U.S. Security Increasingly in Hands of Reserve Soldiers

A trend toward more reliance on reserve units reduces costs and expands troops' skills.

BY STEVE KADEL skadel@magicvalley.com

FORT HUNTER LIGGETT, Calif. • U.S. Army reserves will play a larger role in the country's military readiness over the coming years as the federal government tries to cut costs while maintaining strong armed forces.

Col. Bradley Upton, chief of staff for the 91st Training Division at Fort Hunter, said Congress is reducing the number of active duty troops while the number of reserve soldiers is staying the same or declining slightly. He called the 365-daya-year salary for active troops "high overhead" for the government to pay.

Another change the U.S. military is making involves the places where reserve deployment could occur, according to Upton. With the drawdown of troops in Afghanistan, the goal is to be able to respond anywhere in the world, even for non-combat missions.

That's reflected in the type of training reserves receive. Missions of the future might involve establishing water systems in a foreign country, Upton said, but troops will still need the ability to protect themselves.

Meanwhile, National Guard units will be used more often in their own states, especially during natural disasters, he noted.

Walmart Manager Gets Six Months for Stealing Cash

TWIN FALLS • A strange theft and a strange crime: That's how Deputy Twin Falls County Prosecutor Rosemary Emory described what Patrick Dee Howard did on Dec. 11.

Howard, 29, was an assistant manager at the Twin Falls Walmart when he took $109,000 out of the store's safe, traveled to Salt Lake City then flew to Orlando, Fla. with the cash in a suitcase. He was sentenced Monday to spend six months in jail along with five years of probation in Twin Falls County 5th District Court.

WATCH video from Monday's hearing at Magicvalley.com.

Anthony Valdez.

Valdez said that while Howard did steal the money and spent $2,401 of it, he didn't act like a Howard tried to leave the plane – abandoning the cash aboard it.

Once he arrived in Florida, he got into contact with Walmart's regional loss prevention manager and his family and worked to take the money to a Florida Walmart.

Both Valdez and Emory said other Walmart employees who were interviewed were shocked at Howard's actions. "Certainly Walmart was harmed," Valdez said, but the people he spoke to personally didn't seem victimized. "They were concerned for Pat's wellbeing," he said. Before 5th District Judge Eric Wildman gave his sentence, Howard apologized to Walmart, the court and his family. "It's been extremely trying to Howard my family and they didn't do anything to deserve that," he said.

Valdez argued against Howard receiving six months in jail and in favor of going straight to probation, since his client is just gaining momentum in his job search, he said.

Wildman imposed the jail time, saying anything less would

T.F. to Buy Generator for Water Pumps

The $150,000 purchase is a direct response to this month's water crisis.

"This ranks right up there in the most unusual cases I've had to defend or have to deal with," said Howard's attorney, real thief.

Howard was off his regular regimen of antidepressants and anti-anxiety medication and was not himself the day he stole the money, Valdez said.

"It's clear to me there was some diminished mental capacity" he said.

Howard put the cash in a suitcase and then checked the bag, Valdez told the court. Once the plane stopped in Denver, depreciate the serious nature of the crime. Howard also must pay $5,500 for the cost of transporting him back from Florida. Should Howard violate his probation, the underlying prison sentence is two to nine years.

After the hearing, Valdez said he thought the probation was a fair outcome.

"A lot of people thought this was going to be a prison case," he said.

DOG LOST IN SEMI CRASH RETURNS HOME

TWIN FALLS • William Moriarty lost a lot in a mid-June crash: his truck, his job, his two dogs.

But last week provided a bittersweet ending to the story, when the Oregon resident was reunited with Rosie, one of the dogs who was riding with him when he got into the accident.

In mid-June, Moriarty crashed his semitrailer while reaching for a spilling drink. The semi's cab was soon engulfed in flames, killing his 1year-old Chihuahua. While Moriarty and Rosie were able to escape, the spooked dog took off running. Moriarty was charged with inattentive driving and was fired from his job.

But he held out hope for finding Rosie, and asked for Magic Valley residents' help.

Last week, a Jerome family came across Rosie, and Moriarty returned to Idaho to pick her up.

Though the dog has singed whiskers, injured paws and has lost a few pounds, "she's doing good," Moriarty said.

The two returned home on Monday afternoon.

TWIN FALLS • One crisis was enough.

On Monday, the Twin Falls City Council approved the purchase of a backup generator for the Blue Lakes water facility.

The approximately $150,000 generator is a direct response to the water crisis earlier in the month — when a power outage knocked out the city's water pumps, dropping Twin Falls' water levels to critically low levels and shutting down industry in the city for the day.

Public Works Director Jon Caton said the generator would power all four pumps at the Blue Lakes facility during an outage.

CSI Urges Students to Finish GED Tests Soon

BY JULIE WOOTTON jwootton@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • Erica Stirling was worried about going back to school to earn a high school equivalency certificate and thought she'd fail.

But she proved herself wrong by passing the five General Educational Development tests.

"The tests are hard, but they're not impossible," she said.

Stirling dropped out of high school as a 15-yearold. Now, at age 30, she's continuing her education this fall at the College of Southern Idaho and plans to earn a criminal justice degree.

For area residents who want to finish their high school education, now's the time to act.

"If anyone is thinking about it, do it now and not later," said Julie Jones, CSI's GED chief examiner.

Changes to the GED tests are coming in 2014. With about 18 months until the new tests take effect, Jones urges students who have started the process to finish up soon.

Under the nationwide changes, scores won't count if students haven't finished all five tests before Jan. 1, 2014.

New GED tests, Jones said, will be more rigorous. Tests will also be computer-based - a change fromthe current pencil and paper format.

Jones said the new format could be a challenge for some older test-takers who struggle with computer skills.

"Sometimes, it's intimidating for someone who's not computer-savvy," she said.

The timetable for completing all five tests varies for each student. Some take a few tests, but hold off on the others for years.

Other students take all the tests in one day. Jones said she doesn't recommend that approach since it means more than seven hours of testing.

Most of the time, students choose to take one or two tests at a time. And it's common for students to put off the math test for a while.

Stirling said the science and social studies tests weren't horrible, but there was a lot to learn for the math section.

"The math was a challenge," she said.

Melissa Bracken is working toward her high school equivalency certificate and just passed the reading GED test. Her goal is to pass the other four tests in time to enroll in CSI classes this fall.

Bracken said adult basic education classes are helpful in getting ready for the GED tests.

"I was nervous going into (the tests), but not as much as if I hadn't taken the classes," she said.

CSI offers free, no-credit classes to help students brush up on their skills.

Jones said those who have been out of school for a while usually need to take classes in order to prepare for the GED tests, but it's not a requirement.

Stirling – who finished the GED tests in May said adult basic education teachers were helpful and encouraging.

She decided to go back to school after her fourthgrader came home with algebra math problems and she didn't know how to help him.

"I felt horrible as a parent," Stirling said.

Preparing for the GED tests meant sacrificing home life and doing "tons of homework." Stirling said she also pushed herself beyond teachers' expectations.

Four Arrested on Prostitution Charges

TWIN FALLS • Four people were arrested Saturday on prostitution-related charges after police were called to a Twin Falls hotel.

Just before 1:30 p.m. Saturday, officers went to the Holiday Inn Express at 1554 Fillmore Street after managers said they wanted a suspicious group of people kicked out of the hotel, Lt. Craig Stotts with Twin Falls Police said.

According to court documents, hotel employees believed Charles Wesley Crockett, 28, was running a prostitution business out of his hotel room.

"There was a lot of activity coming and going from the room," Stotts said.

City, Boys and Girls Club Consider Rec Center Partnership

TWIN FALLS • A Twin Falls city recreation center is inching closer to reality.

The Boys and Girls Clubs of Magic Valley has expressed interest in forming a partnership with the city to operate a proposed city recreation center, Parks and Recreation Director Dennis Bowyer said Monday.

In January, the Twin Falls City Council directed the Parks and Recreation Department to begin putting together more specific plans for a rec center, such as square-footage estimates and how to fund construction and operation. Council members also told Bowyer they didn't want to see the rec center lead to increased taxes.

court documents.

According to the affidavit, Monk told police Crockett paid for the ad and drove them over the Oregon/Idaho state line.

"He brought them to Twin Falls from Oregon with the intent to work as prostitutes," the affidavit states. Monk told police the plan was to stay for a few days then move to another city.

The report also states Monk told police the ad was intended to attract local men to the hotel for sex - charging $150 for a half hour and $200 for a full hour.

Crockett was charged with interstate trafficking in prostitutes and possession of marijuana and held on $100,000 bond at the Twin Falls County Jail. Monk and Hammond were charged with prostitution, posted bond and were released. Crockett is scheduled for a July 6 preliminary hearing. Court dates have not been set for the two women or Haux.

would require motorists to slow to a safe speed when approaching or overtaking a cyclist or pedestrian. It also outlines other proposed precautions, including the motorists changing lanes if possible or moving to the far left of their lane. Motorists unable to move over or pass safely would have to slow down and wait behind the cyclist until it was safe to pass. And, it would become illegal to throw objects at cyclists or pedestrians. Those in violation would pay a fine of up to $500. A violation resulting in a collision causing death or injury would be subject to a $1,000 fine and imprisonment for up to six months. "Some people oppose this because they believe there too many laws already on the books," Schenk said. "And if people just used common sense, maybe it wouldn't be necessary." Minidoka County Prosecutor Lance Stevenson said he would review the draft. As a prosecutor, he said, he always looks at legislation to see if it minimizes laws that are already in place. "I think it's an excellent thing that you're doing, especially since there are more and more bikers on the roads," he told Schenk.

During discussion, council members asked why there were no generators at the Canyon Springs water facility, which pumps the water out of the canyon and into the city. If an outage were to knock out power at both facilities, generators at Blue Lakes alone wouldn't help.

But the city can't prepare for every possible disaster, said Councilman Shawn Barigar.

"We can't mitigate every possible what-might-happen at the expense of the taxpayers to plop generators all over town.... at $150,000 or more," Barigar said.

RED CROSS NEEDS BLOOD DONORS

TIMES-NEWS

SALT LAKE CITY • The American Red Cross' blood supply has reached emergency levels, with 50,000 fewer donations in June than expected.

The shortfall leaves the Red Cross with only half of the blood products on hand now that it had at this time last year.

The Red Cross is calling on all eligible blood donors to give as soon as possible. All blood types are needed - but especially O positive, O negative, B negative and A negative - to meet patient needs this summer.

An unseasonably early start to spring may be a contributing factor to this year's decrease in donations, according to the Red Cross. Many regular donors got an early start on summer activities and aren't taking time to give blood or platelets.

Also, this year's midweek July 4 holiday has reduced the number of scheduled Red Cross blood drives. Many sponsors are unable to host because employees are taking extended vacations.

Call 800-733-2767 or visit redcrossblood.org to make an appointment or for more information.

A blood donor card or driver's license, or two other forms of identification are required at check-in.

Individuals who are 17 years old, weigh at least 110 pounds and are in generally good health may be eligible to donate blood.

Ed. Board Revises College Plan

IDAHO FALLS • The Idaho State Board of Education has revised a state plan aimed at improving college graduation rates.

Complete College Idaho is the state's blueprint to get 60 percent of Idahoans ages 25 to 34 a postsecondary degree or certificate by 2020.

The plan aligns with the Governor's Project 60 to grow the state's gross domestic product to $60 billion, according to a press release. It also lines up with the Idaho Global Entrepreneurial Mission initiative to foster innovation and spur economic activity. Initiatives specified in the plan include improving access to higher education, reforming remediation at the college level, and new approaches to programs to decrease the amount of time it takes for students to complete college.

Fireworks Group Falls Short of Goal

BY MELISSA DAVLIN

mdavlin@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • The show must go on - even if it's shorter than anticipated.

As of Monday, the Magic Valley Citizens Fourth of July had raised only $18,000, well short of its original goal of $40,000. With the anticipated $2,000 from upcoming fundraisers, that means Twin Falls will get a 20minute fireworks show on Independence Day.

Peggy Kidd, one of the organizers of the show, said in May that the group was aiming for $40,000, but would settle for $30,000.

On Monday, Kidd said the group was forced to lower that number even further after failing to raise enough money.

Each minute of a fireworks show costs about $1,000, according to Kidd.

The money comes from reserve funds, fundraising events, contributions from the city of Twin Falls, pledges from businesses and donations from private citizens.

Kidd said Twin Falls residents are happy that the show won't be cancelled, though she had hoped to get more donations.

"I think they don't understand the cost behind it," she said Monday.

The fireworks show starts at about 10 p.m. July 4 at the College of Southern Idaho.

"They refer to themselves as the governor's 911 force," Upton said.

Staff Sgt. Robert Van Tuinen believes reservists made a name for themselves over the past 10 to 15 years, showing they can handle bigger assignments.

"The reserves are going to become a big part of the fighting force because we have proved our worth," he said.

The shift toward greater reliance on reserve military units can't happen without support of private industry. Brig. Gen. James Cook said employers have been "accommodating and understanding" of those troops' need to be away from civilian jobs for training or deployment.

There are two big reasons reservists are attrac tive to military leaders, as well as to Congress. Because they are not employed 365 days a year, the cost to maintain a battleready reserve force is much lower than to keep active troops prepared for deployment, Cook said.

Also, reservists bring skills from their civilian jobs that full-time troops usually don't have, he added. That's especially true in the medical field.

Reservists train one weekend per month with their local unit and spend two to three weeks during the summer at Fort Hunter Liggett, where war situations are simulated as closely as possible in a series of field exercises.

"This is a premier training site," Cook said. "We put as much realism into it as we can. There are several different types of contact with the enemy."

Besides having a live opposing force to interact with soldiers, others act as civilian residents of a foreign country, giving another aspect to the training troops receive before going overseas.

The exercises are tailored to the needs of troops under unit commanders around the United States and are planned two years in advance. Fort Liggett's 2014 training program for reservists and National Guard members is already being devised.

Former Hearst Property a Fort Showcase

BY STEVE KADEL skadel@magicvalley.com

FORT HUNTER LIGG-ETT, Calif. • The white stucco building with mission-type architecture stands crisply against a blue California sky.

Set on a hill a short distance from the fort's beehive of administrative offices, the Hacienda recalls the days when William Randolph Hearst used it as his Milpitas Ranch headquarters.

Hearst sold the structure and most of the fort's 160,000 acres to the federal government in 1940 so the Army could train troops for combat in World War II. The building is now an overnight lodge open to civilians.

Rumors still persist about the sale of Hearst's property. One of them holds that Hearst used the money to pay an overdue tax bill, according to an article by Staff Sgt. Robert Van Tuinen in the Fir Tree, the fort magazine. That's not true, nor is the rumor that Hearst brought prominent politicians to the ranch to hunt amid the oak-dotted hills. In fact, Hearst didn't allow hunting on the property.

But the Hacienda's association with the legendary media mogul is an attraction for many who enjoy its flower and cactus garden, and a long view to the western horizon. It's the site of weddings and other special events.

Guests can choose from rooms with private bathrooms or "cowboy" rooms that share bathrooms down an outdoor hallway. Both options are surprisingly affordable, given their charm.

A continental breakfast is served from 6:30-9 a.m., but lunch and dinner must be purchased elsewhere. The lodge is walking distance to the PX, where civilians can buy snacks but not alcohol. Hacienda guests also can walk to a bowling alley where pizza and beer are the menu attractions, and even a snack bar with Mexican dishes in addition to hamburgers and fries.

If eating at the latter, don't be startled by the sight of soldiers standing in line with rifles slung over their shoulders. It's part of the ambiance of spending time on a military base.

Don't bother changing the channel on the snack bar's televisions. The two sets are constantly tuned to Fox News, which a public affairs officer said provides the conservative news angle most troops prefer.

While this fort's focus is on training troops for the future, Cook is also concerned about those coming back from war. He began a nonprofit called "The Warrior Water Center" a few years ago with the goal of providing reserves with counseling and other postdeployment treatment.

"The system was slow to respond to these soldiers' needs and the needs of their families," Cook said.

Active duty personnel have had care centers for some time, but the same outlet has been lacking for reserves, he said.

Cook's program uses non-traditional ways of physical and spiritual healing. Water therapy is among the approaches, hence the center's name.

It is intended to tackle problems such as posttraumatic stress disorder, general trauma and even brain injuries.

"It affects how you integrate back into society," he said.

Cook's interest in the well-being of soldiers returning from deployment is authentic, not something done for public relations purposes, many at the fort emphasize.

"He genuinely cares about soldiers," said Capt. Rebecca Murga.

Al-Qaida Trains Norwegian to Attack

Western intelligence officials have long feared such a scenario a convert to Islam trained by Al-Qaida who can blend in easily in the United States and Europe, traveling without visa restrictions.

BY KARL RITTER

Associated Press

STOCKHOLM • A Norwegian man has received terrorist training from al-Qaida's offshoot in Yemen and is awaiting orders to carry out an attack on the West, officials from three European security agencies told The Associated Press on Monday.

Western intelligence officials have long feared such a scenario - a convert to Islam who is trained in terrorist methods and can blend in easily in Europe and the United States, traveling without visa restrictions.

Officials from three European security agencies confirmed Monday the man is "operational," meaning he has completed his training and is about to receive a target. All spoke on condition of anonymity because they were not authorized to discuss the case publicly. They declined to name the man, who has not been accused of a crime.

"We believe he is operational and he is probably about to get his target," one security official said. "And that target is probably in the West?"

A security official in a second European country confirmed the information, adding: "From what I understand, a specific target has not been established."

European security services, including in Norway, have warned in recent years of homegrown, radicalized Muslims traveling to terror training camps in conflict zones. Many of the known cases involve young men with family roots in Muslim countries.

But the latest case involves a man in his 30s with no immigrant background, the officials said. After converting to Islam in 2008, he quickly became radicalized and traveled to Yemen to receive terror training, one of the officials said. The man spent "some months" in Yemen and is still believed to be there, he said.

Tuesday, June 26, 2012 • A5

The official said the man has no criminal record, which would also make him an ideal recruit for al-Qaida.

"Not even a parking ticket," he said. "He's completely clean and he can travel anywhere?"

The official would not specify what preventive measures were being taken but said "there is a well-established relationship between Western security services, and they share the information needed to prevent terrorism."

The officials declined to specify what makes them think the man is operational.

SUPREME COURT RULINGS

High Court Limits State Action on Immigration

State Corporate Campaign Spending Limits Rejected

BY MARK SHERMAN Associated Press

WASHINGTON • The Supreme Court on Monday turned away a plea to revisit its 2-year-old campaign finance decision in the Citizens United case and instead struck down a Montana law limiting corporate campaign spending.

The same five conservative justices in the Citizens United majority that freed corporations and labor unions to spend unlimited amounts in federal elections joined Monday to reverse a Montana court ruling upholding the state's centuryold law. The four liberal justices dissented.

"The question presented in this case is whether the holding of Citizens United applies to the Montana state law. There can be no serious doubt that it does," the court said in an unsigned opinion.

The Citizens United decision paved the way for unlimited spending by corporations and labor unions in elections for Congress and the president, as long as the dollars are independent of the campaigns they are intended to help. The decision, grounded in the freedom of speech, appeared to apply equally to state contests.

But Montana aggressively defended its 1912 law against a challenge from corporations seeking to be free of spending limits, and the state Supreme Court sided with the state. The state court said a history of corruption showed the need for the limits, even as Justice Anthony Kennedy declared in his Citizens United opinion that independent expenditures by corporations "do not give rise to corruption or the appearance of corruption."

In a brief dissent Monday, Justice Stephen Breyer said campaign spending since 2010 "casts grave doubt on the court's supposition that independent expenditures do not corrupt or appear to do so?'

Court Bars Mandatory Life without Parole for Kids

The Supreme Court struck down key provisions of Arizona's crackdown on immigrants Monday but said a much-debated portion on checking suspects' status could go forward.

BY MARK SHERMAN

Associated Press

WASHINGTON • A divided Supreme Court threw out major parts of Arizona's tough crackdown on illegal immigrants Monday in a ruling sure to reverberate through the November elections. The justices unanimously approved the law's most-discussed provision – requiring police to check the immigration status of those they stop for other reasons – but limited the consequences.

Although upholding the "show me your papers" requirement, which some critics say could lead to ethnic profiling, the justices struck down provisions that created state crimes allowing local police to arrest people for federal immigration violations. And they warned against detaining people for any prolonged period merely for not having proper immigration papers.

The mixed outcome vindicated the Obama administration's aggressive challenge to laws passed by Arizona and the five states - Alabama, Georgia, Indiana, South Carolina and Utah that followed its lead in attempting to deal with illegal immigration in the face of federal inaction on comprehensive reform.

The administration had assailed the Arizona law as an unconstitutional intrusion into an area under federal control.

Justice Anthony Kennedy, joined in his majority opinion by conservative Chief Justice John Roberts as well as three liberal justices, said the impasse in Washington over immigration reform did not justify state intrusion.

"Arizona may have understandable frustrations with the problems caused by illegal immigration while that process continues, but the state may not pursue policies that undermine federal law," Kennedy said. That part of the ruling drew a caustic dissent from Justice Antonin Scalia, who said the Obama administration doesn't want to enforce existing immigration law.

A second opinion with potentially important implications for the presidential campaign is expected when the court meets Thursday to issue its final rulings this term. The court's verdict on Obama's landmark health care overhaul probably will come that day.

BY JESSE J. HOLLAND Associated Press

WASHINGTON • The Supreme Court on Monday threw out mandatory life in prison without parole for juveniles. The ruling continued its trend of holding that children cannot be automatically punished the same way as criminal adults without considering their age and other factors.

The 5-4 decision split along ideological lines: The court's four liberals and swing vote Justice Anthony Kennedy joined to order states and the federal government to allow judges and juries to consider a juvenile's age when they hand down sentences for some of the harshest crimes, instead of making life in prison without parole automatic.

By making youth "irrelevant to imposition of that harshest prison sentence, such a scheme poses too great a risk of disproportionate punishment," wrote Justice Elena Kagan, who was joined in the majority opinion by Kennedy and Justices Ruth Bader Ginsburg, Stephen Breyer and Sonia Sotomayor.

Monday's decision left open the possibility that individual judges could sentence juveniles to life without parole in individual cases of murder, but said state and federal laws cannot automatically impose such a sentence.

Final Steel Beam Lifted at 4 World Trade Center

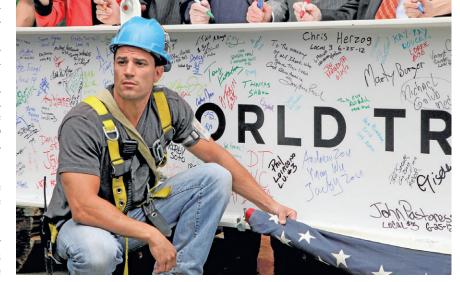

NEW YORK (AP) • A final steel beam was lifted Monday atop a new World Trade Center skyscraper - the first expected to open at the site next year since the twin towers were decimated on 9/11.

With BeBe Winans singing "God Bless America," workers raised their hardhats in tribute as the mammoth beam rose slowly into the Manhattan sky, swaying from a steel rope hoisted by a crane.

A U.S. flag attached to the bottom of the beam fluttered above several hundred spectators at the topping-off ceremony.

Ten years later, it's pretty remarkable," said a teary-eyed Sally Rexach, a nurse who aids workers constructing 4 World Trade Center.

She was at ground zero just after Sept. 11, 2001, supporting workers who combed through the smoking debris in search of human remains.

An ironworker holds a furled American flag as officials autograph the ceremonial last beam before it is hoisted to the top of Four World Trade Center, Monday. The 72-floor, 977-foot tower is scheduled to open late next year. It's expected to be the first tower completed on the 16-acre site since the 9/11 attacks.

Syrian General, Soldiers Defect to Turkey

BEIRUT (AP) • The regime of Syrian President Bashar Assad suffered an embarrassing string of high-ranking defections, with dozens of soldiers, including senior officers, reported to have fled to neighboring Turkey, officials said Monday.

The crisis also deepened in the region when Turkey's deputy prime minister said Syrian forces opened fire on a second Turkish plane that was searching for the wreckage of a jet shot down last week by Damascus.

Turkey said it would push NATO to consider Syria's downing of the Turkish jet as an attack on the whole military alliance, and NATO's governing body is to meet Tuesday to discuss the incident. It's unlikely, however, that the alliance will take armed action against Syria.

Since the Syrian uprising began last year, thousands of soldiers, most of them low-level conscripts, have deserted and joined the rebels. High-level defections appear to be increasing.

According to a Turkish Foreign Ministry official, a brigadier-general defected to Turkey in recent days. If confirmed, it would be one of the highest-level defections. Gen. Mostafa Ahmad al-Sheik, who fled to Turkey in January, was the highest-ranking officer to bolt at the time.

Hawaii OKs Lanai Sale to Ellison; Deal Closes Wed.

HONOLULU • A Hawaii public utilities agency on Monday approved the transfer of three Lanai utilities to Oracle Corp. CEO Larry Ellison, clearing the way for his purchase of most of the island to close this week.

The seller, billionaire David Murdock's Castle & Cooke Inc., asked the Hawaii Public Utilities Commission to approve the transfer quickly so the sale could proceed.

Castle & Cooke declined comment on the approval. Attempts to reach Ellison through Redwood City, Calif.based Oracle by The Associated Press were not immediately successful.

That's similar to how Facebook's online social network allows friends and families to track what's happening in each other's personal lives. The deal, announced Monday, comes nearly two weeks after word of Microsoft's negotiations with Yammer first leaked out in published reports.

U.S. New-home Sales Rose at Fastest Pace in Two Years

The increase suggests a modest recovery in the housing market continues, despite weaker job growth.

BY MARTIN CRUTSINGER Associated Press

WASHINGTON • Americans bought new homes in May at the fastest pace in more than two years. The increase suggests a modest recovery is continuing in the U.S. housing market, despite weaker job growth.

Yet the increase follows other signs that show the housing market is slowly improving nearly five years after the bubble burst.

Builders are gaining confidence in the market and starting to build more homes. Mortgage rates have plunged to the lowest levels on record, making home-buying more affordable. Prices remain low and have started to stabilize. And sales of previously occupied homes are much higher than the same time last year.

Though new homes represent less than 20 percent of the housing market, they have an outsize impact on the econrecords dating back to 1963.

At the current sales pace, it would take 4.7 months to exhaust the May supply. A six-month supply is generally considered healthy by economists.

"With no excess inventory of unsold new homes, any sustained rebound in new home sales should quickly translate into firmer prices," said Steven Wood, chief economist at Insight Economics.

The median price of a new home sold in May edged down 0.6 percent from the April to $234,500. But the median price was 5.6 percent higher than the same month one year ago.

The Commerce Department said Monday that sales of new homes increased 7.6 percent in May from April to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 369,000 homes. That's the best pace since April 2010, the last month that buyers could qualify for a federal homebuying tax credit.

Even with the gains, the annual sales pace is less than half the 700,000 that economists consider to be healthy.

omy. Each home built creates an average of three jobs for a year and generates about $90,000 in tax revenue, according to the National Association of Home Builders.

One reason prices could rise is the supply of new homes for sale remains extremely low. Just 145,000 new homes were for sale in May. That's not much higher than the 144,000 available in April, which was the lowest supply on Builders are responding to the low supply. In May, they requested the most permits to start construction on homes and apartments in three and a half years.

The gains in new homes sold were concentrated in two regions of the country last month. Sales surged 36.7 percent in the Northeast and 12.7 percent in the South. Sales fell 10.6 percent in the Midwest and were down 3.5 percent in the West.

Greece Faces More Woes: Finance Minister Resigns

ELENA BECATOROS

Associated Press

ATHENS, Greece • The banker who was chosen to be Greece's next finance minister resigned for health reasons Monday three days after he was rushed to the hospital, while the country's prime minister was confined to his home, recovering from serious eye surgery.

Greece's debt woes took a backseat to the health problems of the country's fiveday-old government, forcing debt inspectors to postpone a visit to Athens and prompting Germany to warn Monday that a European Union summit later this week would be unlikely to produce any major decisions on Greece.

Prime Minister Antonis Samaras accepted the resignation of Vassilis Rapanos hours after being discharged from another hospital himself following an operation to repair a detached retina over the weekend.

Rapanos, chairman of the National Bank of Greece, had been named finance minister last week in the country's new three-party coalition government but became ill Friday before he could be sworn in. The Hygeia Hospital said his condition was improving and he was expected to be discharged Tuesday, but it did not elaborate on what he was suffering from.

"The recent incident that led to my admission to a hospital shows that my health problem has not been fully overcome," Rapanos said in his letter of resignation, released by Samaras' office. Talks with his doctors led him to determine that "my health situation, for the time being, is not such that would allow me to fully and efficiently exercise my

It was unclear when a replacement would be named. As he had not been sworn in, outgoing Finance Minister Giorgos Zanias, a key negotiator for Greece's international bailout before assuming the post in a one-month caretaker government, still holds the title.

Samaras himself will have to remain at home for several days and will be unable to travel to the EU summit in Brussels on Thursday and Friday, although he can have meetings, doctors said. He spoke by telephone Monday evening with President Barack Obama.

The EU summit comes just a week after Greece's new coalition government was formed, following months of political turmoil and two inconclusive elections. It was to have been a key test of Athens' hopes of renegotiating some of the austerity measures it has agreed to in return for billions of euros in rescue loans from the International Monetary Fund and other nations in the 17-country euro currency union.

Moody's Investor Service on Monday cut its credit ratings on 28 Spanish banks, saying the weakening financial condition of Spain's government is making it more difficult for that country to support its lenders.

The banks are also vulnerable to losses from Spain's busted real estate bubble, Moody's said.

The announcement from Moody's came on the same day that Spain's government formally asked for help from its European neighbors in cleaning up its stricken banking sector. However the request left many questions unanswered, including how much Spain would ask for out of the $125 billion loan package it has been offered.

That uncertainty led to losses Monday in stock markets in Europe and the U.S. Bond investors pushed Spain's borrowing costs higher, a sign of wilting confidence in the country's ability to support its banks.

Wasting Warren Buffet

atching this campaign unfold reaffirms how much it would have benefited from a serious, centrist third-party challenger. It would have been so clarifying to have an independent voice calling out Mitt Romney for running a campaign that consists of decrying the last three and a half years of the Obama presidency, while offering to reinstate the very same failed policies that made the eight years of George W. Bush a disaster that President Barack Obama has spent most of his time cleaning up. And it would have been equally clarifying to have an independent challenger calling out Obama for failing to put a credible, specific economic plan on the table - at the scale of our problem but relying instead on a campaign that amounts to a series of discrete appeals to each of the Democratic Party constituencies. It feels like a ground war with no air cover.

But there will be no third-party candidate, so the only hope is getting Obama to raise his game. To do that, the president needs to recognize just how badly he wasted Warren Buffett – using him for a two-week, wedge-issue sugar high. Obama got Buffett to endorse the "Buffett Rule" - a minimum tax rate of 30 percent for any individual who makes more than $1 million a year so that all millionaires have to pay a higher tax rate than their secretaries. The plan had no chance of passing, would have made only a small dent in the deficit and was rightly decried by experts as a gimmick that only diverted attention from what we really need: comprehensive tax reform that can substantially raise revenue in a fairer manner. The Buffett Rule has largely faded away.

What a waste of Warren Buffett's credibility. Buffett is a businessman out to make a profit. But he is respected by many as a straight-talking nonpartisan someone who can "call the game." What the president should have done is follow the advice of the Princeton University economist and former Fed Vice Chairman Alan Blinder, namely lay out a specific "three-step rehab program for our nation's fiscal policy." Call it the Obama Plan; it should combine a near-term stimulus on job-creating infrastructure, a phase-in, as the economy improves, of "something that resembles the 10-year Simpson-Bowles deficit-reduction plan - which would pay for the stimulus 15-20 times over" and a specific plan to "bend the health care cost-curve downward." Obama has offered the first; he still has not risen to the second, and the third would be an easy extension of his own health care plan.

Obama needs a second look from independents who could determine this election. To attract that second look will require a credible, detailed recovery plan that gets voters to react in three ways: 1) "Now that sounds like it will address the problem, and both parties are going to feel the pain." 2) "That plan seems fair: The rich pay more, but everyone pays something." 3) "Wow, Obama did something hard and risky. He got out ahead of Congress and Romney. That's leadership. I'm giving him a second look.

I'd bet anything that if the president staked out such an Obama Plan, Buffett and a lot of other business leaders would endorse it. It would give the GOP a real problem. After all, what would help Obama more right now: Repeating over and over the Buffett Rule gimmick or campaigning from now to Election Day by starting every stump speech saying: "Folks, I have an economic plan for America's future that Warren Buffett and other serious business leaders endorse - and Mitt Romney doesn't." Obama lovalists often say: "Those Republicans are so bad. They've tried to block us at every turn." Yes, the GOP has tried to stymie Obama; it's been highly destructive. But the people who keep pointing that out don't have an answer for the simplest next question: Why have they gotten away with it? My view: It's because too many Americans in the center-left/center-right do not feel in their guts that Obama is leading - is offering an economic plan at the scale of the problem that has a chance for bipartisan support and that makes them want to get up out of their chairs and do battle. Our situation is different from four years ago; people want to know the president has a plan for getting out of this mess. When the Grand Bargain talks with John Boehner fell apart, Obama retreated to his base when he should have rallied the center by laying out - in detail - the Grand Bargain the country needs. That would have forced Romney to speak in detail about his plan – the Paul Ryan plan - and reveal it for what it is: a radical plan that few Americans would embrace if they understood it. Then people would see a real choice: A tough-minded-but-centrist plan with real bipartisan support versus a radical plan to gut Medicare, give more tax cuts to the wealthy and drastically shrink discretionary spending so eventually nothing is left for education, veterans, roads, research, the FBI or the poor.

By that measure, Jamie Dimon's appearances before the Senate Banking Committee and House Financial Services Committee - in which the JP-Morgan Chase & Co. chief executive officer had to explain how his bank lost more than $2 billion on a poorly executed proprietary trade - mostly didn't disappoint.

What the annual compensation of an average janitor living in Houston has to do with why Dimon allowed his traders to take huge risks with his depositors' money is not at all clear, but the exchange should give you a feel for what the hearings were like, in case you had better things to do. Founding Fathers Would be Considered Extremists Today

The founding fathers were inspired by God to produce a constitutional republic. The Constitution places limitations on government and protects our individual Godgiven right to life, liberty and property. However, today George Washington and other Founding Fathers would be considered rightwing extremists as are constitutionalists today for supporting the original founding fathers' intent of the Constitution.

The 10th Amendment

states, "The powers not delegated to the United States by the Constitution, nor prohibited by it to the States, are reserved to the States respectively, or to the people."

Vladimir Lenin said, "The goal of socialism is Communism. Both have always resulted in slavery and the loss of freedom."

Pro-constitutional roadblocks are a socialist president's executive orders and veto power, a socialist controlled Senate, a very liberal Supreme Court and a huge unelected bureaucracy including the Environmental Protection Agency, which is implementing United Nation's Agenda 21 (sustainable development) unscientific carbon regulations (see www.petitionproject.org), which are destroying our energy production, economy and jobs.

Obamacare must be repealed as it creates a national identification card. Also, death panels for seniors and abortion are included. We have a federally controlled education system where students are indoctrinated with world government and unscientific, radical environmental propaganda. We must stop amnesty for illegal aliens and anchor baby automatic citizenship.

The solution is to stop funding unconstitutional agencies, programs and no-win wars. Eliminate funding for the Departments of Education and Energy, the unscientific EPA, and stop all foreign aid. Get informed by reading "The 5,000 Year Leap" by Cleon Skousen outlining the 28 principles of $free dom {\it in the Constitution}$ and The New American magazine (www.thenewamerican.com).

Elected officials must uphold their constitutional oath to limit government and protect us from enemies, foreign and domestic or be replaced. We must get out of the world government United Nations by passing H.R. 1146.

ONLINE COMMENTS

Several Magicvalley.com readers commented on the "Letter to the Editor: Savior's Name Used Irreverently in 'Beans and Rice' Headline." The conversation continues online: Ramsey: "It's not the newspaper's job to not offend you. When you were born, you were never promised or given the "right to not be offended." The easiest way to deal with being offended is not read, look at, or listen to the offending "item."

N0!!

WhiskeyIndianNovember: "Ramsey, it is perfectly hyp ocritical of someone like you to tell a Christian they don't have the right to be offended at what they believe is the improper use of the Lord's name. God-hating atheists such as yourself have been working night and day for decades to eradicate ANY public mention or symbol of Christianity just because it "offends" them, it would seem to me that said God hating atheists should just look somewhere else like you said, but apparently you and your ilk live under the impression you do indeed have the right to not be offended by Christian symbols and memorials. You have no business looking down your nose at Christians that essentially do the same thing you do."

bobandjen: "Our Savior's name is not Jesus Christ; It's Yeshua in Hebrew.

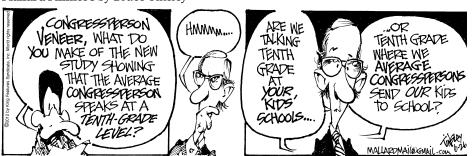

Jesus is a transliterated version meaning "of Zeus." This is where the Greeks were no help in going from Hebrew to Greek. Then from Greek to English really throws it down the drain. Yeshua or Yeshua ha maschiac (Jesus Christ) is his name. Otherwise George, Bill or Sue would work in our culture. We must return to the roots of our faith and not trust the traditions of man."

Having More Retirement Accounts Is Not The Same As Having More Money.

When it comes to the number of retirement accounts you have, the saying "more is better" is not necessarily true. In fact, if you hold multiple accounts with various brokers, it can be difficult to keep track of your investments and to see if you're properly diversified.* At the very least, multiple accounts usually mean multiple fees.

Bringing your accounts to Edward Jones could help solve all that. Plus, one statement can make it easier to see if you're moving toward your goals.

* Diversification does not guarantee a profit or protect against loss

To learn why consolidating your retirement accounts to Edward Jones makes sense, call your local financial advisor today.

Drunken Driver Must Pay for Pants, Not Police Car

BY JOHN MILLER Associated Press

BOISE • A recalcitrant drunken driver must pay $68 to replace pants that a Boise police officer ripped during a foot chase, but the Idaho Court of Appeals ruled the man doesn't have to fork over another $1,089 for damage to a patrol car that hit his dog.

Raymond Stuart Nienburg of Boise has been taken into custody for drunken driving eight times. The latest arrest came on Sept. 1, 2010, and he later pleaded guilty and was sent to prison for up to 15 years.

Fourth District Court Judge Cheri C. Copsey also ordered him to pay $1,156.98 the cost of the trooper's trousers and fixing the damaged cruiser.

The Court of Appeals decided Friday that Nienburg never agreed to pay the full amount and that the damage to the patrol car was caused by Nienburg resisting arrest, a separate charge the district court agreed to dismiss in exchange for his guilty plea to felony drunken driving.

Nienburg, 50, has drinking and driving arrests dating back more than 15 years.

Police in Idaho's capital said Nienburg was driving irregularly nearly two years ago when an officer signaled him to pull to the side of the road. After stopping, Nienburg allegedly decided to make a break for it, and the officer ripped his pants during the short pursuit that followed.

Back on the road, Nienburg's dog also decided to make a break for it. A responding backup officer struck the dog with his cruiser, killing the animal and damaging the vehicle, according to court documents.

As part of a plea agreement, Nienburg's defense lawyer agreed his client would pay restitution not to exceed $1,156.98 but was free to argue for less. At sentencing, Nienburg agreed to pay the $68 for the pants but balked at paying for the damaged cruiser.

Judge Copsey insisted Nienburg pay the full amount, suggesting that balking would threaten the plea agreement. Nienburg agreed to the deal and later appealed.

Lawyers for the Idaho attorney general's office who handled the appeal conceded damage to the police car was the result of the resisting arrest charge that was dismissed but insisted Nienburg should still be forced to pay the full $1,156.98 because he'd agreed to the deal in Copsey's courtroom.

After reviewing transcripts from the original proceedings, however, the appeals judges sided with Nienburg.

"The state would have us read into the agreement words of promise or consent by Nienburg that simply are not there," Judge Karen Lansing wrote.

OBITUARIES

Elizabeth (Betty) Jean Prewitt

Sept. 15, 1924-June 18, 2012

TWIN FALLS • Elizabeth Jean Prewitt, 87, of Twin Falls, Idaho, passed away Monday evening, June 18, 2012, at BridgeView Estates in Twin Falls after a long and courageous battle with Parkinson's disease and related complications.

In the end, it was pneumonia that released her from her exhaustive struggle and allowed her to receive the blessings of heaven that she so richly deserves.

Betty was born Sept. 15, 1924, the first of six children born to Arthur Edward and Ruth Tuggy Harris, in Riverside, Calif. She grew up in Riverside and graduated from Riverside Poly High School in 1942. She met her life partner and best friend at the First Presbyterian United Church in Riverside, and she and Ora George Prewitt were married there on Aug. 3, 1945, when George returned from serving his country in World War II. Betty and George were blessed with two children, a daughter, Margaret (Peggy) Seigworth Schroeder; and a son, George Thomas (Tom) Prewitt. Betty was a homemaker and, while her children were growing up, she was very involved in Victoria United Presbyterian Church in Riverside. She sang in the church choir for many years, led the Junior Choir for several vears, served as church secretary for a few years, and worked on many committees and in many capacities. She loved music, especially the old hymns. In 1972, Betty and George realized their dream of living in the mountains and moved to Rimforest in the San Bernardino Mountains. Betty loved the beauty of the mountains and enjoyed gardening, reading, crossword puzzles, and involvement along with George in the Arrowhead Fish and Game Gun Club, where they made many lifelong friends. In 1990, Betty and George moved to Twin Falls, Idaho, to be closer to their daughter. They enjoyed camping and exploring Idaho, and spent many winters volunteering at the Salton Sea State Park in southern California, where they also enjoyed many wonderful friends. In her later years, Betty's grandchildren and great-grandchildren were her greatest joy.

Each one was very special and precious to her. Betty was a beautiful and unselfish person who handled her debilitating illness with strength and grace and never complained. She was deeply loved by her family and will be sadly missed, but she will live on in our hearts and memories forever.

Betty is survived by her loving and devoted husband of nearly 67 years, George Prewitt; her daughter, Peggy (Mike) Schroeder of Twin Falls, Idaho; and her son, Tom (Geri) Prewitt of Riverside, Calif. Her grandchildren are Scott (Robyn) Seigworth and Matt Seigworth of Twin Falls, and Raleigh (Amy) Prewitt, Michael (Rebekah) Prewitt and Mackenzie Prewitt of Riverside, Calif. Her great-grandchildren are Bayley Seigworth, Ali Moore and Kylar Moore of Twin Falls, and triplets Michael, Haleigh and Rhiannon Prewitt of Riverside, Calif. She is also survived by one sister, Rachel Carnahan of Sublimity, Ore.; and two brothers, Ernie (Phyllis) Harris of La Mesa, Calif., and Roy (Jimmie) Harris of Hendersonville, N.C.; as well as many nieces and nephews. She was preceded in death by her parents; sister, Dorothy; and sister and brother-in-law, Jerry and Dale Stewart of Hemet, Calif. A memorial service for Betty will be held at Parke's Magic Valley Funeral Home at 1 p.m. Monday, June 25.

Merla O. Bell

Sept. 9, 1926-June 24, 2012

ALBION • Merla Ocea Coltrin Bell, 85, of Albion, passed away peacefully at her home Sunday, June 24, 2012.

Merla was born Sept. 9, 1926, in Provo, Utah, to Ira Hugh and Ocea Lewis Coltrin. She was the fifth of eight children, with two older brothers, two older sisters and three younger brothers. She spent her growing up years in Burley. Merla graduated from Burley High School and attended Albion State Normal School. While at the normal school, she met a young Albion man who stole her heart. She married this young man, Leo Russell Bell, on Nov. 15, 1945, in the Salt Lake LDS Temple, where they were sealed for time and all eternity. After she and Leo were married, they lived in Albion for a bit and then moved to Malta where Leo farmed his brother's farm for a few years. Leo had to buy Merla a piano (which has a place of honor in the family home to this day) in order to get her to agree to move to Malta. In 1951, Merla and Leo bought the farm in Albion and began a long-term life of raising the five kids, the crops, and the cattle. Merla was a super substitute teacher and post office worker. She drove many a harvest truck in the fall. She was a cook at the Albion Senior Citizen's Center for many years. But the job she was the very best at was being Leo's right-hand man on the farm and ranch and raising her five wonderful children. Merla was an active member of the LDS Church. She was the ward's only pianist and organist for many years. She served in the Primary, Relief Society and Young Women presidencies, taught many wonderful lessons in all those organizations and planned many memorable activities. Of all her church callings, she loved being the pianist in Primary the very best. She and Leo also enjoyed being the Raft River Stake dance directors for two years. Square dancing was one of Merla and Leo's favorite things to do together. Merla designed and sewed all their matching outfits; she was the "Bell" of the ball. She could sew anything and did so for her family and friends. She played many musical instruments and taught many,

Lewiston Officials Crack Down on Illegal Fireworks

LEWISTON (AP) • Authorities in Lewiston are getting ready to crack down on Independence Day revelers who choose to celebrate with fireworks deemed illegal under city rules. Over the next week, city police officers and firefighters have been told to confiscate and issue citations to people in possession of contraband pyrotechnics. The city has also imposed stiffer penalties for offenders and has launched an education campaign to let citizens know what's acceptable during the 2012 holiday season.

"Illegal fireworks will be confiscated and citations will be issued, but it's going to be a case-by-case basis," police Chief Steven Orr told the Lewiston Tribune in a story published Monday.

Orr said the goal of the education campaign and enforcement is aimed at changing the culture in the community.

Under the new rules, anyone caught with illegal fireworks can face fines up to $300 and up to six months in the county jail.

Sale of legal fireworks within the Lewiston city limits is restricted to 9 a.m. to 11 p.m. June 28 through July 5 and only with a business license. The only legal fireworks are defined as "nonaerial," such as fountains, ground spinners, sparklers and smoke devices.

TIMES-NEWS

Firecrackers or other products designed to travel beyond a 15-foot circle, emit sparks or burning debris outside a 20-foot circle fall into the aerial category of banned products, according to city rules.

City leaders began debating restrictions on fireworks in 2007 when fireworks were blamed for sparking a $65,000 fire at the Vineyard Apartments that left four families temporarily homeless.

But the burning of Grace Lutheran Church, with five people sleeping inside, on July 4 last year prompted the city to act. Nobody was injured in the fire, but the church suffered an estimated $800,000 in damage from a fire blamed on a bottle rocket that was found embedded between two roof shingles.

The bottle rocket that caused the damage will become part of a permanent display when the church eventually reopens.

"I'm sure whoever shot off that bottle rocket had no clue anything like that would happen, and in fact they may not know they were responsible," said Peggy Harvey-Marose, pastor of Grace Lutheran Church. "The fire inspector said it probably smoldered for several hours before it burst into flames."

Merla is survived by her husband, Leo Russell Bell of Albion; her children, Deidre (Vic) Warr of Boise, Laura Lee (Mike) Archibald of Buhl, David (Shari) Bell of Albion, Doris Elaine (Mike) Ricks of Idaho Falls and Dona Bell of Pocatello; 17 grandchildren; 19 great-grandchildren; and three brothers, Ira Coltrin and Horace (Jean) Coltrin, all of Burley, and Gene (Emma) Coltrin of Tucson, Ariz. She was preceded in death by her parents; two brothers; two sisters; two grandsons, Michael and Jeffrey Archibald; and one granddaughter, Jana Bell Thornton.

The funeral will be held at 11 a.m. Thursday, June 28, at the Albion LDS Church, with Bishop Randy Brackenbury officiating. Burial will be in the Mormon Cemetery. BOISE (AP) • An Idaho judge says the heirs of artist James Castle are the rightful owners of drawings found in the attic of his former home.

The Idaho Statesman reports 4th District Judge Deborah Bail ruled Friday that Jeannie Schmidt of Boise must turn over the art she found in her home along with $120,000 she received from selling three pieces while the ownership was being disputed.

Bail's ruling says under Idaho law, identifiable mislaid property belongs to the owner or his heirs.

Castle's descendants sued Schmidt for about 150 pieces of art and 30 books Castle hid as early as the 1930s.

Schmidt argued Castle's nieces told her any artwork she found was hers when she bought the house in 1996.

Castle's drawings were made with a sharpened stick dipped in soot and saliva.

Children Injured in Mountain Crash

POCATELLO (AP) • Officials in southeastern Idaho say two children were seriously injured when a pickup being readied for mechanical repairs rolled down a mountain east of Pocatello.

Bannock County Sheriff's Deputy John Underwood says the children were with three adults driving in the mountains Sunday afternoon when a vacuum hose failed in the pickup.

The Idaho State Journal reports the adults were putting the pickup onto blocks to make repairs when it started to roll downhill.

Underwood says an 11-year-old child is believed to have suffered a broken collar bone while a 3-year-old is believed to have suffered internal injuries when he was thrown from the cab of the pickup after a tree tore off one of the doors. Both were being treated at Portneuf Medical Center in Pocatello.

Five-time champ will play on the same courts in Olympics, but little about her game suggests it will get better any time soon.

WIMBLEDON, England • Racket bag slung over her shoulder, resignation written across her face, Venus Williams weaved through fans milling about on the sidewalks that players must traverse to get from Court 2 to the Wimbledon locker rooms.

The 32-year-old Williams had just absorbed a lopsided firstround loss at the Grand Slam tournament she once ruled, a poor performance that raised questions about how much longer she will keep playing tennis while dealing with an energy-sapping illness.

She trudged by as her hitting partner, David Witt, was saying: "It's tough to watch sometimes. I think everybody sees it. I don't know what else to say."

Looking lethargic, and rarely showing off the power-based game that carried her to five Wimbledon titles and seven majors overall, Williams departed meekly Monday with a 6-1, 6-3 defeat against 79th-ranked Elena Vesnina of Russia. Only once before – as a teenager making her Wimbledon debut in 1997 - had Williams exited so early at the All England Club.

She hadn't lost in the first round at any Grand Slam tournament in 61/2 years. Still, Williams said she'll be at the London Olympics next month and is "planning" to be back at Wimbledon next year.

"I feel like I'm a great player," Williams said, sounding a tad like someone trying to convince herself.

She repeated that affirmation as she continued: "I am a great player. Unfortunately, I had to deal with circumstances that people don't normally have to deal with in this sport. But I can't be discouraged by that.... There's no way I'm just going to sit down and give up just because I have a hard time the first five or six freakin' tournaments back."

Later, as part of a slightly testy and awkward exchange with reporters, Williams said:

Her loss, in her first match since a second-round ouster at the French Open, was part of an odd Day 1, even if the true tournament favorites in action won easily: Novak Djokovic, Roger Federer, Maria Please see WIMBLEDON, S2

home to Corona, Calif., the Schatz crew surprised Allan. "You're going for a ride in

No. 9," Craig Andrus told his father.

Allan's eyes welled with tears. "Best boat on the course," he said.

Indeed, it is. Scott Schatz wrapped up the American Powerboat Association national championship of the Cracker Box class in P-9 Miss Suncoast at the Idaho Regatta this weekend.

Down at the boat ramp, Allan Andrus stood from his wheelchair on wobbly legs and steadied himself with a cane. They fitted him with a lifejacket and helmet, and then three people helped lift him into the boat.

"He's got a jet boat a home and we do a lot of fishing," Craig Andrus said. "He loves to go fast in the jet boat. He can't drive it, but we take him out for rides. He just loves to come up to these races. We were watching the races yesterday and (Allan) was saying how cool it was and I thought, 'Gosh, I wish I could get him a ride.' We arranged it and surprised him with it today."

But the surprises didn't end there. What good is a ride in a race boat if there is no one to race? The Schatz crew surprised Craig with a ride in P-92 Evolution with driver Mike Schatz, so that father and son could experience the thrill together.

It was hard to tell which Andrus enjoyed it more.

"I said, 'Oh hell yes.' It was awesome. Unbelievable," said Craig Andrus.

"Our whole family likes speed," Allan Andrus said. "We like to go fast."

the Western. The parks are small and look quite like the Buhl High School field, and most have about four sets of bleachers that hold around 10 people apiece. At least the ones I have experienced so far.

There are only two parks in the Cape that have lights, so we have to play a bit earlier so the night won't affect us.

So far about half the fans are Major League scouts, and the whole game is dead quiet because most of the fans at the game are on vacation and just came to enjoy the game. Honestly, it feels like Babe Ruth baseball, so I now understand why every player loves playing out here. You just go out there with no pressure, show off your talent and play the game of baseball and have fun.

ball and have run. Surrounded by the country's best talent makes it even more fun. There are kids from the University of Washington, our rival, and are the ones

how far the league goes to get the best talent. Getting to know the team and going to the beach on off days and playing putt-putt golf with the guys makes this place a place to really enjoy and make memories.

It's very easy to get lost on the Cape. There are roads that go every which way and they all seem to look exactly the same with the thick trees and bushes to both sides of the road. Memorizing my way around was a bit tough at first.

The Cape is very different then southern Idaho. It is very humid and has way more trees, no farms or mountians and the people I try to wave at usually don't wave back, but some are starting to wave back a little more. We laugh to ourselves when we get someone to finally wave. But the people here seem to be very nice and from other parts of the East Coast.

Most just come to their summer homes to enjoy the beach and the sun, and there really isn't really many stores or outlets for people to shop at, no Wal-Marts, no malls, just family-owned businesses and markets that makes things a little spendy. My small ice cream cone today from Katy's ice cream down the road from our house was five bucks.

These people sure do love their baseball. If you tell someone that your a Cape Cod baseball player, boy, they will do anything for you, and after being in Vermont last summer I got used to signing autographs for every person I ran into.

These kids on the team and people out here think it's a rare occasion when you find someone from Idaho come roaming around. They love asking potato questions and the usual "Do you have electricity or running water over there yet?" which makes me shake my head and laugh.

The Cape is a nice easygoing kind of place, everyone is here to have some peace and quiet and to enjoy the game of baseball. The nights on the Cape are the best part, peaceful and quiet and the stars are usually out. That said, they aren't nearly as good as they are in Idaho, it usually cools down so you can sleep and there is always a Sharapova. Among those sent home were sixthseeded Tomas Berdych, the 2010 runner-up at Wimbledon; 11th-seeded John Isner; No. 16 Flavia Pennetta; and No. 18 Jelena Jankovic, who was rather easily beaten 6-2, 6-4 by Kim Clijsters, a four-time major champion who has been beset by injuries in her last season on tour and, like Williams, is unseeded.

Other seeded losers: No. 23 Andreas Seppi, No. 24 Marcel Granollers and No. 27 Daniela Hantuchova of Slovakia, who was upset by 100th-ranked Jamie Hampton of the United States 6-4, 7-6 (1).

Truth be told, the biggest surprise might very well have been the way Isner the highest-ranked Ameri-

Then again, there's a pattern here.

It's the third consecutive major tournament that Isner leaves after a five-set loss, including 18-16 at the French Open against 261st-ranked Paul-Henri Mathieu. This from a guy who's best known for winning the longest match in tennis history, 70-68 in the fifth after more than 11 hours, against Nicolas Mahut at Wimbledon in 2010.

"I didn't put my opponent away. I had my chances, and I didn't do it. It's all on me. Was just not great on my part," said the hardware, including state titles in 2005 and 2009. As far as the timing, Frank said he wanted to make the decision as early as possible to allow the new coach time to settle in.

"I'm not sure what route they're going to go (with the new hire)," Frank said. "I definitely think they'll probably keep it in-house since they already have a couple candidates that way."

Frank said he's happy to leave the cupboard full for Minico's next coach. The Spartans will return seven starters, including their top three pitchers, and a talented crop of underclassmen.

"It's a good group. This would be a perfect year to get out because it's going to be a talented team that's going to have a chance to make a run," Frank said. "And it's also a great parent group; the parents that are on right now are really good, so whoever is the new coach will have great parents to work with."

DEAR ABBY: "Pennsville, N.J., Reader" (May 15) complained that her book club members don't always read their current book and want to socialize instead. I can add nothing to your thoughtful answer. Still, her letter troubles me.

As you know, literacy is under siege in America, and many people can't follow the directions on a box of cake mix. Years ago, I heard Margaret Mead speak. She warned us against turning into a "machine-worshipping society," and that is precisely what we have become. It's killing off a part of our brains. We are wired to electronic messaging most of the time, at our peril. Reading serious books helps to reclaim our brains.

Each member of my group has a voice in selecting the book. Most of us do read the monthly selection, and the moderator - friendly but firm - keeps us on track with our discussions. No one ventures too far afield, ever. If someone comes to the meeting and hasn't read the selection, she simply listens and takes notes while the others discuss the designated chapters.

I feel strongly that if anyone wants to socialize instead, he/she should arrange and host their own meetings at home and make it clear that the gathering is a social chat.

- BOOK CLUB MEMBER IN NEW YORK DEAR BOOK CLUB MEMBER: Readers agree that the reading and socializing should be kept separate and were quick to offer solutions to the problem of mixing the two. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: For years, I have led three book groups in three different states. Our monthly meetings are two hours long; the discussions are 60 to 90 minutes. Socializing comes afterward. We choose books by ballot, voting from a list submitted by members. Each member leads discussions on a rotating basis of a book that particularly piques their interest.

If the non-readers of the group mentioned in the letter (who should not be attending a book group just to socialize) were discussion leaders, they WOULD read the book. If they choose to attend without reading, they should remain quiet during the discussion and wait to socialize later. Give those lazy nonreaders a task!

- SERGEANT -AT-ARMSIN SOUTHDAKOTA

DEAR ABBY: I have discovered the joy of audio books. Most of them are classics long out of copyright, but classics are classics because they are GOOD. My local library has a way to access current books by best-selling authors. I get all of these treasures on my cellphone and listen to them no matter where I am or what I'm doing.

Being "too busy" is no longer an excuse for not being well-read. I'll bet the women in that club would get with the program if they were introduced to audio books.

WIRED BOOKWORM. STILLWATER, OKLA. DEAR ABBY: Here's how our club handled the problem of members not reading the books: We started charging $5 for failure to do it. The money is held by our unofficial treasurer, and every summer it is used to pay for meals during our yearly summer outing. It's a simple system that has cut down on people not doing the assigned reading.

-BOOK-CLUBBER.TOO DEAR ABBY: Our group has every member take a turn to host for a month. The leader chooses the book we read and leads the discussion. Once this plan was adopted, several people dropped out. But we have now grown to 18 members and have a waiting list, so we must be doing something right. Sure, there will be books not everyone cares for, but variety is what a book group is all about.

Socializing is fun, but being a member of a book group is about READING.

Today is Tuesday, June 26, the 178th day of 2012. There are 188 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight: On June 26, 1912, Gustav Mahler's Symphony No. 9 in D major premiered in Vienna more than a year after the composer's death; Bruno Walter conducted the Vienna Philharmonic Orchestra.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:

In 1483, Richard III began his reign as King of England (he was crowned the following month at Westminster Abbey).

In 1870, the first section of Atlantic City, N.J.'s Boardwalk was opened to the public.

In 1911, John J. McDermott became the first Americanborn golf player to win the U.S. Open, played in Chicago

In 1936, President Franklin D. Roosevelt was nominated for a second term of office by delegates to the Democratic national convention in Philadelphia.

In 1945, the charter of the United Nations was signed by 50 countries in San Francisco.

In 1948, the Berlin Airlift began in earnest after the Soviet Union cut off land and water routes to the isolated western sector of Berlin.

In 1950, President Harry S. Truman authorized the Air Force and Navy to enter the Korean conflict.

In 1963, President John F. Kennedy visited West Berlin, where he famously declared, "Ich bin ein Berliner" (I am a Berliner).

In 1973, former White House counsel John W. Dean told the Senate Watergate Committee about an "enemies list" kept by the Nixon White House.

In 1987, Supreme Court Justice Lewis F. Powell Jr. announced his retirement, leaving a vacancy that was filled by Anthony M. Kennedy.

In 1988, three people were killed when a new Airbus A320 jetliner carrying more than 130 people crashed into a forest during a demonstration at an air show in Mulhouse, France.

In 1990, President George H.W. Bush went back on his "no-new-taxes" campaign pledge, conceding that tax increases would have to be included in any deficit-reduction package worked out with congressional negotiators.

Ten years ago: The Ninth U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ruled that reciting the Pledge of Allegiance in public schools was unconstitutional because the words "under God" had been inserted by Congress in 1954. (The U.S. Supreme Court overturned the decision in 2004 on a technicality.) The Group of Eight nations, meeting in Canada, announced that Russia would be made a fullfledged member of the elite group. Chinese basketball star Yao Ming was selected first overall by the Houston Rockets in the NBA draft. Five years ago: Conservative commentator Ann Coulter, appearing on MSNBC's "Hardball," got into a verbal fracas with Elizabeth Edwards, who had called into the program to ask Coulter to stop making personal attacks on her husband, Democratic presidential candidate John Edwards. Paris Hilton left the Los Angeles County jail after a bizarre, three-week stay for a probation violation. Fashion designer Liz Claiborne died in New York at age 78. One year ago: New York City's gay pride parade turned into a carnival-like celebration of same-sex marriage as hundreds of thousands of revelers rejoiced at the state's new law giving gay couples the same marital rights as everyone else. In Senegal, hundreds of Muslim protesters descended on a Jehovah's Witness temple and a bar in Dakar, setting the buildings on fire in a rare instance of religious extremism in the normally moderate Islamic republic. Top-ranked Yani Tseng won the LPGA Championship at Locust Hill Country Club in Pittsford, N.Y., by 10 strokes.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE® Bobby Wolff

"A dwarf standing on the shoulders of a giant may see farther than the giant himself." – Robert Burton

The North hand is somewhat difficult to judge after South showed a very strong hand with hearts. The second-round diamond control does not look valuable, so maybe signing off at every turn is a reasonable approach.

As South, of course, you do not know about the wasted high cards opposite. When you bid slam, you'd better make it if you don't want to hear complaints about your overbidding, and your underplaying the hand. What should be your thoughts when the club 10 is led?

The idea here should be to avoid taking the spade finesse if at all possible. On the given layout, your plan should be to endplay West when he has no winning exit card.

After winning the first trick with the club ace, you cross to dummy with the trump nine and ruff the diamond five high. Next, you cash the club king and ruff the club four, eliminating that suit. You proceed to ruff dummy's diamond seven high, which allows you to return to dummy by leading the trump six to dummy's eight. Now comes the key play you will lead the diamond king and discard the spade five from hand.

After West wins this trick with the ace, he has no good return. A spade exit will run to your acequeen, while a fourth round of diamonds will see you ruff in dummy and discard the spade queen from hand. Either way, you make 12 tricks.

ANSWER: Your five-card trump support and outside king make your hand just worth a raise to three hearts, which does not promise all that much. With the same hand but a queen and a jack instead of a king, you might bid four hearts. That call would in essence show a double negative but with trump support.

PREPARING FOR WAR

"They refer to themselves as the governor's 911 force," Upton said.

Staff Sgt. Robert Van Tuinen believes reservists made a name for themselves over the past 10 to 15 years, showing they can handle bigger assignments.

"The reserves are going to become a big part of the fighting force because we have proved our worth," he said.

The shift toward greater reliance on reserve military units can't happen without support of private industry. Brig. Gen. James Cook said employers have been "accommodating and understanding" of those troops' need to be away from civilian jobs for training or deployment.

There are two big reasons reservists are attrac tive to military leaders, as well as to Congress. Because they are not employed 365 days a year, the cost to maintain a battleready reserve force is much lower than to keep active troops prepared for deployment, Cook said.

Also, reservists bring skills from their civilian jobs that full-time troops usually don't have, he added. That's especially true in the medical field.

Reservists train one weekend per month with their local unit and spend two to three weeks during the summer at Fort Hunter Liggett, where war situations are simulated as closely as possible in a series of field exercises.

"This is a premier training site," Cook said. "We put as much realism into it as we can. There are several different types of contact with the enemy."

Besides having a live opposing force to interact with soldiers, others act as civilian residents of a foreign country, giving another aspect to the training troops receive before going overseas.

The exercises are tailored to the needs of troops under unit commanders around the United States and are planned two years in advance. Fort Liggett's 2014 training program for reservists and National Guard members is already being devised.

FORT HUNTER LIGG-ETT, Calif. • The white stucco building with mission-type architecture stands crisply against a blue California sky.

Set on a hill a short distance from the fort's beehive of administrative offices, the Hacienda recalls the days when William Randolph Hearst used it as his Milpitas Ranch headquarters.

Hearst sold the structure and most of the fort's 160,000 acres to the federal government in 1940 so the Army could train troops for combat in World War II. The building is now an overnight lodge open to civilians.

Rumors still persist about the sale of Hearst's property. One of them holds that Hearst used the money to pay an overdue tax bill, according to an article by Staff Sgt. Robert Van Tuinen in the Fir Tree, the fort magazine. That's not true, nor is the rumor that Hearst brought prominent politicians to the ranch to hunt amid the oak-dotted hills. In fact, Hearst didn't allow hunting on the property.

But the Hacienda's association with the legendary media mogul is an attraction for many who enjoy its flower and cactus garden, and a long view to the western horizon. It's the site of weddings and other special events.

Guests can choose from rooms with private bathrooms or "cowboy" rooms that share bathrooms down an outdoor hallway. Both options are surprisingly affordable, given their charm.

served from 6:30-9 a.m., but lunch and dinner must be purchased elsewhere. The lodge is walking distance to the PX, where civilians can buy snacks but not alcohol. Hacienda guests also can walk to a bowling alley where pizza and beer are the menu attractions, and even a snack bar with Mexican dishes in addition to hamburgers and fries.

If eating at the latter, don't be startled by the sight of soldiers standing in line with rifles slung over their shoulders. It's part of the ambiance of spend-

While this fort's focus is on training troops for the future, Cook is also concerned about those coming back from war. He began a nonprofit called "The Warrior Water Center" a few years ago with the goal of providing reserves with counseling and other postdeployment treatment.

"The system was slow to respond to these soldiers' needs and the needs of their families," Cook said.

Active duty personnel have had care centers for some time, but the same outlet has been lacking for reserves, he said.

Cook's program uses non-traditional ways of physical and spiritual healing. Water therapy is among the approaches, hence the center's name.

It is intended to tackle problems such as posttraumatic stress disorder, general trauma and even brain injuries.

"It affects how you integrate back into society," he said.

Cook's interest in the well-being of soldiers returning from deployment is authentic, not something done for public relations purposes, many at the fort emphasize.

"He genuinely cares about soldiers," said Capt. Rebecca Murga.
