Williams' home on 3100

According to the Southern Idaho Regional Communications Center, the fire started when a controlled burn grew out of control. Kyli Gough, spokeswoman for the BLM, said she couldn't confirm the fire's origins.

At 11 a.m., Williams had left her house to drop off her grandsons. Shortly after that, she got phone calls to return to her home.

Police say Branden Alexander Galbreath, 20, was involved with the robbery of the Twin Falls Applebee's restaurant and the burglary of a home in the 3000 block of Heatherwood Drive in Twin Falls, both in Ianuary.

He has also been charged in several Jerome crimes including a string of burglaries and the Jerome Wendy's restaurant robbery. Galbreath was transported from Jerome to the Twin Falls County Jail Monday to be arraigned on the charges.

On Jan. 8, Twin Falls police responded to Applebee's at about 3 a.m. for a call of an armed robbery. An officer met with the manager, who said a person pointed a gun at him and told him to give over all his money as he left the store with a night deposit. The robber wore a

After all, the origins of the 1976 Olympic decathlon champion's athletic exploits came at a YMCA near his boyhood home in New York.

"I started off in the Y in Tarrytown," Jenner said upon his arrival at Lighthouse Christian Fellowship, where he would repeat the same story a few hours later for a packed auditorium. nance a new county jail, Jerome County commissioners are discussing the idea of leasing rather than owning.

"Sometimes it is better to lease than to buy," Commissioner Charlie Howell said Tuesday during an interview.

He noted that a lease-purchase option was the very first approach commissioners put before voters in 2009.

"That was a good business plan then," Howell said.

However, the proposal failed by 21 votes - the closest margin in four election attempts to finance a new jail. The most recent defeat came in May when voters rejected a $10.7 million construction bond.

A majority of voters supported jail funding in all four elections, but the numbers didn't quite reach the required 66.7 percent supermajority needed to pass.

On Monday, commissioners heard a recommendation from Reed Miller of Idaho Falls, vice president of Ormond Builders and a consultant for the county, to pursue a lease-purchase strategy. They discussed the possibility, but didn't come to a conclusion.

According to court documents, Colis-Ruiz contacted the informant about selling two ounces of meth for $2,600 on Oct. 17.

Investigators arranged the exchange and the informant wore a wire. While investigators listened, the informant bought the meth from Colis-Ruiz and then handed it over to police.

After the buy, a trooper pulled Colis-Ruiz over and found the cash from the informant's purchase, along with about two more ounces of meth.

TWIN FALLS Chobani President and CEO Hamdi Ulukaya said Tuesday that a skilled labor force, as well as plentiful milk supply, was a big factor in the company choosing Twin Falls for its $300 million plant.

Chobani

Ulukaya was in Twin Falls to view progress at the plant. He also appeared Tuesday at the College of Southern Idaho, where Business Plus Inc. officials gave $150,000 to the Chobani senior management team and the city of Twin Falls. The money will help pay for utility upgrades to wastewater pre-treatment and for natural gas connections.

Ulukaya did not give a completion date for the new 900-square-foot plant, saying only it will be done before the end of 2012. It will be the largest yogurt manufacturing plant in the U.S. and the second outlet for the Greek yogurt manufacturer, which now produces its product in New Berlin, N.Y.

The Twin Falls plant will have a beneficial economic ripple effect for the local area, Ulukaya predicted.

"A lot of businesses will follow Chobani's footsteps, a lot of suppliers," he said.

He also credited CSI for developing a key training program for newly hired Chobani management employees, saving higher education is critical to Chobani's success.

"There's a lot of talent in colleges," Ulukaya said. "We need that knowledge. We have some amazing people on our team, but we need that training to help us."

Training is continuing on the CSI campus through Friday. Chobani is expected to provide up to 500 jobs here, and company officials have said most will pay at least $14 an hour.

Mitch Watkins, Business Plus co-president, said the economic development organization is happy to help finance infrastructure for Chobani.

"Our mission is to support companies that provide living wage jobs in the valley," he said. "Chobani fits that bill. It's the type of employer that we try to support and that's the reason we made the large investment in Chobani."

RUPERT • Small-town patriotism at its best will be on display in Rupert during the city's annual Fourth of July celebration.

Thousands of people will gather at the Rupert Square during the week to eat, listen to music and enjoy the community atmosphere.

The celebration launches Thursday as the carnival rolls into the Minidoka County Fairgrounds.

Food vendors, which are all nonprofit, will line the town square. Crowds will gather in the evenings to listen to music. And those who feel lucky will place bets on their pony of choice at the Rupert Downs. Horse racing at the fairgrounds will begin at 1 p.m. on Saturday and run through July 8. Races begin at 2 p.m. July 4.

Mount Harrison Heritage Foundation's 10th annual melodrama will also start at 7 p.m. Thursday in the newly air-conditioned Wilson Theatre, said Chris Jackson, executive director of the Rupert Renaissance Arts Center.

"A melodrama is an audience-involved Western spoof that gives people the opportunity to boo the villains and encourage the heroes," said Jim Jolley, director of the production, "Heaven Help the Po' Taters!" or "Id-a-Hoe, The Tater but They Just Won't Grow."

State Pushes for Better Science, Math Education

Teachers visiting Twin Falls this week hope to learn ways to inspire their students to pursue science.

BY JULIE WOOTTON jwootton@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • Getting students excited about science and math isn't always an easy task.

But as Idaho – and the nation - continues to experience a growing shortage of skilled workers with science-related degrees, it's something state leaders are addressing. And it begins with education.

Rick Provencher, manager of the U.S. Department of Energy's Idaho Operations Office, told an audience of teachers Tuesday that students need to have a mentor and get inspired about science, technology, engineering and math.

"In my view, you're the biggest asset," he said during a keynote address at the College of Southern Idaho.

The address was part of an annual workshop focused on science-related education. About 125 teachers are in Twin Falls this week for the i-STEM workshop (for science, technology, engineering and math), one of four held around the state this month.

The statewide effort by education agencies and industry professionals seeks to improve STEM education in kindergarten through the 12th grade.

With baby boomers retiring, Provencher said there's a shortfall of 3 million qualified workers with U.S. college degrees is projected nationwide by 2018. "That's one of the challenges you have is to prepare for that gap," he said.

This week's workshop offers teachers 20 hours of instruction on a variety of topics. Each teacher chooses one to focus on.

Coordinator Bill Cairns vice principal at Skyline High School in Idaho Falls said group session topics included green energy, using technology to teach math, nutrition and health, and NASA space exploration.

Provencher told the Provencher said the lab has a need for engineers, scientists and information technology workers.

While job and research opportunities exist, not all students are interested in pursuing them.

Ken Edmunds, president of the Idaho State Board of Education, told the Times-News that students nationally are showing less interest in pursuing a rigorous STEM education.

"We know that we are lagging in STEM education," he said.

In May, the ISBE hosted a summit to put together a roadmap for how to improve STEM education. ISBE spokeswoman Marilyn Whitney said the board aims to complete a draft plan this fall.

The topic is also part of the ISBE's Complete College Idaho plan, which the board approved last week.

The goal is that 60 percent of Idaho residents between ages 25 and 34 will have a post-secondary degree or certificate by 2020. That's nearly double the state's current average.

"More facts need to be gathered," Howell said.

For one thing, he wants Jerome County Sheriff Doug McFall to provide a cost estimate for sending all Jerome County prisoners to jail in another jurisdiction. But there's a problem with that idea, too.

"Currently there is no place big enough," Howell said. "We would be scattering them all over Idaho."

Commissioner Cathy Roemer noted that Miller suggested asking a district judge for permission to pursue a lease-purchase plan, rather than seeking a fifth vote by county residents. However, she's not comfortable with that method, known as judicial confirmation.

"I have never favored an end run around the taxpayers," Roemer said. "They need some respect because they pay the bills."

Commissioner Roger Morley has voiced the same feeling in the past.

Proponents of a new jail say the current facility must be replaced for the safety of inmates and staff. The 40year-old jail has electrical wiring hazards, plumbing issues, security risks and other problems, according to a report from consultant Andrew Leonard, a former Arizona Department of Corrections employee.

They are 'sustainability stewards,' the heart of an offbeat program entering its third year. BY KRISTIN RODINE The Idaho Statesman

CALDWELL (AP) • In a scene more akin to "Little House on the Prairie" than most visions of campus life, Rahul Sharma and Natasha Rooney feed chickens, wrangle rabbits and pull weeds as part of their college experience

Their little house is a college-owned cottage on the outskirts of Caldwell's College of Idaho, and they're not frontier sodbusters. They're "sustainability stewards," the heart of an offbeat program entering its third year.

Chosen from about 10 applicants, the stewards get free housing in return for tending the campus organic garden, taking care of small farm critters, and figuring out how to make the house and their lifestyle as ecologically low-impact as possible.

"It's a lifestyle job," said Rooney, a history major from Melbourne, Australia, who will be a senior in the fall.

"It feels more genuine," said Sharma, a junior fine arts major who hails from Kashmir, India. "And we don't have to live in the once a week."

Rooney said she likes the "creative flexibility" of the position, though both she and Sharma said it's a lot of work.

"It's hard, but it's good," Sharma said.

Seven hens and seven rabbits live on the property, loosely confined in a chicken coop. The chickens easily escape the confines to prowl the property and adjacent lots, making egg collection something of "an Easter egg but the students are happy to keep them around. Sharma notes that they eat weeds, and their manure can be applied directly to plants. Chicken droppings, on the other hand, need to be composted before they're used as fertilizer.

The stewards eat the eggs and some of the produce, selling some of the harvest to the campus food service.

A small plot hosts strawberry plants, a walnut tree provides nuts and a small enthusiasm, such wonderful energy and ideas," Nelson said.

Examples of bright ideas from stewards that haven't come to fruition include getting a goat – "that's not going to happen," says Nelson - and building a greenhouse from plastic bottles, a notion that never got beyond the bottle-collection phase.

Sharma would like to add bees to the menagerie, but acknowledges that his idea is unlikely to gain administrative approval.

Last year's stewards tried to move the garden from its spot near the dining hall to the vacant lot next to Eco House. Nelson had high hopes for that idea, but the lot's super-hard ground and infestation of goathead burrs took the upper hand. Sharma and Rooney returned the garden to its previous site.

Rooney would like to put native plants on the vacant lot, an idea that Nelson likes. Each pair of stewards has

E. Idaho Judge Renamed to Federal Bankruptcy Bench

BOISE (AP) • The Chief Judge of the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals has tapped an Idaho lawyer to another three-year term on the court's Bankruptcy Appellate Panel.

Chief Judge Alex Kozinski announced Monday his decision to reappoint Jim D. Pappas to the panel.

Pappas was first appoint ed to the position in 2005 and has served as chief judge of the BAP since 2010. The 60-year-old Pappas was born in Pocatello, earned his law degree from the University of Idaho and practiced as a lawyer in his hometown before being appointed a bankruptcy judge in 1990.

The BAP is based in Pasadena, Calif., and in fiscal year 2011 received 1,011 new appeals, up 29 percent from the previous year.

Idaho Communities Get Federal Money to Hire Vets

BOISE (AP) • Two Idaho communities – one in the north and the other in the state's east – are getting $650,000 combined from U.S. Department of Justice to add military veterans to their forces.

The Kootenai County Sheriff's Department will receive $500,000 and the St. Anthony Police Department will get $150,000.

The two law enforcement agencies were announced on Monday as recipients of the grants from the DOJ's Community Oriented Policing Services program.

Designed to save or create some 800 law enforcement jobs nationwide, the money must be used to created positions filled by recent military veterans who have served at least 180 days since Sept. 11, 2001.

All told, communities across the United States are getting $111 million in 2012 for the hiring program that's been pushed by President Barack Obama.

dorms?

The program began in the summer of 2010 as an outgrowth of the organic garden program the College of Idaho shared with Bon Appetit, the campus food service provider, said Jen Nelson, director of residence life for the private liberal arts college.

"We decided the program needed to be more robust," Nelson said.

College President Marv Henberg decided to provide free use of one of the rental homes the college owns just south of campus. The "Eco House" program has three primary objectives, Nelson said:

• Provide community education on such topics as healthy eating and water conservation. Stewards organize programs for Van Buren Elementary School students in the fall, put on Earth Day events and bring produce to the Caldwell Farmers Market.

• Challenge students to "live as simply and as sustainably as possible." That notion is attractive to those who apply to be stewards, Nelson said: "They tend to be students that composted in their dorm room anyway."

• Create an opportunity for personal growth and leadership development. "It's very self-directed," Nelson said. "They just meet with me once a week and the director of food service

On a recent afternoon, the hens strutted and clucked and pecked over an array of leftovers their keepers had delivered to the coop, carefully avoiding the many slices of white onion strewn on the ground. Those will end up in the Eco House compost.

So far, Rooney said, tomatoes and celery seem to be the chickens' favorites.

The hens were named by previous stewards, but Rooney and Sharma don't call them by name - except one.

"That light brown one is called Favorite, because she's my favorite," Rooney said. "She's very friendly."

The rabbits were surprise guests in the chicken coop,

Sharma and Rooney's stint as stewards began about five weeks ago, and Nelson said each of the three teams so far has brought a different flavor to the project.

Republicans Support Obamacare by Any Other Name

or Republicans, nothing captures what they loathe about Barack Obama's presidency more perfectly than Obamacare - it's Big Government run amok and an existential threat to American liberty. But it turns out Republicans like what's actually in the law.

The Reuters-Ipsos poll taken June 19-23 found that Obamacare remains deeply unpopular: 56 percent of Americans oppose the law, vs. only 44 percent who favor it. But the poll also found that strong majorities favor the law's individual provisions - including solid majorities of Republicans.

I asked Ipsos for a partisan breakdown of the data. Key points:

• Eighty percent of Republicans favor "creating an insurance pool where small businesses and uninsured have access to insurance exchanges to take advantage of large group pricing benefits." That point is backed by 75 percent of respondents who self-describe as independents.

• Fifty-seven percent of Republicans support "providing subsidies on a sliding scale to aid individuals and families who cannot afford health insurance." That same sentiment is backed by 67 percent of independents.

• Fifty-four percent of Republicans favor "requiring companies with more than 50 employees to provide insurance for their employees." That idea is backed by 75 percent of independents.

• Fifty-two percent of Republicans favor "allowing children to stay on parents insurance until age 26." Six-ty-nine percent of independents agree.

• Seventy-eight percent of Republicans support "banning insurance companies from denying coverage for pre-existing conditions"; 86 percent of Republicans favor "banning insurance companies from cancelling policies because a person becomes ill." Those points are backed by 82 percent and 87 percent of independents, respectively.

And one provision that isn't backed by a majority of Republicans? The one "expanding Medicaid to families with incomes less than $30,000 per year."

"Most Republicans want to have good health coverage," Ipsos research director Chris Jackson told me. "They just don't necessarily like what it is Obama is doing."

Bottom line: Big numbers of Republicans and independents favor regulation of the health insurance system. But the law has become so defined by the individual mandate — not to mention the president himself that public sentiment on the actual reforms has been drowned out. It's another sign of the conservative messaging triumph in this fight and Democrats' failure to Mitt Romney claims to represent the private sector. He spent 15 years running and supervising Bain Capital, a private equity firm. He sees capitalism as a moral system. "Our Founding Fathers endeavored to create a moral and just society like no other in history, and out of that grew a moral and just economic system," Romney argued in a speech in Missouri three weeks ago. He noted that free enterprise "has helped lift more people out of poverty across the globe than any government program." As to the "fear that some might succeed more than others," Romney assured doubters that "success breeds success."

To Romney, these are articles of faith. Last fall, in a Republican primary debate, financial pundit Jim Cramer asked Romney whether "public companies have any social responsibility to create jobs" or whether, alternatively, they "should exist solely to create maximum profit for their shareholders." Romney rejected the dilemma: "We don't have to decide between the two, because they go together....What happens with profit is that you can grow the business. You can expand it. You add working capital, and you hire people."

These claims about capitalism - that it rewards risk, creates jobs, and spreads success - sound dogmatic. But they're actually falsifiable. They demonstrate that faith in the free market rests on underlying values of risk-taking, shared sacrifice, and shared reward. When capitalism undercuts these values, it loses credibility. That's why the attacks on Romney's record at Bain are dangerous. They accuse him not of practicing capitalism but of betraying it.

Two years ago, Gallup asked Americans whether they had positive or negative feelings about various economic ideas and institutions. Capitalism outpolled socialism but its level of support shifted considerably based on word choice. Ninety-five percent of the public had a positive impression of "small business," and 84 percent to 86 percent had a positive impression of "entrepreneurs" or "free enterprise." But that number fell to 61 percent for "capitalism" and to 49 percent for "big business."

Over the years, Romney's political opponents have exploited the public's misgivings. They've argued that he that he enriched himself at the expense of ordinary people. The harshest of these critiques was a video distributed this year by a PAC supporting Newt Gingrich. It began by extolling the values of free enterprise: "Capitalism made America great. Free markets, innovation, hard work." But it argued that Romney had subverted these values. Instead of building enterprises and communities, he had raided and stripped family businesses, "dumping" their stock and "playing the system for a quick buck." Instead of improving products, he had cheapened them. Instead of hiring people, he had fired them to squeeze out extra profits. Instead of helping his country, he had "sent jobs overseas." Instead of nurturing companies, he had loaded them with debt and siphoned out the money. Instead of serving small investors, he had suckered and fleeced them. Instead of sharing the pain when workers lost their jobs and investors lost their savings, he and his pals had always managed "to turn the misfortunes of others into their own enormous financial gains." He had betrayed every moral principle of business: loyalty, quality, service, prudence, stewardship, risk. This indictment didn't come from the left. It came tacked from the left, from Barack Obama, on capitalism. I know that people are going to say, 'Oh, you should only practice it this way or that way; and think they know better than the private market. My view is capitalism works. Free enterprise works. And I find it kind of strange, on a stage like this with Republicans, having to describe how private equity and venture capital work and how they're successful and how they create jobs."

This dogma will now be tested. The latest ad from Obama's super PAC shows a laid-off worker alleging that Romney "made over $100 million by shutting down our plant." Over the past week, investigative stories in The Washington Post and The New York Times, following up on previous work by The Wall Street Journal, have reported that Romney's company invested in "firms that specialized in relocating jobs" to "low-wage countries like China and India," and that "Bain structured deals so that it was difficult for the firm and its executives to ever really lose, even if practically everyone else involved with the company that Bain owned did, including its employees, creditors and even, at times, investors in Bain's funds."

More than 75,000 people signed petitions to put three repeal measures on the ballot.

Juvenile Detention Workers Sue Idaho

BY REBECCA BOONE Associated Press

BOISE • Seven employees with the Idaho Department of Juvenile Correction have filed a whistleblower lawsuit against the agency, contending that a Nampa detention center is understaffed, has security policies that are dangerous to staffers and kids, that some employees are committing fraud and wasting public money, and that those who speak out against misdeeds are harassed and skipped over for promotions.

The lawsuit was filed in U.S. District Court in Boise on Monday by Rhonda Ledford, Raymon Gregston, Jo McKinney, Shane Penrod, Kim McCormick, Bob Robinson, and Gracie Reyna. The workers are asking the court to order Idaho Department of Juvenile Correction leaders to change the practices at the detention center and to order the Idaho Attorney General and the U.S. Attorney for Idaho to begin investigating the department for allegedly violating state and federal laws.

In the 24-page lawsuit, the employees claim the department is rife with problems that put juveniles at risk.

The workers contend that in at least one case, the department violated the federal Prison Rape Elimination Act by failing to prevent one juvenile offender from inappropriately touching other juveniles, and they contend that department leaders intentionally hid incidents in which juveniles were injured in an apparent effort to boost the facility's safety record.

The workers also say the Nampa Juvenile Dentention Center isn't adequately staffed, and that too few of the staffers are trained in the use of force against juveniles, resulting in injuries to both juveniles and staffers.

The employees who filed the lawsuit also claim that the department has let staffers continue to work with juvenile offenders even if they've been convicted of crimes and are on probation - and in some cases, even when the staffers are wearing courtordered electronic monitoring devices.

The workers also contend that cronyism abounds within the department, that "favored employees" are allowed to commit fraud by padding their timesheets, that under-qualified people are given positions without the proper credentials and that those who speak out about the problems face retaliation from department leaders.

Officials at the Idaho Department of Juvenile Detention could not immediately respond to a request for comment from The Associated Press.

If you're happy with your dentures, don't read this!

WHY SUFFER WITH DENTURES?

For centuries, removable false teeth, or dentures, have been used to replace missing teeth. But denture-wearers report that many undesirable side effects come along with this less-than-ideal solution: Dentures are uncomfortable to wear and often slip or click; they can cause bad breath, and require ongoing and inconvenient maintenance; they often result in a weak bite, a fake-looking smile and an overly active gagging reflex.

Care and comfort aside, those with dentures also are prevented from eating many of the foods and participating in many of the activities they enjoy.

With today's science, there's simply no reason for anyone to struggle with dentures. In fact, many of the problems denture wearers struggle with can be solved in just one day* with the help of your ClearChoice team of dental implant professionals.

Denture wearers tend to struggle with:

- Shame or embarrassment when smiling
- Feeling limited in social situations
- Maintaining a fully active lifestyle
- Appearing older due to bone loss
- Health issues related to their teeth

THE SOLUTION IS DENTAL IMPLANTS.

Dental implants provide far better results than do dentures, because implants can prevent potential bone loss. Because they're anchored into the jawbone, the fusion of the implant and bone provides stability, just as the natural teeth did. Implants perform and are cared for just like natural teeth!

If you're missing some or all of your teeth, dental implants can stimulate the bone, protect against atrophy and help preserve your natural facial features.

CHOOSE A BETTER LIFE TODAY.

Most people who choose dental implants report the decision to be life changing. Not only do dental implants look great and boost your confidence, but they can also restore you to the active lifestyle you've been missing. Swim, ski, laugh and sing. Give business presentations. Eat what you like. Do it all without worrying about how your smile looks, or that your teeth will slip or fall out.

Consumer Confidence Index fell to 62 in June • The Conference Board said Tuesday that its Consumer Confidence Index fell from 64.4 in May to 62 in June. The index is widely watched because consumer spending accounts for 70 percent of U.S. economic activity. A reading of 90 indicates a healthy economy. The index hit an all-time low of 25.3 in February 2009.

The latest survey shows that despite lower gas prices, Americans are still worried about stagnant hiring, low home values, the choppy stock market and a worsening European economy that some fear will hurt the U.S.

TWIN FALLS • Starting with 100 employees 21 years ago, Glanbia Foods Inc. has grown to a 680-worker force that has invested $300 million in the Magic Valley.

"The impact is enormous," said Jan Rogers, executive director of the Southern Idaho Economic Development Organization.

The company has annual sales of $870 million from its Twin Falls and Gooding plants, she said, which has a ripple effect of $2.2 billion on the local Ground-breaking is scheduled July 13 for those buildings, which have a combined cost of $15 million and a total impact of $23.4 million when the multiplier effect is considered, Rogers said.

Shawn Barigar, president and CEO of the Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce, acknowledges Glanbia's long financial reach.

"A company like Glanbia builds on our agricultural roots here in the Magic Valley," he said. "Not only are they offering jobs at their facilities, but that economic impact is going all the way back to family farms in our area and the folks who support the ag industry."

would grow like it has in the last 20 years."

Some California dairies relocated to Idaho, Williams added. "That was the start of the big boom. We never put any shackles on growth. We're kind of swimming in milk here in the West."

About 80 percent of the milk Glanbia buys comes from 120 independent Magic Valley dairymen, Williams said, although a little milk is purchased from sources in Nampa and Mountain Home.

The local plants buy 12 million pounds of milk each day to produce 1.2 million pounds of cheese daily.

Facebook Draws User Ire with Email Switcheroo

NEW YORK (AP) • In yet another change that upset users, Facebook has replaced the email addresses users chose to display on their profile pages with @facebook.com addresses.

Previously, users may have displayed their personal yahoo.com or gmail.com address to let people know how to contact them outside of Facebook. Now, Facebook has hidden those addresses and put a Facebook email listing in its place.

The changes raised users' suspicions. By hiding other email addresses Facebook can keep its already-captive audience even more captive. Sending an email to a Facebook.com address will land the email in the messages section of a user's Facebook profile.

Rogers added that Glanbia's presence accounts for about 2,300 indirect jobs here. That's because the company purchases milk from local dairymen who buy feed for their cows from local producers.

The cheese manufacturing firm is looking back this week as it marks its 21st year. It got its foothold in the valley in 1990 when it purchased Ward's Cheese. This year, the company will build new headquarters and research facilities in Old Towne Twin Falls.

Companies such as Glanbia are valuable for another reason, too, Barigar noted.

"They have contributed something like $1 million in charity works. They are good corporate citizens, good neighbors who care about the community."

Glanbia CEO Jeff Williams admits he's a bit surprised by the company's level of success.

"It's partly being in the right place at the right time, with a little bit of luck involved," he said. "I don't think anybody knew the Idaho dairy industry

About 10 percent of Glanbia's sales are outside the United States, and Williams expects that to increase in the future.

"We think the future growth is international," he said. "The U.S. market is pretty mature."

As affluence increases in countries that have traditionally struggled economically, Williams said, their residents will consume more cheese products.

"As people's disposable income rises, their consumption of protein rises," he said.

BIRTHDAY BASH FEATURES MONTGOMERY GENTRY CONCERT, FAMILY-FRIENDLY ATMOSPHERE

TWIN FALLS • Glanbia is putting on its party hat Saturday to celebrate 21 years of business in the Magic Valley with music, games and a fireworks display.

"We're calling it our 21st birthday bash," said Glanbia CEO Jeff Williams. "We want to thank the community in general, and the public is welcome to attend."

A family friendly event from 2-7 p.m. at the fairgrounds in Filer will feature more than 30 activities with an emphasis on children. There will be a huge shark slide, Pirates of the Caribbean obstacle course, 20-person Twister game, face painting and balloon artists.

For $5, those 3 and older get access to an unlimited number of rides and games.

The day's highlight is music. The Jason Lugo Band plays at 7:30 p.m., followed by country standout Montgomery Gentry at 8:30 p.m. Tickets are $20 in advance or $25 at the fairgrounds.

Full details are available at www.glanbia21st.com. Tickets can be purchased on the website.

U of I Tours Offer Tips on Ag Pests

TIMES-NEWS

KIMBERLY • The University of Idaho will hold its annual Snake River Pest Management Tours this week, including one Thursday in Kimberly.

Each free tour begins with registration at 8 a.m. The tour itself starts at 8:30 a.m. and ends with a sponsored lunch at noon. Each event is open to the public.

The Kimberly tour will cover a wide range of research regarding sugar beets, including tests of three tillage systems and their effects on productivity and pest management. Chicory control, small grains, corn, dry beans, potatoes and alfalfa will also be featured, with projects centered mostly on disease, insect and weed control.

A tour today in Aberdeen will focus on weed control in potatoes with a variety of herbicides and methods. Controlling the nightshades, sticky and hairy, will also be discussed in relation to eradicating the pale cyst nematode and controlling potato virus Y (PVY). Aberdeen's tour will also include research updates on potato variety herbicide safety and glyphosate carryover in seed potatoes.

Participants at each tour will earn three Idaho State Department of Agriculture pesticide applicator recertification credits.

Each tour will be held at the U of I research and extension center near each town: 3806 N. 3600 E. near Kimberly, and 1693 S. 2700 W. near Aberdeen.

Court Ruling Offers Inmates Rare Chance at Freedom

BY ED WHITE Associated Press

DETROIT • The Supreme Court ruling that banned states from imposing mandatory life sentences on juveniles offers an unexpected chance at freedom to more than 2,000 inmates who have never been able to seek release and had virtually no hope that their prospects would change.

In more than two dozen states, lawyers can now ask for new sentences. And judges will have discretion to look beyond the crime at other factors such as a prisoner's age at the time of the offense, the person's background and perhaps evidence that an inmate has changed while incarcerated

"The sentence may still be the same," said Lawrence Wojcik, a Chicago lawyer who co-chairs the juvenile justice committee of the American Bar Association. "But even a sentence with a chance for parole gives hope."

Virtually all of the sentences in question are for murder. When Henry Hill was an illiterate 16-year-old, he was linked to a killing at a park in Saginaw County and convicted of aiding and abetting murder.

Hill had a gun, but he was never accused of firing the fatal shot. Nonetheless, the sentence was automatic: life without parole. He's spent the last 32 years in Michigan prisons.

"I was a 16-year-old with a mentality of a 9-year-old. I didn't understand what life without parole even meant," Hill, now 48, said Tuesday in a phone interview.

He heard about the Supreme Court decision while watching TV news in his cell.

Arizona Police Face Questions after U.S. Supreme Court Ruling

BY ELLIOT SPAGAT

Associated Press

TUCSON, Ariz. • Arizona's police chiefs and county sheriffs hoped a U.S. Supreme Court ruling would settle their long-running debate on what role, if any, they should play in immigration enforcement. Instead, the justices' decision to uphold the state's "show me your papers" statute has left them with more questions than answers.

How long must officers wait for federal authorities to respond when they encounter someone illegal, especially given President Barack Obama's new policy to only deport dangerous criminals and repeat offenders? If they release a person too soon, are they exposing themselves to a lawsuit from residents who accuse them of failing to enforce the law?

How do they avoid being sued for racial profiling? Maricopa County Sheriff Joe Arpaio said he anticipated no change in how he does his job but that comes from someone who was accused of racially profiling Latinos in a lawsuit filed by the U.S. Justice Department.

"We're going to get sued if we do. We're going to get sued if we don't. That's a terrible position to put law enforcement officers in," said Pima County Sheriff Clarence Dupnik, whose territory covers much of southern Arizona and who has long argued against his state's requirement that local law enforcement be forced to ask about the legal status of anyone suspected of being in the U.S. illegally.

The justices on Monday unanimously approved the Arizona law's mostdiscussed provision requiring police to check the immigration status of those they stop for other reasons. But it struck down provisions allowing local police to arrest people for federal immigration violations. They also warned against detaining people for any prolonged period merely for not having proper immigration papers.

The decision left police chiefs and sheriffs grappling with questions ranging from what justifies reasonable suspicion that someone is in the country illegally to how long officers must wait when federal authorities are slow to respond to a question on someone's immigration status.

"It's uncharted territory," said Tony Estrada, sheriff of Santa Cruz County on the state's southern border with Mexico. "It's going to be challenging. It's a complicated issue, and it's not going to be solved by this particular decision."

Tucson Police Chief Roberto Villasenor estimates the statute will result in 50,000 additional calls a year to federal immigration authorities in his city alone. That includes 36,000 arrests a year for suspects who are not booked into jail, typically for offenses like disorderly conduct, misdemeanor assault, shoplifting, vandalism and driving more than 25 mph over the speed lim-

Those suspects, who would normally be released with a citation, must be booked into custody if immigration authorities "don't answer the phone, they never call us back after we talk to them or whatever," Villasenor said.

An estimated 14,000 inquiries a year will be for people encountered on street patrol who are not arrested, Villasenor said. They may raise suspicion for their manner of dress, language or other characteristics outlined in guidelines issues to law enforcement agencies statewide.

Hispanics Looking for November Gains in U.S. House

"I got up hollering and rejoicing and praising God," said Hill, who used to renovate homes for a living. He would like to go back to his old trade and be a mentor to children. "The last three or four years, they always put young guys in with me."

The ruling also alarmed families of crime victims. Jessica Cooper, prosecutor in Oakland County, Mich., said her office has been taking calls from "distressed" victims' relatives.

"Now they're going to start all over," Cooper said. "It's going to take years."

The Michigan Corrections Department said 364 inmates are serving mandatory life sentences for crimes they committed under age 18. The prisoners now range in age from 16 to 67.

In Monday's 5-4 decision, the high court said life without parole for juveniles violates the Constitution's ban against cruel and unusual punishment. More than 2,000 people are in U.S. prisons under such a sentence, according to facts agreed on by attorneys for both sides of the case.

It's possible that some inmates will win immediate release. Judges could also impose new sentences carrying a specific number of years and a parole review. Some inmates could still be kept locked up for life.

Turkey Warns Syria away from Its Border

BY ELIZABETH A. KENNEDY

BEIRUT • Turkey warned Syria on Tuesday to keep its forces away from the countries' troubled border or risk an armed response – a furious reply to the downing of a Turkish military plane last week by the Damascus regime.

NATO backed up Turkey and condemned Syria for shooting down the plane but stopped short of threatening military action, reflecting its reluctance to get involved in a conflict that could ignite a broader war.

Near the capital of Damascus, meanwhile, Syria's elite Republican Guard forces battled rebels in some of the most intense fighting involving the special forces since the uprising against President Bashar Assad's regime began in March 2011, according to activists.

Assad appeared to acknowledge the seriousness of the situation while addressing his new Cabinet on Tuesday in a statement broadcast on Syrian state TV. He said his country is in a "genuine state of war." Up to now Assad has described the uprising against him as run by terrorists carrying out a foreign agenda.

More than 14,000 people have been killed in the last 15 months. Despite global outrage over the crackdown by the Assad regime, the international response has been focused entirely on diplomacy and sanctions, not intervention, as the violence escalates

In a speech to parliament, Turkish Prime Minister Recep Tayyip Erdogan said Syria shot down the unarmed reconnaissance plane in international airspace without warning in a "deliberate" and "hostile" act.

"Any military element that approaches the Turkish border from Syria and poses a security risk and danger will be regarded as a threat and treated as a military target," Erdogan said.

He said border violations in the region were not uncommon and Syrian helicopters had violated Turkish airspace five times recently without a Turkish response. The two countries share a 566-mile frontier.

Turkey's limited response to Friday's incident suggested there was no appetite for a violent retaliation. Still, Erdogan cautioned Syria against testing his resolve.

"No one should be deceived by our cool-headed stance," he added. "Our acting with common sense should not be perceived as a weakness."

Syrian officials insist the plane violated its airspace, saying a Syrian officer shot it down with anti-aircraft fire after spotting an unidentified jet flying at high speed and low altitude

WASHINGTON • Jose Hernandez worked in farm fields with his Mexican-immigrant parents before becoming an astronaut. Iraq War veteran Julius Melendez is the third generation of his Puerto Rican family to serve in the military. And Tony Cardenas, the youngest of 11 children of immigrant farmers from Jalisco, Mexico, has served in the California Assembly and on the Los Angeles City Council.

Next year, all of them could be coming to Congress.

The 2012 election is shaping up as a big one in the House for Hispanics. There are currently 29 in the House including a Pacific islands delegate and Puerto Rico's resident commissioner - according to the Congressional Research Service. That number is virtually guaranteed to increase by at least three or four seats because of once-a-decade redistricting that's created new Hispanic-majority districts in California and Texas. On top of that, Hispanics could win more seats in New Mexico, Arizona, Nevada and Florida.

"It's a watershed election for the Latino community," said Rep. Raul Grivalja, D-Ariz. "Our ability to influence decisions is evident and present and our ability to motivate voters is critical."

Hispanics are the fastest-growing group in the United States, increasing in population by more than 15 million between 2000 and 2010, according to U.S. Census data. They make up more than 16 percent of the U.S. population, far more than their share of roughly 5 percent of the seats in the House.

In comparison, there are 44 blacks in the House, including two delegates, according to the CRS, a record number. Blacks comprise roughly 10 percent of the House, compared to about 12 percent of the U.S. population. There are 10 Asian-Americans in the House, according to the CRS, including two delegates, roughly 2 percent of the chamber compared to roughly 5 percent of the U.S. population.

Testimony Ends in Texas Stand-your-ground Case

BY JUAN A. LOZANO Associated Press

HOUSTON • The wife of a man who claimed Texas' version of a stand-your-ground law allowed him to fatally shoot a neighbor told jurors Tuesday her husband is very remorseful about the deadly incident.

Raul Rodriguez, 46, faces up to life in prison after being convicted of murder in the 2010 killing of Kelly Danaher.

"I hear him cry at night. I hear him have dreams and nightmares about what happened ... it tears him up. He's not the same," said Donna Rodriguez, one of the last witnesses to testify in the punishment phase of her husband's trial. Both Rodriguez and his wife cried as she spoke.

Closing arguments in the punishment phase were set for Wednesday with jurors then expected to begin deliberating Rodriguez's sentence.

Rodriguez, a retired Houston-area firefighter, went to Danaher's home to confront him about the noise coming from a birthday party there. He got into an argument with Danaher, a 36-year-old elementary school teacher, and two other men who were at the party.

In a 22-minute video he recorded the night of the shooting, Rodriguez can be heard telling a police dispatcher "my life is in danger now" and "these people are going to go try and kill me." He then said, "I'm standing my ground here," and shot Danaher. The two other men were wounded. A jury convicted Rodriguez on June 13.

Rodriguez's reference to standing his ground is similar to the claim made by George Zimmerman, a neighborhood watch volunteer who is citing Florida's stand-your-ground law in his defense in the fatal February shooting of an unarmed teenager, Trayvon Martin. Rodriguez's case, however, was decided under a different kind of self-defense doctrine.

During the trial, prosecutors have portrayed Rodriguez as a neighborhood bully who took a gun to complain about loud music and could have safely walked away from the confrontation in Huffman, an unincorporated area about 30 miles northeast of Houston, any time before the shooting. Defense attorneys argued Rodriguez, who had a concealed handgun permit, was defending himself when one of the men lunged at him and he had less than a second to respond. Prosecution witnesses, including former co-workers and neighbors, told jurors during the punishment phase that Rodriguez was abusive, a bad neighbor and once shot a dog.

Thirteen witnesses for Rodriguez have contradicted those claims, saying he was not abusive or a gun fanatic and that he shot the dog when it threatened his family.

Donna Rodriguez specifically denied claims that her husband had pulled a gun on his ex-wife and another neighbor over a different noise complaint, had been abusive to their children and that he walked around their neighborhood, including to a school bus stop to pick up their children, with his handgun in plain view, intimidating people.

Donna Rodriguez, who was being treated for breast cancer when the fatal shooting happened, also testified about her husband's service in the U.S. Navy, his work as a firefighter and how a work accident left him disabled with injuries to his neck, spine, shoulder and back. She also testified her husband got along with his neighbors and once rushed to the aid of one who had suffered a heart attack.

CDC Trying Out Free Rapid AIDS Test at Drugstores BY MIKE STOBBE

Associated Press

ATLANTA • Would you go to a drugstore for an AIDS test?

Health officials want to know, and they've set up a pilot program to find out.

The $1.2 million project will offer free rapid HIV tests at pharmacies and in-store clinics in 24 cities and rural communities, the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention announced Tuesday.

Officials are hoping testing for the AIDS virus will become a routine service at drugstores like blood pressure checks and flu shots.

"By bringing HIV testing into pharmacies, we believe we can reach more people by making testing more accessible and reduce the stigma associated with HIV," CDC's Dr. Kevin Fenton said in a statement. He oversees the agency's HIV prevention programs.

The tests are already available at seven places, and the CDC will soon pick 17 more locations.

The HIV test is a swab inside the mouth and takes about 20 minutes for a preliminary result. The test maker says it's correct 99 percent of the time. If the test is positive, customers will be referred to a local health department or other health-care providers for a lab blood test to confirm the results, counseling and treatment.

When the project ends next summer, CDC officials will analyze what worked well and what didn't, said Paul Weidle, the epidemiologist who is heading up the project.

Summer's Nectar

Magic Valley vineyards unveiled some stimulating summer wines. Here's your guide to the best.

BY TETONA DUNLAP tdunlap@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • If the heat starts to take its toll on you this summer, several local wines can stop that thirst cold.

Carmela Vineyards in Glenns Ferry offers a bevy of beverages that are good while grilling on the deck or sitting under an umbrella's shade.

Restaurant manager Geri Gumb suggests the $14.99 Adelita Winarita, a summer wine you can drink like a margarita over ice with a lime.

"It's nice on the patio," said Gumb, who doesn't suggest pairing it with food.

Looking for a white wine to pair with a picnic? Try the winery's Semillon, $13.99. It has a light citrus flavor that goes well with halibut or chicken.

In summer Carmela tends to sell more whites because they are served chilled. Within the next month the vineyard will release an ice wine made from the Gewurztraminer grape. Gumb describes it as a patio drink that is light, sweet and always served chilled. The secret of its sweetness?

His Riesling is served chilled and can be enjoyed alone or with fresh fruit. If wine is not really your thing, Hegy said, his variety is a good one to try. "People who don't like wine tend to like a sweet wine."

Don't know whether his Riesling will quench your summer thirst? You can try before you buy. Tastings are free by appointment, and you can buy at $5.50 a bottle or $45 for a case of 12.

JEROME • You don't have to live near the ocean to eat crab. Carolyn Moss enjoys it sandwich-style, oven hot and complemented by a side of fresh fruit or salad.

"It's a nice dish for summer," she said at her home June 22 as she prepared the family favorite.

"It's a nice meal when we're in a hurry and don't know what else to prepare," said her husband, DeWitt Moss.

"Me? I don't cook. That's not my thing," he said with a laugh. "But she does a wonderful job in the kitchen. ... The crab cakes are wonderful."

Besides being tasty, they're easy to make with few dishes to clean up afterward.

The main ingredient: real crabmeat, said Carolyn, who prefers staying away from imitation. Buy the crabmeat, pre-cooked and with shells removed, in containers in your grocery store's deli section.

Carolyn spread fresh avocado onto two slices of thin, round bread - "I used to use English muffins but now I use these," she said then spooned on meat she had mixed with cream cheese, green onion, mayonnaise, lemon juice, horseradish sauce and salt.

You can pile it as high as you like, Carolyn said, noting that you can substitute sour cream for the mayonnaise.

Carolyn Moss' Hot Crab Sandwiches

- 3 ounces cream cheese 1 tablespoon chopped
- green onion 1 tablespoon sour cream
- or mayonnaise 1 1/2 tablespoons lemon
- juice

2 teaspoons horseradish 6 ounces real crab meat, cooked

Dash of salt

1 avocado

4-6 halves of thin sandwich buns or English muffins 1 tomato

Mix together the first five ingredients; add crab meat, mix well and salt to taste. Slice avocado and mash onto buns with a fork. Cover with generous helpings of crab mix, and top with thin slices of tomato. Broil until heated through, usually about 10 minutes.

KETCHUM • For some, camping and cold beer go hand in hand. So the Sun Valley Center for the Arts will kick off its "Making Camp" exhibition with an evening of Idaho smallbatch beers.

From 5:30 to 7 p.m. July 12 at the center's Ketchum location, you can sample the wares from three Boisebased craft breweries: Sockeye Brewing, Crooked Fence Brewing and Payette Brewing Co. The three will have reps on hand to talk shop and pour beer, including a collaboration beer concocted by all three.

Tickets are $50 at sunvalleycenter.org for age 21 and older; the price includes three logo pint glasses. Those attending the Craft Beer "Day Camp" for Grownups will get the first look at the center's exhibition, which opens to the public July 13.

TWIN FALLS • Web-based local foods cooperative Idaho's Bounty has a new pick-up location for its Twin Falls members.

To pick up their weekly orders, Bounty customers will rendezvous between 4 and 6 p.m. Wednesdays on the lawn where the Twin Falls Farmers Market is held – on North College Road, across from the College of Southern Idaho's Eldon Evans Expo Center.

Saucy was the co-op's Twin Falls pick-up point, but the restaurant closed recently.

More is changing at Idaho's Bounty, said General Manager Lynae Newcomer: Sales from January through mid-June were up 60 percent compared with the same period last year.

The co-op recently upgraded its computer software, requiring a massive amount of vendor data to be manually re-entered, Newcomer said, adding that the project was a blessing in disguise.

She placed tomato slices atop the open-faced sandwiches and broiled them for about 10 minutes - "long enough to heat all the way through and get a little crispy," she said.

Retrieving the sandwiches from the oven, she placed them on plates decorated with cantaloupe, honeydew and green and red grapes. The sandwiches were hot and ready to eat - and as scrumptious as they looked. The horseradish gave a little kick.

"This is what we're going to have for dinner tonight, Carolyn said.

She and DeWitt have lived in their Jerome home for 26 years and owned Moss Greenhouses before selling it to a son and daughter-in-law.

The Mosses, including another son in Sun Valley, get together once in a while for family gatherings, often at DeWitt and Carolyn's home. That means Carolyn gets busy in the kitchen.

"Ilike to cook, but I don't like to cook the same thing all the time," she said. "And it's more fun to cook for a crowd than cooking for just two people."

Everybody in the family seems to like the crab sandwiches, she said.

Bounty customers may be able to purchase hard cheese blends from Green Goat Dairy.

"Cash flow for the hard cheese is a challenge. It takes five to six months in aging for the flavors to be right," Greenawalt said.

If Greenawalt offered her products only at area farmers markets she wouldn't be able to sell hard cheese because it wouldn't be ready until winter, at the earliest. Bounty operates yearround, so she is optimistic the cheese will have a viable market.

"Being a part of Idaho's Bounty is a good thing because it's another way to get your products out there and get your name out there and build brand awareness," she said.

Coconut Milk: What It Is and How to Use It

BY J.M. HIRSCH Associated Press

Who knew coconut milk could be so confusing?

It shouldn't be. At heart, it's a delicious liquid made from coconuts (duh!) that can effortlessly add an exotically creamy richness to so many foods. Except that grocers sell about half a dozen different products that go by the same or very similar names. And they aren't interchangeable.

So let's start with what coconut milk isn't.

Coconut water is a hip new drink that is made from the liquid inside coconuts. Drink it, but don't cook with it.

Coconut milk beverage is a sweetened drink made from coconut milk and sugar. It's usually sold in boxes alongside soy milk.

Coconut cream is a very thick, fatty liquid made from steeping shredded coconut in hot water at a 4:1 ratio. It is sold in cans, usually in the international aisle.

Sweetened cream of coconut is coconut cream that has been (are you ready?) sweetened. It's intended for cocktails. Pina colada anyone?

Coconut milk is the real deal and the one you want for cooking. Coconut milk is made like coconut cream, but with a 1:1 ratio of coconut to water. The result is a thick, pourable product sold in cans in the international aisle.

In Southeast Asia, Africa and even South America, coconut milk is used in curries, soups (like Thai chicken and coconut), sauces, even sweets, such as rice puddings and some baked goods. In the U.S., we see it most often in curries, cream pies and puddings.

While it isn't hard to make your own (simmer shredded pensive. But you will need to stir or shake it. The fatty "cream" will rise to the top of the can over time, creating a dense layer that needs to be mixed back into the watery liquid below.

A Dish That's Worth Finding Hard-to-find Ingredients

BY J.M. HIRSCH Associated Press

It's not often that I urge people to hunt down hardto-find ingredients. But sometimes it's worth it. This is one of those times.

My goal was simple — a rich, boldly seasoned chicken curry suitable for summer. In other words, I wanted all the deep, savory flavors of tender chicken bathed in a highly seasoned sauce, but in a form that I could slap on the grill and eat at an all-American barbecue.

Because that's my one complaint about chicken curry. It typically is something you make in a skillet at the stove. I don't do a whole lot of that in the summer.

So I came up with this dish, which bathes boneless, skinless chicken thighs in a delicious curry marinade. The thighs then get tossed on the grill. Meanwhile, a bit of the marinade (which was reserved before the chicken was added) is blended with low-fat sour cream for a rich condiment to be dolloped on the chicken after it comes off the grill.

The result is a moist and richly flavored chicken curry that is as comfortable solo on a paper plate at a barbecue as it is on a plate of rice indoors. But a note about those hard-to-find ingredients. Curry from scratch is so much better than a prepared blend of spices. The flavors are more robust and fresher. But while fresh turmeric and fresh curry leaves are far more common than even just a few years ago, plenty of people still will struggle to find them.

If that's the case, don't hesitate to open a jar and use a prepared blend. The result won't be as intense, but it still will be delicious. Use 2 tablespoons of the powder as a substitute for the turmeric, curry leaves, cinnamon, cumin, peppercorns and coriander called for in this recipe.

Grilled Chicken Curry with Curry Cream Sauce

1 1/2 pounds boneless, skinless chicken thighs 1 cup low-fat sour cream

In a blender, combine the chicken broth, onion, garlic, ginger, turmeric, curry leaves, cinnamon stick, cumin seeds, peppercorns, coriander, salt, lemon juice and honey. Puree until very smooth. Transfer a third of the mixture to a small saucepan and set aside. Pour the remaining mixture in a large zip-close plastic bag. Add the chicken thighs, then seal the bag and gently massage to ensure all of the meat is coated by the marinade. Refrigerate for at least 30 minutes, or up to overnight. Meanwhile, set the heat. Bring to a simmer and cook until reduced and quite thick, about 10 minutes. Set aside to cool. When ready to cook, heat the grill to medium-high. Coat the grates with oil using an oil-soaked paper towel grasped with tongs. Remove the chicken from the marinade. Discard the marinade. Place the chicken on the grill and cook for 6 to 7 minutes per side, or until the meat reaches 165 degrees.

Meanwhile, set the saucepan of reserved marinade over medium

While the chicken cooks, in a small bowl combine the reserved marinade and the sour cream. To serve, drizzle the sour cream mixture over the chicken.

Keeping Homemade Blue

Question: I make my own blue cheese salad dressing. Will the salad dressing be good after the expiration dates on the milk and sour cream?

Answer: Commercially made blue cheese dressing usually will keep several months after opening, as long as it is refrigerated and handled properly. I saw a tip recently on making it last longer by not putting any-thing in the jar, from a fork to a finger, that might introduce bacteria.

Homemade, however, is much harder to predict. Small things can make a big difference. Even starting with a solid wedge of blue cheese vs. using pre-crumbled blue could introduce more bacteria. Or if the recipe has a little vinegar, it might keep a bit longer.

To be on the safe side, I would keep homemade blue

Lamb Kebabs for the Fourth

BY J.M. HIRSCH Associated Press

Everyone on the block is going to be doing burgers and dogs, and probably a few steaks and chops.

So why not set yourself apart this Fourth of July and grill up something a little different. Because it's not everyone who's going to bust out lamb kebabs in honor of our nation's independence. But they should. Because this inexpensive, vet delicious, richly flavored meat loves to hit the grill.

To make these kebabs shine, I went with a yogurt marinade using classic Greek flavors. The result is a tender, robust kebab with bold, yet fresh flavors. Even better is that these kebabs can be prepped a full day ahead. The longer the meat bathes in the yogurt sauce, the better the flavor.

Herbed Greek Lamb Kebabs

Start to finish: 30 minutes, plus marinating. Servings: 6.

- 2 cups plain low-fat Greek yogurt
- 4 to 5 cloves garlic, minced Zest and juice of 1 lemon
- 2 tablespoons chopped fresh oregano
- 1 tablespoon chopped fresh chives
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1/2 teaspoon ground black pepper
- 2 pounds lamb loin, cut into 2-inch chunks

A Sweet Dessert Pizza on the Grill on the Fourth

BY ALISON LADMAN For The Associated Press

For a July Fourth celebration, dessert has got to be easy and easy going.

And since you're probably making the rest of your meal on the grill anyway, why not use it to prep dessert, too? This dessert pizza is incredibly quick and versatile. Top it with whatever sweet treats you like, or consider making individual ones and having a dessert pizza bar to people can select their own toppings.

A Chocolate, Marshmallow and Graham Cracker Shake

BY MICHELE KAYAL For The Associated Press

Even a poorly executed milkshake still is probably pretty good. But to elevate the classic cool treat to a higher level of indulgence, tips from a milkshake master can help.

For that, we turn to Spike Mendelsohn, veteran of season four of Bravo's "Top Chef'' and creator of Washington's Good Stuff Eatery, as famous for its milkshakes – including a to-die-for toasted marshmallow variety – as for its burgers.

To help usher in summer, Mendelsohn created a shake especially for The Associated Press. Inspired by s'mores, that classic campfire treat of toasted marshmallows, graham crackers and chocolate, Mendelsohn picked flavors he hoped would appeal to people all across the country.

"It's a shake that everyone can relate to," he said during a shake-making session at his new Good Stuff location in Crystal City, Va. "S'mores are something everyone had growing up. It's the kind of shake that puts a smile on people's faces."

To capture the thick, creamy, malt-shop quality of a great shake no matter what the variety, Mendelsohn offered the following tips.

Start with frozen custard. Super-thick and richer than ice cream with more butterfat, custard will give your shake a silky texture and stuck-in-the-straw consistency. "To me, it's the ultimate ingredient," Mendelsohn says. Frozen custard is available in many grocers, and can be shipped overnight from online creameries. If all else fails, Mendelsohn says, use the highest butterfat ice cream you can find.

The right stuff. "What ruins a milkshake is the equipment," he says. Blenders infuse too much heat and friction where the blade spins, and that will melt your custard, resulting in a watery consistency. Instead, invest in an old-fashioned shake mixer - the kind with the single prong and metal cup available online for about $30. The metal cup is key, he says, because it keeps all the ingredients cold while they're being churned.

Use a plain vanilla base. "Like with art, you start with a blank, white canvas," Mendelsohn says. "Use plain vanilla custard and you can add elements that pop." Toasted marshmallows, malted milk balls, candy, cookies and fruit purees are a good start. The only exception is for chocolate shakes, he says, which should start with chocolate custard.

Texture makes your mouth happy. For smooth shakes, such as banana or plain chocolate, you want a super smooth consistency. For cookie shakes, or something with elements like malt balls or coconut, give it a little crunch throughout. "People like chunks," he says.

Garnish with panache. The garnish is the shake's come on, broadcasting what it's about and what you can expect from it. For a shake flavored with toasted marshmallows, stick one on top. Strawberry shake? Put a gorgeous piece of fruit on the rim, and maybe drizzle the top with glistening coulis. And every shake needs homemade, hand-whipped, super-thick whipped cream. "Just put a big bazonker on top," Mendelsohn says.

A Little Heat Adds a Lot of Flavor to a Milkshake

BY J.M. HIRSCH Associated Press

A hot skillet might seem out of place in a recipe for an icy, creamy milkshake. But stay with me on this one, because it turns out to be an amazing way to add tons of flavor. In a medium skillet over medium heat, melt the butter. Sprinkle in the brown sugar and stir until bubbling. Add the bananas, then reduce heat to low and cook for 2 to 3 minutes, or until evenly browned. Use a spatula to carefully turn the bananas and brown on the other side for another 2 to 3 minutes.

It's pretty simple. There's nothing all that unusual about adding fruit to a milkshake, especially bananas. But what makes this recipe different is that we brown the bananas in a skillet before adding them. This quick and easy step caramelizes the natural sugars in the bananas and gives them a serious flavor kick.

To help the caramelizing along, I added butter and a bit of brown sugar to the pan. The result is a rich, caramel banana sauce in the skillet, as well as deliciously browned fruit.

And this technique can be applied to other fruit, as well. Pineapple rings, apple wedges, halved strawberries, strips of mango, even pitted cherries. If you use apples, just be sure to brown them slowly over low heat until they are quite soft.

BURLEY • Eugene Ray Reid, 62, of Burley, passed away peacefully at the home of his sister Monday, June 25, 2012, after a long, valiant battle with cancer.

Eugene was born Aug. 7, 1949, in Cando, N.D., the third son of Clifford and Agnes Reid. Although the family moved to Burley in 1961, Eugene always considered North Dakota as home, and one of his last wishes was to "go back home." Given the circumstances, it didn't work out.

Over the years, Eugene did odd jobs here and there but eventually went to work for Kloepfer Concrete in Burley, where he was employed for more than 25 years doing shop maintenance, among other things. For the most part, Eugene was a quiet man with a big heart. He worked hard at a slow pace, but he would do anything for anyone and was capable of doing many things. He had a lot of hidden talents. One of Eugene's favorite things to do was go to the Wayside, drink coffee, eat and hit on the waitresses.

Eugene is survived by his brother, Roger of Burley; his sister, Charlotte Bossert of Rupert; seven nieces and nephews; and many aunts, uncles and cousins "back home" in North Dakota and elsewhere. He was preceded

BUHL • R.A. "Bill" Metzler passed away Tuesday, June 26, 2012, at his home in June 9, 1927, to

Frank and Elva Metzler of Castleford, the youngest of eight children. The family farmed near Castleford until they moved to the Lucerne area near Buhl. He graduated from Buhl High School in 1945. While at tending Buhl schools, he met Patty Osterhoudt. The two married and started a family. Pat and Bill farmed throughout the Magic Valley until settling back in Buhl on the family farm. They later divorced.

Bill met Maxine Wilson at a dance and they were married shortly after. Bill raised beans, beer barley and alfalfa seed until he retired. He was known as an excellent craftsman. He was able to make about any tool he wanted or fix any piece of equipment. He loved welding and used his artistic abilities to create everything from whimsical creatures to napkin holders. When he wasn't farming he enjoyed camping and fishing with his family. After he retired he still spent countless hours in the

it was there he was most relaxed and at peace. Even as cancer riddled his spine, he said he didn't hurt when he was in the garden touching the soil. He was always a farmer.

Bill was preceded in death by his parents and his brothers and sisters. He is survived by his wife, Maxine Metzler of Buhl; and his children, Marian Davis of Buhl, Howard Metzler of Winnemucca, Nev., Carol Metzler (Chuck Orr) of Buhl, George (Laureen) Metzler of Filer, Robin Clark (Bruce Doss) of Boise, Cindy Monson of lona, Rex Wilson of Jerome and Karma (Clem) Fitzgerald of Shoshone. He has 11 grandchildren, 16 greatgrandchildren and a myriad of nieces, nephews and neighborhood children who cherish "Papa Bill" very much. He is also survived by friend and brother-in-law, Victor Svancara of Buhl; and sister-in-law, Joan Metzler of Filer. A celebration of life will be held at a later date. Arrangements are under the direction of Farmer Funeral Chapel in Buhl.

SLATE PHOTO BY KATHERINE GOLDSTEIN To make guacamole, you need to understand the subtleties of the avocado.

You're Doing It Wrong: Guacamole

BY KATHERINE GOLDSTEIN Slate

Thou shalt not, under any circumstances, buy premade guacamole.

You cannot obliterate an avocado with preservatives, stuff it into a plastic container, put it in a refrigerator and call it guacamole. That is not guacamole. That is a tinnytasting crime against culinary decency.

And it's not hard to make a good guacamole fresh, from scratch. It doesn't take much time or any special tools. All you really need, besides the ingredients listed below, is a subtle understanding of our fair, delicate mistress, the avocado.

She bruises easily. She does not keep well after being cut open. You must coax her into ripeness. She is easily overwhelmed by more aggressive flavors – milder and more distinct in flavor. They are perfect for guacamole.

4. Don't make your guac in advance. Guacamole starts to lose pizzazz after an hour or so. Leave it overnight in the fridge and it's a lost cause. If you must make it ahead of time, do what you can to prevent oxidation (covering the guacamole with an avocado pit or two can help, but no more than other coverings). Wrap your container tightly in plastic wrap and stick it in the fridge for good measure.

With those things in mind, just put on some ZZ Top - a band that understands the greatness of guacamole - and follow the instructions below.

Fire Up the Grill for Shrimp Tacos

BY ALISON LADMAN

For The Associated Press

Whether you prefer your tacos hard and crunchy or lean more to the softer side, this grilled shrimp filling perfect for a summer barbecue will leave you satisfied.

Shrimp cook quickly, especially on the intense heat of the grill, so be sure to prep your other ingredients ahead of time and set out a buffet of toppings and tortillas. Then just toss the shrimp on the grill and in minutes you'll be enjoying summer just a little bit more.

Grilled Shrimp Tacos

Start to finish: 45 minutes. Servings: 4.

1 pound extra-large shrimp Salt and ground black pepper 1 tablespoon ground cumin

2 medium red onions, sliced 1/2 cup chopped celery 4 plum tomatoes, chopped

MATTHEW MEAD · ASSOCIATED PRESS

1 chipotle pepper in adobo sauce, minced 2 cloves garlic, minced 1 avocado, peeled, pitted and diced Juice of 1 lime 1/2 cup low-fat sour cream 1/4 cup chopped fresh cilantro 8 taco shells or 6-inch tortillas

Heat the grill to high. Place the shrimp in a large bowl. Season with salt, pepper and cumin, then toss to coat evenly.

Divide the shrimp among 6 skewers, threading them evenly without crowding them on the skewers. Do the same for the onions. Using an oil-soaked paper towel held with tongs, lightly oil the grill grates. Grill the shrimp for 2 minutes per side and the onions for 5 minutes per side. Chop the grilled red onions and place in a medium bowl. Stir in the celery, tomatoes, chipotle pepper and garlic. Season with salt and black pepper. Set aside. In a small bowl, toss the avocado with the lime juice. In another small bowl, stir together the sour cream and cilantro. To serve, set the shrimp, red onion salsa, avocado and tricks:

salt, garlic, lime – and so you must keep them in check.

It also helps to know a few guacamole-related

1. Buy avocados 2 to 3 days in advance of your expected preparation day. Most avocados you find in the store are rock hard, but try to find a few with some give when you squeeze them. Leave them out of the fridge to soften up for a few days. To speed the ripening process, throw a piece of already-ripe fruit in the same bowl - it's Mother Nature's little helper.

2. Don't ruin a beautiful dip with crummy tomatoes. Tomatoes are not delicious year-round, and you often can't predict how they will taste until you cut one open. If you discover your tomatoes are mealy and flavorless, consider using drained canned diced tomatoes instead.

3. Shallots are your friends. Onions are a mainstay of typical guacamole recipes, but shallots, the onion's sexier little cousins, are at once tomatoes or drained canned diced tomatoes (Muir Glen Organic is a good brand for this)

- 1/2 cup roughly chopped cilantro leaves
- 2 small shallots, very finely chopped
- 1 or 2 fresh jalapenos, seeded and very finely chopped
- 1 large garlic clove, minced or pressed
- 4 ripe avocados
- 3 tablespoons freshly squeezed lime juice
- Salt and black pepper

Combine the tomatoes, cilantro, shallots, jalapenos, and garlic in a medium bowl. Halve the avocados lengthwise, scoop out the insides (working around the pit), and add them to the bowl.

Drizzle the lime juice over everything and mash with a fork until the ingredients are blended but the avocado is still slightly chunky. Add salt and pepper to taste, but don't overdo it.

Serve immediately with your favorite sturdy tortilla chips.

Roast a Chicken for a Bit of Outdoor Romance

BY J.M. HIRSCH Associated Press

My recipe for a romantic picnic? A roasted chicken with sandwich trimmings.

Roll with me on this one. It's easy and totally appropriate.

You start out by following my couldn't-be-easier recipe for cast-iron skillet roasted whole chicken. The gist is that you split the bird at the backbone (technically called spatchcocking, but that just seems inappropriate in this context), sear it breast side down on the stovetop, then flip the bird and finish it in the oven.

When the chicken is cooked, you let it cool, then you cover it and refrigerate it right in the pan. You even can do the roasting the night before.

The rest is up to you, but the idea is to accompany your bird with sandwich fixings. Start with some sliced sourdough bread or wholegrain pita pockets. Add some washed and dried lettuce, sliced tomatoes, slabs of cheddar or manchego cheese, a few condiments, and whatever else you and your date enjoy.

Add a bottle of wine and the chilled chicken and you're good to go. At the picnic, you set out everything and leisurely sip and assemble sandwiches (or just nibble). Because when the idea is to woo, it's hard to beat whipping out a whole roasted chicken complete with sandwich supplies.

This recipe also makes enough for a crowd. A 4pound chicken should provide enough meat for eight sandwiches. If you don't need that much, look for a smaller bird, but watch the cooking time, as it should be shorter.

Cast-Iron Skillet Roasted Chicken

Of course this recipe also works for a weeknight dinner. The chicken comes out terrifically moist and tender. And because the chicken is flattened before it is cooked, it is finished much faster than traditional roasting methods. Start to finish: 50 minutes (10 minutes active). Servings: 8.

4-pound whole chicken 1 tablespoon kosher salt

1 tablespoon garlic powder 1/2 tablespoon dried

- thyme 1/2 tablespoon ground
- black pepper

Heat the oven to 425 degrees. Place the chicken on the cutting board breast side down. Use sturdy kitchen shears to cut down the length of the spine on both sides. Discard the spine.

Turn the bird breast side up. Gripping the 2 cut sides where the spine used to be, open up the bird, pressing down firmly at the center to flatten it. In a small bowl, mx together the salt, garlic powder, thyme and pepper. Rub the mixture evenly over the entire chicken.

Set a large cast-iron skillet on a burner over mediumhigh. When the skillet it hot, add the chicken breast side down. Let the chicken brown for 5 minutes, then use tongs to carefully flip the bird so the breast side is up. Set the skillet in the oven and roast for 30 to 40 minutes, or until the thickest part reaches 165 degrees.

Remove the chicken from the oven. Either serve immediately or let cool and refrigerate for use in a picnic as described above. Per serving: 490 calories; 310 calories from fat (63 percent of total calories); 34 g fat (10 g saturated; 0 g trans fats); 170 mg cholesterol; 1 g carbohydrate; 42 g protein; 0 g fiber; 880 mg sodium.

hen it became known that Bruce Jenner was coming to Twin Falls to speak at a YMCA fundraiser, it sparked a few conversations regarding his placement on a list of "Most Famous People to Ever Come to Twin Falls."

Having only been here eight months, I'm not qualified to say where Jenner would rank. Quite likely, there are people more famous who have passed through without a public appearance. And such a list would be arbitrary to some degree anyway.

Jenner's appearance Tuesday, however, did get me thinking about the most famous people and/or moments that I have had the pleasure of meeting/experiencing in the world of sports.

There are qualifications for making this list: The encounter had to be in a media setting, which eliminates pushing aside a dozen or so people at the 1989 U.S. Open to have Jack Nicklaus autograph my copy of Sports Illustrated with him on the cover after winning the Masters in 1986.

I had to ask a question or engage in a conversion with the subject. Down goes Mike Tyson and his presser after a fifth-round knockout of Francois Botha in his first fight back after biting off a chunk of Evander Holyfield's ear.

BURLEY • Choppy water and 20 mph wind made for less-than-ideal riding conditions Tuesday, but that didn't dampen the enthusiasm for those who braved the weather to participate in a two-in-one event hosted by Idaho Water Sports on the Snake River.

Held outside Morey's Steakhouse, the event included a wakeboard clinic by former pro rider Gerry Nunn, plus a free demo day with representatives from Hobie kayaks and Hyperlite wakeboards.

"I want it to be as big as possible, so you get a couple different things going and hopefully you draw more people," said Carol Warr, IWS business manager.

Nunn, 42, has been holding clinics in Burley since 2002. His first exposure to the area was through his boat sponsor, Malibu, for which IWS is a dealer.

Warr said it is well worth it to fly Nunn in for two days every year. His sessions fill up fast, and Warr said they had enough interested riders that they could have added a third day.

"It's really easy to sell his clinics because he's so good with the kids. With his teaching ability, he can see what they're doing, the little things. He's a really good communicator and the customers are happy," Warr said.

Nunn's clinic concludes today at Morey's Steakhouse, 219 E. 3rd St. in Burley. Clinic spots are full, but the public can watch a performance by Nunn at 12:30 p.m., followed by an autograph session.

Minico Hires Four New Coaches

BY RYAN HOWE

rhowe@magicvalley.com

RUPERT • Minico High School has filled four head coaching positions, athletic director Kelly Arritt confirmed Tuesday.

The new coaches are Jamie Franklin for cross country, Fayelynn Garrett for volleyball, Terina Konrad for girls soccer and Michael Konrad for golf. "All of these coaches are good with kids, and I think they will all do really well," Arritt said.

Franklin, who is a family and consumer science teacher at Minico, replaces Linsey Sunderland, who stepped down after one season to pursue her education, according to Arritt.

"We have a great group of kids at Minico and I'd really like to see the program grow," Franklin said. "We have a great track program and it would be good to have an all-season program for distance runners, that they'd be able to transition from cross country to winter track to spring track."

Garrett, who had served as Minico's junior varsity volleyball coach the past nine years, takes over for Kris Christensen, who resigned after seven years as head coach.

was on the receiving end of some late-inning generosity by the Pocatello Razorbacks in sweeping a doubleheader Tuesday, 5-4 and 7-6 at Bill Ingram Field.

Chandler Greenfield's two-run triple in the fifth inning helped rally the Cowboys from a 4-0 deficit, but it was Hunter Elam's sacrifice bunt, thrown over the third baseman's head, that allowed the winning run to score for the Cowboys in the seventh.

Wyatt Doyle struck out six and walked four to get the win. He also fueled the Cowboys' winning rally in the nightcap, singling to lead off the seventh. Isaac Boyd pinch-ran for Doyle, advanced to second on a passed ball, stole third and scored when the catcher's throw sailed into left field.

Robert Montoya's tworun double in the second inning helped spark Twin Falls' Donnelley's Pepsi Tournament, which begins Thursday in Boise.

A Day Later, Other Williams Wins at Wimbledon

ASSOCIATED PRESS

WIMBLEDON, England • On one point Tuesday at Wimbledon, Serena Williams dumped a forehand into the net and dropped to a knee, her jaw clenched as she let out a shriek.

On another, she pushed a backhand into the net while her feet gave way, yet again leaving her awkwardly splayed on the grass at Court 2, the same place where her sister Venus lost a day earlier.

By the end, the younger Williams was screaming after nearly every point, good or bad — and, well, there were plenty of both. Her harder-than-thescore-looked 6-2, 6-4 victory over 62nd-ranked Barbora Zahlavova Strycova of the Czech Republic in the first round at the All England Club wasn't exactly perfect or pretty.

"Definitely a little relief," the sixthseeded Williams said. "I was letting out a lot of cries. I was happy to get through that."

Yes, Williams got the job done, something she couldn't say the last time she was at a major championship. Last month at the French Open, the 30-year-old American tossed away a big lead — nine times, she was two points from victory — and lost to a woman ranked 111th, the only firstround exit of Williams' career in 48 Grand Slam tournaments.

"I learned that you got to ... keep going," Williams said about that stunning defeat. "I was really disappointed. Obviously, I was extremely disappointed. But as Kelly Clarkson says, 'What doesn't kill you makes you stronger."

In part because of a series of health scares that sidelined her for about 10 months, Williams has gone two years since the most recent of her 13 major titles, including four at Wimbledon. And even though she bowed out quickly in Paris, Williams is a popular pick to do well this fortnight.

10. The Two Ricks: Rick Majerus was a regular contact during my undergrad days at the University of Utah, and I got a question or two in to Rick Pitino after an Arkansas-Kentucky game at Bud Walton Arena when it was one of the top five rivalries in college basketball. The thing people didn't realize outside of Salt Lake City is that Majerus' act was for the national stage; when it came to dealing with the local press, it wasn't a nonstop barrel of laughs.

9. Bob Lanier. This was in the mid-1990s, when the Jazz were stomping everyone and the Warriors were predictably pathetic. Lanier was the Warriors' interim coach and I had the nerve to stumble into his post-game presser just as it was breaking up. The salvo Lanier fired back at me for not being more prompt is unsuitable to be printed in a family publication.

8. Dario Franchitti. My only regret was that this came before camera phones become commonplace. A group of Southern California writers took the Metrolink from outside California Speedway in Fontana, and Franchitti and Paul Tracy were aboard to promote mass transit usage and their upcoming IRL race.

We finished the trip at Union Station in downtown Los Angeles and had lunch, with yours truly sitting to the left of Franchitti, better known then as Ashley Judd's boyfriend. Franchitti went on to win the Indy 500 public, you made note of it because there was part of you wondering if it was the last time you would see him. I had the good fortune to be sitting behind him in press row for a Jazz-Lakers game, and during a timeout, approached his "representative" and asked if I could say hello.

Before the rep could respond, Magic reached over and shook my hand. I introduced myself, told Magic I was glad to see him and hoped he enjoyed his stay in Salt Lake City, to which Magic responded, "The pleasure is all mine." Now you know why he's called Magic.

3. O.J. Simpson. Another entry whose qualifications for this list are borderline - I was in Vegas for a NASCAR race and from my experiences at the aforementioned Tyson fight knew that Evander Holyfield-John Ruiz II at Mandalay Bay would be a great place to people watch, as well as get a bite to eat. Space prevents me from telling everything about this encounter (my "conversation" with O.J. revolved around his USC and Buffalo Bills fame), but the number of women that flocked to have their picture taken with The Juice (this was post-acquittal) was both amazing and disturbing.

2. Rick Mears. This rates as one of two lifetime mano a mano athletic "encounters" (Christian Laettner was the other, when we were 12-year-old Little League baseball players), and it came at another media event, at a go-kart track in Southern California. There were three heats involving media people and motor sports figures of varying degrees of fame. I had a good kart in my heat and qualified for the main, where I had an engine that couldn't power a lawn mower.

Somewhere, I had to make a stand, and coming out of a turn, I kept my line as Mears tried to pass me on the inside. The four-time Indy 500 champ ended up in a wall of tires, I motored on and we shared a laugh about the incident in a sit-down after the race.

U.S. OLYMPIC TRIALS Hansen Caps Comeback with Olympic Berth

ASSOCIATED PRESS

OMAHA, Neb. • Brendan Hansen was done with swimming after two doses of Olympic heartache.

He's feeling a lot better now.

Next stop: London.

Hansen, who retired from the sport after the Beijing Games but couldn't stay away, made his comeback worthwhile by winning the 100-meter breaststroke at the U.S. Olympic trials Tuesday night.

"2008 was not lot of fun. I'm having a lot of fun right now," Hansen said. "I'm back."

Eric Shanteau is heading back to the Olympics, too, and this time he doesn't have to worry about battling cancer. He rallied to finish second to Hansen, pumping his fist when he saw his position, slapping hands with the winner, then running across the deck to kiss his wife.

Four years ago, Shanteau beat out Hansen for an individual spot on the team short ly after being diagnosed with testicular cancer. He put off treatment until after the games and has been healthy ever since.

Hansen wasn't the only swimmer to use the second night of the trials as redemption for Olympic disappointment.

Dana Vollmer, a gold medalist as a teenager in 2004, missed out on the team four years ago while battling injuries and health problems. It's all good now. She got off to win the 100 butterfly. "I'm so relieved," Vollmer said. "It was such an exciting race. I'm really overwhelmed right now."

And, oh yeah, there was another memorable race between Ryan Lochte and Michael Phelps, but there's a bigger showdown to come. One night after Lochte beat Phelps in the 400 individual medley, Lochte edged him out again in the semifinals of the tonight's final, which figures to be another classic between the world's two greatest swimmers.

"Oh, that was the semifinals. It doesn't really matter," Lochte said. "It doesn't matter until the finals. We're great racers, we just want to win. We definitely kicked it in gear the last 50, me and him. We know tomorrow night is going to be a lot faster."

Said Phelps: "It's going to be a tough race."

Lochte also has a strong morning swim in the 100 backstroke during the preliminaries, posting the secondfastest time behind Matt Grevers. But the laid-back Floridian doesn't want anything to take away from his next race with Phelps, so he dropped out of the back before the semifinals.

"That actually felt pretty good," Lochte said. "I know I have a lot left, so we'll see what happens."

He said it was his choice to scratch the 100 back.

"I just want to get ready," Lochte said. "I don't want to have to worry about swimming" an extra race.

USA Track Draws Scrutiny for No Tiebreaker Plan

ASSOCIATED PRESS

EUGENE, Ore. • Justin Gatlin would pick a runoff, reluctantly. So would Maurice Greene, who would do a coin toss as a last resort.

Everybody has an opinion - even Olympic gold medalists – about USA Track and Field's hastily unveiled options for breaking a third-place tie between Allyson Felix and Jeneba Tarmoh, who finished in a dead heat in the 100meter final at last weekend's Olympic trials

On Tuesday, three days after they raced, USATF still has no idea when it will be resolved.

The sprinters have until Sunday, when the trials end, to decide if they want a runoff - a winner-take-all race to break the tie – or a flip of a coin to determine who gets the last spot on the Londonbound team. One of them can simply bow out, too.

"I honestly can't tell you why a protocol wasn't in place," USATF President Stephanie Hightower said. "No one ever thought through it. The likelihood of it happening didn't cross anybody's minds."

Surprising, since this has happened before — to Hightower, no less.

This photo provided by USA Track & Field shows the third-place finish of Saturday's women's 100-meter final from a photo-finish camera, shot at 3,000-frames-per-second, during the U.S. Olympic Track and Field Trials in Eugene, Ore. Allyson Felix and Jeneba Tarmoh, in foreground, finished in a dead heat for the last U.S. spot in the 100 to the London Games, each leaning across the finish line in 11.068 seconds.

At the 1984 Olympic trials, she finished in a three-way tie for second place in the hurdles. A grainy photo was used to break the tie and she was the odd person out, failing to earn a spot.

"There's no question that everyone was caught off guard," Hightower said. "At least this gives us the motivation to look at our bylaws and competition rules to see if there are any other gaping holes we need to shore up before the next big championship or Olympic trials."

That doesn't exactly help Felix and Tarmoh now. They will compete in the 200 meters and after Saturday's final, if both make it, decide what to do next. The trials went on a two-day break Tuesday and will resume Thursday.

So far, the women have been pretty much mum on the matter. Their teammates have not.

"As an athlete, this worries me," said Gatlin, who won the 100 last weekend, but will skip the 200. "Because no one knew about this loophole in the system.

"To run the 100-meter final at the Olympic trials and for it to be decided on a coin toss? It blows my mind." So does a runoff.

"Your coach trains you for three rounds, for six rounds if you run the 100 and 200, and not an extra round. That's looked at as more of a sideshow," Gatlin said. "These ladies should have the respect for someone to say to them, 'Hey, you know what? There should've been a better (system) in place?"

7. Michael Jordan. Another post-game sitdown. After the TV people left, I was able to sit down to the left of His Airness. I don't remember the questions I asked, but I was close enough to see the hologrammed tie M.J. was wearing. Yes, that's hologrammed. You could only see his initials if the light hit his tie at the right angle.

6. Madonna. This was when the Material Girl was dating Dennis Rodman, and she shows up with a mini-entourage of three at the Delta Center for a Spurs-Jazz playoff game. This is a teen crush come to life. How can I get closer? Say hello?

Let's just say people like Madonna have bodyguards to keep people like myself from getting too close. A quick flash of my media credential and a turn in another direction gave me my escape. OK, I didn't actually talk with Madonna, but I had her attention for about five seconds and that was good enough for me.

5. Bruce Jenner. Two things I have in common with Bruce Jenner: We're both native New Yorkers (yours truly from Western New York, Jenner from Westchester County) and we rarely ventured into New York City as youngsters. And if Bruce was spending more than a night in Idaho, there is one question that would have to be answered:

Niagara Falls or Shoshone Falls?

4. Magic Johnson. This was about a year after he announced he was HIVpositive, so anytime Magic Blake Griffin or Dominique Wilkins? Have you been bulled over by Emmitt Smith as he scored a touchdown? Have you ever pitched batting practice to Barry Bonds?

Me neither. But I was once put in the Camel Clutch by a legendary wrestling great, and taunted by another one of pro wrestling's greatest heels all throughout.

To make it even better, that image ended up in print. That was the case in 1999, when the legendary tag-team duo came to Mavericks Stadium in Victorville, Calif., for a third-tier wrestling promoter's Legends of Wrestling night.

The day before, I did my best Gene Okerlund impression and interviewed both men for a story in the Daily Press, my employer at the time. Looking for a photo to go along with the story, someone thought it would be a good idea if the Sheik put me in his classic finishing move.

No waivers were signed and the Sheik promised he wouldn't "cinch" the hold, which lasted about 10 seconds. Nonetheless, certain back muscles get a good stretching. It was nothing serious, but it gave me a good idea of what that hold can do if properly applied.

Nunn Continued from Sports 1

Nunn, who had an 11-year pro career and competed up until 2008, says he sees familiar faces return each year, plus he's excited to work with new riders - regardless of experience and ability.

"I like everybody to go away having a good time, leave in one piece and take something new with them," said Nunn, who resides in Ohio.

Despite the short season to be out on the water, Nunn said Idaho has many talented wakeboarders.

"There's a good riding scene here," he said. "The majority of my clinics that I do, the level of riding is probably beginner to intermediate, maybe slightly advanced. Idaho, here on the Snake River, I get a good group of riders who are above advanced, pushing that outlaw limit. They are getting some technical tricks in there, riding smooth and getting quite a few inverts and spins under their belts."

Meanwhile on the grassy river bank, Hyperlite and Hobie representatives had gear on hand for the public to demo.

"We give people an opportunity to try different stuff that they might not normally be able to try, without having to buy anything," said Hyperlite rep Scott Sims.

Based out of the Hyperlite factory in Redmond, Wash., Sims travels between about 100 retailers throughout the Northwest and the Dakotas. Monday he held a demo in Idaho Falls, Tuesday in Burley, today in Boise and then he's off to Seattle for a pro tour event this weekend.

When given the opportunity, he said people like to demo the pricey items.

"You would think it would be a lot of beginners, but we have everybody wanting to test the high-end stuff," Sims said.

According to Sims, wake surfing has boomed in popularity. In wakeboarding, he said technology has altered the board's shape and the new high-end boots and bindings now resemble that of snowboarding.

"You get way better edge control and a lot more performance than you would with a regular binding. It's really taken off," Sims said.

Ouality has improved as prices have dropped, Sims added.

"Now you can buy something that is twice as good for less money than you spent 10 or 15 years ago," he said.

IWS's Hobie rep drove from Reno, Nev., with a trailer-load of kayaks, Warr said there's a growing market for kayaks designed for fishing and duck hunting. In Tuesday's wind, Hobie's sailboat kayak seemed ideal.

"And paddleboards have really taken off this year," Warr said.

New Coaches

"If Kris would have stayed, I would have just stayed doing JV. I loved coaching with her," said Garrett, a Minico alumnus and stay-at-home mom. "I just felt like when she left that the opportunity was right. I've been with the program for a long time and I know all the girls that are coming back and coming up. There's a great bunch of girls and they're really competitive. I wanted to make sure they got a coach that not only knows the game, but also knows the girls."

The husband-wife combo of Michael and Terina Konrad rounds out the Spartans' recent hires.

Michael Konrad, a 2005 Minico graduate who played college golf at Montana State University Billings, is a psychology and history teacher at Minico and was the assistant golf coach last season. He replaces Nick Nielsen, who recently left Idaho to become head professional at a golf course in Wyoming.

Terina Konrad, who played collegiate softball at Montana State University Billings, was already on staff at Minico as a math teacher and assistant softball coach. She takes over the girls soccer program from Dennis Haynes, who resigned to become the athletic director at West Minico Middle School.

"Soccer was huge in the area I grew up in, so I played soccer from 5 years old all the way through high school," said Terina Konrad, a Washington native. "... I love coaching and I love athletics. I've done mostly softball, but soccer will be a good change, it will be fun for me."

BALTIMORE • Albert Pujols homered in his Camden Yards debut, C.J. Wilson allowed one run in seven innings and the Los Angeles Angels had a seasonhigh 17 hits in a 7-3 win over the Baltimore Orioles on Tuesday night.

Peter Bourjos, Mark Trumbo and John Hester also connected for the Angels, who have won 12 of 16 overall and 12 of their last 13 road games. The four home runs were a season high.

Pujols doubled and hit his 12th homer, a two-run shot in the fifth inning off Brian Matusz (5-9). Pujols has now homered in 33 ballparks off 282 different pitchers.

YANKEES 6, INDIANS 4 NEW YORK • Phil Hughes bounced back from a rough outing to pitch eight scoreless innings and Alex Rodriguez hit a long home run for New York.

RED SOX 5, BLUE JAYS 1 BOSTON • Jarrod Saltalamacchia hit a tying homer with two outs in the seventh inning and Boston rallied to beat Toronto.

ROYALS 8, RAYS 2

KANSAS CITY, Mo. . Bruce Chen went seven innings in another workmanlike start and Jeff Francoeur and Yuniesky Betancourt both homered for Kansas City, which scored exactly eight runs for the third straight game.

RANGERS 7, TIGERS 5 ARLINGTON, Texas • Yu Darvish struck out 10 in seven innings to win his seventh consecutive start at Rangers Ballpark.

Rios homered to help the Chicago White Sox.

National League CARDINALS 5, MARLINS 2

MIAMI • Yadier Molina hit a three-run homer and Kyle Lohse pitched into the eighth inning to lead the St. Louis Cardinals past the staggering Miami Marlins.

REDS 4, BREWERS 3

CINCINNATI • Bronson Arroyo took a no-hitter into the eighth inning before giving up a three-run lead, but Drew Stubbs led off the bottom half with a homer, sending Cincinnati to the victory.

BRAVES 8, DIAMONDBACKS 1

ATLANTA • Tim Hudson pitched eight sharp innings and Atlanta opened its longest homestand of the season with a victory.

PHILLIES 5, PIRATES 4

PHILADELPHIA • Ty Wigginton and Carlos Ruiz homered to back Vance Worley and Philadelphia won its second straight to climb out of last place in the NL East.

CUBS 5, METS 3

CHICAGO • Anthony Rizzo had two hits and drove in the go-ahead run in his first game with the Chicago Cubs, who rallied for a 5-3 victory over the sliding New York Mets on Tuesday night.

ASTROS 5, PADRES 3

HOUSTON • J.D. Martinez hit a two-run homer, Jed Lowrie added a solo shot and the Houston Astros held on.

NATIONALS 12, ROCKIES 5 DENVER • Adam LaRoche homered twice, Ryan Zimmerman collected his 1,000th career hit and also homered, and the Washington Nationals routed the Colorado Rockies.

Brees Hopeful of Long-term Deal

BY RACHEL COHEN

NEW YORK • New Orleans quarterback Drew Brees is confident that he and the Saints will agree on a longterm contract.

With the start of training camp about a month off, the two sides still have "a ways to go" to close the gap, the 2010 Super Bowl MVP said Tuesday.

Nonetheless, he said, "I'm confident, and always have been, that we'll get a longterm deal accomplished."

Brees acknowledged that the NFL's bounty investigation into the Saints has slowed down negotiations. "This has been a stressful offseason in a lot of ways. There's been a lot of distractions for everybody," he said. "I'm not using that as an excuse other than just stating it as fact. That has delayed things quite a bit at times."

And when it comes to that bounty probe, Brees is adamant that the league has not proved money ever changed hands in a pay-toinjure scheme.

"How can everybody think that when there's been no proof that's been put forth thus far?" he said. "There's been an investigation; there's been a lot of stuff put in the media as to what was going on. But is there any proof to back that up? No, there's not. Not yet?"

College Football Gets Its Playoff

BY RALPH D. RUSSO Associated Press

WASHINGTON • Playoffs and tournaments long have determined champions of every college sport from baseball to bowling.

The exception was major college football.

That ended Tuesday. Come 2014, the BCS is dead.

A committee of university presidents approved a plan for a four-team playoff put forward by commissioners of the top football conferences.

For years, the decisionmakers had balked at any type of playoff because they said it would diminish the importance of the regular season. If regular season, the way the BCS has done since 1998, the new format will create a pair of national semifinals.

Many college football fans have been clamoring for a playoff for years, and the BCS has been a constant target for criticism. Lawmakers have railed against it. A political action committee was formed, dedicated to its destruction. The Justice Department looked into whether it broke antitrust laws. Even President Obama said he wanted a playoff. Now it's a reality.

final rotation.

The winners of the semis will advance to the championship on the first Monday in January that is six or more days after the last semifinal. The first "Championship Monday," as it was called in the BCS release, is set for Jan. 12, 2015.

The site of the title game will move around the way the Super Bowl does, with cities bidding for the right to host.

The teams will be selected by a committee, similar to the way the NCAA basketball

"It's a great day for college football. As soon as the commissioners realized they could do this four sites that do not hold a semifinal in a given year.

"I think it's tremendous progress," Washington State coach Mike Leach, a playoff proponent. "Five years ago there wasn't even dialogue about a playoff. Instead of diving in the water, they dipped their toes in. I think it's' going to be ridiculously exciting and it's going to generate a bunch of money. I wish they dived in."

The BCS had given automatic qualifying status to six conferences, the SEC, Big Ten, Big 12, Atlantic Coast Conference, Pac-12 and Big East. That allowed those leagues better access to the big, high-payout games than the other five conferences, such as the Mountain West and Conference USA. The Mountain West applied for a waiver for automatic qualification for the final two seasons of BCS play but was denied Tuesday. Automatically qualified status is gone and the commissioners believe the new system will create more interesting games beyond the ones that determine the national title. "What the system now is, several semifinals, championship game and some access bowls. By creating a couple of access bowls, people will be able to play high-quality opponents in big venues with big brands," Big Ten Commissioner Jim Delany said.

Championships at Wimbledon, England, Tuesday.

Wimbledon

"For me, when I'm playing a match," Williams said, "I either win it or lose it."

She'll want to play better than she did against Zahlavova Strycova, who is 0-21 against top-10 opponents, 13-27 in Grand Slam matches, and never has made it past the third round at any major.

Some other top players were sluggish at the start against unheralded foes Tuesday, when action was cut short in the evening because of rain.

Two-time Wimbledon champion Rafael Nadal, for instance, trailed 4-0 against 80th-ranked Thomas Bellucci of Brazil before turning it around and winning 7-6 (0), 6-2, 6-3.

"Fantastic for me," Nadal said, "but I have to improve a lot for the next round."

Defending women's champion Petra Kvitova fell behind 3-0 and 4-1 but eventually used a sevengame run to take control and beat 96th-ranked Akgul Amanmuradova 6-4, 6-4. The match was halted by a 30-minute rain delay in the second set; when they returned, Kvitova needed all of three minutes to wrap things up.

"In the beginning," Kvitova acknowledged, "I think I was nervous."

Twelve singles matches were suspended in progress and four were postponed altogether. Among those that began but didn't finish, 2003 U.S. Open champion and three-time Wimbledon runner-up Andy Roddick led British wild-card entry Jamie Baker by a set and a break; French Open finalist Sara Errani was a point from beating U.S. qualifier CoCo Vandeweghe; and 21stseeded Milos Raonic of Canada was a game from eliminating Santiago Giraldo of Colombia, leading by two sets and 5-4 in the third.

Winners included 10thseeded Mardy Fish of the United States, playing his first match since having a medical procedure on his heart a month ago. The 30year-old Fish hit 24 aces and defeated Ruben Ramirez-Hidalgo of Spain 7-6 (3), 7-5, 7-6 (1), then didn't attend a postmatch news conference; a tour spokesman said Fish wasn't feeling well, but didn't elaborate.

All three Australian men in action Tuesday exited, meaning none reached the second round at the All England Club for the first time since 1938. No. 20 Bernard Tomic, a quarterfinalist at 18 years old in 2011, was knocked out by David Goffin, the Belgian wildcard recipient who took a set off Roger Federer in the fourth round of the French Open; 2002 Wimbledon champion Lleyton Hewitt lost to No. 5 Jo-Wilfried Tsonga; and Matthew Ebden was beaten by Benoit Paire of France.

"The boys didn't have the best day," said Hewitt, who used to be ranked No. 1 but has dealt with a series of injuries, is now 202nd, and needed a wild card to get into the field.

He hadn't bowed out in the first round at Wimbledon since 2003. Williams never has. Never lost before the third round, actually, and now is 13-0 in openers at the grass-court Grand Slam tournament. only two teams had a chance to win a championship in the postseason, even one loss could be too many. That made for some very high stakes regular-season games. As recently as 2008, Southeastern Conference Commissioner Mike Slive proposed the type of plan adopted Tuesday, and it was quickly shot down.

Four years later, minds changed. The 12 university presidents stood shoulder to shoulder on a stage at a news conference in a posh hotel in the nation's capital and delivered the news.

"It's a great day for college football," BCS Executive Director Bill Hancock said. "As soon as the commissioners realized they could do this and protect the regular season, the light went on for everybody."

The move completes a sixmonth process for the commissioners, who have been working on a new way to determine a major college football champion after years of griping from fans. The latest configuration is certain to make even more money for the schools than the old system and not satisfy everyone.

"There were differences of views," said Virginia Tech President Charles Steger, who headed the BCS presidential oversight committee. "I think it would be a serious mistake to assume it was a rubber stamp."

Nebraska Chancellor Harvey Perlman was the most notable holdout. He had said he preferred the status quo or a tweak of the Bowl Championship Series. Perlman said the playoff still wouldn't be his first choice, but he was not going to stand in the way of progress.

"This is the package that was put forth and we will strongly support it," he said.

Instead of simply matching the nation's No. 1 and No. 2 teams in a title game after the

No. 1 will play No. 4, and No. 2 will play No. 3 on Dec. 31 and/or Jan. 1. The sites of those games will rotate among the four current BCS bowls – Rose, Orange, Fiesta and Sugar – and two more to be determined. One of the new sites will likely be wherever the newly formed bowl created by the SEC and Big 12 is played, Slive said.

The Cotton Bowl, played at the $1.1 billion Cowboys Stadium in Arlington, Texas, has long wanted to be part of the BCS and is expected to make a strong push to be in the semitournament field is set. The men's tournament has 68 teams, and 37 at-large bids.

The football committee will have a much tougher task, trying to whittle the field down to four. This season, 125 schools will play at the highest level of college football.

Among the factors the committee will consider are won-loss record, strength of schedule, head-to-head results and whether a team is a conference champion. The selection committee will also play a part in creating matchups for the games at the

NOTICE OF HEARING REGARDING PROPOSED INCREASE IN WATER AND SEWER CONNECTION FEES AND INCREASE IN SEWER RATES BY THE CITY OF HEYBURN

NOTICES

Pursuant to the requirements of Idaho Code Section 63-1311A, the City of Heyburn gives notice of a hearing to consider the increase of certain fees or rates. The hearing will be conducted on July 11, 2012 at 7:00 P.M. at the Heyburn Council Chambers, at City Hall, located at 941 - 18th Street, Heyburn, Idaho. At that hearing, the Mayor and City Council will take public comment on the proposed increases.

The proposed in
CURRENT AM	OUNT OF RATE	PROPOS	SED INCREASE
SEWER CONN	ECTION FEE:	SEWER	SERVICE CONNECTION FEE:
Single Family D	welling: $825	SIZE	COST
Duplex:	$975	4 inch:	$2,984.11
Tri-Plex:	$1,125	6 inch:	$5,436.12
Four-Plex:	$1,275	8 inch:	$10,504.24
		10 inch:	$15,572.36

WATER CO	NNECTION FEE:	WATER SERVICE CONNECTION FEE:
1 inch:	$1,395	SIZE COST
1.5 inch:	$1,795	1 inch: $2,429.43
2inch:	$1,995	2 inch: $7,165.49
		3 inch: $8,745.09
		4 inch: $14,329.81
		6 inch: $32,945.56
		8 inch: $59,007.60
		10 inch: $90,654.37

Also, there will be a new fee assessed for users who contribute excessive strength Wastewater exceeding allowable monthly limits of BOD (250 mg/l), TSS (250 mg/l), & Phosphates (10 mg/l). Excessive strength wastewater users are subject to a surcharge for the treatment of the excess loading. Wastewater users shall provide a sampling manhole on site. Loadings shall be determined by estimates or tests by City Representatives. The following equation shall be used to determine the additional loading fee:

Loading Fee = [(Phosphorus/10-1) + (TSS/250-1) + (BOD/2501 -1)] *Unit Rate

The reason or need for such increase is that the City commissioned a study of the City's current rates by the engineering firm, Civil Science of Twin Falls, Idaho. A copy of the study is available at the City Clerk's office. The results of the study indicate that increases in connection fees are required to offset the actual cost of providing the water and sewer connections and service Dated this 13th day of June, 2012.

In 1972, the video game company Atari, Inc., was founded by Nolan Bushnell and Ted Dabney in Santa Clara. Calif.

In 1977, the Supreme Court struck down state laws and bar association rules that prohibited lawyers from advertising their fees for routine services.

In 1985, the legendary Route 66, which originally stretched from Chicago to Santa Monica, Calif., passed into history as officials decertified the road.

In 1991, Supreme Court Justice Thurgood Marshall, the first black to sit on the nation's highest court, announced his retirement. (His departure led to the contentious nomination of Clarence' Thomas to suce him.)

Ten years ago: In a landmark church-state decision, the U.S. Supreme Court ruled, 5-4, that tuition vouchers were constitutional. The Group of Eight nations concluded a two-day summit in Alberta, Canada, by announcing aid packages for Russia and Africa. John Entwistle, the bass player who'd co-founded The Who, was found dead in a Las Vegas hotel room; he was 57.

Five years ago: Former Treasury chief Gordon Brown became British prime minister, succeeding Tony Blair. In her first televised interview since being released from custody, a demure Paris Hilton told CNN's Larry King she would never again drink and drive and that her time in jail was "a time-out in life."

One year ago: Former Illinois Gov. Rod Blagojevich was convicted by a federal jury in Chicago of a wide range of corruption charges, including the allegation that he'd tried to sell or trade President Barack Obama's U.S. Senate seat. (Blagojevich was later sentenced to 14 years in prison.) International judges ordered the arrest of Libya's Moammar Gadhafi for murdering civilians. Venus and Serena Williams were eliminated in the fourth round of Wimbledon, the first time in five years that neither sister advanced to the quarterfinals at the All England Club. Actress Elaine Stewart, 81, died in Beverly Hills, Calif., after a long illness.

to motion. LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Following the leader, or being one, isn't the best tactic under these stars. View revolutionary ideas that are bandied about as a template for the future, rather than using them as a tool to change the present.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Invite someone to help you with your work. Work situations can put you in contact with people who may turn into more than just casual buddies. Be careful not to cross the line of propriety.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): gitation is something that belongs in the washing machine. It might be tempting to participate in political or religious controversies. Boy meets girl physical chemistry can create an intense reaction. SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): There is a right time and place to let actions speak louder than words. Tonight you and a special someone could become tongue-tied around one another. Apply passions to create mutual pleasures. SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): The bandits run rampant. The stars are lining up in ways that can rob your piggy bank. It will pay to be very watchful during the next several days. Make no major expenditures; sign no contracts. CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You may be wise to put your pet passions on a leash. You can be a tiger behind closed doors, but in social situations you are better off pretending to be a pussy cat. Hold off on crucial decisions. AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Conversations might stimulate creativity. A wideranging discussion or phone call could lead to a new friendship. Forge common ground between yourself and an adversary to change your outlook. PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Capitalize on likability. If a ship is sinking, people will look to you as though vou were a life raft. Your trustworthiness in tough times and reliability when chips are down may make you very popular.

IF JUNE 27 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Concentrate on achieving your business or career aspirations between now and the end of the year. In October, however, your objectives may change drastically. Outside influences could put you into a tailspin temporarily, causing you to work harder in November. In January, you may be caught up in a romantic fantasy that drains your energy or wastes your resources. Keep the credit card in the drawer, as overspending and extravagance may be highly tempting. You will be gambling on the future and could lose the bet.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Play the part of a visionary to reap the greatest benefits. Rather than stirring things up by taking action, just bide your time during the next several days. You must sidestep subtle manipulative techniques.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Yin and yang become inseparable. Spend your spare time making your special someone feel more special. You have a deft romantic touch, but must avoid new commitments.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Ape the antics of the three monkeys who could see no evil, hear no evil, and speak no evil. Networking skills can win the assistance of powerful allies who will support your causes if you remain discreet.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Take time to uncover new facts. Dig a little deeper and don't be afraid to follow your fascinating fancies. This is a good time for research - but not a good time to put key financial plans in-

Times News

DEAR ABBY: My husband, who is 53, talks often about his college days when he smoked marijuana. I tried it once and didn't like it. Over the past several years he has started smoking it again.

I have told him I don't approve, but he says he does it only occasionally "to take the edge off." Many times he has smoked when we're out on bike rides, on road trips or a Sunday drive. It makes me feel like he needs to be high in order to have a good time with me.

I tried compromising by asking him not to do it when we are together. He agreed, but he doesn't keep his word. He does it thinking I don't know what he's up to.

I have noticed that he is becoming forgetful and is sometimes unable to understand information. Is this a midlife crisis he's going through? How do I get him to stop?

- MRS. POTHEAD IN WINONA, MINN. DEAR MRS. POTHEAD: It's not a midlife crisis. I'm told that the grass that's available today is far stronger than when your hubby smoked it in college.

Your husband may be becoming forgetful and unable to process information because he's smoking pot A LOT, or because of a neurological problem. Because marijuana slows reaction time, he should not be driving while under the influence, and you shouldn't be riding with him.

Since you can't convince him to stop, you could benefit from visiting a support group for families and friends of individuals who are addicted to drugs, because marijuana is one, and it appears your husband has become addicted.

P.S. Of course, marijuana is also illegal.

DEAR ABBY: "Jerry," my husband, has been sending pictures of himself to online dating sites, advertising for a personal relationship with the so-called "right woman."

I feel this is a betrayal of our marriage vows and that it's cheating. He claims he's "just looking" at what's out there.

My concern is, why is he looking in the first place? All I get from him is "I love you"

THE ACES ON BRIDGE® "And let me tell vou. reading about one's failings in the daily papers is one of the privileges of high office in this free country of

— Nelson Rockefeller

At matchpoints, once a majorsuit fit has been found, it is hardly ever right to change directions and head toward a minor suit or no-trump. But at the slam level, it may pay to abandon a 5-3 major fit in favor of a 4-4 minor, and notrump could be selected, either for matchpoint reasons or because it may survive a weakness in the major. Both these factors influenced one of my readers, Barton Bloom, in bidding seven no-trump in today's deal. He was not using Key-Card Blackwood, a convention that allows you to locate the subsidiary trump honors. He had visualized better spades in the dummy and saw little advantage in playing spades rather than notrump.

Unfortunately, the hole in the spade suit meant that any grand slam was virtually hopeless. But Bloom did not give up. He began by winning the opening lead of the diamond king with the ace and cashing four heart winners.

Even though South had begun with only 10 tricks, with an 11th trick to come from a club finesse, he was able to exert huge pressure on West. When he led the last heart, he could turn 11 tricks into 13. At the table, West threw a club, and now the club finesse brought home the grand slam. A spade discard would have been equally fatal, and throwing the diamond gueen would have brought only temporary relief. The diamond 10 would have put West through the wringer again.

SOUTH ▲ K 10 8 7 5 ♥ K Q J 6 5 A 6 ♣4 Vulnerable: North-South Dealer: South The bidding: South West North East 1 ♠ 2 ♥ Pass 2 🜩 Pass 3 🌢 Pass Pass 4 ♦ Pass 4♥ Pass 4 NT 5 🌢 Pass Pass 7 NTAll pass Opening lead: Diamond king BID WITH THE ACES 06-27-B South holds: ▲ K 10 8 7 5 ♥ K Q J 6 5 ♦ A 6 4 South West North East 1 ♦

ANSWER: Although there are still a few people who play a cuebid of two diamonds as strong and artificial, the most popular treatment of the call is to use it as a Michaels cue-bid, showing 5-5 in the majors. The minimum strength would be this hand without the heart king, at any vulnerability, so in context you have a decent hand for the bid.

and "I want to be with you." I have seen these dating sites. and I feel hurt and betrayed. Am I wrong to feel this way, or should I believe what he says about harmless fun?

- BROKEN-HEARTED LIBRA, LOUISVILLE. KY.

DEAR LIBRA: Your instincts are right on the money. You have every right to feel betrayed, hurt and cheated on because your husband's words don't match his actions. What he's doing is not "harmless fun"; it is a danger to your marriage. Do not tolerate it. Run, don't walk, to a marriage counselor. If your husband won't go with you, go alone because your marriage could depend upon it.

DEAR ABBY: I was divorced 20 years ago and have two children from my marriage. My ex-husband was black and I am Caucasian. Over the years, when I've discussed my children or showed photos of them, people have asked me if they are "mixed," if they have the same father and if I was married to their father. I presume that some folks assume interracial marriage indicates a lack of good judgment, giving rise to further inappropriate questions.

I would love a good, snappy comeback to those questions without stooping to their level of rudeness. I have tried, "Why would you ask me that?" and got even more questions. Any advice or help you could give would be great.

- TAKEN ABACK IN INDIANA

DEAR TAKEN ABACK: Rather than a snappy comeback, why not simply answer "yes" to all three of those questions and end the conversation?
