T.F. Police Respond to Shooting Thursday

BY ALISON SMITH
alismith@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • The Twin Falls Police Department said officers responded to a call of shots fired early Thursday morning.

Capt. Matt Hicks confirmed shots were directed at about 12:10 a.m. toward a house at 719 3rd Ave. N.

No injuries were reported. Hicks said he did not know if bullets hit the house or how many shots were fired, but detectives are treating the incident as a shooting.

No one answered the door at the home when a Times-News reporter stopped by Thursday afternoon.

The motive for the shooting remains unclear and no related arrests were made as of Thursday evening.

Detectives are still interviewing people and piecing together exactly what happened, Hicks said.

"They're not prepared at this point to identify anyone that was a witness or suspect," he said.

STICKING TO THE SCHEDULE

Twin Falls residents should keep a few rules in mind while keeping their desert lawns green.

WHAT IF I'M ON CITY WATER?

Take a look at your address. If your house number ends in an even number (2, 4, 6, 8 or 0), you may water on Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays. If your house number is odd (1, 3, 5, 7 or 9), water Wednesdays, Fridays and Sundays. Even on designated days, no one on city water can irrigate between 10 a.m. and 5 p.m., Bohling said.

WHAT IF I'M ON CANAL WATER, OR PRESSURIZED IRRIGATION?

Canal water users have a slightly different watering system. Those living at even-numbered addresses water on even-numbered calendar days. For odd-numbered addresses, stick with odd-numbered calendar days.

WHAT IF MY SCHEDULE DOESN'T WORK FOR ME?

Sometimes, landscapes need a bit more water, like if a lawn has new sod or seed, or with certain types of plants. In other instances, the water pressure might be inadequate during prescribed water times.

In those cases, residents can apply for exemptions on their watering schedule. If approved, new lawn exemptions are valid for three months. Those applying for permanent alternate schedules must explain why the city's schedule won't work for their landscape, give plans of their landscapes and show other water conservation efforts.

TWIN FALLS • Have a lawn and live in Twin Falls? That means you're performing lawn care in a desert.

Following the city's water schedule is more than just watering on your prescribed days. Here is what you need to know, courtesy of city Water Superintendent Robert Bohling.

SO WHAT IF I DON'T?

Expect to get dinged on your water bill. On the first offense, the city issues an initial written warning. Second offense, the city tacks $40 onto your water bill. Third offense, that jumps up to $80; for the fourth and every subsequent offense, it's $120.

HOW IS IT ENFORCED?

Recently, the city water department took over enforcement. The department receives tips from complaining neighbors or observations from city employees. If the house doesn't have a watering schedule waiver, the water department issues the written warning, then keeps track of how many violations the homeowner has accrued.

ANYTHING ELSE I SHOULD KNOW?

Drip line irrigation is exempt from watering schedules, Bohling said. And regardless of limits, remember that we live in a desert.

"If it's hot and we're using a lot of water, just kind of use your common sense and kind of conserve and monitor yourselves," Bohling said.

Gerrymandering Lawsuit Dismissed

BY MELISSA DAVLIN
mdavlin@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • A lawsuit accusing Twin Falls County officials of improperly influencing county precinct boundaries has been dismissed before reaching trial.

On Wednesday, 5th District Judge Michael Crabtree dismissed two petitions filed by Rick Martin of Buhl that accused County Prosecutor Grant Loeb and County Clerk Kristina Glascock of gerrymandering precinct boundaries.

Loeb, Glascock and County Commissioner George Urie denied the claim in court documents.

In an opinion issued with his judgement, Crabtree said Martin didn't support his claims.

Twin Falls School Projects Include New Bleachers, Track Repair

BY JULIE WOOTTON
jwootton@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • Now that school is out for the summer, renovation projects are getting started.

The Idaho State Department of Education hasn't provided specific funding to school districts for building maintenance since fiscal year 2009.

As a result, some districts are holding off on summer projects or finding other funding sources.

In Twin Falls, the school district is using a plant facilities levy voters passed in 2008. It's a 10-year, $33 million measure.

Facilities Manager Kirk Brower said funding for summer projects has been tight during past years since levy funding was used for larger projects.

"This year, we were able to use a bit more," he said.

One of the largest projects in Twin Falls this summer is installing new gym bleachers at Vera C. O'Leary Middle School. "We're replacing them due to safety," Brower said, and the old bleachers were removed in March.

New telescoping bleachers will be electronically controlled. The old bleachers were moved manually.

The project will cost about $50,000.

Another large project this summer is repairing and resurfacing the track at Twin Falls High School. It will cost about $61,000.

Over the past two or three years, the track has been patched. But now, Brower said there are a few cracks that need to be addressed.

Also, the old wooden fence around the high school stadium is gone and has been replaced with the chain-link fence that used to run along the perimeter of the school parking lot.

BOISE (AP) • Idaho Democrats are getting ready to gather in Boise for the party's 2012 convention.

Democratic Party Chairman Larry Grant says the agenda for the three-day event includes selecting delegates to attend the party's national convention later this summer and hammering out a platform.

Top Democratic officials, legislative and congressional candidates and party representatives from all 44 counties are expected to attend and help shape the state party's plans for the next two years.

Today's keynote speaker is Jimmy Farris, a former NFL player who is running against Republican Raul Labrador in Idaho's 1st Congressional District. On Saturday, former state Sen. Nicole LeFavour will talk about her race against GOP Rep. Mike Simpson in the 2nd Congressional District.

Idaho Republicans will hold their 2012 convention next week in Twin Falls.

JEROME TO GET NEW TRAFFIC SIGNAL NEAR HIGH SCHOOL

TIMES-NEWS

JEROME • The Idaho Transportation Department will install a new traffic signal at a busy Jerome intersection starting on June 25, according to a press release.

The light is planned for where Main Street — also Idaho Highway 25 — meets Tiger Drive on the east edge of town. Jerome High School is on the intersection's northeast corner. Peak-hour traffic volumes at the site led ITD to approve the signal.

The project's early stages begin next week, including utility location and survey work done primarily out of the roadway. Crews will excavate and set foundations for the traffic signal poles before installing the posts and poles.

Improvements will also be made to the intersection, including a west-bound right-turn lane, enhancements to the sidewalk and pedestrian ramps, and pavement work.

The work should finish by the end of August, before school resumes for the fall, according to the press release. Until then, drivers should expect lane restrictions and short delays during regular work hours. ITD asks drivers to be cautious while driving through the work zone.

Idaho Sand and Gravel of Jerome is the contractor for the $478,732 project, funded by ITD.

Local Firewise Communities Host Annual Work Day

BY KIMBERLEE KRUESI
kkruesi@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • With fire season under way, some Twin Falls homeowners are preparing ways to reduce their risk of a wildfire encroaching into their home.

On Saturday, two Twin Falls communities will spend the afternoon removing debris and planting fire resistant plants around their homes. It's an annual event that's required of Hidden Lakes Subdivision and Meadow Ridge residents because they're involved in Firewise Communities.

Firewise is a multi-agency program designed to help homeowners in protecting and preventing against wildfires. However the success of the program is primarily dependent on the actions of individual homeowners, said Lorraine Simonson, Mid-Snake RC&D fire educator.

"Each of these communities they have to throw a Firewise day where they do something to help the community," Simonson said.

This year, Rock Creek Rural Fire Department and Twin Falls Fire Department will bring in a chipper to cutup debris and brush, Simonson said.

Fire resistant plants grown in Hagerman and Shoshone elementary schools will also be available for homeowners.

Currently, there are four Firewise Communities in the Magic Valley. The program would like to expand but it's hard to recruit neighborhoods that have never experienced a fire, she said.

"I think if people are threatened, then you can sell them on the idea," she said. "Both of these Hidden Lakes and Meadow Ridge have experienced fires close to them so that's why we were able to work them."

Seal Coats Planned Soon for Local Highways

TIMES-NEWS

TWIN FALLS • The Idaho Transportation Department plans to soon seal coat about 150 miles of highways throughout south-central Idaho, according to a press release.

The projects, made possible by the warmer weather, will cross all parts of the region.

Seal coating applies a layer of asphalt followed by a cover coat of gravel on the roadway surface. The highway is rolled and traffic allowed on to the roadway to help pack the surface before "brooming," or sweeping, to remove excess gravel.

The work is done during the day to allow higher temperatures to help bond the asphalt and rock more quickly to the roadway surface.

Drivers are urged to use caution in all areas of seal coating. Observing posted speed limits and increasing the distance between vehicles will reduce the risk of windshield damage caused by loose gravel.

The projects should begin at many Magic Valley locations in mid-June. All should be finished by the end of August.

Construction

And a blue railing will be installed around the parking lot, funded through donations.

"Already, it looks so much nicer," Brower said.

At Bridge Academy — the district's alternative middle school — the roof will be replaced this summer. A portion of the roof at Sawtooth Elementary School will also be replaced due to leaking issues.

Throughout the school district, carpet will be replaced in four or five rooms per school. Brower said he worked with principals and custodians to determine which rooms are most in need of new carpet.

At Morningside Elementary School, crews will dig up asphalt at the back of the school building to put in a new water line. Then, new asphalt will be poured in the area.

Another project this summer will be putting in wheelchair accessible ramps on the visitor's side of the Twin Falls High football field and at several buildings at Magic Valley High School.

That will meet requirements under the Americans with Disabilities Act.

"Every time we replace ramps, we make sure they're ADA compliant," Brower said.

What Are Other Magic Valley School Districts Doing?

- Blaine County: The school board will decide today whether to approve $1.79 million in site improvements to the Carey School.
- The board already approved a $1.18 million security updates project for Carey School, Bellevue Elementary School, Woodside Elementary School, Hailey Elementary and Wood River High School.
- That will include door replacement, hardware and access controls, as well as interior and exterior cameras. Board members will also decide today whether to award $536,356 in contracts for security upgrades at Wood River Middle School and the Community Campus/Silver Creek High School building.
- Buhl: Crews are putting in another pumping station so all school lawns will be irrigated using canal water instead of the city's water system. Superintendent Byron Stutzman said the project will pay for itself in about two years. But there isn't funding for other projects, except deep cleaning and minor maintenance.
- Cassia County: Two classrooms are being added at Raft River Elementary School, which will cost about $260,000. Freezers are also being constructed at two schools.
- Jerome: Projects this summer include constructing a maintenance building shell, installing a walk-in freezer for the food service program, putting in a new curb, gutter and sidewalk on 4th Avenue West near the district office, and a lighting retrofit at Jerome High School.
- Kimberly: One of the largest projects this summer is replacing a leaky roof at the elementary school building. And with help from Operation Facelift crews are putting new siding on an old building that's used for storage.

Total Waste Management driver Kyle Santos makes his rounds in March at a Heyburn business on Centennial Drive.

Heyburn City Officials End Commercial Garbage Contract

BY KIMBERLEE KRUESI
kkruesi@magicvalley.com

HEYBURN • Heyburn city officials voted Wednesday to terminate a contract with PSI Environmental Systems to provide exclusive commercial garbage service in the city.

The decision is the City Council's response to a recent lawsuit filed by Total Waste Management, challenging the city's exclusive agreement with PSI. Previously, Heyburn businesses could choose from any garbage collection services.

City officials are now waiting to hear back from Total Waste Management, said Mayor George Anderson.

"I hope they like it," he said. The terms of the contract reversal, the timeline for city businesses and whether Heyburn faces any penalties weren't entirely clear Thursday. PSI's contract was effective April 1, and included a transition phase for companies still using other garbage services.

Anderson declined to comment further on the subject and phone calls to City Attorney Steven Tuft

Also Wednesday

- During Wednesday's meeting, the council also voted to:
- Award a bid of $92,000 to purchase wastewater equipment.
 - Award $8,850 to purchase new doors for the City Shop.
 - Amend the city's recreation vehicle park fee to include group organizations and not just AARP members.
 - Approve an $27,000 expense for electrical construction.
 - Approve roof repairs that will cost the city close to $9,600.

were not returned.

Lyle Santos, co-owner of Total Waste Management, was not aware of the City Council's decision when contacted by the Times-News on Thursday.

Minidoka County 5th District Judge Jonathan Brody was scheduled to hear the lawsuit, but a court date hasn't been set. Santos said he didn't know if the council's action would prevent the need to move forward with the suit.

"I haven't seen anything yet," he said. "The ball is still in the city of Heyburn's court at this point."

The City Council approved the PSI garbage contract in a March 29 emergency meeting. It had heard from several business owners who opposed the contract at its regular March 28 meeting, but did not make a decision then.

PSI District Manager Josh Brown said Thursday he respected the city's decision but the lawsuit has taken a toll on his business.

He said it's not uncommon for cities to contract with only one commercial garbage service, but expects the Heyburn to return to an open market approach for its commercial garbage service.

"Due to the competition's threatening lawsuit, our contract was ended," Brown said. "We are a premier waste management company in the Magic Valley and PSI has lost a substantial amount of business because of the competitor."

"He has not provided any admissible evidence to show Mr. Loebs and Ms. Glascock usurped the Board's authority and 'drew' the voting precinct lines," Crabtree wrote.

Attorney Jennifer Bergin, who represented the county, said she was pleased with Crabtree's decision.

"We felt from the beginning that there was no factual basis and no legal basis for the lawsuit," she said.

Martin speculated that had he presented his arguments better, Crabtree wouldn't have dismissed the case.

"My verbal and written pleadings were poor, and I'll just have to contemplate it after I read the decision," Martin said.

Idaho counties redrew their precinct boundaries following the 2010 census. Twin Falls County contracted with Riedesel Engineering for its new map, which was then approved by the county commissioners.

Twin Falls Man Sentenced to Federal Prison for Trafficking in Firearms

BY ALISON GENE SMITH
alismith@magicvalley.com

BOISE • A 56-year-old Twin Falls man was sentenced to more than three years in federal prison on a charge of unlawful possession of a firearm, U.S. Attorney Wendy Olson announced in a statement Thursday.

Carlos G. Paladini made arrangements with an undercover police officer to sell four firearms for $1,000, the statement said. According to police, Paladini agreed to go to a motel in Twin Falls to complete the sale. On the way, his vehicle was stopped by police, who found a duffle bag containing five handguns wrapped in socks.

One of the guns was reported stolen and another had the serial number removed, police said.

Paladini was previously convicted of felony possession of a controlled substance, according to Olson. Police searched Paladini's house and reported finding more guns, methamphetamine and evidence he was distributing meth.

According to a criminal complaint, Paladini told police he accepted guns as payment for meth and allowed police to search a Hansen residence referred to as "the nest."

After being booked on charges of being a felon in possession of a firearm and other charges on Sept. 29, 2011, Paladini was found with three fake $20 bills, Twin Falls police said.

According to a police report, Paladini told police he carried the counterfeit money in his wallet because he would rather do federal time than state prison time for his crimes.

The three bills Paladini was carrying were found to be copies of notes made by Matthew Harrington, a Twin Falls man arrested after allegedly producing fake bills on resume paper bought at Walmart. Harrington faces a June 26 jury trial.

The Paladini case was investigated by the Twin Falls Police Department, the U.S. Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, Firearms and Explosives, and Idaho State Police.

One Injured in School Bus Crash

TIMES-NEWS

JEROME • A 21-year-old man was injured Thursday morning when he reentered a school bus in Jerome County, police say.

At about 7:30 a.m., Idaho State Police began investigating the crash on U.S. Highway 93 and 330 North, in Jerome County.

According to ISP, Louise Lampman, 68, of Jerome was driving the school bus, a 2000 Freightliner, south on Highway 93 when she slowed to make a right turn onto 330 North.

Following the bus was James Clayton of Richfield, driving a 1999 Dodge Neon. As Lampman slowed, Clayton drove into the back of the bus, according to the ISP report.

Clayton was transported by ground ambulance to St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center with minor injuries. No one on the bus was transported to a hospital, the report said.

According to ISP, Clayton was not wearing a seat belt, and alcohol was not a factor in the crash.

The southbound lane of Highway 93 was blocked for about one hour.

Man Wanted for Questioning in Jerome Shooting Had Pills, Police Say

BY ALISON GENE SMITH
alismith@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • When Twin Falls police arrested a man wanted in connection to a Jerome shooting, he had an unlabeled bottle of prescription pills in his pocket.

Victor Emmanuel Garcia, 21, of Twin Falls, was arrested Wednesday at about 9:30 a.m. on a warrant for failing to appear on a driving without privileges charge. In the report, Garcia is identified by police as "homeless." He was found in the 1800 block of Fourth Avenue East in Twin Falls.

Officer Mynde Heil looked at the pill bottle but put it back in Garcia's pocket.

"As we were on our way to the jail, Mr. Garcia removed the bottle from his pocket, opened the bottle and dumped some of the pills out into his hand and in the back seat of my car," Heil wrote in the report.

Heil put Garcia in an interview room at the station and searched the patrol car, collecting a few pills and the pill bottle's cap, the report said.

After returning to the interview room, Heil wrote in the report, there were pills on the floor and Garcia was holding the rest. According to the report, both prescription Amitriptyline (anti-depression) and Alprazolam (anti-anxiety pills) were found but it was unclear if Garcia had a prescription for either drug. The anti-anxiety drug is a Schedule IV substance. The prescription is required for the anti-depression drug, but it is not a scheduled substance.

Garcia was booked into the Twin Falls County Jail on charges of driving without privileges, failure to appear and unlawful possession of a prescription drug and was held on a total of $1,500 bond. A pretrial hearing is scheduled for July 3.

Idaho Republican's Legislative Pay Went to IRS

BOISE (AP) • A tax-protesting state lawmaker says the Internal Revenue Service has garnished his legislative pay for the past seven years to satisfy outstanding income-tax payments.

Rep. Phil Hart made the revelation in documents filed to support his bid for Chapter 13 bankruptcy protection, The Spokesman-Review reported Thursday.

The northern Idaho Republican listed more than $600,000 in debt, most of it to the IRS and the Idaho State Tax Commission. He lost his May 15 GOP primary election and won't return to the Legislature for a fifth term.

Some former House leaders fear that people who learn Hart's legislative paychecks went to finance his tax bill will become more cynical about elected leaders.

Former House Speaker Bruce Newcomb says the public already is suspicious of politicians, and he worries this will merely confirm people's worst fears that Hart was only in the Legislature to subsidize his tax obligations.

"A person has a right to protest their taxes," Newcomb said. "But this has been one of the more extreme endeavors I've ever seen."

Hart didn't return phone calls seeking comment.

In addition to the legislative payments, the U.S. Department of Justice is seeking to foreclose on Hart's home in Athol to satisfy more than $500,000 in federal tax debts. Government lawyers have called Hart's efforts to place the home in a trust named after his daughter a "fraudulent" transaction and a "sham entity" designed to keep the IRS from collecting what he owes it.

Hart, who also owes the state some $53,000, didn't list his home among his assets.

Hart reported in the bankruptcy documents that he has $22,000 in credit card debt. He listed assets including a 1990 Toyota pickup with 310,000 miles that "needs work," three guns, sporting equipment, household items, clothing, office equipment, $1,210 in checking accounts, and a state retirement account worth $11,826.

All those assets, which add up to just over $30,000, should be exempt from the bankruptcy, he said in court filings.

Hart has written a book about why he thinks the U.S. income tax is unconstitutional.

He acknowledges in his bankruptcy filing that the IRS and state Tax Commission have claims against him for nearly $600,000 but says he disputes all but $7,009 of those claims.

SEC Asks Judge for Ruling against Nuke Developer

BOISE (AP) • Federal regulators are asking for a partial judgment against a would-be Idaho nuclear developer they accuse of fraud.

Securities and Exchange Commission lawyers told U.S. District Judge Edward Lodge this month there's no question Alternate Energy Holdings Inc. executives broke laws governing publicly-traded companies by selling securities through unregistered, illegal transactions.

Richard Roth, the New York City attorney for the Eagle, Idaho-based company, didn't return a call.

AEHI has until July 3 to respond in court.

The case began in 2010, when the federal regulators levied charges against AEHI that it fraudulently raised money from investors across the country and Asia to build a $10 billion nuclear power plant in Idaho.

In their most-recent filing, SEC lawyers reiterated claims that AEHI duped investors, including by claiming billions in lender commitments.

IDAHO BONDS GET TOP RATING FROM 3 AGENCIES

BOISE (AP) • Idaho's bond rating has earned top marks from three separate financial agencies.

Idaho Treasurer Ron Crane says the favorable ratings mean easier sales and better interest rates as the state prepares to sell short term notes. Crane announced the ratings Wednesday that were issued by Moody's, Standard and Poor's and Fitch.

The state is gearing up to sell $500 million in so-called Tax Anticipation Notes. Selling those short-term securities occurs annually in Idaho and other states to cover debt until the next tax collection period.

Crane says the rating agencies cited several reasons for giving Idaho top marks, including conservative fiscal policies, signs of an economic recovery and low debt level.

Group Seeks Details on Immigration Email Probe

GREAT FALLS, Mont. (AP) • A human-rights organization is calling on the U.S. Department of Homeland Security to release details about its investigation into a racially charged email sent by an immigration official in Montana to a Helena attorney.

Montana Human Rights Network director Travis McAdam tells the Great Falls Tribune that his organization is circulating a petition for the release of information about the investigation into Bruce Norum.

Norum is the supervisory detention and deportation officer for Homeland Security's Immigration and Customs Enforcement office in Helena. As the most senior ICE official in Montana, Norum has control over most of the agency's operations in the state, including decisions on whether to arrest or investigate suspected undocumented aliens or to detain or deport individuals.

In September, Norum wrote "good read" at the top of a forwarded email message to Helena immigration attorney Shahid Haque-Hausrath and another ICE employee. The message argued for a loyalty test for Arab and Muslim Americans before they are afforded the same constitutional protections against racial profiling and discrimination as other citizens.

On June 4, Haque-Hausrath and his lawyer met with Norum's supervisor, ICE field office director Steven Branch, who said Norum soon would be reinstated to his position after a nearly eight-month suspension.

Haque-Hausrath said Branch refused to release any other information about the probe.

Dallas-based ICE spokesman Carl Rusnok issued a statement Monday that said, "For privacy reasons, ICE does not discuss internal investigations." There was no phone listing for Norum in Helena.

McAdam said it seems as though ICE is putting Norum back into his position without any explanation, prompting the petition.

"As the highest-ranking ICE official in Montana, Mr. Norum sets the tone for the agency. Based on the email he forwarded and the power of his position with ICE, Muslim Montanans and other people of color have reason to fear being profiled, arrested, or detained based on the color of their skin," the petition reads, in part.

Rusnok said anyone who suspects improper behavior by ICE employees is encouraged to contact the Office of Professional Responsibility's 24/7 Joint Intake Center at 877-246-8253 or email Joint.Intake@dhs.gov.

"Every ICE employee is held to the highest standard of professional and ethical conduct," Rusnok said. "Accusations of misconduct — especially complaints related to civil rights and civil liberties violations — will be investigated thoroughly and, when substantiated, immediate appropriate action will be taken."

Sheriff: Mont. Hitchhiker Shooting Suspect Cleared

BY MATTHEW BROWN
Associated Press

BILLINGS, Mont. • The suspect in the seemingly random shooting of a photographer hitchhiking along a rural Montana highway has been cleared of the crime and the investigation is continuing, authorities said Thursday.

Valley County Sheriff Glen Meier said Lloyd Christopher Danielson III, 52, of Tumwater, Wash., "had nothing to do with the shooting" that left hitchhiker Ray Dolin with an injury to his arm pit.

Danielson was arrested Saturday about four hours after the shooting and 100 miles away. He was charged with felony assault with a weapon.

Dolin told authorities he was shot after he stopped for a meal along the side of U.S. Highway 2 near Glasgow.

But in his first interview, the 39-year-old freelance photographer from Julian, W.Va., told The Associated Press on Thursday that he never got a good look at the perpetrator.

"He came up, pulls up at a normal speed, stops, points, shoots and drives off. ... I did not get a good description," Dolin said.

He said he never approached the vehicle, which he described as a maroon pickup, the same color and type of vehicle that Danielson was driving when he was arrested.

Dolin spoke from a hospital in Miles City, where he said he was undergoing therapy for his injured arm.

KIDNAPPED KIDS' DAD SUES DONATION FUND MANAGER

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) • A woman who administered a bank account for donations given to benefit two northern Idaho children kidnapped seven years ago is being sued by their father, who says she mismanaged the funds.

The Coeur d'Alene Press reports Steven Groene filed the lawsuit in 1st District Court late last week against Brandy Hoagland. Hoagland is Shasta and Dylan Groene's aunt and the administrator of a fund created after the children were kidnapped by Joseph Edward Duncan III. Duncan eventually killed Dylan and returned to Coeur d'Alene, where Shasta was rescued.

In the lawsuit, Groene contends Hoagland has refused to account for the money donated by the public. Groene also contends she failed to use roughly $48,000 in the best interests of the children.

Hoagland could not be reached for comment.

Man Shot by Officer in Dec. Arrested for DUI

BOISE (AP) • A 37-year-old Fruitland man who was shot and critically injured by a police officer responding to a report of a domestic disturbance at his mother's house in December has been arrested by Boise police for excessive driving under the influence for the second time this year.

The Idaho Statesman reports Jamee Lee Wade was arrested late Wednesday after police received a report of a possible drunk driver and an officer spotted Wade's car run a red light.

Police say Wade failed several field sobriety tests and a breath test indicated his blood-alcohol level was 0.23, or nearly three times the legal limit.

Wade has pleaded guilty to the DUI charge filed in February. Sentencing is set for June 26.

Wade has not been charged in the Fruitland case.

Minnick Suing Law Firm over Handling of Easement

BOISE (AP) • Former Idaho Congressman Walt Minnick has filed a malpractice lawsuit against the law firm that handled a conservation easement deal that led the Internal Revenue Service to disallow a $1 million tax deduction.

Last week, Minnick and his wife, A.K., filed a lawsuit against Hawley Troxell, a firm that has handled business and personal matters for the former Democratic lawmaker for two decades.

Minnick says the real estate lawyer working on his case was negligent and failed to comply with IRS regulations in handling a 2006 conservation easement granted to the Land Trust of Treasure Valley for the Minnicks' seven-lot, 74-acre development in Boise. The IRS denied Minnick's claim of a deduction estimated at about $1 million, essentially erasing $305,629 in tax savings in 2006, 2007 and 2008.

Hawley Troxell's managing partner Steve Berenter said the firm believes Minnick was provided excellent legal service and denies any negligence in the case.

In a separate case, Minnick is suing the IRS in federal tax court. But he said an April ruling in a Colorado case makes what he considers the law firm's mistake potentially fatal to his case and could require he pay more than $300,000 in taxes, along with interest, penalties and state taxes.

"It suggests that I'm going to lose," Minnick told The Idaho Statesman in a story published Thursday.

Minnick represented Idaho's 1st Congressional District from 2008 to 2010, but was beaten in his bid for a second term by Republican upstart Raul Labrador, who was carried by a wave of conservative support and anti-President Obama sentiment among western Idaho voters.

Minnick's lawsuit claims Hawley Troxell failed to comply with IRS rules requiring a mortgage on the land be subordinated to the easement and that the gift be immediately vested in the land trust.

Minnick attorney Bill Mauk said suing his client's longtime law firm is simply a business decision.

"There is not bad blood here, but you go to professionals to protect your interests," Mauk said.

Idaho Awards Grants Worth Some $2M to Universities

BOISE (AP) • Idaho is sending $2 million to three universities, part of a program approved by the 2012 Legislature that Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter hopes boosts the state economy by fostering public-private partnerships.

The grants announced Wednesday are among the first outlays of the Idaho Global Entrepreneurial Mission, or IGEM.

Boise State University plans to use its $700,000 share for its computer science.

Idaho State University says its $670,700 grant will help develop commercially viable semiconductor and medical materials.

And the University of Idaho plans to use its $640,200 grant to support cyber-security research and education.

In addition to this research money, IGEM included another $3 million — $2 million for the Center for Advanced Energy Studies in Idaho Falls, and $1 million in state Department of Commerce grants to private industry.

BLM Managers Say Exploding Targets Fuel Wildfires

BOISE (AP) • Exploding targets may go off with a satisfying bang, but federal land managers say they're behind a spate of human-caused wildfires in Idaho.

The Boise District Bureau of Land Management said on Wednesday it has investigated 19 human-caused fires this season and suspect that four have been ignited by exploding targets.

The targets are popular for rifle practice, because they scatter incendiary materials for several feet after they've been hit by bullets.

But in combination with dry grass, they can become the culprit behind fast-moving range fires.

What's more, they're illegal during the wildfire months between May 10 and Oct. 10 on territory managed by the BLM, Forest Service and Idaho Department of Lands.

Violators face jail time, up to $100,000 in fines — and possible firefighting costs, if caught.

Boise Woman Sues Scentsy, Alleging It Stole Her Idea

BY AUDREY DUTTON
Idaho Statesman

BOISE • A lawsuit filed Wednesday in state district court by Eva Marosvari alleges the Meridian-based wickless candle company Scentsy used her idea for a product line but didn't compensate her for it.

Marosvari was an independent direct sales consultant responsible for about 50 sellers and was a friend of the company's top officials, according to her lawyers.

She claims she answered a Scentsy call for ideas in 2009 by pitching a stuffed-animal product line.

"In preparing to offer her children's product line to Scentsy, Eva designed a collection of [19] stuffed animals with names related to Scentsy scents and the framework for video games involving the Scentsy characters which, in keeping with the Scentsy theme of warmers as safe alternatives to candles, promoted fire safety for children," the lawsuit said.

She named them "Scentzanimals."

Company managers asked her to develop the idea, included her in discussions about using it, then marketed it in mid-2010 as "Scentsy Buddies," she claims.

Marosvari said Scentsy management ignored her attempts at an official business and compensation arrangement. Scentsy lawyers told her the company's policy was not to pay for ideas, she said.

"We're saddened to learn that one of our current consultants feels legal action is necessary to address concerns she has," said Susan Rowe, a spokeswoman for Scentsy. "The company is committed to treating our consultants fairly and as valued contributors to the success of our company," Marosvari's Boise lawyer, Chuck Peterson, said she trusted the company and is "disappointed ... and feels betrayed" by Scentsy officials. "When they took her idea, they (implicitly) agreed to pay for it," said Bryan Ulmer, Marosvari's lawyer in Wyoming.

Prosecutor: Deceased Man, Shooter Played 'Some Kind of Game'

IDAHO STATESMAN

BOISE • Gregory M. Shain is being held in the Ada County Jail on a charge of felony involuntary manslaughter after prosecutors say he shot and killed a 23-year-old Boise man at a home just off Curtis Road late Monday night while the men were "playing some kind of game."

Shain, who is being held on a $500,000 bond, is also charged with a felony count of using a firearm in the commission of a felony.

The Ada County coroner identified the victim as Gary Dean Arlen Jr. The cause of death was a gunshot wound to the head, and the death was a homicide, the coroner said Tuesday morning.

Boise police originally charged Shain with voluntary manslaughter — the unlawful killing of a human being "upon a sudden quarrel or heat of passion." But Ada County prosecutors changed that charge to a lesser count of involuntary manslaughter prior to Shain's first court appearance Tuesday afternoon.

Involuntary manslaughter is charged when the "operation of any firearm or deadly weapon in a reckless, careless or negligent manner produces death," according to Idaho law.

Police say the men knew each other. Prosecutors did not elaborate on what kind of game Shain and Arlen Jr. were playing at the time of the shooting, but did say drug and alcohol use might be a factor.

What police have said is officers were called to a home on Cruzen Street, just northwest of the Curtis Road and Fairview Avenue, around 11:44 p.m. Monday. When police arrived, they found the 23-year-old man who lives at the home dead from a gunshot wound.

Shain, dressed in a yellow-striped jail jumpsuit, was subdued during his court appearance Monday.

A preliminary hearing for Shain is set for April 2. The crime of involuntary manslaughter is punishable by up to 10 years in prison.

OUR VIEW

Reporters’ Access to Execution a Victory for First Amendment

On Tuesday morning, Richard Leavitt was put to death in payment for his crime – the 1984 murder of a Blackfoot woman. According to news reports, Leavitt stabbed her at least 15 times and cut out her sexual organs. In contrast to the violence of the crime, Leavitt’s death was peaceful.

We know that six correctional officers wearing surgical masks stood next to Leavitt, three to a side “like pallbearers.” We know that they lifted him off a gurney and strapped him to the execution table.

We know that they attached intravenous lines to his arms and electrodes to his chest and stomach to monitor his heart rate. They used blood pressure cuffs to enlarge his veins and swabbed his arms repeatedly with alcohol to prevent infection in case the execution was called off at the last minute.

A member of the team slipped in the needle that delivered the lethal dose of pentobarbital – in one arm and then in another.

We know all these details because there were four reporters there to witness the execution. It was the first time the press was allowed to witness an execution by lethal injection in Idaho from beginning to end, thanks to an appeals court ruling handed down days before Leavitt was put to death.

The 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals issued the decision Friday, June 8, saying Idaho’s protocol for limiting press access to the entirety of an execution was unconstitutional.

“Nearly a decade ago, we held in the clearest possible terms that ‘the public enjoys a First Amendment right to view executions from the moment the condemned is escorted into the execution chamber,’ the judges said in their ruling. “The State of Idaho has had ample opportunity for the past decade to adopt an execution procedure that reflects this settled law.”

The Associated Press spearheaded the lawsuit and invited media outlets from across Idaho to participate. In the end, more than a dozen news organizations joined the suit, including the Times-News. There are two reasons why the Times-News decided to join this lawsuit.

For us, this is not about the death penalty – whether it is right or wrong. This is about the First Amendment and the public’s right to know.

Our role is to be there when you cannot. And when doors are closed to you – the public – it is our role to pound on those doors until they open.

The death of Richard Leavitt was Idaho’s third execution in 17 years and the second in the past seven months.

As he died, there was a small group of protesters outside the Idaho Department of Corrections holding signs like one that read, “Execute justice, not people.”

Among their arguments, opponents of the death penalty have questioned the effectiveness of the drugs used in lethal injection and the training of the execution team. They claim poorly trained execution teams have botched injections and the condemned have suffered cruel and unusual punishments.

How can we argue or agree if we are not there to witness it? How can we have an informed debate if we only have the word of officials to tell us the details? How can we steer policy decisions from the outside of a closed door? We can’t.

After the execution, Idaho Department of Correction Director Brent Reinke said, “I am grateful that we have four media witnesses here to tell you what they saw.”

We believe that the Associated Press and the Times-News’ court victory was a victory for our readers and for the First Amendment. And even though we ourselves were not there as witnesses, we are glad someone was there – that someone was allowed to be there.

Don’t Let Congress Replace Good Data with Ideology

Emi Nakamura, Jon Steinsson and Nicolas Vincent

Bloomberg News

Argentina’s government regularly publishes false data on the country’s inflation rate. Greece lied about the size of its budget deficit. Believe it or not, the United States is headed down a path that could ultimately make similar shenanigans possible in the world’s largest economy.

In various parts of the world, politicians are waging war on the economic statistics that help people assess the performance of their leaders. Over the past few years, the Argentine government has reported inflation rates more than a dozen percentage points below private-sector estimates, and has filed criminal charges against statisticians attempting to publish their own data. Late last year, Greece launched a criminal investigation of the head of its statistical agency for reporting larger budget deficits than the government deemed appropriate (or, as he put it, for “not cooking the books”).

If you think such degradation of national statistics couldn’t happen in more developed countries, think again.

In the U.S., a battle is brewing in Congress over two of the most valuable gauges of the nation’s economic health: the American Community Survey and the Economic Census. The data sets, which the U.S. has maintained in some form since the early 1900s, provide researchers and the public with a trove of information on everything from the size of families’ mortgage payments in Boise, Idaho, to the nation’s median annual income.

The data play a crucial role in calculating the performance of the entire U.S. economy, and in deciding how public funds should be allocated among states. Economists use them to figure out whether government policies are working. Businesses use them to study demographic trends and inform important decisions. The clarity they provide helps make the U.S. particularly attractive for foreign investment.

In early May, legislators in the House passed a bill that would eliminate both surveys, on the grounds that they are too intrusive – even though no information identifying the participants is ever released to the public. Robert Groves, the director of the Census Bureau, says ending the surveys will “devastate the nation’s statistical information.” In addition, Republican lawmakers have proposed large cuts to all of the core agencies responsible for data collection.

It’s possible that Republicans are using the threat of data chaos as a bargaining chip to extract other concessions. Given the recent experience of other developed nations, though, there’s no good reason for complacency.

Consider what’s happening in Canada. In 2010, Chief Statistician Munir Sheikh resigned in dramatic fashion after the conservative government of Prime Minister Stephen Harper decided to make participation voluntary in the “long-form” census, the Canadian counterpart to the American Community Survey – a move that has made that survey less reliable. The resignation had an eerie parallel: Back in 2007, the departure of the head of Argentina’s national statistics institute presaged that country’s descent into data manipulation. A Canadian legislator has since broached the subject of cutting the mandatory short-form census, a move that would render Canada unable even to accurately count the population. About half the staff at Statistics Canada has recently received layoff notices. The agency’s budget is set to take a 10 percent hit.

It is hard to believe that the cuts in data gathering are motivated by fiscal prudence alone. Making census-type surveys voluntary – a potential outcome of the battle in the U.S. as well – can actually increase costs because the sample size would need to be increased to offset biased response rates.

Beyond that, the cost of data collection is minimal. The entire Statistics Canada budget of $530 million amounts to only a handful of the 65 F-35 stealth fighters that the Harper government recently ordered as part of a plan to expand the Canadian military. In the U.S., the statistical agencies that collect most economic data account for less than 0.05 percent of President Barack Obama’s $3.7 trillion proposed budget.

Why, then, are politicians attacking statistics? Perhaps they have become so accustomed to good data that they fail to recognize what life and governance would be like without them. Some, though, have displayed an active disdain. When the Harper government’s plans to toughen Canadian crime laws were critiqued using statistics showing low and falling crime rates, Justice Minister Rob Nicholson proudly asserted: “We don’t govern on the basis of statistics.”

Man Shot by Police in December Arrested Thursday for DUI

BY PATRICK ORR
Idaho Statesman

BOISE • While prosecutors have yet to charge Jamee Lee Wade in connection with an incident in December when he was shot by a Fruitland Police officer, Wade is now being held in the Ada County Jail on his second felony DUI arrest in Ada County since February. Boise police arrested the 38-year-old Wade after investigating a report of a possible drunk driver near Fort and 14th streets late Wednesday. A police officer saw Wade drive through a red light at 13th and Fort streets before pulling him over. Police detected a strong odor of alcohol coming from Wade and say he failed several field sobriety tests before being taken to the jail, where he took a breath test and registered a .23 blood alcohol content percentage, according to police reports.

The legal bac limit in Idaho is .08. Any bac over .20 is charged as an excessive DUI. When Boise police arrested Wade on a DUI on Feb. 10, his bac was .24, according to reports. Wade eventually pleaded guilty to a felony DUI for the February arrest and is scheduled to be sentenced for that on June 26.

The crime of felony DUI is punishable by up to 10 years in prison.

Wade has a lengthy misdemeanor criminal history in Idaho, including the officer-involved shooting, three DUIs, and several traffic infractions, according to court records.

Fruitland Police Chief J.D. Huff told the Idaho Statesman in December that Wade would be charged with a crime in connection with a Dec. 23 incident when he was shot by an officer investigating a domestic disturbance call by Wade's mother's house.

Wade was badly injured in the shooting and was listed in critical condition in the days following but has since recovered.

The Idaho State Police, who headed the task force investigating the shooting, completed their investigation in February, Payette County Prosecutor Ann Marie Kelso said. Canyon County Prosecutor Bryan Taylor said Thursday his attorneys, who are reviewing that report for Payette County, are still working on the case.

Utah Wants Dog Owners Aware of Doo-doo Danger

BY NICK MATTHEWS AND JUDY FAHYS
The Salt Lake Tribune

SANDY, Utah • People love their dogs, and they love their dog parks.

So much so that Sandy City Dog Park has been "loved to death," according to Dan Medina, assistant director of Sandy City Parks and Recreation. Crews have had to replace the grass at least twice in the past year because of foot and dog traffic.

But he isn't complaining: Frequent use does not equate to abuse, for as much as dog owners visit the off-leash park, they've done a great job cleaning up after themselves and their furry friends, he says. Dog waste is not a problem.

Whether that's because signs and doggie bags are posted throughout the park or because Sandy citizens are naturally responsible pet owners is a matter of debate. But any dearth of dog waste is good news for the area's watershed.

Those diminutive dog deposits, wherever they are found, do add up and their residue can taint rivers and streams on the Wasatch Front.

It's "America's overlooked environmental pollutant," according to the Virginia-based waste-removal company Doody Calls.

They note that the nation's 78.2 million pet dogs deposit about 30,000 tons of waste each day. That's 10 million tons a year, or enough to fill 267,500 tractor trailers.

The pet-waste problem is certainly an issue for Florence Reynolds, Salt Lake City water department administrator and guardian of watersheds.

"A lot of our storm drainage ends up back in our streams," she says. "It's a concern."

She notes that city tests have generally found less coliform bacteria — which live in the digestive tracts of animals, including humans — in Big Cottonwood, Little Cottonwood and other canyons that are pet-free than in canyons where pets are allowed. In addition, one type of that bacteria, E. coli, has risen to worrisome levels in the Jordan River, probably because of runoff.

Another way to think about it is that coliform is an over-indicator of pollution — contaminants such as Giardia and salmonella that can transmit disease to people and even pets.

And, yes, there have been scientific studies on the subject.

One traced about 95 percent of the fecal coliform in urban storm water to dogs. Another showed the droppings could lead to algae blooms and oxygen starvation in lakes and streams.

Yet another study showed a gram of dog feces — roughly the weight of two paper clips — contains 23 million fecal coliform bacteria.

"People need to know that they have to pick up after their dogs," said Reynolds, "that they need to pick it up even in their own yards, that it can cause disease."

Public policymakers have determined that one way to deal with the problem is dog parks, where education and enforcement can go a long way toward helping pet owners take responsibility for the environmental problem their pets create.

Ashton Becomes Temporary Center of Idaho

BY JOSEPH LAW
Standard-Journal

ASHTON • Idaho officials made Ashton the center of the state's focus Thursday.

The city was selected as June's "Capital for a Day."

Governor C.L. "Butch" Otter has made the visits part of his administration to create some give and take interactions with residents across the state.

Questions Thursday morning for Otter and other state officials at the Ashton Community Center focused on local issues.

Three topics that took center stage for discussion were effective management of rising wolf populations, easier permit applications for snowmobiles, off-road recreational vehicles and boats as well as reviewing methods of funding for public education in tight fiscal times.

Otter said these types of forums always provide good ideas for state officials to consider.

And he said many good ideas came out in the morning session.

"Especially in the area of our parks and recreation — our licensure of recreational craft, whether it's a boat or a snow machine or a four-wheeler," he said. "Some of the fish and game questions that we got, the registration requirement that we have for our recreational vehicles — we got some pretty good ideas."

Otter said short breaks during the day and an hour-long luncheon also provide some informal opportunities for citizens to interact with their elected officials.

"It gives them a chance to talk to cabinet members one-on-one," he said. "...There will be plenty of opportunity for anyone to discuss the issues they feel are important to them."

Lawyers for Gang Say Injunction is Unconstitutional

OGDEN, Utah (AP) • An Ogden gang is challenging an injunction enacted in 2010 that prohibits its members from associating with each other in public, claiming the ban violates their constitutional rights.

The preliminary injunction also sets an 11 p.m. curfew for gang members and makes it illegal for them to carry guns or graffiti tools.

Attorneys for the Ogden Trece are arguing this week in 2nd District Court that the injunction violates the constitutional rights of the gang's more than 400 members. They say it infringes on the gang members' freedom of association and their constitutional protection against unreasonable search and seizure.

The Utah Supreme Court previously refused to suspend the injunction, and the Utah Court of Appeals and U.S. Supreme Court declined to hear the case.

The American Civil Liberties Union of Utah also had sought to have the injunction halted by the state Supreme Court, citing the same constitutional viola-

Are You Subluxated?

Subluxations shut off life supply to the body, as well as cause symptoms such as back pain, neck pain, headaches, breathing problems, bowel disorders and many other symptoms.

Dr. Jill's primary concern is locating the cause of the symptoms, not just the removal of symptoms. Dr. Jill looks to the cause of the dysfunction. Subluxations can be the result of injury, poor posture, or even something as natural as the birth process.

The chiropractic adjustment is the correction of the subluxation to remove the interference in the body and improve the body's ability to express itself normally and more healthfully.

DEQ Resumes Landfill Permit Review

BY CYNTHIA SEWELL
Idaho Statesman

BOISE • The Idaho Department of Environmental Quality has resumed reviewing Dynamis' air quality permit application to build a waste-to-energy plant at the Ada County landfill.

On May 24, DEQ deemed the application incomplete and requested Dynamis provide additional information on emissions, nitrogen oxide and nitrogen dioxide modeling, exhaust system and terrain.

Dynamis submitted additional information on June 11, and now DEQ has 30 days to determine whether the application is complete. Once the application is complete, DEQ will have an additional 60 days to review the application.

Dynamis has applied for the kind of DEQ permit that allows it to begin construction, but not operate while DEQ reviews the application; the developer takes the risk that the plant might not pass muster with DEQ.

Dynamis has stated it plans to start construction in July. The county said Thursday a groundbreaking date has not been set and Dynamis has not applied for a building permit.

Dynamis CEO Lloyd Mahaffey could not be reached Thursday to confirm when the groundbreaking will take place or when Dynamis will apply for a building permit.

Ada County will not issue a building permit to Dynamis until the company repays the $2 million the county gave it to design the plant.

Through a 30-year public/private partnership with Ada County, Dynamis plans to build its first plant in the U.S. at the county-owned landfill. The $70 million plant will gasify up to 408 tons of trash daily, including up to 61 tons of tires, backers say, generating up to 20 megawatts of electricity.

Idaho Power Co. has agreed to purchase the electricity. The agreement requires the Dy-namis facility be on line by February 2014.

Mahaffey said the plant would take about 15 months to build.

On June 21, Dynamis will host a presentation on its waste-to-energy project at the Ada County landfill at Hidden Springs, according to the Hidden Springs Town Association. The location and time of Dynamis' presentation have not been set.

Feds Trying to Dismiss Artifacts Raid Suit

BY PAUL FOY
Associated Press

SALT LAKE CITY • Federal agents drove a Utah doctor to suicide after interrogating him and searching his house for an ancient artifact they never found, his family's lawyers argued Thursday in a wrongful-death case against the government.

The U.S. Justice Department asked U.S. District Judge Ted Stewart to throw out the lawsuit, saying federal agencies were protected by immunity in the most sweeping investigation into the trafficking of American Indian artifacts allegedly taken from federal and tribal lands. In 2009, federal agents swept up 26 defendants in Utah, Colorado and New Mexico.

Ban on Big Sodas Could Face Legal Test

BY SAMANTHA GROSS
Associated Press

NEW YORK • If New York City bans big sodas, what's next on the list? Large slices of pizza? Double-scoop ice cream cones? Tubs of movie-theater popcorn? The 16-ounce strip steak?

The proposed crackdown on super-sized drinks could face a legal challenge from those who oppose the first-in-the-nation rule and fear the city isn't going to stop with beverages.

Mayor Michael Bloomberg wants to bar restaurants, movie theaters, sports arenas, food carts and delis from selling sodas and other sugary drinks in servings larger than 16 ounces, saying it is a way to fight obesity in a city that spends billions of dollars a year on weight-related health problems.

Whether that's legal, though, is a matter of dispute and may be tested. "We're going to look at all of our options to protect our business, our rights to do business and our rights not to be discriminated against. We won't take anything off the table," said Steve Cahillane, a senior executive with Coca-Cola.

The city Board of Health, appointed by the mayor, is expected to approve the measure after a three-month comment period. It could take effect as early as March, unless the critics who accuse Bloomberg of instituting a "nanny state" can get the courts or state lawmakers to step in.

It's not just businesses and industry groups that could sue. In theory, any individual affected by the ban could bring a legal challenge.

But it wouldn't be enough to simply claim that the ban infringes on personal freedom, said Rick Hills, a New York University law professor specializing in local government law and New York City.

While Bloomberg administration officials say they have no plans to move against solid foods, any local government could ban red meat — or even all animal products — without violating a person's right to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness, Hills argued.

"The court has never struck down a health measure that was designed to protect people from unsafe diets or unsafe foods," he said. Whether the ban is on rat poison or on sugar, government is allowed to protect people from themselves, he said.

And Hills said that opponents would have to do more than argue that the law affects one source of sugar more than others. Courts, he said, have repeatedly ruled that the government can try to eradicate societal ills one step at a time.

Rob Bookman, an attorney who has represented the New York Restaurant Association, predicted opponents will argue that the city Health Department is overstepping its authority and infringing on federal or state power.

As Wildfires Rage, Tanker Planes Sought

BY MEAD GRUVER
Associated Press

CHEYENNE, Wyo. • President Barack Obama signed a bill this week hastening the addition of seven large tanker planes to the nation's rundown aerial firefighting fleet, at a cost of $24 million. The same day, two C-130 military transport planes designed for that very purpose sat on a tarmac in Cheyenne, shrouded in an eye-watering haze from a raging Colorado wildfire just a 15-minute flight away.

In all, eight workhorse C-130s stand ready to fight destructive wildfires around the country — but all are grounded due to rules governing the use of the nation's aerial firefighting resources. The new purchases, meanwhile, won't help firefighters battling destructive blazes in Colorado, New Mexico and elsewhere in the West for weeks, if not months.

"Getting into large, multiple wildfire scenarios, there's just not enough (aircraft) to go around in the current state," said Chuck Bushey, past president of the International Association of Wildland Fire, a professional association of people who fight wildfires.

Obama signed the bill Wednesday at the urging of Colorado's congressional delegation, which was quick to praise the move.

Three planes are supposed to be ready by mid-August: Two BAe-146s from Missoula, Mont.-based Neptune Aviation Services, Inc., and one BAe-146 from Minden, Nev.-based Minden Air Corp. The BAe-146s are jet-powered.

The three will bring the Forest Service fleet to 20 large tanker planes — a figure that includes the lease of eight planes on Monday from the state of California, the Canadian Interagency Fire Centre, and a private DC-10 based in California. Another 11 tankers, including the C-130s, can be called into service.

Egyptian protesters chant slogans against the country's military ruling council and presidential candidate Ahmed Shafiq in Tahrir Square in Cairo, Egypt, Thursday. Judges appointed by Hosni Mubarak dissolved the Islamist-dominated parliament Thursday and ruled that Mubarak's former prime minister can stand in the presidential runoff this weekend — setting the stage for the military and remnants of the old regime to stay in power.

Egypt Dissolves Parliament

BY HAMZA HENDAWI AND SARAH EL DEEB
Associated Press

CAIRO • Judges appointed by Hosni Mubarak dissolved the Islamist-dominated parliament Thursday and ruled his former prime minister eligible for the presidential runoff election this weekend — setting the stage for the military and remnants of the old regime to stay in power.

The politically charged rulings dealt a heavy blow to the fundamentalist Islamic Brotherhood, with one senior member calling the decisions a "full-fledged coup," and the group vowed to rally the public against Ahmed Shafiq, the last prime minister to serve under Mubarak.

The decision by the Supreme Constitutional Court effectively erased the tenuous progress from Egypt's troubled transition in the past year, leaving the country with no parliament and concentrating power even more firmly in the hands of the generals who took over from Mubarak.

Several hundred people gathered in Cairo's Tahrir Square after the rulings to denounce the action and rally against Shafiq, the presidential candidate seen by critics as a symbol of Mubarak's autocratic rule. But with no calls by the Brotherhood or other groups for massive demonstrations, the crowd did not grow.

Activists who engineered Egypt's uprising have long suspected that the generals would try to cling to power, explaining that after 60 years as the nation's single most dominant institution, the military would be reluctant to surrender its authority or leave its economic empire to civilian scrutiny.

Shafiq's rival in the Saturday-Sunday runoff, Mohammed Morsi of the Muslim Brotherhood, said he was unhappy about the rulings but accepted them.

"It is my duty as the future president of Egypt, God willing, to separate between the state's authorities and accept the rulings," the U.S.-trained engineer said in a television interview. Late Thursday, he told a news conference: "Millions will go to the ballot boxes on Saturday and Sunday to say 'no' to the tyrants."

Senior Brotherhood leader and lawmaker Mohammed el-Beltagy was less diplomatic, saying the judges' action amounted to a "full-fledged coup."

"This is the Egypt that Shafiq and the military council want and which I will not accept no matter how dear the price is," he wrote on his Facebook page.

Equally blunt was another Brotherhood stalwart, lawmaker Subhi Saleh. "The court, I can say, has handed Egypt to the military council on a golden platter and free of charge too," he said.

In last year's parliamentary elections — Egypt's first democratic ones in generations — the Brotherhood became the biggest party in the legislature, with nearly half the seats, alongside more conservative Islamists who took another 20 percent. It is hoping to win the presidency as well.

Sandusky Accuser: I Screamed from Basement

BY MARK SCOLFORO AND GENARO C. ARMAS
Associated Press

BELLEFONTE, Pa. • The prosecution's case in Jerry Sandusky's sex abuse trial neared its conclusion on Thursday after just four days of testimony, with three more accusers taking the witness stand, including a young man who said the former Penn State assistant football coach raped him as a teen guest in Sandusky's home.

The eighth accuser to testify told jurors the abuse began with fondling and forced oral sex and led to several instances of rape in the basement of Sandusky's Centre County home, where he spent more than 100 nights and where his muffled screams went unanswered by Sandusky's wife, Dottie, who was upstairs. He said he figured the basement must be soundproof.

"He got real aggressive and just forced me into it," said the young man, now 18 and a recent high school graduate. "And I just went with it — there was no fighting against it."

He said under cross-examination by Sandusky lawyer Joe Amendola that the attacks sometimes left him bleeding but that he never sought medical attention.

"I just dealt with it," he said.

Another accuser told jurors Sandusky called himself the "tickle monster" before embracing him in a shower.

Also testifying was Anthony Sassano, an investigator with the attorney general's office, who disclosed that the office learned of a key witness, Mike McQueary, after an anonymous letter was sent to Centre County prosecutors.

Judge John Cleland told jurors there would be no court Friday and to return Monday.

The 18-year-old, described as Victim 9 in court records, became known to investigators after Sandusky was first arrested in November and his mother summoned police to their home. He said he didn't want to talk to them at first.

Smell of Death Greeted U.N. Monitors in Syrian Town

BY BASSEM MROUE AND DIAA HADID
Associated Press

BEIRUT • Smoldering buildings, looted shops, smashed cars and a strong stench of death greeted U.N. observers who entered the nearly deserted Syrian town of Haffa on Thursday, a day after President Bashar Assad's forces overran it as part of a major offensive to recover rebel-controlled territories.

The monitors had been trying to get into the town for a week after fears were raised that a brutal assault by regime forces was under way. They found the main hospital burned, state buildings and an office of the ruling Baath party in ruins and a corpse lying in the street.

"A strong stench of dead bodies was in the air," said Sausan Ghosheh, spokeswoman for the U.N. observers. She said there was still fighting in some pockets of the mountainous town in the seaside province of Latakia.

The number of casualties was unclear,

Ghosheh said, and it appeared likely that, as in the past, bodies had been removed or buried before the U.N. mission got in.

The siege of Haffa, a Sunni-populated village, had become a focus of international concern because of fears the uprising against Assad is evolving into a sectarian civil war pitting his minority Alawite sect against the majority Sunnis and other groups. Recent mass killings in other Sunni-populated areas have fed those concerns.

The fighting, now mostly quelled in Haffa, was mirrored in other parts of Syria, where more than 40 civilians and opposition fighters were killed Thursday, according to activists, alongside more than a half-dozen Syrian forces.

From the day's early hours, Syrian troops bombarded rebel-held areas with tanks, mortars and helicopters in the central town of Rastan, the Damascus suburb of Douma, the central city of Homs and the northern towns of Anadan and Hreitan, near the Turkish border, the activists said.

They said the fighting included clashes in the town of Hamuriya, near Damascus, that killed at least nine men who were allegedly butchered with knives. A video circulated by activists showed a pile of lifeless men, including one who was clearly slashed through the neck.

"Slaughter, slaughter!" a person could be heard screaming in the background. Another video showed a man lying in a garden, his arm blown off. There was no way to independently confirm the content of the videos because reporters are not allowed to work freely in Syria.

For more than a week, Syrian troops have been sweeping through villages and towns in Syria's northern, central, southern and seaside provinces, attacking rebel-held areas and opposition strongholds in what appears to be the largest offensive since an internationally-brokered cease-fire went into effect two months ago. The regime and the opposition have both largely ignored the April 12 truce.

Vests Add Clue in Mystery of Oxygen-Deprived Pilots

DAVID LERMAN
Bloomberg News

WASHINGTON • A potentially faulty pressure vest is the latest clue in a year-long mystery over why Air Force pilots flying Lockheed Martin's F-22 Raptor keep getting dizzy and disoriented.

Pilots have been instructed to stop using the vest during routine flight operations as the Air Force works on a fix, the service's Air Combat Command said. The vest, part of a "G suit" used to help pilots avoid blacking out during high-speed maneuvers, "increases the difficulty of pilot breathing under certain circumstances," according to an e-mailed statement.

Unable to explain episodes of dizziness, the Air Force is looking at everything from the prosaic — hoses, masks and now G suits — to the top-secret coatings and adhesives used in the plane's radar-absorbing stealth skin that makes it harder to track. So far, all the engineers and investigators have come up short of a solution to symptoms that include what's been called a "Raptor cough."

"The bottom line is we don't have a single causative factor," Brig. Gen. Daniel Wyman, the Air Combat Command's surgeon general, said in an interview this week.

About two dozen pilots and five ground-maintenance workers have reported symptoms associated with a lack of oxygen. There have been 11 reported incidents since the plane resumed flying operations last year after a four-month halt because of safety concerns.

Defense Secretary Leon Panetta imposed new safety measures last month that include limiting flight durations and speeding the installation of back-up oxygen systems.

No oxygen problem was detected before the Raptor was declared ready for combat in 2005.

"I don't have any ready answers to why we are experiencing a serious problem that apparently didn't surface during the supposedly extensive testing the Air Force did," Thomas Christie, who was the Pentagon's top weapons tester from 2001 to 2005, when the plane was in development, said in an interview.

The Pentagon has spent $67 billion buying 188 of the supersonic jets, which have never flown in combat. It plans to spend $11.7 billion to upgrade the planes at a time when the Pentagon is cutting spending after a decade of war in Iraq and Afghanistan.

Police Nationwide Hunt for Surgeon

BY CAROLYN THOMPSON
Associated Press

BUFFALO, N.Y. • Surgeon Timothy Jorden saved the lives of patients with gunshot wounds, lived in big home by Lake Erie and owned four vehicles. He was a product of a working-class neighborhood who became an Army officer before coming home to earn his medical degree.

Now the healer is linked to a killing.

Police across the country were on the lookout Thursday for the 49-year-old trauma surgeon in connection with the shooting death of his ex-girlfriend in a building at the Buffalo hospital complex where they both worked. Police say the former Army weapons expert may be armed and should be considered dangerous.

"He was an excellent surgeon. He saved so many lives. For him to take one is unreal," said a stunned June DuPree, a neighbor of Jorden's in an exclusive cluster of homes on a lake-front bluff.

But she and others also said the affable and accomplished doctor seemed different lately — thinner, not quite as friendly and less meticulous about appearances. Friends of the victim, meanwhile, offered glimpses of a much darker side.

ASSOCIATED PRESS

Law enforcement officers search near the home of Dr. Timothy Jorden in Hamburg, N.Y., Thursday. Jorden is sought in connection with the hospital shooting death of his ex-girlfriend at Erie County Medical Center in Buffalo, N.Y. on Wednesday.

"I saw him at the beginning of the season and noticed how much weight he had lost," DuPree said. "He said, 'Yeah, I lost a little bit.' But it was more than a little bit. It was a lot. He wasn't too friendly that time I saw him. He just didn't want to talk."

The search for Jorden began Wednesday morning when 33-year-old Jacqueline Wisniewski was found shot to death in a stairwell on the campus of the Erie County Medical Center. Police say she was shot four times.

Heather Shipley, a friend of Wisniewski, told

WIVB-TV that Wisniewski feared Jorden and that he wouldn't let go after she left him because she believed he was having affairs with other women.

She said Wisniewski told her the doctor had put a GPS tracking device in her car and once held her captive in her home for a day and a half, wielding a knife.

"She told me if anything happened to her, that it was him," Shipley told the station.

Jorden had been involved in two domestic incidents in neighboring Cheektowaga in 2003, police Capt. James Speyer said. He said he couldn't release details but that the incidents did not involve Wisniewski.

Buffalo Police Commissioner Daniel Derenda on Thursday called Jorden "a person of interest" in the administrative assistant's death and said a nationwide alert had been issued advising police agencies that he was wanted for questioning. Officers combed through the grounds outside his home and for a second day, an Erie County Sheriff's helicopter circled overhead.

At one point, police dogs were seen near a ravine and neighbor Tom Wrzosek told The Associated Press he'd reported hearing a single shot around 9:30 a.m. Wednesday, which he initially dismissed.

"Then my girlfriend mentioned if he committed suicide, someone would have heard it," he said. "That kind of rang a bell."

Derenda said all of Jorden's vehicles were accounted for and investigators were certain he had not crossed the nearby border into Canada.

"He's out there somewhere," he said.

The search comes after a lifetime of achievement for the divorced father of a grown son.

Romney Says Obama's Policies Are 'Anti-Business'

PHILIP RUCKER
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON • Mitt Romney on Wednesday castigated President Barack Obama, telling the chief executives of 100 of the nation's biggest corporations that the president has ushered in "the most anti-investment, anti-business, anti-jobs series of policies in modern American history."

The presumptive Republican presidential nominee ticked through a series of proposals that he said would foster a friendlier business climate — repealing Obama's health care law, authorizing more oil and natural gas drilling, halting all Obama-era regulations and lowering corporate and individual tax rates.

But Romney employed particularly stinging rhetoric in a sort of campaign "prebuttal," a day before the president is expected to deliver a major campaign speech in Ohio in which he tries to reframe the eco-

Republican presidential candidate Mitt Romney, seen here in October 2011, ticked through a series of proposals Wednesday that he says would foster a friendlier business climate.

Seizing again on Obama's comment last week that "the private sector is doing fine," Romney said, "the incredulity that came screaming back from the American people, I think, has caused him to rethink that."

"I think you're going to see him change course when he speaks tomorrow, where he will acknowledge that it isn't going so well, and he'll be asking for four more years," Romney continued. "My own view is that he will speak eloquently but that words are cheap, and that the record of an individual is the basis upon which you determine whether they should continue to hold onto their job."

That there are 23 million Americans out of work or underemployed, Romney said, "is a compelling and a sad statistic. These are real people."

Romney painted a dire portrait of the U.S. economy under a second Obama term. He warned that Obama would "stifle" energy resources in coal, oil and natural gas, as well as raise the cost of health care through the implementation of "Obamacare," increase the regulatory burden on businesses and raise taxes on the wealthiest Americans.

"I think this election is a watershed re-election, which will determine the relationship between citizen and enterprise and government," Romney said.

Obama campaign spokeswoman Lis Smith responded that Romney was "dishonest" in his attacks on the president's record, saying Obama helped the country create 4.3 million private sector jobs over the last 27 months.

Sandusky

kids?" he said.

A few weeks later Sandusky was charged with two counts of involuntary deviate sexual intercourse and other offenses in his case, among the most serious set of the 52 charges Sandusky has denied and is fighting.

A third accuser, known as Victim 3, was an Army National Guard soldier who testified Thursday that despite being fondled by Sandusky he had viewed him as a father figure and was crushed when he was sent to a group home and Sandusky never contacted him again.

"I would pray he would call me and maybe find a way to get me out of there," he said, "but it never happened."

He testified that he felt uncomfortable when Sandusky touched his genitals in bed and he would roll over to prevent anything else from happening but that he didn't tell Sandusky not to get into bed with him.

"He made me feel like I was a part of something, like a family," the man said. "He gave me things that I hadn't had before."

He said that he loved Sandusky and that Sandusky treated him like he was part of an extended family that made him feel "unconditionally loved."

Sandusky's arrest brought disgrace to Penn State and led to the ouster of both the school's president and its Hall of Fame football coach Joe Paterno.

Sandusky's attorney questioned accusers on Thursday about connections they had with other accusers. The defense has claimed that the accusers have financial motives, although several have said that police contacted them and that they expressed their reluctance to get involved.

Earlier Thursday, an accuser called Victim 6 testified that Sandusky described himself as a "tickle monster" and embraced the then-11-year-old boy in a Penn State shower in 1998, an encounter that prompted an investigation but ended without any charges filed.

Now 25, he told jurors Sandusky embraced him in a locker room shower, lathered up his back and shoulders then lifted him chest-to-chest to a shower head to rinse out his hair.

The man said the shared shower happened after a brief workout at a campus gym, even though he hadn't broken a sweat. His mother went to authorities when she saw her son come home with wet hair, although the inquiry spawned by her report didn't lead to any charges.

The witness, who described himself as a big football fan, testified that Sandusky showed him Penn State football facilities and let him try on players' equipment.

One of the investigators who interviewed the boy and Sandusky at the time, Ronald Schreffler, told the court that he thought charges were warranted but that the district attorney, Ray Gricar, disagreed.

Gricar cannot explain his decision; he disappeared in 2005 and was later declared legally dead.

On cross-examination, the man testified that in recent years he and Sandusky exchanged text messages, sent notes for holidays and special occasions and last summer met for lunch. He also told the court that Sandusky and his wife had supported a mission trip he took to Mexico.

"As I started to go over it in my mind I quickly realized, my perception changed thinking about it as an adult as opposed to an 11-year-old," he said. "That was inappropriate, what happened to me?"

Asked whether he was looking for financial benefit from coming forward, the man replied, "Zero."

Sassano, the state investigator, said authorities obtained lists of children who attended events sponsored by Sandusky's charity, The Second Mile, sending investigators across a wide swath of the State College region to talk to participants. They also poured through Sandusky's biography, "Touched," and other documents found in his home and office.

They brainstormed about who else could have been in university buildings during off hours, including janitors and others. Eventually, they issued subpoenas to Penn State.

"This is a major milestone in our efforts to modernize the large air tanker fleet," Forest Service Chief Tom Tidwell said in a release about the President's bill signing.

Still, the eight Air National Guard C-130 cargo planes fitted to drop slurry sit in Wyoming, Colorado, California and North Carolina. The Forest Service says it may request the eight planes only when all private tanker planes already are fighting fires or are unavailable for use. The C-130 crews insist they're ready to roll on 48 hours' notice.

"We have no limiting factors in terms of personnel or equipment to respond," said Deidre Forster, spokeswoman for the Wyoming National Guard.

The C-130 has long been a staple of the nation's military, carrying troops, equipment and disaster relief worldwide. It is praised for its agility and durability.

Starting in the 1970s, C-130s were fitted with Modular Airborne Fire Fighting Systems — devices that carry 3,000 gallons of fire-retardant slurry that can be dropped in 5 seconds while a

C-130 swoops as low as 150 feet above the ground. By contrast, the new planes authorized by Obama can carry 2,400 gallons of slurry.

Last year, the C-130s flew wildfire missions in Arizona, New Mexico, Texas, Oregon and Mexico. Wyoming's MAFFS have been deployed as far away as Indonesia, in 1997, and most recently in Texas and Oregon last September.

But the Wyoming MAFFS just can't fly from Cheyenne, where the Wyoming Air National Guard is based. The airport is not among those designated as official staging area for attacking wildfires — and it lacks built-in infrastructure for reloading planes with retardant.

The MAFFS units are installed on the planes when they're called into duty and can be removed to free up the planes for other uses.

The Forest Service, meanwhile, says it has all the air power it needs to work on northern Colorado's 78-square-mile High Park Fire.

The cost of the MAFFS varies depending on how much they're used — anywhere from less than $2 million per year to almost $10 million over last year's busy fire season.

With drought and what has become a yearlong wildfire season, some experts insist as many as 50 planes, large and small, are needed nationwide, said Bill Gabbert, a wildfire blogger, veteran firefighter and owner of the Wildfiretoday.com website.

"You need to have air tankers responding within 25 or 30 minutes to new fires so they can slow them down quickly so that firefighters on the ground can put them out," Gabbert said. "But we no longer have that capability. So initial attack by aerial resources is a quaint memory."

The result: More small fires that become mega-fires and are far more expensive to fight than if they'd been snuffed out early, he said.

"Sure, it's expensive to contract for air tankers. But it's more expensive to pay the tens of millions of dollars when a few of those fires become very large," Gabbert said.

Tragedy got the U.S. tanker plane fleet to its current state.

The fleet numbered 44 planes a decade ago. A series of high-profile crashes, including wings that fell off a privately-owned C-130 and a 1940s-era PB4Y-2 Privateer in midflight, caused the Forest Service to ground 33 air tankers in 2004.

Virginia Faye Wiltsie Johnson

July 25, 1952-June 12, 2012

TWIN FALLS • Virginia Faye Wiltsie Johnson, 59, of Twin Falls, passed away Tuesday, June 12, 2012, at St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center with her family by her side.

She was born July 25, 1952, in Syracuse, N.Y., to Kenneth A. Wiltsie and Lura I. Lewis Wiltsie. She was one of 13 children. Virginia met and later married the love of her life, Raymond Eugene Johnson, on Oct. 18, 1988, in Coeur d'Alene Idaho. He nicknamed her Toby (Tough Old Broad You); she used this nickname quite a bit.

Virginia started her career as a CNA in Auburn, N.Y., at Mercy Hospital and, when she moved to Idaho in 1975, she worked at Coeur d'Alene Convalescent Center. Virginia and her family moved to Twin Falls, where she worked for the Twin Falls Care Center. Her last career endeavor was at Oasis Stop 'N' Go.

Virginia is survived by her twin daughters, Lura Marie Johnson and Ramona Lynn Johnson; also several sisters, Dorisann Wiltsie, Mary Alice O'Neil, Karen (John) Kent, Beverly (Joe) Harper, Elaine (Don) McArthur and Nancy Wiltsie; and several nieces, nephews, great-nieces and great-nephews. She was preceded in death by her parents; her husband; her brothers, Roland A. Wiltsie, Alvin A. Wiltsie, John A. Wiltsie and David Keith Wiltsie; and her sisters, Miriam Wiltsie McCulloch and Lillian Arlene Wallace.

Virginia was very special, smart, kind and always had a history remark. She loved history and was always looking things up either in books or on the computer. She loved to read, crochet and play card games with her daughters. She will be greatly missed; she was a good person with a huge heart.

Even though she never drove, she loved to travel. She wanted to go to Europe to see the castles in Germany, the canals in Italy, the Eiffel Tower in France and the Coliseum in Rome. Virginia and our mother use to travel a lot; they visited a lot of historical sites.

Cremation took place under the direction of Lance Cox and the staff at White Mortuary "Chapel by the Park." A memorial service will be at a later time.

The family wishes to thank all of the people at St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center in the emergency room, ICU and the paramedics; also the people who took very good care of her at Southwest Idaho Advanced Care Hospital in Boise; and Norco.

Gerald Hodge, Medical Illustrator, Dies at Age 91

BY MARTIN WEIL
The Washington Post

Gerald Hodge, an acknowledged master of medical illustration whose drawings helped instruct generations of aspiring physicians in the most intricate of surgical procedures, died of cancer on June 7 at his home in Ann Arbor, Mich. He was 91.

The death was confirmed by the University of Michigan, where in 1964 he was founding director of the university's master's degree program in medical illustration. Since retiring in 1987, he had been an emeritus professor at the university's medical school and school of art.

The best of medical illustrations — with their blend of creative art and descriptive science — may be compared with such works as the ornithological paintings of John J. Audubon.

Schooled in art and science, "Jerry" Hodge was an heir to artists who, through the centuries, had striven to portray the human form in poses dramatic and realistic. He helped shaped the profession of medical illustration and was recognized as a leader among those who, with pen and paintbrush, depict the body as it is in life, with the dynamic interplay of nerve and muscle, tendon and bone.

"He was a consummate artist," said Gary Lees, the chairman of Johns Hopkins University's medical illustration department and a former student of Hodge's. "His work was magnificent."

According to Lees, the task of the medical illustrator is to tell the "stories" of an operation. The illustrator goes into the operating room and, while taking visual notes, listens to the surgeon describe the finer points of maneuvering through the body.

Unlike a camera, an artist like Hodge can emphasize, shadow or eliminate content as needed. The illustrator may remove from the final drawing extra sets of hands or clamps "not in the action area," Lees said. "He may get rid of the blood, not because it's gory, but because it's an obstruction to a viewer."

Combining imagination, insight and painstakingly anatomical accuracy, Hodge's work proved valuable for training physicians and provided a guide for surgeons embarking on new procedures and operations, according to the Journal of Biocommunication. He received the Association of Medical Illustrators's Lifetime Achievement Award in 1988.

Gerald Parker Hodge was born Dec. 3, 1920, in Denver, where his father owned a company that sold coal. After graduating from the University of Colorado in 1943 with a fine arts degree, he served in the Army during World War II and participated in the invasion of the Pacific island of Okinawa.

In 1949, he received a certificate of medical illustration from Johns Hopkins University's medical school, where he studied under the celebrated illustrator Ranice Crosby. Hodge then worked as a cancer clinic in Missouri and as director of Louisiana State University's medical illustration department before joining the University of Michigan faculty in 1955.

In 1949, he married Claire Ewell, whom he had met in drawing class at the University of Colorado. She died in 2007. Survivors include two children, Melinda Hodge of Lock Haven, Pa., and John Hodge of Quincy, Ill.; a brother, and two grandsons.

Hodge spent 15 years as a visiting professor at the University of Toronto and directed workshops at the Smithsonian Institution and the New York Botanical Garden. In addition to his illustrations of the human body, Hodge was known for work with archeological, botanical and insect specimens.

He was often cited as an exemplar of the school of painting know as trompe-l'oeil, a French term meaning "fool the eye." This deception is achieved through almost photographic precision in drawing, along with techniques that create the illusion of three dimensions on a two-dimensional surface.

In a brief autobiographical sketch, Hodge cited the "love of detail and working on a small scale" that led him to scientific illustration. The close observation, patience and accuracy required for such work, he said, he also applied to his trompe-l'oeil paintings.

Reuben Clark, Expert on Urban Renewal Dies

BY MATT SCHUDEL
The Washington Post

Reuben Clark, 89, a tax lawyer who was a founding partner of the Washington law firm of Wilmer, Cutler & Pickering and who was an authority on urban renewal and human rights issues, died June 6 at the Hospice of the Piedmont in Charlottesville, Va. He had kidney failure, his son Stephen Clark said. Clark came to Washington in 1952 to work as a lawyer with the Treasury Department. In 1954, he formed a tax law firm with Samuel Jackson Lanahan called Clark & Lanahan. Their firm later merged with Wilmer & Broun, which in 1962 joined another law firm to create Wilmer, Cutler & Pickering (now Wilmer-Hale).

This March 4, 2009 file photo, provided by the Wisconsin Department of Natural Resources, shows a cougar in a tree west of Spooner, Wis. Cougars are repopulating the Midwest a century since the generally reclusive mountain lions were hunted to near extinction in much of the region, according to a new study detailed in The Journal of Wildlife Management.

Indiana Man Sentenced in Grand Canyon Child Abuse Case

BY AMANDA LEE MYERS
Associated Press

PHOENIX • An Indiana man convicted of child abuse for forcing his three grandsons on two grueling hikes in the Grand Canyon in August heat has been sentenced to more than two years in prison.

Christopher Alan Carlson was sentenced Thursday in federal court to a 27-month prison term. He was convicted in March on three counts of criminally negligent child abuse and will get credit for nearly 10 months already served.

The 45-year-old Carlson told investigators that his grandsons were overweight and that he thought hiking the Grand Canyon would get them into shape. They were 8, 9 and 12 at the time.

The boys testified that Carlson kicked or hit them if they were too slow on a 15-mile hike on Aug. 15 and a 19-mile hike on Aug. 28.

Study: Cougars Again Spreading Across Midwest

Nearly hunted to extinction, the reclusive predators are making a comeback.

BY JIM SUHR
Associated Press

ST. LOUIS • Cougars are again spreading across the Midwest a century after the generally reclusive predators were hunted to near extinction in much of the region, according to a new study billed as the first rigorous statistical look at the issue.

The findings, detailed in The Journal of Wildlife Management, showed 178 cougar confirmations in the Midwest and as far south as Texas between 1990 and 2008. While confirmed sightings of Midwest cougars were sporadic before 1990, when there were only a couple, that number spiked to more than 30 by 2008, the study shows.

Researchers said the study poses fresh questions about how humans and livestock can co-exist with the re-emerging predators, whose movements appear to be following natural dispersal instincts.

The study sorts through various reported sightings and affixes a number to those it could confirm, which is significant because no government agency tracks the number of large cats across the country. Wildlife officials have for years said it's unclear how many of the animals may be in the Midwest, where they are not federally protected and, in some states, can be hunted.

"We (now) know there are a heck of a lot more cougars running around the Midwest than in 1990," said Clay Nielsen, a Southern Illinois University wildlife ecologist who co-authored the report while heading the nonprofit Cougar Network's scientific research. "We've got an interesting and compelling picture to talk about now."

"For those who are excited about the notion of living with large carnivores, this is great," Nielsen added. "For those worried about livestock degradations, there's going to be division in the ranks in the Midwest. It's going to be interesting to see how the public responds if this colonizing continues."

Clinton Warns N.Korea to Reform or Face Backlash

BY MATTHEW PENNINGTON
Associated Press

WASHINGTON • North Korea's new young leader must transform his impoverished country for the better or face a backlash from its oppressed people, Secretary of State Hillary Rodham Clinton warned Thursday.

Clinton issued a direct appeal to Kim Jong Un: "Rather than invest in implements of war, feed your people."

She spoke to reporters after top diplomats and defense chiefs of the U.S. and South Korea resolved to respond decisively to military provocations from North Korea.

Clinton said Kim, the 20-something young man who rose to power after his father's death in history, could go down in history as a transformative leader if he brought North Korea "into the 21st century."

She said if he continued the model of the past,

"Rather than invest in implements of war, feed your people."

Secretary of State Hilary Rodham Clinton

"Eventually North Korea will change because at some point people cannot live under such oppressive conditions: starving to death, being put into gulags and having their basic human rights denied."

"We are hoping he will chart a different course," Clinton said.

Kim is the third leader in a hereditary dynasty that has sustained six decades of autocratic rule in North Korea but is unable to feed its own people. Despite the chronic food shortages, North Korea has invested its scant resources in maintaining one of the world's largest standing armies and developing nuclear weapons that it claims are needed to deter a U.S. invasion.

The United Nations reported this week that millions of North Korean children don't get the food, medicine or health care they need to develop physically or mentally. It said nearly a third of children under 5 show signs of stunting.

As for South Korea's security, Clinton said the U.S., which maintains 28,000 troops there, would stand "shoulder-to-shoulder" with its ally. Her South Korean counterpart, Foreign Minister Kim Sung-hwan, said Thursday's meeting should send a clear message to North Korea about the strength of the alliance.

Animosity between the rival Koreas is high following a North Korean rocket launch in April that violated a U.N. ban, and more recently threats to attack several South Korean media outlets.

Pfizer Targets Nerve-Destroying Disease

BY DREW ARMSTRONG
Bloomberg News

NEW YORK • The patients are young adults, often in their 30s. The disease, known as TTR-FAP, starts with tingling in the feet. Then it moves up the body, destroying nerves and killing within a decade. Pfizer Inc., the world's largest drugmaker, has a pill called tafamidis meglumine that may stem the tide of the rare genetic illness, keep patients' bodies from wasting away and give them a chance at a full life. TTR-FAP, or Transthyretin Familial Amyloid Polyneuropathy, was first detected near a village in Portugal, where it has ravaged families. Clusters also have been found in Japan and Sweden.

For the estimated 8,000 patients worldwide like 34-year-old Kevin Mui, Pfizer's medicine may be the best hope for a therapy. In the three years since his symptoms surfaced, TTR-FAP has cost him 100 pounds and most of his mobility. The disease killed his mother and uncle at age 47. His brother, 45, also has it.

"We have this kind of magic number in our heads where we wonder whether we'll make it past our 47th birthday," said Mui, who was a technology analyst at the Bank of New York in Manhattan before his illness forced him to stop working. "Even though I saw my family members go through it, it was a surprise how quickly it came on."

The Food and Drug Administration is scheduled to decide by June 16 whether to approve tafamidis. An approval would make it the first drug for sale to treat TTR-FAP, which New York-based Pfizer estimates affects 3,000 people in the United States.

In a report dated May 24, the FDA said the studies didn't support approval "based on inadequate evidence of effectiveness." A panel of outside advisers voted 13-4 to recommend the drug, saying data from Pfizer suggested a benefit.

Summer means family getaways—sometimes for as long as two weeks. Aside from making preparations to care for your pets and home, you may also be concerned about your lawn and garden while you are away.

Vegetable gardens and container plants are usually the most cause for concern and rightly so. These are the gardens that suffer the most if neglected during mid-summer, the time when most families plan vacations. This can be alleviated somewhat by mulching vegetable plants before you go to help the plants conserve water. Ask neighbors to help you water the container plants and harvesting vegetables (an incentive if you let them keep the vegetables they pick!).

Lawns, however, require little care while you are on vacation if you do some prep work before you go:

1. Mow the lawn. Before you leave, mow the lawn—lower the height of the blades on your lawnmower slightly to give it a shorter cut than usual. Try to mow just before leaving for your trip, preferably the morning before you leave.

2. Water. After you mow the lawn, give it a good watering in case there is a period of mid-summer drought while you are gone.

3. Weed. Check your lawn to make sure it is not being invaded by weeds, which can quickly spread if left unchecked. Spot-spray weeds with an herbicide, or hand weed if you don't use chemicals on your lawn.

4. Don't fertilize. The last thing you want to do is stimulate your grass to grow while you are gone.

Take these simple, proactive steps to help your lawn survive and thrive while you are on vacation.

Truckers as Leading Indicator Show Stable U.S. Growth

BY ANNA-LOUISE JACKSON

Bloomberg News

Rising truck shipments show the U.S. economic expansion is intact, even amid concerns that a slowdown in retail sales and Europe's sovereign-debt crisis could stall growth.

Two measures of trucking activity signal the industry remains steady and has even "firmed up" since mid-May, according to Ben Hartford, an analyst in Milwaukee with Robert W. Baird & Co. The data complement anecdotal information from carriers that freight demand ended May on a strong note after more weakness than anticipated earlier in the month, he said.

"Trucking trends are reflective of an economic environment that is stable, not deteriorating," Hartford said.

The for-hire truck-tonnage index rose 2.8 percent in April from a year earlier, up from 0.2 percent the prior month, marking 29 months of growth, based on data from the American Trucking Associations. The economy has never contracted without tonnage turning negative first, so the truck figures are a leading indicator, providing the "first signal" of a slump, said Thom Albrecht, an analyst in Richmond, Va., with BB&T Capital Markets.

Another index that tracks the movement of goods between manufacturers and consumers also is a "good barometer" of the economy, said Jonathan Starks, director of transportation analysis at FTR Associates. FTR's index of U.S. truck loadings increased 3 percent to 115.9 in April from a year earlier, the highest since 2008, based on data from the Nashville, Ind.-based transportation-forecasting company.

April's improvement suggests the economy is expanding. "It's not red-hot, but it's not stalling, either," Starks said, adding that annual gains above 5 percent would suggest robust activity. Index growth exceeded 5 percent between July 2010 and March 2011, the data show, while gross domestic product expanded an average 2.9 percent year-over-year in the same period.

Contacts at trucking companies describe a "seasonally stable demand environment," Hartford said. Albrecht agreed, saying two carriers characterized activity in early June as "robust."

These anecdotal "channel checks" are consistent with sentiment reported by Landstar System in its mid-quarter update, Albrecht said. The Jacksonville, Fla.-based trucking company affirmed on May 29 its second-quarter earnings estimate of 71 cents to 76 cents a diluted share. This compares with first-quarter earnings of 57 cents a share.

Both the economy and the operating environment for Landstar are "pretty much as forecasted," moving "in a northerly direction, albeit in a slow and sometimes choppy pace," Chairman and Chief Executive Officer Henry Gerkens said then.

Europe Crisis Spreads as Merkel Resists Big Steps

BY COLLEEN BARRY

AP Business Writer

MILAN • A growing number of European countries are being squeezed by a financial vise just days before a Greek election that could escalate the region's political and economic turmoil.

The rise of Italian and Spanish borrowing costs to alarming levels Thursday heaped pressure on leaders to prevent Europe's debt crisis from engulfing its largest countries. No grand solution appears imminent.

German Chancellor Angela Merkel opposes solutions that many experts are pushing that would increase costs for Berlin.

Merkel has found herself isolated from the leaders of Spain, Italy and France, who want the 17 countries in the euro currency union to move quickly to bind their governments' finances and debt.

Such action could take the form of jointly issued debt or European-wide guarantees on bank deposits. Either step would spread the risks that individual countries bear across the eurozone.

Italian Premier Mario Monti has agreed with French President Francois Hollande on the need for such measures. But Germany, which as Europe's largest economy bears most of the cost of bailouts, is reluctant to expose itself to further costs.

The proposed steps are expected to dominate talks at next week's summit of Group of 20 leaders in Mexico.

Compounding the debt crisis is the fear that's gripped European banks about lending to each other — a key element of a stable banking system.

"The European banking system is paralyzed," said Nicolas Veron, senior fellow at the Bruegel think tank in Brussels. "So many banks hold massive amounts of Spanish and Italian government bonds that are losing value. We no longer have a functioning interbank (lending) market in the eurozone."

Here's a look at the situation in individual countries:

ASSOCIATED PRESS

German Chancellor Angela Merkel delivers a speech to discuss Germany's position prior to the upcoming G20 summit at the Bundestag in Berlin, Germany, Thursday.

GERMANY

Any major steps to ease Europe's debt crisis must meet Berlin's approval. So far, Merkel has balked at anything that might heavily expose Germany to other countries' financial weaknesses.

Merkel has long favored austerity as the best way for European governments to heal their public finances. But that stance is under fire, with sentiment in Europe shifting toward seeking ways to foster growth.

Merkel stressed Thursday that nations that have needed bailouts must work to restore trust and their public finances. She's unlikely to agree to allowing greater government spending to spur growth. But she might be open to allowing some countries to slow their pace of spending cuts.

Beyond growth, market experts say European nations must act to integrate their finances and debt to boost confidence in the eurozone. Fears that Spain or Italy cannot manage its debts could subside if a stronger country like Germany agreed to shoulder some of it.

ITALY

The interest Italy must pay to raise (euro) 3 billion ($3.76 billion) in three-year loans from financial markets jumped Thursday to 5.3 percent. That's the highest rate since December. Italy also auctioned 10-year bonds at a worryingly high rate of 6.13 percent. Investors are demanding a high rate for fear that Italy might soon need financial aid.

A European deal to save Spain's banks has failed this week to defuse worries about Spanish debt.

"They mucked up Spain so badly that now it's impacted Italy," said Gary Jenkins of Swordfish Research, a bond research consultancy. "There's a lot of fragility there."

Italy has the eurozone's third-largest economy. For now, it can finance its debt. But the rising cost of doing so is causing pain. With the economy in a deep recession, the debt is expected to keep rising. The latest figures released Thursday showed it hit a new high of (euro) 1.95 trillion ($2.4 trillion) in April.

SPAIN

Spain's troubles keep growing. A (euro) 100 billion European rescue loan for its banks was meant to help. Yet it's raised concern that the government, which is ultimately liable for the money, will have trouble repaying it. The Moody's ratings agency on Wednesday downgraded Spain's sovereign debt three notches because of that.

As a result, Spain's key borrowing rate hit a fresh high Thursday.

The interest rate — or yield — on the country's benchmark 10-year bonds rose to a record 6.96 percent in early trading, close to the level which many analysts say is unsustainable in the long run and the rate that forced Greece, Ireland and Portugal to seek bailouts.

GREECE

Greece's national elections this weekend has become the next focal point for Europe's financial crisis. The left-wing Syriza party, which finished second in the first round of voting in May, wants to abandon the country's international bailout terms. As a result, Greece would be cut off from loans, face bankruptcy and possibly leave the euro.

In the latest official polls, the party was essentially tied with the conservative New Democracy. Still, Greece's stock markets soared on rumors that New Democracy would win enough votes to create a coalition and keep Greece in the eurozone. Analysts warned against taking the rumors as fact. Greek law forbids the release of such polls in the final two weeks of a campaign.

American Drivers Turn to Smaller, Better Engines

BY TOM KRISHER

AP Auto Writer

DETROIT • Back when gas was cheap, Americans bought cars with V-8 engines like the Big Block, Cobra Jet and Ramcharger. Acceleration was all that mattered, even in family cars that never made it to full throttle.

The 427-cubic inch Chevrolet Tri-Power was the siren song of the gearhead, sending Corvettes roaring down the highway at up to 140 mph.

But now, thanks to government regulation and gas-price gyrations, the motors that move the nation's cars and trucks are shrinking.

Whether they drive hulking pickups or family sedans, Americans are increasingly choosing smaller engines that use less fuel, especially four-cylinder models that offer more horsepower than was possible just a few years ago.

More than half the new cars and trucks sold in the U.S. through May had four-cylinder motors. That's up from 36 percent in 2007, and it's the highest sales percentage since 1998, when the J.D. Power and Associates consulting firm started keeping track.

The smaller engines are helping to change America's gas-guzzling ways. The government now requires automakers to build more fuel-efficient cars and trucks. Drivers are eager to save money on gas, which recently flirted with $4 a gallon and is still pricey at an average of $3.53. Also, people have embraced cars with downsized engines because new technology has made them just as fast as older cars with bigger motors.

"You can take away my V-8, but don't take my acceleration," said IHS Automotive analyst Rebecca Lindland. "We're willing to embrace a technology that doesn't make us compromise performance."

In general, car shoppers can pick from three types of engines: four-, six- and eight-cylinders.

Until recently, each engine type had dedicated fans. Pickup drivers, who tend to haul heavy loads, favored brawny V-8s. Sedan drivers generally opted for six cylinders if they wanted snappy acceleration or four cylinders if they preferred fuel savings.

Decades ago, when gas was cheap, buyers usually went for bigger engines to get more power. Back then, noisy "fours" clattered down the highway inside compacts or wimpy midsize cars. Some drivers complained that four-cylinder cars didn't have enough power to merge safely onto busy highways.

Housing Market Shows Hints of Recovery

BY BRADY DENNIS

The Washington Post

Home sales up. Inventories down. Prices rising in many cities. New houses being built at the fastest pace in years. Interest rates hovering at historic lows. A vibrant rental market.

A growing body of data in recent months has suggested that better days are on the horizon for the nation's battered housing market, though it remains clear that a turnaround won't come quickly.

The latest harbinger of (mostly) encouraging news: the annual State of the Nation's Housing report released Thursday by Harvard University's Joint Center for Housing Studies, which details more signs of revival.

"While still in the early innings of a housing recovery, rental markets have turned the corner, home sales are strengthening, and a floor is beginning to form under home prices," Eric S. Belsky, the center's managing director, said in a statement accompanying the report.

Federal Reserve Says AIG, Bear Stearns Rescue Loans Repaid

BY JODY SHENN

Bloomberg News

NEW YORK • The Federal Reserve has been repaid for its roles in the government bailout of American International Group in 2008 and the rescue of Bear Stearns earlier that year.

The central bank's $53.1 billion of loans to vehicles called Maiden Lane and Maiden Lane III created for the rescues were paid back with interest, the Federal Reserve Bank of New York said Thursday in an emailed statement. A separate entity, Maiden Lane II, finished being unwound through sales of mortgage assets earlier this year.

"This is a major milestone for the bank and for the public," New York Fed President William C. Dudley said in the statement. "The Maiden Lane entities were established to protect the U.S. economy at a time of great economic stress, and I am pleased we were able to accomplish that policy objective and be fully repaid."

Taxpayers remain at risk in the wake of the September 2008 bailout of AIG, once the world's largest insurer, which swelled to $182.3 billion in value. The Treasury Department still owns 61 percent of the New York-based company and needs to sell its shares at an average price of $28.72 apiece to break even.

The district bank this year has been selling mortgage debt acquired in the AIG bailout after halting a series of 2011 auctions following a selloff in credit markets. AIG has said it's been among buyers. The Fed has also continued to dispose of assets from the Bears Stearns-tied Maiden Lane through less publicized sales.

The government's cost basis for its shares in the insurer was $47.5 billion, excluding unpaid dividends and fees of $1.6 billion. The Treasury recovered more than $17 billion in three share sales, cutting its stake from 92 percent. That leaves an investment of about $30 billion. AIG retired a Fed credit line last year.

AIG SunAmerica Chief Executive Officer Jay Wintrob said Wednesday that proceeds from asset auctions were sufficient to repay the Fed for its loans to Maiden Lane III.

Lawmakers' Personal Mortgages Revealed for First Time

BY BEN PERSHING
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON • Senate Majority Leader Harry M. Reid (D-Nev.) owes between $100,000 and $250,000 on his home mortgage in the old mining town of Searchlight. Senate Minority Whip Jon Kyl (R-Ariz.) owes more than $500,000 on a pair of mortgages that were financed in 2010 for homes in Arizona and Virginia. And Sen. Charles E. Schumer (D-N.Y.) is down to more than $15,000 on his mortgage for his family home in Brooklyn.

Those are just a few of the details found in the tens of thousands of pages of documents released Thursday on members of Congress and their personal financial disclosures. An annual exercise aimed at revealing any potential conflicts of interest, this year's documents come with an added disclosure: the particulars of a lawmaker's mortgage on his or her personal residence.

For years the financial disclosure forms for members of Congress did not require lawmakers to reveal any details about their personal residences, only for homes that were used for rental properties that derived income. That changed after Congress approved a new ethics law this year that clarified insider trading laws so that lawmakers and congressional staff were not allowed to make financial trades based on non-public information gleaned from their work on Capitol Hill.

Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid of Nev. speaks to reporters on Capitol Hill in Washington on Tuesday following a political strategy session. Financial disclosure details on members of Congress were released Thursday.

As part of the new law, leaders of the Senate Ethics Committee Barbara Boxer (D-Calif.) and Johnny Isakson (R-Ga.) won their three-year fight to require lawmakers to reveal their personal mortgage information. This came after their 2008-2009 inquiry into a pair of senators who were part of a VIP mortgage program run by Countrywide Financial, then-Sen. Christopher J. Dodd (D-Conn.) and Sen. Kent Conrad (D-N.D.), both of whom were cleared of any wrongdoing by the ethics panel because the discounted fees for their mortgages were offered to many customers.

This year, after a GOP-led investigation by the House oversight committee, the House Ethics Committee began a review of four similar Countrywide mortgages for four lawmakers, three Republicans and one Democrat.

Under the new disclosure rules, lawmakers must reveal existing mortgages for personal residences. In addition, they must list the creditor, the date the mortgage was obtained and the interest rate charged. Reid, for instance, took out a 30-year mortgage with Wells Fargo in 2004 on his property in Searchlight, a rural town south of Las Vegas with about 800 residents in which his home is among the finest.

Reid, like more than half the Senate, is a millionaire, with assets totalling at least $2.8 million. That figure could be much higher, as disclosure rules only require a broad range of value. So, a 160-acre property he owns in Bullhead City, Ariz., is worth between $250,000 and $500,000.

His GOP counterpart, Senate Minority Leader Mitch McConnell (R-Ky.), is now worth a minimum of $9.7 million, including a money market fund worth more than $5 million that was part of an inheritance from the death of his father-in-law. McConnell and his wife, former labor secretary Elaine Chao, also own a Capitol Hill townhouse, with a carriage house out back, that is worth more than $1 million. The carriage house provides more than $5,000 a year in rental income.

The financial disclosure forms also offer a window into the finances of the potential running mates for Republican presidential candidate Mitt Romney.

Top Colombian Official to Advise Mexican Candidate

BY FRANK BAJAK AND MICHAEL WEISSENSTEIN
Associated Press

BOGOTA, Colombia • Colombia's retiring police director Gen. Oscar Naranjo says he has been asked to work as a security consultant for Mexican presidential front-runner Enrique Pena Nieto.

Naranjo told The Associated Press that he had been approached by the Pena Nieto campaign to work in an advisory role, which would be expected to continue if Pena Nieto wins.

The appointment, expected to be officially announced at a news conference Thursday night, provides a boost for Pena Nieto, whose campaign has been fending off allegations that leading figures in his Institutional Revolutionary Party took millions of dollars in bribes from the ruthless Zetas drug cartel.

Pena Nieto's pledge to de-emphasize narcotics seizures and arrests of cartel leaders in favor of a focus on reducing violence against ordinary Mexicans has also prompted some concern in the U.S. that he would relent in the war on drugs.

Naranjo has long worked closely with the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration, however, and has been working closely with senior Mexican law enforcement and judicial officials in recent years.

Pena Nieto's lead has narrowed in recent weeks in the face of the corruption scandals and a student movement campaigning to prevent a return to power by his party, which ruled with near-total control of Mexico for seven decades until the country's peaceful democratization in the 2000 presidential vote.

Naranjo is widely respected in the region for playing a central role in dismantling Colombia's major drug trafficking organizations during a 36-year police career, in close coordination with U.S. drug and intelligence agents. That includes taking down Pablo Escobar and the Medellin and Cali cartels.

He is also the architect of Colombia's police intelligence directorate, the most sophisticated such fusion center in Latin America.

The 55-year-old Naranjo, who retired Tuesday, told the AP he plans to divide his time between Mexico and Washington, D.C., beginning next month.

He said that he had accepted a part-time job as an external consultant on security policy in the Americas for the Inter-American Development Bank and that Monterrey Technology University had offered him a position teaching at its Mexico City campus.

Naranjo has been working as a consultant in the region, including for the current administration of Mexican President Felipe Calderon, whom Pena Nieto and his advisers have strongly accused of mismanaging the drug war.

HAILEY • Free vibes are busting out all over the Wood River Valley as summer heats up.

Music lovers will be able to find free tunes at least four nights a week, in addition to concerts such as a Bonnie Raitt show that require paid admission.

The Wicked Spud's Back Alley Parties series in Hailey, on Wednesdays, will kick off the free concerts on June 20. As in past years, money from beer sales and raffle tickets will benefit nonprofit organizations, including a proposed teen shelter and Camp Rainbow Gold, a summer camp for children with cancer, organizer Heidi Albrecht said.

The Back Alley Parties, produced by FiggLeaf Productions and HeidiGlyphics, have raised more than $8,000 for valley organizations over the past eight years, Albrecht's co-organizer Dana Dugan said.

Ketch'em Alive on Tuesday nights in Ketchum's Forest Service Park will bring in bands from throughout the U.S., said organizer Will Caldwell. Among them is Swagger, a Celtic rock group from Salt Lake City that has endeared itself with its mix of danceable Celtic rock and Johnny Cash tunes over the past two years. "We search all over the valley but mostly online where we look for postings of local musicians," he said. "Some of the girls who work here go out to different places and if they come across a band that they think will be a good fit here, they'll tell me about it. ... We try to do something every weekend."

Meanwhile, established favorites draw the music lovers.

Cary's favorite Tucker song: "The one he's singing now, 'All I Need.'"

Wednesday is music day at Anchor Bistro, manager Josh Popa said. Chris Bender and Wilson Roberts are frequent performers, often drawing return customers who like their music. And Tucker, of course, whenever he comes to town.

"We try to get people here on Saturdays," Popa said, noting that once in a while the restaurant succeeds. "But Wednesdays have turned into our music night."

Weekends are all about the music at Diamondz Bar and Grill in Jerome, manager Julie Dodson said. The bar tries to get bands it hasn't had before as well as some tried-and-true local favorites.

This weekend the bar welcomes back the Boise rock band Dying Famous, which was the subject of a 2011 documentary by MDG Films. Other Diamondz mainstays include the Slick Johnson Band, Pipeline Overdrive and Rough Draft.

Music starts generally around 9 p.m., Dodson said, and crowds vary depending on the bands. Dying Famous usually draws a good crowd.

"Word of mouth helps," said Dodson, noting that when someone comes in and likes a group they often are excited enough to tell their friends.

There's music every Tuesday and Thursday at the Blue Room in Rupert, said owner Alan Klosterman — and once in a while something for a more mature male crowd such as Saturday's exotic dancers, California Dolls.

Crowds come from across the Magic Valley, he said.

Music fan Debra Laing of Twin Falls makes the rounds to several of the area's music venues but likes Elevation 486 best.

"I like the atmosphere," she said, noting a scenic view of the Snake River Canyon.

"We put a stage on the patio outside next to the fire pit for solo and duo acts," Claasen said. "For larger bands, we add to the stage across from the fountain."

Local artist Chris Bender, whose music resembles Eric Clapton, Claasen said, is a regular and helps draw the crowds.

Music lovers can stroll farther east along the canyon rim to another of Laing's favorites, Canyon Crest Dining and Event Center, where Pipeline Overdrive will play Saturday night. Laing also likes Anchor Bistro and was at the restaurant Wednesday evening with friends Kaleen Goedhart of Buhl and Reggi Colby of Jerome.

Was it their first time hearing Tucker? "Oh, no," Goedhart said. "We like Ethan."

As the sun sank lower in the western sky, a light breeze rustled the tables' umbrellas. Servers delivered drinks and plates of food to their customers, while cars passed on Blue Lakes Boulevard. And Tucker played on, drawing his audience's applause.

"It's a casual, fun atmosphere," Goedhart said.

Boom Chick to Play on Fourth of July

TWIN FALLS • New York duo Boom Chick will play Twin Falls on the Fourth of July for the Magic Valley Arts Council's Jammin' on the Canyon summer concert.

It's set for 7-9 p.m. July 4 at the Twin Falls Center for the Arts' outdoor stage and plaza; the gate fee is $5, or $10 for families. Bring your lawn chair and picnic.

Boom Chick, formed in Brooklyn, N.Y., in 2009, is Frank Hoier on guitar and vocals and Moselle Spiller on drums. Their sound reflects an ecstatic love for early American rock 'n' roll, surf guitar, early country music and Delta blues. They have released one album, "Show Pony," and released February's single "Shake Can Well" on 7-inch vinyl — yes, vinyl.

Since 2010, Boom Chick has completed four American tours, promoters said, and the duo has a string of Theater Group Plans Public Auditions for 'Charlie Brown'

TWIN FALLS • Community troupe Magic Valley Little Theatre will hold open auditions for its summer production, "You're A Good Man, Charlie Brown."

Auditions are 6-9 p.m. June 25 at the Encore Performance and Event Center on Twin Falls' Filer Avenue.

Those auditioning should be at least 16 years old and come prepared to sing a song. No accompanist will be available; sing a cappella, or bring your own accompanist or recorded accompaniment on CD or MP3. You may be asked to read from a script.

Cast members will be notified June 26.

"You're A Good Man, Charlie Brown" is a musical comedy with music and lyrics by Clark Gesner, based on characters created by cartoonist Charles M. Schulz in his comic strip "Peanuts." The show features the characters Charlie Brown, Linus Van Pelt, Lucy Van Pelt, Schroeder, Sally Brown and Snoopy.

Performances are scheduled for July 27-28, July 30 and Aug. 3-5 at the Encore Performance and Event Center.

Magic Valley Little Theatre was founded in 1970 and is operated by volunteers, its press release said. The group has performed a variety of shows in its 42 years. The most recent: last fall's production of Rodgers and Hammerstein's "Cinderella."

a motorcycle," Bergen said. "That's kind of hard for me to do."

Bergen, who graduated from Canyon Ridge High this spring, started her JuMP Co. career in the first grade.

"This is my last show, and I'm kind of sad. Once you start you don't want to stop, and it's something you just can't give up," Bergen said. "It's so much fun, it's like a family!"

Tuscadero's equally cool counterpart, "The Fonz," is played by seven-year veteran Kable Barnhart, 18.

It's a character that Barnhart was familiar with and excited to portray. "I love him. He's really different than me. He's cool and awesome and everybody loves him."

Though Barnhart is keeping the signature "Ayyy!" that Fonzie was famous for, he is switching up the harder-to-learn Wisconsin accent for a more New Jersey-inspired one.

"I've started looking up 'Happy Days' ... it's always on at 4 a.m.," Barnhart said.

Lindsey Mancari, 18, portrays Marion Cunningham — the wife, mother and homemaker. Mancari started performing in the company when she was in sixth grade. She attended a JuMP performance and remembers leaving breathless. "I just knew I wanted to be part of it."

Mancari is president of the JuMP Co. Junior Board and, because of her participation in the group, says theater will always be in her life.

"JuMP is just a whole new world and awesome to be a part of."

Sign Up Now for Kids Art in the Park

TIMES-NEWS

TWIN FALLS • It's a can't-miss experience for young families: Each summer in Twin Falls, Kids Art In the Park provides a cheap day of exploring fine arts and contemporary crafts in City Park.

Magic Valley Arts Council's 21st annual Kids Art In the Park will be July 14, with visual and performing arts workshops for ages 3-14. A $2 registration fee covers materials and instruction.

In their workshops, artists and teachers explore the educational aspects of the arts — visual, performing, literary and musical. Workshops for preschoolers are suited to their age and motor skill development.

An 11:30 a.m. KAP Jazz show and hot dog lunch will be available for $3.

This year, there's something for rest of the family, too: Kids Art In the Park coincides with the Art Guild of Magic Valley's annual Art in the Park, a weekend of artists and craftsmen selling their wares in booths around City Park.

Kids Art In the Park registration forms are available at Twin Falls Center for the Arts, Twin Falls Public Library, Twin Falls Parks and Recreation Department, Boys and Girls Club and magicvalleyartsandcrafts.org.

Sponsors include the Times-News, as well as Olive Browning Charitable Trust, Keveren Foundation, Maurice Bowers Foundation, Optimist Club of Twin Falls, Twin Falls Rotary, ICA, Magic Valley Printing, Pepsi-Cola Bottling Co. and Independent Meat.

Youth Theater Presents 'Fame'

TIMES-NEWS

SUN VALLEY • St. Thomas Playhouse's Theater for Youth will present "Fame — The Musical" at 7:30 p.m. June 20-23 at The Community School Theater, 1 Community School Drive in Sun Valley.

The musical follows a group of acting students over four years as they learn how difficult it is to break down barriers and become creative and vulnerable — all things required by their chosen profession.

It features a variety of dance forms, including ballet and hip-hop, and such popular music numbers as "Hard Work," "I Want to Make Magic" and "Fame."

"The play was based on real-life situations. There is a performing arts high school named LaGuardia, and that is where it takes place," said the show's music director, James Martin, a professional bass-baritone from Millsaps College in Mississippi.

Tickets are $5 for those 12 and younger, $10 for ages 13-18 and $20 for adults, available at Iconoclast Books in Ketchum and 726-5349.

DISCOUNT DEADLINE NEARS FOR SUMMER THEATER CAMP

TWIN FALLS • For one more week, the College of Southern Idaho is offering an early-registration discount for CSI Theatre Camp, for ages 8-18, which takes place in CSI's Fine Arts Theatre the second week in July.

Here, kids learn how to use stage makeup to create bruises, gashes and wrinkles. They learn how to swing a sword, take a fake punch and fall without getting hurt. They spend mornings building and decorating an entire room, then learn how to speak like an Englishman or a Southern belle in the afternoon.

Age-appropriate breakaway classes include stage makeup, set construction, stage lighting, stage combat, acting, audition preparation and musical theater. On the last day of camp, students showcase their work by putting on a play for friends and family.

Early registration (post-marked by June 25) is $150; registration after June 25 is $180.

The camp runs from 9 a.m.

to 5 p.m. July 9-13. Students bring their own lunches for the first four days. There will be a pizza party on the last afternoon of camp before the final production, set for 5:30 p.m. July 13 in CSI's Fine Arts Theatre.

CSI Junior Theatre Camp, a two-day afternoon camp for ages 5-8, introduces younger students to theater. No experience is required. Junior campers get a behind-the-scenes tour of CSI's Fine Arts Center and learn the basics of stage direction, expressing emotions, face painting, stage voice and movement, and costumes, and they prepare a short performance for parents.

Junior Camp cost is $50. Its runs 12:30-5 p.m. July 12-13. After a pizza party, the students perform at 5:15 p.m. July 13 in the Fine Arts Theatre.

Camp directors Jud and Tamara Harmon are co-owners of Random Acts of Theatre.

Registration forms and information: csi.edu/communityed, 732-6288 or email to cbarigar@csi.edu.

CASPER, Wyo. • Just because it's a slow night for the College of Southern Idaho rodeo team, as it was Thursday night with only three participants, it doesn't mean there aren't other area interests competing at the College National Finals Rodeo.

At the top of the list after Thursday's go-round is former CSI cowboy Tag Elliott. The Utah Valley University bull rider won another go-round, adding to his first go-round top honors. Even after getting bucked in the second go-round, he leads all cowboys in average.

A Gooding High duo is faring to varying degrees in tie-down roping. Justin Parke (Blue Mountain CC) is in second place while Cy Eames (Idaho State) is in 40th.

POCATELLO • Darby Fox is still riding high in the saddle.

The Glenns Ferry cowgirls solidified her lead atop the barrel racing standings at the Idaho High School Rodeo championships on Wednesday, winning the second go-round with a time of 15.8 seconds.

The third go-round began Thursday night, with results from that event unavailable as this edition of the Times-News went to press. The third go-round will finish up over two sessions today, with the championship round and top 20 to be determined on Saturday starting at 10 a.m.

Fox won the first go-round with a slightly better time of 15.67 seconds, but no other competitor has broken the 16-second mark at these championships.

Fox also took second in pole bending in 20.59 seconds

UNCONVENTIONAL JOURNEY

Editor's Note: "Before They Were Coaches" is a periodic series detailing the professional careers of area coaches prior to their work with prep athletes. Today's profile is Burley cross country and track and field coach Kevin Green.

BY RYAN HOWE
rhowe@magicvalley.com

BURLEY • Not long after Kevin Green moved to Oakley about six years ago, the principal heard a rumor about the new guy in town.

"We're looking for a cross country coach," the principal said over the telephone. "I hear you ran in college."

It had been 20 years since Green's college career at the University of Oklahoma. Coaching high school kids never really occurred to him. Still, he eagerly took the job, intrigued with what might come of it.

After all, as Green says, "Everything in my life has led to something else."

Green played every sport growing up in Southern California. By his sophomore year of high school, he concentrated on his best: distance running.

As an undefeated cross country runner, he garnered articles from The Orange County Register and Los Angeles Times. He competed in meets all over the country, and even made a trip to China.

Green accepted a full-ride scholarship to the University of Oklahoma to run cross country, indoor and outdoor track. Once he reached Norman, however, the kid teammates nicknamed the "Crazy Californian" had to adjust to more than just heat and humidity.

Green was a Depeche Mode-listening, motorcycle-riding West Coast kid with lines shaved in his hair and his ear double-pierced — eccentric styles that had not yet reached the Midwest.

Green qualified for nationals while competing for the Sooners from 1984-88. But two knee injuries and subsequent surgeries derailed his Olympic dreams.

"Even in high school, any runner that was halfway serious, that was always our dream; we would always talk about the Olympics," Green said. "Physically, I was the same athlete (after the injuries). But mentally, running cross country and track at that point was really hard. I just could not get myself back into the frame of mind that you need to be at that top level."

Around that same time, a friend introduced Green to cycling. It amazed him that biking 70 miles

"I was never the top guy in the group; I was in the middle or the bottom. But it was still exciting and I wouldn't trade it for anything."

Kevin Green

was easier than running 10. Plus, it didn't hurt his knee.

So Green picked up cycling, duathlons and triathlons. By 1991 he was ranked in the Top 10 in the nation in duathlon.

From 1990-93, Green was a professional cyclist, riding for three different teams: Richardson Bike Mart (RBM), Schwinn USA and Raleigh USA. For a short time on RBM, Green was teammates and trained with a young, brash and talented up-and-comer named Lance Armstrong.

"When you're that competitive, and I don't care who you are, you're arrogant. There were a lot of friendships that I lost through that period because I was more focused on myself and trying to succeed," Green said. "I was never the top guy in the group; I was in the middle or the bottom. But it was still exciting and I wouldn't trade it for anything."

But while preparing for the 1994 season, Green was involved in three bike accidents in a two-week span. The third was the worst — a car ran him off the road and he fell 160 feet down a mountain.

Lead for Thompson, Buzz for Tiger

ASSOCIATED PRESS

SAN FRANCISCO • The U.S. Open featured two marquee groups, but only one marquee player.

Take Tiger Woods out of the equation and the top five players in the world were no match for unforgiving Olympic Club.

Then again, not many were.

The lead belonged to Michael Thompson, a 27-year-old in his first U.S. Open as a pro. He made seven birdies — that's seven more than Luke Donald — for a 4-under 66 that gave him a three-shot lead over Woods and the four other lucky souls to manage to break par Thursday.

The buzz came from Woods.

Even as Thompson strung together four birdies on the back nine, Woods put on a clinic on the other side of the course on how to handle the toughest test in golf.

Woods was never out of position. None of his tee shots found the deep, nasty rough lining the fairways. There was hardly any stress in the most demanding of majors. With consecutive birdies late in his round, including a 35-foot putt that banged into the back of the cup, Woods opened with a 1-under 69 to raise hopes that he can finally end that four-year drought in the majors.

"I felt like I had control of my game all day," Woods said. "Just stuck to my game plan — and executed my game plan."

For so many others, the game plan was simply to survive. Thirteen players shot in the 80s, and the average score was 74.9

The best tribute to the toughness of Olympic was the top five players in the world. They combined to go 26-over par, which includes Woods at 69. Perhaps it was Ryo Ishikawa who best summed up the day after a hard-earned 71: "I'm very tired right now."

Late Thunder Storm Isn't Enough for OKC

ASSOCIATED PRESS

OKLAHOMA CITY • LeBron James needed some help, Dwyane Wade and Chris Bosh provided it.

The Miami Heat finally rediscovered the formula to winning in the NBA Finals — barely.

James scored 32 points, Wade rebounded from a poor opener with 24 and the Heat built a huge early lead before holding off a furious fourth-quarter rally behind their three All-Stars to beat the Oklahoma City Thunder 100-96 on Thursday night to tie the series at one game apiece.

Bosh had 16 points and 15 rebounds in his return to the starting lineup for the Heat, who snapped a four-game finals losing streak with their first victory since Game 3 against Dallas last year.

"We've been down. We've withstood rallies. The good thing about it, when they scored, we didn't get our head down. We just got back on offense and started to execute," James said. "It's a great team that we're going against. So we're going to need every effort, every play and it's going to take all the way down to zeroes on that clock to get a win."

Now they go home to host Game 3 on Sunday and the next two after that, knowing they don't have to hear the noisy Thunder fans again — not to mention all their critics — if they win all three.

Kevin Durant scored 32 points for the Thunder, but missed a shot after appearing to be bumped with James that would have tied a game the Thunder trailed the entire way. Russell Westbrook finished with 27 points, eight rebounds and seven assists, but shot 10 of 25 from the field.

James Harden tried to keep the Thunder in it early and OKLAHOMA CITY • Count Dwyane Wade among the biggest audience NBA TV has ever had.

Wade set his alarm to wake up from his nap and watch "The Dream Team," the documentary about the 20th anniversary of the famed 1992 U.S. Olympic gold medal-winning basketball team.

Featuring previously unseen footage and recent interviews with all 12 players from the team, it debuted Wednesday night and averaged 847,000 total viewers, becoming the most-watched telecast in the network's history.

"I wanted to see some of the behind the scenes of those guys together," Wade said, "so I enjoyed it as a fan."

Wade particularly enjoyed the footage of John Stockton walking unrecognized through the streets of Barcelona and the relationships and rivalries between certain people, with one standing out most to the Chicago native who was 10 years old at the time.

"I think the biggest thing that surprised me was probably Michael Jordan and Chuck Daly," he said. "I knew the rivals behind Chicago and Detroit, for those guys to go out and golf and have the relationship that they had, I found that very shocking."

Dwyane Wade smiles during a Wednesday press conference, but he had a better time watching "The Dream Team" later that night on NBA TV, which garnered its highest ratings ever with the broadcast.

AWKWARD MOMENTS: After playing for archrivals for the bulk of their NBA careers, it hasn't always been the smoothest transition for Derek Fisher (formerly of the Los Angeles Lakers) and Kendrick Perkins (formerly of the Boston Celtics) to blend together with the Thunder.

The two were on opposite sides for a pair of championship series, with Perkins and the Celtics winning it all in 2008 and Fisher getting even in 2010.

"It seems so long ago. Oftentimes, we're talking about things in the locker room and I'll get ready to say something and I'll have to think twice about it, like,

"Perk was on that team, so I better be careful before I say what I'm getting ready to say," Fisher said.

"I'm sure he's had those moments as well, just out of respect for each other."

MOM'S TOUGH LOVE: Coach Scott Brooks got his 79-year-old mother's seal of approval after his Oklahoma City Thunder the first game of the finals — and that's not always easy to come by.

Brooks has spoken over the years about how his mother, Lee, always watches Oklahoma City's games on NBA League Pass from her home in Northern California and frequently calls him afterward with suggestions.

Because she doesn't like to fly, she had refused to come see any of Brooks' games unless he reached the finals — the same rules she had set out during his playing career. The first game she attended in Oklahoma City was Game 1, which the Thunder won 105-94.

"No complaints. She had a great time," Brooks said. "This was her first time here. She loved it. She loved everything about it. The atmosphere is obviously exciting and when we win the game, she's very happy. The players did a good job, according to her."

HAUNTED HOTEL: There's a theory that has circulated around the NBA that the Skirvin Hilton, one of the downtown hotels that teams visiting Oklahoma City use, is haunted. For the finals, the Heat have been staying there.

Finals

finished with 21 points, but this time the Thunder couldn't come back from a double-digit deficit after spotting Miami a 17-point advantage during their worst first half of the season.

It was the first home loss in 10 postseason games for the Thunder, who had overcome a 13-point deficit in Game 1.

James had a finals career-high 30 points in the opener, but afterward said Wade needed to be Wade — All-Star, Olympic gold medalist and finals MVP.

In Game 1, Wade was 7 of 19. He wasn't sharp in the last round and continues to hear reports that something is physically wrong with him. He was all but asked Wednesday if his explosiveness was a thing of the past, what must have been insulting to a player who, though 30, still believes he's not far from the top of the game.

Wade bounced back in a big way, not quite at the level he was as the 2006 finals MVP, but certainly good enough with the help around him now for the Heat to win another one.

He spun into the lane and found Bosh for a dunk that seemed to have the Heat safe at 98-91 inside the final minute, but a 3-pointer by Durant cut it to 98-96 with 37 seconds left. After James missed a 3-pointer, the Thunder got the ball into Durant, who appeared to be knocked off balance by James as he missed the baseline shot attempt.

BOISE STATE ROUNDUP

Game Vs. Southern Miss Picked Up by FSN

Boise State's television schedule neared conclusion Thursday when the school announced its game against Southern Mississippi on Oct. 6 would be broadcast by Fox Sports Net.

The 12-day window for FSN to decide when to start the game is in place, meaning a game time must be chosen on or before Sept. 24.

Only three Bronco games are without kickoff times (Southern Miss, New Mexico and Nevada) and only the New Mexico game has yet to have its television coverage determined.

The school also announced the football program earned recognition from the NCAA for having its Academic Progress Rate rank in the top 10 percent among Football Bowl Sub-division schools for the second year in a row. BSU was the only school among the 12 recognized by the NCAA to finish in the top 10 of last year's season-ending polls. The next-best football program in terms of APR to Boise State was Clemson.

Alumni

Third-round pick Tyrone Crawford signed a four-year contract Wednesday with the Dallas Cowboys, according to ESPN.com.

Crawford will receive a signing bonus of $575,252 and a $390,000 base salary.

The former Boise State defensive end has missed most of the organized team activities and one minicamp practice with a calf injury, but the Cowboys expect him to help the pass rush in base and nickel situations.

Track and Field

Kurt Felix has been selected as the Mountain West Men's Outdoor Track and Field Student-Athlete of the Year.

The Grenada native won the decathlon at the NCAA outdoor track and field championships on June 7 in Des Moines, Iowa, by 106 points over his nearest competitor. He was the first Bronco to win a decathlon title or attain all-American honors in the sport.

Gymnastics

Boise State is headed back to the Western Athletic Conference in gymnastics, the school and conference announced.

BSU will join as an affiliate member, a common arrangement across the country for schools that field a sport that is not sanctioned by their existing conference. Neither the Mountain West nor Big East conferences sanction women's gymnastics.

"We are thrilled to be back in the WAC and look forward to some exciting competition in the 2012 season," said co-head coach Tina Bird.

Boise State competed in the WAC in gymnastics from 1991-93 and 2006-11. Last year, the Broncos competed as an independent.

Southern Utah and Sacramento State will join BSU as affiliate WAC members for gymnastics.

Jerome Cyclones Break Into Win Column

TIMES-NEWS

POCATELLO • The Jerome Cyclones got their first win of the season, beating Jackson Hole (Wyo.) 13-4 in the second of two games Thursday at the Idaho Sporting Goods Wood Bat Invitational.

The Cyclones lost in eight innings to Northern Utah, 3-2, in its first game.

Against the Giants, Kevin Bos and Austin Bobrowski each had a pair of RBIs in opening up a 12-3 lead after three innings and ultimately winning in six innings.

Jerome struck out 11 times without drawing a walk in the opener, making a hard-luck loser out of Cameron Ahrens, who went all eight innings while striking out five and walking four. Northern Utah tied the game in the bottom of the seventh, then won it on a suicide squeeze bunt with one out in the eighth.

Bobrowski, along with Chandler McArthur, drove home both Jerome runs in the loss.

Jerome has games Friday against Helper (Utah) at 12:30 p.m. and on Saturday against Kuna at 3 p.m. The top team in each four-team pod will play Saturday for the championship.

Chandler Greenfield and Sterling Duggan each had two-run doubles for the Hawks' only extra-base hits in the opener against the Pocatello Rebels, which ended with a 13-6 win before mercy-ruling the Rebels in the second game by a 14-4 count.

Dakota Kent had a pair of doubles in the second game, while Jacob Visser tripled and went five innings to get the win after a shaky start in which he gave up four runs in the first two innings.

"He had a lot of walks but got out of two or three jams where he got a pop fly or ground ball and got out of it," Hawks coach Mark Schaal said. "He's made some huge strides for us this year. He's got a nice physique and a live arm. If he can get some consistency, hopefully he can log some innings for us on the varsity the next couple of years."

moved to Oakley.

Green served as the Hornets' cross country coach for two years, and then became Burley's cross country and track coach in 2008.

He's a community coach, since he doesn't have a teaching certificate. He sold the horse business and now works part-time at the Mini-Cassia Juvenile Detention Center.

Green says he coaches to give kids the chance to experience what he did as a runner. Plus, through his work at the detention center, he sees the positive impact sports have on kids.

"Athletics is a vital part of high school life, but the community needs to support a team for it to be successful, in any sport," Green said.

Green isn't certain how long he will coach or how long he will stay in Burley — a long time, he hopes, but for a guy who has spent his life marching to the beat of his own drum, you never know where the next step might lead.

"One thing I've learned, I'm a survivor. I'll do whatever it takes to survive," Green said. "Everything has happened for a reason."

Mets Finish Off Rays Sweep

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. • Kirk Nieuwenhuis hit a leadoff homer and later connected for a two-run shot, and the New York Mets completed a three-game sweep by beating the Tampa Bay Rays 9-6 on Thursday.

Jason Bay also homered and Lucas Duda drove in three runs for the Mets, who had been swept in a three-game series by the New York Yankees last weekend.

The Mets outscored Tampa Bay 29-9 in this series.

REDS 12, INDIANS 5

CINCINNATI • Brandon Phillips hit one of Cincinnati's three homers and drove in four more runs, leading the ailing Reds to their first three-game sweep of Cleveland since 2008.

Joey Votto and Ryan Ludwick also homered for the Reds, who had a season-high 17 hits.

TIGERS 5, CUBS 3

CHICAGO • Justin Verlander pitched eight solid innings for his first win in a month to lead Detroit over Chicago.

Austin Jackson hit a tiebreaking RBI single in the seventh and a two-run homer in the ninth for Detroit, which went 4-2 on its interleague road trip through Cincinnati and Chicago.

ATHLETICS 8, ROCKIES 2

DENVER • Jarrod Parker allowed three hits over seven scoreless innings and Brandon Moss drove in three runs, helping Oakland to its first road sweep since the end of the 2010 season.

Parker (3-3) allowed just three singles before being lifted for a reliever after throwing an efficient 89 pitches. He struck out six and walked just one.

ORIOLES 12, PIRATES 6

BALTIMORE • Steve Pearce homered and drove in a career-high five runs, Matt Wieters had four hits and five RBIs, and Baltimore cruised past Pittsburgh for a three-game sweep.

The only other time Baltimore had two players with at least five RBIs was on June 13, 1999, when Cal Ripken had six and Will Clark tallied five in a 22-1 rout of Atlanta.

ARLINGTON, Texas • Jason Kubel and Gerardo Parra homered to back Daniel Hudson's seven solid innings in Arizona's 11-3 victory over AL West-leading Texas.

ST. LOUIS • David Freese homered, doubled and drove in three runs, leading Adam Dunn tied Texas' Josh Hamilton for the major league home run lead with his 22nd, a three-run shot in the sixth that pulled the White Sox to 5-3.

PHILLIES 6, TWINS 1

MINNEAPOLIS • Joe Blanton pitched his second complete game of the season and Jim Thome homered for the second day in a row to lead Philadelphia over Minnesota.

Blanton (6-6) gave up seven hits and struck out seven while going the distance for the sixth time in his career, snapping an ugly string of five straight starts with at least five runs allowed. Ty Wiggin-ton also homered for the Phillies, who took two of three from a Minnesota team that was unbeaten in its previous four series. Trevor Plouffe homered for the third consecutive day and fifth time in six games for the Twins. Scott Diamond (5-2) gave up four runs and five hits in six innings.

ASTROS 6, GIANTS 3

SAN FRANCISCO • J.D. Martinez hit his first career grand slam and Houston beat San Francisco to avoid a three-game sweep one day after Matt Cain's perfect game.

Matt Downs also homered and Justin Maxwell drove in a run for the Astros, who had dropped 13 of their previous 17. Wandy Rodriguez (6-4) went six innings, allowing three runs on six hits, and Brett Myers worked the ninth for his 16th save in 17 opportunities.

Cain 'Still Pumped' After Tossing Historic Gem

ASSOCIATED PRESS

SAN FRANCISCO • Matt Cain tossed and turned and managed all of about four hours of sleep following his history-making gem for the Giants.

Perfectly understandable. Cain's perfect game will be remembered among the most masterful pitching performances in regular-season baseball history, if not ever.

San Francisco's ace right-hander dominated the Houston Astros every which way Wednesday night in a 10-0 win for the 22nd perfect game ever and the fifth no-hitter already this year.

He struck out a career-best 14 batters, making up more than half of his 27 straight outs and tying Sandy Koufax for most Ks in a perfect. Cain (8-2) threw 19 first-pitch strikes and never faced a 2-0 count in winning his career-high seventh straight start.

"I'm still pumped," said Cain, who was back on the field playing catch with fellow starter Madison Bumgarner by 10:15 a.m. Thursday after a workout. "I haven't really had a ton of time to sit down and look over stuff, see how it all happened. I don't know that it has hit me yet, maybe when I can sit down and watch the highlights, go over the game."

Add in a pair of improbable catches by Melky Cabrera and Gregor Blanco to preserve the bid, and Cain wound up with the first perfect game in the franchise's storied 130-year history and its 14th no-hitter. It was the third this month, as Cain joined the Mets' Johan Santana and a combined no-no by Seattle's staff.

He threw 125 pitches — most ever in a perfect game — and 86 of those for strikes. Seven of his strikeouts were called. He didn't shake off catcher Buster Posey even once. They were in sync on this memorable evening, all right.

Cain followed up Bumgarner's 12-strikeout night Tuesday, and they became the first Giants pitchers to record consecutive double-digit strikeout games since Vida Blue and John Montefusco in May 1978.

"Things like this bring a team together even more," San Francisco skipper Bruce Bochy said. "That's the first one I've seen. It was an incredible night. Matt was going about it like a normal game. That last at-bat he sprinted to first base and I yelled, 'Hey, take it easy!' But he always plays the game hard."

Team President and CEO

Larry Baer and the rest of the brass must have been pinching themselves in delight that they decided to reward the two-time All-Star with a $127.5 million, six-year contract days before the season began — the richest for a right-hander.

The 27-year-old Cain showed glimpses of his potential for perfection in consecutive starts in mid-April. There was a one-hitter against Pittsburgh in the home opener, then nine shutout innings against Cliff Lee and the Phillies in a 1-0, 11-inning Giants victory his next time out — a memorable game in which the aces combined to throw 19 scoreless innings.

Blame Marlins' Skid on Poor Clutch Hitting

ASSOCIATED PRESS

MIAMI • Ozzie Guillen gives himself a C-plus at best for the job he has done with the Miami Marlins, and his lineup deserves an even lower grade. When it comes to clutch hitting, the Marlins flunk too many tests.

They batted .127 (8 for 63) with runners in scoring position during a dismal homestand, which is the primary reason the Marlins went 1-8. They began last week in a virtual tie for the NL East lead, and they now begin a two-city trip seven games behind division leader Washington.

"We'd better start hitting better if we want to win some games," Guillen said.

The Marlins rank near the bottom of the majors in runs, batting average, slugging percentage and on-base percentage. When they get a runner to second or third, they're even worse.

Miami is batting .218 with runners in scoring position, third-worst in the majors. Logan Morrison (.149), John Buck (.171), Omar Infante (.178) and Hanley Ramirez (.203) have all been awful in those situations.

"Hopefully we turn it around quickly," said lead-off hitter Jose Reyes, who was stranded at third following a leadoff triple in a 2-1 loss to Boston on Tuesday. "One big hit is what we're looking for."

One big hit is all the Marlins managed during a long stretch last week when they went 1 for 33 with a runner at second or third.

"Very poor hitting with men on base," Guillen said. "It has been happening almost all year. What's the reason? I don't know. It's kind of funny, because we get people in scoring position and then we shut down. I don't think we panic, but we need to do better."

Transformed by an off-season spending spree and the move into their new ballpark, the Marlins expected to contend for a playoff berth. In spring training, new manager Guillen touted his team as well-balanced and ready to win.

But with 99 games to go, they're barely above .500 (32-31), which is why Guillen gives himself a grade of mediocre or worse.

"C-plus or D," he said, "because I should be in first place with this ballclub. I've got good players. I might not be getting the best out of them. Not yet. Not consistently. Right now there are a few players not responding the way they should, but I'm the one that put them in the lineup, and I will take the blame."

"We have good enough talent to be consistent and compete. It's a little bit of a surprise, because I think we're better than this."

KINGS CELEBRATE CUP WITH PARADE, RALLY

ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES • Dustin Brown stood on a flatbed truck and raised the big silver trophy above his head once again. The air in downtown Los Angeles filled with a blizzard of silver-and-black confetti.

The Los Angeles Kings are Stanley Cup champions for the first time, and a celebration 45 years in the making certainly appeared to be worth the wait.

The Kings rode double-decker buses and flatbed trucks in a parade through the city center, moving slowly up Figueroa Street past thousands of roaring fans. Brown and playoff MVP Jonathan Quick then raised the Cup outside Staples Center, where the Kings completed their 16-4 rampage through the postseason on Monday night by eliminating the New Jersey Devils.

"It was more than you could ever expect," forward Dustin Penner said. "It's one of those moments you want to live over and over again. It's amazing to hear all the support, and to put faces to the cheers we've heard all year."

The Kings gathered inside the arena for a packed rally, with fans waving towels and giving repeated standing ovations to every speaker. Coach Darryl Sutter even pumped up the fans with a series of joyously out-of-character fist pumps, and forward Anze Kopitar riled them up even more.

"It's too much fun not to win it again, so let's go get it," Kopitar said.

Beau Knows Opens; No 10-shot Rule News to Players

ASSOCIATED PRESS

SAN FRANCISCO • Beau Hossler used a practice round with his idol, Phil Mickelson, to build confidence early in the week at the U.S. Open.

Then, the 17-year-old in braces shot an even-par 70 at Olympic Club in the first round Thursday and was six shots better than Mickelson, a four-time major champion.

Hossler, the first high school player since the early 1950s to qualify for consecutive U.S. Opens, wasn't surprised in the least by his own performance in front of dozens of family members and friends who made the trip from Orange County.

"Not at all," said Hossler, one of eight amateurs in the field. "I've been playing really well lately. I expected myself to go out there and get a lot out of my round."

Oddly enough, he said Mickelson's advice to him after a Tuesday practice round was "conservative lines and aggressive swings" and "taking your medicine" with pars on the tight, twisting layout.

Hossler, who recently took second at the state high school championship as a junior, had 12 pars, three bogeys and three birdies Thursday. His biggest par was the one he made with a putt on No. 1.

"That was huge because it gives me a little confidence," Hossler said.

Nick Watney hits a drive on the second hole during the first round of the U.S. Open. Near the end of his round, Watney made just the third double-eagle in Open history when he made albatross on the par-5 17th.

CUT RULE

The USGA decided this year to eliminate the 10-shot rule in making the cut. Starting this year at the U.S. Open, the cut will be only top 60 and ties.

About the only problem appears to be neglecting to tell the players.

Carl Pettersson said he just found out about the change earlier in the week — from the caddies. Phil Mickelson might need the 10-shot rule after opening with a 76, which left him 10 shots behind Michael Thompson. He was asked if he was told of the change.

"Honestly, I haven't looked," Mickelson said. "If there might be a note or something, I don't know. I haven't really looked at it."

OH ZHANG!

Andy Zhang finally looked his age when the U.S. Open began.

Not that a lot of seasoned veterans fared much better.

The 14-year-old from China, believed to be the youngest player in championship history, shot a 9-over 79 in the opening round Thursday. He finished only a stroke behind Masters champion Bubba Watson, who Zhang played with in a practice round earlier this week, and three strokes behind four-time major winner Phil Mickelson.

"At least I broke 80," Zhang said.

ANOTHER ALBATROSS

Nick Watney holed out with a 5-iron from 190 yards for a 2 on the par-5 17th, the second albatross in a major this year.

Watney raised his arms and ran back to celebrate with his caddie, Chad Reynolds, and then playing partners Bill Haas and amateur Jordan Spieth. The shot brought him back to even par through nine holes in the opening round.

Louis Oosthuizen also made an albatross on the second hole of the final round at the Masters, that put him in the lead. He wound up losing in a playoff.

ALLEN'S BIG SHOT

Even at 53, Michael Allen wasn't going to miss qualifying for the U.S. Open because he's a member at Olympic Club.

On Thursday, the Champions Tour player made sure the opening round was a memorable one. Allen had one of the day's many highlights when he holed out from 142 yards on the 14th hole for an eagle. He wound up with a 71.

"At that point, I just felt I really needed to hit a good shot and get a good birdie putt and then to see it go in," Allen said. "I felt like maybe now I'm kind of back in the tournament and having a chance to still be, get things going out here and get things going the right way."

The eagle on 14 was Allen's first, even though he has played Olympic some 2,000 times in his life.

The New Tiger Woods Is Pretty Good, Too

The low hooking iron that curled up near the flagstick on the fourth hole was reminiscent of something, sure. So, too, was the pair of iron shots that collectively traveled 498 yards on the next hole, setting up a 35-foot putt that slam dunked into the cup for rare back-to-back birdies on the toughest stretch of a very tough Olympic Club course.

We've seen it before, so many times that no matter what Tiger Woods does on a golf course, nothing totally surprises. Not the shots that hit fairway after fairway while his playing partners were hacking it out of the rough and into the trees, certainly not the 69 that Woods posted Thursday in the first round of the U.S. Open.

It sure seemed like the Tiger we once knew, with thousands cheering every shot as Woods methodically plotted his way around Olympic. Bubba Watson proclaimed it as much, and since he's the Masters champion and was playing with Woods, his opinion counts for something.

"That was the old Tiger," Watson said. "That was beautiful to watch."

On the second point, we can all agree. Woods was nearly perfect on a brilliant day in San Francisco, where his game pretty much matched the weather. The swing may look a little different than before, but any of the 33,500 or so who strained to watch the featured pairing of Woods, Watson and Phil Mickelson had to feel as if they were watching something beautiful in the making.

But this wasn't the old Tiger Woods. That guy is long gone, last seen down the coast of California somehow finding a way to win an Open on one leg while his wife and toddler daughter waited with hugs of congratulations.

The new Tiger moves lighter and walks more carefully after four surgeries on his knees. He's got a tendency to miss short putts, and at times he still struggles to find the psyche that used to intimidate his opponents before they ever stepped to the first tee.

But if Woods proved anything in an opening round felt all the way from the locker room to the driving range, it's that the new Tiger is still better on any given day than anyone playing against him.

Certainly better than his playing partners, who couldn't make sense of the sloping fairways, tiny greens and thick rough on the Lake course at Olympic. Mickelson never found his first tee shot after hitting it into one of the towering cypress trees that line the fairways, and shot a 76. Watson was even worse, insisting on banging his driver off nearly every tee and paying the price in wildness with a fat 78.

"I know I can hit the ball this way and I know I have been hitting the golf ball this way," Woods said. "And I was able to put it together in a major championship."

The last point can't be emphasized enough because the majors mean everything to Woods. They always have, since he was a kid pasting the record of Jack Nicklaus on his bedroom wall so he would have a daily reminder of what to shoot for.

He's got 14 of them so far, but it's been four years and 15 majors since he won the Open at Torrey Pines, the longest drought of his career. He's 36 now, and if he is to catch or surpass the record of 18 majors held by Nicklaus he needs to start picking off a major here and there.

"Second best player in the history of golf, after Jack," said Stephen Ames, who played in the group behind Woods.

If Woods keeps hitting the kind of shots he hit on Thursday, Ames might have to change his rankings.

Mickelson, Watson Find Rough Start at Open

ASSOCIATED PRESS

SAN FRANCISCO • Phil Mickelson lost a ball in the trees on his first swing Thursday, hit a spectator on another and spent more time in the rough than the fairway.

Playing partner Bubba Watson looked even more lost at The Olympic Club, nearly shooting the 80 he feared he might put up early in the week.

Such lack of precision cost both dearly in the first round of the U.S. Open. Five-time Open runner-up Mickelson opened with a 6-over 76, and Masters champion Watson had a 78.

It was a stark contrast to the way the third member of the group, Tiger Woods, methodically moved from Point A to Point B in shooting a 69 on the tight, twisting Lake Course.

"It beat me up," Masters champ Watson lamented. "It's winning by eight right now."

Mickelson bogeyed the first three holes.

"I didn't play well, obviously," Mickelson said. "You could see that."

It started with his first swing, when he hit 3-wood on No. 9 — his opening hole because of Olympic's logistics. He snap-hooked it right and it quickly disappeared into the trees.

Fans gathered around one cypress and photographers took endless photos of a ball sitting in the tree like a bird's egg. But there was no way to identify it, or even determine if it was Mickelson's ball.

For all anyone knew, the ball could have been there since 1998, the last time the U.S. Open was played at Olympic.

Mickelson abandoned his search after 5 minutes and went back to the tee.

Joe Ogilvie was already waiting to tee off because of the delay.

"Not a good way to start the tournament," Ogilvie said. "I'm just glad the USGA official had the foresight not to say, 'Now playing his third shot ...'"

Mickelson salvaged bogey, but then couldn't recover.

"I just let it continue," said Mickelson, who hit eight of 18 greens in regulation and seven of 14 fairways. "Unfortunately, I wasn't able to get it stopped."

Mickelson birdied the par-3 13th — his fifth hole — but that was it. His three-putt from 10 feet on No. 4 started another bogey-bogey run.

"I fought hard for a while there trying to keep it a few over," Mickelson said. "Three-putting (No.) 4 real-

Woods stood out on a day when the game's best struggled mightily.

He was in the marquee group in the morning with four-time major champion Phil Mickelson and Masters champion Bubba Watson. Mickelson never found his opening tee that he hooked into the trees and shot 76. Watson could only say that Olympic "beat me up" on his way to a 78.

In the afternoon, the USGA put together Nos. 1-2-3 based on their world ranking, and it was a rank performance.

Donald failed to make a birdie in his round of 79. Rory McIlroy, the defending champion, bogeyed three of his last four holes for a 77 and then declined interview requests, instead speaking to a pool reporter. Lee Westwood was 4 over through six holes, and made an impressive rally for a 73.

The shocking numbers: The top three in the world ranking combined for three birdies.

"It shows how tough it is," Donald said. "There aren't that many opportunities out there."

Only six players managed to break par in the opening round, which would have come as a surprise to none of the players. After opening with a birdie, Joe Ogilvie turned to his caddie and said, "Seventy-one more pars and we're hoisting the trophy!" He shot 73.

Woods and David Toms opened with 69 in the morning, with overcast conditions from a marine layer off the Pacific Ocean.

DEAR ABBY: I need to get something off my chest. My son and his wonderful — or so I thought — girlfriend, just broke up. OK, she dumped him. Out of the blue, with no warning, she slept with another guy and the next day she told my son it was over.

DEAR ABBY Jeanne Phillips

I am devastated! This is a girl I LOVED. He hadn't proposed yet, but my son wanted to marry her. She was going to be my daughter-in-law, the mother of my grandchildren — holidays, birthdays, weekends in the park, the beach, our house, their house, the whole nine yards.

Now I don't know who has cried more, me or my son. I know it's none of my business and I have to let these two kids work it out for themselves if there is anything salvageable. But Abby, I'm hurting too.

I'm so tired of people telling me I have "no right" to have an opinion about this, much less express it. I don't want to call her yet, but maybe someday I'd like to just say I'm sorry this happened. I'm disappointed and would at least like to say goodbye.

I can't believe I'm never going to see her again. If somehow, by the grace of God, they can put this back together, I will forever keep my mouth shut, but in the meantime, I'm just sitting here

... A BROKEN-HEARTED MOM

DEAR MOM: Clearly you are hurting, and I'm sorry for it. But young love can be unpredictable, and it's obvious that your son's girlfriend wasn't ready for the kind of future you have fantasized about.

If you're smart you will start thinking about this with your head rather than your heart. While what happened is extremely disappointing it could have been worse. She could have been married to your son and the mother of your grandchildren when she slept with another man and decided to bolt. Be grateful she wasn't.

DEAR ABBY: I'm a contented, widowed, retired elementary school teacher. I live in the same condo complex as my fraternal twin sister and her seventh husband. She has always been a cougar — never satisfied with what she has. She's attractive and looks 15 years younger than her age.

For almost a year she has been pen pals with a handsome man 30 years her junior. They exchange naughty nude photos and have phone sex. She likes the fantasy, but he wants it to become reality by flying across country for a long, steamy weekend. It's inevitable that this will happen. I worry for her safety. She says she can handle it. What should I do, if anything?

— NEVER CEASES TO AMAZE ME

DEAR AMAZED: I can understand your concern, however, your sister is well past the age of 21. From your description of her history she has been around this block many times. She knows the territory. If I were you, I'd worry less about her safety and more about HIS.

DEAR ABBY: Is it appropriate to visit a house you grew up in years ago and expect to be treated to a tour? Should one expect the current owners to accept you and invite you into the house, which is now theirs? How is this handled?

— MOVED ON INTAMPA

DEAR MOVED ON: If one is smart, one does not EXPECT anything from strangers because it suggests a feeling of entitlement. Chances of being allowed inside would be better if the homeowner was given some advance notice, like a short note explaining that you were raised in that home and asking if you could be admitted. That's how I'd handle it.

IF JUNE 15 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Don't fight city hall during the next few weeks. You may be too dedicated to getting your own way and clash with others. Ambitions are on the rise — especially in August and September. Bide your time during August, and set up your strategies so that you can launch financial, business or career plans in September. Plan an amorous weekend built for two in November or simply take a vacation someplace inspiring. Late December is more auspicious than early December for financial and business affairs.

HOROSCOPE
Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Learn to walk before you run. Patience is required or you risk taking on responsibilities you aren't equipped to handle. Don't let your ambitions skew your judgment and set you on a foolish path.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Make fantasies become reality. Get the creative juices flowing and work out the details so you can make pipe dreams come true. When looking for love, don't take casual flirtations too seriously.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Silence is golden. Sometimes it is better to keep your opinions to yourself, even when asked for them directly. Let the dismal situations of others progress naturally on their own and don't interfere.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Worrying about a situation won't make it any better. You may find it difficult to wait and see how things unfold, so find positive ways to divert your attention. Eventually the answers you seek arrive.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Sometimes the best course of action is strategic inaction. Don't lose leverage by jumping at a lucrative deal too quickly. If the other party begins to think you aren't interested, they may sweeten the pot.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Time flies when you're having fun. Break out of the doldrums of work by making the workplace a little happier; create a pleasant environment. Sometimes the best choice is an unpopular one.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Illusions impress no one. There's no need to fabricate the truth when talking about your accomplishments. You are quite capable of getting by on your own merits. Mingle with friends after the sun goes down.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): It's a dirty job but someone has to do it. To get the job done, however, you may be forced to resort to some ethically questionable tactics. Slash and burn now; regain lost karma by doing a good deed later.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): If you keep playing too rough, someone is going to get hurt. Be respectful of others and remember that what might be acceptable for you may not be tolerable for someone else. Mind your manners.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Practice makes perfect. There's no reason why you can't be the best at something if you work at it. Improve your performance by stretching your muscles or testing out new techniques.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): The best way to win a fight is to not get into one. Tempers may run high during a competition, but you'd be wise to remember the rules of good sportsmanship. Be humble in victory or gracious in defeat.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Get away from it all. Grab your favorite person and find someplace where the cares of the world can't find you. It may seem selfish, but you deserve some time for yourself. Don't be stingy about entertainments.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

"A little credulity helps one on through life very smoothly."
— Elizabeth Gaskell

In four spades declarer made the natural play of covering West's heart king with the ace, hoping against hope that East would follow, or at the very least that he would be ruffing with a natural trump trick. East trumped the trick and returned a spade — nice defense. Declarer played the club ace and ruffed a club, took the diamond ace, came to the diamond king, and led a third club.

After much thought West pitched a heart, and declarer ruffed in dummy. But now he could not avoid losing a further heart, a club and a trump promotion. Had West ruffed in on the third club and cashed his heart, declarer could not have been stopped from ruffing the fourth club in dummy and losing no more tricks.

For those of you interested in the art of squeeze-play, it is worth noting that declarer could have made his contract had he read the position perfectly. Imagine that you duck the first trick, then put up the heart ace when the defense leads a second heart. The best East can do is ruff and return a spade, and you draw two rounds of trump, then find the master play of ducking a club. You can now arrange to ruff a club in dummy and run your trumps. In the ending, East gets squeezed in the minors.

Even if East returns a diamond at trick three, declarer can win in dummy, set about the minor-suit crossruff, and come home with 10 tricks.

ANSWER: This hand is just good enough to reopen with a double and convert your partner's response in hearts to spades. In direct seat this sequence shows 17 HCP or more, but since all actions in balancing seat start about a king lower, this hand is a sound minimum for the sequence. With a less well-put-together hand — the doubleton diamond Q-J instead of the king, say — you might bid one spade instead.
