THE END OF FARM SUBSIDIES?

TWIN FALLS • Idaho farmers and dairymen are about to see big changes in the way they do business, thanks to a massive piece of legislation working its way through Congress.

If the proposed 2012 Farm Bill passes, farmers will rely less on subsidies and more on market conditions and crop insurance.

Congress passed the first Farm Bill in 1933 to protect farmers from plummeting prices. Since then, the United States paid billions in subsidies to farms across the nation. In 2010 alone, food producers received nearly $6 billion in subsidies.

In a Thursday phone interview, Idaho Sen. Mike Crapo called the change, "a very new direction" for the United States agriculture industry. Instead of relying on subsidies for a safety net, the government will pitch in for insurance premiums to encourage farmers to buy coverage.

"It eliminates the direct payments and moves to ... a more robust system of crop insurance," Crapo said.

Nationally, not everyone is on board. Rice and cotton growers in the South have concerns about some provisions and dairy processors are also unhappy, Crapo said.

Though many Idaho food producers receive subsidies, most of Idaho's industries support the changes, including dairy producers and grain growers.

Declo area farmer Wayne Hurst, former president of the National Association of Wheat Growers, said the bill isn't perfect, but it's a good compromise.

Even though farmers will lose their subsidies, he supports the legislation as written, he said. The reason? He and other farmers are serious about the government getting its finances in order.

What is the Farm Bill?

The Farm Bill, reauthorized every five years, is a broad piece of legislation covering food production, food stamps, energy, rural development, conservation and trade. Amendments to this specific legislation, called the Agriculture Reform, Food and Jobs Act of 2012, are currently being considered in the Senate.

Twin Falls City Council Swaps Local Texting Ban for State's

Twin Falls council also hears budget preview, weighs land issues.

BY MELISSA DAVLIN
mdavlin@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • The city of Twin Falls' ban on texting while driving will end July 1, the City Council decided Monday.

But that doesn't mean the behavior will be legal again. The city's ban would have overlapped with a state version passed by this year's Legislature. The repeal is effective the same day the new state law goes into place.

Twin Falls Police Capt. Anthony Barnhart said the only difference between the city ordinance and state law is the amount of the fine — $90 for the state versus $50 in Twin Falls.

"Really they're both addressing the issue of texting while driving," Barnhart said.

The texting vote was one of several issues the council weighed Monday. Council members also got an update on the budgeting process. Based on current numbers, Twin Falls City Manager Travis Rothweiler put the estimated budget at $51 million for fiscal year 2013.

That's about $3 million more than fiscal year 2012. The estimate is based on anticipated tax collections, Rothweiler explained.

Those numbers may change based on actual property tax revenue, he emphasized. But he said the council should begin thinking about its budget priorities.

The city also accepted a property donation from developer Gerald Martens.

The 3-acre property on Filer Avenue West has a canal running through it, said Community Development Director Mitch Humble, and would require a significant investment to comply with zoning requirements and reroute the canal through a pipe.

Councilman Chris Talkington voted against accepting the property, saying he was concerned about maintenance costs and the city's liability in accepting property with an open canal. Parks and Recreation Director Dennis Bowyer said he didn't have any hard estimates on how much it would take to maintain or improve the land.

But the majority of council members liked the property's potential.

"There might be a few costs, but if they're minimal... it seems like a great use to enhance our community garden or park system," said Councilwoman Rebecca Mills-Sojka.

Another land issue was resolved with no discussion.

The council wrapped up loose ends concerning the transfer of a parking lot to the Twin Falls Urban Renewal Agency and city-owned land near Rock Creek Park to Twin Falls County. The Rock Creek transfer is part of a swap that gains the city acreage on Shoup Avenue that officials hope to turn into a dog park and community garden.

Craig Hobdey, an attorney representing the Big Wood Canal Co.

Currently, state water officials say a lack of water data in the area prevents them from determining if a water right has been infringed. To help address this issue, the Idaho Department of Water Resources created a measurement district that will measure aquifer levels and monitor groundwater diversions in the Wood River Valley.

Eventually, the department expects it will transition the district into an official water district. This would allow IDWR to place a watermaster to oversee water-rights conflicts while managing both surface and groundwater rights.

"I anticipate a water district to be implemented in two or three years," said Gary Spackman, IDWR's interim director. "This would allow a

Man Allegedly Drives Through Twin Falls Couple's Fence

BY ALISON GENE SMITH
alismith@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • A Twin Falls couple was sleeping Saturday night when they say a man drove his car through their fence, narrowly missing their bedroom and several trees in their yard.

Sarah and Tony Giannopoulos live on the corner of Starfire Street and Northstar Avenue, where Twin Falls police responded to a call about a reckless driver at 11:51 p.m. Saturday.

After driving through the fence, Lt. Craig Stotts said Charles Arthur Roark, 30, of Twin Falls, continued driving down Starfire and hit a parked Honda Prelude.

"He kind of missed the corner, took out our mailbox and went through the first fence and went out the back fence," Sarah Giannopoulos said.

She alleged Roark's car then went through two pine trees with about a foot of space on either side and barely missed another tree before making it back to the street.

"We never would have thought this would happen to us," she said.

According to Giannopoulos, Roark missed the couple's bedroom by about five feet. Two dogs in the backyard were unharmed.

According to court records, Roark's blood-alcohol level measured at 0.075 and 0.091 in two tests done by police. The legal limit to drive is 0.08. Since one of the tests was below that limit, Roark was not charged with driving under the influence.

He was charged with leaving the scene of an accident and driving without privileges. A pretrial hearing is scheduled for July 31.

Farm Bill

"We care very much about the country and the way things have been headed lately," Hurst said. "We want the government to get its act together."

But, he added, a safety net is critical to protecting the nation's farmers and food supply. That's why the insurance program is vital, he said.

Bob Naerebout, executive director of the Idaho Dairy-mens Association, agreed. The insurance program kicks in and out depending on market conditions, replacing the Dairy Product Price Support Program (DPPSP) and the Milk Income Loss Contract Program. Those subsidies were put in place with good intentions, Naerebout said, but in the end, they "blunted market signals."

"It really was a failed program," Naerebout said.

200 Proposed Amendments

Though the legislation is called the Farm Bill, about three-fourths of the legislation's spending in the bill goes to Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program, otherwise known as food stamps.

"The nutrition program is being cut very very slightly compared to the hit that farm programs are being cut to," Hurst said. "It's not even close."

The bill also has more than 200 proposed amendments, but Crapo said the majority of those will get settled before hitting the House or Senate floors. Those amendments cover topics such as allowing interstate commerce for raw milk and specifying what types of catfish are barred from being imported into the United States.

By the Numbers Farm Subsidies 1995-2010

According to the USDA, 64 percent of farms in Idaho did not collect subsidy payments from 1995-2010.

Ten percent collected 65 percent of all subsidies, amounting to $70.3 million over 16 years.

The Senate is scheduled to vote on some of those amendments today.

Hurst has been closely watching the bill's progress.

"We'd like to see this farm bill pass this year, and we're gratified that this Congress is finally acting together on something," he said.

greater opportunity for water users to make calls."

An explosion in population growth has challenged water management in the Wood River Valley. The area's population jumped from 5,700 in 1970 to 22,000 in 2010. This led cities and counties to rely more on groundwater use, which then affects junior water users.

If senior water users submit calls, the impact would be felt across the valley, said Jim Speck, a water attorney from Ketchum.

Calls ending in curtailment — turning off the junior users' water that caused the imbalance — would halt irrigation in Ketchum and increase the price of city water, he said.

"Users north of the valley have varying degrees of comprehension and planning for curtailment, but one of the solutions we would like to see is to avoid litigation," Speck said. "We're hoping for more cooperation."

Craig Hobdey, an attorney representing the Big Wood Canal Co., also hopes for more cooperation. He's not holding his breath.

His client holds a senior water right and it's often infringed upon, Hobdey said. Big Wood has attempted to submit water calls to IDWR, but Hobdey said he's received a series of excuses from the department on why it can't look into the call.

"My clients are not feeling very virtuous these days," Hobdey said. "They are not getting the amount of water they feel they deserve. We're all for conjunctive management but it has never been done correctly in Idaho. I'm not sure it ever will."

Despite Hobdey's criticisms, Spackman remains optimistic about the region's future.

"We have some funds to create a water budget and a water model in the Wood River Valley. I anticipate that this will help us navigate through the process," Spackman said. "It is imperative for us to manage this area."

The plaque and photos of the two soldiers will remain on display underneath a flag with the inscription "Lest they be Forgotten," on the main floor of the courthouse.

"There is room for one more name but I hope we'll never have to use it," said Audrey Neiwerth, former mayor of Rupert who spearheaded the memorial.

U.S. Army Pfc. Cleston C. Raney, of Rupert, was the county's first casualty of the wars in Afghanistan and Iraq that began after 9/11.

Raney died on March 31, 2004, along with four other soldiers in Operation Iraqi Freedom when an improvised explosive device hit their armored personnel carrier.

John Workman said the patriotism in the community has been tremendous.

Raney graduated from Burley High School in 2001.

"We're just going forward. It's been tough, but not as tough as what we've been through," said John Workman. "I know we need to thank a lot of people, some we're not even aware of."

Anna Workman said the past few weeks have been tough for the family, especially holidays like Memorial Day and Flag Day, which tend to spark raw emotion in the wake of losing a child.

"It's all been kind of a blur," Workman said.

Workman said a Chris Workman Memorial Scholarship Fund was established and will be given out to three or four students, including a Minico High School senior. The other scholarships will be available to a military family and a Greek Orthodox family.

Workman said the scholarship fund will perpetuate his name and his memory.

"Even though he's not here he will continue to help," Workman said.

T.F. Man Allegedly Tried to Buy Meth from Cops

BY ALISON GENE SMITH
alismith@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • Police say a Twin Falls man was arrested with more than $10,000 in cash and a handgun after attempting to buy a pound of methamphetamine from officers.

According to an affidavit by Twin Falls Police Staff Sgt. Ron Fustos, police began looking for Phillip Allen Warren, 44, after being tipped off by a U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration agent from Salt Lake City.

The agent knew Warren was looking to spend about $10,000 on meth, Fustos wrote in the affidavit.

On June 13, police conducted a reverse drug sale with Warren. According to Fustos, a confidential informant arranged to sell Warren a pound of methamphetamine for $11,000.

About seven officers waited at the Weston Inn at 952 Blue Lakes Blvd. N., in Twin Falls for Warren to arrive, the report said. At about 5 p.m., Warren drove up and then knocked on the pre-arranged hotel room door.

"He was carrying a white plastic bag in his arm like it was a football," the report stated.

As two detectives approached Warren, he allegedly threw the bag under a nearby truck and looked like he was about to run before police ordered him to the ground.

According to the report, the bag contained a loaded Hi-Point model JCP 40 S/W gun, a digital scale and a Tupperware container with white crystal residue. Detectives also found $10,643 on Warren, along with more crystal substance believed to be meth.

Warren was arrested and booked into the Twin Falls County Jail on charges of possession of a controlled substance, attempted trafficking in methamphetamine and being a felon in possession of a weapon. He was held on $100,000 bond and a preliminary hearing is set for June 22.

Friday's court news misstated Warren's charges. The Times-News regrets the error.

Castleford, Bliss Students Receive Governor's Cup Scholarships

TIMES-NEWS

BOISE • Two south-central Idaho students will receive Governor's Cup Scholarships this year.

The recipients are Demsie Butler from Bliss High School, who will attend Lewis-Clark State College, and Roxanne Hill from Castleford High School, who will attend Northwest Nazarene University.

Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter announced the 22 scholarship recipients Monday. The students are attending Idaho colleges or universities next year.

Each student receives $3,000 per year. The award is renewable for up to four years — or two to three years for professional-technical programs.

The Idaho Governor's Cup Scholarship Fund Inc.'s 17-member board of directors chose the recipients. There were more than 500 applicants.

Nearly 100 students have received scholarships through the program during Otter's administration.

A reception for this year's scholarship recipients is scheduled for 4-6 p.m. today at the Idaho House — formerly the home of J.R. and Esther Simplot.

The 2012 Idaho Governor's Cup event is scheduled for Aug. 23-25 in Coeur d'Alene.

Idaho Center for Fiscal Policy Director Michael Ferguson talks about school levies at the Times-News office Monday in Twin Falls.

Buhl Schools to Bring Levy to Voters

BY JULIE WOOTTON
jwootton@magicvalley.com

BUHL • After three unsuccessful attempts at passing a supplemental levy, the Buhl School District plans to give it another try.

"We need to have more money to balance the budget," Superintendent Byron Stutzman said.

Voters will likely decide on a new one-year, $400,000 levy during the Aug. 28 election. School trustees were scheduled to make a decision on the amount Monday night. The result wasn't available in time for this report.

The district doesn't currently have a levy. As a result, Stutzman said they're using about $300,000 to $400,000 in reserve funds each year to balance the budget.

"We can't do that much longer," he said. There's just $700,000 left in reserves.

Without a levy, Stutzman said the district may have to cut programs or activities — or move to a four-day school week.

"We're still doing a very good job on a shoestring, but the shoestring is about to break," he said.

It's common for school districts to go to voters with funding requests. So far this year, 12 south-central Idaho districts passed a levy.

And statewide, more than 80 of Idaho's 117 school districts have a voter-approved levy in place.

School districts that plan to pursue a levy in August must submit information to their county clerk by July 13.

In Buhl, the district last went to voters with a levy request in May 2011 and the ballot measure failed by a narrow margin. But that hasn't always been the case.

Buhl residents approved a few plant facilities levies — used for school building and maintenance projects — in the 1990s. And voters passed a $9.65 million bond in 2003 to build a new high school facility.

How Education Is Funded

School districts' growing reliance on voter-approved funding is a topic included in an April report by the non-profit Idaho Center for Fiscal Policy.

Executive Director Mike Ferguson — who wrote the report — stopped by the Times-

News on Monday to share information about public education funding.

The former longtime state economist is traveling this week to speak at events in locations including Fremont County, Pocatello and Idaho Falls.

Ferguson's report suggests changes to Idaho's school funding system might have violated a constitutional requirement to maintain a uniform and thorough system of public and free schools.

The report also states public school funding as a share of state spending has dropped sharply since 2000.

Ferguson collected data from the Idaho State Tax Commission about the number of districts with supplemental levies and the amounts. But he'd also like to look at districts where levies haven't passed.

Since Ferguson's report came out in April, he received questions from school district superintendents about where data came from.

Ferguson said he's surprised there hasn't been any "push back" or criticism about the report. There aren't any easy solutions, he said, when it comes to public education funding.

"I hope we have some good, honest discussion about what's going on," he said.

Deputies: Man Tried to Share Pot During Prostitution Sting

BY ALISON GENE SMITH
alismith@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • A Twin Falls man's generosity backfired when he allegedly offered to share a marijuana cigarette with an undercover deputy taking part in a prostitution sting.

According to a report by Twin Falls County sheriff's deputies, Eric Allen Boldt, 39, offered to share his marijuana with an undercover deputy who was sitting in Twin Falls' Rock Creek Park on June 13.

The undercover deputy was wearing a wireless transmitter, which was being monitored by other deputies, the report said.

Just after noon, two men walked toward the undercover deputy and allegedly began smoking marijuana as they talked. Eventually, Boldt offered it to the undercover deputy, the report said.

The deputy then took the marijuana cigarette and walked over to the car where the other deputies were waiting.

"The (undercover) told the male subject wearing the grey tank-top (Boldt) that he/she didn't want to smoke the marijuana in public view as an excuse to remove him/herself from the area," the report said.

At that point, two deputies went over and arrested Boldt and the other man, Franklin Tucker, 39, the report said. Boldt was charged with possession of a controlled substance, and Tucker was charged with frequenting a place where drugs are used.

According to the report, Boldt said he thought the undercover deputy was a "fellow smoker" and told deputies he used marijuana daily as an alternative to prescription pain medicine.

According to online court records, Boldt pleaded guilty June 14 and is scheduled to be sentenced July 10.

Tucker is scheduled for a pretrial hearing July 3.

Prostitution-related Charges Dismissed for Lack of Evidence

BY ALISON GENE SMITH
alismsmith@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • Charges against two Twin Falls residents who were accused of prostitution-related crimes were dismissed by a judge during a preliminary hearing on Friday.

Twin Falls County 5th District Magistrate Judge R. Michael Redman ruled prosecutors did not present enough evidence to show probable cause that a crime had happened.

Twin Falls County Prosecutor Grant Loebs said he will likely re-file the charges against Christopher Teague, 45, and Stormie Todd, 20.

Todd and Teague were originally charged with procuring a person for prostitution, sometimes known as "pimping."

Twin Falls Police Officer Clinton Doerr testified about the night of the arrest. He said he reviewed a website where Todd and another woman, Randa Stone, were allegedly advertised as escorts. When he arrived at the Apollo Motor Inn for the arrest, Doerr said he recognized Todd from her picture on the site, and he recognized her tattoo and lingerie from photos on the website.

He also testified that when a phone number on the website was called, a cellphone in Teague's motel room rang.

After questions from Todd's defense attorney, Anthony Valdez, Doerr said he didn't know to whom the phone was actually registered.

In an earlier police affidavit, Stone was said to be 19 years old, but in Friday's testimony Stone said she is 29.

During the hearing, Stone said she met Todd about three days before the arrests and told Todd she was looking for work. According to Stone, Todd told her she used to be a stripper and made good money. Todd also told Stone about an online "legal escort service," Stone said.

Stone testified that Todd took pictures of her at the Apollo Motor Inn that were later posted on the website, but Stone said she didn't know who made the page or posted the pictures.

Valdez and Teague's attorney, George Essma, both objected to print-outs of the website being admitted as evidence because they were hearsay and could not be connected to their clients. Redman agreed, saying the words on the website were no different than a billboard.

Chief Deputy Prosecutor Stan Holloway also called Nicole Owens to the stand. Owens said she worked for Teague from November 2011 to March 2011 doing clerical work at his hot rod parts business.

Holloway asked Owens if clerical work was the only work Teague asked her to do and Valdez objected on the basis that the date of the alleged crime that was the focus of the hearing was two months after Owens stopped working for Teague.

Redman agreed, saying he would allow Owens to testify but would not allow irrelevant testimony. Holloway said he would look into filing a separate case against Teague.

With that, Valdez and Essma moved to have the cases dismissed; Redman agreed.

"You have to establish more than the photo and the cellphone," Redman said.

"A number of the rulings were unexpected," Loebs said. "We will look and consider the comments the court made. If we agree with them we'll figure out a way to deal with the problem. If we disagree, we'll try to persuade them we're right."

Woman Drowns Trying to Rescue Another Woman

CROUCH • Officials in Boise County say a rafter drowned in the Payette River when she tried to rescue another person who had been knocked from the raft.

Deputy Chief Dale Rogers says a group of rafters launched their boat Sunday evening southwest of Crouch. Soon after, a female rafter was knocked out of the boat by a rapid.

KBOI-TV reports the woman jumped out of the boat to help the rafter in the water, but later drowned.

The woman, whose name has not been released, was not wearing a life jacket.

Fellow rafters were able to get the first woman back into the boat.

5-year-old Boy Dies in Crash near Star

STAR • Officials in Ada County say a 5-year-old boy died of injuries suffered when the minivan he was riding in was rear-ended at a red light on Highway 16 near Star.

The sheriff's office says the minivan carrying a 34-year-old woman and three children ages 5 to 8 was stopped at a red light shortly before 11 a.m. Saturday when it was struck by a sport utility vehicle that officials believe was traveling at highway speeds.

Officials say everyone in the minivan was wearing a seat belt or was properly restrained in a child safety seat. A 7-year-old girl suffered serious injuries.

The 41-year-old woman driving the SUV and her 14-year-old passenger were taken to the hospital for treatment of injuries that were not believed to be life-threatening. Neither was wearing a seat belt.

Eleanor Ann Glass Lister

Dec. 29, 1928-June 12, 2012

HAILEY • Eleanor Ann Glass Lister departed this life Tuesday, June 12, 2012, in Bellevue, Idaho, with her family at her side following a long battle with emphysema.

Ellie was born Dec. 29, 1928, in Washington, D.C., the daughter of Jay Walter Glass and Theresa Glass Alden. Growing up in Washington and on the eastern shore of Maryland, she had many interesting stories of her childhood and teenage years during World War 2, including air raid drills, blackouts, training as aircraft spotters and field artillery pieces placed on her high school campus. After venturing to the Midwest for college, Ellie graduated from the Kansas City Art Institute and began work as a commercial artist with Hallmark Cards in Kansas City. She and several friends came to Sun Valley via Union Pacific Railroad to work a summer job at the Sun Valley Drug Store after graduation. Like many, she fell in love with this area and never left. With her usual artistic flair, she documented much of her early years in Sun Valley through her paintings and drawings.

She married Johnny Lister in Sun Valley on Sept. 8, 1953, and during their marriage had two children, Evan and David. They were later divorced.

Ellie was always a forward-thinking intellectual. She and her husband, Johnny, along with the Maricichs, Solheims, Solis and others, decided in the early 1960s that Ketchum needed a more eclectic nightspot to provide an alternative to the normal bars in town. The Leadville Espresso House was born in the 1960s as a conservative western cowboy town, and espresso, imported beers, acoustic folk singers and foreign films were quite a contrast to the established culture and about 20 years ahead of their time.

Ellie also made significant contributions to Ketchum as one of the founding members of the Community Library Association and also served on the first Ketchum Zoning Commission. This was a time when Planning and Zoning regulations were considered a very dangerous thing that would destroy private property. The work of that first zoning commission created the rules that prevent large exposed neon signs in Ketchum today. The civic work she participated in, however quietly in the background, was always a source of great satisfaction to Ellie.

Ellie's third career was as reference librarian at the Community Library in Ketchum. She was very well read and had the ability help patrons find virtually any information in the pre-Internet era where reference books and inter-library loans were the primary research sources. Countless friendships were made over the desk and pages at the library she loved so much. Free time often found her buried in the latest best seller from the New York Times list or educating herself on a new subject with a 300-page hardback which would be completed that same day. Ellie always had an ongoing stack of books she was in the midst of and was an insatiable reader. Retiring from the library did not mean an end to her reading but did give her the time to start through her accumulated collection.

She is survived by her daughter and son-in-law, Evan Lister Stelma (Bart Lassman) of Bellevue; son and daughter-in-law, David Lister (Carolyn) of Hailey; three grandsons, Colin (Megan) Stelma of Fairfield, Nick Stelma of Bellevue and Jesse Lister of Pflugerville, Texas; and three great-grandchildren, Ashley and Katie Lister and Alexandra Stelma. Preceding her in death were her parents, her brother and a grandson.

A memorial service will be announced for a later date this summer. Arrangements are under the care of Wood River Chapel in Hailey, Idaho. Friends and family are invited to visit www.woodriverchapel.com to share memories.

He was preceded in death by his parents; one brother, Myrl Ashcraft; sisters, Norma Killinger and Opal Ashcraft; and granddaughter, Erin Holloway.

He will be deeply missed by all who know and loved him.

The family will receive friends at a memorial open house from 2 to 4 p.m. Friday, June 22, at Parke's Magic Valley Funeral Home Reception Center.

U.S. Stocks Meander as European Debt Crisis Festers

NEW YORK (AP) • Crisis-weary investors scoffed Monday at what had appeared to be a hopeful turn in the European debt crisis: a victory for pro-Europe parties in a Greek election. U.S. stocks were little changed, and borrowing costs for Spain surged to alarming levels. The Dow Jones industrial average closed down 25.35 points, or 0.2 percent, to 12,741.82. The Nasdaq composite index rose 22.53 points, or 0.8 percent, to 2,895.33. The Standard & Poor's 500 index rose 1.94 points, or 0.1 percent, to 1,344.78.

Nevadans to Lose Extended Jobless Benefits

LAS VEGAS (AP) • Nevada's falling jobless rate isn't good news for everybody.

Officials announced Monday that funding for State Extended Benefits for residents with long-term unemployment will be drying up early next month.

Federal officials have determined that Nevada's unemployment is low enough that the state isn't eligible for the emergency program. Nevada first signed on for it in February 2009.

About 5,500 Nevadans are collecting the benefits, which provide up to 20 additional weeks of unemployment checks for people who have maxed out basic benefits.

Nevada's unemployment rate remains the highest in the nation at 11.6 percent.

Oil Price Falls Near $83 on Europe Concerns

The price of oil fell Monday as investors' worries about Europe shifted to Spain. U.S. West Texas Intermediate crude fell by 76 cents to end the day at $83.27 per barrel. Brent crude, which helps set the price for much of the oil imported into the U.S., slipped $1.56 to $96.05 per barrel in London. Oil prices declined as yields on Spain's bonds soared — a sign that investors fear the country could default on its debts. That overshadowed other events in Europe, including a weekend election in Greece where voters gave a narrow victory to a party that supports a bailout of the nation's failed economy.

Education Still Needed on New Pesticide Rule

Three years later, the EPA is still bringing canal companies and weed control districts up to speed on a permit required for use of pesticides.

SUN VALLEY • Dirk Helder has spent two years talking to thousands of people about the need to get a permit to use pesticides in canals or ditches.

On Monday, it was evident he hasn't reached everyone.

"Did anyone not know they were subject to this new permit?" he asked while speaking at the Idaho Water Users Association's summer legal seminar.

A few hands hesitantly rose from the crowd. Helder, a permit writer for the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, didn't hold back his surprise.

Under the new mandate, mosquito and weed control districts and canal companies must now apply for a pollutant discharge permit in order to comply with the Clean Water Act.

In April 2009, the 6th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ruled that the National Pollutant Discharge Elimination System permit applied to anyone who used pesticides in canals, ditches, or other water sources considered "waters of the U.S." The EPA then secured a 21/2-year court stay before the permits were enforced, to provide time for operators to seek permits.

The new law applies to thousands of applicators across the state, Helder said. While the EPA fought the implementation of the mandate, it is now focused on educating operators on how to properly apply for the permit.

"I was surprised to see the hands go up," he said. "But I have a few meetings left this year to make sure no one is left behind."

There is a chance that the pesticide permit mandate may end if Congress amends the 2012 Farm Bill to reverse the court's decision, said Norm Semanko, IWUA's executive director.

"IWUA's board has been supportive getting the permit removed," he said. "The amendment that has been offered eliminates the permit requirement."

However, the Farm Bill currently faces 300 amendments and Congress will only allow a handful of those to be debated on the floor, Semanko said. The chances of the EPA permit removal making the cut are low.

The focus must then be on compliance assistance, Helder said.

"We're putting a lot attention on helping people into compliance," he said. "We'll put our efforts into that till next spring or so. That means we need to talk to more people and attend a few more meetings."

Microsoft Unveils 'Surface' Tablet Computer

BY RYAN NAKASHIMA
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES • Microsoft has unveiled Surface, a tablet computer to compete with Apple's iPad.

CEO Steve Ballmer was on hand to announce the new tablet, calling it part of a "whole new family of devices" the company is developing.

One version of the device, which won't go on sale until sometime in the fall, is 9.3 millimeter thick and works on the Windows RT operating system. It comes with a kickstand to hold it upright and a touch keyboard cover that snaps on using magnets. The device weighs under 1.5 pounds and will cost about as much as other tablet computers. Its debut is set to coincide with the upcoming fall release of Microsoft's much-anticipated Windows 8 operating system.

Steven Sinofsky, president of Microsoft's Windows division, called the device a "tablet that's a great PC — a PC that's a great tablet."

A slightly thicker version — still less than 14 millimeters thick and under 2 pounds — will work on Microsoft's upcoming Windows 8 Pro operating system and cost as much as an Ultrabook, the company said. The pro version comes with a stylus that allows users to make handwritten notes on documents such as PDF files.

Each tablet comes with a keyboard cover that is just 3 millimeters thick. The kickstand for both tablets was just 0.7 millimeters thick, less than the thickness of a credit card.

G-20 Leaders Call for Europe to Fix Finance Woes

BY MICHAEL WEISSENSTEIN AND E. EDUARDO CASTILLO
Associated Press

LOS CABOS, Mexico • European leaders at the G-20 summit struggled to reassure the world Monday that they were on the path to solving their continent's relentless economic crisis, defending the pace of their response even as market pressures pushed Spain closer to needing a bailout that would strain the world's ability to pay.

Less than 24 hours after an election that eased fears of a Greek exit from the shared euro currency, the interest rate that Spain pays on its debt surged above the 7-percent level that had forced Greece, Portugal and Ireland to seek international help.

The prospect of a bailout for Spain's (euro) 1.1 trillion ($1.39 trillion) economy immediately eclipsed the good feeling at the G-20 from the election, and it dwarfed the host country Mexico's expressions of confidence that the meeting of the world's largest economies would lead to more than $430 billion in concrete commitment for the International Monetary Fund as insurance against future bailouts.

The Spanish delegation to the G-20 bemoaned the rise in the country's borrowing costs and said the market reaction didn't correspond to the reality of Spain's economic strength.

"We in the government are convinced that the current situation of punishment in the markets, what we're suffering from today, doesn't correspond with the efforts, or the potential, of the Spanish economy," Spain's economy minister Luis de Guindos said. "This is something that will have to be recognized in the coming days and weeks."

Republicans Want Food Stamps Cut in Big Farm Bill

BY JIM ABRAMS
Associated Press

WASHINGTON • The 1,000-page "farm bill" being debated in the Senate is somewhat of a misnomer. Four of every five dollars in it — roughly $80 billion a year — goes for grocery bills for one of every seven Americans through food stamps.

Republicans say Congress could cut the cost $2 billion a year by just closing a pair of loopholes that some states use to award benefits to people who otherwise might not qualify.

"This is more than just a financial issue. It is a moral issue," says Sen. Jeff Sessions, R-Ala., one of several Republicans pushing for cuts in spending for the Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program, commonly known as SNAP.

The program has swelled from 28 million to 46 million participants and its costs have doubled in the past four years. The recession and slow recovery have increased the number of people unemployed over the same period from 8 million to 12 million.

The Agriculture Department credits the program with keeping about 5 million Americans out of poverty every year. Before 2004, people received paper stamps or coupons worth $1, $5 or $10. Since then, all 50 states, the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, the Virgin Island and Guam have moved to debit-type cards that allow recipients to authorize transferring their benefits from a federal account to retailer accounts.

Democrats led by Sen. Kirsten Gillibrand of New York are resisting a proposal by Agriculture Committee leaders in both parties to trim a modest $250 million from the program each year by cracking down on abuses.

They say that would deprive about half a million households losing an average $90 a month in food aid.

The Republican-controlled House, which has yet to write its own farm bill, is certain to demand greater food stamp cuts, too. Finding common ground with the Democratic-led Senate could be key to whether Congress can pass a 1,000-page bill that also makes fundamental changes in farm subsidies before the current legislation bill expires at the end of September.

Sessions points out that the federal government now spends twice as much on food stamps as it does on fixing the nation's roads and bridges, and that SNAP is now the government's second-largest federal welfare program, following Medicaid.

Two Worlds Cracking Up

ISTANBUL • For many years, strategists have debated whether Turkey would be a “bridge” or a “gully” between predominantly Christian Europe and the Arab/Muslim Middle East. If Turkey were admitted to the European Union, it would be a bridge binding these two worlds. If it were kept out of the EU, it could become a gully separating the two. It turns out that Turkey these days is neither a bridge nor a gully. It’s an island — an island of relative stability between two great geopolitical systems that are cracking apart: The eurozone that came into being after the Cold War and the Arab state system that came into being after World War I are both coming unglued.

Thomas Friedman
New York Times

work, so some of the Arab states are falling back onto sects, tribes, regions and clans.

In Europe, the supranational project did not work because the European states were never ready to cede control over their budgets to a central authority that would ensure a common fiscal policy to back up a common currency.

The stresses are getting to everyone. The reactions range from the truly horrific murders perpetrated by the Assad mafia family clinging to power in Syria to the disturbing fight that broke out last Thursday on a morning TV talk show in Greece, where the spokesman of a far-right party tossed water in the face of a woman from the left-wing party on the show and then smacked another female panelist in the face three times.

The island of Turkey has become one of the best places to observe both these worlds. To the east, you see the European Monetary Union buckling under the weight of its own hubris — leaders who reached too far in forging a common currency without the common governance to sustain it.

And, to the south, you see the Arab League crumbling under the weight of its own decay — leaders who never reached at all for the decent governance and modern education required to thrive in the age of globalization. Europeans failed to build Europe, and that is now a big problem because, as its common currency comes under pressure and the EU goes deeper into recession, the whole world feels the effects. The Syrians failed to build Syria, the Egyptians failed to build Egypt, the Libyans failed to build Libya, the Yemenis failed to build Yemen. Those are even bigger problems because, as their states have been stressed or fractured, no one knows how they’ll be put back together again.

To put it another way: In Europe, the supranational project did not work, and now, to a degree, Europe is falling back into individual states. In the Arab world, the national project did not

In the Arab world, the national project did not work — in many, but not all cases — because the tribes, sects, clans and regional groups that make up these Arab states, whose borders were drawn up by colonial powers, were unwilling or unable to meld genuine national communities. So the EU today has many citizens, but no single supranational nation state to which everyone is ready to cede economic authority. And the Arab world has many national states, but few citizens. In Syria, Yemen, Iraq, Libya and Bahrain, you have one sect or tribe ruling others by force — not because they forged a voluntary social contract with one another. In Egypt and Tunisia, you have more homogeneous societies and a stronger sense of citizenship, which is why they have a better chance at transitioning to more consensual politics.

In fairness, in Syria, Bahrain, Yemen, Libya and Iraq, you have many people, particularly young rebels, who want to be citizens. They want to live in states where people have rights and obligations and multi-ethnic parties. But it’s not clear they have the leadership and educated middle classes needed to forge modern political identities out of atavistic ones.

One question historians will puzzle over is why both great geopolitical systems fractured at once? The answer, I believe, is the intensifying merger of globalization and the information technology revolution, which made the world dramatically flatter in the last five years, as we went from connected to hyper-connected. In the Arab world, this hyper-connectivity simultaneously left youths better able to see how far behind they were — with all the anxiety that induced — and enabled them to communicate and collaborate to do something about it, cracking open their ossified states.

End Student Loans, Don't Make Them Cheaper

U.S. employers complain that they can’t find enough skilled employees. Then how do we explain why almost 54 percent of recent college graduates are underemployed or unemployed, even in scientific and technical fields, according to a study conducted for the Associated Press by Northeastern University researchers?

Richard Vedder
Bloomberg News

The cause is more fundamental than the cycles of the economy: The country is turning out far more college graduates than jobs exist in the areas traditionally reserved for them: the managerial, technical and professional occupations.

The Bureau of Labor Statistics tells us that we now have 115,000 janitors, 83,000 bartenders, 323,000 restaurant servers, and 80,000 heavy-duty truck drivers with bachelor’s degrees — a number exceeding that of uniformed personnel in the U.S. Army.

Was college worth it? A huge part of the problem relates to federal financial-aid programs. Annual student loans, Pell Grants, tax credits and other federal assistance totaled some $169 billion a year in 2010-11 — more than 1 percent of national output. These programs are based on two erroneous premises: that almost everyone needs higher education for vocational success, and that they reduce student costs.

More than 25 years ago, Education Secretary William Bennett argued that federal aid programs benefited colleges more than students. Recent studies by Stephanie Riegg Cellini of George Washington University and Claudia Goldin of Harvard University, as well as by Andrew Gillen for the Center for College Affordability and Productivity, support that hypothesis. A new study by Nicholas Turner of the Office of Tax Analysis in the U.S. Treasury Department argues that when tax-based aid goes up, institutional scholarships go down, dollar for dollar. Consequently, we have millions of underqualified college students borrowing or getting Pell Grants to finance college.

More than 40 percent of them don’t even graduate within six years, and many who do have marginal academic records. Because the average college student spends fewer than 30 hours a week on all academic activities, for about 30 weeks a year, never have so many dollars gone to teach so many students for so little vocational gain.

Besides leading to more underemployed college students of increasingly dubious academic quality, the dysfunctional federal student financial assistance programs have other pathologies:

First, universities, unlike the taxpayers, suffer no financial consequences when the underqualified students they have lured into their academic programs ultimately default on their loans.

Second, students who study six years but ultimately drop out receive more financial aid than the diligent “A” student graduating in three years: We reward mediocrity and punish excellence.

Third, there is no adjustment of student-loan interest-rate terms to meet market conditions or differing risk factors relating to individual repayment prospects. That means too much money is lent, especially to high-risk individuals with little prospect for academic success.

Fourth, the Free Application for Federal Student Aid form, associated with these programs, aside from being unbearably complex, gives colleges private information about family finances that allows them to gouge students more.

Fifth, colleges’ tuition and fee policies drive the amount of loan volume, rather than the other way around, thus contributing to the college-cost explosion and the subsequent academic arms race.

Sixth, intended partly to promote greater opportunities for the poor, these federal-aid programs have been accompanied both by rising income inequality in the United States, and a decline in the proportion of recent college graduates from poor families.

ONLINE COMMENTS

At Magicvalley.com, there is a lively discussion in response to the article, “Local Politicians Speak Out about National Coverage of Romney’s Faith:”

Galatians Five One: “With all due respect, there is a problem with Mr. Romney’s religion. As a former member of the Mormon sect, I made (an) oath in the secret Mormon temple.

... “Mitt Romney, having been a Stake President and Bishop IS a temple Mormon. That means that Mitt has sworn his loyalty to the LDS Church, placing it above the Constitution of the land, and frankly above the cross of Christ. ...”

elcty: “I voted for Romney in the Caucus this time. Though he wasn’t my first choice previously... Someone attacking sacred covenants they no longer keep. What ground do they have to stand on? Romney is the best choice right now I think.”

TFPatriot: “Galatians Five One—You might have a point except that you are forgetting that Mormon doctrine teaches that the Constitution is also a sacred document and that the LDS church does not exist without Christ. It would be impossible for one to place the church above the Savior and it would be contradictory to LDS doctrine to do anything that was in opposition to the Constitution. ...”

Scott Nicholson: “Interesting. I’d also like to see a similar article relative to Pres Obama’s religion and the atrocities people have thrown at him - the accusations he is Muslim (especially in light of all the mud thrown at him for his Christian Church affiliation) have turned my stomach. What if he were Muslim? Would the paper write an article of this nature then as well? I’m betting not.

Desert Doc: “Galatians Five One’ - Two thoughts come to mind after reading your post. First, nowhere in your quote do I see (either written or implied) where Mitt Romney (or ANY member of the LDS Church who has been thru the temple) has placed his loyalty to the LDS Church “placing it above the Constitution of the land ...” There is no contradiction here, and there is certainly no threat to our way of life or to our nation as a whole (based on your comment and quote) should Mr. Romney gain office.”

Obama: Putin Talks Candid, Tensions Can Be Eased

BY ANNE GEARAN
Associated Press

LOS CABOS, Mexico • President Barack Obama and Russian President Vladimir Putin agreed Monday that Syrians should choose their own next government, marking a subtle shift for both the United States and Russia as they confront the prospect that Russia's main ally in the Mideast could slide into civil war.

Sharing pledges of common ground, yet hardly much eye contact or obvious kinship in front of reporters, Obama and Putin met for the first time since the Russian leader returned to the presidency last month. Obama spoke at greater length, emphasizing several areas of cooperation between the onetime Cold War enemies, but the unending bloodshed in Syria hung over the talks.

The two leaders "agreed that we need to see a cessation of the violence, that a political process has to be created to prevent civil war and the kind of horrific events that we've seen over the last several weeks," Obama said. Putin, seated next to Obama following the private meeting, said: "We've been able to find many commonalities" on Syria.

But he offered no specifics on what those were, and it was unclear how much the closed two-hour talk did to close strategic gaps about how to end the violence.

Russia has refused to call for the ouster of Syrian President Bashar Assad, an ally, and neither leader mentioned him by name Monday.

In a departure from previous statements, Obama called for a "political process," that would end horrific violence in Syria, but he did not say Assad must go. Obama's careful language appeared designed to give the Russian some elbow room. In other settings, he and other White House officials have been forceful in insisting that Assad must step aside.

The United States and Russia share a goal of a "political transition to a democratic, pluralistic political system that would be implemented by the Syrians themselves," a joint statement issued on the sidelines of the Group of 20 economic summit said.

Sandusky Defense Opens with Talk of Reputation

BY MARK SCOLFORO
AND GENARO C. ARMAS
Associated Press

BELLEFONTE, Pa. • Jerry Sandusky opened his defense in his molestation trial Monday with character witnesses who defended his reputation, including a former Penn State coach who said he knew Sandusky took boys into showers but never saw him do anything wrong.

The six witnesses, one who called Sandusky a "local hero," did little to directly counter the testimony last week by eight young men who accused the former Penn State assistant football coach of sexually abusing them when they were children.

Judge John Cleland told jurors Sandusky's defense has about a day and a half left of testimony and that they could begin deliberations on the case as early as Thursday, a quicker schedule than had been expected.

Sandusky looked an Associated Press reporter in the eye and said nothing when asked if he planned to testify. Other possible defense witnesses to come include his wife, Dottie; and an expert who could discuss whether Sandusky has "histrionic personality disorder," which experts have called a personality disorder characterized by inappropriate sexual behavior and erratic emotions.

The list of potential witnesses also includes a physician who spoke with key prosecution witness Mike McQueary the night he said he saw Sandusky attack a child in a football team shower in 2001 and members of former football coach Joe Paterno's family, although it was unclear how they might fit into the defense case or whether they will be called.

Sandusky's arrest led the university trustees to fire Paterno as coach in November, saying his response to the 2001 report from McQueary showed a lack of leadership. Paterno died of cancer in January.

Dick Anderson, a longtime Penn State assistant and Sandusky friend who retired in January, testified that he and other members of the football staff were present when Sandusky brought young boys into the team's showers.

He said he never witnessed anything inappropriate.

"If Jerry would bring someone in with The Second Mile, they had been working out, for whatever reason they came in, it was not uncommon ... with the other coaches in the shower as well," Anderson said, referring to the charity for at-risk children Sandusky founded in 1977.

Anderson, who coached at Penn State from 1970 to 1983 and again from 1990 through the 2011 season, said adults and children often shower together at gyms. He noted, for example, that it's not unusual for him to be in the showers with boys at the YMCA.

Anderson also spoke in detail about the long hours of coaching and recruiting trips required of the job, which could lay the groundwork for a defense argument that accuser testimony about regular contact with Sandusky may be inaccurate or exaggerated.

Anderson said he did not know Sandusky had been barred by university administrators from taking children onto campus after the 2001 incident was reported by McQueary, although that was disclosed in court documents and has been widely and repeatedly reported since Sandusky's arrest.

Egyptian Military Moves to Retain Power after Vote

BY HAMZA HENDAWI
Associated Press

CAIRO • Islamist candidate Mohammed Morsi claimed a hollow victory Monday in Egypt's presidential vote just hours after the country's military rulers stripped the office of its most important powers.

The power grab by the ruling generals delivered another major blow to hopes for a democratic transition born out of last year's uprising that ousted authoritarian leader Hosni Mubarak.

The generals, who deny having effectively staged a coup and rendering the elected president a mere figurehead, will maintain authority over the crafting of laws and the drafting of a new constitution. Civilian oversight of their budget and other affairs will be strictly off-limits.

If Morsi's victory is confirmed in the official result expected on Thursday, it would be the first victory of an Islamist as head of state in the stunning wave of pro-democracy uprisings that swept the Middle East the past year. But the military's moves to retain power sharpen the possibility of confrontation and more of the turmoil that has beset Egypt since Mubarak's overthrow.

"The military may partially exit from power after a new round of tough negotiations with the Islamist and the secular opposition on safeguarding its interests," said Azzedine Layachi, a Middle East expert from St. John's University in New York. "However, and no matter what, the military will continue to play a dominant role in Egyptian politics. The question for now is whether they will continue to do so directly for the coming years or indirectly behind the facade of a civilian rule."

In Washington, Pentagon press secretary George Little said the U.S. was troubled by the timing of the military leaders' announcement and would urge them "to relinquish power to civilian-elected authorities and to respect the universal rights of the Egyptian people and the rule of law."

"This is a critical moment in Egypt, and the world is watching closely," State Department spokeswoman Victoria Nuland told reporters. "We are particularly concerned by decisions that appear to prolong the military's hold on power."

Militants Cross into Israel from Egypt, 1 Killed

JERUSALEM (AP) • Militants crossed from Egypt's turbulent Sinai desert into southern Israel on Monday and opened fire, killing an Israeli worker, defense officials said. Two assailants were shot dead in a gunbattle with Israeli troops responding to the ambush.

The Israeli was in a crew building a fence along the porous desert border.

No group claimed responsibility for the attack, which underscored the growing lawlessness in the Sinai desert since longtime Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak was toppled by a popular uprising last year.

Military spokeswoman Lt. Col Avital Leibovich said the assailants have not been identified but said defense officials suspect Palestinian militants in the Hamas-run Gaza Strip might have been involved. Southern Gaza borders Sinai, and infiltrators can exit Gaza through tunnels under the border.

Several hours after the attack, an Israeli airstrike killed two men on a motorcycle in the northern Gaza Strip near the Israeli border. The Islamic Jihad said the men were members on a "reconnaissance" mission and vowed revenge.

Hours later, another airstrike killed two more. The Israeli military said the target was a squad of Palestinian rocket launchers.

Israeli military officials said the incidents were not connected to the earlier infiltration from Egypt.

Three More Homes May Have Burned in Colo. Wildfire

BY P. SOLOMON BANDA
Associated Press

LOVELAND, Colo. • Firefighters faced dangerous conditions across much of the Rocky Mountain region Monday, as they toiled in hot, dry weather to battle a wildfire that has charred nearly 91 square miles in northern Colorado.

Authorities said they determined eight more homes have burned in the fire near Fort Collins. The blaze started June 9 and now has destroyed at least 189 homes — the most in the state's history.

Crews continue to cut and dig lines around the flames, but containment has stayed at 45 percent since Saturday.

The wind was relatively calm Monday, despite forecasts of gusts of up to 50 mph, fire information officer Brett Haberstick said. Temperatures, however, were in the mid-90s, and the relative humidity was extremely low at 3 to 5 percent, he said.

Other wildfires were burning in warm, arid weather from Wyoming to Arizona to Southern California, where a blaze that prompted the evacuation of at least 150 homes was 30 percent contained Monday.

Fire officials warned that the 907-acre fire in eastern San Diego County still threatens 200 homes, sheds and other buildings. The fire has destroyed at least one home.

In Colorado, another fire that started Sunday in the foothills west of Colorado Springs prompted evacuations of cabins, a Boy Scout camp and a recreation area near the Elevenmile Canyon Reservoir, which provides water to the Denver area.

With Alzheimer's, Hospital Stays Can Be a Hazard

BY LAURAN NEERGAARD
Associated Press

WASHINGTON • For people with Alzheimer's disease, a hospital stay may prove catastrophic.

People with dementia are far more likely to be hospitalized than other older adults, often for preventable reasons like an infection that wasn't noticed early enough. Hospitals can be upsetting to anyone, but consider the added fear factor if you can't remember where you are or why strangers keep poking you.

Now a new study highlights the lingering ill effects: Being hospitalized seems to increase the chances of Alzheimer's patients moving into a nursing home — or even dying — within the next year, Harvard researchers reported Monday. The risk is higher if those patients experience what's called delirium, a state of extra confusion and agitation, during their stay.

It's not clear exactly why, although specialists say delirium is especially bad for an already damaged brain. But the researchers, and independent Alzheimer's experts, agree that caregivers need to know the risk so they can help a loved one with dementia avoid the hospital if at all possible.

"It's a very stressful time, being in the hospital," says lead researcher Dr. Tamara Fong, of the Harvard-affiliated Beth Israel Deaconess Hospital and Hebrew SeniorLife in Boston. Often families tell her, "Dad was never the same after he had that surgery and he was confused."

It's a challenge even for health professionals. Psychiatrist Leslie Fuchs watched in disbelief as her mother, who'd had slowly worsening Alzheimer's for several years, rapidly disintegrated during a stay in a New York City hospital last year.

Relatives had called 911 when Thelma Fuchs, 79, suffered what appeared to be a brief seizure. That problem quickly cleared up but the hospital was reluctant to discharge her with it unexplained. Over a few days, Fuchs became increasingly distraught, tried to sneak into other rooms, and wound up being prescribed some anti-psychotic drugs, her daughter recalls.

Leslie Fuchs insisted her mother be sent home, where she calmed down and no longer needed the medications. The family has taken steps for more at-home care in hopes of avoiding future hospitalizations.

"She has to be in an environment that's familiar. She can't make a new memory but her old memories, that's what kind of keeps her together," Leslie Fuchs says. At home, she notes, family members "still are the decision-maker. As soon as you're in an emergency room, you kind of can lose that."

Some 5.4 million Americans have Alzheimer's or similar dementias, and the disease is on the rise as the population rapidly gets older. The disease will cost Medicare and Medicaid about $140 billion this year alone, according to the Alzheimer's Association. There is no cure, and much of the cost is from treating not the dementia itself but other health conditions that dementia can aggravate. Alzheimer's patients gradually lose the ability to manage their diabetes, high blood pressure and other chronic ailments, or even to convey that they're feeling symptoms until an illness becomes serious, explains William Thies, the association's scientific director.

Earlier this year, University of Washington researchers reported people with dementia are more likely than other seniors to be hospitalized, especially for conditions such as pneumonia, urinary tract infections, worsening heart failure or dehydration that might have been treated in the doctor's office if they'd been caught early.

The new study took a closer look at potential health consequences of hospitalizations. Fong's team examined medical records for 771 Alzheimer's patients who were living at home and fairly high-functioning, to see what happened if they wound up in the hospital. About half did, mostly for things like fainting or falls, pneumonia and chest pain. A quarter suffered delirium during that hospitalization.

Each year, about 4 percent of the patients who weren't hospitalized entered a nursing home and 2 percent died. Yet 29 percent of the hospitalized Alzheimer's patients wound up in a nursing home — as did a surprising 43 percent of those who suffered delirium, Fong found.

Of those who survived the initial hospitalization, 9 percent died in the following year, as did 15 percent of those who'd suffered delirium, Fong reported Monday in the journal Annals of Internal Medicine.

The study can't explain the link. It's possible that people who wound up in the hospital or delirious already had begun deteriorating more than their non-hospitalized counterparts. Fong would like to compare hospitalized Alzheimer's patients with those who get at-home care for the same conditions, such as advanced urinary tract infections, to see if avoiding the hospital makes a real difference.

For now, "it is perfectly clear that hospitalization is very hard on people with Alzheimer's disease," and that delirium especially is a threat, says the Alzheimer's Association's Thies.

Roger Clemens speaks to the media outside federal court in Washington on Monday alongside his attorney, Rusty Hardin, after Clemens was acquitted on all charges of lying to Congress when he denied using performance-enhancing drugs.

Clemens Acquitted of All Charges

ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON • Former baseball star Roger Clemens was acquitted Monday on all charges that he obstructed and lied to Congress when he denied using performance-enhancing drugs as a fast-balling pitcher.

The trial was lengthy, the deliberations relatively brief. Jurors returned their verdict after close to 10 hours over several days. The outcome ended a 10-week trial that capped an expensive, five-year investigation into one of the greatest pitchers in the history of baseball.

Shortly after the verdict was read, Clemens and his family engaged in hugs in the courtroom including one large group hug. At one point, wife Debbie Clemens dabbed Roger Clemens' eyes with a tissue.

Clemens, 49, was charged with two counts of perjury, three counts of making false statements and one count of obstructing Congress when he testified at a deposition and at a nationally televised hearing in February 2008. The charges centered on his repeated denials that he used steroids and human growth hormone during a 24-year career produced 354 wins and a record seven Cy Young Awards.

The verdict was the latest blow to the government's legal pursuit of athletes accused of illicit drug use.

A seven-year investigation into home run king Barry Bonds yielded a guilty verdict on only one count of obstruction of justice in a San Francisco court last year, with the jury deadlocked on whether Bonds lied to a grand jury when he denied knowingly taking performance-enhancing drugs.

A two-year, multicontinent investigation that looked into possible drug use by cyclist Lance Armstrong was recently closed with no charges brought, though the U.S. Anti-Doping Agency filed formal accusations last week that could strip the seven-time Tour de France winner of his victories in that storied race. Armstrong denies any doping.

Newhouse's last coaching job came from 2007-09, when he was the girls varsity coach at Lapeer West (Mich.) High School. The economy turned a family business on his wife's side on its ear, leaving Newhouse to find a solution closer to his Alaska home.

"We wanted to get back to the West Coast, and we had visited (the Wood River Valley) several times while we were in Michigan," Newhouse said. "Thought it was a cool town to raise kids and try and make a go of it, so we moved out here."

Newhouse replaces Kevin Stilling, who remains as head football coach.

Junior Gives Lesson in Perseverance

CHARLOTTE, N.C. • OK, it's just one win. The first in four years, no less.

And as Tony Stewart pointed out, Dale Earnhardt Jr. returning to Victory Lane doesn't exactly warrant a national holiday.

But there is a level of importance to Earnhardt snapping his 143-race losing streak that goes beyond the immediate boost to NASCAR, which has been starving of late for any sort of scintillating story line unrelated to another Kurt Busch meltdown.

What Earnhardt did Sunday at Michigan International Speedway was a lesson in perseverance, and a teachable moment for parents everywhere. Earnhardt proved that you can hit rock bottom and rise again.

Some may roll their eyes at this point, perhaps even snicker at the notion that Earnhardt has ever had it very rough. He's rich, has a secure sponsorship and rock-solid job security with Rick Hendrick, the most powerful owner in NASCAR.

He also has a very famous last name, an enormous fan base and is the one driver who can absolutely move the needle for NASCAR. It's a lot of pressure to carry around 11 months a year, particularly when stuck in a never-ending slump.

It wasn't just a slump, either. There have been stretches since 2008 where Earnhardt simply wasn't very good. The first came in 2009, when his five top-10 finishes tied the career-low set in his 2000 rookie season. But he won two races and the All-Star event that first year, and with it came a bravado that overshadowed the on-track inconsistency.

So 2009 was unlike any other season for NASCAR's most popular driver, and the hole he fell into was so deep that it took him until Sunday to finally climb out. That season snowballed on him, and tension with cousin Tony Eury Jr. had reached its breaking point by Memorial Day, when Earnhardt quietly slipped in a side door for the driver meeting and stood off to the side among the fans

Boise State Lands Fifth Commit for '13

TIMES-NEWS AND WIRE REPORTS

The Boise State football team has received its fifth verbal commitment for its 2013 recruiting class.

After attending the Broncos' camp on Friday, American Canyon (Calif.) High receiver/defensive back Chris Seisay told Boise State coaches Boise was the place for him.

"I committed on the spot," the 6-foot-2, 185-pound Seisay said. "I knew it was the school for me."

Seisay is 16 years old and played receiver and safety in American Canyon's first varsity season in 2011. He also handled kickoff and punting duties and returned kicks.

Seisay had 26 receptions for 756 yards and nine touchdowns in 2011, according to the Napa Valley Register. He also made 73 tackles, made four interceptions, forced two fumbles and recovered one more.

The three-star recruit said he will play receiver at Boise State.

Seisay said he also received scholarship offers from Arizona, Colorado, Washington State, Utah, Utah State, Hawaii, San Diego State and UNLV.

American Canyon head coach Ian MacMillian said Seisay has been clocked in the "low 4.5s" in the 40-yard dash.

He's also attended USC's camp this summer and plans on attending

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

"The number of those who undergo the fatigue of judging for themselves is very small indeed."
 — Richard Brinsley Sheridan

Today's deal, from a knockout match, featured some excellent play and defense, after a well-judged sequence in which North made a slam-try and South drove straight to six hearts.

Superficially, the slam appears to depend on East's holding either the club queen or the diamond ace (so a spade can be discarded from one hand or the other).

At one table, declarer won the spade lead in hand, cashed the heart ace, and played a heart to dummy. He now played a diamond to his king, which West astutely ducked in perfect tempo. Convinced that East held the diamond ace, declarer crossed back to dummy with a third trump and played a second diamond. This time West won and played the diamond jack to remove dummy's last trump. Now declarer could not avoid a spade loser.

At the other table, South used his entries more efficiently. At trick two he crossed to dummy with a heart and played a diamond immediately. As it happened, West won and declarer now played successfully for the club finesse.

However, if West had ducked, declarer would have crossed to dummy with a second trump and played a second diamond. West would have won this and taken a trump out of dummy by playing a third round of diamonds. But now declarer can take the club finesse, cash the club ace, and cross back to dummy with a trump. He would then have discarded his spade loser on dummy's club king.

ANSWER: If you are going to bid, the most attractive call is four hearts. If your partner can force you to bid at the three-level with nothing, you surely have enough to try game. Passing for penalties is almost as attractive. Your club values look more useful on defense than offense, and where are the opponents' tricks going to come from?

DEAR ABBY: We have been having a problem with a young neighbor couple in our rural area. They drop in to visit us about five evenings a week. They're nice people and good neighbors, so we don't want to offend them, but what would be a diplomatic way to tell them we don't want company that often?

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

The husband gets home from work at 4:30 p.m. every day and his wife always has dinner on the table when he walks in the door. My husband is 62. He works hard 10 to 12 hours a day and returns home anywhere between 5 and 7 p.m. So it's not possible for me to have dinner ready and waiting. Our idea of a pleasant evening is eating dinner, watching an hour or two of TV, and going to bed about 9 p.m.

My husband has to drive by these neighbors' house on his way home, so they know when he gets here — and they usually arrive shortly thereafter. I feel very uncomfortable cooking a meal and eating with non-eating company in my kitchen, so I always put dinner preparation aside and visit with them for an hour or two. It's not unusual for us to wind up having dinner at 9 p.m. Sometimes they stay so long my husband and I are too tired to even bother.

We have about had it. How can we regain our privacy but remain friends?

— MISSING DINNER IN MISSOURI

DEAR MISSING DINNER: You and your husband have been such good neighbors that you have made yourselves prisoners in your own home. The next time the couple arrives at your door at dinnertime, in a pleasant tone, say, "John just got home from work and he's tired and hungry. Please excuse us while we have dinner. We plan to retire early. And in the future, don't just drop by — please wait until we call you."

DEAR ABBY: My husband, "Ted," and I have been married for four years and have a 3-year-old son. Before we were married we talked about having at least two children.

After our son was born, Ted went through what he believes was postpartum depression. He wasn't prepared for the reality of having a baby, and it was hard on him. To his credit, he got through it and has been a fantastic father to our son.

He now says he doesn't want any more children. We are financially stable, but Ted says it isn't the money. He just doesn't want to go through it again.

Abby, I can't imagine not having one more child. I know I can't force him to change his mind, but I'm afraid I will resent him for denying me something I want so badly, especially since we had agreed ahead of time.

I feel there is no compromising on this. Either way, one of us is going to be miserable. I cry all the time and don't know how to move on. Can you help?

— DREAMING OF TWO IN TACOMA, WASH.

DEAR DREAMING OF TWO: I wish I could, but not knowing the cause of your husband's anxiety and aversion to having another child, I'm at a disadvantage. You should both talk this out with a licensed marriage and family therapist, and I hope you'll do it before you become further depressed because your current mental state may adversely affect your ability to parent the child you have.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "FEELING OLD AT 45": Old age doesn't have to be lonely. It's what you choose to make it. Reflect on the late Supreme Court Justice Thurgood Marshall's comment on aging: "I have a lifetime appointment and I intend to serve it. I expect to die at 110 — shot by a jealous husband!"

IF JUNE 19 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Pay close attention to any offer or advice that comes your way during the next four weeks, as even chance encounters can lead to long-term improvements or lead to a lucky break. Things may not go your way for a few weeks in September when cutthroat tactics could cause problems or block anything you try to begin, but by late November and early December your energy and enthusiasm will have plenty of places to shine. In late December, it is easy to be misled by a new love interest or a business offer, so delay major initiatives until March when your focus could shift and you will have better success with financial, career or business matters.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You can see the big picture, and can think of ways to make your fantasies come true. Today's new moon might light up your thinking processes and signal a growing interest in filling educational gaps.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Amorous activities can be addictive. You might be willing to risk your emotions, your heart or even your cash on something new and different that tweaks your desires. Give yourself time for wise decisions.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You shouldn't swoon during today's new moon. In the rush of enthusiasm for making new connections, you may forget to take time getting to know someone before hopping headlong into a commitment.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Your inner hermit wants to be freed from its cave. You might have fantasies about a person who sits across the table from you at the library. A friendship might grow into something more romantic.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You might flip about taking a trip. Any kind of adventure seems exciting, especially if you have a chance to meet new people with unusual viewpoints. Your fascination with the latest fads can be frantic.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Surprises are in store if you pop someone's balloon. Today's new moon might gradually illuminate your career objectives and reputation during the upcoming month. Do nothing to jeopardize success.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): With Venus retrograde during the past several weeks, you may have stepped back from social interchanges into a more detached space where you see new acquaintances as a mere means to an end.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Deep emotions surface, but like Moby-Dick appearing from out of the wild blue seas, there may be other issues to resolve. You might be just as obsessed by revenge as by a desire for ownership.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Out of the darkness comes the dawn. This new moon falls in your opposite sign and might bring intimate relationships center stage during the next few weeks. Learn who has your back.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): It is difficult to choose sides on a round planet. The new moon might temporarily turn your attention to minor issues at work, but it is the big changes looming on the horizon that need your skills.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Once bills are paid, you might feel freer to splurge on a treat or two. The thing is you don't seem to know how to stick to the middle road or to contain your enthusiasms. Put a lid on extravaganzas.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Put a shine on the apple. With a new moon in the heavens, it might be a good time to start thinking about currying favor with teachers or other authority figures. Small gifts might look better than they are.

Prostitution-related Charges Dismissed for Lack of Evidence

BY ALISON GENE SMITH
alismith@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • Charges against two Twin Falls residents who were accused of prostitution-related crimes were dismissed by a judge during a preliminary hearing on Friday.

Twin Falls County 5th District Magistrate Judge R. Michael Redman ruled prosecutors did not present enough evidence to show probable cause that a crime had happened.

Twin Falls County Prosecutor Grant Loebs said he will likely re-file the charges against Christopher Teague, 45, and Stormie Todd, 20.

Todd and Teague were originally charged with procuring a person for prostitution, sometimes known as "pimping."

Twin Falls Police Officer Clinton Doerr testified about the night of the arrest. He said he reviewed a website where Todd and another woman, Randa Stone, were allegedly advertised as escorts. When he arrived at the Apollo Motor Inn for the arrest,

"A number of the rulings were unexpected. We will look and consider the comments the court made. If we agree with them we'll figure out a way to deal with the problem. If we disagree, we'll try to persuade them we're right."

Grant Loebs, Twin Falls County Prosecutor

Doerr said he recognized Todd from her picture on the site, and he recognized her tattoo and lingerie from photos on the website.

He also testified that when a phone number on the website was called, a cellphone in Teague's motel room rang.

After questions from Todd's defense attorney, Anthony Valdez, Doerr said he didn't know to whom the phone was actually registered.

In an earlier police affidavit, Stone was said to be 19 years old, but in Friday's testimony Stone said she is 29.

During the hearing, Stone said she met Todd about three days before the arrests and told Todd she was looking for work. According to Stone, Todd told her she used to be a stripper and made good money. Todd also told Stone about an online "legal escort service," Stone said.

Stone testified that Todd took pictures of her at the Apollo Motor Inn that were later posted on the website, but Stone said she didn't know who made the page or posted the pictures.

Valdez and Teague's attorney, George Essma, both objected to print-outs of the website being admitted as evidence because they were hearsay and could not be connected to their clients. Redman agreed, saying the words on the website were no different than a billboard.

Chief Deputy Prosecutor Stan Holloway also called Nicole Owens to the stand.

Owens said she worked for Teague from November 2011 to March 2011 doing clerical work at his hot rod parts business.

Holloway asked Owens if clerical work was the only work Teague asked her to do and Valdez objected on the basis that the date of the alleged crime that was the focus of the hearing was two months after Owens stopped working for Teague.

Redman agreed, saying he would allow Owens to testify but would not allow irrelevant testimony. Holloway said he would look into filing a separate case against Teague.

With that, Valdez and Essma moved to have the cases dismissed; Redman agreed.

"You have to establish more than the photo and the cellphone," Redman said.

"A number of the rulings were unexpected," Loebs said. "We will look and consider the comments the court made. If we agree with them we'll figure out a way to deal with the problem. If we disagree, we'll try to persuade them we're right."
