phyllo in the refrigerator and not at room temperature. You can re-freeze, well wrapped, what portions you don't use.

Bring phyllo dough to room temperature just before using, and always keep the unused portion covered with a damp towel.

Asparagus Quiche with Phyllo Crust

Makes: One 9-inch quiche (8 slices). Preparation time:

15 minutes. Total time: 1 hour.

- 4 eggs
- 1 cup low-fat milk
- 1/2 cup fat-free or low-fat half-and-half
- 1 1/4 cups Italian-blend cheese
- 3 tablespoons all-purpose flour
- 1/2 teaspoon dried Italian seasoning
- Salt and pepper to taste
- 8 sheets phyllo dough, thawed, 9-by-14-inch sheets
- 3 tablespoons unsalted butter, melted
- 2 teaspoons olive oil
- 1 1/2 cups asparagus, cut in 1-inch pieces (plus 8 spears, about 3 inches long, with tips)
- 1 1/2 cups frozen leaf spinach
- 4 thin slices of tomatoes

Preheat the oven to 350 degrees. Have ready a 9-inch deep-dish pie plate. In a medium bowl, whisk together the milk, half-and-half, cheese, Italian seasoning, flour, salt and pepper. Set aside.

Set the phyllo on a clean work surface and cover with a damp paper towel. Working with one sheet at a time, brush it lightly in streaks with the melted butter. Place one sheet in the pie plate in the center allowing at least 1 inch to hang over the edge. Brush another sheet and place it on top of the first one crosswise. Continue brushing the sheets with butter and layering them in this fashion, making sure you have an overhang around the entire edge. Fold the overhang over to form an edge and brush with butter.

Bake for 6-8 minutes.

Meanwhile, in a small skillet, heat the olive oil. Add the asparagus pieces and saute 3 to 5 minutes. Add the spinach and saute 2 minutes or until almost dry. Season with salt and pepper to taste.

Remove partially baked phyllo crust from the oven. Place the asparagus-spinach mixture over the bottom of the crust. Pour the milk mixture over the asparagus. Arrange tomato slices in the center and then arrange the 8 asparagus spears in a circular pattern out from the tomato slices.

Bake 30 to 35 minutes or until filling is set and slightly puffy. If the edges begin to brown too quickly, cover them loosely with foil.

When filling is set, remove from oven and let sit 10 minutes before slicing and serving.

Halloumi: What It Is and How to Use It

BY J.M. HIRSCH
Associated Press

You'll probably feel pretty stupid calling it "squeaky cheese," but as soon as you take a bite you'll understand why it makes sense.

Sometimes called Greek grilling cheese, halloumi is just that — a dense cheese that holds its shape and won't drip through the grates when grilled. And when you chew it? It makes a squeaky sound against your teeth.

Luckily, mouth noises aren't the real selling point of this cheese. Taste and versatility are what will drive you to find this relative of feta cheese.

Traditionally made from sheep's milk on the island of Cyprus, halloumi today often is made from blends of sheep, goat and cow's milk. The taste is tangy and salty with a mild "milky" flavor — all characteristics that make it an excellent base for other flavors.

Now, as to that melting thing. Or rather, lack of.

Halloumi is one of a small class of cheeses that do not melt when heated. Others include Latin cuisine's queso blanco and queso de freir, and India's paneer. While these cheeses will soften when heated, they won't change their shape. And it has nothing to do with fat content.

It's all a matter of acid. A cheese with either lots of acid or very little acid won't melt. Halloumi has lots, which is why you really can toss it directly on the grill.

Halloumi is popular throughout the Mediterranean and the Middle East, where it often is cubed and threaded onto skewers for grilling.

So what should you do with it? Try it in this recipe for grilled cheese salad. And for more ideas, check out the Off the Beaten Aisle column over on Food Network: <http://bit.ly/J8awyY>

Grilled Cheese Salads

Feel free to take this salad in any direction that feels right. I kept it simple to let each ingredient shine, but add anything else that appeals to you. Start to finish: 20 minutes. Servings: 4.

- 8.8-ounce package halloumi cheese
- 1 pint cherry or grape tomatoes
- 4 ears corn, husks removed
- 1 medium red onion, halved
- 2 apples (any variety), halved and cored
- Olive oil
- Juice and zest of 1 lemon

MATTHEW MEAD • ASSOCIATED PRESS

- 3 cloves garlic, minced
- 1 teaspoon chopped fresh oregano
- Salt and ground black pepper

Heat the grill to high. Prepare the ingredients for the grill. Slice the halloumi into 4 equal slabs. Thread the tomatoes onto wooden skewers. Brush the corn, onion halves and apple halves with olive oil.

Place the corn on the grill and cook for 5 minutes.

Turn the corn, then add the apples and onions, cut side down, and grill for another 5 minutes. Add the cheese and grill for 3 minutes, then flip the cheese, turn the corn, add the tomatoes and grill for another minute or 2. Transfer everything to a plate and set aside to cool. Meanwhile, in a small bowl whisk together 1/4 cup of olive oil, the lemon juice, garlic and oregano. Season with salt and pepper.

To assemble each salad, set a slab of halloumi on each serving plate.

Cut the kernels off the corn.

To do this, one at a time stand each ear on its wide end and use a serrated knife to saw down the length of it. Roughly chop the onion and apples.

In a medium bowl, gently toss together the corn kernels, tomatoes (removed from the skewers), onions and apples. Drizzle with half of the dressing and toss.

Mound a quarter of the salad mixture over each slab of halloumi, then sprinkle with lemon zest and additional dressing.

A Dad's Day Treat That's Sweet, Bold and Rich

BY ALISON LADMAN
For The Associated Press

According to Hollywood, gentlemen prefer blondes. But what about blondies?

This Father's Day, why not find out? We've dreamed up a white chocolate-studded blondie treat with a duo of tastes that's easy to love — rich coffee and crunchy cashews. We brought it all together in a sweet, rich bar that, thanks to a generous helping of brown sugar, stays moist and chewy with just a hint of crunch on the outside.

Want to take it even further? Sprinkle the top with flaked sea salt just before popping it in the oven. And if Dad doesn't like cashews, peanuts, almonds or walnuts would be good, too. Or maybe you want to add a bit of each.

White Chocolate Coffee Cashew Blondies

Start to finish: 1 hour (20 minutes active). Servings: 9.

- 1 tablespoon water
- 1 tablespoon instant coffee
- 1 teaspoon vanilla extract
- 1/2 cup (1 stick) unsalted butter, room temperature

- 1 1/2 cups packed light brown sugar
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 2 eggs
- 1 3/4 cups all-purpose flour
- 1 cup white chocolate bits
- 1 cup unsalted roasted cashews

Heat the oven to 350 degrees. Coat a 9-by-9-inch baking pan with cooking spray.

In a medium bowl, combine the water, instant coffee and vanilla. Stir until the coffee granules dissolve.

Add the butter, brown sugar and salt. Use an electric mixer or whisk to beat until light and fluffy. Add the eggs, one at a time, beating between additions and scraping down the sides of the bowl. Stir in the flour, then the white chocolate bits and cashews.

Spread the mixture evenly into the prepared pan. Bake for 35 to 40 minutes, or until a toothpick inserted at the center comes out clean. Cool, then cut into 9 squares. Per serving: 530 calories; 220 calories from fat (42 percent of total calories); 24 g fat (12 g saturated; 0 g trans fats); 70 mg cholesterol; 71 g carbohydrate; 8 g protein; 1 g fiber; 260 mg sodium.

CLEANING CORNER

Question: The grout in my tile floor is looking kind of gross. The tiles clean up ok, but the grout still looks dirty. Surely you have a magical solution!

"GOTTA POUT ABOUT MY GROUT!"

Answer: A magician, I'm not...but resourceful I am. You need the HAAN Floor Steamer. This amazing sanitizer uses steam in excess of 212 degrees Fahrenheit. It kills 99.9% of household germs, bacteria and dust mites without the use of any chemicals. It will amazingly clean up your grout as well as every tight corner and crevice of your floors. (On second thought, perhaps I am a magician!)

Disney to Banish Junk-food Ads from Kid Shows

BY CANDICE CHOI
AND J.M. HIRSCH
Associated Press

NEW YORK • Disney says its programming will no longer be sponsored by junk food.

The Walt Disney Co. said Tuesday that it will become the first major media company to ban such ads for its TV channels, radio stations and websites intended for children. That means kids watching Saturday morning children's shows on Disney's ABC network will no longer see ads for fast foods and sugary cereals that don't meet company's nutrition standards.

The guidelines won't go into effect until 2015 because of existing advertising agreements.

First Lady Michelle Obama called the announcement a "game changer" in a statement.

"With this new initiative, Disney is doing what no major media company has ever done before in the U.S. — and what I hope every company will do going forward," Obama said.

Disney says its guidelines are aligned with federal standards to promote the consumption of fruits and vegetables and reduce the intake of sodium, sugar and saturated fat.

The kids' meals offered by traditional fast-food chains may not meet the new advertising guidelines, even if the meals come with healthy side orders, says Leslie Goodman, Disney's senior vice president of corporate citizenship. That's because Disney will be assessing the restaurant's broader offerings in deciding whether to approve ads.

"It's not just about reformulating a meal for a single advertising opportunity," Goodman said. The company will have to show it offers a broader menu of healthier options, she said.

companies, Goodman said there are ads currently running on Disney channels that would not meet the new standards.

Disney CEO Bob Iger said there might be a short-term reduction in advertising revenue, but that he hopes companies will eventually create products that meet the standards so they don't have to avoid advertising with Disney.

New Packaging Offers Wine to Go for Picnic Season

BY MICHELLE LOCKE
For The Associated Press

Enjoying good wine in the great outdoors is fun, but toting glass bottles on the trail is no picnic.

Enter the new crop of alternatively packaged wines in cartons, cans and other trail-ready options.

Sure, for actual hydration you'll want to tote along water or whatever energy drink you favor. But for that moment when the hike is done, the mountain bike path conquered, or you're just relaxing and grilling a few steaks on a lazy Sunday, these wines make it easy to blend libations with explorations.

PACK A POUCH: The Climber is billed as "all-terrain wine transport," and it is. Available in chardonnay or cabernet sauvignon, this wine comes in a foil pouch with a hole punched at the top so it can be clipped to a backpack with a carabiner hook.

It shouldn't come as a big surprise that The Climber comes from Clif Family Winery founded by Gary Erickson and wife Kit Crawford, the people behind the Clif energy bar. The Climber is widely available and also can be found at the Clif winery tasting room Vela Vino in St. Helena, a popular spot with bicyclists.

The pouch holds the equivalent of two regular bottles and has a suggested retail of $17, so the wine is light on your wallet as well as your pack.

The winery works with the group 1 Percent for the Planet, and 1 percent of Climber sales go to charity, in this case a partnership with Trees for the Future. What to pair with it? Gorp is good, or if you want to go a little more upscale you might try the Smoked Paprika Almonds from the Gary & Kit's Napa Valley line of snacks.

HAVE A CAN-DO ATTITUDE: You may be more used to seeing beer in cans, but there are a few wines available in aluminum. A fun wine to try is Sophia minis from the Francis Ford Coppola winery. This is the winery's Sophia blanc de blancs sparkling wine that is a blend of pinot noir, sauvignon blanc and muscat, but in a pink 187-milliliter can, complete with a tiny straw (suggested retail $5).

Another option is FLASQ wines from JT Wines. These are sold in 375-milliliter aluminum half bottles that chill quickly and are recyclable. Available in chardonnay, merlot and a cuvee blanc (a white blend), they come with a suggested retail of $5.99 to $7.99.

BET ON A BOX: Several wines are available in cartons, and a reliable line is Bandit wines from Napa Valley winemaker Joel Gott. Available in several varietals and blends, including sangria, the wines are available in 1-liter or 500-milliliter boxes and are priced at around $9 for the liter.

Or, if you're going to be gone for a while or have a crowd with you, you could kick it old-school and go with one of the bag-in-box wines that hold the equivalent of four bottles. Day recalls going for a backpacking trip with friends and toting along some Black Box Wines, one of the pioneers in putting quality wine in a box.

Since every ounce counts when you're hiking the trails, they disposed of the box and carried only the bag. The hike was hiked. The wine was drunk. And when they were done, they blew the bag back up to make a pillow. Now that's a versatile varietal.

Fast and From-scratch Chicken Enchiladas

BY J.M. HIRSCH
Associated Press

The goal was simple — a recipe for mole chicken enchiladas that tastes authentic, but doesn't take an authentic amount of time to prepare. And thanks to two easy time-saving tricks, it turned out to be easier than I expected.

The first was making the mole sauce (a rich, often chocolaty Mexican sauce that usually accompanies meat) using only widely available ingredients (chances are you have all of them at home). Nothing fancy here, just tons of great flavor. No ancho chili powder? Use whatever variety of chili powder you have. For ease, the sauce is made in the blender.

The next trick is sparing yourself from needing to cook the meat. While the sauce heats, pluck the meat off a rotisserie chicken, then pull or cut it into bite-size pieces. That's it. Once the sauce has heated, you add the chicken, let it heat up, then you're done.

It's really that simple. Then it's just a matter of spooning it into corn tortillas and enjoying. Not a fan of corn tortillas? Use flour tortillas. In fact, get the larger ones, add more filling, then wrap them into mole chicken burritos.

Other than the cheese, no topping is needed for these enchiladas. But if you like, spoon on salsa or a drizzle of sour cream.

Weeknight Mole Chicken Enchiladas

Start to finish: 30 minutes.
Servings: 4.

1 small yellow onion, quartered
1 clove garlic
1 cup almond or peanut butter
1 cup water

1/2 cup chicken broth
1/2 cup diced tomatoes
1 slice soft sandwich bread
1 tablespoon hot sauce
1 tablespoon cocoa powder
1 teaspoon ancho chili powder
1/2 teaspoon ground cumin
1/4 teaspoon cinnamon
Juice of 1 lime
Salt and ground black pepper
Meat from a 2-pound rotisserie chicken, pulled or chopped into bite-size pieces
8 corn tortillas
1/2 cup crumbled queso blanco cheese (shredded cheddar or Jack cheese can be substituted)

In a blender, combine the onion, garlic, almond or peanut butter, water, broth, tomatoes, bread, hot sauce, cocoa powder, chili powder, cumin, cinnamon and lime juice. Blend until smooth, then transfer to a large saute pan. Bring to a simmer over medium heat, stirring often, and cook for 8 minutes. Taste, then season with salt and pepper. Add the chicken meat to the pan and stir well. Return to a simmer and cook just until the chicken is heated through.

Wrap the corn tortillas in a damp paper towel, then microwave for 20 seconds, or until tender.

One at a time, spoon some of the mole chicken filling down the center of each tortilla. Roll, then arrange on a serving platter. Repeat with remaining tortillas and filling. Spoon a bit more of the filling over the rolled enchiladas, then crumble the queso blanco over them.

Mushrooms, Wine Are Sauce for Cod

BY STEPHANIE WITT
SEDGWICK
Special to The Washington Post

When you shop for the cod for this recipe, look for pieces that are similar in size, about 1 inch thick, so they will cook in the same amount of time.

The recipe calls for diced tomatoes. I like to peel and seed fresh plum tomatoes, but you can use canned chopped tomatoes if you prefer.

Vegetable broth or fish stock can be substituted for the chicken broth.

Cod With Tomato and Mushroom Wine Sauce

4 servings.

For the cod:

1/4 cup flour
Four 4-ounce skinless cod fillets, preferably about 1 inch thick
Salt
Freshly ground black pepper

For the sauce:

1 tablespoon olive oil
1 small onion, finely chopped (about 2/3 cup)
Salt
4 ounces cremini or button mushrooms, thinly sliced (about 1 3/4 cups)
12 ounces plum tomatoes, peeled, seeded and cut into 1/2-inch dice (about 1 1/4 cups; may substitute canned chopped tomatoes)
1/2 cup dry white wine
1/2 cup no-salt-added or homemade chicken broth (may substitute vegetable broth or fish stock)
1 teaspoon sugar
Freshly ground black pepper
Leaves from 3 stems parsley, chopped, for garnish (1 tablespoon; optional)

For the fish: Preheat the oven to 350 degrees. Line a small, rimmed baking sheet or shallow baking dish with aluminum foil and grease with nonstick cooking oil spray.

Heat the oil in a 10- to 12-inch nonstick skillet or saute pan over medium-high heat. Place the flour on a small plate. Season the fillets on both sides with salt and pepper to taste. Transfer to the plate of flour and turn to coat them on all sides. Transfer the fillets to the skillet or saute pan, skinned side up. Do this in two batches if necessary so as not to crowd the fillets. Cook for about 2 minutes, until the cod has browned lightly. Turn the pieces over and cook for 1 minute. Transfer them to the baking sheet or dish. Bake for 5 to 8 minutes, until the fish is just cooked through.

For the sauce: As soon as the fish goes into the oven, add the oil to the same skillet or saute pan and heat over medium-high heat. Add the onion, then season with salt to taste; reduce the heat to medium and cook for 2 to 3 minutes, stirring, until the onion begins to soften. Add the mushrooms; cook for 4 to 5 minutes, stirring, until the mushrooms are cooked through and have started to brown. Add the tomatoes and cook for 2 minutes. Stir in the wine, broth and sugar, and season with pepper to taste. Increase the heat to medium-high. Cook until the liquid has reduced by half. Taste, and adjust the seasoning as needed.

Transfer the fish to individual rimmed serving plates or wide, shallow soup bowls. Spoon the sauce over the fish and garnish with the parsley, if desired. Serve immediately.

Note: To peel plum tomatoes, bring a small pot of water to a boil. Have ready a bowl of ice water. Cut a small "X" in the bottom of each tomato and remove the stem. One at a time, place each tomato in the boiling water for 10 to 15 seconds — no longer — then use a slotted spoon to quickly transfer it to the ice water. The skin should slip off easily.

Bruschetta Too Clumsy as Picnic Food? Try as Salad

BY ALISON LADMAN
For The Associated Press

It's easy to love basic bruschetta — thick slabs of toasted bread topped with a heap of chopped tomatoes and shredded basil, then drizzled with a mess of olive oil.

But that heap of tomatoes and that dribbling olive oil don't exactly make for great picnic packing. So for a more portable take that sports the same great flavors, we transformed our favorite bruschetta into a cool couscous salad.

Perfect for a picnic, Israeli-style couscous actually is made from small balls of pasta. If you can't find it, feel free to substitute another small pasta. If you can't find the small fresh mozzarella balls, just cut up a larger ball of fresh mozzarella.

Bruschetta Couscous Salad

Start to finish: 30 minutes.
Servings: 10.

16 ounces Israeli couscous
1/2 small red onion, finely diced
3 cloves of garlic, minced
3 ribs celery, finely diced
20 ounces cocktail tomatoes, quartered
1/2 cup fresh basil leaves, torn
1/2 cup grated Parmesan cheese

1 cup small fresh mozzarella balls
1/4 cup extra-virgin olive oil
2 tablespoons balsamic vinegar

Salt and ground black pepper

Cook the couscous according to package directions. Allow to cool.

In a large bowl, combine the cooled couscous with the red onion, garlic, celery, tomatoes, basil, Parmesan, mozzarella, olive oil and vinegar. Stir to combine, then season with salt and black pepper. The salad can be served immediately, but the flavors improve if it is allowed to sit for 30 minutes. Per serving: 310 calories; 100

One Part Pie, One Part Crumble, All Delicious

BY ALISON LADMAN
For The Associated Press

Strawberries and rhubarb all but scream summer. Just add some lemonade and you'll be totally over the top with warm weather food.

So we decided to go with it. We combined the best elements of strawberry-rhubarb pie and lemonade into one luscious and easy-to-bake treat perfect for eating outdoors. The result is one part pie, one part fruit crumble.

Summer Strawberry-Rhubarb Pastry

Start to finish: 1 hour. Servings: 8.

1 sheet frozen puff pastry, thawed (each 17.3-ounce package contains 2 sheets)
2 pounds fresh strawberries, hulled and halved
1 pound fresh rhubarb, cut into 1-inch pieces
1/2 cup plus 1 tablespoon sugar, divided Pinch of salt

Juice of 2 lemons
1/2 cup cornstarch

Heat the oven to 400 degrees. Coat a 9-by-9-inch baking pan with cooking spray. On a lightly floured surface, roll out the thawed sheet of puff pastry to 9-by-9-inches. Set aside.

In a large saucepan over medium-high, combine the strawberries, rhubarb, 1/2 cup of the sugar and the pinch of salt. Heat, stirring gently now and then, until the fruit is tender and bubbling, about 7 to 8 minutes.

In a small bowl, combine the lemon juice and cornstarch. Stir into the simmering fruit. Simmer, stirring constantly, until thickened, about 1 minute.

Spoon the mixture into the prepared pan. Place the prepared pastry over the top, then sprinkle with the remaining 1 tablespoon of sugar. Using a paring knife, slice a couple of vent holes in the pastry. Bake for 25 to 30 minutes, or until the pastry is golden brown. Spoon into bowls and serve warm or at room temperature. Per serving: 150 calories; 15 calories from fat (10 percent of total calories); 2 g fat (0 g saturated; 0 g trans fats); 0 mg cholesterol; 36 g carbohydrate; 2 g protein; 4 g fiber; 60 mg sodium.

Royals Draft Two With Local Ties

BY DAVID BASHORE
dbashore@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • Baseball hasn't been all bad for the Sneed family this week.

Former Twin Falls High School standout and current Northwest Nazarene University pitcher Zeb Sneed was selected in the 11th round of the Major League Baseball First-Year Player Draft Tuesday by the Kansas City Royals (343rd overall). That came hours after his younger brother Cy, who plays for Dallas Baptist University, saw his freshman season end in the NCAA Tournament.

Sneed and his father Bob spent most of Tuesday waiting to hear his name — he had been given a projection of between Rounds 4 and 15, with the most likely landing zone coming in Rounds 8-11.

"It was a long wait, but it was well worth it. I was getting anxious toward (Rounds) 9, 10, knowing at any time I could go and I was just waiting for the team to pick me," Sneed said.

Please see BASEBALL, S2

Former Twin Falls High School standout Zeb Sneed pitches for Northwest Nazarene University during the 2012 season. Sneed was drafted Tuesday by the Kansas City Royals, and said he plans to turn professional and forgo his senior season.

TWIN FALLS • Before his players even set foot on campus, College of Southern Idaho men's basketball coach Steve Gosar is building some nice chemistry among the 2012-13 Golden Eagles.

On Tuesday, Gosar announced the arrival of Juwan Newman, a 6-8 forward from New Mexico Military Institute, a junior college program which plays in Western Junior College Athletic Conference, which has produced four of the last six NJCAA national champions.

"He's 6-8, athletic and can put it on the deck and knock down a 15-footer," Gosar said. "He had a really good freshman year in a tough conference."

Newman averaged 10.2 points and 7.9 rebounds for the Broncos.

"(The WJCAC) is a physical league and for a freshman, his numbers are respectable for the quality of competition he's playing against," Gosar said.

Newman's connection to the CSI program is through Kareem Storey, a point guard transfer from Utah. The two are friends from their Baltimore and Washington D.C. prep days, and as soon as Storey announced his plans for the next season, Newman, who was on CSI's radar last summer, decided to switch schools.

GOLF

U.S. Open Stays True to Its Title

ASSOCIATED PRESS

The U.S. Open prides itself on being the toughest test in golf.

It never said anything about wanting to have the toughest field in golf, and we can only hope it doesn't follow the British Open down that road.

By staying true to its title — "Open" — the 36-hole qualifiers across the country delivered compelling stories of players who earned a spot in the U.S. Open. They were young and old, some with professional aspirations, others with only dreams, and one who can only get by riding in a cart.

Casey Martin rode his way to a tie for 23rd at The Olympic Club in 1998, the only major he ever played. He never imagined going back to the same course in San Francisco at age 40, now the golf coach at Oregon, his limp more severe but his resolve stronger.

A former teammate of Tiger Woods at Stanford, he suffers from a rare circulatory disorder in his right leg that causes extreme pain and makes it virtually impossible for him to walk 18 holes. Martin had to prove that to the PGA Tour in a lawsuit, which the U.S. Supreme Court upheld. His single-rider cart caused a sensation at the U.S. Open, but it only took him so far. Martin earned his PGA Tour card a year later, though he stayed in the big leagues only one season. Six years ago, he gave up his tour career to become a golf coach.

In a race to finish because he was exhausted, Martin holed a 5-foot par putt on the final hole at Emerald Valley to earn the first of two spots from the Oregon qualifier. He turned with his hands on his hips and looked to the gathering storm clouds, amazed at what just happened.

BURLEY • To help the miles pass by, Alice Schenk memorizes poems and Bible verses.

After 41 years of running, it's safe to say the Rupert woman can quote more than a handful of passages.

Schenk has 32 official marathons and four Ironman triathlons behind her.

Her personal running odometer recently rolled past 46,000 miles — the equivalent of crossing the United States coast to coast more than 15 times, or approaching two equatorial runs around the planet.

But on Saturday, the woman whose smile belongs on a poster inside a dentist's office and whose zest for life could be sold for millions if anyone could bottle it will attempt to run farther in one day than she ever has before.

Schenk, 54, will run the Sawtooth Relay, spanning 62 miles from Stanley, over Galena Summit, into Ketchum.

Celtics Take Control of East, Beat Heat

MIAMI • Paul Pierce watched the shot sail just over LeBron James' outstretched arm. And when it swished, he turned toward the Boston bench, shaking his head.

The biggest shot of the night, for certain.

And it put the Miami Heat in big trouble in these Eastern Conference finals.

Kevin Garnett finished with 26 points and 11 rebounds, Pierce scored 19 and the Celtics moved one win away from the East title by beating the Heat 94-90 on Tuesday night, taking a 3-2 lead in the series.

James finished with 30 points and 13 rebounds for Miami, though he went 8 minutes without scoring in the final quarter. Dwyane Wade scored 27 for the Heat, who got no more than nine from anyone else.

Earlier this week, CSI signed two players in Billy Reader and Trevor Ritchie who competed against each other during their prep days in Oregon and were friends away from the court as well.

Officially, Gosar has four spots to fill for next season, but one of those is already taken up by a to-be-named player whose status is dependent upon some classwork that needs to be finished.

One of those remaining vacancies belonged to Luke Cothron. The 6-9 forward, who had an up-and-down career last season at CSI, has decided to transfer closer to his Alabama home and will play for Northwest Florida, last season's national NJCAA runner-up.

Typically, 310 relay teams comprising six runners use a van and divide the race into 12 legs. But Schenk is one of just five solo participants — and the only female — who will take on the entire 62 miles. In this race's 21-year history, only two other females have finished it as a solo athlete.

"I really think that God gives all of us gifts and desires in our heart, and I think he wired me to be a runner," said Schenk, who once held the record in Idaho for the fastest female marathoner.

Schenk credits the two most important men in her life: "God gets the honor and the credit for anything noteworthy I have accomplished in my life. And also, in many ways I am who I am because of the love and support of my husband Wayne."

She will also require support during the race. Her daughter Sarah Schenk, along with friends Shawna Adams and Tammy Quintanar will crew for Schenk along the way, making sure she is hydrated, fed and encouraged.

Training leading up to the event has gone well, she said, and typically included 26- to 33-mile weekends and 14.5-mile treks up the mountain to Pomerelle Ski Resort. She completed a 50-kilometer race in Chicago earlier this year. And because her race starts at 12:15 a.m., she simulated by going out on three-hour midnight runs.

Of course, she memorized a new poem along the way, "If" by Rudyard Kipling.

"The miles flowed. Thankfully, there were my running friends at the club who would go and run six or 10 miles with me, and then the last 20 didn't seem so far," Schenk said.

The seed of inspiration to run Sawtooth was planted in Schenk's heart many years ago.

As a health and fitness instructor at College of Southern Idaho, Schenk encourages her classes to create a "dream list" of all the things they want to do or become. While teaching this past semester, with her Sawtooth training well under way, she looked on the back of a paper that she hadn't turned over for years.

There, in her own handwriting, was, "Run an ultramarathon."

"I totally forgot I had put it in writing 10 years ago," Schenk said. "There's power in writing things down. Even though you may not remember, it lives in your heart."

After Sawtooth, what's next on Schenk's list? Escape from Alcatraz swim in September, then possibly a rim-to-rim-to-rim run in the Grand Canyon.

After that, there's no telling what this inspired endurance athlete will dream up.

"God has gifted us with this life and we're all on temporary visa," Schenk said. "I've come to realize through years of running that he goes with me. He loves watching me use the gifts and abilities he's given me. He loves watching me enjoy running... He loves to see his children succeed and have fun."

Djokovic, Federer Rally, Set French Rematch

ASSOCIATED PRESS

PARIS • As the chilly evening air swirled, and raindrops fell, and the thousands of spectators pulling for his opponent hushed, Novak Djokovic stood a single point from exiting the French Open.

A single point from losing to France's Jo-Wilfried Tsonga in the quarterfinals at Roland Garros.

A single point from losing the chance to pursue a fourth consecutive Grand Slam title, something no man has done in 43 years.

Steeling himself with so much at stake, Djokovic came through, taking that crucial point thanks to an overhead that skimmed off the baseline to set up a putaway volley. Seconds later, he faced the same predicament — one point from defeat — and came through again, this time with a leaping forehand that barely landed in. All told, Djokovic faced four match points against Tsonga and won each one, extending the contest until seizing control for good.

Djokovic won his 26th Grand Slam match in a row Tuesday, coming back and beating the fifth-seeded Tsonga 6-1, 5-7, 5-7, 7-6 (6), 6-1 to set up a French Open rematch against 16-time major champion Roger Federer. A year ago in the semifinals at Roland Garros, Federer ended Djokovic's 43-match winning streak, the last time the Serb lost at one of tennis' four most important tournaments.

"Tennis is very mental. Lots of emotions," said the No. 1-ranked Djokovic, who won Wimbledon last July, the U.S. Open last September, and the Australian Open in January. "If you're playing a top player, a home favorite, and you have a crowd that's supporting him, you have to face these things. Physically, we're all fit, all hitting the ball well. But mentally, it's just a matter of a point here, a point there. That's sport. The one that mentally pushes more in some moments — and gets a bit lucky — gets the win."

Federer also fashioned a come-from-behind victory, and while he never was confronted with a match point, he did drop the first two sets before getting past No. 9 Juan Martin del Potro of Argentina 3-6, 6-7 (4), 6-2, 6-0, 6-3.

Celtics

Pierce's 3-pointer with 53 seconds left put Boston up 90-86. Miami got within two points twice, and argued that it should have had a steal with 8.8 seconds left. Instead, a foul was called on Udonis Haslem, Garnett made two free throws, and the Celtics knew they had just stolen one on Miami's home floor.

Game 6 is Thursday night in Boston, where the Celtics will try to clinch a trip to either Oklahoma City or San Antonio for Game 1 of the NBA finals. The title series starts June 12.

The Celtics were down by 13 points in the second quarter, then down nine in the third, and answered both times — prevailing on a night where they shot just 41 percent, and got outrebounded 49-39.

Ray Allen and Mickael Pietrus scored 13 apiece for the Celtics, who got 10 from Brandon Bass.

The Celtics came into Tuesday a perfect 8-0 in this situation — a Game 5 with series tied at 2-2 — with the core of Pierce, Garnett, Rondo and Allen. And some of James' most memorable moments have come in Game 5s, like the epic 48 points where he just carried Cleveland on every possession down the stretch at Detroit in 2007, and the 120-88 loss to the Celtics in 2010, his last home game with the Cavaliers.

This one offered more theater, of course. James hit a 3-pointer to give Miami a two-point lead with 8:10 left, closed out on Pierce to force an airball on the next possession, and eventually Miami pushed the margin out to 78-72 on a layup by Wade with 6:17 to play. On that play, James looked gassed, gasping for air as he stood near the baseline.

Those might have been the last gasps the Miami home crowd sees this season. Boston closed on a 22-12 run.

Boston tied the game twice early in the third quarter, before Miami peeled off nine straight points to go up 59-50. Four players scored for the Heat during that quick burst, highlighted by Shane Battier's corner 3-pointer and a lazy turnover from Rondo, who threw the ball into the backcourt without being pressured by any Miami defender.

Open

Woods was as amazed as anyone. He said Tuesday on Twitter, "Simply incredible. Ability, attitude and guts. See you at Olympic Casey?"

Oregon reached the semifinals of the NCAA Championship last weekend at Riviera, and Martin had not played golf in nine days. He was not expecting to get through, so he booked a recruiting trip to North Carolina for next week.

"This" he told Golf Channel with a grin, "is a little better."

The last U.S. Open champion who had to go through the 18-hole local qualifier and 36-hole sectional qualifier was Orville Moody in 1969. But that was a different era. Moody had lost in a playoff on the PGA Tour only two months earlier.

Casey Martin isn't going to win the U.S. Open.

Neither is Dennis Miller, the 42-year-old teaching pro from Ohio who provided the "Caddyshack" moment of U.S. Open qualifying when his putt hung on the lip so long that he turned his back and never saw it fall in. Unlike the movie, at least the assistant head greens keeper didn't blow up Scioto with plastic explosives trying to kill a gopher.

Brice Garnett has never played in a major, much less a PGA Tour-sanctioned event. He will be at Olympic Club. Cole Howard, an alternate out of the first stage of qualifying, learned the day after his grandmother died that he made it to the final stage and will be making his U.S. Open debut. Anthony Summers used to see his children succeed and have fun."

away on the OneAsia circuit, he flew from Australia to Chicago and qualified for his first major championship at age 42.

These are the stories that set the U.S. Open apart from the other three majors.

The PGA Championship is restricted to professionals. The Masters is the most elite. The British Open, the oldest championship in golf, gave up part of its charm in 2004 when it tried to strengthen its field. Instead of having the final qualifying stage at four links courses on the weekend before the tournament, it opted for international qualifiers at odd times of the year in Asia, Africa and Australia, and in Europe and America.

Gone are the days when mini-tour players, amateurs and proven tour players shared the same parking lot and tee time to try to get into the British Open.

The U.S. Open now offers qualifying in Europe and Japan, but it still forces most players to earn their tee times through qualifying. That's old school. USGA executive director Mike Davis rarely misses a chance to say how many players must qualify (typically about half the 156-man field). And it was his predecessor, David Fay, who once said, "It's not the best field in golf. It never pretended to be. It's the most democratic championship."

Now, the British Open offers only 12 spots from its final stage of local qualifying. The U.S. Open, during the last 10 years, averages 29 players who made it through local and sectional qualifying for a chance to play in the same championship as Woods and Rory McIlroy.

Baseball

"We've been sitting at the kitchen table since 10 this morning, waiting to hear my name. It was right at the end it started getting ansy. Phone calls started coming in a lot, so we knew it was getting close."

Sneed, a 2009 Twin Falls graduate, posted a 7-4 record with a 5.00 ERA for the Crusaders this season, striking out 61 batters but walking 46. Despite occasional erratic pitching, his 6-foot-5 frame, live arm and devastating split-fingered fastball drew the attention of scouts, especially when he touched 97 mph during summer ball last year in Kansas.

Rounds 16-40 of the draft are today.

As a junior, Sneed would be eligible again for next year's draft if he chooses to return to NNU instead of signing with the Royals.

That looks unlikely, though, as Sneed made it clear his preference is to turn pro.

"I want to sign and get ready to play professional baseball," Sneed said. "We had something worked out but it's not quite all the way done yet, so we're still talking. It might be a few days, but I'll sign if it all works out."

Draft picks have until 3 p.m. MDT July 13 to work out a deal with their Major League clubs. That's more than a month earlier than in previous years, a byproduct of MLB's new collective bargaining agreement with the players' union. The draft is also 10 rounds shorter than in previous years, and teams have a fixed signing bonus amount they can allocate toward players drafted in the first 10 rounds. Any bonuses surpassing $100,000 to players taken from the 11th round on also count toward the bonus limit.

Three rounds after the Royals took Sneed, they dipped into the region again in the 14th round and selected former College of Southern Idaho catcher Parker Morin, who played last season at Utah, at 433rd overall.

Morin led the Utes with a .314 batting average, 69 hits and 35 RBI as a junior. He led the Pac-12 Conference with 33 runners caught stealing and was an honorable-mention all-conference selection.

He was led to believe he'd be drafted last year, but the call never came. This time around, it was evident early on that lightning wouldn't strike twice.

"Right off the bat, when it hit about the seventh round I started getting some phone calls from clubs saying what they wanted to do. It was just unbelievable, just very blessed to have it happen they way it did," said Morin, adding he has agreed in principle with the Royals and will sign a contract in the coming days. He declined to disclose the amount of his signing bonus.

"The Royals said they'd take me in the 13th and asked if I was good with that. The 13th came and I didn't hear anything, so I called my coach, talking to him about it, and as soon as I got off the phone I heard my name," Morin said. "It honestly felt like time kind of stopped. One of the greatest feelings of my life."

Morin expects to start his career at the Royals' Rookie League affiliate in Idaho Falls. It would afford him opportunity to return home to Utah — he graduated from Park City High School — for several series during the season, and it's a short hop to Bonneville County for CSI and Utah fans, and family alike.

I'll Have Another Waits Extra Day to Change Barns

ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK • Trainer Doug O'Neill delayed the detention barn check-in for Triple Crown contender I'll Have Another.

The Kentucky Derby and Preakness winner, along with all the other horses set to run in Saturday's Belmont Stakes, must report to a secure detention barn by noon Wednesday.

O'Neill initially planned to relocate I'll Have Another from his cozy spot in Mark Hennig's barn to the detention area on Tuesday. But O'Neill was busy with off-track functions and decided to wait until Wednesday after the colt completes his usual morning gallop around the 1 1/2-mile track.

"I want to be here when that happens," he said. "After he trains, he'll cool out over there to make the noon deadline."

In the detention barn, every move and visitor will be closely monitored, a change in routine that has angered some trainers. New York racing officials mandated the last-minute move as part of new rules to ensure that the race is run fairly.

Instead of being spread out in barns around Belmont Park, all runners will be sequestered in stalls next to each other.

I'll Have Another might be lonesome in his new digs. Lava Man, a career winner of more than $5 million and I'll Have Another's usual companion to and from the race track, won't be making the move.

Lava Man can be temperamental, a carryover from his racing days, and O'Neill doesn't want any disruptions.

"I just think it would be too nerve-wracking for him," he said. "He'll still chaperone I'll Have Another every morning. I'll Have Another is such a cool relaxed horse in the stall, I'm worried Lava Man will get a little anxious and I'll Have Another will wonder why his big brother is so anxious. We'll leave Lava Man here, and move I'll Have Another."

On a clear crisp Tuesday morning, I'll Have Another turned in another in a series of strong gallops leading up to the race.

"He galloped great," O'Neill said. "He looked good. Good stride. Good energy. Three more days of galloping and if we get lucky, ooo-fah."

First in

Ravelo's Boy was the first horse to take up residence in the detention barn on Tuesday morning.

Likely one of the longest shots in the field, Ravelo's Boy vanned north from trainer Manny Azpurua's barn at Calder Race Course in Florida and reported directly to the secured area after 23 hours on

Ravelo's Boy walked inside the barn to stretch his legs.

"It's a long trip," said assistant trainer Enrique Barcenas, who accompanied the horse. "He behaved real nice. There was a lot of rain and a lot of wind on the drive but no problems. Everything was fine."

The chestnut colt is just 2 for 13 in his career, and has not been better than fourth in three stakes appearances. He rallied from far back in both victories, suggesting he will try for the upset with a stretch rally in the 1 1/2-mile Belmont.

This will be his first race outside Florida.

"He will do something good in this race," Barcenas said. "We're very proud to be here. We came to win the race."

Kings Keep It Cool With Cup in Sight

ASSOCIATED PRESS

EL SEGUNDO, Calif. • Jonathan Quick remembers eating ice pops with his friends and watching their beloved New York Rangers win the Stanley Cup on television in 1994. Dustin Brown vaguely recalls Joe Nieuwendyk bringing the Cup to Ithaca, N.Y., but can't remember if he got to see it up close.

With just one more win by their Los Angeles Kings, the star goalie and the courageous captain will have the Stanley Cup in their hands, above their head — even in the Pacific Ocean, if they choose.

The stage is set for a California coronation in Game 4 on Wednesday night. The Kings could complete a sweep of the New Jersey Devils in the Stanley Cup finals in front of a sellout crowd that's been waiting 45 years for this chance to celebrate.

"It's right there in front of us, but we know there's one more step," Brown said Tuesday at the Kings' training complex. "We don't want to trip now."

The eighth-seeded Kings are dominating the NHL playoffs with an ease that's stranger than ice in sunny L.A. A franchise that has never done much of anything in the postseason has already conquered the Western Conference, and the Kings are one win away from claiming their first championship in almost impossibly stylish fashion.

The Kings are on a 15-2 playoff run that has only one equal in NHL history, leaving everyone searching for superlatives to describe the way Los Angeles has steamrolled every opponent in its path by a combined 49-24 margin.

Game 4 is even a chance for Los Angeles to be the first NHL team to win the Cup at home since Anaheim in 2007, rewarding the fans who consistently sold out Staples Center even during the Kings' ignominious playoff absence from 2002-10 before general manager Dean Lombardi's rebuilding plan yielded bountiful fruit this spring.

"There's a lot at the end there to look forward to, if we play the right way," Jarret Stoll said. "I'm sure we'll talk a lot about it the next day and a half to get ready, making sure we're playing the right way, having the right attitude. Can't get too excited, look too far ahead. You have to stay in the moment and play the game."

The Kings appear to be neither overly excited nor overly defensive about the potential conclusion to this two-month playoff push. Los Angeles has been remarkably unaffected by any of its success after a rough regular season in which a playoff berth wasn't secure until just before the 81st game.

They have a chance to match Edmonton's NHL-record 16-2 run through the 1988 playoffs in Game 4, but the Kings aren't getting too high.

"It doesn't count any more than the rest of them did," insisted Quick, who has allowed just 24 goals in 17 playoff games. "Obviously, we're not going to start thinking about stuff that hasn't happened yet."

The Kings started this run with two road victories over top-seeded Vancouver nearly two months ago, and they haven't slowed down. Los Angeles eliminated the top three seeds in the West and eventually took a 3-0 lead in all four of its playoff series — both unprecedented accomplishments in NHL history.

Nine Jurors Are Seated in Sandusky's Abuse Trial

ASSOCIATED PRESS

BELLEVILLE, Pa. • Connections to Penn State weren't enough to keep prospective jurors from being chosen to decide Jerry Sandusky's fate on child sexual abuse charges.

The start of jury selection Tuesday showed the strength of Sandusky's and Penn State's links to their rural central Pennsylvania community, but the presiding judge indicated that those connections weren't necessarily enough to keep them from being one of the 12 jurors or four alternates.

Nine jurors were selected Tuesday, including a longtime Penn State football season ticketholder.

In the first questioning of 40 prospective jurors, about half said they or immediate family members worked at Penn State or were university retirees. One woman rented apartments to college students. Four knew Sandusky, a former Penn State assistant football coach. Two knew his wife.

Sandusky's lawyer won the right to have jurors chosen from the local community, and prosecutors had concerns that Centre County might prove to be nearly synonymous with Penn State. Sandusky had helped build the football team's reputation as a defensive powerhouse known as "Linebacker U;" his arrest toppled Joe Paterno from the head coaching position just months before his death from cancer, and some of the alleged attacks on children occurred inside university showers.

One of the very first jurors to be seated wasn't just a season ticketholder since the 1970s: She said John McQueary — a possible trial witness and the father of a key witness — once worked with her husband.

When Sandusky's lawyer sought to have her removed for cause, Judge John Cleland signaled he would need more grounds.

"We're in Centre County. We're in rural Pennsylvania," Cleland said, noting that such connections "can't be avoided."

Sandusky attorney Joe Amendola opted not to use one of his eight challenges, and she joined the panel.

Others selected included a 24-year-old man with plans to attend an auto technician school and a mother of two who works in retail.

All the jurors will have to say under oath they can be impartial.

Prospective jurors also learned that Paterno's wife and son were among the potential defense witnesses. Members of Sandusky's family also were on a list shown to the prospective jurors, along with assistant coach Mike McQueary and his father.

Mike McQueary, on leave from the team, has said he saw Sandusky naked in a team shower with a young boy more than a decade ago and reported it to football coach Joe Paterno.

NOTICE OF FEE INCREASE

The Twin Falls School District No. 411, Twin Falls County, has proposed to increase its lunch fees buy an amount that exceeds five percent (5%) of the fee charged last year. The proposed increase of nine and one half percent (9.5%) is four and one half (4.5) percent above five percent (5%) of the fees charged the previous year. The following is an estimate of what these changes may mean to students.

Fee	Last Year Fee	This Year Fee	Percent Increase Student	Last Year Cost Per Student	This Year Cost Per	Exceptions
Elementary Lunch	$2.05	$2.15	9.5%	$369	$387	Qualifies
Middle School	$2.30	$2.40	9.5%	$414	$432	for free or
High School	$2.55	$2.65	9.5%	$459	$477	reduced lunch.

This fee increase is due to an increase of food and non-food costs, salary/benefits increase and Federal Government regulations for the 2012-2013 school year.

All citizens are invited to attend a public hearing on the increased fee request. The Hearing will be held on June 11, 2012 at 7:00 p.m. at the Twin Falls School District No. 411 Board Room Extension Office 242 Main Avenue North, Twin Falls, Idaho.

NOTICE OF TRUSTEE'S SALE: The following described property will be sold at public auction to the highest bidder, payable in lawful money of the United States, in the office of First American Title Company, 260 3rd Avenue North, Twin Falls, ID, 83301, on 09/11/2012 at 11:00 AM, (recognized local time) for the purpose of foreclosing that certain Deed of Trust recorded 01/23/2007 as Instrument Number 2007-001739, and executed by ARTURO CORTEZ AND PRISCILLA CORTEZ, HUSBAND AND WIFE, as Grantor(s), in favor of MORTGAGE ELECTRONIC REGISTRATION SYSTEMS, INC., as Beneficiary, to RECONTRUST COMPANY, N.A., the Current Trustee of record, covering the following real property located in Twin Falls County, State of Idaho: LOT 13 IN BLOCK 3 OF ALTA VISTA SUBDIVISION, TWIN FALLS COUNTY, IDAHO, ACCORDING TO THE PLAT THEREOF, RECORDED IN BOOK 7 OF PLATS, PAGE 48, IN THE OFFICE OF THE COUNTY RECORDER OF SAID COUNTY. The Trustee has no knowledge of a more particular description of the above referenced real property, but for purpose of compliance with Idaho Code, Section 60-113, the Trustee has been informed that the street address of, 920 DEL MAR CIRCLE, Twin Falls, ID, 83301 is sometimes associated with said real property. Bidders must be prepared to tender the trustee the full amount of the bid at the sale in the form of cash, or a cashier's check drawn on a state or federally insured savings institution. Said sale will be made without covenant or warranty, express or implied, regarding title, possession or encumbrances to satisfy the obligation secured by and pursuant to the power of sale conferred in that certain Deed of Trust. The default for which this sale is to be made is: Failure to pay the monthly payment due 05/01/2011 of principal, interest and impounds and subsequent installments due thereafter; plus late charges, with interest currently accruing at 6.625% per annum; together with all subsequent sums advanced by beneficiary pursuant to the terms and conditions of said Deed of Trust, and any supplemental modifications thereto. The principal balance owing as of this date on said obligation is $141,314.27, plus interest, costs and expenses actually incurred in enforcing the obligations thereunder and in this sale, together with any unpaid and/or accruing real property taxes, and/or assessments, attorneys' fees, Trustees' fees and costs, and any other amount advanced to protect said security, as authorized in the promissory note secured by the aforementioned Deed of Trust. Therefore, the Beneficiary elects to sell, or cause said trust property to be sold, to satisfy said obligation. NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT THIS FIRM IS ATTEMPTING TO COLLECT A DEBT AND ANY INFORMATION OBTAINED WILL BE USED FOR THAT PURPOSE, AND THAT THE DEBT MAY BE DISPUTED. THE ABOVE GRANTORS ARE NAMED TO COMPLY WITH SECTION 45-1506(4)(a) IDAHO CODE. NO REPRESENTATION IS MADE THAT THEY ARE, OR ARE NOT, PRESENTLY RESPONSIBLE FOR THIS OBLIGATION. DATED: 05/07/2012, RECONTRUST COMPANY, N.A., Name and Address of the Current Trustee is: RECONTRUST COMPANY, N.A., 1800 Tapo Canyon Rd., CA6-914-01-94, SIMI VALLEY, CA 80028-1821, PHONE: (800) 281-8219 TS # 12-0033571 FEI # 1006.158903

Today is Wednesday, June 6, the 158th day of 2012. There are 208 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight:

On June 6, 1944, during WWII, Allied forces stormed the beaches of Normandy, France, on "D-Day," beginning the liberation of German-occupied western Europe.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:
In 1799, American politician and orator Patrick Henry died at Red Hill Plantation in Virginia.

In 1862, the (first) Battle of Memphis took place during the Civil War as Union naval forces annihilated a Confederate fleet and captured the Tennessee city.

In 1912, the greatest volcanic eruption of the 20th century took place as Novarupta in Alaska began a series of explosive episodes over a 60-hour period.

In 1925, Walter Percy Chrysler founded the Chrysler Corp.

In 1932, the Senate approved, and President Herbert Hoover signed, a Revenue Act containing the first federal gasoline tax, which was one cent per gallon.

In 1933, the first drive-in movie theater was opened by Richard Hollingshead in Camden County, N.J. (The movie shown was "Wives Beware," starring Adolphe Menjou.)

In 1966, black activist James Meredith was shot and wounded as he walked along a Mississippi highway to encourage black voter registration.

In 1978, California voters overwhelmingly approved Proposition 13, a primary ballot initiative calling for major cuts in property taxes.

In 1982, Israeli forces invaded Lebanon to drive Palestine Liberation Organization fighters out of the country. (The Israelis withdrew in June 1985.)

In 1985, authorities in Brazil exhumed a body later identified as the remains of Dr. Josef Mengele, the notorious "Angel of Death" of the Nazi Holocaust.

Ten years ago: Stung by intelligence failures, President George W. Bush called on Congress in a nationally broadcast address to remake the government with a terrorist-fighting Department of Homeland Security. Israeli troops stormed Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat's headquarters in response to a Palestinian suicide attack on a bus that killed 17 Israelis.

Five years ago: The Group of Eight summit opened in Heiligendamm, Germany. Police arrested a suspect in the abduction and death of 18-year-old Kelsey Smith, whose body was found in a Missouri park four days after she'd disappeared from a Kansas store's parking lot. (Edwin R. Hall later pleaded guilty to capital murder and was sentenced to life in prison.) Police in Connecticut looking for clues in the yearlong disappearance of a 15-year-old Bloomfield girl found her locked in a hidden room in a West Hartford home owned by an acquaintance of her parents. (Adam Gault later pleaded guilty to kidnapping and sexual assault.) The Anaheim Ducks captured the Stanley Cup with a 6-2 victory over the Ottawa Senators in Game 5. Bob Barker taped his last episode of CBS' "The Price Is Right."

One year ago: After days of denials, New York Democratic Rep. Anthony Weiner confessed that he had tweeted a photo of his bulging underpants to a woman and admitted to "inappropriate" exchanges with six women before and after getting married; Weiner apologized for lying but said he would not resign (which he ended up doing). Former Pennsylvania Sen. Rick Santorum, popular among social conservatives, plunged into the 2012 Republican presidential sweepstakes. (Santorum suspended his campaign in April 2012.) The Bowl Championship Series stripped Southern California of its 2004 title after the Trojans were hit with heavy NCAA sanctions for rules violations committed during the 2004 and '05 seasons.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE® Bobby Wolff

"The shortest way to do many things is to do only one thing at once."
— Samuel Smiles

When our team qualified for the Senior Bowl in Veldhoven, Netherlands, last June, we needed to beat the very strong Lynch team in the finals. Our team went down 50 IMPs early on, then recovered to win by a landslide. This deal occurred in the set where we pulled back almost all of the deficit, and it demonstrates that when in doubt, one should bid one more. You never know what the consequences might be!

At our teammates' table, Arnie Fisher (South) and Fred Hamilton bid to four hearts after East had made a weak jump overcall of two spades over one club. The defenders made no mistake: They cashed two spades and shifted to a diamond, setting up the defense's fourth winner before the clubs could be established.

At my table, my partner, Dan Morse (East), made a simple overcall of one spade over a Precision one-diamond opening, and South made a negative double. I guessed to jump to four spades as a calculated overbid, in the hope that something good would happen — and it did!

No one had anything more to say, and the defenders tried to cash two heart tricks, letting Morse ruff, draw trumps, and establish the diamonds to get his two club losers away.

Yes, a club shift at trick two would have defeated the game, but can you blame South for misreading the position? A club switch might be right if partner discourages at trick one — but I must admit I too would probably have got this wrong.

ANSWER: This is a sequence where you would have been happy to bid one heart over one diamond, but now would be forced to introduce hearts at the two-level. To make this call, you need to have the values associated with a reverse (about an ace more than this hand). That being the case, you have to pass now and rely on your partner to reopen with extra values.

GARAGE SALE SEASON IS ON!

Place your garage sale ad in the Times-News. 6 lines of text, 3 days, $26. Deadline is Wednesday at 1:00pm.

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 28-year-old, newly single female who has never been happier. I've had a couple of long-term relationships that didn't turn out well, so my quiet, uncomplicated life is refreshing. All I'm looking for now is to make new friends and enjoy myself.

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

A few guys have asked me for my phone number — usually through social networking — and have suggested getting together for a couple of drinks. As nice as that would be, the last thing I want to do is lead anyone on or give him the wrong impression. When I do decide to start looking, it will be for no one less than my Prince Charming, and I don't regard any of these men as that. Going out with girlfriends is hard because they're mostly married with children.

What and when is the best way to tell guys that, as much as I enjoy their company, I am looking only for friendship at this time? I live in a relatively small town, so going out with different men on a regular basis gives people the wrong idea about me.

— WANTS ONLY FRIENDSHIP IN MICHIGAN

DEAR WANTS ONLY FRIENDSHIP: I understand your feelings, but please allow me to point out that meeting Prince Charming can be an accident of luck and timing. In addition to that, he doesn't always come dashing forth on a white horse — sometimes it's an old clunker.

If you announce to any man who asks you out for a couple of drinks that you're interested only in friendship, he will interpret it as rejection, so I don't advise you to make that your lead sentence. A better retort might be that rather than going out for drinks, you'd prefer to start with coffee and conversation. Who knows? The longer he talks, the more attractive he may become. Stranger things have happened.

DEAR ABBY: My 20-year-old daughter, "Roxanne," is attending college in a big city known for its crime rate, unemployment and despair. She lives alone in an apartment just off campus. She's a smart girl, careful and cautious, but I still worry about her to the point of sleepless nights and a general feeling of "when" something will happen — not if.

Roxanne's apartment was broken into last Christmas. Thankfully, she wasn't there at the time. Since then, my worry has intensified — especially if I don't hear from her for a few hours. We usually text or call each other at least once a day. If I don't hear from her, I panic.

My husband calls me a professional worrier and says I need to trust that our daughter is safe. I don't think I'll ever NOT worry about her, and the truth is I really want her to move back home. I realize this would be counterproductive to her achieving success, but I don't know how to let go of the worry. I need advice, Abby. Is this just a "mom thing" or should I seek help?

— HALF-CRAZED MOM IN MICHIGAN

DEAR MOM: It's a "mom thing" taken to the extreme. One of the reasons that children go away to college is so they — and their parents — can learn to live independently from each other. For you to expect your daughter to call or text you at least once a day feeds your dependence on her. It appears you suffer from a case of parental hypervigilance — and yes, for both your sakes, you should seek professional help.

IF JUNE 6 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: As the year ahead unfolds, you are likely to wish for a little more excitement and are less likely to hide your light under a barrel. The ambitions that tweak your interest now can be realized in late summer and early fall, so plan ahead. Your business strategies will be more successful in late July and early August while you concentrate on success with a capital "S." Changes you have yearned for may be possible in September and early October when conditions shift and a chance to improve your life on many levels may appear out of the blue.

HOROSCOPE

Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You might feel guilty about some guilty pleasures. Someone you know may be unable to do anything without someone along for the ride. Companionship is great until it interferes with your work.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Never point fingers at others unless your hands are clean. Overcome your own prejudices by setting a sterling example for others to follow. Social interchanges follow on the heels of work related meetings.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Nitroglycerine is a sensitive commodity. While it has its uses, it can also react explosively in the wrong environment or with improper handling. Apply caution in delicate situations or with touchy people.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Pride yourself on becoming a philosopher. If life is temporary, then it makes sense to enjoy fleeting moments of pleasure. Remember that the challenging times are also gone just as quickly.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Believe in yourself if you want others to believe in you. It is possible that you don't want blow your own horn. Earning respect isn't something you can win by having an argument with an opponent.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): The quickest path between two points is a straight line. If someone is standing in the way of your straightforwardness, however, there may be an obstacle to getting you where you want to be.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Don't let the past define you, let it refine you. You may be reminded of a bad experience in financial areas or even be tempted to repeat one. Talk things over thoroughly with a trusted advisor.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Lies won't end a relationship, but the truth might. When hidden enmity pops up into the light of day, you might come to a different conclusion about a person. You have the choice to forgive and forget.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Someone can be your friend even if it isn't announced on a social networking site. Throwing good money after bad may cause a boomerang effect, as it could come back to haunt you.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Enjoy being a motivator without making anyone feel manipulated. The energy of those in close contact could be contagious. Be secure enough in your position to let others take the initiative.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Do your own thing. The ability to act without supervision could be your most valuable asset. As the soul of honesty, you are likely to attract others of the same ilk, but may compete for top honors.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Unless you ask the question, you will never hear a yes. Spreading yourself too thin by scattering your energies and jumping on any handy bandwagon without all of the facts is your worst problem.

Sudoku is a number-placing puzzle based on a 9x9 grid with several given numbers. The object is to place the numbers 1 to 9 in the empty squares so that each row, each column and each 3x3 box contains the same number only once. The difficulty level of the Conceptis Sudoku increases from Monday to Sunday.

This was a very awesome painless experience! The people from Rob Green are exceptional and very awesome to work with!....We bought our 2nd Nissan because we had such good luck with the 1st one that we still own after having over 250,000 miles on it and it is still running strong! If your looking to buy a new car you will have awesome people to work with at Rob Green Nissan, Hyundai.
