Simple Steps Can Keep Your Dog from Taking Flight

BY MELISSA DAVLIN

TWIN FALLS • Monday's wind-storm didn't just affect the Magic Valley's human residents.

With wind comes blown-open gates — and dogs making a break for freedom. But those escapes are preventable.

After the storm, the Twin Falls Animal Shelter saw about twice as many stray dogs as they normally do, said shelter director Debbie Blackwood.

Since Monday evening's storm, Blackwood estimated the shelter took in 10 to 15 lost dogs, and fielded more phone calls from people looking for their missing dogs. About half of those dogs have been reunited with their owners,

Emails to Family Suggest Bergdahl Deserted

WASHINGTON (AP) • Emails a soldier from Hailey reportedly sent to his parents before he was captured by the Taliban three years ago suggest he was disillusioned and considering deserting. Bowe Bergdahl told his parents he was "ashamed to even be American" and was disgusted with the U.S. mission in Afghanistan and with the Army,

The military has never detailed circumstances of his disappearance or capture, and he is not classified as a deserter. He was initially listed as "duty status unknown" and is now considered "missing-captured." He is the only U.S. prisoner of war from the Afghanistan conflict, and U.S. officials say they are actively trying to free him.

The White House declined comment on the emails or Bergdahl's possible motivation for leaving his base in eastern Afghanistan in 2009.

BOISE • A jury trial has been set in the excessive driving under the influence case for Twin Falls County 5th District Magistrate Judge Nicole Cannon.

Records clerks at the Ada County courthouse said Thursday the trial is scheduled to begin 9 a.m. Aug. 28 in Boise.

Also Thursday in Boise, retired Ada County 4th District Magistrate Judge Darla Williamson was expected to hear a motion to suppress and a motion in limine, which are usually to exclude evidence. The outcome of the hearing was not immediately available Thursday; online court records were not updated Thursday evening, and Ada County court records clerks said their records also had not been updated.

Prosecuting attorney Christina Star and Cannon's defense attorney Douglas Nelson could not be reached for comment Thursday.

Online records show the 4th District's efforts to ensure impartiality: eight instances of judges disqualifying themselves from hearing Cannon's case. A judge can choose to seek disqualification if he or she knows the defendant.

A New Way to Do Business

One year in, Idaho's education reforms have changed annual talks on teacher contracts.

BY JULIE WOOTTON
jwootton@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • Talking over teacher salaries and benefits is a different conversation than two years ago.

Twin Falls Education Association president David Gibson said the state's Students Come First laws have left a mark on negotiations between teachers unions and school districts.

"It has changed the process dramatically," he said.

Students Come First — a package of reform laws passed by legislators last year — limited the scope of negotiations. Now, teacher salaries and benefits are the main items included in collective bargaining agreements. And the negotiations are held in public.

Speaking Monday during this year's last Twin Falls negotiations meeting, Gibson said the process over the past two years has been arduous and divisive.

Both sides are getting legal opinions more often, he said, and opinions differ on what falls under the state's definition of "compensation" and "benefits."

"Really, it gets back to trying to navigate the laws," he said.

Twin Falls Superintendent Wiley Dobbs said a decision to add a teacher workday back to next school year's calendar, for instance, is related to the topic of salaries.

"Those are the gray areas and we work through them," he said.

With about 20 school districts in south-central Idaho, collective bargaining agreements affect hundreds of teachers' pay and sick leave.

But unlike years past, agreements only last one year before they expire. Melissa McGrath, spokeswoman for the Idaho State Department of Education, said districts used to be able to negotiate contracts for multiple years.

Agreement Takes Time

McGrath said limiting the scope of negotiations has sped up the process of reaching an agreement for some school districts.

In Blaine County, that's held true. An agreement

At a Glance Teacher Contracts

When a teacher signs an employment contract, it's a fairly simple process.

The Idaho State Department of Education's one-page document includes a teacher's salary and length of contract.

Under Students Come First, new teachers are no longer able to get onto a "continuing contract" — otherwise known as tenure. Those who already have that type of contract, though, can keep it.

School districts can offer a two-year contract after a teacher has been employed for three years. But districts can also opt for one-year contracts.

John Blackman, assistant superintendent of the Blaine County School District, said changes to teacher contracts have led to a "sense of insecurity in the profession."

Study: Fence-marking Reduces Sage Grouse Collisions, Deaths

But it's only one tool of many needed to reverse the bird's decline.

BY KIMBERLEE KRUESI
kkruesi@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • Marking fences may not prevent all sage grouse collisions, but it certainly helps.

That's the conclusion of a new University of Idaho study, which found that by making a fence more visible to sage grouse, collisions can be reduced by almost 85 percent.

Researchers placed 3-inch pieces of reflective vinyl on fences throughout southern Idaho to study the effectiveness of preventing collisions.

If a sage grouse flies into a fence, the result is often severe injury or death. Currently, federal officials plan in 2015 to make a final decision on whether to list the bird as endangered. In the meantime, state and local officials are seeking ways to improve the bird's populations, including minimizing fence collision deaths.

However, not all fences need to be marked, said Jack Connelly, one of the study's researchers and principal wildlife research biologist with the Idaho Department of Fish and Game.

The highest chance of a collision was near sage grouse mating grounds called leks, Connelly said.

After monitoring fence collisions for close to a year, he said the amount of grouse collisions the research team saw was surprising.

"I'm used to seeing fences on the landscape and not as something that would pose as a problem," Connelly said. "When we started this research, we were seeing dead and dying birds from fence collisions. But the beauty of it was we were able to find a solution."

Sage grouse struggle to avoid fences because evolution hasn't taught them to be wary of them, Connelly said.

"What we're doing is modifying the habitat that is difficult for the grouse to deal with it," he said.

Fence markers shouldn't be viewed as the ultimate resolution though, since sage grouse deaths still occur, said Katie Fite, biodiversity director of the Hailley-based Western Watersheds Project.

"The impact is greater than sticking some glitter on some fences," Fite said. "Oftentimes there's eroding and depending on the fence, predators can perch on the posts. So they can reduce some mortalities but that's only part of the impact that fences have in those areas."

Fence markers are quickly gaining popularity. The Jarbidge Local Working Group put up close to 14 miles of fence markers last year and plans to install the same amount this summer, said Brad Lowe, a regional biologist for Fish and Game.

The North Magic Valley LWG also plans to place fence markers near the Ketchum area, said Walt Locke, one of the group's members.

"We've been talking about it for about two years," Locke said. "And now our group is getting ready to put markers on about 40 miles of fence."

Man in Custody Swallowed Pills, Collapsed, Police Say

BY ALISON GENE SMITH
alismsmith@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • A Buhl man suspected of drug use collapsed while being escorted to booking in the Twin Falls County Jail late Wednesday night, police say.

According to a police report, Robert Joseph Ferreira, 23, fell to the floor as detention deputies escorted him and became unresponsive shortly after informing a Buhl police officer that he swallowed an unknown number of Xanax pills.

Officers Benny Torres and Sheena Bingham responded to the Siesta Motel at 629 Broadway Ave. S. in Buhl at about 11:10 p.m. Wednesday to attempt to make contact with Ferreira, whom police say had three active warrants out for his arrest.

According to police reports, Ferreira attempted to climb out his motel room's bathroom window before taking off running.

"I pursued Robert on foot north in the 600 block of Broadway Avenue South. Robert then ran east crossing Broadway Avenue South," Torres wrote in a report. "Robert then continued running until he was in front of Broadway Java located at 500 Broadway Avenue South where he stopped and I ordered him to the ground."

When Torres asked Ferreira why he ran, Ferreira allegedly replied he heard Torres was fast and wanted to see if it was true, the report said.

After Ferreira was in custody, he asked Bingham to get some of his personal items from the room. When Bingham entered the room, she noticed a knife with white crystal residue on it, the police report stated.

In a search of the room, Bingham allegedly found 19.2 grams of methamphetamine, 2.3 grams of marijuana, prescription pain medicine, antidepressants, anti-seizure and anti-anxiety medication. She also found numerous plastic baggies and a small digital scale, the report stated.

While Bingham searched the room, Torres transported Ferreira to the Twin Falls County Jail. En route, Ferreira allegedly said he swallowed Xanax pills, the police report said.

Upon arrival at the jail, Ferreira collapsed and became unresponsive, according to the report. He was transported to St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center where Ferreira allegedly told medical personnel he swallowed two grams of meth, the report said.

According to the report, Ferreira tested positive for methamphetamine and marijuana but negative for Xanax.

Ferreira was cleared by medical staff and booked into the jail on warrants for failing to appear, a no-contact order violation, resisting and obstructing police, possession of marijuana, possession without a prescription and possession with intent to deliver. He was held on a total bond of $105,100. A preliminary hearing is scheduled for June 15.

U.S. 93 Paving Project near Rogerson Begins Monday

Times • News

TWIN FALLS • A 15-mile roadway paving project on U.S. Highway 93 in southern Twin Falls County is expected to begin on Monday, according to a release from the Idaho Transportation Department. The project will continue through the summer.

Beginning Monday, drivers can expect delays as the construction crew begins to mill the existing roadway throughout the project limits. Paving activities are expected to begin in early July and extend through August. The full-width rehabilitation project begins at about milepost 5.5, where a similar project was completed in 2011, and extends north past Rogerson to near Deep Creek.

The project will remove cracking, rutting and potholes, restore the surface smoothness and increase the structural value of the section.

Drivers are urged to be cautious when approaching the work zone and to watch for flaggers. A pilot car will be used during work hours to guide traffic around the milling and paving operations. A 45-mph speed limit will be in effect through the work zone.

Knife River Corp. of Boise is the contractor for the $8.25 million roadway project.

The project is expected to be complete by the end of September.

The Smokin' Head Smoke Shop gets a makeover while Fat Rat Tattoo moves into the building Thursday in Twin Falls.

New Color Scheme for New Blue Lakes Shop

TIMES-NEWS

TWIN FALLS • Allen Nagel is down one purple and lime-green building.

The Smokin' Head Smoke Shop owner is moving his business to Washington Street and replacing it with a tattoo parlor.

To help prepare for the opening of Fat Ratt Tattoo, Nagel decided to paint over the purple and lime-green building with a simple shade of white.

"I want to make a statement. It's no longer the Smokin'

Head," he said. "Fat Ratt Tattoo is taking over the building and I don't want the tattoo shop to suffer the stigma."

When Nagel first decided to paint the shop in the quirky color in late 2010, city officials raised concern over the choice of color and the high visibility of the store. At the time, former Mayor Don Hall called the building an "affront" to the community.

Nagel says the new smoke shop on Washington Street hasn't received any complaints for the same color scheme.

Police: Woman Brought Daughters on Shoplifting Trip

BY ALISON GENE SMITH
alismith@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • A Twin Falls woman is in jail in lieu of $25,000 bond after Twin Falls Police say she and her teen daughters shoplifted from Sportsman's Warehouse at 1940 Bridgeview Blvd. on Tuesday.

Police responded at about 7:15 p.m. and spoke with the store's loss prevention officer, Christopher Koons, who said he saw the woman, identified as Christina Boyer, 35, and her daughters stealing merchandise, court records said.

"Koons stated he watched Boyer select clothing merchandise and hand it to her daughters," the police report said. "The girls entered the dressing room, concealed the merchandise in their large camouflage purses, and left the store without paying."

One girl had $177.93 worth of clothing in her purse, while the other had a sweater worth $34.99, the records said.

Koons told officers it wasn't the first time the girls and their mother stole things, the records said.

"Koons said the girls had entered the store on Feb. 3, April 5 and on April 23, stealing approximately $361.88 worth of merchandise," the police report said.

Police said Koons told them he interviewed Boyer who admitted she knew her daughters were stealing from the store, records said.

In an interview with police, Boyer allegedly said she told her daughters they could pick out some shirts and she would purchase the shirts on another day because she "couldn't afford it," the report said.

"She witnessed them enter the dressing room and knew that they had concealed the merchandise and exited the dressing room," the report said.

According to the report, Boyer left the store and came back to discover her daughters had been detained for shoplifting.

One of the girls allegedly told police she stole some of the items for a cousin's birthday present, but that she knew stealing was wrong.

All three were arrested. The two girls were taken to the Snake River Detention Center on burglary charges, while Boyer was taken to the Twin Falls County Jail.

The girls had previously been arrested for shoplifting at Walmart, the police report said. The girls allegedly told police "they selected high price items that did not contain security devices to steal to make money," the report said.

Boyer is scheduled for a June 15 preliminary hearing.

The Rolling Stone article, to be published today, also quotes other soldiers and associates of Bergdahl's as saying that he had talked about walking to Pakistan if his deployment was "lame" and that shortly before his disappearance he had asked whether he should take his weapon if he left the base. Friends and other soldiers describe a survivalist mentality, and Bergdahl's father,

The emails were provided to the magazine by Bergdahl's family in Idaho, which has gone public with its own discontent with U.S. efforts to free their son. There is no way to authenticate the emails.

Some of Bergdahl's reported words read like a suicide note.

That's similar to what workers see on Fourth of July and the week leading up to the holiday, when firecrackers spook dogs into taking off, Blackwood said.

Whether your dog is freaked out by fireworks or likely to bolt if the wind opens the gate, planning ahead may stop runaways. Blackwood offered this advice:

Bring your dog inside: If that's not possible, reinforce your gate before thunderstorms or fireworks shows. You can do that with a lock, or dog-grade electric wire available at pet supply stores.

Turn on the radio. If your dog gets scared by claps of thunder or cracks from fireworks, the constant noise from the radio will mute the booms, Blackwood said.

If your dog does escape, call the shelter. If you get the answering machine, leave a description of your dog and contact information.

Cassia County Appoints New Jury Commissioner

BY LAURIE WELCH

lwelch@magicvalley.com

BURLEY • A new jury commissioner was appointed Thursday for the Cassia County courts after a judge declared a mistrial Wednesday based on comments made to a jury panel by the previous commissioner.

Cassia County Clerk Joe Larsen said he received an administrative order from 5th District Administrative Judge G. Richard Bevan to appoint Cassia County employee Theresa Forthun as jury commissioner.

Larsen said Forthun has previously served as jury commissioner.

"She is well-attuned with that job and actually started with some of those duties today," he said.

Forthun is the chief elections clerk for the county and will be attending to the duties of both jobs.

The shift in personnel stems from a mistrial in the Alvin Andrew child sex crimes case. Cassia County 5th District Judge Michael Crabtree declared a mistrial in the case at the state's request, after the former jury commissioner made comments to a jury panel regarding the defendant's presumption of innocence and that it was an important day for the defendant.

Larsen said the previous commissioner, whose name has not been released, has not been placed on administrative leave and that the matter is under review. He declined to comment further due to the matter being a personnel issue.

"We are following due process," he said. "We are trying to be very judicious in the review and I'm comfortable with the direction we're heading."

was reached in May after two full-day meetings.

Next year, teachers will receive a 1 percent raise to their base salary and a one-time 1 percent bonus.

Assistant Superintendent John Blackman said Students Come First has impacted negotiations.

"It has definitely shortened the process," he said.

But for other south-central Idaho school districts, that hasn't been the case.

Jerome Superintendent Dale Layne said an agreement was reached in May after just two negotiations sessions. But the length of the process isn't much different than years ago.

"It hasn't been a big change for us in our district," he said.

Next school year, Jerome teachers will have five furlough days — fewer than the 8 1/2 this year. Negotiation teams also agreed to try to bring back a few job positions.

Jolene Dockstader, president of the Jerome Education Association, said the process went well this year and she's glad some furlough days were restored.

"When the funds aren't really there, it makes it much more difficult to say, you know, we need to put more days back," she said.

School districts and teachers unions have a Sunday deadline to reach an agreement. If they don't, the school board is left to "impose" teacher salaries and benefits itself.

That's what could happen in the Cassia County School District for the second year in a row.

Superintendent Gaylen Smyer said after two negotiations meetings, he doubts an agreement will be reached by deadline.

"We're kind of at an impasse," he said.

Smyer said Students Come First is only one piece of a larger picture. The laws, he said, are coming into play at the same time the district is addressing financial struggles and can't offer employees as much.

In Kimberly, an agreement also hasn't been reached. Superintendent Kathleen Noh said that will leave the school board to impose, but members will keep talking with the teachers union about what they'd like to see.

Just Salaries and Benefits

Under Students Come First, negotiations are limited to salaries and benefits. That typically makes up about 80 percent of a school district's budget, McGrath said.

Teachers unions used to be able to bargain over working conditions such as the school calendar, bell schedule and how teachers are evaluated.

Now, it's up to school boards to come up with policies to address those topics.

During negotiating sessions, what falls under the category of "compensation" or "benefits" can also be a bit vague.

Under Idaho Code, compensation is defined as "salary and benefits for the professional employee," while benefits are limited to "employee insurance, leave time and sick leave benefits."

"A lot of discussion is spent on what each group thinks it should include," said Twin Falls School District spokeswoman Beth Pendergrass.

Open to the Public

For the past two years, negotiations meetings have been open to the public. Before Students Come First, discussions happened behind closed doors.

McGrath said negotiations should happen in a forum where parents, teachers and the general public can know what's happening. Plus, having an open session can sometimes change participants' behavior.

"In the past, we heard stories on both sides that it would get pretty heated behind closed doors," she said.

During Twin Falls negotiations Monday, about 15 school district employees watched all or part of the meeting from the back of the room.

Dobbs said the presence of guests didn't seem to bother either side.

"I think it's a positive change," he said.

But some districts are seeing a lack of interest in the meetings.

In Jerome, Layne said only a couple of people have showed up to negotiations meetings over the past two years.

"It's not like we've had a big crowd for negotiations," he said.

"It went very well," Wiggins said, though being downwind of Flynn prevented the dog from hearing the calls to let go right away.

This was the third year Wiggins and Flynn participated in the conference, and Wiggins said the two are constantly learning and improving.

"There's not a perfect dog out there," he said. "Everyone can improve."

Throughout the week the dogs and their handlers participated in training including drug detecting, repelling from the canyon wall and apprehending suspects in water.

All of the scenarios the dogs are put through help them be more confident and comfortable in real life, Twin Falls County Sheriff's Deputy Morgan Case said.

One of the main goals of training is to put productive stress on the dogs, preparing them for real-life scenarios, Case said.

"We challenge the dog and the handler," he said.

This week, some dogs rode in boats for the first time. Then they had to jump out, swim and catch a Dogs remember in pictures, Case said. Once they've done something they remember it and will be more comfortable doing it in the future.

Chubbuck Police K-9 Officer Shane Call brought his dog Marco to the conference for the second year in a row.

Call said the conferences help him realize what he and Marco need to work on. This time, situations where Marco needed to apprehend a stationary subject proved to be more difficult.

The dog is used to chasing people who run, but running up to a person standing still was a different situation, Call said.

Although having a policing tool with a mind of its own can have its difficulties, dogs are excellent tools for many reasons, Case said.

"When you pull a trigger on a Taser, it's going to deploy," he said. "You can send the dog, and then stop him."

Federal Judge Halts Eastern Idaho Logging Project

BY KEITH RIDLER
Associated Press

BOISE • A federal judge has halted a 7,000-acre eastern Idaho logging project in potential lynx habitat near Yellowstone National Park after finding the U.S. Forest Service failed to follow federal laws intended to safeguard the environment.

U.S. District Magistrate Judge Candy Dale's decision Wednesday following a lawsuit by environmental groups over the Split Creek timber harvest also affects about 390,000 additional acres in the Caribou-Targhee National Forest.

"We're thrilled," said Mike Garrity, executive director of the Alliance for the Wild Rockies. "This is going to protect a lot of habitat that is very important to the recovery of lynx."

The Native Ecosystems Council also took part in the lawsuit filed in May 2011 in U.S. District Court in Idaho challenging a decision by federal forest managers to cut lodgepole pines in the 7,000-acre tract the groups said includes important habitat for threatened lynx.

Those 7,000 acres were part of nearly 400,000 acres designated as lynx habitat in 2001. But the Forest Service in 2005 created a new map that removed that land as lynx habitat, opening it to logging.

Dale ruled the agency's failure to conduct an environmental impact statement as required by the National Environmental Policy Act when creating the 2005 map meant decisions based on the map are invalid.

She also said the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service in 2009 erred when agreeing with the Forest Service in a biological assessment that logging the areas wouldn't jeopardize the lynx or its habitat. She said the biological assessment was based on the invalid 2005 map, making the decision a violation of the Endangered Species Act.

"The Court finds that the Forest Service's failure to prepare an Environmental Impact Statement for a decision that ultimately opened approximately 400,000 acres of previously protected land to pre-commercial thinning violated NEPA," Dale wrote. "Moreover, like a house of cards built on an unsound foundation, because the 2005 map was not analyzed under NEPA, the agency's analysis under the ESA — which is based upon the validity of the 2005 map — cannot withstand judicial review."

In her 50-page decision she ordered both federal agencies to reconsider their decisions based on her findings.

"We're still processing the ruling and what it might mean," said Miel Corbett, spokeswoman for Fish and Wildlife. "We'll be able to comment at a later time."

Idaho State Announces Pay Raises for Employees

POCATELLO (AP) • Idaho State University will match state funds with school money to give employees pay hikes that average 4.5 percent, school officials said.

The raises will begin July 1, the Idaho State Journal reported.

"The ISU compensation plan, which will contribute nearly $4 million to the local economy, is critically important for several reasons," said Idaho State President Arthur Vailas in a statement. "Great universities only become that way because of their most important resource — their people. Idaho State University's rise in academic prominence as a destination university is directly related to the hard work and sacrifice our faculty and staff have made."

School officials said the raises will cost about $3.9 million and are being paid for with money from the state matched with money from the university. The school has about $12 million in reserve, compared to about $500,000 when Vailas became president in 2005.

Pay raises will be based on merit for faculty and range from 2 percent to 26.3 percent. The 600-member faculty on average will see a 3.9 percent increase in pay, the school said.

Dog Park an Investment in Twin Falls’ Future

One letter to the editor about dog poop on a softball field and the words started flying on Magicvalley.com. There was more than a little name-calling, a whole lot of finger-pointing and people eager to highlight their neighbors’ personal and grammatical flaws. The emotion didn’t add much to the debate, but one thing was clear — people are passionate about their pets. When cooler heads prevailed the discussion turned to the real topic at hand: Twin Falls needs a dog park — a place where pets can run off-leash and pet owners can socialize on the sidelines.

While a majority of those participating in the conversation were excited about the prospect of a city dog park, a handful of commenters and letter writers wondered why tax dollars should go to fund a frivolous thing as a park for dogs.

The answer is simple — building a dog park is not frivolous. Building amenities, especially the kind that help create community, is a linchpin in economic development.

And the city’s approach to building a dog park for area pet owners has been measured and fiscally conservative. (Too measured, impatient dog owners say.)

Last week, the Twin Falls City Council approved a land swap between the city and the county that transferred ownership of three acres on the corner of Shoup Avenue West and Blake Street North. The Twin Falls Parks and Recreation Department plans to turn the acreage into a dog park and community garden. The city wants to install grass, a sprinkler system and a parking area before it lets dogs have the run of the place.

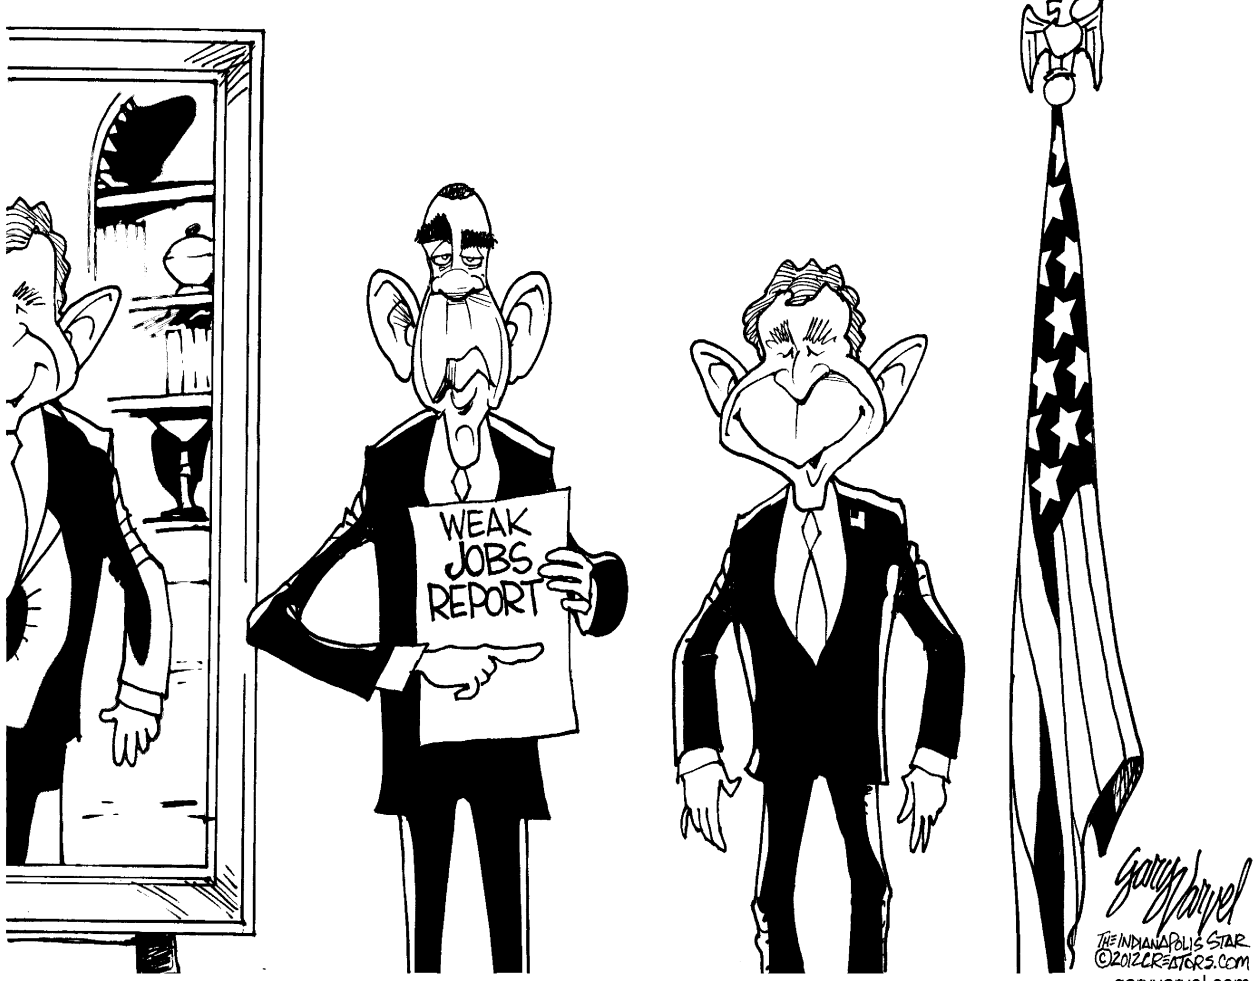

Dog owners are putting money where their mouth is by pledging thousands in donations and volunteer time. (Twin Falls County Commissioner Leon Mills volunteered his time to build the fence.)

Decisions on where people decide to relocate now involve more than just good jobs and good schools. Americans are more mobile than ever, and younger people decide where they want to live by looking for lifestyle amenities — including dog parks. In his book, “The Rise of the Creative Class,” Richard Florida writes that off-leash areas for dogs can be a crucial factor to people looking to relocate. It’s that big a deal.

These days, not having a park for dogs is almost as strange as not having a playground for children. According to a USA Today report, there are now more households with dogs (43 million) than with children (38 million).

As Twin Falls continues to attract business, the city will also need to attract quality workers that these growing large-scale businesses need to succeed. We want to make sure that our most-talented young people have a reason to stay after they graduate from high school or come back after they graduate from college.

Transforming a weed-filled vacant lot on Shoup Avenue is a great step in that community mission. Although appearing frivolous to some, laying down some grass and erecting a fence for our pets is a great investment for the future.

In response to the story, “City Officials Discuss Response to Water Crisis,” an online reader wrote: walworld: “It seems very odd that they have no backup power at the site, especially if this is their main water source. Hopefully, that will be addressed to avoid this problem in the future.”

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Bill before Senate Allows Government Intrusion of Privacy

On April 26, a bill known as CISPA passed the U.S. House of Representatives.

CISPA (The Cyber Intelligence Sharing and Protection Act) is a proposed law that would allow sharing of Internet information between the government and certain technology companies.

CISPA allows companies like Facebook and Verizon to collect your personal data and pass it on to the government. This would include private communications such as email and text messages. The companies or the government could then modify your information or prevent it from ever arriving at its destination. All the government has to do is ask for this information in the name of cyber security, without warrant.

The bill will soon go to the Senate. Please contact our representatives and help them know that we are against this invasion of our privacy. I, for one, am not a fan of the idea of turning our government into Big Brother. But that’s just me.

Is America on Her Death Bed?

More grim realities: Our republic is in danger! Unfortunately, many citizens do not recognize the sinister events unfolding. A few items are submitted herewith for consideration: National debt at a record high; Inadequate border control and floods of illegal immigrants (placing our citizens, sovereignty and economy at risk); Absurdly high legal immigrant quotas per Executive Order by Barack Hussein Obama; An atmosphere of political correctness that is contributing to our demise; Massive amounts of our tax dollars given to entities which hate us; A “bleeding heart liberal” secretary of state attempting to make our republic subservient to a corrupt United Nations; A Department of Justice that prevents states from implementing voter identification laws (anticipate widespread voter fraud and civil disorder); Sanctuary cities for illegal immigrants; Our administration’s “back door amnesty” policies; Administration’s stonewalling of legitimate Freedom of Information Act requests; Administration’s relentless quest to make our Republic a welfare (nanny) state; Disarmament, START Treaty, etc. (while China, North Korea and Iran are in high gear toward armament development); Our republic’s naive, dangerous, liberal immigration policies (Netherlands, France, United Kingdom and others are regretting their imprudent policies); Our republic is under attack from within and without (covert and overt tactics. Also, “home grown” terrorist cells developing); Administration’s appointment of czars to an absurd level; Christianity is under siege both at home and abroad; I remind everyone that the “Arab Spring” is in fact a great crusade and our Republic is a prime target; Venezuela’s “coziness” with Iran is another card “stacked” against us.

America is on her death bed — on life support,” according to comments by Lewis Farrakhan, Nation of Islam. Will we awaken to the grim realities and prove him wrong?

News Organizations Appeal Idaho Execution Case

BY GREG RISLING AND JESSIE L. BONNER

Associated Press

PASADENA, Calif. • A federal appeals court asked Idaho prosecutors on Thursday to inquire whether a prison warden would allow full viewing access to an upcoming execution in a case filed by The Associated Press and 16 other news outlets, including the Times-News.

The 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals heard arguments in a lawsuit that seeks to strike a portion of Idaho's regulations that prevent witnesses — including reporters acting as representatives of the public — from watching executions until after catheters have been inserted into the veins of death row inmates.

No ruling was issued, but the three-judge panel noted the federal court had already ruled in a 2002 California case that every aspect of an execution should be open to witnesses, from the moment the condemned enters the death chamber to the final heart-beat. The decade-old decision established what was expected of the nine Western states within the court's jurisdiction.

The news organizations filed their case last month after talks were unsuccessful with prison officials, who took the position that the 2002 ruling was based on facts unique to California, said Chuck Brown, an attorney for the news organizations, who cited letters from Idaho correction director Brent Reinke.

Outside of court, Idaho Deputy Attorney General

Michael Gilmore said he will try to reach the warden to see if a policy change could be made in time for next week's execution of Richard Leavitt, who was convicted of the 1984 murder of Blackfoot resident Danette Elg.

The lawsuit comes as lethal injections have drawn greater scrutiny, from whether the drugs are effective to whether the execution personnel are properly trained.

The news organizations also asked a federal judge in Idaho to prevent Leavitt's execution from moving forward without the changes, but that request was denied Tuesday.

In his decision, U.S. District Judge Edward J. Lodge said that while the news organizations had presented a strong case in arguing that the execution limits run afoul of freedom of the press provisions, the timing of the claim fell too close to Leavitt's execution date and could cause a delay.

Lodge didn't rule on the merits of the lawsuit, only denying the request for a preliminary injunction.

The media outlets want the 9th Circuit to reverse Lodge's decision, arguing the process is unconstitutionally restrictive.

Gilmore said one of the concerns leveled by Idaho prison officials was that the identities of the five-member execution team might be made public if the execution is viewed by witnesses from start to finish.

Distillery Wants 'Five Wives' Vodka on ID Shelves

BY PAUL FOY
Associated Press

SALT LAKE CITY • A Utah distillery is happy Idaho will sell its cheeky Five Wives vodka by special order.

However, Ogden's Own Distillery lawyer Jonathan Turley said Thursday the company also wants Idaho regulators to stock Five Wives on shelves at state liquor stores.

Regulators are considering the request.

Idaho regulators initially refused to allow any sales of the product — with its not-so-subtle reference to polygamy — after branding it offensive to Mormons who make up a quarter of Idaho's population. The church dropped the practice of polygamy in 1890.

Those regulators reversed course on Wednesday and agreed to take special warehouse orders for the product. But that hasn't satisfied the distillery.

"We still remain deeply concerned about Idaho's original claim of authority that they can ban any product deemed offensive to a part of its population," said Turley, a George Washington University professor.

Turley said making Five Wives available only by special order is a half-measure and "an enormous hassle" for consumers and taverns that want it.

LAWMAKER JOINS OTTER FIGHT TO KEEP EDUCATION LAWS

BY JESSIE L. BONNER
Associated Press

BOISE • A retiring state lawmaker has joined Republican Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter's campaign to retain new education laws that limit collective bargaining while phasing laptops into the classroom and making online learning a requirement.

State Rep. Mack Shirley of Rexburg has been named treasurer of the governor's political action committee, YES! For Idaho Education. The campaign's paperwork was filed with the Idaho Secretary of State's office late Wednesday.

Shirley supported the reforms in the Idaho Legislature and approached Otter to offer his help after it became apparent that critics of the education changes had gathered enough signatures to get a repeal initiative on the November ballot, said Ken Burgess, who is managing the campaign.

Shirley "was a really good, natural choice for us," Burgess said.

The campaign will be spearheaded by Otter and co-chaired by state Board of Education member Milford Terrell and Wendy Horman, who serves on the Idaho Falls School Board. Their work will be targeted at beating back the repeal efforts.

The three laws championed by public schools chief Tom Luna and backed by Otter were approved during the 2011 session amid outcry from the teachers union, parents and some students. More than 74,000 signatures were collected on each of three petitions last spring to put the new Idaho laws to referendum votes.

The changes included polarizing provisions that eliminated bonuses for educators who retire early; phased out tenure; and made student achievement half of a teacher's job evaluation. Idaho also ditched the "last hired, first fired" policy used in most districts for laying off educators, which means those with the most seniority could be in jeopardy. High school students will get laptops starting next year, but teachers are getting the devices first this fall.

Idaho also introduced a plan to award teachers merit bonuses, put more money into professional development and is paying for paying for students to take college credits while they're still in high school, under the changes.

A political group working to overturn Luna's Students Come First plan has hired an out-of-state consultant who last November helped repeal a hotly debated Ohio law that limited collective bargaining. David Williams has been working on the Idaho campaign since April.

Otter picked Burgess, a lobbyist and veteran campaigner, to help plot his strategy for rallying behind the new education laws.

Burgess contends the Ohio defeat won't prove a harbinger of things to come in Idaho. Meanwhile, Idaho Republican Party Chairman Norm Semanko has cited Wisconsin, issuing a statement several hours before Republican Gov. Scott Walker's recall victory saying the outcome of the election was critical to Idaho's future.

Case Turns Spotlight on Idaho's Execution History

BY BETSY Z. RUSSELL
The Spokesman-Review

BOISE • As Idaho's news media spar with the state in federal court over limits on access to executions, the case has turned a spotlight on Idaho's long and consistent history of media witnesses attending its state executions to serve as the eyes and ears of the public.

Media witnesses have been present for all but one Idaho execution since 1901 and published detailed accounts of them.

"The body swung not to the right and left, the rope made not a single twist, but facing the sun in the eastern sky, like one standing erect, all that was mortal of Ed Rice was there before his fellows, while the tide of life fast ebbed away," the Idaho Daily Statesman reported in 1901, recounting the first state execution held at Idaho's state prison.

Prior to 1901, executions were conducted at the county level in Idaho, and most were public, with hundreds attending.

Idaho's news media, including the Associated Press, the Spokesman-Review, the Times-News and more than a dozen other news outlets and organizations, are suing in federal court over Idaho's current execution procedures, which bar witnesses from the first portion of the lethal injection procedure, when the condemned prisoner is strapped down to a gurney and IVs are inserted.

The media have been in discussions with the state over the issue since before Paul Ezra Rhoades was executed in November, but the state has refused to change its procedure. Now, another Idaho execution is scheduled: Richard Leavitt is scheduled to die by lethal injection on June 12.

The lawsuit cites a 2002 9th Circuit U.S. Court of Appeals decision that held it was a violation of the 1st Amendment to the U.S. Constitution to exclude media witnesses, and by extension the public, from the full procedure, from the moment the condemned person enters the execution chamber

"The body swung not to the right and left, the rope made not a single twist, but facing the sun in the eastern sky, like one standing erect, all that was mortal of Ed Rice was there before his fellows, while the tide of life fast ebbed away."

An excerpt from an Idaho Daily Statesman report in 1901, recounting the first state execution held at Idaho's state prison to the time of death. That case was brought by the news media in California. However, only two states in the 9th Circuit — California and Nevada — have been complying with the 2002 decision.

The state of Idaho has argued that allowing witnesses to view the first portion of the procedure would violate the condemned prisoner's privacy, could impact other death row inmates, would cause suffering for the prisoner's family and friends, and could identify members of the execution team. However, the team is masked and wears surgical garb.

"Few of us know with any certainty when or how we will die," the state's attorneys wrote in legal filings. "If we did, would we want our full gamut of emotion, or our contemplation of eternity or cessation of existence, or our regret or defiance, on display? Or would we prefer some final, private moments during the arrangements for the execution before the curtain is opened?"

The media, in legal papers filed Monday, argued that 1st Amendment concerns outweigh those issues, and that inmates' privacy rights are limited.

"Witness attendance at an execution assures public involvement in the process, and transparency fuels informed public debate, which is the main purpose behind granting a right of access to governmental proceedings," wrote the news media's attorney, Charles Brown of Lewiston.

No such questions were raised in the early days of Idaho executions, when news reporters had full access to the entire execution process.

In 1901, the Idaho Daily Statesman reporter, Fred Flood, wrote that he and other newsmen were ushered into Rice's cell, to hear the death warrant read to the condemned man, after the warden "stated that only those present in a religious, official or reportorial capacity could enter the cell, on account of its size."

They then followed the prisoner to the gallows where he would be hanged, and reported in detail on the entire procedure, up to when guards placed the body in a coffin and "carried it to one of the small houses on the (prison) grounds."

Similar detailed, firsthand accounts were published in the newspapers of the day of executions carried out at the Idaho State Penitentiary in 1904, 1906, 1909, 1924 and 1926.

In 1909, the Idaho Daily Statesman published a photograph of a hand-written, elaborately lettered invitation/ticket the newspaper had received the day before from Warden John W. Snook, stating, "Admit Reporter Boise Statesman, To the execution of Fred Seward, May 7th, at 8 o'clock a.m." The warden signed his name at the bottom with a flourish.

The only state execution at which members of the Idaho news media weren't present was a hurry-up double hanging in the middle of the night in 1951, when a frightened prison warden who feared inmate riots refused all requests from outside witnesses, had the gallows erected starting at 5 p.m. for the midnight execution, and had all traces of them removed by morning. The hanging of the two men, ages 20 and 21, was highly controversial due to their age; they had murdered a local grocer.

At Idaho's last hanging in 1957, several newspaper reporters were present but declined, at the final moment, to enter the observation room at the new indoor gallows. There, a dozen witnesses saw the condemned man, Raymond Allen Snowden, strapped to a full-length backboard, fall awkwardly through the trap door and take 15 minutes to die.

Prison guard Mark Maxwell, who attended the execution, told an Idaho Oral History Center interviewer in 1981, "There was two or three newspaper guys here. They didn't want in — they all waited out here."

Idaho has conducted two executions since 1957, both by lethal injection. At each of those, media witnesses were admitted to the execution chamber and documented what they saw.

Associated Press reporter Bob Fick was among the witnesses at the execution of Keith Eugene Wells in 1994. In a 2011 National Public Radio interview, he remembered the lethal injection procedure as "sterile and antiseptic," in contrast to Wells' crime, in which Wells beat his two victims to death with a baseball bat at a Boise bar.

In November of 2011, Idaho executed triple murderer Paul Ezra Rhoades. Four media witnesses attended and shared their observations with other reporters and the public in a pooled arrangement. Idaho Press-Tribune reporter Nate Green said the procedure was "very quiet and somber." He also reported that once Rhoades was dead, a friend of one of Rhoades' victims muttered, "The devil has gone home."

Editor's Note: Reporter Betsy Z. Russell, who is president of the Idaho Press Club, researched the history of media witnesses to Idaho executions both for this article and for the news media's court challenge.

IDAHO BRIEFS

Former Candidate Plans Plea Deal

BOISE • A former congressional candidate who police say threatened office store employees with a handgun waived her right to a preliminary hearing after a court-ordered evaluator found she was mentally competent to participate in her own defense.

The Idaho Statesman reports that 58-year-old Cynthia Clinkingbeard waived the right on Wednesday and is scheduled to enter a plea later this month in 4th District Court. She has been charged with three felony counts of aggravated assault and a weapons charge.

She filed as a Democratic candidate for Idaho's 1st Congressional District but was arrested in March, and last month lost in the primary election to former NFL football player Jimmy Farris.

The Idaho Board of Medicine revoked Clinkingbeard's medical license in 2005 for increasing erratic behavior due to bipolar disorder.

Police: Driver Looking at Text Hits Patrol Car

RIGBY • Police say a 22-year-old eastern Idaho driver was looking at a text message on his phone when he hit a sheriff deputy's parked patrol car.

Brian J. Anderson, of Idaho Falls, was treated Tuesday for non-life threatening injuries.

Idaho State Police say Anderson was traveling on U.S. Route 20 north of Rigby when the accident occurred. Police say Anderson was looking at a text message on his phone when he drove into the back of a patrol car parked on the side of the road.

The Idaho State Journal reports that the Jefferson County sheriff's deputy was not in the patrol car at the time. The vehicle's lights were flashing to alert drivers to a fire in the median of the road.

Anderson was cited for inattentive driving.

Idaho Bicyclist Hit by Truck, Hospitalized

LEWISTON • Police say a bicyclist hit by a pickup truck in northern Idaho was being treated for serious injuries at a Lewiston hospital.

The Lewiston Tribune reports 32-year-old Shane V. Black of Coeur d'Alene was struck Tuesday while attempting to cross a street in Lewiston.

Police Capt. Roger Lanier says the accident happened after a vehicle stopped to allow Black to cross the road.

Police say Black rode past that vehicle but was then struck by a small pickup that had entered the adjacent turn lane.

Dallas Owens of Clarkston, Wash., was driving the vehicle that hit Black and told police that he didn't see Black until it was too late to stop. Black was in serious condition late Wednesday at St. Joseph Regional Medical Center in Lewiston.

Suicides Are Surging among US Troops

BY ROBERT BURNS
AP National Security Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) • Suicides are surging among America's troops, averaging nearly one a day this year — the fastest pace in the nation's decade of war.

The 154 suicides for active-duty troops in the first 155 days of the year far outdistance the U.S. forces killed in action in Afghanistan — about 50 percent more — according to Pentagon statistics obtained by The Associated Press.

The numbers reflect a military burdened with wartime demands from Iraq and Afghanistan that have taken a greater toll than foreseen a decade ago. The military also is struggling with increased sexual assaults, alcohol abuse, domestic violence and other misbehavior.

Because suicides had leveled off in 2010 and 2011, this year's upswing has caught some officials by surprise.

The reasons for the increase are not fully understood. Among explanations, studies have pointed to combat exposure, post-traumatic stress, misuse of prescription medications and personal financial problems. Army data suggest soldiers with multiple combat tours are at greater risk of committing suicide, although a substantial proportion of Army suicides are committed by soldiers who never deployed.

The unpopular war in Afghanistan is winding down with the last combat troops scheduled to leave at the end of 2014. But this year has seen record numbers of soldiers being killed by Afghan troops, and there also have been several scandals involving U.S. troop misconduct.

The 2012 active-duty suicide total of 154 through June 3 compares to 130 in the same period last year, an 18 percent increase. And it's more than the 136.2 suicides that the Pentagon had projected for this period based on the trend from 2001-2011. This year's January-May total is up 25 percent from two years ago, and it is 16 percent ahead of the pace for 2009, which ended with the highest yearly total thus far.

Suicide totals have exceeded U.S. combat deaths in Afghanistan in earlier periods, including for the full years 2008 and 2009.

The suicide pattern varies over the course of a year, but in each of the past five years the trend through May was a reliable predictor for the full year, according to a chart based on figures provided by the Armed Forces Medical Examiner.

The numbers are rising among the 1.4 million active-duty military personnel despite years of effort to encourage troops to seek help with mental health problems. Many in the military believe that going for help is seen as a sign of weakness and thus a potential threat to advancement.

Nevada Means Pitfalls, Promise for White House Candidates

BY JULIE PACE
AND CRISTINA SILVA
Associated Press

LAS VEGAS • President Barack Obama and Republican rival Mitt Romney are battling more than just each other in diverse and politically divided Nevada.

The president also is fighting against Nevada's dismal economy while Romney faces a better-organized and better-funded state Democratic Party machine with a victorious track record.

Those factors are leveling the playing field here, and Obama and Romney head into the summer seemingly locked in a close race in a state that both sides expect will be fiercely contested — and a true toss-up — throughout the fall.

Both are making Nevada and its six Electoral College votes a priority in their state-by-state strategies as they look to amass the 270 votes needed to win the White House.

Obama was making his second trip to the state in less than a month on Thursday, with a Las Vegas event aimed at wooing young, college-aged voters. Romney was just in the city a week ago for a fundraiser with Donald Trump. So far, at least $5.6 million in TV ads has been spent in the state, with Obama and his Democratic allies spending roughly $1.2 million more than Republican outside groups. Romney, himself, has yet to go on the air.

Nevada's outcome is all but certain to come down to a huge swath of independent and undecided voters here, many of whom say they'll choose the candidate with the right economic prescriptions.

"This state is so troubled, we need someone committed to fixing it, and I don't see that," says Robert Aguirre, an independent voter who said he had backed Republican John McCain and Democrat Bill Clinton. Aguirre said he is confident Obama won't soon return jobs to Nevada, but he isn't convinced Romney is up for the task, either, saying: "I haven't really seen him here, I haven't heard him talk about Nevada."

Lisa Smith, a 23-year-old Democrat, has hesitations about Obama this time around.

"He has done a lot of good — the health care law, student loans," Smith said. "But we still don't have enough jobs for everyone in Nevada who is hurting."

Indeed, here, perhaps more than in any other state, the race is shaped by the economy.

Accusers to Be Unmasked at Penn State trial

BY MICHAEL RUBINKAM
Associated Press

The young men who accuse former Penn State assistant football coach Jerry Sandusky of molesting them have been allowed to remain anonymous through months of intense news coverage and water-cooler conversation about the scandal.

That's about to change.

When they take the witness stand in a packed Pennsylvania courtroom as early as next week, the alleged victims will be forced to state their names for the record — traumatizing them all over again, their lawyers and victims' advocates argue, especially given the very real possibility their identities will become common knowledge via social media and the wider Internet.

Most traditional media organizations, including The Associated Press, have longstanding policies against using the names of alleged victims of sexual assault, viewing the crime as so intensely personal and the potential effect of public disclosure so traumatic for the accuser that withholding the identity outweighs the public's right to know.

But in this anything-goes age of social media and citizen journalists, when anyone with a smartphone can tweet or blog, old media standards may no longer make much difference.

Anyone lucky enough to grab one of the 85 courtroom seats reserved for the public could sit in for the day, jot down some of the accusers' names, leave and disseminate them to the world.

"Most of us want to have some control over who we share intimate details of our lives with," said Karen Baker, director of the National Sexual Violence Resource Center. "To have that out there on the Internet, you've totally lost control, and it's a scary thing."

Sandusky, 68, faces 52 counts accusing him of sexually abusing 10 boys over a span of 15 years. Prosecutors say the retired coach befriended boys he met through The Second Mile, the charity he founded for youngsters in 1977, then attacked them, in some cases in his home or inside university athletic facilities. He has denied the allegations.

Most of the accusers are now in their 20s. Up to now, they have been identified in court papers only as "Victim 1," "Victim 2" and so on.

Five of the eight alleged victims who could be called to the stand asked Judge John Cleland for permission to testify under pseudonyms, saying through their lawyers that exposing their names would subject them to shame, ridicule and harassment.

An attorney for the accuser known as Victim 4 submitted an affidavit from his psychologist that said public disclosure could trigger symptoms of post-traumatic stress disorder and interfere with the young man's treatment and recovery.

UN Monitors Shot at near Site of Syrian Killings

BY ZEINA KARAM AND
EDITH M. LEDERER
Associated Press

BEIRUT (AP) • U.N. observers came under fire Thursday as they tried to reach the site of the latest reported mass killing in Syria — about 80 people, including women and children who were shot or stabbed. The deaths added urgency to diplomatic efforts to end the escalating bloodshed.

As reports emerged of what would be the fourth such mass slaying of civilians in Syria in the last two weeks, the United States condemned President Bashar Assad, saying he has "doubled down on his brutality and duplicity."

International envoy Kofi Annan, whose peace plan brokered in April has not been implemented, warned against allowing "mass killings to become part of everyday reality in Syria."

"If things do not change, the future is likely to be one of brutal repression, massacres, sectarian violence, and even all-out civil war,"

Annan told the U.N. General Assembly in New York. "All Syrians will lose."

U.N. diplomats said Annan is expected to propose that world powers and key regional players, including Iran, come up with a new strategy to end the 15-month conflict at a closed meeting of the Security Council later Thursday.

Annan will present a plan for creating a "contact group" whose final proposal must be acceptable to Russia and China, which have protected ally from past U.N. sanctions, as well as the U.S. and its European allies, they said, speaking on condition of anonymity because consultations have been private.

The latest violence centered on Mazraat al-Qubair, a small farming community of 160 people, mostly Bedouins, in central Hama province. Activists said the Sunni village is surrounded by Alawite villages. Alawites are an offshoot of Shiite Islam and Assad is a member of the sect, while the opposition is dominated by Sunnis.

CDC: Older Teens Often Text while Behind the Wheel

BY MIKE STOBBE

Associated Press

ATLANTA • Think your teen would never text while driving? More than half of high school seniors admitted in a government survey that they've done just that.

It's the first time the question was asked in a teen poll on risky behavior, and the finding comes amid a renewed federal crackdown on distracted driving.

Texting and cellphone use behind the wheel is "a national epidemic," Transportation Secretary Ray LaHood said Thursday.

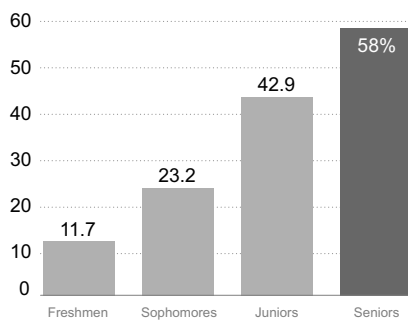

In the survey, about 58 percent of high school seniors said they had texted or emailed while driving during the previous month. About 43 percent of high school juniors acknowledged they did the same thing.

"I'm not surprised at all," said Vicki Rismasse, a New Jersey woman whose son caused a fender bender earlier this year after texting in traffic. She made him take a safe-driving class after the mishap.

"I felt like an idiot," said her 18-year-old son, Dylan Young. The episode taught him "to be a lot more cautious," although he conceded that he sometimes still texts behind the wheel.

The findings released Thursday are the first federal statistics on how common the dangerous habit is in teens. Distracted driving deaths are most common in teens, blamed for about 16 percent of teen motor vehicle deaths.

Focusing on a cellphone instead of the road leads to delayed reaction times, lane swerves and other lapses with sometimes fatal consequences, experts say.

Gov't Steps up Effort to Combat Distracted Driving

BY JOAN LOWY

Associated Press

WASHINGTON • Calling texting and cellphone use "a national epidemic," Transportation Secretary Ray LaHood laid out a blueprint Thursday for stepped-up federal efforts and pressure on states to crack down on distracted driving.

Studies show the problem is particularly acute among teenage and young adult drivers, LaHood said.

"We need to teach kids, who are the most vulnerable drivers, that texting and driving don't mix," LaHood said at a news conference. He pointed to a recent case in which a texting teen driver involved in a fatal accident was ordered jailed for a year.

The Transportation Department is also awarding $2.4 million to Delaware and California for pilot projects to combine more police enforcement with publicity campaigns against distracted driving. Similar pilot projects in Syracuse, N.Y., and Hartford, Conn., were shown to successfully reduce distracted driving, LaHood said.

LaHood called on automakers to support voluntary government guidelines to ensure dashboard technologies increasingly being added to cars won't distract drivers. But he rejected making the guidelines mandatory.

LaHood has made his opposition to distracted driving a signature issue for the Obama administration. When he was appointed transportation secretary three years ago, 18 states had anti-texting laws and seven had bans on both texting and hand-held cellphone use. Today, 39 states ban texting, and 10 ban both texting and hand-held cellphone use.

Report: Automatic Defense Cuts Undercut Obama Plan

BY DONNA CASSATA

Associated Press

WASHINGTON • Automatic defense cuts looming in January would be more devastating than previously feared and make it impossible for President Barack Obama to refocus his national security strategy, a bipartisan group of former lawmakers and retired military officers said Thursday.

Members of the Bipartisan Policy Center painted a dire picture for the nation's economy, the military and large and small defense contractors if the automatic reductions occur on Jan. 2, 2013. Based on a special task force's calculations, the group said the cuts would mean an indiscriminate, across-the-board 15 percent reduction in programs and activities within the military, not the 10 percent that had been estimated.

The gross domestic product also would be reduced by roughly half a percentage point, a blow to a struggling economy. About 1 million defense and nondefense jobs would be lost over two years, causing a spike in unemployment.

"An absolute fiasco," said former Sen. Pete Domenici, R-N.M., who served as chairman of the Senate Budget Committee.

Unless Obama, congressional Republicans and Democrats can agree on a plan to stave off the cuts, the military will face a reduction of $492 billion over a decade, with a $55 billion cut beginning in January, three months into the fiscal year. Domestic programs also would be reduced by $492 billion over a decade.

The automatic cuts, known as "sequestration," are the result of the failure last year of a bipartisan congressional panel to come up with a plan to cut the deficit by $1.2 trillion over 10 years. The panel had been created in the hard-fought budget law passed last summer that reduced government spending while raising the nation's borrowing authority.

Defense Secretary Leon Panetta unveiled a new military strategy earlier this year that reflected the drawdown of two wars in Iraq and Afghanistan and shifted the focus to future challenges in Asia, the Mideast and in cyberspace. The strategy also was driven by pressure to reduce the nation's deficit. The budget law that Obama and congressional Republicans backed last year called for reducing projected defense spending by $487 billion over 10 years.

Retired Marine Gen. James Jones, who headed the U.S. European Command, said if the Pentagon faces automatic cuts on top of the already planned reductions, "it makes the president's strategic guidance" impossible to execute.

Domenici, former Rep. Dan Glickman, D-Kan., Jones and the other retired military leaders implored Congress to act now to avert the cuts and not wait until after the election by producing broad legislation that deals with programs such as Medicare and Social Security as well as taxes. The report from the respected group is certain to add to the clamor for Congress to address the issue in the near term.

Panetta: Patience with Pakistan 'Reaching Limits'

BY HEIDI VOGT AND DEB RIECHMANN

Associated Press

KABUL, Afghanistan • The United States stepped up pressure on Pakistan Thursday as Defense Secretary Leon Panetta said "we are reaching the limits of our patience" with a nominal ally that continues to provide a safe haven to al-Qaida-linked militants.

It was the latest sign that the U.S. is now getting tougher with Pakistan after years of muting criticism and looking the other way on the premise that an uneasy friendship was better than making the nuclear-armed country an outright enemy. As U.S. forces draw down in neighboring Afghanistan, the Americans appear to be pushing Pakistan harder than ever before to squeeze insurgents who find sanctuary within its borders.

Panetta, in the Afghan capital, told reporters he was visiting Kabul to take stock of progress in the war and discuss plans for the troop drawdown. But he used a press conference to strike across the border instead, saying the Pakistani government needs to do more — and soon — to root out the al-Qaida-linked Haqqani terrorist network.

Panetta repeatedly emphasized U.S. frustration with attackers crossing the border from Pakistan. It is essential that Pakistan stop "allowing terrorists to use their country as a safety net in order to conduct their attacks on our forces," he said alongside Afghan Defense Minister Abdul Rahim Wardak.

"We have made that very clear time and time again and we will continue to do that, but as I said, we are reaching the limits of our patience," Panetta said.

The U.S. clearly wants Pakistan to take on the Haqqanis before the bulk of U.S. troops have left the region by the end of 2014. After that, the Afghans would have more trouble contending with the militants, who carry out large-scale attacks in Kabul and elsewhere.

In Washington, Gen. Martin Dempsey, chairman of the U.S. Joint Chiefs of Staff, told a Pentagon news conference that the U.S. needs to continue working with Pakistan, despite frustrations.

"It's our view that those Haqqani, notably, the Haqqani network, is as big a threat to Pakistan as it is to Afghanistan and to us, but we haven't been able to find common ground on that point. So that's been very frustrating," he said.

He added that the U.S. is "extraordinarily dissatisfied with the effect that Pakistan has had on the Haqqanis," but also mindful that Pakistan has taken on other insurgent groups at great cost to their own troops.

"There may be an increasing realization within the U.S. government that we have a few more years to really go after this problem and time is running out," said Jeffrey Dressler, an analyst at the Institute for the Study of War in Washington.

Panetta's remarks capped a week of some of the boldest language and actions by the administration against its stated ally. Just a day before, he stood in the capital of Pakistan's arch rival, India, and declared that drone strikes against terror suspects would continue, dismissing Pakistan's claims of sovereignty by noting that U.S. sovereignty was jeopardized by terrorists as well.

Mary Catherine Wallace

July 14, 1931-June 4, 2012

TWIN FALLS • Mary Catherine Wallace died Monday night, June 4, 2012, in her home in Twin Falls, very much at peace and lovingly tended by her husband, George W. "Bill" Wallace, and two of her daughters.

Known as Mary C. or Cathy to friends and family, she and George lived in Twin Falls for more than 50 years. After a year of many health challenges and too much suffering, she was ready to go and met her death — as she met her life — with much grace, intention and sheer willpower.

Born in JM, Wyo., on July 14, 1931, to Opal Nevada Emmons and George Clifford Fox, she lived most of her young life in Caldwell, Idaho, and married George W. Wallace of Nampa, Idaho, on June 9, 1950. Mary C. converted to Catholicism when she was 25 and lived her chosen faith with deep conviction and daily practice, which included a great devotion to Mary and the rosary. She loved antiques and a good bargain, and both of these pursuits filled her home (and other peoples' homes!) with beauty and a lot of interesting "stuff." She also collected many people over the years — all shapes and sizes and colors she invited in, nurtured and made family — even when most of them didn't expect it!

She is survived by her husband of 62 years, George W. Wallace; and her eight children, Cecil, Leslie, Hal, Libby, Denise, Paul, Clay and Molly; and many beautiful and amazing grandchildren and great-grandchildren too numerous to name here. She is also survived by her sisters, Marjorie Davis and Shirley Johnson; as well as her brother, Gary Fox.

Her family, plus many relatives and friends dearly loved and appreciated her presence in our lives — her childlike wonder, her enduring beauty, her love for simple pleasures and her unwavering love for, and faith in, all of us.

An open-casket viewing will be held from 5 to 7 p.m. with a rosary to follow at 7 p.m. Sunday, June 10, at Reynolds Funeral Chapel in Twin Falls. A funeral mass will be held 11 a.m. Monday, June 11, at St. Edwards Catholic Church in Twin Falls.

If you wish to honor Cathy, the family requests, in lieu of flower arrangements, that you send a donation to her favorite charity: The Labre Indian School, P.O. Box 216, Ashland, MT 59003 (406-784-4500, www.st-labre.org).

Services are under the direction of Dustin Godfrey and staff at Reynolds Funeral Chapel. Messages of support can be left at www.reynoldschapel.com.

Former Fleetwood Mac Member Bob Welch Dead

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) • Bob Welch, a former member of Fleetwood Mac who went on to write songs and record several hits during a solo career, died Thursday of a self-inflicted gunshot wound, police said. He was 65.

Police spokesman Don Aaron said Welch's wife found him with a chest wound at their south Nashville home around 12:15 p.m.

Welch was a guitarist and vocalist for Fleetwood Mac from 1971 to 1974. He formed the British rock group Paris in 1976, and had hits including "Sentimental Lady" in 1977 and "Ebony Eyes" in 1978. Fleetwood Mac's Christine McVie and Lindsey Buckingham did backup vocals on "Sentimental Lady."

Aaron said Welch apparently had health issues recently. He said a suicide note was left.

"Dreams" was a No. 1 hit in 1977 and "Don't Stop" the same year. It later became the anthem for Bill Clinton's 2002 presidential campaign. "Hold Me" was a hit in 1982 and "Little Lies" in 1987.

Welch, a native of Los Angeles, scored his biggest hit with "Sentimental Lady," which reached No. 8 on the Billboard chart. His other singles included "Precious Love" in 1979 and "Hot Love, Cold World" in 1978.

When Fleetwood Mac was inducted into the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame in 1998, Welch was not included in the group.

"It basically comes down to the fact that they don't like me anymore," he told The Plain Dealer of Cleveland at the time. "I guess they can do what they want. I could understand it if I had been a sideman for a year. But I was an integral part of that band ... I put more of myself into that band than anything else I've ever done."

Feds Consider Regional Challenges in Fire Planning

BY SUSAN MONTOYA BRYAN

Associated Press

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. •

Federal officials on Thursday released the latest iteration of their national wildfire management strategy as they deal with limited resources and an active fire season that already has blackened hundreds of square miles in states from New Mexico to Michigan.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture and the Interior Department have been working for more than a year to develop the strategy. The latest phase covers assessments done for the West, the Northeast and the Southeast that identify population trends, climate changes and different priorities that will help with the creation of action plans due next spring.

With the increase in larger, more catastrophic wildfires over the past decade, USDA Under Secretary Harris Sherman told The Associated Press in a phone interview Thursday that setting priorities will be key.

"It's not going away," Sherman said of the threat of wildfire. "We're going to have to be more comprehensive and smarter in how we deal with these issues in the future."

He noted the need for government agencies to be proactive in their efforts to protect not only property but vital resources such as watersheds that provide drinking water.

Development of the strategy comes as firefighters grapple with overgrown forests and another consecutive year of dry, windy conditions. Currently, they are battling 20 large fires across the country. They range from a few hundred acres in South Dakota to more than 263,500 acres in New Mexico.

The New Mexico blaze has finally stalled at about 412 square miles in the Gila National Forest after burning for weeks. Nearly 1,000 firefighters continue to patrol the lines and watch for flare-ups on the fire, the largest in the state's recorded history.

A dozen cabins were destroyed by the lightning-sparked fire, and surrounding communities are concerned about flooding that could result from summer rains washing ash, soil and charred debris down steep, denuded mountainsides.

In northern New Mexico, crews were making progress against a pair of fires burning in the Santa Fe National Forest. The blazes were threatening no communities, but they sent up plumes of smoke that sparked memories of last year's record-setting season.

Bill Speeds Delivery of Firefighting Planes

WASHINGTON (AP) •

The Senate has passed legislation to speed government contracts to modernize the aging fleet of Forest Service tanker planes that dump suppressants on Western wildfires.

The legislation would waive a 30-day waiting period that's required before the Forest Service can award contracts for seven new tankers. The agency has told Congress that it's made the decision to award the contracts but has to wait until late June to officially award the contracts. The House has yet to act on the measure.

Oregon Democratic Rep. Ron Wyden says the tankers wouldn't go into service for months but that it's important to move as quickly as possible following accidents last weekend that caused the loss of one of the 11 available air tankers and the grounding of another for repairs.

Thursday, while extreme weather caused problems for crews trying to corral a 6,000-acre blaze in Wyoming's Medicine Bow National Forest.

In Michigan, firefighters continued to secure lines and protect structures from a blaze that burned about 33 square miles. Nearly 50 homes, a motel, a store and dozens of sheds and garages were destroyed.

Besides property, Sherman said there's much at stake when it comes to how federal, state and local agencies prepare for and manage fire. He pointed to the need to protect watersheds, saying more than half of the drinking water in the U.S. comes from public and private forests.

Sherman used the 2002 Hayman fire near Denver as an example. The largest fire in that state's recorded history, the blaze sent significant amounts of sediment into one of the city's main storage reservoirs, and tens of millions of dollars were spent dredging it.

"The cost of dealing with the aftermath of this fire far exceeded what proactive steps might have been taken at the outset to prevent those types of things from happening," he said.

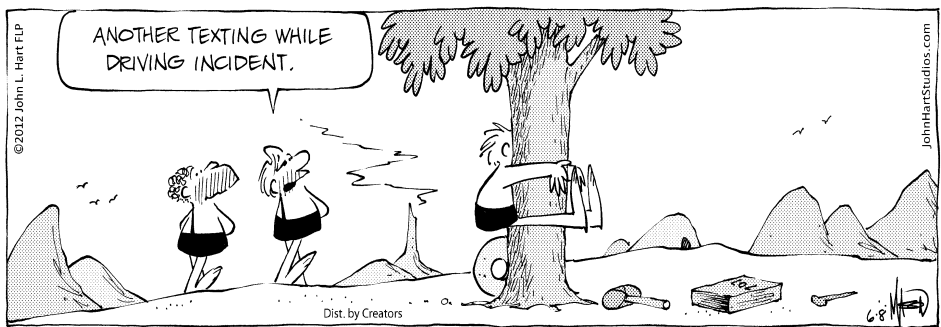

Federal officials said the wildland fire management strategy is aimed at giving local agencies and community leaders a voice in setting priorities and developing solutions in light of the different challenges in the three regions.

A Special thank you for the phone calls, cards, flowers and prayers. Our brother Dennis will all be missed by those who all knew him.

Nokia Seeks to Build on AT&T Deal in North America Comeback

(AP) • Attempting a turnaround in North America after losing most of its smartphone market share, Nokia plans to expand on its initial deals with carriers AT&T Inc. and T-Mobile USA, the Finnish company's regional executive said.

Nokia, which decided to abandon its Symbian software last year in favor of Microsoft Corp.'s Windows Phone operating system, is selling its Lumia lineup in the United States through AT&T and T-Mobile.

"But that's just a start," Chris Weber, president of Nokia's North America unit, said in an interview. "We're back in the U.S., we're back in Canada - it's exciting, but there's more work to do," he said, without elaborating on the plan.

Fed proposes stricter capital rules for banks • The Federal Reserve wants U.S. banks to set aside more money to cushion against unexpected losses, a key step in preventing another financial crisis.

The Fed on Thursday proposed rules requiring the nation's largest banks hold at least 6 percent of their assets in capital reserves. That's up from a minimum of 4 percent currently required and in line with international standards.

The banks have lobbied vigorously against the proposals. They say setting aside so much money in reserve could limit what they could lend.

Farm Bill Clears First Hurdle in Senate

BY JIM ABRAMS
Associated Press

WASHINGTON • A five-year farm and food bill that would revamp the federal safety net for farmers and eliminate direct government payments for idle crop fields took its first step toward passage Thursday in the Senate.

A 90-8 vote to officially begin debate opens the way for what could be several weeks of attempts to amend proposed legislation that spends some $100 billion a year on crop insurance, conservation and nutrition programs.

The measure would save $23 billion over a 10-year period from current spending levels. Some of those savings would come from eliminating the current system where farmers get direct payments from the government regardless of whether they actually plant a crop.

"This is not your father's farm bill," said Senate Agriculture Committee chairman Debbie Stabenow, D-Mich., who crafted the legislation with the top Republican on the committee, Sen. Pat Roberts of Kansas.

The old direct farm subsidy program

"It is critical that the Congress pass legislation that provides certainty for rural America and includes needed reforms and savings."

agency food aid and increase flexibility in the delivery of international food aid.

"It is critical that the Congress pass legislation that provides certainty for rural America and includes needed reforms and savings," the White House note said.

The farm bill, which differs from many bills in not splitting Congress among party lines, could become one of the few major measures to reach the president's desk before the November elections. But it won't be easy.

Senators are likely to use the bill as a vehicle to take up unrelated issues, such as looming automatic cuts in the defense budget set off by the failed negotiations in Congress last year to reduce spending. Southern senators are also expected to seek changes in the new revenue protection program, which they say discriminates against southern crops such as rice and peanuts.

Other legislators are seeking reductions in the crop insurance program under which the government shoulders more than 60 percent of farmers' insurance premiums and protest the bill's cuts of more than $4 billion over 10 years in the Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program, or food stamps.

U.S. CONSUMER CUT BACK ON CREDIT CARD USE IN APRIL

BY MARTIN CRUTSINGER
Associated Press

WASHINGTON • Americans cut back sharply on their credit card purchases in April, a sign that some may be worried about the slowdown in hiring.

The Federal Reserve said Thursday that consumers increased borrowing by $6.5 billion in April, just half of the March gain.

The gain was driven by a $9.96 billion rise in a category that includes auto and student loans. That offset a $3.4 billion drop in credit card debt, the first decline since January.

Total borrowing rose to a seasonally adjusted $2.55 trillion. That was slightly below the all-time high of $2.58 trillion reached in July 2008, eight months after the Great Recession began.

Consumers had begun to use credit cards more often at the start of the year, which coincided with solid job gains this winter. But hiring slowed sharply in April and May, which may have forced some to cut back on using their plastic.

Employers added just 69,000 jobs in May, the fewest in a year, and just 77,000 jobs in April.

The economy added 252,000 jobs a month from December through February. Since then, job growth has slowed to a lackluster 96,000 a month.

More borrowing is generally viewed as a healthy sign for the economy. It suggests consumers are gaining confidence and growing more comfortable taking on debt.

But if consumers are cutting back on credit card debt, it may suggest they are worried about the economy.

Consumer spending grew in the first three months of the year at the fastest pace since late 2010. Consumer spending accounts for 70 percent of economic activity.

Bernanke Signals No Imminent Steps to Aid Economy

BY MARTIN CRUTSINGER
Associated Press

WASHINGTON • Slumping job growth has alarmed some economists who fear the U.S. economy is in trouble.

Ben Bernanke doesn't appear to be one of them.

The Federal Reserve chief sketched a hopeful outlook in testimony to a congressional panel Tuesday and sent no signals that the Fed will take further steps soon to aid the economy.

Bernanke acknowledged that Europe's debt crisis poses risks to the U.S. financial markets. He also noted that U.S. unemployment remains high at 8.2

percent. And he said the Fed is prepared to take steps to boost the U.S. economy if it weakens.

But he said Fed officials still need to study the most recent economic trends, including job growth. For now, Bernanke said he foresees moderate growth this year.

He said he's mindful that all that could change, if Europe's crisis quickly worsened or U.S. job growth stalled.

"As always, the Federal Reserve remains prepared to take action as needed to protect the U.S. financial system and economy in the event that financial stresses escalate," he told the Joint Economic Committee.

The Fed could buy more bonds to try to further reduce long-term interest rates, which might encourage more borrowing and spending. Or it could extend its plan to keep short-term rates near zero beyond late 2014 until an even later date.

But most economists don't expect a major announcement at the Fed's next policy meeting June 19-20, despite signals this week from some other Fed members in favor of considering further action.

Initial Jobless Claims in U.S. Fell Last Week to 377,000

BY LORRAINE WOELLERT
Bloomberg News

WASHINGTON • Fewer Americans applied for unemployment insurance payments last week, indicating limited progress in the labor market after a two-month slowdown in hiring.

First-time claims for jobless benefits fell by 12,000 to 377,000 in the week ended June 2 from a revised 389,000 the prior week that was higher than initially estimated, the Labor Department said Thursday. The median estimate of 49 economists surveyed by Bloomberg News called for 378,000 claims. The number of people receiving extended payments plunged.

The claims figures may ease concern of further labor market weakness after a report last week showed employers in May added the fewest workers in a year. While sustained demand is encouraging companies to maintain headcounts, stronger sales may be required to prompt a pickup in hiring.

"It reinforces the slowing momentum in the job market," said Sean Incremona, senior economist at 4Cast Inc. in New York. "We're still in a moderate recovery and a lot of the employment data we saw earlier in the year might have overstated conditions. We might be coming back down to Earth."

Estimates ranged from 367,000 to 390,000 after an initially reported 383,000 in the previous week, according to the Bloomberg survey.

The four-week moving average of claims, a less-volatile measure, climbed to 377,750, the highest in a month, from 376,000.

The number of people continuing to collect jobless benefits increased 34,000 in the week ended May 26 to 3.29 million. The continuing claims figure does not include the number of workers receiving extended benefits under federal programs.

Those who've used up their traditional benefits and are now collecting emergency and extended payments slumped by almost 105,000 in the week ended

May 19 to 2.83 million.

California, Florida, Illinois and Texas were among eight states that no longer qualified for emergency benefits as of May 12, according to a National Employment Law Project study. From April 7 through May 12, about 370,000 Americans in 23 states stopped getting the assistance, which provide payments for as long as 99 weeks, the study said.

Overview

Growing fruits and vegetables in a container garden on a patio is possible and relatively easy to do for the average gardener. The plant selections are the most important choice. Choosing fruit and vegetable seeds or starts that are specific for container gardening will provide the best results. A patio is a great place to create a viable fruit and vegetable container garden

Step 1

Choose a container that has drainage holes and that is made out of either wood or plastic. Drainage at the bottom of the pot will inhibit mold growth, root rot and fungal diseases. Choose the containers first for functionality and then for aesthetics; the health of the plant is the main concern. Generally, vegetable plants will require pots at least six to eight inches in diameter for successful growth, while a dwarf fruit tree will require a planter from 18 to 24 inches in diameter.

Step 2

Purchase vegetable seeds that are specific to container gardening. These are engineered for container gardening. Types of vegetables naturally suitable for container gardening include tomatoes, bush beans, lettuce, beets, cabbage, broccoli, onions and peppers of all varieties. These plants are naturally compact and easy to care for in a container garden. Less compact but equally successful plants available in seed form are cucumbers, zucchini, peas and eggplant. These plant seeds are available in form specifically for a patio container garden.

Step 3

Prepare the soil in the planters by filling up the container to one inch from the top of the planter. Using a packaged soil specific for container gardening is a vital step; the soil is designed specifically to retain water and hold its shape more so than traditional soil. Amend the soil with a 5-20-10 fertilizer blend before placing the seedlings or seeds into the soil. Follow the planting directions specific to the plant you are placing in the container. The needs of each plant including depth and compaction of the seeds will vary.

Step 4

Place a mulch blend on the top of the soil or around the base of the seedlings, mulch will slow evaporation and hold the water necessary for the plants.

Step 5

Water each container thoroughly after planting the seeds or seedlings. Water will activate the fertilizer and feed the plants. Watering generously will also fill the mulch with moisture that will inhibit the soil from drying out in between waterings.

Tips and Warnings

If the patio receives full sun, watch for signs of excessive heat on the plants. If the plants are too hot and watering doesn't relieve the drying up of the leaves or fruit, move the plant to a cooler location.

Three Best Bets

Soul of Summer

The Twin Falls Municipal Band's free weekly concerts in City Park, the soul of this city's summers, have endured well into their second century. On Thursday night, gather up your blankets and diaper bags, lawn chairs and broad-brimmed hats, your children and your elderly neighbors and your out-of-town visitors. Spread your blanket on the grass and open your picnic basket.

What a Place ...

Another season of mystery and melodrama has opened at the Glens Ferry Opera Theatre, a restored 1914 vaudeville hall that still boasts hardwood floors, old theater seats and other bits of its merry past. Murder comedy is served up with dinner on Fridays, melodrama on Saturdays. Few actors could outshout the rumble of trains that pass just outside, so nobody tries. Instead, players drop their characters and the audience joins a fast, spirited rendering of "I've Been Working on the Railroad."

Power or Polish

Auto lovers can have their pick on Saturday. Relish your rigs revved and gritty? Catch the mud bog races at Richfield Outlaw Days — a particularly popular draw to the tiny town's arena. Prefer a polished gleam? Go to Kimberly instead to admire the beautiful parade of the Kimberly Cruise Car Show. Mud has a certain appeal, certainly, but I'll take the pretty paint.

Mud and Broncs at Richfield's 57th Outlaw Days

BY TETONA DUNLAP
tdunlap@magicvalley.com

RICHFIELD • Fifty-seven years ago, four guys thought Richfield needed a swimming pool. The idea proved too costly for the small town, but what did come from that day is a Richfield tradition that celebrates the thrill seekers and the outlaws in everyone.

Nowadays the Richfield Riding Club organizes the annual Outlaw Days, and every year it features broncs, fun and mud.

This weekend's celebration includes an event popular with those who live in Richfield or ever have lived there: the alumni team roping at 7 p.m. June 8. Participants will randomly draw for their partners, and last year the roping attracted 110 teams. An alumni dance follows at 9 p.m. on Main Street.

"The team roping on Friday is a huge event, and it goes into the wee hours," said Riding Club committee member Lori Royal.

A breakfast at 7 a.m. will kick off an event-filled day June 9, but if you aren't an early riser you can look for the food booth at the arena.

"It's the best pulled pork around," Royal said.

A parade starts at 10 a.m. June 9, and various arena events start at noon. The popular mud bog races start at 4 p.m., and admission to the arena is $5 for all events. The races feature vehicles such as ATVs and snow machines racing in two pits.

"The mud bog races have been hugely successful, and they bring in a whole set of different people," said Wendell Johnson, one of the Outlaw Days founders.

The day will end with a street dance at the Hangout at 9 p.m. June 9.

"It turns into a big weekend for people to have family reunions and class reunions," Royal said. "It draws more than 1,000 people to our tiny town. It's a good time."

WENDELL • For three days in Wendell, cows are king.

The 2012 Magic Valley Dairy Days are June 14-16 in Wendell City Park. So if you're in the mood to rock, then roll yourself on down to City Park for all events bovine related.

This year's theme is "Cows Rock," and there will be plenty of music and entertainment as the town prepares to double its population. Every year local kindergartners are asked to come up with a theme for the festivities and a direction for businesses to point their creativity. A couple of days before the event's kickoff, local businesses are given plastic foam cow cutouts. Then they go to work, decorating their cows according to the year's theme.

"It's just a big ol' white cow, and you just use your imagination," said Jan Gooding, vendor coordinator. "They're pretty creative."

Twin Cinema to Offer Saturday Matinees for the Deaf

BY TETONA DUNLAP
tdunlap@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • Twin Cinema 12 will show two movies in open captioning for the first time June 9. "Madagascar 3" and "The Avengers" will show at 12:30 p.m. to serve the deaf and hearing-impaired community.

With open captioning, movie dialogue appears at the bottom of the screen for moviegoers to read.

"It's not like subtitles, it's in English," said Twin Cinema 12 secretary Kim Roper.

Twin Cinema 12 is able to offer these movies after the theater switched to full digital. However, every movie is on a separate contract, and cinema managing director Larry Roper must first receive permission from studios to show their films in open captioning. Larry said he recently received permission from Disney and Warner Brothers Studios and plans to show the upcoming Disney movie "Brave" in open captioning when it releases.

For now open caption movies will be available as Saturday matinees, but Larry said the cinema would like to expand to evenings as well. He didn't yet have a plan for the June 16 open caption offerings.

Sun Valley Music, Arts Showcase Debuts this Summer

TIMES-NEWS

KETCHUM • The inaugural Music and Arts Showcase Sun Valley will bring touring acts to downtown Ketchum on July 13-14.

The two-day festival will be at the Simplot lot, future home of the Sun Valley Center for the Arts, across from the Ketchum Post Office.

Under the somewhat unwieldy name of MASSV, the event will feature the eclectic rock, funk and electronica sounds of Ghostland Observatory; the acoustic and electronica sounds and dance performance of Beats Antique; and the mixing mania of the dubstep group the Adventure Club.

Not your thing? MASSV also promises the soulful music of Black Joe Lewis and The Honeybears and the hip-hop super tunes of Brother Ali. Other acts to fill out the festival's lineup will include reggae, rock and Americana music: Gift of Gab of Blackalicious, Proper Motion, Stylust Beats, Winstrom, Boombox, B-Side Players, Boise's Equaleyes and Wood River Valley rocker trio Finn Riggins.

MASSV will encourage participants of all ages to enjoy the party with costumes and art projects. Expect local "tweener" acts of art and music, plus jugglers, stilt walkers, break dancers, hula hoppers, African drummers, scratch DJs and other entertainers throughout the two days. Also on the schedule: an art car parade; a torch-lit drum march from the Simplot lot to Ketchum's Main Street after the main stage closes each night; and street parties with laser light shows.

Gates will open at 2 p.m. July 13, with the show running from 4 to 11 p.m. and the street party from 11 p.m. to 2 a.m. On July 14, gates open at noon, and the 2-11:30 p.m. show is followed by a street party from 11:30 p.m. to 2 a.m.

For a limited time, a weekend pass is $49.99, and day passes are $39.99. An online advance pass for $59.99 will be available after early-bird passes sell out. After July 7, the weekend pass will be $69.99, and day passes will be $45. MASSV will have food, drink and other vendors on site at the Simplot lot.

Students interested in art projects for exhibition at the festival may email massvmusic@gmail.com, as well as volunteers who want to be involved.

Three Bands Highlight Rupert's Fourth of July Celebration

RUPERT • Rupert's Fourth of July Celebration will feature four nights of musical entertainment in the gazebo at City Park.

The annual "Sounds of Freedom" series will run June 30 through July 3; it's all free to the public, sponsored by Project Mutual Telephone Co. and Syringa Wireless. The theme this year: "Great American Moments."

- Headlining the celebration June 30 will be Salt Lake City band Groove Merchants, billed as a hot party band. Its eight musicians and singers play both acoustics and brass. Expect sounds from the past few decades as well as current radio hits. After that

- The Fabulous Chancellors will be back by popular demand on the evening of July 2. The six-member band dazzled the celebration in 2009, Rupert organizers say, and will bring back their classic rock 'n' roll sounds from the '50s and '60s.

- On the evening of July 3, the Rupert Square gazebo will come alive with the local Jason Lugo Band, featuring a laid-back fusion of modern country and rock.

All three evenings begin with local entertainment at 6 p.m., then the featured bands at 7:30 p.m.

A 6:30 p.m. patriotic program on July 1 will pay tribute to area veterans.

Marley in the Mountains presents Toots and the Maytals

TIMES-NEWS

KETCHUM • Reggae band Toots and the Maytals will play July 12 in Ketchum's Atkinson Park for the first Marley in the Mountains summer concert.

Toots and the Maytals won the 2005 Grammy Award for Best Reggae Album; its "True Love" included musicians Bonnie Raitt, Willie Nelson, Eric Clapton and Keith Richards. Artists such as Amy Winehouse and Sublime have re-recorded Toots and the Maytals tracks, and the group has toured with The Rolling Stones, Dave Matthews and Sheryl Crow. Toots has achieved a record-breaking 31 No. 1 reggae hits in Jamaica.

Since 2008, Marley in the Mountains — a Mountain Niceness Productions concert series — has presented reggae greats including Don Carlos, Michael Rose, The Itals, Carlos Jones and Richie Spice, and rising reggae artists such as Messenjah Seleh, Soulmedic and the Magic Valley's Ethan Tucker. More than 2,000 reggae fans have attended Marley in the Mountains shows in fall and winter.

Tickets are $20 in advance and $25 at the gate. Gates will open at 5 p.m., and the show starts at 5:30 p.m. Tickets are available at Atkinson's markets and marleyinthemountains.com.

A VIP pass for $500 includes five tickets, free beer, appetizers, private porta-lets, cash bar and a private behind-the-stage shade area. For inquiries on sponsorship and VIP ticketing: iriedonal@hotmail.com.

Chamber of Commerce for a year, and other winners get gift certificates.

The cows will be on display in the park, dressed to impress, throughout the three-day event. Organizers say Dairy Days usually draws a crowd of around 3,000 people.

"The carnival will be bigger and better," said Gary Atkinson, Wendell Chamber treasurer. Bring out the kiddies on Thursday night when the carnival features $1 admission from 6 to 10 p.m.

Billie Holman and the Udder Guys will perform live music at Wendell City Park's band shell 7-10:30 p.m. Thursday.

June 15 continues the melody with music from the Haywire Band at 7 p.m. in the park, while the Snake River Community Players perform "The Primrose Path" at Wendell High School, also at 7 p.m.

June 16 is packed full of events, starting with a community breakfast, 7-10 a.m. at Wendell City Hall. The 10:30 a.m. parade begins at Eighth and Idaho, with late registration and setup from 8 to 10 a.m.

"The parade has a high rating and definitely the car show," Atkinson said. "If you like to eat we have a lot of good vendors."

The Magic Valley Show & Shine Car Show will be at the soccer field from 7 a.m. to 5 p.m. June 16.

Scholarship winners will be announced that afternoon. In addition to celebrating the area's dairy industry, Dairy Days raises money for Magic Valley high school students who plan to pursue a higher education at an Idaho institution.

And, of course, booths will be set up in the park all day selling crafts and food and featuring the coveted product of the day: dairy.

"There will be a lot of dairy products to sample," Gooding said. "The Idaho Dairymen's Association gives away products, and it's all gone in an hour. It's really something to see."

Another crowd draw is the cow patty bingo hosted by Wendell FFA; lucky contestants can win up to $500.

"It's a lot of fun," Gooding said.

Sun Valley Shakedown Promises Soul, Funk, Groove

TIMES-NEWS

SUN VALLEY • Festival Meadows in Sun Valley will host the second annual Sun Valley Shakedown on July 7. Full of soul, rock and funk, the general-admission show will include JJ Grey and Mofro, the Dirty Dozen Brass Band and DJ Logic.

JJ Grey and Mofro is a touring act presenting original music inspired by Southern rockers Lynyrd Skynyrd, soul greats Otis Redding and Toots Hibbert, country stars George Jones and Jerry Reed and Grand Ole Opry comedian Jerry Clower. Storyteller Grey brings his backwoods wisdom and blue-collar values to the stage. JJ Grey and Mofro's live CD recording "Brighter Days," which is also a documentary film, was released in 2011 and shot at the Variety Playhouse in Atlanta, with footage of Grey's home and music life.

The Dirty Dozen Brass Band for 35 years has entertained with a New Orleans style and down-to-earth romps.

"It ends up being like a pot of gumbo — you drop in a little okra, drop in a little shrimp, you drop in some crabs," original band member and baritone sax player Roger Lewis said in a Shakedown press release. "Before you know it, you've mixed in all these different

"It ends up being like a pot of gumbo ... Before you know it, you've mixed in all these different ingredients and you've got a beautiful soup. That was our approach to music early on, and it still is today."

ingredients and you've got a beautiful soup. That was our approach to music early on, and it still is today."

Touring in more than 30 countries on five continents, Dirty Dozen Brass Band has been featured on albums by artists including David Bowie, Elvis Costello, Dr. John and the Black Crowes.

DJ Logic, an electronic-music ambassador, will spin it out at the Sun Valley Shakedown with a style that gets everyone on their feet. DJ Logic emerged from Bronx hip-hop in the early '90s where he introduced jazz into the spin scene. He'll continue his Sun Valley Shakedown appearance at Whiskey Jacques.

Meza Back in GBC at Wood River

BY PATRICK SHELTRA
psheltra@magicvalley.com

HAILEY • Welcome back to the Great Basin Conference, Carlos Meza.

The longtime adult league tennis player and former Jerome coach is replacing Vicki Johnston as Wood River tennis coach, Wolverines athletic director John Rade announced Thursday in a press release. Joining Meza as assistant coach is Scott Chaffin, who replaces Eleanor Jewett.

"I'm excited," Meza said. "I'm really looking forward to it. (The GBC) is a great conference with a lot of great teams and the coaches are great. And the kids are what make it all worthwhile."

"Carlos has a very good understanding of the nuances of the game of tennis and will bring valuable knowledge and experience to the Wood River High School tennis players," Rade said

"... I think we're going to be competitive and strive to come out on top, but we're going to stress hard work and dedication (to the game), and I will make sure the kids enjoy the game here."

Carlos Meza, Wood River's new tennis coach

in a statement.

The Wolverines capped off a banner season with three state titles in boys singles (Karl Wilander), boys doubles (Raleigh Grossbaum and Charlie Grabow) and boys team (51-22 over Bishop Kelly). The latter was the school's fifth state title in the 37-year history of the program and was an appropriate sendoff for Johnston after seven years of service.

All three are seniors, but Meza is confident the Wolverines, who also won a state title in 2010, will be able to reload rather than rebuild.

"Wood River has pretty good depth and I know I've got some young players that are up-and-coming," Meza said. "I think we're going to be competitive and strive to come out on top, but we're going to stress hard work and dedication (to the game), and I will make sure the kids enjoy the game here."

Meza approached Rade about the job once he became aware of Johnston's decision to step down.

"I know Vicki and she's always been a great coach," Meza said. "I got excited (about the opening) and I said, 'I gotta go for this!'"

Harper's First Start Sparks Mindoka

BY RYAN HOWE
rhowe@magicvalley.com

RUPERT • He's projected to be Minidoka's starting catcher next season, but on Thursday, Tanner Harper made a strong case to also be in the Swagger's regular pitching rotation.

He had never previously started a game higher than the junior varsity level, but the sophomore-to-be shut down a quality Box Elder (Utah) squad in Minidoka's 7-3 win on Day 1 of the RBI Tournament at Warburton Field.

"Tanner did a great job," said Minidoka coach Ben Frank. "That's a team that made the state tournament in Utah, so it's not like they were slouches, plus they have a couple of college-return kids."

Harper tossed a complete game, allowing just three hits and two earned runs. He struck out four and walked one while keeping the ball down in the strike zone and forcing 14 ground-ball outs.

"I had one inning where I couldn't find the zone, but I came back and got out of it, so I felt pretty good," Harper said. "Just throw strikes and get outs. If I throw strikes, they'll put the ball in play and I trust my infield to get outs for me."

The defending RBI Tournament champ, Minidoka scored all its runs with two outs in the second inning. The

Hawks Get Good Deal from Price

BY DAVID BASHORE

TWIN FALLS • There's just something about wood bat tournaments that brings the best out of the Twin Falls Hawks.

The Hawks played flawless defensive baseball and Kaleb Price engineered things on both sides of the game, reaching base four times and striking out 15 on the mound as Twin Falls rolled to a 5-1 win over Kimberly in Thursday's opening game of the Donnelley Sports Invitational at Bill Ingram Field.

Price kept the Astro batters off-balance early and often, using the fastball in the early stages and switching to the off-speed stuff as the game progressed.

"The first couple of innings they weren't getting on base, and when we scored those runs I could relax a little," said Price, who scattered three hits and walked four in the complete-game win.

Long Live The King: LeBron's 45 Keep Heat Alive

ASSOCIATED PRESS

BOSTON • LeBron James refused to let another season end in Boston.

The Eastern Conference finals, and his chase of an NBA championship, are headed back to Miami for a Game 7.

James had 45 points and 15 rebounds, overwhelming the Celtics and leading the Heat to a 98-79 victory Thursday night that forced the decisive game.

Pushing away elimination right along with every defender who tried to stop him, James shot 19 of 26 from the field and finished four points shy of his playoff career-high while playing 45 minutes, not sitting down until the victory was long secured.

Dwyane Wade added 17 points for the Heat, who need a victory at home Saturday to return to the NBA finals.

Rajon Rondo had 21 points and 10 assists for Boston. Kevin Garnett and Brandon Bass each scored 12 points, but Paul Pierce had only hoped to see a celebration but instead filed out of the TD Garden midway through the fourth quarter, just before the league MVP called it a night.

Track and Field BSU's FELIX CROWNED NCAA DECATHLON CHAMP

DES MOINES, Iowa • Boise State's Kurt Felix won the decathlon at the NCAA track and field championships at Drake University, scoring a school record 8,062-points. Felix won the 10-event competition by a comfortable 106-point margin, becoming the first Bronco to ever win an NCAA title or become an All-American in the decathlon.

Felix joins an elite club as Eugene Greene (triple jump, 1991), Jake Jacoby (high jump, 1984) and Gabe Wallin (javelin, 2004-2005) as the only men's track and field NCAA champions at Boise State.

His crown came much in part from career-best performances in the discus and pole vault and a javelin win on day two. He collected four career-bests (100, 400, discus, pole vault) and two event wins (long jump, javelin) throughout the two-day, 10-event competition.

what's supposed to be a Big Three, carrying the Heat in the first half while Wade made only 1 of 6 shots.

The Celtics were hoping to complete a comeback from a 2-0 deficit, as Oklahoma City did, and advance to face the Thunder in the NBA finals. But they missed 13 of 14 3-point attempts and will have to win a second straight game in Miami to play for the title.

James' season was twice ended in Boston while playing for Cleveland, the Celtics emerging as the winner in a Pierce-James duel in Game 7 of the 2008 East semifinals, then beating the Cavs in Game 6 of the second round two years later.

That was James' last game with Cleveland, leaving that summer for Miami and the All-Star help that Wade and Chris Bosh could provide.

He needed none of it Thursday.

He had 30 points by half-time and spent the night silencing the Celtics crowd and perhaps some of the doubters he somehow still has. He set the tone for the game by making 6 of 7 shots and scoring 14 points in the first quarter, and he made sure the Heat were never challenged from there.

Meanwhile, Pierce, whose 3-pointer over James was the biggest basket of Boston's Game 5 victory, missed 13 of 16 shots through three quarters, including all six 3-point attempts.

The Heat obviously weren't deflated by that loss and came to fight, scoring 10 straight points to build a 10-point lead shortly after Mario Chalmers was called for a technical foul after getting mixed up with Ray Allen. They extended it to 12 points later in the period, taking a 26-16 lead into the second after shooting 58 percent in the period.

Wade finally got on the board with a jumper to open the second, but he seemed strangely passive even with Miami trying to save its season.

No matter. James didn't need the help.

He had consecutive baskets for a 15-point lead and came up with a basket every time the Celtics tried to get any rhythm. He soared high above the rim — and any other player — for a follow dunk after the Celtics had crept within eight in the final 2 minutes of the half. Miami led 55-42 at the break.

James made 12 of his first 13 shots before missing from the perimeter on his final attempt of the half.

Only Rondo kept it from being a blowout, scoring 19 points and adding five assists in the half. Relishing the challenge, he even emulated Garnett by doing a couple of knuckle pushups after being knocked to the court while drawing a foul, but he couldn't keep up with James and needed some help that never arrived.

The Celtics, trying desperately for one last championship before the expected breakup of their Big Three, hope this one doesn't get added to recent series losses against Orlando in 2009 and the Lakers in the NBA finals in 2010, when they lost Game 6 with chances to win series and then fell in Game 7.

James' first basket of the third quarter increased the lead to 17 points, and from there it was just a matter of coming up with another score any time the Celtics tried to make a run.

Boston never came close, and when a 3-pointer by Shane Battier made it 81-63 with 10:19 to play, Celtics coach Doc Rivers spent part of a timeout standing alone on the court with his arms folded, leaving it to the players to try to come up with an answer that wasn't there.

Bosh entered with 5 1/2 minutes left in the first quarter of his second game back after missing nine with a lower abdominal strain, finishing with seven points and six rebounds.

Notes: James is the first player to score at least 25 points against the Celtics in eight consecutive postseason games since Kareem Abdul-Jabbar from April 28, 1974, to May 27, 1984. ...The NBA playoff record for points in a half is 39, set by Golden State's Eric "Sleepy" Floyd on May 10, 1987, against the Lakers. ...

The Heat switched to their red road jerseys after losing in the black here earlier in the series.

Twin Falls Hawks pitcher Kaleb Price winds up against the Kimberly Astros at Bill Ingram Field Thursday in Twin Falls.

Hawks

"We didn't have a great (high-school) season, so it's nice to have some success to start out the summer."

The way the Hawks played they didn't need much help, but Kimberly provided some anyway. Starter Seth Champlin gave up four runs, all earned, in four innings. He struck out five but walked just as many, and several wild pitches gave the Hawks free extra bases. The team committed five errors.

Dialing it back up after most of the same players made a run to the 3A high school championship game was a lot more difficult than it was supposed to be, in the Astros' eyes.

"We've only had about four practices, but we're an older team and there are high expectations," said Kimberly coach A.J. Schroeder. "We just didn't make an adjustment at all anywhere today."

The Hawks are the defending champions of the Donnelley Sports Invitational, and they got off to a fast start in defense of their title. They scored three times in the third inning to provide Price all the run support he'd need.

"We just came here with the mentality that we need to defend our title," Price said.

The tournament continues today.

here and start out having a good second day," Felix said. "So I came out and didn't get as good of a start as I wanted to in the hurdles, but I PR'ed in the discus. So that built me up for the pole vault and I got a PR in that. And then I came into the javelin, where I was the favorite, and I was close to those guys. And I tried to have a big enough lead coming into the last event."

Football FORMER ISU PLAYERS DONATE TOWARD PRACTICE FIELD

POCATELLO • Idaho State University announced a donation of $15,000 from its 1981 national championship team for an outdoor practice field south of Holt Arena, a facility designed to benefit all ISU sports and the Pocatello community.

"Good things are currently happening with ISU football and I am very optimistic about the direction the program is going," former Bengal football coach Dave Kragthorpe said. "Mike Kramer and his staff have provided new energy and enthusiasm, not unlike that of 1980-81."

All funds for the turf will come from private, individual or corporate donations. The goal for the project is $625,000 and the project will not begin until the money is raised.

"A new practice field will allow our programs more space for training and it will be a great asset to the community," Idaho State Director of Athletics Jeff Tingey said. "We appreciate the support of the 1981 team in helping us with this project to enhance the student-athlete experience at Idaho State."

Anyone interested contributing to the practice field can call 208-282-5773 or 208-282-3733.

Swagger strung together seven straight hits, highlighted by Daniel Freiburg's three-RBI double.

Despite the deluge, Box Elder kept with starter Kyle King, who settled in nicely and only allowed two hits the rest of the game. King didn't strike anybody out, but kept the Swagger chasing his varying speeds.

"(King) made an adjustment and we never did," said Frank. "We took advantage of what he was throwing early on, but then he was smart and changed up everything he had."

Marty Pawson and Chris Caldera each went 2-for-3 with an RBI.

Banks Offered Minicamp Tryout with Seahawks

ASSOCIATED PRESS

RENTON, Wash. • Walking into the massive indoor practice facility, looking up at the championship banners hanging from the ceiling and feeling the turf under his feet, Brian Banks allowed himself a moment to reflect on whether the reality matched the dream that helped get him through five years of wrongful incarceration.

"This is by far the second-best day of my life — May 24, my day of exoneration, and today," Banks said Thursday after getting a tryout with the Seattle Seahawks. "Just being out here on the field and work out with the Seahawks and to be given an opportunity to have a tryout, I don't really have words for it. It's a dream come true. I know a lot of people work hard to get to this point. I've worked hard myself and I'm just thankful for this opportunity."

And it may continue beyond just a one-day visit to the rainy Pacific Northwest. Banks, 26, impressed Seattle coach Pete Carroll enough that he received an invitation to participate in a formal tryout next week during Seattle's mandatory offseason minicamp.

All Banks needs to do is accept and he can turn another page on his remarkable feel-good story.

"This is a great illustration for us why people deserve a second chance," Carroll said. "Because of what he has overcome and because of what lies ahead for him in his life. This is just one step but it's a step he's been dreaming about for a long time. And it's just such a great illustration about not giving up and competing for what you want and not let your circumstances or surroundings dictate what is going to happen in your life?"

When he was 17 and a star high school linebacker in California, a teenage girl Banks had known since childhood claimed he had raped her. He was arrested and, on advice of counsel, pleaded no contest to rape and an enhancement of kidnapping 10 years ago in order to avoid a possible life sentence if tried by a jury.

Banks served five years and two months in prison, but in a strange turn of events, the woman later recanted her claim and offered to help Banks clear his name after he was out of prison. Banks was on probation and wearing an electronic monitoring bracelet at the hearing late last month where he was completely exonerated.

Gone were the restrictions and the stigma, replaced by a clear record.

"He is a living testament to if you keep hanging and you're tough and you don't give up in what you believe in and your dreams, that you can make those come to life," Carroll said.

The little things most of society takes for granted,

Banks has come to appreciate in his short period since his case was resolved. When he walked into the airport on Wednesday night to make the late flight to Seattle and endured the hassle of airport security, Banks didn't blink at emptying his pockets or removing his shoes.

"I know a lot of people complain about that, but I was thrilled about it," he said.

It was just the second time he'd ever been on a commercial airplane and his first flight in more than 15 years. Oh, and it came after an appearance on "The Tonight Show with Jay Leno."

In just 14 days, Banks has become a spokesman and a celebrity.

"I served five years in prison. The last two weeks feels like a breeze," Banks said.

From a football perspective, there is still plenty left for Banks to prove. He first must decide whether to accept the Seahawks' minicamp offer. Banks' agent, Bruce Tollner, said Thursday afternoon that he had yet to speak with Banks about the offer, but that Banks tentatively has visits scheduled with five other teams.

"An invitation back to Seattle is a very positive thing that he'll want to consider, we just need to check his schedule," Tollner said.

Leyva Takes Early Lead at U.S. Championships

ASSOCIATED PRESS

ST. LOUIS • Defending champion Danell Leyva grabbed the early lead at the U.S. men's gymnastics championships Thursday night, sneaking past John Orozco in the final rotation with a polished parallel bars routine.

Leyva, also the world champion in the event, scored 15.800 points to finish at 91.850, just ahead of Orozco's 91.8.

Leyva and Orozco were more than a point ahead of Sam Mikulak, the 2010 junior champion. Chris Brooks and Jonathan Horton rounded out the top five as the U.S. Olympic picture began to take shape.

This was the first step in four-round, three-week test of nerves. The scores from this weekend will be combined with the scores at the Olympic trials at the end of the month, with the gymnast earning the top overall total locking up an automatic Olympic spot.

Barring injury, Leyva is considered a near certainty to head to London but he cemented his status as the front-runner by delivering a consistent performance on a night in which the top five competitors were separated by a narrow 1.550.

Leyva had the top scores on high bar, parallel bars and was second on pommel horse, allowing him to overcome so-so efforts on still runs and vault.

The 20-year-old saved his best for last. He entered the final rotation 15.750 behind Orozco but roared back in front with a smooth 45-second routine on the bars. He nailed the landing, his stepfather and coach Yin Alvarez exploding off the floor in celebration.

The score easily topped the 15.633 Leyva posted while winning the world title in the event last fall, capping two hours in which a handful of familiar faces showed they will be considered a legitimate threat to reach the podium in London next month.

Five of the top six scorers made the world team last fall, the only exception being Mikulak, though had a pretty good excuse.

The sophomore from Michigan missed this event a year ago after breaking both of his ankles during a freak accident at an international event. He bounced back to finish second in the all-around at this year's NCAA championships and put together the kind of steady performance that showed he's ready to compete at the sport's highest level.

Mikulak scored in the top 10 in five of the six events, his only wobble coming on floor when he gingerly stepped out of bounds leading to a hefty deduction that took him out of the running for first.

It's a spot Orozco appeared to have locked up for much of the evening. He finished in the top 11 in all six rotations, getting a reprieve from the judges on pommel horse, who raised his initial score from 13.75 to 14.650 after a review.

Though he was nipped at the end by Leyva, Orozco continued to build on his promising spring and break up the expected duel between Leyva and Horton.

Leyva edged Horton at nationals last year and Leyva jokingly asked Horton on Wednesday if he was ready to finish second again.

Horton's not quite there yet but appeared to be all the way back in his first full competition since breaking his left foot at worlds. He struggled on pommel horse — as usual — but overcame it by putting together a dazzling high bar routine. The 26-year-old joked "I'm tired" as he trudged toward vault, his final rotation, but drilled a solid 15.700 to cement his return to form.

He hovered in the top five throughout and was joined by former Oklahoma teammate and best friend Brooks, who soared up the leaderboard with a thrilling vault. Brooks exploded off the table with a front handspring, before flipping twice in the air. He landed on the pad with a thud and didn't move before clapping his hands and following it up with a fist pump.

The competition continues Saturday.

Alibis for Triple Crown Near-misses

ASSOCIATED PRESS

There have been 30 horses who came into the Belmont Stakes with a chance to win the Triple Crown. Eleven succeeded in sweeping the Kentucky Derby, the Preakness and the Belmont, and 19 came up short in the final leg. While we're waiting to see how Triple Crown hopeful I'll Have Another fares in his bid Saturday, here's a look at some of those who just missed, and the alibis:

TIM TAM (1958)

The Calumet Farm bay colt finished second to Cavan by 5½ lengths after running the final quarter-mile with a broken bone in his right front ankle.

CARRY BACK (1961)

A scrawny, unattractive little colt was poised to make another thrilling stretch run to victory, but when jockey Johnny Sellers asked for more, Carry Back "spit the bit" — a racing term meaning he simply didn't feel like running anymore. He finished seventh behind 65-1 long shot Sherluck.

MAJESTIC PRINCE (1969)

The great jockey Bill Hartack was criticized by many for moving too late in the stretch in losing to Arts and Letters. It was Majestic Prince's first loss in 10 starts.

SPECTACULAR BID (1979)

Considered a cinch to give racing its fourth Triple Crown winner in the 1970s, the Bid stepped on a safety pin in his stall the morning of the race. He finished third behind Coastal after young jockey Ron Franklin gunned Bid to the lead and the colt faded in the stretch.

SILVER CHARM (1997)

After reeling in rival Free House with an eighth of a mile to go, Silver Charm was on his way to immortality. But with 75 yards to go, jockey Gary Stevens saw another horse out of the corner of his eye. It was Touch Gold, and Silver Charm didn't see him either until 10 jumps from the wire. By then, it was too late.

REAL QUIET (1998)

A year after trainer Bob Baffert had his heart broken by Silver Charm, another of his horses — Real Quiet — took a run at greatness. But jockey Kent Desormeaux was criticized for making his move too early, and by the time Real Quiet was a furlong from the finish at Belmont, he began staggering home. Victory Gallop, runner-up in the Derby and Preakness, was bearing down and the two hit the wire together. After several agonizing minutes, the photo went against Real Quiet.

CHARISMATIC (1999)

Trainer D. Wayne Lukas' Triple Crown quest ended with a quarter mile to go, when Charismatic fractured two bones in his left front leg but still finished third behind 29-1 long shot Lemon Drop Kid.

WAR EMBLEM (2002)

Baffert has had some tough luck chasing the Triple Crown and his front-running speedster was done in early — he stumbled out of the starting gate and finished eighth behind 70-1 long shot Sarava.

SMARTY JONES (2004)

After fighting off strong challenges from Rock Hard Ten and Eddington along the backstretch, Smarty Jones and jockey Stewart Elliott opened a 3½-length lead into the stretch. But the early duels proved to be Smarty's undoing. He tired in the stretch and was caught in the final 70 yards by 36-1 long shot Birdstone.

Maria Sharapova returns a shot in her semifinal match against Petra Kvitova at the French Open tennis tournament in Paris on Thursday in her 6-3, 6-3 victory.

No. 1 Sharapova to Face Errani in French Final

ASSOCIATED PRESS

PARIS • Wind blew in her face, kicking up flecks of clay, and Maria Sharapova stood at the baseline, knowing she needed one more point to reach her first French Open final and return to No. 1 in the rankings.

She rotated her right shoulder, the one surgically repaired 3½ years ago, and served a fault.

Gulp. Her next try found the mark: a second-serve ace at 104 mph that landed in a corner. It was a fitting way to close out a 6-3, 6-3 victory over No. 4-seeded Petra Kvitova of the Czech Republic in the semifinals at Roland Garros on Thursday, a fitting way to announce that Sharapova is once again at the height of her powers and at the top of her sport.

"It's a long road back; it's a long process. It's a lot of days of frustration and uncertainty, not knowing if you'll ever get there, not knowing how much you want it, not knowing whether (there) would be a moment like that for you again," Sharapova said at her news conference, the WTA's glass vase signifying her No. 1 status sitting inches away.

"So there's definitely a lot of tough things you have to go through to get to this point. But when you get here, and you look back at the things that you did, and the work that you put in, and the toughest days that you can remember, it's all really worth it."

to complete a career Grand Slam.

"I was in a position a few years ago where I didn't quite know if I would ever be here again on this stage, playing professionally. And not just at that, but at a level to get to No. 1 in the world and a first Roland Garros final for me," Sharapova said. "So a very special day, no doubt."

Errani felt the same way. Playing in her first Grand Slam semifinal, she beat reigning U.S. Open champion Sam Stosur of Australia 7-5, 1-6, 6-3.

"Players like Sharapova, Serena Williams — they're accustomed to making it this far," said Errani's coach, Pablo Lozano, who held his 10-month-old son while cheering in the stands. "For us, every day brings a new surprise."

In perhaps the closest of the Triple Crown near-misses, Victory Gallop and jockey Gary Stevens (11) edge out Real Quiet and jockey Kent Desormeaux as they cross the finish line to win the 1998 Belmont Stakes. Desormeaux was criticized for making his move too early, and by the time Real Quiet was a furlong from the finish, Victory Gallop was making its charge to eventually take the win.

Only Cup Counts for Oft-Second Dutch

ASSOCIATED PRESS

KRAKOW, Poland • Second-best just isn't good enough for the Netherlands anymore.

After losing to Spain two years ago in the World Cup final, the city of Amsterdam has let it be known that the Dutch players shouldn't count on an official celebration unless they come home with the European Championship trophy.

"Losing that final is now the motivation to win Euro 2012," Netherlands captain Mark van Bommel said, recalling the bitter-sweet taste of the big homecoming party two years ago along the canals of his nation's capital.

Now, even officials in the grandest Dutch city say being runner-up is nothing to celebrate. Been there, done that — too often.

"Last time we set up festivities when they came in second," Sara Gradstein, a spokeswoman for the mayor, said Thursday. "(This time) they'll only get one if they come in first."

The pain of losing stretches back to 1974, when the golden generation of Johan Cruyff lost to West Germany 2-1 in the World Cup final despite dominating the tournament with their revolutionary brand of free-flowing Total Football.

Four years later, the same thing: The Dutch felt sure they had won the World Cup when Rob Rensenbrink shot past Argentina goalkeeper Ubaldo Fillol in the dying seconds of regular time — only to see the ball hit the post. The hosts won it 3-1 in extra time.

Eventually, the Dutch did win a major title, the Euros in 1988, behind the future AC Milan trio of Marco van Basten, Ruud Gullit and Frank Rijkaard. It was a great achievement for a nation with a population far smaller than powers like Germany, Italy, France and Spain, the Dutch might as well be considered overachievers.

Yet two dozen years with a cup makes the Dutch feel like under-achievers.

Almost without fail, they produce a great crop of players. In recent years, the team has been built around creative talents like Robin van Persie, Wesley Sneijder and Arjen Robben, with a bruising organizer like Van Bommel thrown in.

At Euro 2012, this generation is looking for redemption.

"We realize this is perhaps our last chance to win a tournament," said Netherlands forward Dirk Kuyt, one of the core of players that reached the 2010 final and will start against Denmark on Saturday.

If their skills are beyond doubt, the Dutch have to live with a legacy of failing in the clutch. They lost penalty shootouts at the 1992, 1996 and 2000 European Championships and in the semifinals of the 1998 World Cup against Brazil.

This time around, that fear centers on Robben. He missed a penalty kick in the Champions League final against Chelsea and another in a vital late Bundesliga match for Bayern Munich against Borussia Dortmund.

"You have to turn the page," Robben said. "I have a new goal and that is the European Championship."

Usain Bolt Wins 100 in 9.79 Seconds at Bislett Games

ASSOCIATED PRESS

OSLO • Usain Bolt recovered from a poor start to win the 100 meters in 9.79 seconds Thursday in the Bislett Games, beating Asafa Powell by 0.06 seconds in the Diamond League meet.

Bolt, the three-time Olympic champion, overtook Powell in the closing strides to remain undefeated this year. The Jamaican star hasn't lost since failing to defend his title in the 2011 world championships in South Korea after being disqualified in the final for a false start.

Lerone Clarke was third in 10.10, completing a Jamaican sweep.

"When I came out from the blocks, I reacted good. But the execution, because I wasn't as comfortable as I wanted to be, wasn't that good during the first 30 meters," Bolt said. "Asafa got into his running form way quicker than me and got the top speed, while I had to work a little harder to get into my stride. But the good thing is I still got it — I ran past him, so I'm happy."

"I have run world records where my coach has said the race wasn't perfect."

Bolt improved his head-to-head record against Powell to 11-1. It was Bolt's third-fastest time of the season, behind the 9.76 he ran to win in Rome last week and a 9.82 in Jamaica.

Powell, whose only win over Bolt came in 2008 in Stockholm, took plenty of positives from the race.

"Tonight, I proved that I have it in me," Powell said. "I did my own thing. Normally, people say I can't perform under pressure. I think I performed under pressure tonight. I knew if I ran like I was supposed to, that it was going to be close. I was either going to win or it was going to be close. I am satisfied. I still have a long way to go (to the Olympics) ... You never know. You might see another result at the Olympics."

World champion Sally Pearson won the 100 hurdles, finishing in a season-best 12.49. The Australian was making her European debut this year.

Kristi Castlin of the United States followed in 12.56, and Tiffani Porter of Britain was third in 12.70. Americans Lolo Jones was fifth, followed by teammate Danielle Carruthers. In the men's 400 hurdles, Javier Culson of Puerto Rico won in 47.92. Trinidad & Tobago's Jehue Gordon followed in 48.78, and American Justin Gaymon was third in 48.97. World champion David Greene of Wales finished fourth in 48.98. World indoor champion Renaud Lavillenie of France took the pole vault at 19 feet, 1 inch, and Vitezslav Vesely of the Czech Republic won the javelin at 289-1.

In the women's high jump, Chaunte Howard of the U.S. cleared 6-5 1/2 on her first attempt, a height that Olympic champion Tia Hellebaut of Belgium failed to clear. In the women's 3,000 steeplechase, Kenya's Milcah Chemos won in 9:07.14.

Today is Friday, June 8, the 160th day of 2012. There are 206 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight:
On June 8, 1972, during the Vietnam War, a South Vietnamese Air Force jet dropped a napalm bomb onto the village of Trang Bang. Associated Press photographer Nick Ut captured the image of a screaming 9-year-old girl, Phan Thi Kim Phuc, as she ran naked and severely burned from the scene of the explosion along with other victims.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:
In 1845, Andrew Jackson, seventh president of the United States, died in Nashville, Tenn.

In 1915, Secretary of State William Jennings Bryan resigned in a disagreement with President Woodrow Wilson over U.S. handling of the sinking of the Lusitania.

In 1942, Bing Crosby recorded "Adeste Fideles" and "Silent Night" in Los Angeles for Decca Records.

In 1953, the Supreme Court ruled that restaurants in the District of Columbia could not refuse to serve blacks.

In 1962, 20th Century Fox fired actress Marilyn Monroe from its production "Something's Got to Give," saying she was unreliable. (Fox later changed its mind, but Monroe died before filming could resume, and the movie was abandoned.)

In 1967, 34 U.S. servicemen were killed when Israel attacked the USS Liberty, a Navy intelligence-gathering ship in the Mediterranean. (Israel later said the Liberty had been mistaken for an Egyptian vessel.)

In 1978, a jury in Clark County, Nev., ruled the so-called "Mormon will," purportedly written by the late billionaire Howard Hughes, was a forgery.

In 1982, President Ronald Reagan became the first American chief executive to address a joint session of the British Parliament.

In 1987, Fawn Hall began testifying at the Iran-Contra hearings, describing how, as secretary to National Security aide Oliver L. North, she helped to shred some documents and spirit away others.

Ten years ago: President George W. Bush ended talks at Camp David with Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak; Bush sidestepped Arab pleas to impose a deadline for Palestinian statehood while Mubarak defended Yasser Arafat and urged, "Give this man a chance." Serena Williams won the French Open, defeating her older sister, Venus, 7-5, 6-3. Sarava, a 70-1 shot, captured the Belmont Stakes; Kentucky Derby and Preakness winner War Emblem finished eighth. Lennox Lewis kept his heavy-weight titles by stopping Mike Tyson in the eighth round of their fight in Memphis, Tenn.

Five years ago: Defense Secretary Robert Gates announced the Bush administration was replacing Gen. Peter Pace as chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff and recommending Adm. Mike Mullen for the job. Mary Winkler, who'd killed her preacher husband with a shotgun blast to the back as he lay in bed, was sentenced in Selmer, Tenn., to three years in prison (she ended up serving 67 days in custody, 12 in jail and the rest in a mental health facility). Paris Hilton was sent screaming and crying back to jail after a judge in Los Angeles ruled she had to serve out her sentence for a probation violation behind bars rather than under house arrest. The space shuttle Atlantis blasted off on a mission to the international space station.

One year ago: Rep. Allyson Schwartz of Pennsylvania became the first Democratic House colleague to call for Rep. Anthony Weiner of New York to resign after he admitted sending a lewd photo of himself to a woman via Twitter and lying about it. OPEC unexpectedly left its production levels unchanged, causing oil prices to jump as senior officials reported their meeting in Vienna had ended in disarray. Meredith Vieira ended her five-year run as co-anchor of NBC's "Today" show, telling viewers her decision to go was "right, but it's hard."

The U.S. Senior Trials were held last summer to select the two American teams to go to Veldhoven, Netherlands, in October. Today we shall see Peter Weichsel recovering from an almost hopeless position. This deal occurred in the last set of a match that went to overtime and that Weichsel's team dragged out of the fire. So this board was critical. In the other room, Weichsel's teammates had defended against four spades. Hemant Lal had balanced with a three-spade bid over a three-heart pre-empt and had been raised to game. There was nothing to the play; declarer lost just two trump tricks and collected 650.

The auction from our featured room was as shown. When Weichsel bid three no-trump over three spades, his partner, Mark Lair, quite reasonably passed, and Bob Hamman, on lead, selected a low club — an incisive shot. Weichsel won in dummy, led a spade to the nine and queen, won the club return, then tested spades and found the bad news.

Declarer now cashed off four rounds of diamonds ending in dummy and was up to seven tricks. Since West had a fistful of black-suit winners and was known to have begun with a singleton heart, what distribution should declarer play for? A singleton heart honor would have been useless to him, so declarer played a low heart from dummy, and when Bart Bramley correctly played low, Weichsel put in the 10! That was his ninth trick, and it kept his side in the hunt.

ANSWER: The cue-bid of three diamonds is looking for a stopper for no-trump, so you have the choice of bidding three no-trump or bidding hearts at the three- or four-level. Even though a three-no-trump bid might indirectly guarantee that your raise was based on four trumps, it looks simpler just to bid four hearts. But a call of three no-trump might work, I suppose.

DEAR ABBY: My husband, "Chris," wanted a motorcycle for seven years. Last year I finally gave in, with the stipulation that he take a safety course and buy a good helmet and riding gear.

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

Two months later, Chris was in a crash and suffered several broken bones and a concussion. The hospital bill was more than $60,000. His accident was a reality check for me. Ever since, I have been petrified of losing him. Every time Chris rides I worry, pray and often cry until he returns or calls to say he's OK.

I have begged him to get rid of the bike. The stress is taking a toll on me physically and emotionally and creating tension between us. I'm afraid it would be selfish to insist he get rid of something he loves; on the other hand, I feel Chris is selfish for not taking my feelings into consideration. I'm torn between wanting him safe and wanting him to be happy. What should I do?

- STRESSED OUT IN PHILLY

DEAR STRESSED OUT: If his close call wasn't enough to convince your husband to rethink his motorcycle riding, and your begging and obvious distress haven't dissuaded him, accept that short of hog-tying Chris, you can't stop him from riding.

You can, however, protect yourself from some of the fallout that might result from another accident. Tell Chris that if his heart is set on riding, you want him to buy a life insurance policy and sign an organ donor card, because healthy young men on motorcycles are the most desired organ donors — a fact shared with me by a former executive director of an organ donation registry. That way you will be provided for in case of a tragedy — and it will ensure that part of him lives on when he is removed from life support.

It's also important that you find ways to lessen your stress. So start making time for activities you can enjoy while you're on your own. It'll give you less time to worry and something else on which to concentrate.

DEAR ABBY: I am a woman who last year discovered I was gay. I was married with children. When I told my husband I was gay, he embraced and supported me with a great deal of love. We told our children in an open and honest way, and they, too, have supported me. I have also told a select group of friends whom I felt I could trust.

One of these friends is the mother of one of my son's classmates. Her daughter asked her mom why I was always with a woman and her response was, "It's her girlfriend." Her daughter asked more questions, so her mother told her I was gay — outing me to her daughter and my son's classmates! I am beyond hurt, and I am considering dissolving my friendship with this person. I am unsure what I should say or do. Can you help?

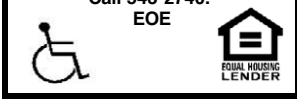

- CONFUSED IN SEATTLE

DEAR CONFUSED: Once a "secret" is shared, there is no guarantee that it will remain a secret. When you began coming out to your friends, you revealed who you are. You CAN'T be both in and out of the closet.

Please forgive your friend. Her daughter asked honest questions and was given honest answers. That is a good thing. There are worse things than being known as gay in Seattle — such as being gay in a place that's less accepting. So start celebrating who you are and the rest will fall into place.
