Hailey Marks 3 Years since Soldier's Capture

HAILEY • While much of the country begins decorating itself in red, white and blue, the most common color in the city of Hailey remains yellow.

Yellow ribbons throughout the community remind residents of their missing native son, U.S. Army Sgt. Bowe Bergdahl, now 26, who was taken captive by the Taliban in eastern Afghanistan June 30, 2009.

Today marks three years since Bergdahl's captivity began, and three years of uncertainty and anguish for a family and a community.

Bergdahl is America's only prisoner of war in the Afghanistan and Iraq conflicts.

On Friday, Bergdahl's parents, Bob and Jani Bergdahl, declined interviews but released a statement to mark the date. The parents remain hopeful for the release of their son and vowed to continue to work to bring him home.

"We would like to thank the organizers and participants in a number of events around our nation who have rallied to bring awareness to our cause of bringing Bowe home," the Bergdahls said in the statement. "The

TWIN FALLS • Edie Nunes is so tuned in to milk price fluctuations that she can quote the latest figures in seconds by consulting her smartphone.

On Wednesday, she got encouraging news during a random check. The futures price for milk will be $17.55 per hundred pounds in August, a better rate than Magic Valley dairies have received this year.

"The first four months were really rough, but this is a good sign," Nunes said. "You have to look ahead and be positive."

The combination of low milk prices and high feed prices has caused some Magic Valley dairies to go out of business, said Rick Naerebout, manager of Independent Milk Producers.

"Typically we've seen dairies selling and other dairies picking up the cows and facilities," Naerebout said. "Today I can think of a half-dozen facilities empty in the valley."

Projections show that dairies will begin seeing "positive margins," or profits, beginning in the fourth quarter, he added. "But there's not a whole lot of optimism for positive margins until the fourth quarter."

The number of dairies is declining across the state, according to the Idaho Dairymen's Association. The group said there were 800 licensed dairies here in 2008, but that was down to 569 dairies as of September 2011.

Naerebout said south-central Idaho dairies got a dollar less for 100 pounds of milk during the first few months of 2012 compared with a year ago.

"Early to mid-summer is never a great time for milk pricing," he said, "but the overall trend in the first five months last year was $16.70 and the first four months this year was $15.70."

Despite those numbers, farmers remain

Twins Get Their Wish

The Wishing Star Foundation gave a shopping spree this week to two boys battling a rare medical condition.

TWIN FALLS • As a white limousine pulled up to his house, 4-year-old Tucker Bentley sat on the porch waiting.

Before getting in, he stood back as family members lifted his twin brother Carter out of a wheelchair and got him settled in the back seat.

The Wishing Star Foundation's Magic Valley chapter granted wishes for the brothers, who have a rare condition called Moyamoya disease. On Wednesday night, they received the first part of their wish: A $500 shopping spree at ToyTown and Walmart.

Their mother Brittney D'Amra said she's grateful for the Wishing Star Foundation and the chance for her sons to have some fun.

"It's taken their mind off doctor's visits and hospitals," she said.

Small T.F. Fire Caused by Ditch Burning

ASHLEY SMITH • TIMES-NEWS

A member of the Twin Falls Fire Department mops up a fire Friday along the 1400 block of Harrison Street South in Twin Falls.

BY ALISON GENE SMITH

TWIN FALLS • The Twin Falls Fire Department quickly stopped a small fire Friday that burned about four acres in the 1400 block of Harrison Street South.

The fire, which started just before 3 p.m., damaged about 150 feet of a vinyl fence, said Battalion Chief Jack Barnes.

Barnes said the fire started when someone was burning a ditch and the fire got away from them.

It's the third fire near or in Twin Falls this week that started with a controlled burn.

"It's a little bit dry out," Barnes said. "People ought to think about holding off for a while."

The fire damaged a shed, but firefighters kept the flames about 30 feet away from a house and garage, he said.

Three engines, a small attack vehicle and a command vehicle responded, Barnes said. The blaze was under control at 4:10 p.m., but one crew remained at about 5 p.m. to ensure the fire was completely out, he said.

ASK ST. LUKE'S

Many Options for Bunion Treatments

I think I have a bunion on my foot by my big toe. I've heard that they can be hereditary. How do I know if it is a bunion and what can I do to reduce the pain from it?

— Tom, Filer

Answered by Dr. Randal Wraalstad, DPM, St. Luke's Clinic, Orthopedics and Podiatry:

A standard bunion is a prominence of the great toe joint. You start feeling a bony prominence on the inside of the foot, just prior to the big toe. With time, it can get larger, painful and red. The big toe can start drifting toward the second toe, which makes the prominence even more apparent. This can be painful in shoes because of pressure and rubbing. Bunions can be just a bone prominence or they can also develop a bone that becomes out of position. The vast majority of bone and joint problems are inherited from your parents, but bunions can also be caused by traumatic injury to your foot.

Usually, the severity of the bunion is assessed by clinical exam and an X-ray, which can tell how much of an angle between the metatarsal bones is developing. The pain of the bunion can be simply on the bump or if it becomes more severe, it can also be in the joint itself. This is an indicator of arthritis of the great toe joint.

Treatments are based on how painful and large the bunion is, or if the pain is limiting a person's activities or shoe choices. Conservative treatments can include shoe changes, padding, orthotics or arch supports, anti-inflammatory medication or ice packs to reduce swelling and pain. Some people choose to simply just live with the pain. Surgical treatment is also done in many cases.

If you have tried many of the conservative treatment options and found mediocre results, and your quality of life is comprised because of a bunion, there are surgical procedures that can fix the problem. Your podiatric surgeon will be able to assess your situation and review your options with you.

Please contact your foot specialist if you have additional questions or need medical treatment.

along to help the boys shop. When they arrived at Toy-Town after the limousine ride, he pointed Tucker in the direction of a wall of toy trucks.

"Tucker, look at all these trucks," he said, as the 4-year-old came running.

Bobango helped him choose his favorite one while D'Ambra showed Carter some glow-in-the-dark ceiling stars.

In addition to the shopping trip, the second part of the boys' wish came on Thursday.

Since Tucker enjoys playing outside, workers installed a custom-made sandbox in the family's backyard. And for Carter, they put in a 10-foot tall swing set that's handicapped-accessible.

The Wishing Star Foundation was established in 1983 and grants wishes to children ages 3 to 21 who have a life-threatening illness. The non-profit organization operates in Idaho, as well as eastern and central Washington.

Tucker and Carter are battling Moyamoya disease, a rare disorder caused by blocked arteries at the base of the brain. The disorder means "puff of smoke" in Japanese, which describes the look of a patient's blood vessels on an X-ray.

After he had a stroke, Tucker er was diagnosed with the disease about one year ago. Carter's diagnosis followed.

"It's been a life-changing experience," D'Ambra said.

She said it's been an emotional roller coaster. Before her sons' medical problems surfaced, she'd never heard of a 4-year-old having strokes.

Carter has suffered three massive strokes and a serious brain bleed. Now, he can't walk, talk or eat on his own.

Allie Vargas, Magic Valley chapter president for the Wishing Star Foundation, said someone submitted a referral to the organization on behalf of the boys.

A Wishing Star Foundation representative contacted D'Ambra and asked if she'd like Tucker and Carter to participate.

The organization contacted the boys' doctor to verify that they're dealing with a life-threatening illness. Then, the children each made a wish of something they truly wanted.

"We try to get it straight from their little mouths," Vargas said.

Typically, the Magic Valley's Wishing Star Foundation chapter grants one wish each year. One of the most common wishes is a trip to the "happiest place on Earth" — Disneyland.

Vargas said the organization has also gone across borders to grant wishes for children in surrounding states such as Montana and Nevada.

Once a child's wish is granted, that's not the end of the process. The organization continues to stay in contact with the family.

"We don't just grant the wish and then drop them," Vargas said.

yellow ribbons we see all around our own community remind us that our son has not been forgotten here at home or around the world."

As Bowe Bergdahl enters his fourth year as a prisoner, the family asked that people remain aware of his situation.

"We want this to be the year we see our only son safely returned home," they wrote.

Idaho Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter also released a statement about the anniversary.

"It's a sad day for all Idahoans as we face the reality that one of our native sons is about to enter his fourth year in captivity," Otter's statement said. "But I know the Department of Defense and other U.S. agencies are doing all they can to safely bring Sgt. Bergdahl home to his family."

In the statement, Otter wrote he has met with the Bergdahl family several times and is impressed with their fortitude throughout the ordeal.

"I know that part of their strength comes from the support they receive in their community, from citizens around our state and our nation," Otter said. "Please continue to keep the Bergdahls in your thoughts and prayers as we look forward to the day Bowe Bergdahl safely returns to Idaho."

To mark the third anniversary, Bergdahl was chosen as the honorary grand marshal in Hailey's Fourth of July Parade, City Administrator Heather Dawson said. That takes place Wednesday.

"The community is pretty focused on that," she said.

Today, a fundraiser for Sun Valley Adaptive Sports, High-er Ground and the Bergdahl family is being held in Bowe's honor.

Supporters will gather at Nelson Field at Hailey Elementary School for a CrossFit workout event to raise awareness and funds. According to the event's website, the workout consists of three rounds for each year in captivity. The number of reps in each activity also hold significance, the site says.

Bergdahl's parents have generally shied away from the press. But this spring, they granted a few interviews — largely in national media — to raise awareness and express frustration in what they see as a stalled effort to bring their son home.

Bob Bergdahl also spoke in June at the annual Rolling Thunder motorcycle rally in Washington, D.C., where he thanked those present for drawing attention to prisoners of war and troops missing in action.

In June, emails from Bowe quoted in Rolling Stone magazine — reportedly sent to his parents before he was captured by the Taliban three years ago — suggest Bergdahl was disillusioned with the war and considered deserting.

The military has never detailed the circumstances of Bergdahl's disappearance or capture, and he is not classified as a deserter. He was initially listed as "duty status unknown" and is now considered "missing-captured."

City to Crack Down on Code Violators

Sean Standley, Twin Falls city code enforcement officer, stands in brush and weeds that are more than knee-high. The vegetation was already beginning to die — posing a fire hazard to surrounding homes.

TIMES-NEWS

TWIN FALLS • Concerned about fire danger on the Fourth of July holiday, the city of Twin Falls is asking property owners to remove dead or overgrown vegetation on or near their homes.

City code states “Every owner, tenant or occupant of private property within the City shall cut and remove the weeds and grass and clean and remove the rubbish as often as necessary.”

The city’s Code Enforcement Department is closely monitoring properties within the city that are potential fire hazards because of overgrown and dead weeds or brush, said city spokesman Josh Palmer in a press release.

“The code isn’t just for aesthetics, it also helps protect homes from fire hazards during these hot and dry summers,” Sean Standley, city code enforcement officer, said in the release. “I see places with dry weeds growing up to my waist. A lot of it is drying out and that’s a problem when you know that people will be lighting off fireworks in a couple of days.”

According to the release, the city is required by code to remove weeds, grass or rubbish that pose a hazard to the community. If the property is vacant, the code enforcement officer will hire a contractor to remove weeds and brush from the property.

If the city has to remove the plants, the property owner is billed or a lien can be placed against the property.

The city can also fine property owners up to $600 if they live on the property and do not maintain weeds, brush and rubbish.

“Most of the time, we never have to go that far because the property owner is just unaware of the issue,” Standley said.

“Dairy is awesome,” Edie Nunes said. “We are feeding the world. Agriculture is No. 1.”

Nunes, her husband Steve and his brother Luis own Mid-Valley Dairy south of Buhl. They milk about 1,100 of their 2,000 cows and sell all of the milk — 79,000 pounds a day — to Glanbia Foods Inc. It’s been that way for 21 years, ever since Glanbia came to Twin Falls.

Nunes says the company has helped them get through tough times with inventive business practices, including allowing Mid-Valley to lock in a futures price for 75 percent of an upcoming month’s milk supply.

“Glanbia has really stepped up,” Nunes said. “They are in it for the long haul, and they want us to stick around, too. They’re huge on family owned dairies.”

The futures pricing practice, known as hedging, also works for grain prices, she said. With rising feed prices a big part of the financial scenario, it helps dairymen to know what that expense will be in coming months.

Steve Nunes is a third-generation dairyman who moved his 200-cow operation to the Magic Valley from California in 1991. Edie, who handles all the financial chores along with other jobs, got a crash course in dairy industry issues when they married.

“I’ve learned,” she said with a smile. “It’s been baptism by fire.”

One of the bedrock truths is that the price Glanbia pays for milk is directly tied to cheese prices, Nunes said. “It’s all supply and demand.”

The supply of Idaho milk has risen quickly over the past two decades. According to figures from Glanbia CEO Jeff Williams, the state’s dairies produced 2.5 billion pounds in 1990. That went up to 6.5 billion pounds in 2000 and hit 12.2 billion pounds in 2009.

Now, almost 2 million of Idaho’s 36 million pounds of milk produced daily get pushed out of the local market because of lack of demand, or are sold at a significant discount, said Naerebout.

OBITUARIES

Dale E. Budd

Nov. 1, 1924-June 28, 2012

JEROME • Dale E. Budd, 87, of Jerome, passed away Thursday, June 28, 2012, at Ashley Manor in Jerome.

He was born Nov. 1, 1924, in Twin Falls, Idaho, to Floyd and Mabel Bernard Budd. In 1942, Dale graduated from Hazelton High School. After graduation, he was drafted into the U.S. Army. He served in France and Germany during World War II, and was injured while on a reconnaissance mission in France. He returned home after his injuries, and began farming with his father. Following his father's passing, he took over the family farm. On Aug. 21, 1944, he married the love of his life, Lois Fairbanks. To this union were born three children.

Work was Dale's highlight of his life. He was dedicated to his farm and family, and stuck to the true tradition that a man's handshake and his word was his bond. Dale retired and sold the farm in 1988. He was a member of the Frontier Grange and the Snake River Elks Lodge, where he served as trustee. He enjoyed playing pool, bowling and square dancing. After his retirement, he assisted Lois in caring for the home and together they enjoyed golfing.

Dale is survived by his wife, Lois of Jerome; son, Ron Budd of Jerome; daughter, Diane (Jack) Cooper of Hazelton; and daughter-in-law, Paula Budd of Twin Falls, along with seven grandchildren and 14 great-grandchildren. He was preceded in death by his parents; one son, Terry; two grandchildren; three brothers and two sisters. He will be deeply missed by all who knew loved him.

The family will receive friends at a memorial open house from 6 to 8 p.m. Monday, July 2, at Parke's Magic Valley Funeral Home, 2551 Kimberly Road in Twin Falls. Private inurnment will follow at a later date at the Sunset Memorial Park. Those who wish may share memories and condolences at www.magicvalleyfuneralhome.com.

The family would like to thank the caring staff at Ashley Manor in Jerome for their never ending love and care.

TF Parking Meter Posts Coming Down Sunday

TIMES-NEWS

TWIN FALLS • All signs of parking meters in downtown Twin Falls will soon be gone.

The poles that just weeks ago held the old meters will be cut down on Sunday morning, the city announced in a recent statement.

The city's Streets Department will begin removing 240 steel posts at the base at 7 a.m. Sunday and then patch the holes in the sidewalk.

Workers will also repaint parking lines downtown on Sunday morning.

"We decided to remove the posts on Sunday because it's when there is the least amount of traffic flow downtown," City Street Department Director Dean Littler said in the statement. "We didn't want to interfere with businesses or their customers."

No roads, lanes or sidewalks will be closed during the process, but Littler asked the public to avoid areas where the crews are working.

The Twin Falls City Council voted on June 11 to approve the removal of all parking meters downtown. The city parking enforcement officer began removing the meters the following day.

The council is still deciding what to do with the meters but one idea is to sell the meters and place the money in a fund to benefit the community.

Man Burned in Explosion Has Surgery

TIMES-NEWS

SALT LAKE CITY • A 36-year-old man who was seriously burned in a gas tank explosion Wednesday near Filer had surgery Friday at the Burn Center at the University of Utah in Salt Lake City.

On Thursday, Fred Cronmiller's sister Tresa Cronmiller Stones wrote on her Facebook page that Cronmiller was out of a medically induced coma and awake, but on a ventilator to help him breathe. He was able to hear and understand his family members and answer questions with hand motions, she wrote.

Before Cronmiller went into surgery Friday, Stones wrote he completed painful physical therapy and then rested.

On Wednesday morning, Cronmiller was working on scrapping an old vehicle when he cut into the fuel line and the tank exploded, Twin Falls County Sheriff's Office spokeswoman Lori Stewart said.

Farmers who were nearby saw the explosion and ran to the scene. They were able to get the fire out with shovels and get Cronmiller into a canal to stop the burning. He was taken to the Twin Falls airport, then flown to the Utah hospital.

Gitmo Detainees Could Go to Afghanistan

BY ANNE GEARAN
Associated Press

WASHINGTON • The Obama administration is considering a new gambit to restart peace talks with the Taliban in Afghanistan that would send several Taliban detainees from the military prison at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, to a prison in Afghanistan, U.S. and Afghan officials told The Associated Press.

Under the proposal, some Taliban fighters or affiliates captured in the early days of the 2001 U.S. invasion of Afghanistan and later sent to Guantanamo under the label of enemy combatants would be transferred out of full U.S. control but not released. It's a leap of faith on the U.S. side that the men will not become threats to U.S. forces once back on Afghan soil. But it is meant to show more moderate elements of the Taliban insurgency that the U.S. is still interested in cutting a deal for peace.

Secretary of State Hillary Rodham

Clinton and others have said that while negotiations with the Taliban are distasteful, they are the best way to settle the prolonged war.

The new compromise is intended to boost the credibility of the U.S.-backed Afghan government. President Hamid Karzai and U.S. officials are trying to draw the Taliban back to negotiations toward a peace deal between the national Afghan government and the Pashtun-based insurgency that would end a war U.S. commanders have said cannot be won with military power alone.

Congress Passes Student Loans, Highway Jobs Bill

Federal timber subsidies worth $346 million would be distributed for another year to rural counties, while other funds would be steered to rural school districts.

BY ALAN FRAM AND JOAN LOWY
Associated Press

WASHINGTON • Congress emphatically approved legislation Friday preserving jobs on transportation projects from coast to coast and avoiding interest rate increases on new loans to millions of college students, giving lawmakers campaign-season bragging rights on what may be their biggest economic achievement before the November elections.

The bill sent for President Barack Obama's signature enables just over $100 billion to be spent on highway, mass transit and other transportation programs over the next two years, projects that would have expired Saturday without congressional action. It also ends a bare-knuckle political battle over student loans that raged since spring, a proxy fight over which party was best helping voters muddle through the economic downturn.

Under the bill, interest rates of 3.4 percent for subsidized Stafford loans for undergraduates will continue for another year, instead of doubling for new loans beginning on Sunday as scheduled by a law passed five years ago to save money.

The compromise ended up sprinkled with unrelated nuggets dealing with Asian carp, roll-your-own tobacco and federal timber aid.

Federal timber subsidies worth $346 million would be distributed for another year to rural counties, while other funds would be steered to rural school districts. The bill also eases restrictions that force most American food aid to be shipped abroad on U.S.-flagged vessels.

Had the measure failed, interest rates would have mushroomed to 6.8 percent for 7.4 million students expected to get the loans over the coming year.

The Democratic-led Senate sent the measure to Obama by a 74-19 vote, just minutes after the Republican-run House approved it 373-52. The unusual display of harmony, in a bitterly partisan year, signaled lawmakers' eagerness to claim credit for providing transportation jobs, to avert higher costs for students and their families and to avoid being embarrassed had the effort run aground.

This year has seen the two parties mostly drive each other's plans for tax breaks and economic revival into a stalemate, although lawmakers have enacted bills retaining the Social Security payroll tax cut for a year and renewing a government agency that promotes U.S. exports.

Firefighters Search for Bodies in Blaze

President Barack Obama toured the Colorado Springs area Friday after issuing a disaster declaration for Colorado that frees up federal funds.

BY P. SOLOMON BANDA
Associated Press

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. • Firefighters went from one smoldering pile to another Friday in search of bodies in the nearly 350 homes burned to the ground by the most destructive wildfire in Colorado history.

As crews on the front lines made slow but steady progress against the flames, Police Chief Pete Carey said fewer than 10 people altogether were unaccounted for. The remains of one person were found Thursday in what was left standing of one home, and a second person who lived there was missing.

The 26-square-mile blaze — one of several wildfires burning out of control across the tinder-dry West — was reported to be 15 percent contained, and authorities began lifting some of the evacuation orders for the more than 30,000 people who fled their homes a few days ago.

President Barack Obama toured the stricken areas Friday after issuing a disaster declaration for Colorado that frees up federal funds. He thanked firefighters and other emergency workers, saying: "The country is grateful for your work. The country's got your back."

After growing explosively earlier in the week, the fire gained no ground overnight, authorities reported Friday. And the weather was clear and mostly calm, a welcome break from the lightning and high wind that drove the flames.

"The focus for today is to hold what we got," extend the fire lines to contain more of the blaze, and bring in more heavy equipment, said Rich Harvey, incident commander for the fire.

and the challenges of battling such a huge blaze.

"It looks like hell. I would imagine it felt like a nuclear bomb went off. There was fire everywhere. Everything had a square shape to it because it was foundations," said Rich Rexach, who had been working 12-hour days since Tuesday, when flames swept through neighborhoods in this city of more than 400,000 people 60 miles south of Denver.

"Everything you put water on, it was just swallowing it," he said.

As residents waited anxiously to see what was left of their homes, police reported several burglaries in evacuated areas, along with break-ins of cars packed with evacuees' possessions outside hotels.

Community leaders began notifying residents Thursday that their homes were destroyed. Lists of the heavily damaged streets were posted at a high school, and residents scanned the sheets, but for many, the notification was a formality. They had already recognized their streets on the aerial pictures that appeared in the news.

"The blanket that was on my bed when I grew up, a bunch of things my mother had made," said Rick Spraycar, listing what he lost when his house in the hard-hit Mountain Shadows subdivision burned down. "It's hard to put it into words. Everything I owned. Memories."

Authorities were still trying to figure out what caused the fire. They said conditions were too dangerous to allow them in to start their investigation.

More than 1,000 personnel and six helicopters were fighting the fire. All eight firefighting planes at Colorado Springs' Peterson Air Force Base will be pressed into service today.

Suicide by Poison Suspected in Court Death

BY AMANDA LEE MYERS

PHOENIX • As the word "guilty" filled the silence of a Phoenix courtroom, defendant Michael Marin closed his eyes, put his head in his hands and appeared to put something in his mouth. He then took a swig from a sports bottle.

Minutes later, the 53-year-old Marin was dead.

Now investigators are trying to confirm their suspicion that Marin popped a poisoned pill after the jury found him guilty of arson, a bizarre ending to a case that began in 2009 when he emerged from his burning mansion in scuba gear.

Prosecutors said he torched his home when he couldn't keep up with the payments. Marin, an attorney and father of four, faced seven to 21 years in prison.

"This is one of the strangest cases I've seen in a long time," said Jeff Sprong, a spokesman with the Maricopa County Sheriff's Office. "We're hoping to find out exactly what he was thinking and exactly what he took."

Detectives will get the liquid from the sports drink tested for poisons. An autopsy was being conducted Friday to determine if any poison was in Marin's system, but results weren't expected to be released for months.

Prosecutors painted Marin as a desperate man who had $50 in his bank account in July 2009, down from $900,000 a year earlier. He also had a monthly mortgage on the mansion of $17,250 and an upcoming balloon payment of $2.3 million.

Marin also had another mortgage of $2,500 on a different home and owed $34,000 in taxes, prosecutors said.

Peter Madoff Pleads Guilty, Blames Brother

ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK • The younger brother and business partner of disgraced financier Bernard Madoff pleaded guilty Friday to charges he doctored documents for years, but he insisted he knew nothing about his brother's historic Ponzi scheme and was "in total shock" when he found out about it.

An emotional Peter Madoff, 66, entered the plea in a deal that permits him to remain free on $5 million bail pending his Oct. 4 sentencing. He agreed not to contest a 10-year prison sentence and, several hours later, emerged from the courthouse into a rush of cameras and a car that awaited him.

"My family was torn apart as a result of my brother's atrocious conduct," he said. "I was reviled by strangers as well as friends who assumed that I knew about the Ponzi scheme."

CHEERS & JEERS

JEERS to human-caused wildfires. As fires destroy homes and lives across eastern Colorado, it's easy to picture how winds and dry fuels can spread a blaze faster than we can fight it.

This week, two wildfires east of Twin Falls were started by a controlled burn that got out of control. One of the fires threatened about a dozen homes and prompted a voluntary evacuation of the Hidden Lakes subdivision near Dierkes Lake, and burning between 60 and 80 acres.

In response, fire officials asked residents to think twice before lighting a controlled burn, especially on a windy day.

JEERS to the Heyburn City Council. Elected officials in Heyburn are scrambling to avoid a lawsuit after making a quick and heavy-handed decision to award an exclusive contract to one garbage service company for all the city's commercial business. The City Council voted to void the exclusive contract and is now hard at work trying to devise a licensing system for garbage collection businesses. If they pass this licensing agreement, it would give them authority to pull the license at any time if, for example, the business does not respond appropriately to customer complaints. An owner of the waste management company that filed the lawsuit against Heyburn pointed out that they do business in Twin Falls, Rupert, Malta and Declo and those cities do not require special licensing to operate.

It's difficult to understand why Heyburn started digging this hole or why they won't stop digging.

CHEERS to all those south-central Idaho towns who've made the national celebration of independence a time to put aside our differences and mingle with our neighbors over pancake breakfasts or potluck casseroles. In cities from the largest to the smallest, crews of volunteers have prepared Fourth of July fun that stretches all week. There's some impressive variety, too, so take your pick from our calendar at <http://bit.ly/NYKAH1>.

Worst Week in Washington — Justice Scalia

For Supreme Court Justice Antonin Scalia, it's been a rough few days.

Not only did Chief Justice John G. Roberts Jr., who had seemed to be Scalia's conservative brother-in-arms, cast the decisive vote upholding President Obama's health care overhaul. But earlier in the week, in his dissent on the Arizona immigration law, Scalia trod all over the idea that the Supreme Court is above politics.

In a little-noticed (at first) rejection of the high court's majority opinion that much of the Arizona statute was pre-empted by federal law, the ever-quotable and occasionally controversial Scalia said that the ruling "boggles the mind" — particularly in light of Obama's recent decision to stop deporting some illegal immigrants under 30 if they were brought here by their parents as children.

"The president has said that the new program is 'the right thing to do' in light of Congress' failure to pass the administration's proposed revision of the immigration laws," Scalia wrote. "Perhaps it is, though Arizona may not think so." Cue outrage.

Chris Cillizza

Scalia's critics seized on the comment as evidence that the conservative justice had put his politics before the law. E.J. Dionne Jr., a liberal columnist for The Washington Post, went as far as to call for Scalia's resignation, writing: "What boggles the mind is that Scalia thought it proper to jump into this political argument."

Scalia isn't likely to take Dionne's advice — and one week of controversy is likely to be the smallest of ripples when one looks back on the breadth of his career. Also, a bad week can turn into a good week down the line; just ask a past worst week winner, Solicitor General Donald B. Verrilli Jr., who was dinged for his poor performance in arguing the administration's health care case before the court in March. Antonin Scalia, for showing too much partisan political leg, you had the worst week in Washington. Congrats, or something.

LETTERS OF THANKS

Thank You to the Team at St. Luke's

I was recently in St. Luke's for surgery and my two-day visit quickly turned into a three-week stay.

I want to thank Dr. Ronald Blair and Dr. Bruce McComas for their surgical and diagnostic skills. A special thanks to nurse Tony who was on duty from Cassia County the day I became so seriously ill. His quick action got the care I needed to make it through a very difficult day. I have only praise for the nurses, certified nursing assistants and charge nurses on the second floor of the surgical unit for their individual and personal care of me. Some of the people from the various departments who served me almost every day became new friends, and we got to know each other on a first-name basis. I also thank the radiologist who assisted Dr. McComas in getting the right treatment going for me and those who assisted the doctors in surgery.

I would not hesitate to recommend St. Luke's to anyone who needs its care. Again, a big thank you to the above people. You will be appreciated in my thoughts.

Heartfelt Thank You to Operation Facelift Volunteers

On June 20, a small army of volunteers (almost 250) from the Acequia 2nd and Rupert 1st, 5th, 7th, and 8th wards of the LDS Church worked in "Operation Facelift."

They weeded and cleaned up trash along Highway 24 and the railroad and painted the gazebo, sound booth and trash holders in the Square. Some painted the Rupert Police Department building thanks to a grant from U.S. Department of Agriculture. The Minidoka County Juvenile Probation building was painted. The flower bed in the Square and the Idaho Rose Garden will be weeded through the end of September. Doors and trim on doors and windows were painted at Sunrise Cleaners.

Thanks to Tom Goodman

from Minidoka County Juvenile Probation and the youth he supervises for getting the buildings ready for paint. A heartfelt thank you to my project managers, Kelly Allen, Judy Moller, Sherry Kobayashi and Carolyn Whitney. A big thank you to Nick Garner, Dan Walton, Wes and Joan Miller, Joel Rogers, Joe Farfan and Stan Buckley, my project team leaders who got their volunteers on site and the job done in less than four hours. We had volunteers of all ages and heights that love their community, have great community pride and understand the importance of volunteerism.

Thanks again to everyone who participated. Whether it was donating time, money, materials, equipment or refreshments, "Operation Facelift" was a great success.

Congress Extends County Timber Payments

BY JEFF BARNARD
Associated Press

GRANTS PASS, Ore. (AP)

Members of Congress from timber country came through Friday with a promised one-year extension of federal payments to rural counties dominated by federal lands.

They are now turning their attention to the thornier problem of how to generate a steady stream of federal revenue for rural counties that were rolling in cash during the logging booms of the 1970s, but have fallen on hard times since protections for fish and wildlife in danger of extinction forced sharp cutbacks on logging on national forests in the 1990s.

While voting to approve a compromise version of a national transportation bill, Congress also authorized the one-time distribution of $346 million to 700 rural counties in 41 states. Oregon gets $100 million of it, California $39.3 million, Idaho $27.4 million, Washington $21.3 million and Montana $20.4 million.

A 31 percent reduction from funding levels in 2010, the money is the last anyone expects to see from the Secure Rural Schools Act, which since 2000 has provided $3 billion to rural counties to make up for their declining shares of federal logging revenues.

"This is obviously a lifeline, but not a solution," said Rep. Greg Walden, R-Ore. "It is getting very, very, very difficult to fund this program, and frankly the local governments are frustrated at the sort of yo-yo effect they have to go through depending on direct payments from Congress."

The issue stems from the longstanding practice of the federal government sharing a portion of the money made from cutting timber to the counties where the timber is located.

Three bills designed to increase logging on federal lands have been floating around the Republican-controlled House, but none has won the Congressional Budget Office favorable rating required to get a floor vote, and their prospects in the Democratic-controlled Senate appear dim.

One bill focuses on Oregon alone. It would turn over 2.6 million acres from the so-called O&C lands in Western Oregon to a trust, and log them under state forestry rules to provide maximum revenues to Oregon counties. Developed by Rep. Peter DeFazio, D-Ore., it is also backed by Walden and Rep. Kurt Schrader, D-Ore.

Another from Rep. Raul Labrador, R-Idaho, would extend nationwide the same principal of turning federal forests over to trusts that could log them under less-stringent state forestry laws.

A third from House Resources Chairman Doc Hastings, R-Wash., would require the U.S. Forest Service to sell enough timber to generate $500 million for timber counties and give the secretary of agriculture the power to ignore environmental laws to do it.

Sen. Ron Wyden, the father of the Secure Rural Schools Act and chairman of the Senate subcommittee on public lands, said he did not know yet what form that long-term solution would take.

Health Care Challenge Cost Idaho $18,000

IDAHO STATESMAN

BOISE • Idaho's challenge of the 2010 health care reform law, which the Supreme Court upheld almost entirely Thursday, cost the state a total of $18,337, according to the office of Attorney General Lawrence Wasden.

About $16,000 was paid to the office of Florida's Attorney General. Florida led the charge by 26 states, including Idaho, that the law was unconstitutional. The remainder, about $2,000, paid for Wasden to travel to Washington, D.C., for the historic three-day-long oral arguments before the Supreme Court in March.

In joining the lawsuit, Idaho pooled its money with others "to minimize the cost and share the cost among the states," said Bob Cooper, spokesman for the Attorney General's Office.

"It was a significant victory in state's rights and sovereignty issues," Cooper said when asked if the expense was worth it.

The court ruled that the law's mandate to buy health insurance was legal under the federal government's power to tax. But Idaho had argued the law's mandate was an illegal use of the Commerce Clause of the U.S. Constitution.

"The court directly sustained our argument on that point," Wasden told the Idaho Statesman Thursday. It also ruled in favor of states arguing that the law wasn't a "necessary and proper" act of Congress to carry out its powers.

Cooper said that "for that fairly modest investment, in a legal sense, the state obtained a pretty important precedent."

The Supreme Court's decision struck down a part of the law that ordered states to expand Medicaid eligibility to everyone close to the poverty line — not just pregnant women, children and other specific groups, like the disabled. The ruling gave states more latitude in making the choice to expand Medicaid.

If the Idaho Legislature doesn't open Medicaid to those with incomes up to 133 percent of the poverty line, "the savings will be orders of magnitude beyond the cost of litigation," Cooper said. But "from the Attorney General's perspective, that [decision about Medicaid] is clearly a matter of legislative discretion."

Mansion Panel to Meet After Budget Dustup

BOISE (AP) • The five-member panel that oversees finances of the vacant Idaho governor's mansion will meet next week after one of its Democratic members complained a vote on its 2013 budget violated state law.

The Governor's Housing Committee now plans to meet Tuesday.

Sen. Les Bock of Garden City criticized the email vote earlier this week to approve the house's $177,400 spending plan, arguing it should have had public notice.

Bock worries the unpublicized vote will take the spotlight off a home he wants to dispose of, because it's quickly draining a fund to maintain it.

The panel's chairman, Republican Sen. Chuck Winder, says he was merely trying to expedite the vote, not keep it out of view.

Idaho to Send Inmates to Out-of-state Prison

BOISE (AP) • State prison officials plan to house hundreds of inmates at a privately run lockup in Colorado to avoid overcrowding at home.

The Idaho Department of Correction expects to finalize a contract in early July with Corrections Corporation of America to house inmates at the prison company's Kit Carson Correctional Center in Burlington, Colo.

Idaho plans to send 250 males inmates to the out-of-state facility in late July or early August. That number is expected to reach 450 a year from now if Idaho's prison population continues to grow at its current rate.

The state's prisons are at capacity with 8,100 inmates, with some being housed in county jails. Prison officials have previously sent inmates out-of-state, but problems in Texas, as well as slowing inmate numbers in Idaho, prompted their return.

Nampa Man Claims Hot Lotto Jackpot

BOISE (AP) • Idaho Lottery officials say a Nampa man has claimed the $3.43 million Hot Lotto jackpot from Wednesday's drawing.

Retired U.S. Army veteran Steve Colson bought his winning ticket at the Jackson Food Store in Caldwell and claimed his prize Thursday.

He says he plans to pay some bills, travel, build his dream motorcycle and donate some money to the Wounded Warriors Project.

Lottery officials say a woman who was moving from Pocatello to Boise to finish her college degree bought a "Cashword Combo" scratch ticket at the Traveler's Oasis in Eden that won a $100,000 prize. She says the win means her husband won't have to commute between Pocatello and Boise while the family gets settled financially.

Peabody Leases Powder River Coal Tracts for $793M

BY MATTHEW BROWN
Associated Press

BILLINGS, Mont. • Federal land managers have accepted a $793 million bid from Peabody Energy to mine a massive reserve of publicly owned coal in Wyoming, but a critic of the deal said Friday that taxpayers are losing out and the fuel is worth more than twice what the company offered.

St. Louis-based Peabody offered $1.10 per ton for the 721 million ton North Porcupine Coal Tract. The company also will pay 12.5 percent royalties on the fuel it removes by strip mining the tracts in the Powder River Basin.

The Powder River Basin, which straddles the Montana-Wyoming border, has become the top coal-producing region in the U.S. as production at many eastern mines has tapered. Peabody controls more than 4 billion tons of coal in the region.

But an environmental research group says the deal dramatically underestimates the coal's value. The Institute for Energy Economics and Financial Analysis says the coal is worth $2.79 a ton, meaning the government will lose out on about $1.2 billion in potential additional revenues.

Tom Sanzillo, the group's director of finance, said the gap between what the company paid and what the fuel is really worth resulted from a deeply flawed bid process that gives companies too much say in leasing.

"The notion that this has resulted in U.S. taxpayers being cheated out of more than a billion dollars in a single day should be a wake-up call for Washington that this broken system is badly in need of repair."

Tom Sanzillo, Institute for Energy Economics and Financial Analysis director of finance up call for Washington that this broken system is badly in need of repair," Sanzillo said.

Earlier this week, Sanzillo's group released a report that claimed taxpayers have missed out on almost $29 billion in potential revenue on undervalued fuel from the basin leased to companies over the past 30 years.

Bureau of Land Management spokeswoman Mary Wilson says the Peabody offer met or exceeded the fuel's fair market value.

Wilson said the BLM goes into "a fairly exhaustive process" that taps the expertise of its geologists, mining engineers and appraisers to ensure the coal is not undervalued.

In April, the ranking Democrat on the House Natural Resources Committee, Rep. Ed Markey of Massachusetts asked the Government Accountability Office to investigate the BLM's coal leasing program. Markey said he was concerned about how industry efforts to increase coal exports to Asian and other overseas markets will impact the value of federal reserves.

Facing weak demand from the domestic power supply market, Peabody and other companies exported 107 million tons of coal last

Idaho Dad Pleads Guilty to Assault of Daughter

BLACKFOOT (AP) • An eastern Idaho man who prosecutors say tried to shoot his adult daughter has pleaded guilty to aggravated assault.

The Idaho State Journal reports that Jessie Whipkey of Springfield was originally charged with attempted murder, but on Thursday — three days into his trial — prosecutors agreed to reduce the charge to aggravated assault after the judge in the case said some of the evidence in the case appeared to support the defense. Whipkey entered his guilty plea that day.

Prosecutors said Whipkey tried to shoot his 36-year-old daughter, Amy Mayer, after an argument but the gun dry-fired. Whipkey's defense attorney Neal Randall said his client didn't know the gun was loaded.

Whipkey faces a potential 20-year prison term when he is sentenced in August.

Bicyclist Roadside Service launched in Washington

AAA has announced that it will launch a roadside service for bicyclists in Washington state on Sunday. Washington joins the Oregon and southern Idaho

Under the bicycle service, a member can call AAA if they run into trouble. However, AAA crews won't fix your bicycle. Rather, they'll give you a lift to a safe location of your choosing, such as home or a bike shop.

66 Idaho Homes Burn in Wildfire

POCATELLO (AP) • Fire officials say 66 homes and 29 outbuildings in the eastern Idaho city of Pocatello have burned in a fast-moving wildfire.

More than 1,000 people have been evacuated from some Pocatello neighborhoods and the community of Mink Creek. The Charlotte fire started Thursday afternoon, spreading quickly through bone-dry grass and brush.

Sarah Wheeler with the Eastern Idaho Interagency Fire Center said late Friday morning that the fire is burning on just over 1,000 acres — that's a little more than 1 1/2 square miles — and is estimated to be about 30 percent contained. No injuries have been reported.

Officials have not released details about what may have sparked the blaze but say it is believed to be human-caused.

A report from the National Interagency Fire Center in Boise said the fire was showing extreme behavior, spreading quickly and sparking new,

"I asked the kids, 'Go get anything you want to keep. We got a couple minutes.' ... And they went and picked up all their musical instruments and very little else."

Jessica Siler, whose home was destroyed by the fire small fires some distance from the main body of flames.

Some areas have been reopened to residents, but Diane Brush with the Pocatello Police Department said authorities were still trying to determine when it will be safe to allow everyone back to their homes.

"It is still a dangerous situation even for the firefighters," she told the Idaho State Journal, "but there are police officers in the area making sure that the homes are secure."

Evacuees were brought to schools, where they awaited news of their homes.

Jessica Siler told KIFI-TV that her husband, Shane Siler, is a firefighter who got the call to fight the flames in his own neighborhood. He arrived to find their home was destroyed, she said.

Still, the family escaped with a few possessions — her 9-year-old daughter and 12- and 14-year-old sons grabbed their musical instruments as they evacuated the home.

"I asked the kids, 'Go get anything you want to keep. We got a couple minutes.' ... And they went and picked up all their musical instruments and very little else," she said.

Power lines and phone lines are down in the area, Brush said, but some residents are being allowed back into the neighborhoods with photo identification if they need to pick up medication or have another emergency.

"It's been heartbreaking talking to these people that have lost the homes," she said.

Parts of southern and eastern Idaho, including the Pocatello region, have been placed on a "red flag" status by the Bureau of Land Management. The status means that a combination of low humidity, high temperatures and wind has created explosive fire conditions, and people in the region should be cautious with vehicles, ammunition, fireworks and other devices that can cause fires.

Steven Powell May Be Released from Prison in Year

OLYMPIA, Wash. (AP) • The father-in-law of missing Utah woman Susan Powell may be released from prison in less than a year, despite being convicted of 14 voyeurism counts.

Steven Powell was sentenced earlier this month to 2 1/2 years in prison for recording images of two neighbor girls in their bathroom. After factoring for time served, good time and reductions because he is a nonviolent offender, the state has calculated his potential release date as May 23, 2013.

Prosecutors had asked for Powell to be sentenced to 10 years.

Susan Powell disappeared from her Utah home in 2009. Her husband, Josh, was a focus of the investigation until he killed himself and the couple's two children earlier this year. Steven Powell was arrested last year after authorities investigating her disappearance searched his home in Washington state.

Investigators said they found thousands of images of women and girls who seemed unaware they were being photographed, including images of Susan Powell. They filed charges based on video taken of the neighbor girls, who were about 8 and 10 years old when the images were recorded.

Powell also faces three years of supervised release following the sentence.

Authorities say they want to speak with Steven Powell about his daughter-in-law's disappearance.

NCAA Reconsidering BSU Football Sanctions

ASSOCIATED PRESS

BOISE • The NCAA said Friday it will reconsider scholarship sanctions imposed on Boise State's football program.

In a 25-page decision, the NCAA Division I Infractions Appeals Committee concluded that the scholarship penalty announced last September, in addition to Boise State's self-imposed sanctions, was "excessive such that it constituted an abuse of discretion."

Boise State's voluntary measures included three fewer scholarships for the 2011-12 school year and fewer preseason practices. The NCAA added scholarship reductions from 85 to 82 through the 2013-14 school year and limited contact during spring practice.

The university appealed the additional sanctions for the football program, arguing that the NCAA's history of scholarship reduction penalties was inconsistent with penalties imposed in the case of Boise State. The appeals committee agreed.

"Of the 10 cases that involved the FBS and reductions of football grants-in-aid over the past five years, only two had reductions of grants-in-aid in football as great or greater than those imposed in this case," the panel found. The appeals committee upheld the

TWIN FALLS • NASCAR home track racing will feature the ongoing battles in Super Stocks, Street Stocks, Hornets, Jr. Stingers and Thunderdogs championship titles.

After her third main event win June 23, Whelen All-American Racing Series driver Hannah Newhouse extended her lead in the Super Stocks point standings to 14 over Kris McKean. Another win Saturday evening will increase her advantage even further but McKean is not one to back down from a challenge, especially if it means another chance to regain the top position in the feature division standings.

Both Casey Pehrson and Daniel Shirley have a main event win for 2012 under their belt but Willie Dalton, Allen Williams, Kendel Woll and Steve Edens are among those still searching for their first victory in the Super Stocks division this season.

Street Stocks drivers anxiously awaiting their first trip to Victory Lane include Jay McDonald and Russell Dalton. Both drivers moved up from the Jr. Stingers division this season and have had their work cut out for them, but they continue to be competitive with the big boys.

For the Hornets division Jeff Peck has gathered a nine-point advantage over Lane Walker and a 51-point spread over Chad Everett. The "Tank" is the newest leader for the Thunderdogs while the Jr. Stingers begin the race for another champion after Brenden Radabaugh was crowned with the mid-season title June 23.

Round two of car soccer is also included in the evening's events.

Gates open at 4 p.m. and qualifying begins at 6.

Twin Falls can still reach Sunday's championship round at Cowboy Classic with a win and some help.

BY DAVID BASHORE

TWIN FALLS • Thursday was brilliant. Friday was anything but. Now the Twin Falls Cowboys need a lot of help to keep their dreams of winning the Cowboy Classic alive.

The Cowboys put themselves in a precarious position, blowing a lead in a 5-2 loss to Mountain View before getting blown out 22-3 in five innings by Pac Tech (Wash.) in a Friday double-dip at Skip Walker Field.

"The biggest thing was just wanting to win, and coming out with a good attitude," said center fielder Casey Merritt. "We had that in the first game, but then it snowballed. Five runs in the first inning, you can't hang your head there. But when you get down 15 ... you just hope it's better (today)."

Roger Federer returns a shot to Julien Benneteau during their third-round men's singles match at Wimbledon.

Down Two Sets, Federer Rallies at Wimbledon

ASSOCIATED PRESS

WIMBLEDON, England • A day after Rafael Nadal's stunning exit at Wimbledon, the only other men who have won the tournament since 2003 — six-time champion Roger Federer and defending champion Novak Djokovic — found themselves trailing far-less-accomplished opponents, too.

Here we go again? Not quite. Federer sure came close to following Nadal out the door, though. The owner of a record 16 major trophies, and a quarterfinalist or better at 32 consecutive Grand Slam tournaments, the third-seeded Federer dropped the first two sets against 29th-seeded Julien Benneteau of France, then was two points away from losing six times, before coming all the way back Friday to pull out a 4-6, 6-7 (3), 6-2, 7-6 (6), 6-1 victory in the third round.

"Oh, my God, it was brutal," Federer said. "The thing, when you're down two sets to love, is to stay calm, even though it's hard, because people are freaking out, people are worried for you. ... You don't have, obviously, many lives left out there. You just try to play tough and focus point for point. Sounds so boring, but it's the right thing to do out there."

Felix, Tarmoh Closer to Historic Tiebreak

ASSOCIATED PRESS

Maybe the response just slipped. Or maybe the question completely caught her off guard.

As Allyson Felix sauntered away from the crowd and toward the safety of a restricted area, she actually broke her vow of silence.

"Feeling good," she said in almost a hushed voice. And then she was off again, escorted by coach Bobby Kersee.

Felix is looking solid on the track even in the midst of controversy, winning her semifinal heat at Olympic trials on Friday.

Same with training partner Jeneba Tarmoh, who moments earlier captured her race convincingly, too.

After the 200 final today, these two sprinters will finally address what everyone is anxious to know: Just how they will break their third-place tie in the 100 and decide who earns the final spot to the London Games in the event.

A runoff? A flip of the coin? Soon, there will be a choice. Maybe even something as simple as one of them surrendering the spot to the other.

The controversy has overshadowed everything at the trials.

Including this: Some of the biggest names in U.S. sprinting were missing from the starting blocks in the opening round of the men's 200 meters. Justin Gatlin and Tyson Gay were expected to sit out this race after securing spots to London in the 100.

But the absence of Olympic bronze medalist Walter Dix was a bit of a surprise. Dix was hampered by a lingering left hamstring injury that slowed him in the 100, but he thought he might be ready for the 200.

Now, Dix's only option for making it to London will be as a member of the 400 relay team.

Dix tweeted his disappointment Friday at not being able to run and later that he heard he had been nominated for an ESPY Award in the category of best track and field athlete: "It's an honor!!! Thanx for the love and support...very much appreciated."

This was one of the sprinters the Americans were counting on, too, especially after Dix captured bronze in both the 100 and 200 in Beijing.

"We're missing Tyson, Walter and Justin — that's U.S. best right there," said 34-year-old Doc Patton, who advanced in his heat. "The door is open for anyone in the field right now!"

EVANS OUT TO DEFEND TOUR DE FRANCE TITLE

ASSOCIATED PRESS

LIEGE, Belgium • Cadel Evans thinks one Tour de France title will make it easier to win another one. And he's ready to add that second championship right now.

Evans opens his title defense when the 99th edition of cycling's marquee race begins today with a quick, 4-mile prologue in Liege, Belgium — an individual time trial expected to be dominated by specialists such as Fabien Cancellara of Switzerland and Tony Martin of Germany, or contender Bradley Wiggins of Britain.

The beginning of the Tour offers the cycling world a welcome return to racing after the sport's doping ghosts returned this month, with charges by the U.S. Anti-Doping Agency that Lance Armstrong used performance-enhancing drugs en route to his seven Tour victories. He denies doping and notes he has never failed a drug test.

For a race covering 2,100 miles over three weeks, the prologue is just the very beginning for the rider who will cycle down Paris' Champs-Elysees in the yellow jersey on July 22 — but it could provide an early indication about who won't be in front at the end. Evans was already playing down expectations about how he might fare in it.

"It starts tomorrow on a stage that isn't so suited to me," the BMC team leader said Friday. "But from here on in, it's all systems go, and I'm looking forward to getting another Tour started."

Evans says he has a "similar mentality" to his winning approach last year. But this year's route goes heavier on time trials — with more than 60 miles total in individual races against the clock — and lighter on steep mountain climbs than the most recent Tours.

"Knowing that we have already won one, it makes it quite a little bit easier," Evans said. "When you've won one — in the bag — it's there. ... It makes it a whole lot easier. You don't have this question of doubt: 'Maybe I can win it, maybe I can't?' We know we can."

He acknowledged that race connoisseurs are predicting a two-man showdown between Evans and Wiggins, a three-time Olympic track gold medalist who has converted to road races and worked hard to improve in the mountains that are often crucial to winning the Tour.

"They tell me that Wiggins is the man to beat, so they say, but we'll see it on the roads," Evans said. "Three weeks on the road is a long time, and a lot can happen."

Wiggins is off to a terrific start this season, winning the Criterium du Dauphine, the Tour de Romandie and Paris-Nice stage races this year. Evans, by comparison, admitted he has been off to a "bit of a quiet start" to 2012, with just one victory in the three-stage Criterium International — but is progressing and hopes to peak for the Tour.

Wiggins wants to become the first Briton to reach the Tour podium, and possibly take home yellow — and with the London Olympics ahead next month, is doubly motivated.

"I can't wait to get down that ramp and put down into practice all these months of training," he said. "I don't think I've ever been this good: All this stuff we've been doing this week suggests that I am in the form of my life."

Wiggins said he's sensed through social media how many fans back in Britain are behind him. "In England ... every child's dream is to lift the FA Cup at Wembley or whatever," Wiggins said. "This is my Wembley!"

The Rebels bounced back to win the nightcap, 12-9. Brandon Bradshaw led the Hawks at the plate with a double and two runs scored. He also tripled in the opener.

Bishop had a pair of doubles, but it wasn't enough for starting pitcher Gaige Kepner, who pitched four innings before running into trouble in the fifth.

spring practice penalty while remanding the scholarship sanctions back to the infractions committee for reconsideration.

"We are pleased that the Appeals Committee agreed in the case of the scholarships. We will await a decision from the Infractions Committee on the final scholarship penalty," said Boise State President Bob Kustra.

Boise State has not been given a timeline for when a new decision will be reached, said university spokesman Frank Zang.

The NCAA cited major violations by the football program and other sports last year when placing Boise State on probation for three years and imposing other sanctions. The violations occurred over a five-year period.

At the time, Kustra said Boise State's rapid growth over the last decade, from an upstart Division II program into a perennial Top 25 team, likely outstripped the school's capacity to keep tabs on its compliance with NCAA rules.

Kustra, who fired athletic director Gene Bleymaier in August, said he'd hoped the self-imposed sanctions would have been enough to avoid probation. Boise State appealed the football portion of the NCAA sanctions, while accepting the punishment placed on its tennis and track programs.

Boise State has since revamped its NCAA compliance efforts, hiring additional staff and implementing an educational program, the university said. The school has also made changes to its student-athlete handbook, while heightening training and awareness programs, officials said.

"The entire process has deepened our commitment to compliance, resulted in tangible changes to our program and created a greater awareness of the NCAA rules," athletic director Mark Coyle said in a statement.

throw strikes and play clean defensively. Twin Falls didn't do much of either, dropping mental focus to let a 2-0 sixth-inning lead slip against Mountain View.

It only got worse from there, as the Cowboys issued 10 walks with just one strike-out against Pac Tech, which cranked out 18 hits. Twin Falls also committed its first three errors of the tournament.

Zayne Slotten didn't get out of the first inning, and none of the pitchers behind him retired more than four batters.

The results leave Twin Falls needing a win against Kennewick (Wash.) in the final game today, plus results in all the other games to go the Cowboys' way, to advance to Sunday's semifinals.

They sit 1-2 in the four-game preliminary standings, with head-to-head and runs allowed being the two key tiebreaking criteria.

"We've just got to worry about what we can control," Merritt said.

Dillon Wins Nationwide Race, Fails Inspection

ASSOCIATED PRESS

SPARTA, Ky. • Austin Dillon lived up to the legend of the No. 3 car, then had his victory called into question Friday night.

No one had regularly driven the No. 3 car since Dale Earnhardt's death on the track at the 2001 Daytona 500. On a warm night in the Bluegrass state, Dillon routed the field, only to have the car fail its post-race inspection.

Dillon took the lead early and was on top for 192 of the 200 laps to win the NASCAR Nationwide Series race at Kentucky Speedway.

"I love running the 3," Dillon said. "It pressures me every week to give 110 (percent)."

Roughly an hour after the trip to victory lane, the No. 3 failed the inspection for being too low in the rear. NASCAR announced it would issue a ruling early next week.

Reached at the garage, Dillon's crew chief, Danny Stockman, wiped sweat from his forehead as he left a meeting with officials.

"We've had an issue before. We addressed it in a meeting," Stockman said. "It should have been addressed. That's the only comment I've got."

A similar situation took place earlier this season at Iowa where a car also failed a post-race inspection. The crew chief was fined $10,000 and six points were subtracted from the team.

The No. 3, of course, was driven to fame by Earnhardt, who raced for the Richard Childress team. Childress is

Austin Dillon runs across the infield to meet his pit crew after winning the Dillon's grandfather and also his team owner.

As Dillon was clinching the win, his grandfather said over the radio, "Dale would have been proud of that."

He added, "I couldn't be prouder as a grandfather and a team owner. I know Dale's looking down smiling to see that 3 win tonight."

It was the first Nationwide victory for Dillon, a rookie who captured the Truck Series title a year ago.

"It takes a little off your back when you get that first win," Dillon said with a broad smile while wearing a white cowboy hat with his black — what else? — driving suit.

Dillon had asked to drive the No. 3 car, which has made it's only appearances since Earnhardt's death with Dillon behind the wheel in the Truck Series — and with Dale Earnhardt Jr. in three other races, including a victory at Daytona in the Nationwide event two years ago.

Dillon has marked himself as one of the fastest rising drivers in the sport. Childress was careful in his reply when asked if he might ever back another team in the Sprint Cup — the big leagues of stock car racing — in car No. 3.

"I don't plan on running the 3. Dale made that stylized 3 famous," he said. Then, with a grin, he added, "We don't have any intention of running that (stylized 3) in the Cup. That leaves an opening, doesn't it?"

Weltz Lands 1-2 Punch to Win 200 Breast

ASSOCIATED PRESS
OMAHA, Neb. • Brendan Hansen and Eric Shanteau were the favorites.
The race was a different matter.
In another major breaststroke upset, Scott Weltz won the 200 meters at the U.S. Olympic swimming trials Friday night, leaving Hansen and Shanteau with only one individual event at the London Games.

means they'll have to settle for only swimming the 100 breast in London after going 1-2 in that event at the trials.
'I think you guys are as surprised as I am,' Hansen said. 'I can't believe Eric and I are not swimming the 200.'
The 25-year-old Weltz moved up on the third lap and surged to the finish to win in 2 minutes, 9.01 seconds. Burckle was next in 2:09.97, edging Shanteau with the touch.

Shanteau, who competed in the 200 breast at Beijing after being diagnosed with testicular cancer, considers the longer event his better race and thought the 100 was just a bonus. Now, it's his only Olympic race, which is why he was especially distraught when he looked up at the board and saw that Burckle got him by eight-hundredths of a second.

Hansen got an ugly reminder of his performance at the 2008 trials, when he went in as the 200 favorite and couldn't hold it together on the final lap. He followed with a disappointing performance in Beijing, which led him to retire from the sport in disgust. He returned after a more than two-year layoff and seemed on course for redemption after winning the 100 breast.

With Federer serving while down 6-5 in the fourth set, Benneteau hit a forehand winner to get to 15-30, putting him two points from the upset. Federer hit a forehand winner that made it 30-all, still two points away for Benneteau. The game had two deuces, too - each one placing Benneteau that close again. Benneteau might have sounded the same lament. For quite a lengthy stretch, he played positively Rosolesque tennis: hard serves and stinging groundstrokes directed at lines. No fear.
But Federer found an opening and barged through, saved in particular by this: He won 63 of the 80 points he served over the last three sets.

Blake Rocks Bolt in Jamaica's 100 Trials

ASSOCIATED PRESS
KINGSTON, Jamaica • The Fastest Man in the World wasn't the fastest man in Jamaica on Friday night.
That honor goes to Yohan

Blake, who blew away Usain Bolt out of the starting blocks and finished the 100-meter final in 9.75 seconds to upset the world-record holder by 0.11 seconds in the Jamaican Olympic trials.

A shocker? Well, that's for the world to decide. One thing for sure, however, is that the calculus for the London Olympics has changed dramatically.
'Nine-point-seven-five, it's awesome,' Blake said. 'I won the world championship, so I've got that. Now, I'm the national champion for Jamaica, so I've got that. And now, I go into the Olympics like this.'

In the only finals on Friday, University of Colorado standout Emma Coburn won the steeplechase and Jillian Camarena-Williams captured the shot put crown.

But these days and at these trials, the overriding topic is the one involving Felix and Tarmoh. Just how they're going to settle the matter is something that's now been hanging over the competition for the last week.

USA Track and Field didn't have any procedure in place to break the dead heat. Immediately after the 100 race last Saturday, the organization quickly scrambled to put together some options for the athletes.

The sprinters have elected to not say anything until after the 200. That way, they can focus on making the team in that event.

Old-time Revival

Evangelical preachers visit a Gooding church for a tent revival. Next stops: Buhl, Wendell and Twin Falls.

GOODING • The world is a mess.

“Will you agree to that?” Steve Cody asked the Wednesday-evening crowd. “Yes,” it said in unison.

But, Cody said, you need not lose hope. There’s a solution to the country’s problems. “Right here,” he said, pointing to a worn banner behind the pulpit that read “Jesus is the Answer.”

It’s become the theme of Cody and his cowboy ministry, which visited First Southern Baptist Church this week in Gooding. His Wednesday sermon: “Love one another.”

Cody, an evangelical preacher from Lenapah, Okla., was at the church Sunday-Thursday for an old-fashioned tent revival, drawing 30 to 50 people every evening.

“They used to do these a lot,” he said. “You’ve heard of circuit-riding preachers? We’re the modern-day circuit-riding preachers. But instead of horses, we have horsepower that pulls us now.”

Cody, who started his ministry in the early 1980s, travels the country about 50 weeks every year — he lives pretty much out of an RV — spreading a gospel message of hope.

Often he is joined by Jeff Gore of Abilene, Texas, who was with him this week in Gooding. Gore, who said he always wanted to be a cowboy, ministers through guitar and song.

Their target audience: cowboys, ranchers, small-town folk.

About 35 people attended Wednesday night’s meeting. As Gore opened with a Marty Robbins song, listeners dressed in blue jeans or shorts sitting on folding chairs beneath the colorful canopy seemed to be moved by the message about a soul-finding Jesus. One person had tears on her cheeks.

“There’s a real need for this,” Gore said. “A lot of people who need the message don’t want to go far from home. We come to them. ... I feel this is what God has called me to do.”

One of his goals: to help his country remember its Christian heritage.

The United States has gotten away from the principles and virtues that made it a great nation, he said. It has in many ways abandoned the creator and preserver of liberties. He said no matter what some modern historians teach, the Founding Fathers were God-fearing men who believed the country’s success would depend upon its reverence to Christ and teachings of the Scriptures.

“We’re not the country we used to be, he said.

Cody echoed similar sentiments: “People are popping pills, drinking booze, reading self-help books. But the answer is here. It is Jesus. ... We’re a people that need to turn back to what God wants us to be.”

One way to do that, he said, is to live the commandment Jesus gave to “love one another.”

A Spoonful of Encouragement

Many years ago when I first heard of the motivation gifts — sometimes called foundational gifts — that are listed in Romans 12:6-8, I immediately pinpointed which gift was the one that most closely defined who I felt God created me to be. I noticed in some of the other gifts — which include serving, teaching, giving, administration, mercy and preaching — that there were points that applied, but when it came to encouragement, it fit me like a glove.

So for many years, I have been quietly encouraging people, trying not to let a day go by without encouraging someone. Since 2001, I have been writing an “Encouraging Word,” a devotional meant to encourage people through email. In 2008, I went on the radio with a four-minute daily encouraging word on KAGF 105.5 several times a day. Instead of encouragement by email, daily word is now a blog. I try to actively encourage people with my words, through my writing, speaking and singing as often as possible, in as many ways as possible.

Hebrews 10:24 tells us to encourage one another to love and good deeds. Even if you are not an encourager by nature, we can all use our words to build up and edify people around us.

According to this verse in Hebrews, we can help others love more and do what is right through our encouragement. I often use the illustration of silverware to help define how we can encourage others. We don’t want to be like a fork that pierces, or a knife that cuts, but we want to be like a spoon that lifts.

I hope that your day is lifted and that you feel free to love others more and make choices that lead to life and blessing as my words give you a spoonful of encouragement each time you get to read this column.

So here is your spoonful of encouragement this week: I believe that God has abundant life and provision for each of us. There are no impossible cases with God, and He specializes in second chances.

If you think God has forgotten about you, He hasn’t. If you think things will never work out, they will. If you don’t believe that God can use you, He can. If we hunger and thirst for Him, He will fill us!

Then you will have a spoonful of encouragement to give to someone else along the way.

Kimberly Dwyer, another church member, said she thinks the revival was good for the community because it drew people from outside the church as well as within.

“It kind of energizes me,” she said. “And my three kids really like the Vacation Bible School” that was part of the People from as far away as Hailey and Glens Ferry attended, he said. Many were younger than he expected.

This was the second year that First Baptist held the revival. Kelley said he signed to have the ministries return next year.

Cody and Gore don’t perform baptisms or pray for healings at the revivals, Cody said, but instead leave that up to the local churches. There were, however, 20 confessions of faith, Kelley said.

The ministries head next to a ranch in Buhl and to churches in Wendell and Twin Falls, before Cody and Gore go their separate ways.

Siblings Hope to Restore Family’s ‘Godmobile’

BY KATHY HEDBERG

The Lewiston Tribune

MOSCOW • A brother and sister who grew up as part of a traveling tent revivalist family of preachers hope to make part of their heritage a permanent historical display.

Nels Reese, 75, a retired architectural professor at the University of Idaho, and Mary Ann Reese, 70, a magazine publisher for the UI’s College of Agriculture and Life Sciences, are seeking funding to bring the “Godmobile,” as they call it, out of mothballs and make it part of a museum display by the Idaho Transportation Department.

The Godmobile — a hand-built coach that traveled more than 200,000 miles around the West from the early 1930s to the ‘60s — has been stored for several decades at the transportation department warehouses in Boise. State historical society officials hope to persuade next year’s Legislature to fund a museum where the public could view the scripture-inscribed coach, as well as other artifacts about Idaho’s transportation history.

“After grandfather’s conversion, he had a vision of putting scripture on cars based on a couple of Bible verses about going out into the highways and byways” and preaching the word of God, said Mary Ann Reese.

“He was on the lookout for something unique that would send out God’s word,” added Nels Reese. “As it is today, if you want something crazy, beautiful, unique, you go to Los Angeles. You don’t go to Omaha.”

The Reeses’ revivalist history began with their grandfather, Nels Thompson, a Danish immigrant, who had lived a rough-and-tumble life until losing all his money on a horse race bet and finding himself deep in debt.

On the brink of despair, Thompson set out to kill himself.

“He went downtown with 50 cents and was going to buy a gun and blow his brains out,” said Mary Ann Reese. “But he thought, ‘Well, before I do that I should probably see where I’m going,’ because he remembered in Denmark having an old family Bible that shows the great judgment day and he used to look at it.

“So instead of buying a gun he bought a Bible and started reading in the book of Romans, which is sort of the emancipation proclamation (of the Bible), and he thought, ‘Oh, my gosh, every one of these terrible things it says in here, I’ve done.’ And he did have a major conversion.”

Students Suspended in NY Bus Monitor Bullying

NEW YORK (AP) • Four seventh-grade boys from upstate New York who were caught on video mercilessly taunting a 68-year-old bus monitor have received their punishment.

The school system in the Rochester suburb of Greece says it will suspend the middle school students from school and from using regular bus transportation for a year for bullying Karen Klein.

The students will be transferred to a special alternative education program because the district is legally required to give the students an education. Each student will also be required to complete 50 hours of community service with senior citizens.

They will be able to reapply to middle school after they complete the discipline.

In a statement, the school system said each of the students involved admitted to wrongdoing, accepted the consequences and agreed to let the district publically release the terms of their disciplinary action.

The cellphone video uploaded to YouTube by a fellow student drew millions of viewers. The video shows Klein trying her best to ignore a stream of profanity, insults and outright threats.

One student taunted: "You don't have a family because they all killed themselves because they don't want to be near you." Klein's oldest son killed himself 10 years ago.

Eventually, she appears to break down in tears.

A fund drive that began with a goal of $5,000 to help Klein take a nice vacation raised more than $667,304 as of Friday.

Klein has received national attention through social and news media with interviews such as an appearance earlier this week on NBC's "Today Show." She was honored Thursday in Boston, where she was greeted by a youth cheerleading squad and escorted on a red carpet to receive an honorary Boston school bus monitor certificate.

Klein could not be reached for comment Friday. However, police have said Klein did not want the boys to face criminal charges.

In the AP interview last week, Klein asked people to leave the boys alone.

Egypt's Morsi Vows to Fight for Authority

BY MAGGIE MICHAEL AND SARAH EL DEEB
Associated Press

CAIRO • President-elect Mohammed Morsi roused the masses in Tahrir Square on Friday, vowing to fight on behalf of the people and defying the ruling generals by reading a symbolic oath of office a day early at the site where Egypt's revolution was born.

The country's first Islamist president also made a pledge likely to complicate relations with the U.S., vowing to seek the release of blind sheik Omar Abdel-Rahman, jailed in the U.S. for plotting to blow up New York City landmarks and assassinate then-President Hosni Mubarak.

"We love you Morsi!" the crowd roared in response as the 60-year-old U.S.-trained engineer left the podium to get closer to the cheering crowd.

The promise to seek the release of the Egyptian-born Abdel-Rahman reflected the populist tone of Morsi's speech — his first in the square that was the epicenter of the popular uprising that ousted Mubarak. He also said he would release all detained Egyptian protesters facing military tribunals.

Pointing to protesters holding photos of prisoners

Egypt's President-elect Mohammed Morsi waves to supporters at Tahrir Square, the focal point of Egyptian uprising, in Cairo on Friday.

— including Abdel-Rahman, the spiritual leader of men convicted in the 1993 World Trade Center bombing — Morsi declared: "I will make every effort, I will do it, starting tomorrow, to free them all, including Sheik Omar Abdel-Rahman!"

"Everybody is hearing me now. The government ... the military and the police. ... No power above this power!" he told the tens of thousands of mostly Islamist supporters packing the square. "I reaffirm to you I will not give up any of the president's authorities. I can't afford to do this. I don't have that right!"

Morsi's words were a show of defiance as he gears up for a power struggle with the country's ruling generals, who took over major presidential powers and disbanded the Islamist-controlled parliament in the days before the election results were released.

Still, the Muslim Brotherhood leader also avoided direct confrontation with the military leaders and was set to be officially sworn-in Saturday during a ceremony at the country's high court — not parliament, the traditional venue — as dictated by the generals.

At one point, Morsi opened his jacket to show the crowd he was not wearing a bulletproof vest, then declared he "fears no one but God."

The pledge to free Abdel-Rahman came in response to repeated calls by his ultra-conservative supporters for the sheik to be repatriated to Egypt on humanitarian grounds. Abdel-Rahman is serving a life sentence.

While it was unclear what Morsi could do, the issue underscored that his victory could complicate relations with the U.S., although both sides have stated their desire to cooperate.

The U.S. State Department declined comment on Morsi's pledge. "There's zero chance that this happens," said an administration official, speaking on condition of anonymity to discuss security issues.

In his speech, Morsi repeatedly returned to his main themes — the sovereignty of the people, the importance of unity and sticking to the goals of the revolution.

He promised to reject any efforts to take away the power of the people, telling his supporters: "You are the source of legitimacy and whoever is protected by anyone else will lose."

However, the mere fact that Morsi is to follow the generals' instructions by going ahead with the official inauguration at the high court left no doubt who holds the real power.

Beard Keeps Fort Hood Shooting Suspect Out of Court

BY JEREMY SCHWARTZ
Austin American-Statesman

A bearded Maj. Nidal Hasan was once again barred from the courtroom Friday after top Army officials rejected his request to grow facial hair for religious reasons and a military appeals court denied a request to let him back in the courtroom.

Hasan's lawyers then tried to get the judge to recuse himself from the case, claiming the judge's reaction over a mess left next to one of Hasan's adult diapers in a courtroom bathroom showed bias against Hasan.

Earlier this month, military judge Col. Gregory Gross ordered Hasan removed for violating Army grooming regulations. Since then, Hasan has watched the court proceedings on closed-circuit television from a trailer outside the courthouse. The Army psychiatrist, who was clean-shaven during more than two years of court appearances before growing a beard, faces the death penalty on 13 counts of premeditated murder in the Nov. 5, 2009, shooting spree at Fort Hood that left 13 dead and 32 people wounded.

During Friday's pre-trial hearing, Gross also denied a defense motion for another delay in the court-martial, which was supposed to begin in March. The trial remains scheduled to begin Aug. 20. Defense attorneys had argued that they needed until December to prepare for what is expected to be a sprawling, weeks-long court-martial.

It wasn't clear Friday why the Pentagon rejected Hasan's beard request; since 2009 it has allowed six soldiers to grow beards for religious reasons, including two Muslim doctors.

Gross also denied a defense motion that he step down from the case following an exchange in court about Hasan's adult diapers and possible feces smeared in a courtroom bathroom.

Hasan, who was paralyzed from the chest down when he was shot after the November 2009 shooting, uses the diapers because he is unable to control his bodily functions, lawyers said. Gross, who often tidies up the Fort Hood courtroom and adjoining rooms, has regularly disposed of Hasan's soiled diapers after previous hearings, the judge revealed.

But Hasan's attorneys said an incident after a June 8 hearing, when Hasan first appeared with a beard, showed Gross holds bias against the Army psychiatrist. Gross said that when court adjourned that day, he found what appeared to be feces smeared on the bathroom floor alongside Hasan's diaper, and fired off an email to defense lawyers to clean up the mess. Lead defense attorney Lt. Col. Kris Poppe said Gross assumed the mess was left by Hasan, but was in fact mud tracked in by one of his guards, and that his reaction showed bias against Hasan.

Gross denied that he harbors any bias against Hasan.

Before refusing to step down from the case, Gross told Poppe, "We're wasting our time talking about what was in the latrine — feces or mud?"

Poppe accused Gross of showing an "emotional irritation" and "agitated reaction" to Hasan during pre-trial hearings and said defense attorneys would appeal Gross's refusal to step down.

THOUGHT FOR TODAY

"The man who has done his level best is a success, even though the world may write him down a failure."

- B.C. Forbes, Scottish journalist (1880-1954)

Today is Saturday, June 30, the 182nd day of 2012. There are 184 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight:
On June 30, 1912, Canada's deadliest tornado on record occurred as a late-afternoon cyclone struck Regina, the provincial capital of Saskatchewan, killing 28 people and destroying or damaging 500 buildings.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:
In 1859, French acrobat Charles Blondin walked back and forth on a tightrope above the gorge of Niagara Falls as thousands of spectators watched.

In 1860, the famous Oxford University Museum debate on Darwin's theory of evolution took place as Anglican Bishop Samuel Wilberforce led his side in denouncing the concept, while biologist T.H. Huxley defended it.

In 1908, the Tunguska Event took place in Russia as an asteroid exploded above Siberia, leaving 800 square miles of scorched or blown-down trees.

In 1921, President Warren G. Harding nominated former President William Howard Taft to be chief justice of the United States, succeeding the late Edward Douglass White.

In 1934, Adolf Hitler carried out his "blood purge" of political and military rivals in Germany in what came to be known as "The Night of the Long Knives."

In 1936, the epic Civil War novel "Gone with the Wind" by Margaret Mitchell was first published by The Macmillan Co. in New York.

In 1952, "The Guiding Light," a popular radio program, began a 57-year television run on CBS.

In 1958, the U.S. Senate passed the Alaska statehood bill by a vote of 64-20.

In 1963, Pope Paul VI was crowned the 262nd head of the Roman Catholic Church.

In 1972, for the first time, a leap-second was added to Coordinated Universal Time to account for the slowing rotation of the Earth.

In 1982, the proposed Equal Rights Amendment to the U.S. Constitution expired, having failed to receive the required number of ratifications for its adoption, despite having its seven-year deadline extended by three years.

In 1985, 39 American hostages from a hijacked TWA jetliner were freed in Beirut after being held 17 days.

Ten years ago: Leonard Gregg, a part-time firefighter, was charged with starting one of the two wildfires that merged into a monstrous blaze in eastern Arizona. (Gregg later pleaded guilty and was sentenced in 2004 to 10 years in federal prison; he was released in June 2011.)

Brazil defeated Germany, 2-0, for the team's record fifth World Cup title.

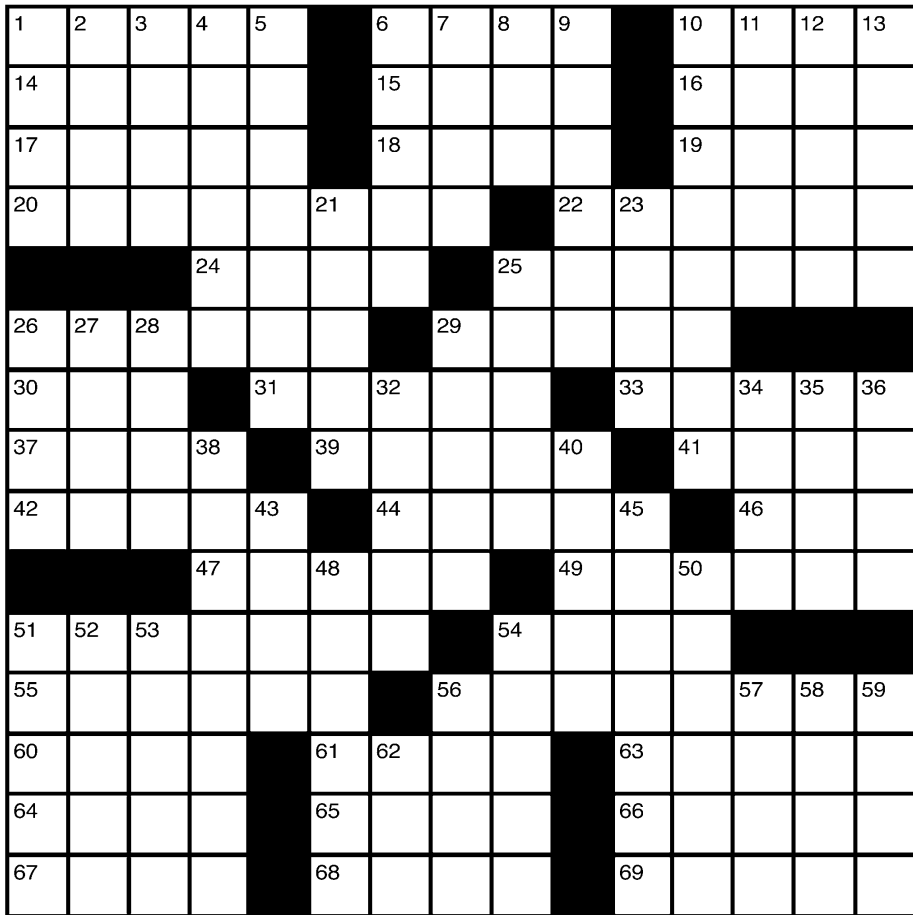

Five years ago: Two men rammed a jeep loaded with gasoline canisters into the main terminal at Glasgow Airport in Scotland, failing to set off an explosion, but seriously burning one of the suspects; the attack came a day after two cars rigged as bombs were found in London.

One year ago: The U.N.-backed Special Tribunal for Lebanon issued an indictment naming four suspects in the assassination of Lebanon's former Prime Minister Rafik Hariri, including a high-ranking Hezbollah militant linked to the 1983 truck bombings at the U.S. and French embassies in Kuwait. (Hezbollah is refusing to extradite the suspects.) Conservative TV commentator Glenn Beck said goodbye to Fox News Channel, airing his final show before going into business for himself.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

"I have come to the conclusion that one useless man is called a disgrace, that two are called a law firm, and that three or more become a congress." — Peter Stone

Today we get three variations on a five-diamond contract from the Scandinavian championships. Against Runi Mouritzen and, in another room, Artur Malinowski, both Wests cashed the club ace and continued the suit. South ruffed, ran the heart jack to East, and got a trump return — best defense. Both declarers ran their seven trumps, and now the defense could choose who would guard clubs. Against Mouritzen both defenders did, forcing West to keep the heart 10 guarded (or declarer could overtake the heart queen). So West pitched all his spades, letting Mouritzen overtake the heart jack and finesse in spades successfully. Against Malinowski, West kept the bare spade queen and the doubleton heart 10, and declarer came down to one spade, one club and the heart ace in dummy. He led a heart to the ace and East was squeezed in the black suits. Well done, both declarers; but Frederic Wrang had an even tougher task, since he received a low trump lead, won in dummy. Next came a spade to the jack and queen. West now cashed the club ace and continued with a low club (a heart shift would have been fatal). Wrang ruffed the club return and ran all his trumps, coming down to the spade ace and two heart honors in hand and the 10-9 of spades and the bare heart ace in dummy. East had to bare one of his kings, and Wrang could cash the ace of that suit and cross to the other hand to take tricks 12 and 13 — a true crisscross squeeze.

ANSWER: The one-spade call is forcing (fourth suit by responder sets up at least a one-round force), and it should focus your attention on stoppers in the fourth suit. But it is much more descriptive for you to rebid your long suit here. Your hand is at least initially all about clubs, and you can always bid no-trump later.

DEAR ABBY

My co-workers and I recently went out to eat and I was put in an awkward situation. One of them announced that I had left a big tip when I paid my bill. Abby, I always leave a generous tip. I was raised well below the poverty line, and my mother's tips literally determined how much we would be able to eat that day.

DEAR ABBY
Jeane Phillips

The co-worker who said it became upset with me and began lecturing me about how "rude" it is to leave a large tip, especially when you're with other people. She even said it "degrades" the server.

My mom may have raised me differently than most people, but I was taught that it's OK to leave a big tip as long as you don't announce it to everyone. Was what I did considered rude?

— GENEROUS IN CONNECTICUT

DEAR GENEROUS: No. The person who was rude was your co-worker, for making a spectacle. She probably did it because your tip made hers appear to be stingy. Diners leave tips based upon the quality of the service they receive. If you felt your server merited it, you were right to leave a large tip.

P.S. I have never heard of a server feeling "degraded" because of a large tip. Grateful, yes. Degraded, never!

DEAR ABBY: I am dating a man, "Cameron" I am crazy about. We plan to be married next year once I finish college. There is just one issue that's stressing me. Cam's apartment is gross and messy. There are dishes from various dinners scattered all over the place. I find it disgusting, and I'm worried he will be like this after we're married.

I have tried to talk to him about it, but he gets angry and says that it's HIS place. He says he'll be neater when we're married. I'm not sure I believe that.

This seems a silly thing to cause discord in a relationship, which is otherwise going well, but I AM concerned. Is there anything I can do?

— GROSSED OUT IN BLOOMINGTON, IND.

DEAR GROSSED OUT: Yes, there is. You can face the fact that once you marry Cameron he is still going to be the same person he is now — sloppy, messy and defensive when you point out something that needs improvement. People don't magically change after they say "I do." If you love him enough to accept him just the way he is, and be the primary housekeeper after you're married, you may have a happy union. If not, put your foot down NOW.

DEAR ABBY: Many years ago I shoplifted a $30 item from a department store. Now I'd like to clear my conscience and make amends, but how?

I want to remain anonymous, so I can't send a check. Sending cash by mail seems unwise, and even with Google I have been unable to find a corporate address for an appropriate division. Can you help?

— ANONYMOUS IN THE USA

DEAR ANONYMOUS: Because you have made an honest effort and haven't been able to come up with an address to send the money, try to find out if the department store sponsors an activity for charity and donate to that. Or, alternatively, give the money to a charity of your choice, which may save your conscience and do a good deed at the same time.

IF JUNE 30 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: You like to be known as trustworthy and will have plenty of opportunities to prove your merit in the coming year. Settle into a pleasurable groove over the next several months as your popularity pops. Although you may fall under the spell of an attractive person or become dazzled by a daring dream, it's probably best to wait until next year to make a firm commitment. Early November is an ideal time to launch crucial projects, ask for favors or improve your life on several levels. Remember that whatever knocks on your door that month might not be what you want, but it will surely be just what you need. Your reprieve from unforeseen surprises ends and forceful ambitions return in mid November making the winter intense.

HOROSCOPE
Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A cheerful demeanor may attract plenty of notice. Your friends might keep you hopping with phone calls, impromptu visits or a stream of ideas. Develop new contacts through email or the Internet.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Friends with benefits are a blessing. A relationship that begins with solid friendship on both sides could grow into something more physical. Much can be accomplished through sheer enthusiasm.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Accept the good with the bad. A fair-weather friend might show his or her true colors but someone new might show promise. You may be disappointed when you have offered trust and commitment.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Adjust gracefully when challenged by surprises. People who pop into your life now might pop right out again. Force yourself to appraise tense situations with sensible rationality.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): It isn't necessary to yield to pressure from others. Don't feel guilty if you must say no to an offer or an agreement. A tolerant attitude and emphasis on team spirit can work magic on discontented family members.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Pinch yourself to prove you aren't dreaming. Your schemes might prove to be delicate bubbles that burst unexpectedly. Someone may misunderstand your offer of a commitment or of financial aid.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): It takes two to tango. Team up with others to muddle through mundane tasks — or invite a friend along on what would otherwise be a routine errand. Physical activities can work wonders on your mood.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You seem more delicious when you are less vicious. It is time to tone down the sarcasm and concentrate on sincerity. Romantic interludes could get very hot and steamy on this summer evening.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): There may be an opportunity for a sincere apology or to set the record straight. Listen to the opinions and advice of those higher up on the food chain. By being generous, you exert a positive influence.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Give yourself permission to be more creative and inventive. You can focus your energy on imaginative hobbies or simple entertainments. This weekend you may travel down happy romantic trails.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You might make a favorable impression on new acquaintances. You can have a wonderful time with a new someone, but avoid forming alliances in the business world or making major purchases.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): There's more to you than meets the eye. Or at least that's what other think when they first meet you. If you are single, you might meet someone who is easily impressed by your apparent charms.
