Feds Review Power Line's Effect on Grouse

BY KIMBERLEE KRUESI
lkruesi@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • Along the 1,100 miles of the proposed Gateway West transmission line are a few strategically placed leks.

These flat areas of land serve as critical mating grounds for sage grouse. But they've caught the eye of energy developers who saw the land as a place to build a high-voltage transmission line.

The project — proposed by Idaho Power Co. and Rocky Mountain Power — would span across southern Wyoming and southern Idaho. The final route hasn't been determined, but concerns over harming crucial regions of sage grouse habitat could delay the process.

"We've been trying to stay on top of the sage grouse issues but it's been a challenge from day one," said Walt George, the Bureau of Land Management's Gateway West project manager as the agency examines the line. "It keeps changing"

In 2010, federal officials determined that the bird qualified as a candidate for endangered species protection but held off from listing the bird. A year later, a federal judge

Speak Up

Both the state of Idaho and the federal government currently seek public comment on sage grouse-related issues:

- The U.S. Bureau of Land Management is currently accepting comments on its sage grouse analysis for the Gateway West project. Comments can be submitted to <http://bit.ly/MHoTM6> or emailed to Gateway\_West\_WYMail@blm.gov.

Written comments can be submitted to Bureau of Land Management, Gateway West Project, P.O. Box 20879, Cheyenne, WY 82003.

- Idaho Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter is taking public comment on a plan to improve the bird's habitat and population. To read the draft plan and comment, visit <https://fish-handgame.idaho.gov/content/draftplan>. After July 13, the comments will be reviewed and the state will present a final version of the plan to the U.S. departments of Interior and Agriculture.

TWO MORE ARRESTED IN 25-GUN THEFT

BY ALISON GENE SMITH
alismith@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • Two more people have been charged in connection with a Twin Falls burglary that left a man missing nearly $16,000 of his possessions.

On Thursday, Holly Neubauer, 42, was arrested and charged with theft by receiving stolen property. On Friday, Jakob Stockton, 19, was arrested and charged with burglary and grand theft.

Police say Stockton, along with Aaron Carlson, 18, Matthew Laws, 20, and a juvenile male, burglarized a home in the 100 block of Wirsching Avenue West while the owner was away.

The group allegedly stole 25 firearms, a coin collection, a big-screen television and other items, Twin Falls police said. Police say the total value of the allegedly stolen items is about $15,840.

Neubauer is the mother of the juvenile, and allegedly pawned several

More Inside

TWIN FALLS • Have a fun Fourth of July today. Just be smart about it.

As Magic Valley residents fire up their grills, buy six-packs and stock up on fireworks, code enforcers and firefighters are nervous that careless celebrating could lead to fires and drunken driving.

Kyli Gough, fire information officer for the U.S. Bureau of Land Management, said nationwide, July 4 has the most reported fires of any day of the year.

"It's a big issue and a lot of those fires are

TWIN FALLS • A soldier who rode in a tank with Gen. George Patton across North Africa during World War II and a Navy air mechanic who served in World War II, the Korean War and the Vietnam War are among those being honored today at BridgeView Estates.

About 50 veterans and the spouses of deceased veterans will attend recognition ceremonies beginning at 1:30 p.m. The event includes an address by A.J. Church of U.S. Sen. Mike Crapo's staff and presentation of pins by Twin Falls Vice Mayor and former Marine Don Hall.

Wendell Eller no doubt will have thoughts of his association with Patton while Paul Jackson will reflect on his service in three wars. Both Eller, 93, called Patton "one of the best generals of any army" during an interview with the Times-News Tuesday.

"He accomplished more and lost fewer men than any other general," Eller said. "When Patton went to do something, he did it. He was radical, of course."

The latter reference was to Patton's reputation as an eccentric whose gruff, often profane speech made him a controversial figure during operations in North Africa, Sicily and Europe.

Five-year-old Brock Maughan, of Acequia decorates his bicycle Tuesday for the Rupert Fourth of July Parade during Minidoka Memorial Hospital's Ride for Safety event.

BY LAURIE WELCH

RUPERT • A somewhat brisk breeze Tuesday delivered smells of pulled pork, Kettlecorn and double cheeseburgers laden with ham and bacon to the far corners of the Rupert Square. A few blocks away at Minidoka Memorial Hospital hundreds of children jazzed up their bicycles with red, white and blue garland and streamers to ride in the city's Fourth of July Parade.

A study in concentration, 5-year-old Brock Maughan, of Acequia, wove garland around the handlebars of his yellow bicycle, which he intends to ride in the parade today along with his siblings.

His mother Kali Maughan said the family just moved to the area.

"This is such a nice event. I'll definitely come back next year," Maughan said.

Minidoka Memorial Hospital Chief Operating Officer Joel Rogers said they have given away more than 1,500 bicycle helmets to children during the dozen years the hospital has held the Ride for Safety event.

The hospital also supplied bike decorations and hospital junior volunteers will serve as chaperones for the children during the parade.

The helmets cost about $4 each and for the past two years the hospital's employees have paid for them.

"That first year I saw kids riding off on their bicycles with the helmet tucked under their arm," Rogers said. "Now, I'm seeing more of them wearing them so maybe we're getting through to them."

Rogers said if the helmets prevent just one head injury the cost of the event will be worth it.

At the Square, people drawn in by the promising smells stood trying to choose between vendors.

"I've been here every day. I just choose a different place to eat," said Jennie Morrison of Paul as she munched on a cheeseburger and fries at the Minico FFA booth with her 6-year-old great granddaughter Jentree Bott.

All of the vendors selected to participate in Rupert's Fourth of July celebration on the Square are non-profit and the proceeds are used to fund scholarships, support charitable causes or help pay for member trips and uniforms.

"These kids have been fabulous. Some have put in 18-hour days," said Brandi Milliron, advisor for the Minico FFA club, which set up shop on the Square. "And those who work really well reap the benefits."

The hours the members volunteer are tracked and can be used to pay for trips and club jackets.

"I think Rupert is the most patriotic town I've ever been in," Milliron said. "The people who live here get that. Other places may celebrate the Fourth of July, but Rupert celebrates it for five days."

Rupert Kiwanis member Cheryl Juntunen said what really draws in the crowds is the club's Super Burger loaded with bacon and ham.

"I'm an old public health person and my heart just breaks to think about it. We should be selling only watermelon and apples," a smiling Juntunen said.

But, the proceeds go toward good causes, she said, like student scholarships, books for children and the Rupert swimming pool.

Todd McGhee, city councilman and Rupert POW/MIA organization member checked the internal temperature on pork loin basking in barbecue pits that he helped design and build for the group's food trailer. The profits generated will help maintain the POW/MIA monuments and provide funds for other projects.

McGhee said the park has been "jam-packed" every night and the concerts have been "phenomenal."

"This celebration is the best," McGhee said.

Penny Vuori, assembled Indian Tacos made with homemade stone dough for the Community Oasis Outreach booth.

The Outreach is a homeless shelter and food kitchen in Rupert, which benefits directly from each sale.

The event also serves to bring the shelter and the general public together, Vuori said.

Carolyn Smyer donated her Kettlecorn popper to the Declo High School Trendsetters so they could peddle the sweetened popcorn to raise money for trips and costumes.

"It's been fun and everyone has been so friendly," Smyer said. "The food is awesome, the bands have been good and people just lined up down the street to watch the fireworks on Saturday."

TWIN FALLS • Today's recognition ceremony for military veterans at BridgeView Estates is part of "We Honor Veterans," which involves hospices nationwide in the care of aging military veterans.

Visions Hospice of Twin Falls is a member of the cooperative program between the National Hospice and Palliative Care Organization and the U.S. Department of recognition ceremony on Veterans Day last year and have done five since then in skilled nursing facilities and assisted living facilities," said Heidi Gause, Visions Hospice community education coordinator. "He kind of thought he was a little god," said Eller, who was a radio operator in Patton's Sherman tank. "Sometimes you wondered if you should be in the same outfit."

Eller, who was among the first Idahoans drafted for World War II, has the distinction of serving in the U.S. Army's initial combat in North Africa all the way through to the war's conclusion in Germany. He survived the Tunisia campaign's Battle of Kasserine Pass in February 1943.

Kasserine Pass marked the first large-scale meeting of the American and German forces in World War II, with the Americans suffering heavy casualties and being pushed back 50 miles.

Eller holds no glamorous views of battle.

"War is stupid. War is awful. You are scared all the time," he said.

Although he still wakes up at night from violent images in dreams, Eller said, "I don't have as many nightmares any more."

Meanwhile, Jackson's tours of duty as an aircraft mechanic weren't as threatening.

"I never shot anybody and I was never shot at," he said.

Jackson, 92, enlisted in 1942 with hopes of being a gunner, a goal he didn't achieve because "I wasn't that good a shot."

He served in Guam for three years during World War II and said the mechanic's work suited him well.

"If I didn't get greasy and dirty, it wasn't a good job," Jackson said.

However, he was saddened by the shift from aircraft with piston engines to jets, saying the newer planes could be maintained by removing a piece of equipment and replacing it with a new one. "They were just too modern for me."

Jackson is an avid reader who has a copy of the Bible next to a Louis L'Amour novel on a table next to his recliner. Despite his age, he can read the smallest print.

After his military career, Jackson got a bachelor's degree in religious studies from the University of Texas-Corpus Christi and went on to a Baptist seminary in California. He came to the Magic Valley to become the minister of a Gooding church for eight years.

approved a settlement requiring that a decision on the bird must be made by 2015.

As part of its planning process, the BLM has released additional information on how Gateway West would affect sage grouse habitat. The plan lists both potential impacts and ways the utility companies could mitigate the line's effects.

Those steps include removing juniper that encroaches on sagebrush and weakens sage grouse habitat, marking fences, or re-seeding brush plants to improve the land.

Currently, Idaho is waiting on Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter's approval of what the state should do to keep the bird from being listed. A 16-member task force appointed by Otter submitted its recommendations in June. Included in their proposal was a halt on new infrastructure development in critical sage grouse habitat.

"That would influence some of the project's routes in Idaho," George said. "Our current plan doesn't include the governor's recommendations. The final version will but we don't know what that will look like yet."

Segments of the line's proposed route in southern Idaho, including Twin Falls and Cassia counties, cross 12-15 acres of critical habitat. It's not a lot but enough to delay some of the process, George said. How long the delay would last and what routes the utility companies should select are still unknown.

Otter has until mid-July to approve the task force's recommendations. Until then, George said he's hoping for the best.

Road Closures for the Twin Falls Fireworks Show

North College Road will close at 7 p.m., and at 9 p.m. sections of Falls Avenue and Washington Street North that surround the college will also close. starting from fireworks," Gough said. "It's completely preventable, too."

One thing that might help: An Idaho Fire Prevention order is in effect until Oct. 20, meaning all fireworks are banned on public lands.

The fire ban also covers discharging firearms using incendiary or tracer ammunition and starting fires. Those caught violating the ban may be subject to up to $1,000 in fines and up to 12 months in prison.

But even those setting off fireworks on private land can cause big problems, Gough added. To minimize the risk, make sure there is plenty of water nearby to douse flames.

in the city are in danger of starting devastating fires, said Joshua Palmer, public information officer for the city of Twin Falls. Aerial fireworks can land on roofs or in dry weeds and spark blazes.

"All it takes is for one of those fireworks to blow sideways, or one of those embers to come down into that dry brush," Palmer said. "Then it catches the brush on fire really quickly and the wind just spreads it to the house."

Adding to the confusion: Though some fireworks, like Roman candles and bottle rockets, are legal to sell in Idaho, it's illegal to set them off in the state. Each year, Twin Falls police confiscate illegal fireworks and hand them over to the bomb squad to detonate, Palmer said. Those caught using illegal fireworks are subject to a $100 fine.

"Those aerial fireworks basically could put a lot of people in danger if they're misused," Palmer said.

Drunken driving is also a concern. Expect heavy patrols cracking down on impaired driving following the fireworks show at the College of Southern Idaho.

Gough said while officials are emphasizing safety, they still want the public to enjoy the holiday.

"We want people to have fun with their families and enjoy the outdoor activities that we have," Gough said. "But just be safe."

with fireworks. But the agency's investigation was not complete Tuesday.

BLM resources at the fire included six engines, one dozer, one water tender, one air attack unit and two single engine air tankers. The Castleford Rural Fire Department also responded.

Prepare Homes for Fires, Cabinet Members Urge

BY ROCKY BARKER
Idaho Statesman

BOISE • More fires had burned more acres by this time a year ago.

But with big fires already this year in Arizona and New Mexico, and with Colorado Springs residents still coming to grips with the losses of the Waldo Canyon Fire that burned 350 homes, this year looks like it will be long and hot, too.

Homeland Security Secretary Janet Napolitano and Secretary of Agriculture Tom Vilsack came to Colorado and Boise Tuesday to tell residents of the Northern Rockies to prepare for the worst.

The two members of President Obama's Cabinet did the obligatory thanks to the army of firefighters who have risked their lives to fight fires in high winds and blistering heat in the Southwest. And they offered sympathy to the hundreds of families who've lost their homes or who've lost family members in air tanker crashes.

But along with the message that the federal government was here to help, the two leaders of the nation's firefighting campaign urged people to take responsibility for protecting their own homes. And with the fire season moving north into Idaho's forests and the rest of the Northern Rockies, they urged residents not to wait.

"If you haven't cleared your property, if you haven't prepared your business and your home for fire, this is the time to do so," Napolitano said.

The two toured the Waldo Canyon Fire in Colorado Springs Tuesday morning and in the afternoon Boise's National Interagency Fire Center, where the nation's wildfire-fighting efforts are coordinated.

The Waldo Canyon Fire destroyed more than 350 homes. In Idaho, last week's Charlotte Fire burned 66 homes and 29 outbuildings in Pocatello.

From the Forest to the Urban Fringe

Over the past 20 years, the western fire story has shifted from backcountry locales like Yellowstone National Park and Yellow Pine on the edge of the Frank Church River of No Return to more urban settings — Colorado Springs, Los Alamos in 2000, Boise in 1996 and 2008 and even Los Angeles in 2003 and 2005.

That's happening because more people have moved into the urban edge next to forests and rangelands, said Napolitano, who saw her share of fires as governor of Arizona.

It's also happening because a changing climate has brought longer, drier and hotter fires seasons across the West, she said.

It's amazing to watch so many houses burn — but it's also remarkable that local fire departments are able to save as many as they do, said Vilsack, whose department oversees the U.S. Forest Service.

100,000 EXPECTED FOR IDAHO FALLS' JULY 4 BLOWOUT

POST REGISTER

IDAHO FALLS • The two magic numbers for fireworks fans this Independence Day are 571 and 17,153.

First up is 571. That's the number of additional fireworks shells that organizers from Melaleuca said they ordered to top last year's Melaleuca Freedom Celebration.

That brings us to 17,153, the total number of shells included in this year's 31-minute blowout.

Melaleuca CEO Frank VanderSloot said those numbers add up to total the largest fireworks show west of the Mississippi River. Residents may judge for themselves when fireworks illuminate the night sky over the Snake River around 10 p.m. today.

"I don't like to overpromise; I don't want to create an expectation," VanderSloot said. "But if they come with any expectation, I suspect this show will exceed it."

The fireworks show serves as the icing on the cake for this year's daylong festivities.

To help America celebrate her birthday, a 5-kilometer fun run, the city's traditional parade, the downtown Liberty Festival on the Falls and a minor league baseball game also have been scheduled.

Kerry McCullough of the Greater Idaho Falls Chamber of Commerce said fellow event organizers are expecting a large turnout. If that's the case, McCullough thinks they will be impressed.

The 9 a.m. parade will feature 106 entrants.

Bands are set to perform along Memorial Drive in the afternoon and evening.

And sand volleyball, a three-on-three basketball challenge and video game tournaments beginning at noon have been added to the downtown Liberty Festival schedule in an attempt to appeal to teens and young adults.

"With it being on Wednesday and with nice weather, we anticipate actually having more locals stay here instead of going somewhere else," McCullough said. "We think they will enjoy all of the activities we have here in Idaho Falls."

MAN ARRESTED FOR MAGIC MOUNTAIN RESORT BURGLARY

BY ALISON GENE SMITH
alismith@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • A 24-year-old man is behind bars after allegedly burglarizing the ski lodge at Magic Mountain Resort and stealing items worth more than $1,400.

On June 22, a Twin Falls County sheriff's deputy was doing a security check at the resort when he found a door of the lodge had been broken into.

The deputy contacted resort owner Gary Miller, who was able to make a list of items that were missing, including emergency radios and a cellphone.

Later that week, deputies began checking local pawn shops and Craigslist to see if any of the stolen items turned up. Deputies also got permission from Miller to have Verizon Wireless release the phone's location to them.

According to a report filed by deputies, the phone's location returned to an area near the Cameo Estate Trailer Park in the 200 block of Caswell Ave. W. in Twin Falls. Deputies also discovered the phone was being used. They found more than 600 text messages, some referencing a Craigslist ad asking to meet people for sexual encounters, according to the police report. Through text messages, deputies were able to find that a woman named Jewel Hance had the phone, the report states.

According to the report, in addition to the text messages, the phone records also showed the person who had the phone called the felony probation and parole office. According to deputies, Hance is on felony probation. On June 27, a deputy agreed to meet with Hance at a residence at the Cameo Estate Trailer Park, accompanied by probation officers.

According to the report, deputies spoke with Jewel Hance and George Hance, who allegedly admitted there was alcohol and synthetic marijuana in the house.

"Once inside the house, the Twin Falls County Sheriff's Office search and rescue Motorola radios were found as well as several other radios," the report states.

Deputies also allegedly found several snow hats with the Magic Mountain logo and other items reported stolen including boxes of chips and candy, tools, and first aid equipment.

George Hance was arraigned in Twin Falls County 5th District Court Monday on charges of burglary and grand theft and held on $20,000 bond at the Twin Falls County Jail. Jewel Hance has several sealed cases according to online court records, but it is unclear whether she has been charged in this case. According to a head count of the Twin Falls County Jail, Jewel Hance is in custody. George Hance has been scheduled for July 13 preliminary hearing.

Man Charged with DUI after SUV Rolled with Children Inside

BY ALISON GENE SMITH

TWIN FALLS • A 31-year-old Burley man was charged with driving under the influence, resisting and obstructing, leaving the scene of an accident, and injury to a child after police say his sport utility vehicle rolled while he was driving drunk.

On July 1, Idaho State Police responded to the scene of a crash at 5200 East and 3625 North, near Milner Lake in Twin Falls County, after a passer-by called to report a man and two children were involved in a rollover. There didn't appear to be injuries, but the caller reported the man was trying to leave the scene as soon as possible, a police report stated.

When troopers arrived, they found a 1999 black Chevrolet Tahoe and a man changing a tire on the side of the road. According to the police report, the left rear window was broken out and the top of the vehicle was damaged. The contents of the vehicle were "in complete disarray," the report states.

According to the report, the man had scrapes on his arms and a gouge on the back of his head along with dirt on his clothes and skin. While talking with the man, deputies identified him as Cage G. Hansen, and said he smelled of an alcoholic beverage.

"His eyes were bloodshot and glassy and he was slurring his words," the report states.

According to the report, Hansen denied drinking. Later, Twin Falls County sheriff's deputies responded to assist and Hansen allegedly began resisting arrest.

In an interview with Hansen's wife and brother, police discovered Hansen called his brother saying he rolled the vehicle and needed help. When the brother arrived, he found the Tahoe on its roof in a field near the road, the police report states. According to the report, the brother used a tow truck to get the SUV back on its wheels.

Hansen was transported by troopers to St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center for a blood draw to check his blood alcohol level. Hansen was then taken to the Twin Falls County Jail where he was booked and held on $2,000 bond. His pretrial hearing is scheduled for July 24.

Otter Appoints Temp Replacement for Injured State Controller

TIMES-NEWS

BOISE • Brandon Woolf, Idaho's chief deputy controller, will temporarily take over as state controller while Controller Donna Jones continues to recover from injuries sustained in a May 25 automobile accident.

Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter

announced Woolf's appointment Tuesday. The state controller, an elected position, is the chief fiscal officer of the state of Idaho — responsible for maintaining its financial records and paying its bills.

Woolf will act as controller until Jones is ready to return to work, according to a press release issued by Otter's office. Woolf has worked with three state controllers, led the agency's statewide payroll division and served as the chief deputy controller over the last 15 years.

The appointment came at Jones' request, according to the press release.

Jones, 73, suffered severe injuries, including broken vertebrae, when she lost control of her vehicle on Interstate 84 near Rupert.

At last month's Republican State Convention in Twin Falls, Woolf read a letter from Jones thanking people for their support during her recovery and emphasizing the importance of wearing seat belts.

Batmobile to Appear in Cd'A Parade

BY TOM HASSLINGER
Coeur d'Alene Press

COEUR D'ALENE • Its first stop is Coeur d'Alene.

That's not counting the gas stations between here and British Columbia, Canada, where Lenny B. Robinson had to stop his brand-new Batmobile on the drive over. That's right, Batmobile, like in the movies — the recent ones, where props and costumes are otherworldly.

Imagine that car, built by a Canadian familiar with the movie industry, at a roadside station somewhere in Washington off Interstate 5 on its way to the Lake City.

Well, that's exactly what happened Monday.

"Everybody from everywhere is stopping to look at the car," said Robinson, who has played Batman for hospitalized children over the last decade and recently added to his persona by purchasing a head-turning, state-of-the-movie Batmobile that's pulling into Coeur d'Alene today. "It's a work of art I'm proud to drive."

Thanks to the persistence of Coeur d'Alene's Liz Williams — a childhood advocate through Childhood Resource and CCC volunteer — as well as a team of community-minded supporters, Robinson will cruise down Sherman Avenue as part of the Fourth of July parade.

"It's been miraculous," Williams said of reeling in Robinson, which took six months of effort. "We're going to make this happen."

The back story is this: Robinson has been playing Batman in a $5,000 neoprene and leather Batsuit, which he had custom made from a professional costume maker, for 10 years.

He began visiting sick children in the Baltimore area, where he's from, back in 2001 with his now teenage son who used to accompany him as Robin, signing autographs and handing out Bat toys.

The wealthy philanthropist had created a cleaning company which he sold in 2007. But it was when he first visited a hospital did he realize what his true calling was, he said, and why he formed the nonprofit, Superheroes For Kids, dedicated to his charity work.

"When I realized what I was doing," he said of the reaction from sick children during his first hospital visit in full movie uniform, "it sent me to another dimension in my life."

And what Robinson used to drive as his Batmobile was his $225,000 black Lamborghini.

Actually, there's a funny clip of law enforcement officers pulling Robinson over because his license plate was only the bat symbol. That clip, taken from the officer's dashboard camera, went viral. (He didn't get a ticket.)

But the goal was always to up the persona, and Robinson found someone to build him a legit Batmobile in British Columbia. After years of planning, he picked it up days ago. He's driving it back to the East Coast — complete with stares from fellow motorists and gas station patrons — stopping at children's hospitals across the country.

One of his stops is Coeur d'Alene's parade, which begins at 11 a.m. today.

Robinson will take his crime fighting get-up to City Park after the parade to pose for $10 pictures to benefit the Children's Village. He also wants to visit Sacred Heart Medical Center in Spokane.

Robinson said he's excited for his first visit to Coeur d'Alene. It's one of the first stops on his cross-country tour, from west to east, which will prove to be a big task.

But any other alternative is out of the question.

"My weakness, is I hate to say no," Robinson said. "It brings so much joy to the kids."

IDAHO BRIEFS

Romney to Head to Sun Valley Next Week

SUN VALLEY • Republican presidential candidate Mitt Romney is scheduled to be in Sun Valley next week for a fundraiser.

He's set to visit the resort town on July 10, the Associated Press reports.

Then, he'll head on to Hamilton, Mont. Until now, neither Romney nor President Barack Obama has appeared to campaign in Montana.

Lee Newspapers of Montana reports that Romney's July 11 fundraising reception at the Daly Mansion will cost $2,500 per person to attend. A photograph with the candidate is another $2,500, while dinner is $25,000 per person.

Broker and part-time Ravalli County resident Charles Schwab is sponsoring the fundraiser. Romney's state political chairman, state Rep. Scott Reichner, says Romney won't make any public campaign appearances and the fundraiser will be closed to the media.

Romney has scheduled a third similar fundraiser July 12 in Jackson Hole, Wyo.

Panel Approves Governor's Mansion Budget

BOISE • A panel that oversees the Idaho governor's mansion has approved a budget for the next fiscal year after a previous vote held over email was found in violation of state law.

The Governor's Housing Committee voted Tuesday for a $177,400 budget to cover landscaping, mowing and watering at the expansive hilltop property. The vote was contingent on the panel holding a public hearing in September to garner input on future plans for the long-empty mansion.

The committee met in Boise after one of its Democratic members complained the email vote violated Idaho's open meeting law because the public wasn't given adequate notice.

Sen. Les Bock worried the unpublicized vote would take the spotlight off the home he wants to dispose of, because it's quickly draining a fund to maintain it.

Husband Backs Car over Moscow Woman

MOSCOW • Authorities say a 51-year-old Moscow woman is in critical condition after her husband backed his car over her in their driveway.

Idaho State Police say 61-year-old Donald Fields was backing the car down the driveway Monday to allow his wife Michelle to get inside. He told officers that he did not know she was behind the vehicle.

Neighbors helped lift the car off Michelle Fields using a jack. She was airlifted to a hospital, where she was in critical condition on Monday evening.

The Moscow-Pullman Daily News reports that no charges have been filed against Donald Fields and the investigation is continuing.

Missing Man's Body Recovered from River

KOOSKIA • Idaho County authorities say they have recovered the body of a man presumed drowned after he disappeared in the Clearwater River in April.

The Idaho County Sheriff's Office said in a statement Tuesday that the body of 19-year-old William R. Thomas was recovered Monday from the river at Kooskia.

The body was identified by a family member.

Thomas was last seen April 23 in the river near U.S. Highway 12 milepost 75.5. The person who reported him missing said Thomas had been missing for about 10 minutes before calling police.

Law enforcement and fish and game officials unsuccessfully searched for him on foot and by boat.

Boise's Longest Serving Mayor Dies at 83

BOISE • Dick Eardley, Boise's longest-serving mayor, has died. He was 83.

His son, Randy Eardley, told the Idaho Statesman that his father died in his sleep Saturday after a heart attack.

Dick Eardley started as a broadcaster in his hometown of Baker City, Ore. He joined the Idaho Statesman in 1955 as a reporter, then moved to KBOI-Channel 2 and KBOI-670 to announce high school sports.

Eardley served 12 years as Boise's mayor, from 1974 through 1986.

He allied with businesses that wanted a regional mall built downtown. He also worked to protect the city's historic North End, create the Boise Arts Commission and land the World Center for Birds of Prey.

Boise Mayor Dave Bieter says Eardley worked diligently to make Boise a better place to live.

N. Idaho's Avista Wants to Drop Gas Rebates

SPOKANE, Wash. • Avista says natural gas is so abundant and cheap it no longer pays to offer energy efficiency programs.

The Spokane utility is asking regulators in Washington and Idaho to allow it to stop offering rebates for high efficiency natural gas furnaces and water heaters and for insulation in homes heated with natural gas.

Incentives and rebates for electric energy efficiency would continue.

Idaho Lawmaker Offers $12K to Clear $600K Tax Debt

BOISE (AP) • A tax-protesting Idaho lawmaker has offered to pay $12,000 over five years to settle debts totaling more than a half-million dollars, according to court documents.

Hart

State Rep. Phil Hart's proposal is part of his bid for Chapter 13 bankruptcy protection in federal court. The northern Idaho Republican has listed about $600,000 in debt, with most of it owed to the Internal Revenue Service and Idaho State Tax Commission. That balance includes $22,000 in credit card debt.

Hart has offered to pay $200 a month for five years to discharge the debt, according to court documents. Hart also anticipates that he will receive income tax refunds during that five-year period and he agreed to turn that money over as well.

But the repayment plan has drawn skepticism from at least one bankruptcy attorney with expertise in Chapter 13 cases, the Spokesman-Review reports. David Gardner practices in eastern Washington state and said Hart's offer is unlikely to win approval in the courts.

"Generally, you don't get to discharge your tax debts," said Gardner, an attorney with Winston and Cashatt in Spokane, Wash.

The proposal from Hart is much more likely to draw objections from both the bankruptcy trustee and creditors when it gets a hearing in August, Gardner said, adding: "For that amount of cash, I would expect the IRS to be very involved."

Hart is tangling with the federal government on another front, as the U.S. Justice Department seeks to foreclose on his home in Athol to settle his IRS tax debt, though that case was automatically stayed by his bankruptcy filing.

OUR VIEW

We Mutually Pledge to Each Other

As familiar as we are with "When in the Course of human events" and "We hold these truths to be self-evident," we're likely far less acquainted with the final paragraph in the Declaration of Independence. For those of us who may not have it committed to memory, here it is:

"We, therefore, the Representatives of the united States of America, in General Congress, Assembled, appealing to the Supreme Judge of the world for the rectitude of our intentions, do, in the Name, and by Authority of the good People of these Colonies, solemnly publish and declare, That these United Colonies are, and of Right ought to be Free and Independent States; that they are Absolved from all Allegiance to the British Crown, and that all political connection between them and the State of Great Britain, is and ought to be totally dissolved; and that as Free and Independent States, they have full Power to levy War, conclude Peace, contract Alliances, establish Commerce, and to do all other Acts and Things which Independent States may of right do. And for the support of this Declaration, with a firm reliance on the protection of divine Providence, we mutually pledge to each other our Lives, our Fortunes and our sacred Honor."

Sure, it's a lot of old English to read through on a holiday morning, but there are a few things in this final paragraph that are especially noteworthy. If you're wide awake and exercising keen attention to detail, you may have noticed in the first line that the "u" in united that begins the phrase "united States of America" is not capitalized. It's not that Jefferson and Franklin made a typo, it's just that the new name of our country had not yet been established. When the Declaration was drafted, the word "united" was an adjective rather than part of the bigger noun. It was — and still is — a description of who and what we are — or should be.

If you skip down to the last line, you'll see what our founding fathers thought was important enough to leave as their final thought. These 56 men, who spent a good part of the summer of 1776 fighting, feuding and disagreeing on points large and small, concluded the Declaration by pledging — to one another — their lives, their fortunes and their sacred honor.

Independence Day is a wonderful day to read those words and appreciate the theme — unity and a mutual pledge to preserve that unity with every bit of both our will and our strength.

Partisan politics is by no means inconsistent with the "unity" expressed in the final words of our Declaration of Independence. However, the bitterness, rancor, intolerance and mean-spiritedness that have become the hallmark of partisan politics are absolutely inconsistent with the Declaration's theme.

There are serious disagreements between the future of our United States envisioned by Barack Obama and Mitt Romney. That's as it should be. But opponents can and still should be civil; and their supporters as well. Unity, and a pledge to preserve it.

If we can remember and embrace the message sent to us from 56 disparate delegates 236 years ago — that we are a united States — then maybe sometime late in the evening of Nov. 6 the newly elected President of our country can get up and pledge to political friends and foes alike their life, their fortune and their sacred honor. And mean it.

July 4: Remember Freedom Just a Dream for Many

July 4 is a day of mixed emotions for me as a Rwandan-American. Not only is it Independence Day in this country, but it also is Liberation Day in Rwanda — a time to remember being liberated from the abyss of mass murder and the conclusion of 100 days of mourning for the more than 1 million innocent men, women and children murdered during the 1994 genocide. While others around me revel in parades and barbecues, I will celebrate my independence and liberation. But I'll also be thinking of my relatives — my beloved parents and six brothers and sisters and others who were mercilessly killed, and never had the opportunity to enjoy the true meaning of freedom.

July 4 is a day to not only celebrate our independence but also to reflect on where we've been and where we're going as individuals and as a nation. It is a day when we're supposed to celebrate our rights to "life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness."

As with many other Americans, my life story is a confluence of complex events, not obvious when we first meet. Almost 17 years ago, I came to this country because of a tragedy rather than a choice. After losing my family and many dear friends to the genocide against Tutsis in Rwanda, I was given asylum in a country that I knew only by name: America.

Jacqueline Murekatete

Special to The Washington Post

An orphan without a word of English, I spent most of my early years here trying to come to terms with how it was that a 9-year-old had, in a matter of months, been stripped of basic rights and freedoms and branded an enemy of the state and a "cockroach" needing to be exterminated, as Rwandan ethnic Tutsis were referred to during the 100 days of bloodshed between April and July 1994.

Like other genocides, this genocide in Rwanda reminds us of man's greatest inhumanity to man, and the precious meaning of freedom and independence. Today, whatever name we place on modern-day tragedies — genocide, war crimes, crimes against humanity, civilian massacres — we are reminded of the fragility and scarcity of basic rights and freedoms we celebrate every July 4 here and in Rwanda. As long as ruthless governments anywhere are allowed to deny basic rights and fundamental freedoms to their people, our own independence and freedoms remain threatened.

In April, President Barack Obama stood with Holocaust survivors during the remembrance ceremony at the Holocaust Memorial Museum and highlighted today's greatest atrocities. Obama said that "preventing mass atrocities and genocide is a national security interest, and a core moral responsibility" of this country. "Sovereignty should never be a license to slaughter your own people," he added. He emphasized our country's commitment to freedom and security for all people and announced a newly formed Atrocities Prevention Board, tasked with developing strategies for preventing and intervening to stop mass atrocities. Right now, as I hear about alarming atrocities being committed in various parts of the world, most recently in Syria, I know firsthand that Obama's words cannot turn into actions soon enough.

I am truly grateful to this country for having welcomed me with open arms when I needed a safe home. I am also keenly aware that not every persecuted person or genocide orphan gets to come here.

So this July 4, let us enjoy the much-deserved day off and festivities. But I hope that each of us will take a minute to reflect on the freedoms many of us enjoy and celebrate each Independence Day, and the fact they remain only dreams for millions of people around the world.

Derailed Coal Train Highlights Critics' Fears

PASCO, Wash. (AP) — A coal train that derailed and spilled 31 cars of the black dusty fuel caused little more than a big mess and a day's delay in rail traffic in the Eastern Washington town of Mesa, but opponents of increased coal shipments through the Northwest say it's an example of a serious risk.

No one was injured and no buildings were damaged Monday evening when the train derailed, said Franklin County sheriff's Lt. Ronelle Nelson.

About 50 workers using heavy equipment worked through the night to clear the Burlington Northern Santa Fe main line track, said spokesman Gus Melonas.

They were able to put one car back on the track, but 30 were too badly damaged. They were pushed aside and will have to be cut up and removed in a salvage operation expected to take about three weeks, Melonas said.

About 30 trains a day roll through the area, about 20 miles north of the Tri-Cities. About four a day are coal trains, the state has said. The route also is used by the Portland-Chicago Amtrak.

Priority trains would be able to roll through the area on a siding by Tuesday afternoon and the main line should re-open by 8 p.m., Melonas said.

The cause of the derailment is under investigation.

The 125-car train with four locomotives was carrying coal from the Powder Basin in Wyoming to an export terminal at Delta, British Columbia, south of Vancouver.

With a growing demand for coal in Asia, there are a half-dozen proposals for new coal export terminals in Washington and Oregon. They are at Cherry Point, Longview and Port of Grays Harbor in Washington state, as well as Coos Bay in Oregon and two sites on the Columbia River.

Oregon Gov. John Kitzhaber, the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency and the Washington Department of Ecology have all asked the Army Corps of Engineers to thoroughly review the cumulative impacts of exporting large amounts of coal from Wyoming and Montana to Asia.

Environmental groups oppose the shipments. They site congestion and dust pollution problems with the trains and say regulators also should consider the effect on climate change from burning North America coal in Asia.

"As more trains come through, the risks of accidents go up," said Shannon Wright, executive director with Communitywise Bellingham, a group that wants studies of the local community impacts of a proposed coal-export terminal at Cherry Point.

"A close look at the increased risk of train wrecks needs to be studied," as the environmental review process gets under way, she said Tuesday.

Derailements are a serious risk, said Krista Collard, with the Sierra Club's Northwest Beyond Coal Campaign in San Francisco.

Dogs' Days Include More Freedom Now in Boise City Parks

BY KATY MOELLER

BOISE • Running. Jumping. Sniffing. Tail-wagging.

Winstead Park on the Boise Bench was alive with activity before 8 a.m. Friday, as dogs chased about and raced across the grass to fetch balls and sticks.

A little more than a year ago, exercising your dog off-leash here — and other city parks — would have led to a hefty fine.

Boisean David Simon, who has two large poodle mixes, Copper and Piper, said he's been ticketed too many times to count. He said he's even been cited at Mountain View Park in the dead of winter, when no one else was around.

"It's ridiculous," Simon said Friday morning. "I pay taxes, I get my dogs licensed, and I can't walk my dogs (off leashes) in an empty park?"

He can now. After surveying city residents, the parks commission decided to try a one-year pilot program beginning in April 2011 at seven parks: Castle Hills, Cypress, Hillside, Manitou, Redwood, Sunset and Winstead. Hillside Park, which got little use, was removed from the off-leash program.

The city solicited feedback from park neighbors and other users through the year, and did another survey at the conclusion of the pilot program.

The results: Support for the off-leash program grew from 69 percent to 83 percent, while opposition fell from 31 percent to 17 percent.

The other result: Dogs can continue to roam.

"Overall, I think it's been successful so far. It's a new program, and we're going to have to continue to watch it," said Boise Parks commissioner Louie Uranga.

Uranga said the commission has received inquiries from residents who want to see the off-leash hours expanded to other parks.

"We'll move slowly and hope to move correctly," he said.

As the owner of an Australian shepherd, Uranga understands when others with dogs talk about the need to let their pets run.

"I need to get him out every day," he said. They often go to Military Reserve Dog Off-Leash Park, an unfenced park of natural terrain in the north part of town, or to off-leash trails in the Foothills.

Dispute over Portland Containers Hits Idaho Port

BY JOHN MILLER
Associated Press

BOISE • A union-on-union fight over whose members should plug in refrigerated shipping containers in Oregon has sent economic ripples 360 miles upstream to an Idaho port, where some customers have ditched river barges for trucks rather than wait out the uncertainty.

Port of Lewiston manager David Doeringsfeld said the labor dispute between longshoremen and electrical workers at the Port of Portland is "definitely affecting container traffic" on the Snake River that would ordinarily be barged downstream to the Columbia River, then Portland.

A federal judge on Tuesday ordered an end to the slowdown, after one international shipping company, Hanjin, refused to call on Portland until the dispute is resolved.

Some of Doeringsfeld's customers from Idaho's agriculture and wood-products industries have been concerned about whether container vessels will be loaded with their goods. As a result, they've pulled their Hanjin container business from the river and instead trucked cargo to ports on Washington state's Puget Sound.

"A customer may be forced with rolling over their delivery dates because their cargo didn't get loaded, because it's still sitting on docks," Doeringsfeld said. "There are a fair number of Hanjin containers that are now going to be trucked to the Puget Sound, rather than go on the river."

Clearwater Paper, which makes pulp, tissue and paperboard at facilities in Lewiston, typically ships a small percentage of its products through the Port of Portland, via Lewiston's river port.

While this dispute continues, Clearwater is shifting some of those shipments to trucks bound for the Port of Tacoma, to make sure overseas deliveries stay on schedule, said Matt Van Vleet, a spokesman for the Spokane, Wash.-based company.

Even though shipping by truck is typically more expensive than by river barge, producers such as Clearwater have concluded delivering their goods on time and according to contract is worth the extra money.

In all, more than 1,000 regional businesses — including many lentil and pea growers, lumber mills and paper makers in Idaho — depend on the Port of Portland's container terminal stricken by the work slowdown to get their goods to or from international markets.

Former Oregon Gov. Ted Kulongoski unsuccessfully sought a settlement in the dispute between the unions, which are fighting over a policy that works out to the equivalent of two full-time jobs.

When he failed to broker a deal by Tuesday, U.S. District Judge Michael Simon ordered the longshoremen to halt their work slowdown for at least 10 days, in a bid to end three weeks of port disruptions.

Upstream in Lewiston, Doeringsfeld said his facility — billed as the West Coast's farthest inland port, made possible by a system of downstream dams and locks — loses revenue from customers who opt not to have products loaded onto barges at the Port of Lewiston's dock.

He's hopeful the judge's order — and an eventual union agreement over who should plug in and unplug the containers — returns shipping through Lewiston to normal patterns.

"We haven't had any barges canceled, but there's been maybe less export volume," Doeringsfeld said. "If it's resolved, I expect operations will go back to normal very quickly."

Idaho Orders Online Timeshare Company to Cease and Desist

IDAHO STATESMAN

EAGLE • The Idaho Department of Finance has ordered All Net Escrow, an online timeshare company that is accused of scamming consumers, to stop operating in Idaho.

The department sent out a consumer alert two weeks ago after finding that All Net Escrow's Eagle address actually belonged to an unrelated business. All Net Escrow is not licensed to do financial business in Idaho. The alert said the company seemed to be related to Castle Wealth Management, a company that also reported a seemingly false address in Oklahoma.

Mexico timeshare owners have been contacted by Castle Wealth saying it has a potential buyer for their timeshare unit. All Net Escrow then sends account information to the owner, "leading owners to believe funds have been received from a purchaser and are being held in escrow," said Gavin Gee, department director. "The owner is then required to pay a 'transfer fee' by wiring funds equal to about 1 percent to 5 percent of the sales price to a bank in Mexico. Owners are told this fee will be refunded at the closing of the transaction."

REXBURG • Two men on four-wheelers are credited with distracting a moose from pursuing a group of Brigham Young University-Idaho students near The Ivy apartment complex on Monday evening.

The incident unfolded when several residents spotted the moose running through the parking lot around 8:30 p.m.

Krystal Simpson, a senior studying communication said she and her roommates were getting out of her car when she first spotted the moose.

"There's a moose!" she said.

Simpson said her roommates believed her once the moose started running toward them.

"We started screaming and running for our lives," Simpson said.

Two men on four-wheelers who had previously been trying to chase the moose out of the parking lot and away from people chased the animal out of the path of the girls. The identities of the men aren't known at this time.

Feds Settle Western Energy Corridor Lawsuit

BY SUSAN MONTOYA BRYAN
Associated Press

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. • Parts of a plan for designating thousands of miles of energy corridors in 11 Western states will be revamped under a settlement reached by federal land managers, more than a dozen environmental groups and one Colorado county.

The settlement was filed Tuesday in federal court in San Francisco and must be approved by a judge.

At issue are more than 6,000 miles of corridors for power lines; oil, natural gas and hydrogen pipelines; and other energy distribution systems that were carved out by the Bush administration as part of the 2005 Energy Policy Act. The corridors were finalized in 2008, and environmentalists sued in 2009 over concerns that more than half of the corridors passed through sensitive areas from Washington south to New Mexico.

Colorado's San Miguel County was also among the plaintiffs.

"The amount of no-go corridors tells you how badly this opportunity was missed the first time and what an important opportunity we have now," said Nada Culver, senior director of agency policy and planning at The Wilderness Society.

The corridors were developed by the Bureau of Land Management and the departments of Energy, Agriculture, Commerce and Defense in an effort to address the West's growing energy demands. Officials have said the goal was to minimize the disturbance to the landscape and keep transmission lines and pipelines bundled to prevent them from being scattered across the region.

The agencies incorporated existing road and utility rights of way — many of which link coal plants and other infrastructure — into the plan where possible.

The environmental groups identified areas in each of the 11 states where wildlife habitat, historic properties and trails could be affected. The settlement puts agencies on notice that projects in those areas could be challenged.

For example, one corridor in Washington crosses the Pacific Crest Trail. In California, Colorado, Idaho, Nevada, Oregon and Wyoming, sage-grouse habitat was a concern. In Arizona, a population of desert tortoise stood to be affected.

The map also had one corridor crossing the Seville National Wildlife Refuge and other conservation areas in New Mexico.

Other corridors were in Montana and Utah.

The Bureau of Land Management and the U.S. Forest Service will be required under the settlement to re-evaluate corridors in sensitive areas.

Amy Atwood, a senior attorney with the Center for Biological Diversity, said aside from protecting certain areas, the settlement also encourages renewable energy development in places that make sense.

"Public lands are going to be incredibly important as we move forward and the effects of climate change continue to intensify," she said. "The fact is there are some renewable energy resources on public lands and where they don't present a conflict with wildlife or other sensitive environmental resources, we want to see them developed."

The settlement gives the federal government a year to set up an interagency review system for determining whether corridors should be revised, removed or added to the region-wide plan.

The agencies must also consider the results of studies being done by the Western Electricity Coordinating Council and the Western Governors' Association on transmission needs and renewable energy potential in the West.

Any changes to the corridor plan must be part of an open process that gives American Indian tribes, states, local governments and other interested parties an opportunity to weigh in, according to the settlement.

Culver said the agreement offers a chance to create "the right system."

"I think the last thing that many of the plaintiffs want to do is work on fighting lines," she said. "In the best of all worlds, we identify the right places for energy corridors to go and we will have fewer fights."

Micron Get Boost in Mobile Memory Chips with Elpida Acquisition

IDAHO STATESMAN

BOISE • Micron Technology Inc.'s acquisition of Elpida Memory Inc. may increase the Boise memory-chip maker's footprint in semiconductor production, but the biggest benefit may be in a stronger ability to compete in the sale of memory for mobile devices such as cell phones and tablets, an analyst says.

"The whole point of the acquisition" is Micron's continued investment in mobile memory, said Kim Hyung Sik at Taurus Investment Securities Co. in Seoul, in a Bloomberg News story.

Micron CEO Mark Durcan told Bloomberg Television that Elpida has a strong mobile dynamic random-access memory that is of interest to mobile customers.

Micron's stock rose 5 percent in trading Tuesday, climbing 34 cents to close at $6.89. The stock rose 24 cents to $6.55 on Monday, the day Micron announced its acquisition of the bankrupt Japanese chipmaker.

Ex-Commerce Secretary Won't Be Charged in Hit-run

BY GREG RISLING
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES • Prosecutors declined Tuesday to file criminal charges against former U.S. Commerce Secretary John Bryson, saying a seizure caused a bizarre series of traffic collisions that led to his resignation.

Bryson's Lexus struck a car on June 9 that was stopped for a train in San Gabriel. He spoke briefly with the three occupants then hit the car again as he departed, police said. Bryson then rammed another vehicle in a neighboring city a few minutes later. He was found unconscious in his vehicle.

The Commerce Department said at the time that Bryson had a "limited recall of the events" and had not suffered any previous seizures.

Bryson, 68, was cited by police for felony hit-and-run, and tests revealed he didn't have any alcohol or drugs in his system. Low amounts of Ambien were found in his bloodstream, but investigators couldn't determine if the sleep aid was a factor in the collisions.

"Both treating doctors agree that suspect was suffering from confusion following a seizure and crashed as a result," court documents say. "Based on doctors' opinions there is insufficient evidence to show knowing failure to provide personal information for hit-and-run."

Phone messages left for Bryson's wife, Louise, were not immediately returned.

Police in San Gabriel, a community of about 40,000 people northeast of Los Angeles, presented evidence Monday to county prosecutors, who decided against filing charges.

Police Sgt. Brian Kott declined to comment about the decision and said his department did not make any recommendations about filing charges.

"Our task was a fact-finding mission to complete a thorough investigation," he said

The OraQuick test detects the presence of HIV antibodies using a mouth swab and returns a result in 20 to 40 minutes.

Guns Blamed for Starting Wildfires in Parched West

BY NICHOLAS K. GERANIOS AND BRIAN SKOLOFF

Associated Press

SPOKANE, Wash. • Campfires, fireworks and even lit cigarettes can spark wildfires. In the tinder-dry West, there is growing concern about the threat from guns.

This year, officials believe target shooting or other firearms use sparked at least 21 wildfires in Utah and nearly a dozen in Idaho. Shooting is also believed to have caused fires in Arizona, Nevada and New Mexico.

Those concerns come as states grapple with ways to cut the risk of new fires ahead of the Fourth of July holiday when many people fire their guns to celebrate the nation's independence.

Officials have been asking the public to scale back shooting as legions of firefighters contend with one of the busiest and most destructive wildfire seasons to ever hit the West.

In Utah, Republican Gov. Gary Herbert took the unusual step of authorizing the top state forest official to impose gun restrictions on public lands after a gunfire-sparked fire. The official is expected to do so within days.

Herbert said his decision doesn't limit gun rights, but is a common sense response to dry conditions.

Guns rights advocates, meanwhile, were skeptical that firearms use can cause so many wildfires.

Clark Aposhian, chairman of the Utah Sports Shooting Council, said that perhaps 5 percent of the wildfires in the state have been caused by target shooters this year. "I don't know how much of a problem it really is," he said.

Utah officials believe steel-jacketed bullets are the most likely culprits, given one shot that hits a rock and throws off sparks can ignite surrounding vegetation and quickly spread. Popular exploding targets are also blamed for causing wildfires.

The bullets were recently banned on state and federal lands in Utah. Officials are telling sportsmen to use lead bullets that don't give off sparks when they hit rocks.

Many in the West are avid Second Amendment proponents, so most state lawmakers are hesitant to enact any restrictions for fear of a backlash.

"We're not trying to pull away anyone's right to bear arms. I want to emphasize that," said Louinda

Accusations Grow of Vote-buying in Mexico Election

BY OLGA R. RODRIGUEZ

Associated Press

MEXICO CITY • Thousands of people rushed to stores Tuesday to redeem pre-paid gift cards they said were given to them previously by the party that won Mexico's presidency, inflaming accusations that the weekend election was marred by widespread vote-buying.

At least a few cardholders were angry, complaining that they didn't get as much as promised or that their cards weren't working. Neighbors at one store in a poor neighborhood on the outskirts of Mexico City said the unusually large crowds prevented them from doing their daily shopping.

Under Mexican election law, giving voters gifts is not a crime unless the gift is conditioned on a certain vote or meant to influence a vote. However, the cost of such gifts must be reported, and cannot exceed campaign spending limits. Violations are usually punished with fines, but generally aren't considered grounds for annulling an election.

Some of the people lined up to use gift cards said they got them for supporting the Institutional Revolutionary Party, or PRI, whose Enrique Pena Nieto won Sunday's presidential election, according to the preliminary official vote count. Some wore red T-shirts and baseball caps with Pena Nieto's name printed in white.

Army Dismisses Officer
Who Killed Soldier in Iraq
Friendly-fire Incident

BY TOM JACKMAN

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON • The officer who shot and killed Pfc. David H. Sharrett II of Oakton in a friendly-fire incident in Iraq in 2008 should be terminated from the Army and stripped of a combat badge he received for a battle he fled, leaving the mortally wounded Sharrett and four other soldiers behind, military officials have ruled.

The move was revealed on the eve of what would have been Sharrett's 32nd birthday, and it was the result of four years of investigating and agitating by his father, David Sharrett Sr., a retired English teacher in Fairfax County, Va.

"This is a vindication of our efforts to discover what happened and what did not happen."

At least four previous reviews by the Army resulted in little more than reprimands for the officer, Capt. Timothy Hanson, now 33, who was promoted from lieutenant a year after the incident, and who had been allowed to transfer from active duty to a full-time Army Reserve job in his home state of Wisconsin.

"This is a vindication of our efforts to discover what happened and what did not happen," the senior Sharrett said Monday. "This whole thing was about Dave, about giving him a voice. He acted honorably on the battlefield. He did everything he was supposed to do. And the ones who knew about this covered it up, acted cowardly."

Hanson claimed in an Army probe last year that he didn't know he had shot Sharrett, even as the investigating general repeatedly showed him overhead video of the two soldiers within feet of each other. Hanson said he needed to leave the battlefield to assist two wounded men and brief his commanders. The wounded men told the general that Hanson did not assist them, and Hanson apparently did not brief commanders or return to his unit, which remained on its mission for two additional days.

US Says Sorry, Pakistan
Opens Afghan Supply Lines

BY BRADLEY KLAPPER AND REBECCA SANTANA

Associated Press

WASHINGTON • Ending a bitter seven-month standoff, Secretary of State Hillary Rodham Clinton apologized to Pakistan Thursday for the killing of 24 Pakistani troops last fall and won in return the reopening of critical NATO supply lines into Afghanistan. The agreement could save the U.S. hundreds of millions of dollars in war costs.

Resolution of the dispute also bandages a relationship with Pakistan that will be crucial in stabilizing the region. The ties have been torn in the past year and a half by everything from a CIA contractor who killed two Pakistanis to the unilateral U.S. raid on Osama bin Laden's Pakistan compound.

But the accord carries risks for both governments — threatening to make Pakistan's already fragile civilian leadership look weak and subservient to the United States while offering fodder to Republicans including presidential candidate Mitt Romney who contend that President Barack Obama says "sorry" too easily.

The first trucks carrying NATO goods should move across the border on Wednesday, U.S. officials said. It could take days to ramp up supplies to pre-attack levels, but around two dozen impatient truck drivers celebrated the news in a parking lot in the southern city of Karachi by singing, dancing and drumming on empty fuel cans.

Andy Griffith, Creator of Mayberry, Dies at 86

Associated Press

RALEIGH, N.C. • Andy Griffith's gift to the show that bore his name wasn't just the homespun wisdom of the plain-spoken sheriff he played. It was the place he created: a small town where all foibles are forgiven and friendships are forever, full of characters who felt like family.

Mayberry, a fictional North Carolina village said to be modeled on Griffith's own hometown of Mount Airy, was so beloved that it practically became a synonym for any community that was too innocent and trusting for real life. After all, Griffith's Mayberry was a place where the sheriff didn't carry a gun, the local drunk locked himself in jail and even the villains who passed through were changed by their stay.

On "The Andy Griffith Show," he created an endearing portrait of a place where few people grew up but many wished they did.

Griffith, who died Tuesday at 86 at his North Carolina home, played a sage widower named Andy Taylor who offered gentle guidance to son Opie, played by little Ron Howard, who grew up to become an Oscar-winning director. Griffith inhabited the sheriff's "aw, shucks" persona so completely that viewers easily believed the character and the man were one.

"What made 'The Andy Griffith Show' work was Andy Griffith himself — the fact that he was of this dirt and had such deep respect for the people and places of his childhood," said Craig Fincannon, who runs a casting agency in Wilmington and met Griffith in 1974.

A character on the show "might be broadly eccentric, but the character had an ethical and moral base that allowed us to laugh with them and not at them," he said. "And Andy Griffith's the reason for that."

Tibetan Monks Tackle Science in the Indian Hills

BY TIM SULLIVAN
Associated Press

SARAH, India • The shouts of more than a dozen Tibetan monks echo through the small classroom. Fingers are pointed. Voices collide. When an important point is made, the men smack their hands together and stomp the floor, their robes billowing around them.

It's the way Tibetan Buddhist scholars have traded ideas for centuries. Among them, the debate-as-shouting match is a discipline and a joy.

But this is something different.

Evolutionary theory is mentioned — loudly. One monk invokes Heisenberg's Uncertainty Principle. Another shouts about the subatomic nature of neutrinos.

In an educational complex perched on the edge of a small river valley, in a place where the Himalayan foothills descend into the Indian plains, a group of about 65 Tibetan monks and nuns are working with American scientists to tie their ancient culture to the modern world.

"I'd like to go back to my monastery ... to pass on my knowledge to other monks so that they might bring the (scientific) process to others," said Tenzin Choegyal, a 29-year-old monk born in exile in India.

If that seems a modest goal, it reflects an immense change in Tibetan culture, where change has traditionally come at a glacial pace.

Isolated for centuries atop the high Himalayan plateau, and refusing entry to nearly all outsiders, Tibet long saw little of value in modernity.

Education was almost completely limited to monastic schools. Magic and mysticism were — and are — important parts of life to many people. New technologies were something to be feared: Eyeglasses were largely forbidden until well into the twentieth centuries. No longer. Pushed by the Dalai Lama, a fierce proponent of modern schooling, a series of programs were created in exile to teach scientific education to monks, the traditional core of Tibetan culture.

At the forefront is an intensive summer program, stretched over five years, that brings professors from Emory University in Atlanta. For six days a week, six hours a day, the professors teach everything from basic math to advanced neuroscience.

"The Buddhist religion has a deep concept of the mind that goes back thousands of years," said Larry Young, an Emory psychiatry professor and prominent neuroscientist.

"Now they're learning something different about the mind: the mind-body interface, how the brain controls the body."

But why are Tibetans now embracing modernity?

Many of the roots can be traced to 1959, when Chinese soldiers invaded Tibet amid an aborted uprising. The Dalai Lama and thousands of his followers fled across the Himalayas and into India, creating an exile community that now numbers an estimated 150,000 people around the world.

Beijing says Tibet is an integral part of China. And while the Dalai Lama insists he only wants autonomy for his homeland, Beijing disparages him as a quasi-terrorist intent on wresting control away from China.

The Tibetan culture, meanwhile, is increasingly imperiled. Ethnic Han Chinese, encouraged by generous government subsidies, now outnumber Tibetans in much of Tibet. The traditional Tibetan herding culture is dying out as people move to cities. Many young Tibetans now speak a tangle of Chinese and Tibetan.

The shifting cultural landscape has torn at Tibet, sparking violent uprisings every decade or so. In the most recent wave, some three dozen people have burned themselves alive over the past year in ethnic Tibetan areas of China, protesting Beijing's policies.

Amid such tumult, the Dalai Lama — a man raised to live in regal isolation as a near-deity — has instead spent much of his life seeking ways that Tibetans can hold onto their traditions even as they find their way in the modern world.

He has encouraged modern schooling for exile children, and a democratic system to choose the Tibetan political leader (he renounced his political powers in 2011). There are job programs for the armies of unemployed young people.

And, for a few dozen monks and nuns, there is science.

The first group from the Emory program — 26 monks and two nuns — have just finished their five years of summer classes. While they earned no degrees, they are expected to help introduce a science curriculum into the monastic academies, and will take with them Tibetan-language science textbooks the program has developed.

The Dalai Lama realizes that "preservation of the culture will occur through change," said Carol Worthman, a professor of anthropology in Emory's Laboratory for Comparative Human Biology. "You have to change to stay in place."

2 Paths Forward for Uninsured, 1 Clouded by Ruling

BY RICARDO ALONSO-ZALDIVAR
Associated Press

Really? The Supreme Court's big health care decision means 30 million or more uninsured Americans are soon going to have coverage? It's far from that simple.

The ruling does point a way forward for millions who can't get affordable coverage because they've been sick, they're self-employed or they are otherwise shut out of the insurance plans that most Americans get in the workplace. But the path is clouded for millions more: the people on the bottom rungs of the economic ladder who are supposed to be reached by a major expansion of Medicaid.

Thanks to last week's ruling on President Barack Obama's overhaul, states can opt out of the expansion without fear that Washington will shut down all their federal Medicaid financing. And if some states do opt out, a lot of their residents are going to have to find another way to get coverage, or continue to go without.

Roughly 15 million uninsured are expected to get private insurance through new exchanges — marketplaces to be set up in each state by 2014 — that will be shored up by the individual coverage requirement that helps create a big pool of consumers. That mandate, vital to the law, was upheld by the court.

Another 15 million people or so — mainly adults with incomes just above the poverty line — are expected to be reached through Medicaid, and the federal government has generous subsidies to entice the states to come on board. That's not to say all of them will; Florida Gov. Rick Scott announced over the weekend that his state will opt out, and others will probably follow.

It's unclear how many of these low-income people would be able to get private health insurance in states that decide not to expand Medicaid. Even modest co-payments may be a barrier for some of them.

"We're talking about individuals making less than $15,000 a year who do not qualify for Medicaid today and who cannot afford to pay for private health insurance," said Sen. Jay Rockefeller, D-W.Va. About 60 percent of the more than 265,000 uninsured people in his state are potentially eligible for the Medicaid expansion, also scheduled for 2014.

The Congressional Budget Office, the nonpartisan budgetary scorekeeper for lawmakers, is reassessing its estimate of the coverage impact of the law in light of the court's Medicaid ruling.

"I'm very worried that the court's decision makes coverage for these very low-income individuals optional for the states," said Rockefeller.

Officials at the Health and Human Services department say they are not particularly concerned. They may have lost the stick, but they still have carrots.

The law calls for Washington to cover the full cost of the first three years of the expansion, eventually dropping to a 90 percent share. That's still far above the average 60 percent federal share of Medicaid costs the federal government currently is paying.

"We believe that states will in fact take advantage of the coverage for these individuals because of many factors," said Mike Hash, director of the HHS office responsible for the health overhaul. "One is the available federal funding."

WHEN 'TAX' IS A 4-LETTER WORD

BY CALVIN WOODWARD
Associated Press

WASHINGTON • At least in politics, "tax" is a four-letter word.

So when the Supreme Court ruled that the penalty for not obtaining health insurance is constitutional because it works like a tax, politicians began squirming over what to call that Thing in President Barack Obama's health care law.

The problem for Obama is that, if the Thing is indeed a tax, he is by definition a raiser of taxes on the middle class, which he promised not to be.

If that sounds like an opportunity for Republican presidential rival Mitt Romney, well, it's not that simple.

Obama's health care law is closely modeled on the universal-coverage plan Romney achieved as Massachusetts governor, which contains a penalty for noncompliance similar to the one in the federal law upheld by the court last week.

So if Obama is a raiser of taxes, so is Romney.

Contortions have ensued. Romney adviser Eric Fehrnstrom strayed from Republican talking points when he told MSNBC that Romney agrees with Justice Antonin Scalia's minority opinion that "very clearly stated that the mandate was not a tax."

That position is at odds with congressional Republicans who are determined to portray the penalty as an Obama tax pure and simple.

"The American people do not want to go down this path," House Speaker John Boehner, R-Ohio, said. "They do not want the government telling them what kind of insurance policy they have to buy, and how much they have to pay for it, and if you don't like it we're going to tax you."

As for the other side, House Democratic leader Nancy Pelosi of California and some others have taken to calling it a "penalty for free riders."

"This is a penalty on free riders," echoed Sen. Chuck Schumer, D-N.Y.

Just as everyone loves motherhood and apple pie, no one loves a free rider. Not Democrats. And not Republicans.

But Democrats didn't make that up.

Some years back, Romney called his own Thing a penalty on "free riders."

The whatever-it-is starts in 2014, will be collected by the Internal Revenue Service and functions like a tax in that its amount is keyed to the income of those who must pay it.

The Obama administration always shied away from calling it a tax for the obvious reason that tax increases are political trouble. But, paradoxically, his health care law only stands today because the high court considered the insurance mandate part of Congress' broad powers of taxation, therefore constitutional.

The court carefully parsed all of this in a migraine-inducing summary of Chief Justice John Roberts' written decision.

"The Affordable Care Act describes the 'shared responsibility payment' as a 'penalty,' not a 'tax,'" it says. "That label is fatal to the application of the Anti-Injunction Act. It does not, however, control whether an exaction is within Congress' power to tax. In answering that constitutional question, this Court follows a functional approach, 'disregarding the designation of the exaction, and viewing its substance and application.'" In other words, the Thing is a tax.

Galapagos' New Star Tortoise a Prolific Dad

BY GONZALO SOLANO
Associated Press

QUITO, Ecuador • Lonesome George's inability to reproduce made him a global symbol of efforts to halt the disappearance of species. And while his kind died with him, that doesn't mean the famed giant tortoise leaves no heir apparent.

The Galapagos Islands have another centenarian who fills a shell pretty well. He's Diego, a prolific, bossy, macho reptile.

Unlike Lonesome George, who died June 24, Diego symbolizes not a dying breed but one resurrected.

Having sired hundreds of offspring, Diego has been central to bringing the Espanola Island type of tortoise back from near extinction, rangers at Galapagos National Park say.

Diego was plucked from Espanola by expeditioners sometime between 1900 and 1930 and wound up in the San Diego Zoo in California, said the head of the park's conservation program, Washington Tapia.

When the U.S. zoo returned him to the Galapagos in 1975, the only other known living members of his species were two males and 12 females.

Chelonoidis hoodensis — some consider it species, some a subspecies — had been all but destroyed, mostly by domestic animals introduced by humans that ate their eggs.

So Diego and the others were placed in a corral at the park's breeding center on Santa Cruz, the main island in the isolated archipelago whose unique flora and fauna helped inspire Charles Darwin's work on evolution.

Diego was so dominant and aggressive, bullying other males with bites and shoves, that he had to be moved eight years later to his own pen, with five of the females. The reptiles are not monogamous.

"Diego is very territorial, including with humans," said his keeper, Fausto Llerena. "He once bit me, and two weeks ago he tried (again) to bite me. When you enter his pen, Diego comes near and his intentions aren't friendly."

A U.S.-based herpetologist for the Galapagos Conservancy, Linda Cayot, says Diego is the most sexually active of the bunch because he's the biggest and the oldest of the males.

"In tortoises, the biggest dominates. It's not that the others aren't active. It's just that he's dominant," she says.

THE MARKET AT A GLANCE

How the Major Stock Indexes Fared on Monday

NEW YORK (AP) • Monday was the first day of third-quarter trading, and it was a lukewarm start. Stocks were pulled in opposite directions by bad news about American manufacturing and continued cheer over Europe's bank-bailout plans.

The Dow fell 8.70 points, or 0.1 percent, to 12,871.39. The S&P 500 rose 3.35 points, or 0.3 percent, to 1,365.51.

The Nasdaq composite index rose 16.18 points, or 0.6 percent, to 2,951.23.

Oil Prices at Highest Since May on Iran Concerns

NEW YORK (AP) • Renewed tensions between Iran and the West pushed oil to its highest level in more than a month.

Iran is again threatening to block a critical Persian Gulf shipping route in response to a European embargo of Iranian oil. Iran has sparred for months with the West over its nuclear program.

Benchmark U.S. crude added $3.91, or 4.7 percent, to end at $87.66 per barrel in New York. That's the highest price since May 30.

Brent crude, which sets the price of oil imported into the United States, rose above $100 for the first time in three weeks. Brent added $3.34, or 3.4 percent, to finish at $100.68 per barrel in London.

Roxie Ottman, center facing, mingles with friends and colleagues Tuesday at Con Paulos Chevrolet in Jerome.

How Does She Do It?

Cosmetics dealer succeeds in what she once considered a 'goofy' job.

BY STEVE KADEL

skadel@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • People in Hazelton, where Roxie Ottman lives, have gotten used to seeing the Mary Kay Cosmetics dealer driving new cars.

She won a pewter-colored Chevrolet Malibu in 2009 and a white Malibu about six months ago. They were awarded by the Mary Kay Cosmetics company for high sales volume in addition to Ottman's frequent mentoring of other women to help them move up the career ladder.

On Tuesday, she received another shiny new vehicle — a black 2012 Chevy Equinox — during a celebration at the Con Paulos dealership in Jerome.

"I love picking up the keys, getting into the car and not paying a cent," Ottman said. How does she do it?

"It's a combination of her work ethic and her love for people," said Tammy Brown, who is Ottman's supervisor and a senior sales director for Mary Kay. "She has a lot of tenacity and doesn't let things be a distraction."

Excellent people skills and selflessness have been Ottman's hallmark throughout her eight-year Mary Kay career.

"Her motivation has always been to help other people find the same financial success that she has realized," Brown said.

To meet her sales goals, Ottman spends lots of time driving between Boise, Pocatello and Salt Lake City. She logged 70,000 miles on her first Mary Kay car in just two years.

"I never say I'm busy, I am just involved," the mother of two home-schooled children said.

Ottman was a middle school teacher before her current career. Her husband and her father both told her she'd make a good Mary Kay saleswoman — remarks that didn't sit well with her at the time.

"I was offended," Ottman said. "I started doing it because I wanted to prove it was really ridiculous. I viewed this as goofy, just selling lipstick."

She has a different opinion now that she's pocketing half of her $1,500 in monthly cosmetics sales, not counting bonuses. Ottman said she recently had $1,500 in sales in one week.

The income hasn't been affected by the recession, she said, because women will pay for beauty products while scrimping in other areas.

"That's just the way we are," Ottman said.

With degrees from Boise State and Idaho State universities, she had a fast rise at Mary Kay. She was a sales director 10 months after joining the company, which now operates in 36 countries.

Although acknowledging the income is nice, Ottman values Mary Kay for another reason. She said the firm has funded many cancer research projects and even a safe home for abused women in Twin Falls.

"We are an industry that helps women," she said.

CARMAKERS REPORT STRONG JUNE SALES, EASING WORRIES

BY DEE-ANN DURBIN

Associated Press

DETROIT • From mini cars to monster pickups, sales of new cars and trucks surged in June and eased concerns that Americans would be turned off by slower hiring and other scary headlines.

Automakers sold nearly 1.3 million cars and trucks in June, up 22 percent from the same month last year. Chrysler posted its best June in five years. Sales soared at Volkswagen, which is on track for its best year in the U.S. since 1973.

The results allayed fears that the car market's momentum had stalled. U.S. sales were on track to reach 14.5 million after the first four months of the year. But the annual pace dropped to 13.8 million in May, as the stock market plunged and hiring slowed. June brought more worrisome news about jobs growth and consumer confidence.

But buyers didn't go away last month. In fact, June's sales pace rose to 14.1 million, according to Autodata Corp. And if sales stay at that level for all of 2012, it will be the industry's best year since 2007.

Falling gas prices, cheaper loans and new models like the Ford Escape and Dodge Dart drew buyers. A revived housing market lifted sales of pickups. Annual sales hit a high of 17 million in 2005, and those cars and trucks are now seven years old.

Storm Raises Worries on Cloud Computing

BY CRAIG TIMBERG

The Washington Post

ASHBURN, Va. • Storm-related outages at an Amazon.com data center in Ashburn, Va., prompted some congressional officials on Monday to question whether the federal government is moving too swiftly to put important data on private-sector cloud computing servers.

The outages affected companies such as Netflix and Pinterest, not the government. But several federal agencies have moved email and other services to cloud servers, which are housed at remote data centers and typically managed by technology companies such as Amazon or Google.

The House Energy and Commerce subcommittee on commerce, manufacturing and trade is studying the risks of such moves and hopes to schedule a hearing on the matter ahead of the August congressional recess.

"Last week's powerful thunderstorms, along with the massive disruptions they caused, exposed some of the vulnerabilities of cloud computing," the panel's chairman, Rep. Mary Bono Mack (R-Calif.), said in a statement. "But I also believe the problems extend way beyond consumer convenience and customer service. There are some serious privacy issues which we need to look at as well."

The federal government has been aggressively embracing more extensive use of cloud servers since 2010 and closing government data centers. Cloud services allow for large volumes of information to be stored remotely, generally on several different servers, so that it can be accessed from anywhere with an Internet connection. The data often is encrypted.

Government email and Web sites were among the first to move away from government servers. More sensitive data is likely to follow, federal officials say, as cloud providers demonstrate they can provide the security and continuous access that agencies require.

Federal officials predict that the most sensitive information — from the White House or CIA, for example — may be moved eventually to cloud servers maintained by the government itself, allowing for maximum control and security.

The General Services Administration switched its email to a Google cloud service last year, cutting its estimated costs from $30 million to $15 million over five years, said agency spokeswoman Casey Coleman. Outages, which used to come about once a month, have disappeared, she said.

The violent storm that blasted through the region Friday night disrupted power to several data centers at Amazon's Web service facility in Ashburn. One of them lost both its primary and backup sources of power, causing outages that stretched into Saturday. No data was lost, Amazon has said.

Easy Fix Eludes Power Outage Problems in US

WASHINGTON • In the aftermath of storms that knocked out power to millions, sweltering residents and elected officials are demanding to know why it's taking so long to restring power lines and why they're not more resilient in the first place.

The answer, it turns out, is complicated: Above-ground lines are vulnerable to lashing winds and falling trees, but relocating them underground incurs huge costs — as much as $15 million per mile of buried line — and that gets passed onto consumers.

With memories of other extended outages fresh in the minds of many of the 1.26 million customers who still lack electricity, some question whether the delivery of power is more precarious than it used to be. The storms that began Friday killed 24 people in seven states and the District of Columbia.

"It's a system that from an infrastructure point of view is beginning to age, has been aging," said Gregory Reed, a professor of electric power engineering at the University of Pittsburgh. "We haven't expanded and modernized the bulk of the transmission and distribution network?"

The powerful winds that swept from the Midwest to the Mid-Atlantic late Friday, toppling trees onto power lines and knocking out transmission towers and electrical substations, have renewed debate about whether to bury lines. District of Columbia Mayor Vincent Gray was among officials calling for the change this week and was seeking to meet with the chief executive of Pepco, the city's dominant utility, to discuss what he called a slow and frustrating response.

"They obviously need to invest more in preparing for getting the power back on," said Maryland state Sen. James Rosapepe, who is among those advocating for moving lines underground. "Every time this happens, they say they're shocked — shocked that it rained or snowed or it was hot — which isn't an acceptable excuse given that we all know about climate change."

Though the newest communities do bury their power lines, many older ones have found that it's too expensive to replace existing networks.

To bury power lines, utilities need to take over city streets so they can cut trenches into the asphalt, lay down plastic conduits and then the power lines. Manholes must be created to connect the lines together.

Air Force Planes Again Ready for Fire Missions

BY DAN ELLIOTT

DENVER • Air Force tanker planes returned to the flight line for firefighting missions on Tuesday after a deadly weekend crash, bringing much-needed reinforcements to a strained fleet battling some of the worst wildfires in decades.

The return of five C-130s means wildfire managers now have 19 heavy tankers to battle the huge fires that have burned hundreds of square miles and displaced thousands of people across the West.

One wildfire in Montana has charred more than 290 square miles and burned 16 homes. The fire was 55 percent contained.

The most active part of the fire was burning thick, largely inaccessible timber on the Custer National Forest. That has led firefighters to steer clear of the dangerous forward edge of the blaze, fire information officer Kathy Bushnell said.

In Wyoming, erratic winds have spread a wildfire across 128 square miles in a sparsely populated area since it started June 27. It was only 10 percent contained.

"We've had this fire push north, push south, push east and push west at various times," fire spokesman Jim Whittington said.

The Air Force had sidelined its seven remaining firefighting C-130s to review safety procedures after a C-130 from the North Carolina National Guard crashed Sunday, killing four crew members and injuring the other two.

The cause is under investigation.

The National Guard identified the dead as Lt. Col. Paul K. Mikeal, 42, and Maj. Joseph M. McCormick, 36, both pilots; Maj. Ryan S. David, 35, a navigator; and Senior Master Sgt. Robert S. Cannon, 50, a flight engineer. All were from North Carolina and were assigned to the 145th Airlift Wing.

Downs, a county commissioner in fire-prone Davis County, Utah. "We're just saying target practice in winter. Target practice on the gun range.

"When your pleasure hobby is infringing or threatening someone else's right to have property or life, shouldn't we be able to somehow have some authority so we can restrict that?" she asked.

For weeks, state officials have said they were powerless to ban gun use because of Second Amendment rights, but legislative leaders say they found an obscure state law that empowers the state forester to act in an emergency.

Among the recent fires, target shooters on June 21 ignited a blaze about 30 miles south of Salt Lake City that grew to about nine square miles and forced the evacuation of about 2,300 before it was contained.

Aposhian said his group will conduct tests to determine if the steel-jacketed bullet theory is true.

If there are limits, "we want to make sure it is not knee-jerk legislation to ban guns or ammunition," he said. "If it turns out the problem is with a few types of rounds, we will not be an apologist for them."

There is no need for such tests, Utah state fire marshal Brent Halladay said. With steel bullets, "you might as well just go up there and strike a match," he said.

Statistics on wildfires caused by firearms are incomplete because the federal government does not list "shooting" as a cause on its fire reports. But some officials write in "target" or "shoot" as a cause, said Jennifer Jones of the National Interagency Fire Center in Boise, Idaho.

On land managed by the U.S. Forest Service only, the center found 17 such wildfires in 2010, 28 last year and 13 so far this year.

This year, the Bureau of Land Management said 11 of 31 wildfires it has battled in Idaho have been sparked by shooting activities.

online and through retailers like Walgreens, CVS and Walmart. It hasn't set a price yet but expects the consumer version to cost less than $60 but more than the one marketed to health professionals, which costs about $17.50. CEO Doug Michels said the price increase will help pay for a toll-free call center to provide counseling and medical referrals to test users.

"Each of the call-center operators is bilingual in English and Spanish, they've gone through 160 hours of training on HIV counseling and testing," Michels said in an interview with the Associated Press. "So they are highly trained professionals and they'll be there to support the consumer."

Michels said the company's marketing efforts will focus on populations at greatest risk of being infected with HIV, including gay and bisexual men, African Americans and Hispanics.

FDA stressed in its approval announcement that the test is not 100 percent accurate in identifying people with the virus. A trial conducted by test maker Orasure showed OraQuick detected HIV in those carrying the virus only 92 percent of the time, though it was 99.9 percent accurate in ruling out HIV in patients not carrying the virus.

That means the test could miss one in 12 HIV-infected people who use it but would incorrectly identify only one patient as having HIV for every 5,000 HIV-negative people tested, the FDA said.

People who test negative should get re-tested after three months, because it can take several weeks for detectable antibodies to HIV to appear, according to Dr. Jonathan Mermin, director of the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention's HIV unit.

The FDA has approved several other HIV test kits designed for home use, but they usually require a blood sample that must be sent to a laboratory for development.

HIV awareness groups hailed the approval as an important step in expanding testing for the virus.

"This test will allow anyone to empower themselves to know their HIV status when, how and with whom they want to," said Tom Donohue, founding director of Who's Positive.

Experts say it's difficult to predict how widely the test will be used.

According to the Orasure's study, 41 percent of people who discovered they were HIV-positive using OraQuick had never been tested. The company estimates that 9,000 new HIV carriers would be identified for every 1 million people who use the test.

Richard Purin talks about making kombucha, a fermentation of sweetened tea, Friday afternoon in Twin Falls. Purin said he comes from a long line of brewers and enjoys showing people how to make the tea. DREW NASH • TIMES-NEWS

Strange Brew

A Twin Falls man touts the virtues of homemade kombucha. But the fermented tea has its detractors, too.

BY ANDREW WEEKS
aweeks@magicvalley.com

Richard Purin drinks it by the glass — and always feels energized afterward.

"It's good for you," he said about the fermented tea called kombucha, which he describes as a type of energy drink. "But it has many other health benefits, too."

You can purchase kombucha in grocery stores — GT's Kombucha made by Millennium Products is the leading commercial brand — but Purin prefers to make his own, about 12 quarts at a time.

How long does it last? About a week, because he shares it with family and friends.

You either like it or you don't, he said, noting that it can have a bit of a vinegar taste.

"It's a lot easier to brew than wine or beer," he said.

The ingredients: spring water, black tea, sugar and a kombucha culture — a bit of already fermented tea and something enthusiasts call the "mother."

When all ingredients are combined in a 2-gallon plastic container, Purin lets it sit at room temperature for at least seven days to ferment. On its surface grows a symbiotic colony of bacteria and yeast, the mother.

Don't be grossed out by it, Purin said. "This is how you know your tea is healthy and alive."

As the mother sits in the liquid it expands and splits into smaller patties called babies, which brewers such as Purin save and often give to friends or use to make their next batch of tea. A number of websites also offer kombucha materials, including the cultures that Purin initially buys.

Strain the liquid — saving the new culture — and bottle it. If you want the drink carbonated,

"It's good for you. ... But it has many other health benefits, too."

Purin said, let it stand bottled at room temperature for another three days.

"But no longer," he said. "If you desire a sweeter, less vinegary tea, bottle it earlier, around day five; if you desire a drier, more vinegary tea, bottle it sometime after day seven, according to your taste. The most important thing is bottle when you like the taste."

It is unknown exactly where the kombucha mushroom originated, though many believe it came from Asia during the Chinese Tsin Dynasty in about 212 BC, according to kombuchacultures.com. The tea was referred to as the tea for immortality.

PERFECT BEER PAIRINGS

As craft breweries grow in Idaho and beer dinners gain popularity, Idaho's experts share their tips on food pairings.

BY TETONA DUNLAP
tdunlap@magicvalley.com

KETCHUM • Beer has come a long way since the days of drinking the same brand as your father and his father's father.

Today's beer types range from blonde ales to porters and the classic pilsner — each with its unique recipe of alcohol, malt, hops and flavor. The national Brewers Association has defined more than 142 beer styles with more labels and breweries appearing each year to possibly add to that number.

Our taste buds weren't always so lucky.

By the late 1970s the beer industry had shrunk to only 44 brewing companies as low-calorie light lagers invaded shelves and taps. According to the Brewers Association, some experts were predicting someday only five brewing landscapes would rule the American country.

But thanks to resurgence in home brewing and the establishment of independent craft breweries in the early 1980s, today's beer drinkers have choic-

With this variation comes experimentation: finding the right liquid for your palate and the perfect pour to pair with dinner.

Here's the advice from three of Idaho's experts:

New Books Offer to Bring the Food Science Lab Home

BY MICHELE KAYAL
For The Associated Press

You may not aspire to the culinary theatrics performed by the wizards of modernist cuisine — transparent ravioli? edible balloons? — but your cooking probably still could benefit from a few lessons from their labs.

And learning those lessons will get a lot easier this fall when food science becomes far more home-friendly. Riding the buzz of science-driven cooking shows and hot modernist chefs like Ferran Adria and Grant Achatz, publishers are releasing two books this fall that demystify the secrets of everyday food science, such as searing meat, scrambling eggs and measuring flour.

"The Science of Good Cooking," from the test kitchens of Cook's Illustrated magazine, joins fifty basic concepts — why salt makes meat juicy, why high heat develops flavor — with 400 recipes that show you how to put those principles into practice.

Meanwhile, "Modernist Cuisine at Home," from the laboratory that produced "Modernist Cuisine," a six-volume encyclopedia of molecular gastronomy released last year, promises a bit more flair, urging home cooks to turn their blowtorches and meat injectors on comfy fare such as cheeseburgers and roast chicken.

"It used to be this obscure geeky thing, to talk about food science," says Jack Bishop, editorial director of America's Test Kitchen, which pub-

Bishop's goal is to harness this interest to create better cooks by putting the "why" behind the "how." Older, more experienced cooks may be using proper technique, but may have no idea why it works or where it comes from, he says. For young people, who Please see FOOD SCIENCE, F2

A Grill-friendly Take on the Classic Cobb Salad

BY ALISON LADMAN
For The Associated Press

Sometimes you just have to mess with tradition.

The classic Cobb salad seemed like a fine place for it. This basic chopped salad generally consists of chicken, hard-boiled egg, avocado, tomato, bacon, blue cheese and greens. It's typically arranged on a plate in neat rows of ingredients to be mixed together by the diner.

We decided to mess it up. In the most literal way. We brought this composed salad right out to the grill, making it a perfect choice for a barbecue.

We throw the bacon in a skillet on the grill alongside the turkey. We even fry the eggs on the grill, too. Because who wants to boil eggs in the heat of summer?

While we had the grill going, we charred up some scallions and tomatillos and blended them into a tangy herb vinaigrette. Once we had some smoky and tangy flavors, we countered them with creaminess of Gorgonzola and avocado. Serve it all on a bed of ice cold romaine. But not in pretty little rows. Pile it all on the plate and have at it.

MATTHEW MEAD • ASSOCIATED PRESS

Grilled Cobb Salad

Start to finish: 1 hour.
Servings: 4.

- 1-pound turkey tenderloin, cut into long strips
- Salt and ground black pepper
- 4 scallions
- 4 tomatillos, husks removed, halved
- 8 strips bacon
- 4 eggs
- 1/4 cup red wine vinegar
- 1 tablespoon chopped fresh thyme
- 1 teaspoon sugar
- 2 tablespoons olive oil
- 2 romaine lettuce hearts,

- halved lengthwise
- 2 avocados, peeled, pitted and sliced
- 1/4 cup crumbled Gorgonzola cheese
- 1 tomato, sliced

Heat the grill to medium-high.

Season the turkey strips with salt and pepper. Using an oil-soaked paper towel held by tongs, oil the grill grates. Add the turkey and cook for 4 to 5 minutes per side, or until they reach 165 F. Set aside to cool slightly.

Meanwhile, set the scallions and tomatillos on the grill. Char the scallions for 3 minutes and the tomatillos for 3 minutes per side. Set aside to cool.

Place an oven-safe skillet on the grill. When the skillet is hot, add the bacon and cook until crisp. Transfer the bacon to paper towels to drain.

Discard most of the fat from the skillet, then return it to the grill. Crack the eggs into the skillet, keeping them from touching, and fry to desired doneness.

In a blender, combine the charred scallions, tomatillos, red wine vinegar, thyme, sugar and olive oil. Blend until smooth. Season with salt and pepper.

On each of 4 serving plates, place half a romaine heart. Pile on turkey tenders and avocado slices.

Drizzle the vinaigrette over everything. Add slices of bacon, an egg, crumbled Gorgonzola, and sliced tomato to each serving.

Beer

Plan to throw a beer pairing dinner? Or just want to know what to enjoy with a T-bone steak or ice cream? Holle has suggestions.

"A lot of it comes down to what is your goal at dinner," Holle said. "Certain beers and flavors do better together."

Sawtooth Brewery hosted a July 1 dinner that helped participants find just the right combination.

If all comes down to three ingredients in the beer: yeast, hop and malt. The body of the beer or its intensity or thickness can't be determined by color alone, Holle said. A dark beer that is light in body will pair well with delicate foods.

Holle suggests starting your meal with a smaller-bodied beer and finishing with a large-bodied one. This works perfectly because malty beers and large stouts tend to pair well with desserts.

"Your palate has a finite time to accept a lot of flavors," Holle said. "Your palate is a little tired after dinner, and full-bodied beer powers through and helps you relax at the end of everything."

For your next steak dinner, try a beer with a lot of hops; the bitter taste goes well with meat. Rye IPA's are also good with spicy foods. Holle has found that when paired with a really spicy taco, the rye IPA brings down the spice and makes it more flavorful.

Like big, dark and robust beers? Drink a mug with some lamb and beef.

But above all, Holle encourages beer drinkers to experiment.

In the kitchen, he has found that certain flavors have a place in the pan as well as the pint.

"Cooking with beer adds another complexity to it," Holle said. Next time you grill some bratwursts, pierce the casings and soak them in an IPA or hefeweizen. After you grill them, brush on some more beer. "It brings out vastly different characteristics of the meat."

One of Holle's favorites is a stout float with a coffee or vanilla ice cream, reminiscent of a root beer float.

"The smoothness of the lactose brings out the smooth characteristics of the beer," Holle said.

From Sean Flynn

Sean Flynn, owner and brewmaster at Sun Valley Brewery in Hailey, has also done his share of mixing and matching beers with foods.

"Spicy Asian food goes well with hoppy beer like pale ales and IPA's," Flynn said. "They seem to complement each other. Sometimes people are put off by the hoppiness and when paired with that it seems to blend well together."

Robust stouts and porters complement bratwursts and heavy, salty marbled meats. Lagers, the lightest beers, pair with a lot of foods because they are not overpowering, he said.

Flynn said the appeal of tying beer with food has increased, and often chefs partner with or approach breweries to create a unique dining experience.

"It's becoming a more popular thing to do," Flynn said. "The average person is more open and willing to try new things and not just have the same domestic beer your dad drank."

Sun Valley Brewing offers a lunch and dinner menu and hopes to feature dinners specifically for beer-and-food pairings, Flynn said.

From Rick Boyd

"Beer dinners have become a big deal around the country," said Rick Boyd, owner of Brewforia Beer Market in Meridian.

Brewforia opened in May 2010 and in addition to bringing craft beer to the masses has held several beer dinners that feature both local and out-of-state brewers.

In February, for example, Boyd offered a five-course aphrodisiac dinner featuring shaved fennel and arugula salad, asparagus soup and asiago custard, oysters cooked three ways, rack of lamb and dark chocolate banana bread pudding — all paired with their respective beers.

"It's really picking up pace from the wine world," Boyd said.

With summer heating up, picnics may replace dinners at table. If so, Boyd suggests adding extra pale ales or Czech pilsners to your basket. If spicy Asian food is on the menu, it pairs well with pilsners and pale ales as well.

Hearty meals of stews and roasts go well with porters and stouts, Boyd said.

Desserts, especially chocolates, lend themselves well to stouts such as Old Rasputin Imperial because they amplify the flavor.

"I would recommend readers to pick up a six pack of beer and just have a tasting party," Boyd said. "Think, 'What would go well with this dinner?'"

Food Science

may not have grown up watching someone cook, the concrete explanations will provide a foundation.

"Somebody who's been cooking a lifetime, like your grandmother, might have internalized these concepts and might have known intuitively that a roast will continue to cook when it comes out of the oven," he says. "It helps you draw those connections that you might not intuitively see unless you've been cooking for 30 years."

The book offers practical takeaways, like sidebars with small tips (a skillet works better than a wok for stir-fries) and techniques (sprinkle sugar on wet fish to encourage browning). Charts for cooking a roast that's truly rare or for how much your cup of flour should weigh also provide easy references.

But if the levelheaded Yankees at the Boston-based test kitchen seek to educate, "Modernist Cuisine at Home" author Nathan Myhrvold wants to titillate.

He would have you turn your blowtorch on a steak or cook scrambled eggs sous vide, then deliver them as fanciful dollops through a whipping canister.

"We're living in a very exciting time for cooking because all these things are possible," Myhrvold says.

And not just in a professional kitchen, which admittedly is where so-called modernist cuisine earned its credibility (as well as a fair amount of derision). Much of the equipment called for — pressure cookers, meat tenderizers, whipping canisters — is available in shopping malls or on the Internet. And many of the techniques are simple, Myhrvold says. And they produce better food.

Who knew you could caramelize vegetables in a pressure cooker with just a touch of baking soda? (Apparently, browning occurs at a lower temperature in an alkaline environment.) And grilled cheese is creamier, smoother and less greasy, he says, with a bit of citric acid, which acts as an emulsifier.

"Just because you think of it as a simple dish or a home dish or a low-brow dish doesn't mean you can't refine it if you know what you're doing," Myhrvold says.

And if all of it strikes you as just a bit too much fuss for meatloaf and chicken wings?

"If someone wants to have old-style recipes with old-style techniques, don't buy my book," he says. "This is about telling people how to do new stuff that they'll find really interesting, really novel. And not that difficult."

The kombucha culture floating atop the tea is a light brown.

Kombucha

health benefits — though it has as much caffeine as coffee and up to 2 percent alcohol, Purin said — including helping to detox the body and refresh the mind.

Not everyone agrees, however, and there's little scientific evidence of health benefits.

In some cases, kombucha tea has been found to actually cause liver damage and infections, said Melissa Sleight, a registered dietician at St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center.

"It's basically a mushroom that ferments in sweet black tea," she said. It's been found that all sorts of bacteria and colonies grow in it that shouldn't be in our food." Because it often is home-brewed, sanitation becomes a problem. "It's not as controlled as it should be."

Even commercial brands are risky, Sleight said, because they're touted as a dietary supplement and not as a food.

Andrew Weil, a nationally recognized doctor and leader in alternative health, doesn't recommend the tea.

"I know of no scientific studies backing up the health claims made for it," he said in a New York Times article, cautioning anyone with a compromised immune system against drinking it because of the risk of aspergillus, a toxin-producing fungus that can grow in home brews.

In 1995, the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention issued a report linking kombucha tea to the death of an Iowa woman and the illness of another woman. Both had experienced excessive acid buildup because of their daily dose of kombucha, the CDC reported.

Yet, as the Times article explained, kombucha has in recent years come back into vogue, fueled by low-carbohydrate diets that caused people to look for alternatives to soda and juice.

Purin said he's never felt any ill effects from the tea and has, in fact, remained quite healthy since drinking it.

"I have saved thousands on medical bills and saved friends hundreds of dollars," he said. "I have also enjoyed it as a hobby and found that a glass of kombucha can really lift the spirits."

The two things he said to avoid in making kombucha: metal containers and mold.

"If mold is ever found growing on your fermenting kombucha you must toss your entire batch," he said. "Mold is poisonous. I have never found mold on a batch of kombucha to this day, even after several years of brewing."

If mold does appear? "It will grow on top of the fermentation and be clearly visible to the human eye," Purin said. "It will look like classic mold and be either green, pink, brown or black."

The culture you want growing on top of the tea is a light brown.

Purin, who works at Cucina Gemelli in Twin Falls, said he'd be happy to help anyone interested in making the tea get started by offering them free cultures.

The restaurant doesn't sell the drink, but Purin often lets willing customers taste it in hopes of making new fans of the tea.

"I'd really like to see more people start brewing this," he said.

Kombucha

To start, buy a kombucha mushroom — also known as mother — and tea starter online. The mother is sold in various package sizes, but often in 6-inch diameter, starting at around $26 at getkombucha.com, for example. Purin said he finds vendors through eBay. Tea starter, also known as kombucha vinegar, is already-made kombucha tea. Beginner kits usually include both.

You'll need one food-grade plastic container or bucket capable of holding more than a gallon; Purin prefers 2-gallon containers. You'll also need a cheesecloth, coffee filter or other filter to keep bugs out but allow your tea to breathe.

1 gallon spring water
10 regular-size bags of black tea
1 1/2 cups sugar
1/4-inch chunk of kombucha culture
1/4 to 1/2 cup kombucha vinegar

Boil water to sterilize and help remove chlorine, if using tap water. Place hot water in your plastic bucket. Add sugar and stir with a wooden spoon to dissolve. Add tea bags and steep, about 5 minutes, then remove and discard the bags. Allow the tea to cool completely at room temperature — overnight if possible.

When your sweet black tea has completely cooled, add your kombucha culture along with at least 1/4 cup of kombucha vinegar itself.

Cover with filter and let stand at room temperature, between 59 and 75 degrees, for five to seven days.

You will notice early on that microorganisms will grow a mat of cellulose across the surface of the tea. This is how you know your tea is healthy and alive. Use a mesh strainer to strain your fermented kombucha tea into a sanitary container. Save the new "mother" (the thick mat that grew across the surface of the tea) in a separate container along with enough kombucha to cover it. Then, simply pour the kombucha into bottles using a funnel. Refrigerate and serve.

Picnic Fare: Green Bean, Potato Salad

THE WASHINGTON POST

The combination of green beans and potatoes is a Southern classic, but it's normally served warm, with ham hock or bacon. This lightened-up picnic salad is bright with flavor. The green beans turn slightly sweet, and the lemon juice adds a little zip.

The salad can be made a day in advance, covered and refrigerated. It is best served cold. From chef and cookbook author Virginia Willis.

Roasted Green Bean and Potato Salad

4 to 6 servings.

Canola oil, for the baking sheet, plus 2 tablespoons for the vegetables
1 pound (about 5 medium) Yukon Gold potatoes, peeled and sliced 1/4-inch thick on the diagonal
10 ounces haricots verts or tender young green beans, ends trimmed
1 medium onion, preferably Vidalia, thinly sliced
Coarse salt
Freshly ground black pepper
2 tablespoons honey

Freshly squeezed juice of 1 lemon (about 1/4 cup)
1/4 cup coarsely chopped flat-leaf parsley

Brush a rimmed baking sheet generously with the oil and transfer it to the oven; preheat to 400 degrees.

Combine the potatoes, green beans and onion in a large bowl. Add the 2 tablespoons of oil and season with salt and pepper to taste. Toss to coat the vegetables with the oil, then transfer them to the heated baking sheet and spread evenly. Roast, stirring occasionally, for 35 to 45 minutes or until the vegetables are charred and browned.

While the roasted vegetables are still warm, drizzle them with the honey and lemon juice, sprinkle with the parsley and toss to coat. Taste, and add salt and/or pepper as needed.

Serve at room temperature, or, preferably, refrigerate until chilled. If you are serving the salad cold, taste for seasoning just before serving, because chilling dulls the flavor.

Perfect Picnic Dessert: Individual Cobblers

THE WASHINGTON POST

This is Virginia Willis' version of a dessert made by her mother and grandmother. It's called a batter cobbler: You don't make a separate top crust, because the batter rises up and makes one for you. It's particularly picnic-friendly because it is baked and toted in a standard muffin tin.

To serve, use a spoon to remove the cobblers from the tin; top them with whipped cream or low-fat Greek-style yogurt.

Willis prefers to make these a day in advance. They can also be baked, cooled and served on the same day.

Individual Fruit Cobblers

Makes 12 cobblers.

5 1/3 tablespoons (1/3 cup) unsalted butter
3/4 cup flour
3/4 cup low-fat milk
1/2 cup sugar
2 teaspoons baking powder
1/2 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
1 cup fresh blueberries (may substitute blackberries, raspberries or chopped peaches)

Preheat the oven to 400 degrees. Melt the butter in a large glass measuring cup in a microwave oven set on MEDIUM. Use a pastry brush to generously brush the wells of a standard 12-cup muffin tin with some of the butter. Transfer the muffin tin to the oven to preheat while you make the batter, about 5 minutes.

Combine the flour, milk, sugar, baking powder, salt and vanilla extract in the measuring cup with the remaining butter (you should have at least 1/4 cup of it).

Remove the muffin pan from the oven. (If the butter has browned a bit, consider that a blessing.) Divide the batter evenly among the wells, filling each one no more than halfway full. Spoon about 1 tablespoon of berries into each well.

Bake for 20 to 25 minutes, until the batter has risen up and around the fruit and is a light golden brown. Transfer the muffin tin to a cooling rack.

To serve, run a spoon around the edge of each well. Scoop out the individual cobblers and transfer to individual plates. (Invert them if you want to display the fruit that has sunk to the bottom.) Serve warm or at room temperature, plain or garnished with cream or low-fat yogurt.

This Tuna Linguine Uses the Whole Fennel

BY BONNIE S. BENWICK
The Washington Post

The humble can of tuna continues to inspire recipes; this one, adapted from Levana Kirschenbaum's comprehensive new book, "The Whole Foods Kosher Kitchen," is a keeper because it uses both the fennel bulb and its fronds. White wine, lemon zest and juice balance the flavors of this pasta dish.

The recipe can be easily doubled; for 8 servings, use 14 ounces of tuna. It tastes good as cold leftovers, too.

Serve with tomato halves whose cut sides have been sprinkled with bread crumbs, chopped garlic, olive oil and sea salt, then roasted in a 400-degree oven for 20 minutes.

Linguine With Fennel Tuna Sauce

4 servings.

Kosher salt
8 ounces dried linguine or a long tubular pasta, such as bucatini
1 lemon
2 small fennel bulbs with fronds attached (about 14 ounces total weight)
6 large cloves garlic
1 tablespoon olive oil
1/2 cup dry white wine
7 to 11 ounces canned solid white or light tuna, preferably packed in oil
Freshly cracked black pepper
Few leaves flat-leaf parsley, for garnish (optional)

Bring a pot of water to a boil over high heat. Add a generous pinch of salt, then add the pasta and cook according to the package directions. Drain, reserving 1/2 cup of the pasta cooking liquid. Meanwhile, finely grate the peel of the fennel to yield about 1 tablespoon, then cut the lemon in half and squeeze the juice to yield about 1/4 cup.

Trim the stems from the fennel, reserving some of the fronds. Trim off and discard the outer layer from each bulb. Coarsely chop a large handful of the fronds and transfer to a food processor. Coarsely chop the garlic and add to the food processor. Pulse until well incorporated and finely chopped. Cut out and discard the core of each bulb. Cut the remaining bulbs into very thin slices (using a sharp knife, or empty the food processor, then attach a cutting disk to achieve thin fennel slices).

Heat the oil in a large skillet over medium heat. Add the frond-garlic mixture and stir to coat evenly; cook for 2 or 3 minutes, then add the sliced fennel and stir to coat; cook for 2 to 3 minutes. Reduce the heat to medium.

Carefully stir in the wine, lemon zest and juice; cook for 5 minutes, then add the tuna (to taste, making sure it is flaked and evenly dispersed) and its oil, the pasta and the reserved cooking liquid. Season with the pepper to taste. Toss to incorporate thoroughly.

Divide among individual wide, shallow bowls. If desired, finely chop the parsley and sprinkle over each portion. Serve warm or at room temperature. Per serving: 380 calories, 22 g protein, 50 g carbohydrates, 8 g fat, 2 g saturated fat, 15 mg cholesterol, 300 mg sodium, 4 g dietary fiber, 2 g sugar.

Fresh Sage: What It Is and How to Use It

BY J.M. HIRSCH
Associated Press

It's hard to not love an ingredient that loves fat.

And that's exactly what sage does — it partners perfectly with foods rich in oils and fats. That's why it is so common in hearty holiday foods.

Actually, that's part of sage's problem, and why it has a relatively low profile in American cooking compared with other savory herbs, such as basil and oregano. While we think of all manner of uses for other herbs in all seasons, we tend to pigeon-hole sage as a Thanksgiving herb suited mostly for stuffing and turkey.

But the richly peppery-rosemary flavor of fresh sage can more than earn its keep all year. You just need to know how to use it.

Let's start with what it is. Sage is a perennial related to mint. There are many varieties, including pineapple-flavored sage from Mexico (best suited for desserts). Sage generally is sold in three forms — fresh, dry ground and rubbed.

Fresh is pretty self-explanatory. When shopping for it, look for leaves that are tender-firm with a downy coating and no brown spots.

Rubbed is dried sage leaves that have been quite literally rubbed off the stems. It tends to be pillowy soft and retains flavor well.

Dry ground sage is the least appealing of the three. It has a more muted flavor and doesn't hold up well in cooking. Skip it.

So what to do with sage outside of Thanksgiving? Just look overseas. Because sage pairs so well with dairy, the English have long made a sage-flecked cheese known as sage Derby. So take their cue and add a few fresh sage leaves to your next grilled cheddar sandwich.

The English also like to use sage with sauteed onions, usually destined for a stuffing. So why not toss fresh sage into caramelized onions, then use them to top a pizza with gouda?

In Germany, sage lands in sausages. And sometimes beer. Not sure about the last one, but I'm inclined to borrow the sage and caramelized onions from England and spoon them into a bun with a grilled sausage. In Italy, sage rules saltimbocco and osso bucco. But it's also a natural with butter-drenched pasta.

Fried Sage and Parmesan Penne

A great example of how the simplest of dishes can be so overwhelmingly good. For a heartier version of this dish, add cooked chicken or apple-chicken sausage. Start to finish: 20 minutes. Servings: 4.

- 1 pound penne pasta
- 1 egg
- 2 tablespoons all-purpose flour
- Salt and ground black pepper
- 12 large fresh sage leaves
- 4 tablespoons butter
- 1/3 cup pine nuts
- 1 cup grated Parmesan cheese

Bring a large saucepan of salted water to a boil. Add the pasta and cook according to package directions. Reserve 1/4 cup of the cooking water, then drain the pasta, return it to the pot, cover and set aside.

Meanwhile, in a small bowl, lightly beat the egg. Place the flour in a second bowl, then mix a bit of salt and pepper into it. One at a time, dunk each sage leaf first in the egg, then in then in the flour. Shake off any excess flour, then set aside.

In a small skillet over medium-high, melt the butter. When it just starts to bubble, add the sage leaves and fry for 1 to 2 minutes per side, or until lightly browned. Transfer to a plate and set aside. Add the pine nuts to the skillet and toast in the butter that remains in the pan for 1 minute.

Drizzle the butter and pine nuts over the cooked pasta. Sprinkle in the Parmesan and use tongs to toss until melted. While tossing, drizzle in just enough of the reserved pasta cooking water to create a thick sauce. Season with salt and pepper.

Divide between serving plates, then top each portion with fried sage leaves. Per serving: 730 calories; 250 calories from fat (34 percent of total calories); 28 g fat (12 g saturated; 0 g trans fats); 95 mg cholesterol; 90 g carbohydrate; 31 g protein; 4 g fiber; 650 mg sodium.

Mushrooms Pair Well with Green Beans

BY STEPHANIE WITT
SEDGWICK

Special to The Washington Post

When fresh green beans are in season, they're in such abundance that they overflow farm baskets and supermarket crates. Happily, there's plenty to do with them. You can stir-fry, boil, steam or even roast them.

Even better, they mix and match nicely with lots of other flavors. Herbs, onions, lemon, garlic, mushroom, nuts and bits of ham, among other ingredients, go well with beans.

In this recipe, I pre-boil the green beans so they're done just right. Thinly sliced mushrooms are sauteed and flavored with garlic, and the beans are mixed in along with fresh herbs.

The beans need to cool in water for 10 minutes and then air-dry before being added to the mushrooms.

Herbed Green Beans and Mushrooms

Makes about 5 1/2 cups (6 or 7 servings).

- Salt
- 1 pound green beans, trimmed
- 1 1/2 tablespoons olive oil, plus more for garnish
- 1 pound button, white, brown or cremini mushrooms, stem ends trimmed, thinly sliced
- Freshly ground black pepper
- 2 tablespoons chopped garlic (from about 5 cloves)
- 2 tablespoons chopped chives
- 2 tablespoons finely chopped parsley

Fill a 6-quart pot with water, add a pinch of salt and bring the water to a boil over medium-high heat.

Have ready a large bowl of ice water. Add the green beans to the boiling water and cook for 6 to 7 minutes, until just tender. Immediately drain the beans and transfer them to the ice water. Let the beans cool for 10 minutes, then drain them, cut them into 1 1/2-inch pieces and allow them to air-dry.

Heat 1 tablespoon of the oil in a large nonstick saute pan or skillet over medium-high heat. Add the mushrooms, and season with salt and pepper to taste. Cook for 6 to 8 minutes, stirring occasionally, until the mushrooms are soft and just starting to brown and their liquid has evaporated. Push the mushrooms to the sides and add the remaining 1/2 tablespoon of oil to the middle of the pan. Add the garlic and stir it in the oil for a minute or two, until it becomes fragrant, then toss to combine with the mushrooms. Add the green beans; toss to combine and rewarm the beans.

Remove the pan from the heat and stir in 1 1/2 tablespoons of the chives and 1 1/2 tablespoons of the parsley. Toss to evenly coat the vegetables with the herbs.

Transfer to a serving dish and garnish with the remaining 1/2 tablespoon each of chives and parsley. If desired, drizzle a tablespoon of oil over the vegetables to add shine and flavor. Serve warm or at room temperature.

GO FOR THOSE GREENS

FETTERHOFF

The Washington Post

If you don't know escarole from collard greens, expand your salad repertoire with a guide to greens in Fitness magazine's June edition.

Some of the benefits? Turnip greens are loaded with Vitamin K, according to Maggie Moon, a New York nutritionist, and one cup cooked fulfills 20 percent of your daily B6 requirement. Bok choy is great in stir-fries and is also a source of calcium and polyphenols, antioxidants that fight cancer.

While raw kale can be bitter, if you tear the leaves into small chunks and bake with olive oil and salt, you'll have some tasty and healthful chips. A cup of kale will give you all the vitamin A, C and K you need for the day. Swiss chard, a close relative of the beet, also packs a healthy dose of vitamins A and C. One cup is all you need for the day. Watercress is full of vision-protecting carotenoids, and the leaves can be used in soups, salads or sandwiches.

To get the most out of your greens, according to the magazine, remove the stems, wash well, dry and refrigerate in a crisper drawer away from fruit. (Pears and apples in particular emit a gas that can spoil vegetables.) To reinvigorate wilted greens, soak them in ice water for 15 minutes.

Two Fresh Approaches with the Classic Milkshake

BY ALISON LADMAN
For The Associated Press

Chocolate and cherry are a classic combination that stand out in this milkshake. But what really sets this recipe apart is the buttermilk, which adds a delicate tang that really enhances the cherry flavor. Add the cookies at the end and just stir it together if you like bigger chunks, or puree until smooth if you want to drink it through a straw.

Chocolate Cherry Buttermilk Shake

Start to finish: 10 minutes. Servings: 2.

- 1 cup chocolate ice cream
- 1 cup frozen, pitted dark cherries
- 1 cup buttermilk
- 6 coarsely chopped chocolate sandwich cookies

In a blender, combine the chocolate ice cream, frozen cherries and buttermilk. Blend until smooth. Add the chocolate sandwich cookies and stir to combine. Serve immediately.

Raspberry Key Lime Cheesecake Milkshake

This is what would happen if fresh raspberries, Key lime pie and cheesecake got together. It is one seriously delicious gathering. Start to finish: 10 minutes. Servings: 2.

- 3 ounces cream cheese
- 1 ounce Key lime juice
- 1/2 cup fresh raspberries
- 1 cup vanilla ice cream
- 1/2 cup light cream

In a blender, combine all ingredients, then blend until smooth. Serve immediately.

Chickpea, Raisin Relish Dresses Grilled Veggies

BY STEPHANIE WITT
SEDGWICK

Special to The Washington Post

Grilled zucchini and eggplant slices are topped with a chickpea and raisin relish. For vegetarians, pearly couscous would make a nice accompaniment. For carnivores, a spice-rubbed chicken breast or grilled lamb steak would do the trick.

If you prefer, you can make this dish with all zucchini or all eggplant. The key is to choose relatively large zucchini and thin-skinned eggplants, so they're easy to slice.

Grilled Zucchini and Eggplant with Chickpea and Raisin Relish

4 main-course servings or 8 side-dish servings.

3 1/2 tablespoons olive oil, plus more for the grill rack
1 1/4 pounds zucchini, cut lengthwise into 1/4-inch slices
1 1/4 pounds thin-skinned eggplants, cut lengthwise into 1/4-inch slices
Salt
Freshly ground black pepper
1 cup finely diced onion (from 1 medium onion)
2 teaspoons ground cumin, or more to taste
One 15.5-ounce can no-salt-added chickpeas (1 3/4 cups), rinsed and drained
1 cup raisins
1 teaspoon molasses, or more to taste
1 cup cranberry juice drink, such as Ocean

KATHERINE FREY • WASHINGTON POST

Spray Cranberry Juice Cocktail
1 tablespoon chopped parsley leaves (from 1 stem)

Prepare the grill for direct heat. If using a gas grill, preheat to medium-high (450 degrees). If using a charcoal grill, light the charcoal or wood briquettes; when the briquettes are ready, distribute them evenly under the cooking area. For a medium-hot fire, you should be able to hold your hand about 6 inches above the coals for 4 or 5 seconds. Lightly coat a grill rack with oil and place it on the grill. While the grill is heating, lay out the zucchini and eggplant slices on a large foil-lined rimmed baking sheet, overlapping them if necessary. Season with salt and pepper to taste, and drizzle with 3 tablespoons of the oil. Rub the oil, salt and pepper into the slices on both sides;

the oil will not completely coat the slices.

Transfer the eggplant slices to the grill; cover and cook until the eggplant has picked up distinct grilled marks but is not burned, about 3 minutes. You'll need to watch carefully. Turn the slices over; cover and cook to achieve grill marks on the second side. Transfer the slices to a plate and cover with aluminum foil to retain the heat. Repeat with the zucchini slices. Place the grilled zucchini on a second plate and cover immediately with aluminum foil. Heat the remaining 1/2 tablespoon of oil in a 12-inch saute pan or skillet over medium-high heat. Add the diced onion and salt to taste; cook until soft, 5 to 6 minutes. Add the cumin and pepper to taste, and mix to coat the onion; cook for 1 minute, stirring. Add the chickpeas, raisins, molasses and cranberry juice; stir to combine thoroughly. Bring to a boil, then cover and reduce the heat so that the mixture is just bubbling around the edges. Cook for 10 minutes; taste, and adjust the seasoning as needed. For a main course, arrange the zucchini and eggplant on individual plates, alternating zucchini and eggplant slices. Top each portion with the chickpea and raisin relish, and garnish with the parsley. For a side dish, either arrange smaller portions in the same manner on individual plates, or arrange on a large serving platter. Serve warm.

Quick Dinner: Scallops with Apricot Sauce

BY BONNIE S. BENWICK
The Washington Post

Here's a good reason to open the lovely preserves that you or a generous pal put up last year. The sauce tastes like it takes some effort, yet it comes together in a few minutes. In fact, the prep for the whole dish could hardly be easier.

If you don't care for scallops, substitute 8 to 10 ounces of halibut fillet, cut into scallop-size pieces.

Serve with a saute of snow peas and matchstick carrots; drizzle a little of the sauce on them as well. Adapted from "Savory Sweet Life: 100 Simply Delicious Recipes for Every Family Occasion," by Alice Currah (William Morrow, 2012).

Seared Scallops with Herbed Apricot Sauce

2 servings.

6 large dry-packed sea scallops
Kosher salt
Freshly ground black pepper
1 medium clove garlic
Leaves from 1 large stem flat-leaf parsley
1 tablespoon extra-virgin olive oil
2 tablespoons unsalted butter
1/4 cup dry white wine
3 tablespoons apricot preserves

Rinse the scallops and pat them dry on paper towels. Season on both sides with salt and pepper to taste. Heat the toaster oven on its lowest setting. Mince the garlic. Finely chop the parsley. Combine the oil and 1 tablespoon of the butter in a small nonstick skillet over medium-high heat. Once the butter starts to foam, add half the scallops and sear for about 2 minutes, then use a thin, flexible spatula to turn them over. They should be nicely browned on the edges. Cook until barely firm, opaque and lightly browned on the second side, 1 to 2 minutes. Transfer to a heatproof plate and place in the toaster oven. Add the remaining scallops to the skillet and cook in the same fashion, adjusting the heat as needed so the butter doesn't burn. Transfer to the toaster oven. Return the skillet to the stove; reduce the heat to medium. Add the garlic and stir for 15 seconds, then carefully add the wine (it will steam), then the apricot preserves. Cook, stirring to break down any lumps of fruit. Remove from the heat. Stir in the remaining butter and half the parsley, to form a silky sauce. Taste, and add salt and pepper as needed.

Divide the scallops between individual plates; drizzle equal amounts of the sauce over each portion, then sprinkle with the remaining parsley. Serve right away.

Spring Salad Showcases Farm Vegetables, Eggs

Here's a refreshing summer salad that makes full use of farmers market vegetables and greens. Save time by buying a roasted rotisserie chicken. You'll have leftover dressing, which you can use to dress salad greens.

The dressing can be stored in an airtight container and refrigerated up to 2 days in advance. The eggs can be poached up to 2 days in advance, cooled quickly and refrigerated.

Adapted from a recipe by Bryan Moscatello, former executive chef of Stir Food Group.

Spring Chicken Salad with Farm Vegetables and Eggs

4 servings.

For the dressing:

1/3 cup sugar
1/2 cup honey
1 teaspoon freshly ground black pepper, plus
1 tablespoon cracked black peppercorns
2 cloves garlic, minced
1/2 cup shallots, chopped
Freshly squeezed juice from 2 lemons, preferably Meyer lemons (1/2 cup)

For the salad:

2 cups mixed, thinly shaved farmers market vegetables, such as carrots, baby zucchini, radishes, pearl onions, cucumbers and celery
4 cups mesclun or salad greens, cleaned and torn into smaller pieces if necessary
3 cups shredded chicken, from a roasted chicken, plus optional chicken cracklings (see notes)
4 large eggs, poached (see notes)

For the dressing: Combine the sugar, honey, pepper, garlic, shallots and lemon juice in a small saucepan over medium-high heat. Bring just to a boil, then reduce the heat to low and cook, with the liquid barely bubbling around the edges, until thickened. Strain into a storage container through a fine-mesh strainer, discarding the solids. Add the cracked peppercorns; taste, and adjust the seasoning and tartness if needed. Allow to cool, then cover and refrigerate until ready to serve. For the salad: Combine the shaved vegetables, mesclun or salad greens and chicken in a large bowl with enough dressing to lightly coat (about 1/2 cup); toss to combine. Divide among individual plates. Top each with an egg and with some cracklings, if using. Drizzle with some of the remaining dressing. Serve immediately. Notes: To make cracklings, preheat the oven to 400 degrees and line a baking sheet with aluminum foil. Remove pieces of skin from freshly roasted chicken and arrange them roasted side down on the baking sheet. Bake for 10 to 15 minutes or until quite crisp. The pieces will shrink considerably. Serve while hot. To poach eggs, fill a medium saucepan with water; add a few drops of white vinegar and bring to a boil over medium-high heat. Carefully crack each egg into a separate small cup. Once the water is boiling, stir it to create a gentle whirlpool; this will help shape the eggs nicely. Reduce the heat to medium. One at a time, carefully slide the eggs into the water in the middle of the whirlpool; adjust the heat as needed so the water is barely bubbling at the edges. Cook for 3 minutes, then use a slotted spoon to transfer the eggs to a bowl of warm (not hot) water. If you're not using them right away, transfer them to a bowl of cold water and allow them to cool, then cover and refrigerate for up to 2 days. Reheat by transferring the eggs to a pan of very hot water for a little over 1 minute.

OBITUARIES

James A. May

May 10, 1930-June 30, 2012

JEROME • At day-break on Saturday, June 30, 2012, the life of James A. May changed from mortal to immortal as he went to be with his Heavenly Father and his earthly parents and siblings who had preceded him. His death was the result of the ravages of the disease of Alzheimer's.

Jim, 82, of Jerome, the son of John and Jessie Tillman May, was born May 10, 1930, in Manhattan, Kan., the ninth of 13 children, Ruby Merrit Smith, Daniel May, Juanita Jones, Esther Rynearson, Marjorie Reising, Naomi Tupper, Opal Yount, Wanda Fouts, Geraldine Valline, Harold May, Duane May and Shirley Anderson. He was preceded in death by his parents and 10 siblings.

Jim joined his family on the farm during the Depression and, as the result of his father's ill health, at a young age he learned to harness the team of mules and work the fields. He had a deep love for the mules and horses all his life and, because of this, when he retired in 1996 and returned to his home on 10 acres in Jerome county, he plowed his garden and mowed and raked his hay with his team of mules, then hitched the team to a hay wagon and pitched the hay onto the wagon and stacked it by hand with the help of his son, Gary. In 1944, his family moved to Twin Falls, where he attended school. Due to his father's ill health and death, Jim left school at the age of 16 and, with the help of his brother-in-law, learned the trade of an ironworker to support his parents and four younger siblings.

He began his work for Morrison-Knutson on the upper and lower Salmon Dams and the Twin Falls Hospital. In 1951, he enlisted in the Air Force and was sent to Lackland Air Force Base, Texas, for basic training, then Selma, Ala. In 1949, he had met the love of his life, Janet Miller, in Twin Falls. They were married April 12, 1952, and Janet joined him in Alabama. He was then sent to Manila, Philippines, for an 18-month tour of duty in support of the Korean conflict. His last assignment was at Amarillo AFB, Texas.

Following his military discharge, he soon returned to construction work for MK, placing rebar in the Oxbow and Brownlee Dams near Halfway, Ore., where the family lived for four years until Jim was involved in an accident which broke both legs. After this, he decided, along with his two younger brothers, to begin their own business, Tri-M Erectors in Kent, Wash., which was a very successful steel placing business in the Pacific Northwest. In 1974, Jim returned to construction in Tucson, Ariz., and in Portland, Ore., where he and his sons began another company, Bar-M Steel, and worked there until retirement in 1996, leaving the businesses to his sons. During these years, Jim and Janet raised five children, Gary, Jerry, David, Cindy and Kevin. Besides his love of horses, he loved to hunt and fish. He attended the Church of the Nazarene in Twin Falls.

He is survived by his wife, Janet of 60 years; children, Gary May of Jerome, Jerry (Sandi) May of Sandy, Ore., David (Connie) May of Twin Falls, Cindy (Kevin) Paulin of Jerome and Kevin (Kathleen) May of Oregon City, Ore.; grandchildren, Angela (Ryan) Niska, Ryan (Jenny) May, Chad May, Travis (Gabby) May, Sommer (Jason) Skrnich, Wade May, Craig (Libby Deahn) Paulin, Brad (Sarah) Paulin, Erin (Alex) Fultz, Racquel May, Colton May and Reese May; step-grandchildren, Jaime (Ryan) Muchow and Courtnee Windsor; 11 great-grandchildren; sister, Geraldine Valline of Auburn, Wash.; brother, Harold (Virginia) May of Enumclaw, Wash.; sister-in-law, Patricia May of Logan, N.M.; and numerous nieces and nephews.

The family would like to express their gratitude to Teri and the staff at DeSano Place in Jerome and Idaho Home and Hospice for their loving care of Jim.

A viewing for Jim will be held from 5 to 7 p.m. Wednesday, July 4, at Rosenau Funeral Home. The funeral will be held at 2 p.m. Thursday, July 5, at the Church of the Nazarene in Twin Falls, with the family greeting friends one hour prior to the service. Burial will be at the Twin Falls Cemetery.

Family and friends are encouraged to share their memories of Jim at www.rosenaufuneral-home.com.

Susan Ann Roberts

May 2, 1956-July 1, 2012

HAGERMAN • Susan Ann Roberts, 56, of Hagerman, went to be with our Lord on Sunday, July 1, 2012.

Susan Ann McCormick was born May 2, 1956, in Twin Falls, Idaho, to Jack Douglas and Emma Jane (Durreman) McCormick. Susan graduated from Wendell High School. She then became an LPN and worked at St. Benedicts Hospital for 13 years, then another six years for Southern Idaho Physical Therapy until her health declined and she became disabled. Susan was married to the love of her life on July 30, 1977. Three sons were born to this loving union, Eric Roberts, Christopher Roberts and Nathan Roberts. Susan was a loving devoted wife, mother and grandmother. She will be greatly missed. She recently spent many days with the second love of her life, her granddaughter, Aubrie Lou Roberts. They had a special bond that will always be cherished.

Susan is survived by her loving husband, Michael of Hagerman, Idaho; sons, Eric and Christopher (Audrey mother, Emma Jane Peck of Garden City, Idaho; brothers, Michael (Shinne) McCormick of Boise, Idaho, and Jack (Evonne) McCormick of Twin Falls; and sister, Shelley (Jim) Lowder of Boise; along with many close relatives as well as many friends. Susan was preceded in death by her father, Jack McCormick; grandparents; niece, Kamey Mallea; and nephew, Jerad Sabala.

Visitation for family and friends will be held from 4 to 7 p.m. Friday, July 6, at Demaray Funeral Service, Gooding Chapel. A funeral service will be held at 3 p.m. Saturday, July 7, at Demaray Funeral Service, Gooding Chapel.

Arrangements are under the direction of Demaray Funeral Service, Gooding Chapel.

Condolences may be sent to the family by visiting the obituary link at www.demaryfuneralservice.com.

Joseph Dean McCollum

June 1, 1918-June 30, 2012

TWIN FALLS • Ninety-four years ago, in Emerson, Ark., Joseph Dean McCollum was the 10th of 11 children born to Isaac Newton and Daisy Pascal McCollum. He passed away of natural causes in Twin Falls, Idaho, on Saturday, June 30, 2012, being in good spirits until the end, his last act being to give one of his caregivers a morning hug.

He is survived by his brother, Ben McCollum of Sun City West, Ariz.; sons, David (Sally) of Twin Falls and Joseph Jr. (Carolyn) of Boise; five grandchildren; and four great-grandchildren.

Joe lived a life filled with warm and passionate energy. From humble beginnings on the family farm, he earned a degree from the University of Arkansas. His first job was with the Department of Agriculture, where he met his future wife, Ila Jean Hudson. Transferred out west, he fell in love with Idaho, settling here in 1946 after marrying Jean on Aug. 23, 1944, and serving as an officer in the Army during the war.

The fertilizer business Joe started in Kimberly eventually became Simplot Soilbuilders when he and his friend, J.R. Simplot, decided they should join forces, with Joe being the first regional manager. Based in Twin Falls, Joe was active in every aspect of the community, including the Kiwanis Club, Boy Scouts, First Baptist Church, and numerous charitable organizations and athletic leagues. In 1964, Joe was an Idaho delegate to the Republican National Convention. During the late '60s and into the '70s, he was appointed to serve two terms on the Idaho State Board of Education, including serving as vice president and president. Joe was also active in the organization and founding of the College of Southern Idaho.

When Joe wasn't growing the best melons anyone had ever tasted in the garden out back, he loved hunting, fishing, sports and all outdoor activities.

He was an early member of Blue Lakes Country Club, and his love of golf led him to build the Canyon Springs Golf Course on the south side of the spectacular Snake River Canyon in Twin Falls.

When Joe retired from the J.R. Simplot Co., he and Jean began to spend winters at their second home in Sun City West, Ariz. After Jean's untimely death in October 1993, Joe married Evelyn Yost Hultz Vertrees on Sept. 14, 1994. He and Evelyn continued to divide their time between Twin Falls and Sun City West. Evelyn was Joe's constant companion until she passed away last November 2011.

In all of Joe's achievements in business and politics, what he appreciated most were the opportunities it gave him to help others. Expecting nothing in return, Joe helped others for the pleasure it gave him. Joe never looked back; he was always a whirlwind of activity. He touched many lives and leaves behind many lifelong friends.

In keeping with Joe's preferences, please send no flowers. Instead, the family suggests a donation in his name to CSI or to another Idaho public institution of higher education.

A celebration of Joe's life will be held as a graveside service at 1 p.m. Friday, June 6, at Sunset Memorial Park, 2296 Kimberly Road in Twin Falls. Military honors will be by the Magic Valley Honor Guard and Idaho National Guard.

Services are under the direction of Trent Stimpson and staff at Reynolds Funeral Chapel in Twin Falls. Condolences may be left for the family by visiting www.reynoldschapel.com.

Robert James Wigington

Feb. 4, 1937-July 1, 2012

TWIN FALLS • Robert "Bob" Wigington passed away suddenly Sunday, July 1, 2012, while playing golf. He was with his wife Elaine and friends and doing what he loved.

Bob was born in Buhl, Idaho, and graduated in 1955 from Buhl High School. He remained close with many of his classmates and friends from Buhl. Bob began his work on the family farm near Castleford. Eventually, he worked at Pet Milk in Buhl and then began a long career in sales. Bob loved people and selling anything. He could never pass up a good conversation and a good antique buy. He worked for Bennett's Twin Falls Glass and Paint, traveling for many years around Idaho, Nevada and Utah. He then owned Specialty Glass in Twin Falls. During this same time, he began operating and owning Sunset Bowl in Buhl for 25 years until (semi) retiring in 2003. He still owned and operated Southern Idaho Glass to date.

Bob always loved golf and anything antique, especially John Wayne, Mickey Mouse and Marilyn Monroe. Bob made many friends over the years playing golf at Twin Falls Muni, Buhl Country Club and, more recently, Jerome Country Club. He loved a great game of golf and had two holes-in-one over the years. He could tell you every detail about each one and was proud of a feat that not many golfers experience. Bob was a regular customer every morning and afternoon at the Depot Grill. He would enjoy friends and discussing and cussing politics and solving all the world's problems. Bob was also a member of the BPOE Elks lodge and served in many capacities since he was 21 years old. Bob courted Elaine while she was working at the Orpheum Theater in Twin Falls. They got married in 1959 and celebrated more than 50 years. As a family, we had all celebrated with an Alaskan cruise and Bob fell in love with cruising. Bob loved all of his grandkids deeply, and you knew he was proud of you when he didn't have an opinion.

Bob is survived by his wife, Elaine; sons, Chad and Todd (Jeni); seven grandkids, Chaz, Brooks, Amanda, Tyler, Ashlin, Wyatt and Maddie; and one great-grandchild, Lorraine. He was preceded in death by his parents, June and Wilford Wigington; and two sisters, Shirley Uptain and Donna Ward.

A family and friends viewing will be from 6 to 8 p.m. Thursday, July 5, at Rosenau Funeral Home, 2826 Addison Ave. E. in Twin Falls. The funeral will be held at 1 p.m. Friday, July 6, at the same location. A family and friends luncheon will follow the funeral at Rosenau's banquet room as well.

A special thanks to all the first responders at the scene on the golf course; your gracious and hard efforts to help are greatly appreciated. Also the family thanks "Whitey" and his wife, Debbie, for being there and helping mom in this trying moment.

In lieu of flowers, the family suggests donations be made to the JCC Beatification, in care of Ataxxis, 864 Filer Ave. Twin Falls, ID 83301, for a memorial dedicated to Bob; also, the Twin Falls Methodist Church, 360 Shoshone St. E., Twin Falls, ID 83301.

Danny 'Dan' Rupert

Oct. 8, 1953-July 1, 2012

OBITUARIES

Faye Morrill

March 5, 1924-July 1, 2012

HAZELTON • Our beloved mother and grandmother passed away Sunday, July 1, 2012, surrounded by family.

Faye was born to George Carl and Emma Josephine Fenn on March 5, 1924, in Salina, Utah. They moved to Hazelton, Idaho, in 1925, where she spent the majority of her life. Faye married C.R. Morrill on Oct. 16, 1943, and together, they raised four children, Don, Charlene, Charles and Zella. She was a kind, loving person with a helping hand for family or friends. She enjoyed cooking and baking for family and friends. She spent many hours sewing, drawing and gardening. Faye spent most of her life in various aspects of the farming community. She especially loved her grandchildren and great-grandchildren. She will be dearly missed by all.

She is survived by a brother, Joe (June) Fenn; a sister, Kay (Rex) Wilden; son, Don; daughters, Charlene Graff and Zella Campbell; 10 grandchildren; and 13 great-grandchildren. She was preceded in death by her parents; son, Charles Morrill; five brothers; one sister; and a daughter-in-law, Laura Morrill.

A viewing for Faye will be held from 10 to noon Saturday, July 7, at Rosenau Funeral Home, with a graveside service to be held at 1 p.m. at Sunset Memorial Park.

Bright Frozen Treats

THE WASHINGTON POST

The brilliant color matches the vibrant flavor in this delightfully easy-to-make frozen treat. Tarragon lends an interesting undertone, and the yogurt and lemon juice balance the sweetness of the roasted plums.

We used plums with pink flesh, which create a remarkably intense hue.

Before you make the pops, you'll need to make simple syrup. However, because the syrup is heated in this recipe, we made it just before starting the pops, and it worked fine.

Plum, Yogurt and Tarragon Popsicles

14 tablespoons simple syrup (see note)
2 to 3 sprigs tarragon, or more as needed
2 tablespoons freshly squeezed lemon juice, from 1/2 medium lemon
1/2 cup low-fat vanilla-flavored yogurt

Preheat the oven to 350 degrees. Arrange the plums cut side down in a single layer on a rimmed baking sheet and roast until the skins and flesh have significantly softened, 20 to 40 minutes, depending on the size of the fruit. Let the plums cool on the baking sheet.

While the plums are roasting, combine the simple syrup and tarragon (keep the leaves on the stems) in a small saucepan. Cover and heat over medium heat until the mixture bubbles very slowly around the edges, then cook covered for 5 or 6 minutes. Do not cook for too long; the syrup evaporates quickly, and you'll need 3/4 cup plus 2 tablespoons of it for the recipe. Turn off the heat and let the tarragon steep. You should be able to smell the herb; if you can't, discard the spent tarragon, add new sprigs to the syrup and heat for 5 minutes.

Once the plums are cool enough to handle, remove and discard the pits and transfer the plums, including their skins, to a food processor. Process to a puree, preferably leaving it a little chunky rather than perfectly smooth. Measure out 1 2/3 cups of puree; if you have any excess, save it for another use.

Remove the tarragon from the saucepan, squeeze it over the simple syrup to extract as much liquid as possible, and discard the tarragon. Transfer the plum puree to a bowl or large measuring cup with a pour spout; add the lemon juice and 3/4 cup plus 2 tablespoons of the tarragon-infused syrup. Stir to combine thoroughly, and taste. The mixture should be sweet, with a licorice-y warmth from the tarragon. Swirl in the yogurt. Make sure the mixture tastes quite sweet at this point, because the sweetness will dull upon freezing.

Pour the mixture into ice pop molds, leaving a little room at the top for the pops to expand. Insert sticks and freeze until solid, 4 to 5 hours. Unmold and transfer to plastic bags for storage, or serve at once.

Note: To make simple syrup, bring 3/4 cup of water to a boil in a small saucepan over medium-high heat. Add 3/4 cup of sugar (the recipe authors prefer organic sugar) and cook, stirring constantly, until it has dissolved, about 30 seconds. Reduce the heat to low and cook until the mixture has just slightly thickened, about 5 minutes. Remove from the heat and allow to cool. The syrup may be covered tightly and refrigerated for up to 3 weeks.

This Spring Stew Comes Together Quickly

BY STEPHANIE WITT SEDGWICK

This is a fast-cooking stew, which makes it great for warmer days. The dish comes together in about 45 minutes.

It's also easy. The hardest part is cleaning the leeks, which often are filled with sand that needs to be washed away. First, remove and discard the tough green tops. Next, slice each leek in half and run under cold water, fanning the layers. Slice the leeks, then soak the slices in a large bowl or sink filled with cold water. Finally, remove the leeks from the water with a large skimmer or colander. The 10 minutes this will take is well worth it to ensure a sand-free dish.

There are very few ingredients in this stew, so make them count. Use the best, most full-flavored chicken broth you can find; homemade is best. For the potatoes, try one of the many specialty baby or fingerling potatoes available in stores and at farm markets.

This dish is even better the next day. The potatoes can be cooked in advance, cooled and refrigerated, or you can boil the potatoes right before serving.

Spring Chicken, Leek and Potato Stew

6 servings.

1 1/2 pounds baby white or red potatoes, well scrubbed
2 tablespoons olive oil
1 pound trimmed leeks, sliced in half down the length of the leek, each half thinly sliced (rinsed well; see headnote)
Salt
Freshly ground black pepper
1 1/2 pounds chicken breast tenderloins
2/3 cup dry white wine
2 cups no-salt-added or homemade chicken broth
1 tablespoon finely chopped fresh chives

over high heat until the water boils; adjust the heat to maintain a steady boil and cook for 12 to 20 minutes, until the potatoes are tender. (The cooking time will vary according to the thickness of the potato.) Drain the potatoes in a colander. While the potatoes are cooking, heat 1 tablespoon of the oil in a 4-quart Dutch oven, soup pot or enameled cast-iron casserole over medium heat. Add the leeks. Season with salt and pepper to taste; cook for about 10 minutes, stirring occasionally, until the leeks are very soft but not browned. Adjust the heat as needed.

While the leeks are cooking, season the chicken with salt and pepper to taste. Heat the remaining tablespoon of oil in a large nonstick saute pan or skillet over medium-high heat. Add as many of the tenderloins as will fit without crowding. Cook for 2 to 3 minutes, until nicely browned on one side; turn and cook for about 2 minutes, until browned on the other side. The chicken does not need to be cooked through at this point. Transfer to a plate and repeat with the remaining tenderloins.

When the leeks are soft, add the wine. Increase the heat to high and bring the wine to a boil; cook for 3 to 4 minutes, until the wine has reduced by half. Add the browned chicken tenderloins and the broth. Once it has come to a boil, reduce the heat to medium-low; cover and cook for 15 minutes, adjusting the heat so that the liquid is barely bubbling. Taste, and adjust the seasoning as needed.

To serve, divide the potatoes among shallow bowls or pasta dishes. Top with the chicken and leeks, spoon the cooking liquids over the chicken and potatoes, and garnish with the chopped chives.

In this Pasta, Ricotta Adds Lighter Dairy Element

Special to The Washington Post

I've grown away from cream sauces that seem to drown vegetables and pasta rather than enhance them. Instead, I use ricotta cheese, which adds a lighter dairy element. Ricotta tends to be a little dry, so I mix in milk. After that, it's just a matter of flavoring the ricotta and combining it with well-cooked vegetables and pasta.

Here, the ricotta is treated to lemon and basil. Zucchini and onion are sauteed until tender, then everything is combined with corkscrew-shaped pasta. It's easy, delicious and summer-y.

Pasta and Zucchini With Lemon-Basil Ricotta Cream

4 or 5 servings.

Salt
8 ounces dried corkscrew shaped pasta, such as rotini or fusilli
1 tablespoon olive oil
1 cup finely chopped onion (from a medium onion)
1 pound zucchini, cut into cubes no larger than 1/2 inch (about 2 medium zucchini)
1 cup part-skim ricotta cheese
2 tablespoons low-fat milk
Finely grated zest of

KATHERINE FREY - WASHINGTON POST

1 large lemon, plus more for optional garnish
1/3 cup coarsely chopped basil leaves (about 16 large leaves), plus 2 basil leaves cut into thin strips for optional garnish
Freshly ground black pepper

Bring a pot of salted water to a boil over medium-high heat. Cook the pasta according to the package directions. Drain. Meanwhile, heat the oil in a large nonstick saute pan or skillet over medium heat. Add the onion and season with salt to taste; cook for 2 to 3 minutes, stirring occasionally, until the onion softens. Add the zucchini and toss to combine. Cook for 8 to 10 minutes, stirring occasionally and adjusting the heat so the zucchini becomes tender but does not brown.

Combine the ricotta, milk, lemon zest and basil in a large bowl. Season with salt and pepper to taste. When the pasta and vegetables are ready, add them to the bowl and toss to combine. Taste, and adjust the seasoning as needed.

Transfer to a serving bowl or to individual serving plates. Garnish with more lemon zest and the basil

A Little Heat Equals Deep Flavors in Chilled Soup

BY ALISON LADMAN
For The Associated Press

Ready for a cool and refreshing soup hot off the grill? It's got to be gazpacho.

Gazpacho is the perfect healthy summer food. It's jammed with all manner of vegetables, including the tomatoes and zucchini that tend to overrun our gardens, and traditionally is served cool to help beat the summer heat.

While some people prefer their gazpachos made from raw vegetables, we find that cooking the produce, then chilling it deepens the flavors. But who wants to head inside to cook in summer? So we came up with this delicious recipe for grilled gazpacho.

Along with being a low-fat cooking method that won't heat up the kitchen, grilling vegetables adds a delicious smoky char to the soup. Make this soup at least several hours and up to a day ahead, then chill until you are ready to enjoy.

Grilled Gazpacho

Start to finish: 30 (plus chilling time). Servings: 4.

4 large tomatoes, halved
1 medium zucchini, halved lengthwise
1 medium summer squash, halved lengthwise
1 medium red onion, halved
Salt and ground black pepper
2 cloves garlic, minced
1/4 cup fresh basil
1 tablespoon fresh oregano
1 medium cucumber, peeled and finely diced
Zest and juice of 1 orange
2 tablespoons balsamic vinegar
1/4 cup crumbled goat

cheese or feta cheese (optional)

Heat the grill to high. Using an oil-soaked paper towel held with tongs, oil the grill grates.

Place the poblano pepper on the grill and cook until it is charred and blackened on all sides. Place the pepper in a paper bag, close the bag and allow the pepper to steam in its own heat for 10 minutes while you grill the other vegetables.

Season the tomatoes, zucchini, summer squash and onion with salt and pepper. Arrange the vegetables on the grill and cook until slightly charred and tender, about 4 to 5 minutes per side. Transfer to a platter and set aside.

Using the paper bag to assist, rub the poblano pepper until all of the charred skin loosens and peels off.

Using a paring knife, cut out and discard the core and seeds of the pepper.

In a blender or food processor, working in batches if necessary, puree the poblano, tomatoes, zucchini, summer squash, onion, garlic, basil and oregano. Transfer to a large bowl and allow to cool completely.

When the soup has cooled, stir in the diced cucumber and orange zest and juice. Adjust the seasoning with salt and black pepper. Refrigerate for 2 to 24 hours.

Dinner in just 20 Minutes: Pan Quiche

BY BONNIE S. BENWICK
The Washington Post

1/4 teaspoon kosher salt

In yet another installment of breakfast for dinner, we offer this so-called quiche, which, depending on the pan you use, might remind you more of a frittata with a bottom crust. It's a 10-minute pan quiche and refers to how long it takes to cook this stovetop version of the classic, baked French egg dish.

Breadcrumbs moistened with a little olive oil are pressed into the pan and toasted to form the makeshift crust. You can process your own using day-old French bread, as we've done here, or you can use store-bought garlic croutons.

You could add or substitute fillings, such as cheese, olives, scallions and/or mint.

Ten-Minute Pan Quiche

2 servings.

1 ounce spinach leaves
2 ounces day-old French or other crusty bread (about 1/4 of a baguette; may substitute garlic croutons)
1/2 to 1 teaspoon herbes de Provence
1 tablespoon olive oil
4 large eggs
1/4 cup water

Coarsely chop the tomato (to yield 1/4 to 1/2 cup). Finely chop the spinach to yield 1/4 to 1/3 packed cup. Tear the bread into chunks and place it in a food processor along with the herbes de Provence (to taste). Pulse to form small crumbs, about 1 1/4 cups.

Heat the oil in a small-to-medium nonstick skillet over medium heat; swirl to coat the bottom and halfway up the sides.

Pour the crumb mixture into the skillet, using a flexible spatula to press it to form a crust. Toast for 45 seconds to 1 minute or until fragrant. Monitor the heat and adjust as needed; if it's too high, the crust will burn before the egg sets after it's poured in, and if it's too low the crust will not become golden brown.

Whisk together the eggs, water and salt in a medium bowl. Pour evenly over the crumb crust in the skillet. Sprinkle the spinach and tomato evenly over the egg. Reduce the heat to medium-low. Cover and cook for about 10 minutes, until the egg is just set but still looks moist.

Uncover and remove from the heat. Gently loosen the edges of the crust, then slide the pan quiche onto a cutting board. Cut in half and divide between plates. Serve right away.

TWIN FALLS • Baseball is a game of adjustments. Not making any is a surefire way to fall off the pace.

The Twin Falls Cowboys found that out on Tuesday, striking out 11 times, most on the same curveball pitch, in a 6-3 loss to Evanston, Wyo., in Class A American Legion play at Bill Ingram Field. The Cowboys did rebound to win the second game, 8-4.

Kade Lym stuck to a heavy dose of off-speed pitches, and the Cowboys couldn't figure out a way past the breaking ball. "We didn't make very many adjustments. We talked about it three times, about not trying to yank everything and staying on it," said Twin Falls coach Mark Schaal. "I guess that's just our youth showing, that we have to revisit these things sometimes."

Lym did the decisive damage at the plate as well, crushing a Jason Bride offering over the left-field wall to break a 3-3 tie in the fifth inning.

Special guest NASCAR driver and television personality Kenny Wallace piloted cars in three different events, climbing behind the wheel of race vehicles ranging from a four-cylinder Hornet to a late model Super Stock car driven in the speedway's feature division series.

In the evening's finale, Wallace lapped nearly the entire field in the Race of Champions, with only Jeff Peck and John Newhouse on the lead lap when the checkered flag fell.

Wallace also took the main event win in the Hornet race after passing Daniel Shirley in the final lap.

"I joked with Russell (Dalton) afterward and I told him 'I know I got into you a little bit in turns one and two but did you have to bump me in three and four?'" Hall said of his heat race in which he finished last.

For the start of the Super Stocks main event race Wallace took his spot at the rear of the field of 10 entrants. Dan Pehrson led for the first several laps until Shirley took over at lap 11.

Newest Jazzman Promises Toughness

SALT LAKE CITY • Mo Williams isn't the 20-year-old rookie that he was when he first arrived in Salt Lake City in 2003.

He's married now, with four kids, another on the way and enough money to buy a house in place of the tiny apartment he once had.

What hasn't changed is the toughness he brings, toughness he vowed to carry forward after being reunited with the Utah Jazz following a multi-team deal finalized last week that sent Lamar Odom back to Los Angeles with the Clippers.

"That's what makes me who I am, that toughness I have in me, that Jerry (Sloan) helped fine-tune," Williams said Tuesday after being formally introduced as the newest member of the Jazz.

A second trade that the Jazz can't formally announce until a league-wide moratorium is lifted July 11 will send Devin Harris to the Atlanta Hawks and clear the way for Mo Williams to run the team at point guard.

Asked about becoming the new face of the Jazz franchise after a pair of major post-draft trades, Mo

Williams wasn't fazed. "I look forward to the challenge," he said.

Williams, now 29, arrived in Salt Lake City in 2003 with a single suitcase, and a chip on his shoulder after falling to the second round of the draft and No. 47 overall.

Since then, he's played with LeBron James in Cleveland and was part of Lob City in Los Angeles with Blake Griffin and Chris Paul.

Each trade, he said, only paved the way for him to be back in Utah.

For now, Mo Williams plans to wear No. 16 — disappointing all those Jazz fans who thought they might finally be able to recycle the No. 8 Deron Williams jerseys that became obsolete when the team traded the superstar point guard in February 2011.

Mo Williams said the number he has worn most of his career, 25, was already taken by center Al Jefferson, who hails from the same hometown of Jackson, Miss.

His children picked No. 16 because the digits add up to seven — the size his family will be once the new baby arrives. It's news even his

WIMBLEDON, England • Thanks to a bit of advice from her big sister and a bunch of aces from her big serve, Serena Williams is back in the Wimbledon semifinals.

With two more victories, Williams will be holding a Grand Slam trophy for the first time in two years.

The thud of racket-against-ball reverberating under the closed Centre Court roof, Williams smacked 13 aces at up to 120 mph and overpowered defending champion Petra Kvitova 6-3, 7-5 in the quarterfinals Tuesday at the All England Club.

Beforehand, Williams' father and coach, Richard, asked his other title-winning daughter to relay some suggestions.

"I went and had Venus talk to her, because Venus can get (through) to Serena better than anyone in the world. So I told Venus, 'I'm not going to talk to her. You talk to her.' So Venus went and talked to her. When the match was over, I told her, 'Venus: Good coaching! Good coaching!'" Dad said after snapping photos of Serena's victory from his front-row perch in the guest box above a scoreboard.

"I wanted Serena to move her feet a little bit more and to not concentrate on what the girl's doing, but concentrate exactly on what she wished to do," he continued. "And that was the only message."

Consider it delivered.

Sagan Wins Tour Stage, Channels Forrest Gump

ASSOCIATED PRESS

BOULOGNE-SUR-MER, France • Once upon a time in Hollywood, the cry was "Run, Forrest, Run!" The message was not lost on Peter Sagan at the Tour de France.

The 22-year-old Slovakian won Tuesday's ride toward the English Channel in dramatic fashion, and then went cinematic — pumping his arms in the running style of fictional antihero Forrest Gump at the behest of his Liquigas teammates.

Competing in his first Tour, Sagan earned his second victory in the three full stages so far. He is picking up where he left off in May at the Tour of California, where he won a stunning five of eight stages.

On Tuesday, he mastered a tricky uphill finish and schooled many older riders on the last of five small climbs over the 122-mile ride from Orchies to the fishing port of Boulogne-sur-Mer.

Switzerland's Fabian Cancellara was one of them, and he retained the leader's yellow jersey for a fourth straight day after winning the opening-day prologue on Saturday.

Tuesday's ride marked the first crash-related withdrawals from this 99th Tour, which ends July 22 on Paris' Champs-Élysées.

The race remains wide open. After flat early stages, the Swiss rider has 43 rivals within a minute of his overall time, and that's likely to change when the pack heads to the Alps in the second week and the Pyrenees in the third, if not sooner.

Overall, Cancellara leads runner-up Bradley Wiggins, who is hoping to become Britain's first Tour winner, and third-place Sylvain Chavanel — both seven seconds back. Defending champ Cadel Evans of Australia rose one spot to seventh, 17 seconds behind. Sagan was 15th, another six seconds slower.

With Sagan's Stage 1 victory Sunday, he became the youngest rider to win a Tour stage since Lance Armstrong in 1993 at 21. Even leaders of rival teams were marveling at his skill and potential after Tuesday's victory.

"You've got to give Sagan credit for the way he's riding at the minute. When you see something like that you just have to stand back and admire it, and smile and say well done," Team Sky manager Dave Brailsford said.

"It's a bit like watching Messi playing football or something isn't it?" he said, referring to Barcelona's Lionel Messi. "He's winning with such apparent ease at the moment that it's pretty phenomenal."

Sagan enjoys putting on a show for fans. To that end, he churned his arms, as a runner might, in a nod to the title character in the movie "Forrest Gump."

"It's a thing I'd discussed with my teammates about what kind of gesture I'd do on the line," Sagan said. "Everybody said, 'Do a Forrest Gump' because when he was told to run, he ran. And when I'm told to win, I win."

Baseball is America's Pastime, but it bears too strong a resemblance to cricket. Football evolved from rugby. Basketball is truly the one American sport that has reached all corners of the globe, but if Dr. James Naismith ventured into a high school gym today, much less a 20,000-seat NBA arena, would anyone be surprised if he didn't recognize the game he invented?

At the speedway's one-third mile track, the cars still have four tires. They still only make left-hand turns and they still have carburetors and 8-cylinder engines.

Familiarity is a good friend of comfort. And the holidays are for feeling comfortable; a break from the everyday, mundane, stress-filled routines of daily life.

At the same time, there were the necessary tributes to what the Fourth of July is really all about. And for the brief time that Burley's Cody Sibbett, Jerome's John Doherty and Buhl's Vinnie Gauthier were on the track, it allowed everyone in attendance to get a head start on some introspective thought on what it means to be an American.

Because the three aforementioned men have sacrificed so we can continue to proudly celebrate this nation's birthday in whatever fashion we see fit.

"Their service is all about our freedom," said Monte Bruhn, founder and president of Idaho 'N' Heroes Outdoors. "Without their service, we wouldn't have the freedom to celebrate the Fourth of July.

Bruhn's organization was selling raffle tickets for a chance to ride in a car with Kenny Wallace, the imported star for the Speedway's festivities. The funds from the raffle go toward, according to the group's website, "giving back to brothers and sisters in arms through nature-related activities; that aid in the restoration of self-esteem while enhancing spiritual and personal character."

"People honor us at times like this and it's humbling," said Sibbett, who suffered third-degree burns over 45 percent of his body thanks to a roadside bomb while stationed in Iraq. "At times, I think I get a little more credit than I think I deserve."

Now a student at the College of Southern Idaho, Sibbett is trying to "be somebody and start a new chapter." "It's time to start over," said Sibbett, who is continuing his selfless ways by hosting a golf fundraiser for Idaho 'N' Heroes at Burley Golf Course on Aug. 4.

And if you've forgotten to think about those who make July 4 worth celebrating, it's never too late to start over. No better day than today to start doing so.

Email Citing Paterno Brings Defense of Late Penn State Coach

ASSOCIATED PRESS

HARRISBURG, Pa. • Joe Paterno's family and supporters are defending the late coach against a leak of apparently damaging material released during highly secretive investigations into former assistant coach Jerry Sandusky.

Details from a decade-old email have raised new questions about whether the Hall of Fame coach tried to cover up a sex abuse complaint against Sandusky.

With Paterno no longer able to come to his own defense, his family has fought back, with their lawyer accusing "someone in a position of authority" of trying to smear the late coach.

But family spokesman Dan McGinn said Tuesday he wasn't worried about the various investigations' impact on Paterno's legacy. McGinn said Paterno never directed him to protect his legacy or clear his name during their discussions that followed Sandusky's arrest in November.

"Joe Paterno had confidence in the way he lived," McGinn said. "He believed his life record would speak for itself."

Paterno died from lung cancer at age 85 in January, two months after the Penn State trustees fired him, citing a lack of leadership in response to a 2001 report by graduate assistant Mike McQueary about Sandusky showering with a boy in a football team locker room.

Paterno issued a statement in December that said he reported the McQueary complaint to athletic director Tim Curley, and "that was the last time the matter was brought to my attention."

But CNN has reported that an email from Curley indicated he changed his mind about going to child welfare authorities after speaking with Paterno, which suggests the long-time coach took a more active role in the decision than what he described.

Curley, now on leave from the university, and retired vice president Gary Schultz, are awaiting trial on charges they did not properly report the suspected child abuse and then lied to a grand jury about how seriously they viewed McQueary's report.

It's unclear how the email traffic about Paterno might affect their criminal defense: whether it will be used to show how the men agonized over a difficult decision or whether the correspondence suggests the powerful head football coach was really calling the shots. A spokeswoman for their lawyers offered no immediate comment on the subject Tuesday.

Sandusky was convicted last month of 45 counts, including four related to the encounter described in McQueary's testimony, but acquitted of the most serious count in that encounter.

On Monday, the Paterno family issued a statement asking for release of all relevant emails and records from the attorney general's office and from the company hired by Penn State to conduct a review.

McGinn said the description of Curley's email did not provide the context needed to understand the coach's actions.

"No one should be drawing conclusions based on partial information," McGinn said. "We're cautioning everybody: What you've got is lots of people passing rumors, claiming to have information, leaking information."

Cowboys

Landon Jones had singled in two runs in the bottom of the fourth to re-tie the game after Evanston plated two in the top half of the inning. But with Lynn's round-tripper, the wind was gone from the Cowboys' sails.

"In his defense, Jason hasn't pitched a whole lot for us. But we're going to need him as we get to our conference schedule," said Schaal. "We were treating this as a chance to get some innings for some guys that we're going to need later in the season. Jason did a good job, just left one up."

The Cowboys tinkered with the lineup in Game 2, and the new lineup did its job to salvage a split from the twinbill.

Hunter Elam went 2-for-

3 at the plate, including a two-run single in a four-run third inning that gave the Cowboys needed breathing room.

The win should give Twin Falls a boost of confidence as it enters the teeth of its Area C West Division slate, starting with games against the Twin Falls Hawks on Thursday.

"Hopefully we've got everything loaded starting then," Schaal said.

Asians a Dominant Force Going into U.S. Open

The popularity of women's golf in South Korea can be significantly attributed to Se Ri Pak, here playing at a tournament in New York state last month and returning to Blackwolf Run for this week's U.S. Open, the same course in which she won the event in 1998.

ASSOCIATED PRESS

KOHLER, Wis. • Se Ri Pak admits it has not been easy being a legend in South Korea.

Pak's victory in the 1998 U.S. Women's Open at Blackwolf Run in Kohler inspired South Korean women golfers and in the 14 years since their fine play has transformed the LPGA.

During a news conference Tuesday for the 2012 Open, which begins Thursday, Pak said she has always worried about whether she was handling her status the right way.

"It's everybody. They say, 'I'm playing golf because of Se Ri,'" Pak said of her fellow South Koreans. "I had a lot of pressure because I don't know (if) I'm leading the right way. That was the biggest (concern). Now I feel really proud and very happy. I'm very proud of them, of my country."

She should be: 36 South Koreans are currently ranked in the top 100 and they have won three of the last four U.S. Opens. They idolize Pak and even So Yeon Ryu, who won last year, said: "She is my hero."

Cristie Kerr said she believes the Asians, who include Chinese Yani Tseng, the world's top-ranked golfer, have been good for women's golf.

"It's a different world we live in now," Kerr said. "Golf has become such an international sport, especially in Asia. They're just crazy for golf over there. It's a very global thing now. We have a really talented tour, an international tour."

Pak, of course, has proved that her win was no fluke. She has won 25 tournaments including five majors, and in 2007 at age 30 became the youngest golfer inducted into the LPGA Hall of Fame.

"I was a lucky person," Pak said. "I've done everything I was dreaming for."

The Open will be played on the same layout as in 1998, a combination of Blackwolf Run's River and Meadow Valley courses. Pak remembers how difficult the course was in 1998 and it will be longer this year at 6,954 yards compared with 6,412. Par will be 72 instead of 71 because the 7th hole was changed to par 5.

"It equals seven, but I wouldn't take No. 7 here because some famous guy wore that," Mo Williams quipped, standing beneath a jersey hung from the rafters that displayed Pistol Pete Maravich's name.

On Tuesday, Jazz general manager Kevin O'Connor declined to discuss any potential trade with Atlanta involving Harris that would send forward Marvin Williams to the Jazz. But Jazz CEO Greg Miller acknowledged the deal Monday night when picking Mo Williams up at the airport.

"I think we've gotten better," is all O'Connor would say Tuesday. "When a player is capable of playing good basketball, and brings toughness, and aggressiveness and a work attitude every day, that's what you want."

winner and only 10 unforced errors. "I had to weed out the riffraff and just get serious."

Kvitova had won 16 of her last 17 matches at Wimbledon, including 11 in a row since a loss to Williams in the 2010 semifinals. Two days later, Williams went on to win the championship — her fourth at Wimbledon, her 13th at a Grand Slam tournament and her most recent to date.

Within a week, Williams cut her feet on glass at a restaurant, leading to a series of health problems, including being hospitalized for clots in her lungs, then the removal of a pocket of blood under the skin on her stomach.

"No one tries to have ups and downs. Some things happen sometimes, and you have absolutely no control over it," said Williams, whose only first-round loss in 48 Grand Slam tournaments came at the French Open in late May. "So I think it's how you recover from that, and how you handle the downs even more than the ups can really (reveal your) character."

On Thursday, Williams will play No. 2 Victoria Azarenka of Belarus, the reigning Australian Open champion, who defeated unseeded Tamira Paszek 6-3, 7-6 (4) under the roof at night to reach the Wimbledon semifinals for the second straight year. The other semifinal will be No. 3 Agnieszka Radwanska of Poland against No. 8 Angelique Kerber of Germany.

A little before 10 p.m. on Centre Court, Radwanska finished her 7-5, 4-6, 7-5 victory over No. 17 Maria Kirilenko — whose boyfriend, two-time NHL MVP Alex Ovechkin of the Washington Capitals, was in the stands. Earlier, the match was forced off Court 1 because of showers, tied 4-all in the third set.

"Today was for me, like, 40 hours," Radwanska said after reaching her first Grand Slam semifinal. "I was on and off all the time, waiting pretty much all day."

Kerber was a 6-3, 6-7 (7), 7-5 winner over No. 15 Sabine Lisicki in an all-German matchup. Lisicki saved three match points in the second set, but then let a 5-3 lead slip away in the third against Kerber, also a semifinalist at last year's U.S. Open.

Notice of Decision: Invasive Treatment in the Christ's Indian Paintbrush (Castilleja christii) Population

On June 29,2012, Scott Nannenga, District Ranger of the Minidoka Ranger Station, Sawtooth National Forest signed a Decision Memo authorizing Minidoka Ranger District to treat smooth brome (Bromus inermis), within the single population of Christ's Indian paintbrush (Castilleja christii) on Mt. Harrison. The greatest threat to the Christ's Indian paintbrush is the invasion of smooth brome into the population. The purpose of treatment is to greatly reduce or eradicate the smooth brome within the Christ's Indian paintbrush population. This action is required to meet conservation actions identified in the Candidate Conservation Agreement (CCA, 2005) with U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service concerning Christ's Indian paintbrush. Copies of the Decision Memo are available at Minidoka Ranger District, 2306 Hiland Ave., Burley, ID 83318.

Bidders must be prepared to tender the trustee the full amount of the bid at the sale in the form of cash, or a cashier's check drawn on a state or federally insured savings institution. Said sale will be made without covenant or warranty, express or implied, regarding title, possession or encumbrances to satisfy the obligation secured by and pursuant to the power of sale conferred in that certain Deed of Trust. The default for which this sale is to be made is: Failure to pay the monthly payment due 12/01/2011 of principal, interest and impounds and subsequent installments due thereafter; plus late charges, with interest currently accruing at 5.500% per annum; together with all subsequent sums advanced by beneficiary pursuant to the terms and conditions of said Deed of Trust, and any supplemental modifications thereto. The principal balance owing as of this date on said obligation is $76,622.70, plus interest, costs and expenses actually incurred in enforcing the obligations thereunder and in this sale, together with any unpaid and/or accruing real property taxes, and/or assessments, attorneys' fees, Trustees' fees and costs, and any other amount advanced to protect said security, as authorized in the promissory note secured by the aforementioned Deed of Trust. Therefore, the Beneficiary elects to sell, or cause said trust property to be sold, to satisfy said obligation. NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT THIS FIRM IS ATTEMPTING TO COLLECT A DEBT AND ANY INFORMATION OBTAINED WILL BE USED FOR THAT PURPOSE, AND THAT THE DEBT MAY BE DISPUTED. THE ABOVE GRANTORS ARE NAMED TO COMPLY WITH SECTION 45-1506(4)(a) IDAHO CODE. NO REPRESENTATION IS MADE THAT THEY ARE, OR ARE NOT, PRESENTLY RESPONSIBLE FOR THIS OBLIGATION. NOTICES

NOTICE OF HEARING REGARDING PROPOSED INCREASE IN WATER AND SEWER CONNECTION FEES AND INCREASE IN SEWER RATES BY THE CITY OF HEYBURN

Pursuant to the requirements of Idaho Code Section 63-1311A, the City of Heyburn gives notice of a hearing to consider the increase of certain fees or rates. The hearing will be conducted on July 11, 2012 at 7:00 P.M. at the Heyburn Council Chambers, at City Hall, located at 941 - 18th Street, Heyburn, Idaho. At that hearing, the Mayor and City Council will take public comment on the proposed increases.

The proposed increases:
CURRENT AMOUNT OF RATE SEWER CONNECTION FEE:
 Single Family Dwelling: $825
 Duplex: $975
 Tri-Plex: $1,125
 Four-Plex: $1,275

PROPOSED INCREASE SEWER SERVICE CONNECTION FEE:
 SIZE COST
 4 inch: $2,984.11
 6 inch: $5,436.12
 8 inch: $10,504.24
 10 inch: $15,572.36

WATER CONNECTION FEE:
 1 inch: $1,395
 1.5 inch: $1,795
 2 inch: $1,995

WATER SERVICE CONNECTION FEE:
 SIZE COST
 1 inch: $2,429.43
 2 inch: $7,165.49
 3 inch: $8,745.09
 4 inch: $14,329.81
 6 inch: $32,945.56
 8 inch: $59,007.60
 10 inch: $90,654.37

Also, there will be a new fee assessed for users who contribute excessive strength Wastewater exceeding allowable monthly limits of BOD (250 mg/l), TSS (250 mg/l), & Phosphates (10 mg/l). Excessive strength wastewater users are subject to a surcharge for the treatment of the excess loading. Wastewater users shall provide a sampling manhole on site. Loadings shall be determined by estimates or tests by City Representatives. The following equation shall be used to determine the additional loading fee:

Loading Fee = [(Phosphorus/10-1) + (BOD/250-1) + (TSS/250-1)] * Unit Rate

The reason or need for such increase is that the City commissioned a study of the City's current rates by the engineering firm, Civil Science of Twin Falls, Idaho. A copy of the study is available at the City Clerk's office. The results of the study indicate that increases in connection fees are required to offset the actual cost of providing the water and sewer connections and service.

Dated this 13th day of June, 2012.

Today is Wednesday, July 4, the 186th day of 2012. There are 180 days left in the year. This is Independence Day.

Today's Highlight:
On July 4, 1776, the Declaration of Independence was adopted by delegates to the Second Continental Congress in Philadelphia.

TODAY IN HISTORY

In 1802, the United States Military Academy officially opened at West Point, N.Y.

In 1831, the fifth president of the United States, James Monroe, died in New York City at age 73.

In 1862, English mathematician and clergyman Charles L. Dodgson ("Lewis Carroll") began devising the story of Alice in Wonderland for his young friend Alice Pleasance Liddell and her sisters during a boating trip.

In 1872, the 30th president of the United States, Calvin Coolidge, was born in Plymouth, Vt.

In 1912, the 48-star American flag, recognizing New Mexico statehood, was adopted. A train wreck near Corning, N.Y., claimed 39 lives.

In 1939, Lou Gehrig of the New York Yankees delivered his famous farewell speech in which he called himself "the luckiest man on the face of the earth."

In 1959, America's 49-star flag, recognizing Alaskan statehood, was officially unfurled.

In 1960, America's 50-star flag, recognizing Hawaiian statehood, was officially unfurled.

In 1976, Israeli commandos raided Entebbe airport in Uganda, rescuing almost all of the passengers and crew of an Air France jetliner seized by pro-Palestinian hijackers.

In 1982, the space shuttle Columbia concluded its fourth and final test flight with a smooth landing at Edwards Air Force Base in California. Heavy metal rocker Ozzy Osbourne married his manager, Sharon Arden, in Maui, Hawaii.

In 1987, Klaus Barbie, the former Gestapo chief known as the "Butcher of Lyon," was convicted by a French court of crimes against humanity and sentenced to life in prison (he died in September 1991).

Ten years ago: A gunman opened fire at Israel's El Al ticket counter at Los Angeles International Airport, killing two people; gunman Hesham Mohamed Hayday was shot dead by an El Al guard. Benjamin O. Davis Jr., leader of the famed all-black Tuskegee Airmen during World War II and the first black general in the Air Force, died in Washington D.C. at age 89. Winnifred Quick Van Tongerlo, a survivor of the Titanic sinking, died in East Lansing, Mich., at age 98.

Five years ago: BBC reporter Alan Johnston, seized by the Army of Islam in the Gaza Strip the previous March, was released. The head of the radical-held Red Mosque (Maulana Abdul Aziz) in Islamabad, Pakistan, was caught by security forces. (He was released on bail in April 2009.) The Black Sea resort of Sochi was elected the host city of the 2014 Winter Olympics, taking the Winter Games to Russia for the first time. Bill Pinkney, the last survivor of the original members of the musical group The Drifters, died in Daytona Beach, Fla., at age 81.

One year ago: Venezuelan President Hugo Chavez made a surprise return to his country after undergoing cancer treatment in Cuba. Otto von Hapsburg, 98, the oldest son of Austria's last emperor and longtime head of one of Europe's most influential families, died in Poocking, Germany.

— Robert Burns

This week's deals all come from the European Open Championships last year. Since these were held in Poznan, Poland, there was very strong Polish representation.

Lukasz Brede and Wojciech Strzemecki for Team Connector produced an elegant result during the qualifying rounds of the Teams.

Strzemecki, West, led the heart jack against three no-trump. Brede overtook in the hopes that West would play him for a six-card suit for his pre-empt and would win the trick. Cautiously, South played low, knowing that East might have cheated on his suit length. Now Brede, seeing his own lack of entries, thoughtfully shifted to a spade. Declarer won in hand and advanced the club jack, ducked, then the club king, covered by West's ace for a second spade back, taking out declarer's entry to dummy.

West won the third club and now exited with his last heart, which reduced declarer to just his five diamonds and a losing heart. He could do no better than lead a diamond to dummy, hoping the queen was with West. Brede took this trick and cashed out the hearts for three down — and a 5 IMP gain, since three no-trump went one down in the other room.

Just for the record, declarer should have played a diamond to dummy's jack after the club jack held the trick. Had he done so, he would have collected four diamonds, three spades and one trick in each of the other suits, to make his game.

ANSWER: The jump to four of a major in response to one of that suit should be played as weak, but the precise range for the call should not be tightly defined. This is a typical example of a maximum for the call. With so much of the hand in hearts, it is easy to see that it offers next to no defense to any contract played by the opponents. So it is ideal for this action.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 39-year-old gay man in a three-year relationship with a wonderful man. We had both come out of very long and abusive relationships when we met. He works hard, and I stay home and take care of the house, the animals and the yard. There is no kind of abuse in our relationship.

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

The problem is that I am an alcoholic. He keeps telling me he can handle it as long as there is no abuse. I feel I'm taking advantage of him and that he deserves better than this, and I have told him so.

I have been in rehab several times and tried AA. Nothing worked. I always go back to drinking. Where do I go from here? I don't want to lose the love of my life, but it's killing me inside that he has to put up with my drinking problem.

— NEEDS HELP IN FLORIDA

DEAR NEEDS HELP: There IS abuse going on in your relationship — substance abuse. Until you finally decide that there is something more important than a drink, you will remain stuck in your addiction. And as long as your partner continues to accept and "handle it," he will be your enabler. Where you go from here is up to you, but getting counseling for your low self-esteem and going back to AA would be giant steps in the right direction.

DEAR ABBY: It seems that every other letter you print concerns a demanding relative (a parent, in-law, sibling, etc.). The writer always wants to know how to avoid unreasonable demands without causing "unpleasantness." May I say a word to these folks?

Be honest and admit that the relationship is ALREADY unpleasant. Demanding people are impossible to please. They know their control over you depends on temper tantrums and/or fits of sulking and tears. They'll pitch these fits regularly no matter how hard you try to please them.

When faced with an unreasonable demand, just say "no." Don't waste time giving reasons or trying to work out a compromise. You already know it won't do any good. Then hunker down and wait for the explosion, keeping in mind that the longer you have been a doormat, the more violent and bitter the reaction will be.

Above all, do not be drawn into a fight! Controlling people love to fight, and they are good at it. Your weapon should be polite withdrawal. Refuse meetings. Screen your calls. Ignore letters and emails unless they contain an apology and indicate a sincere desire for change. It may shock your domineering relatives into more reasonable behavior.

If not, you haven't lost a thing. You may even find that your life is less complicated without them. Draw the line and let your family know that future relationships will be based on love AND respect, or there will be no future relations. You won't regret it.

— BEEN THERE, DONE THAT, KNOXVILLE, TENN.

DEAR BEEN THERE: People who have spent a lifetime trying to please others may find your recommendations difficult to put into practice. Habits can become so entrenched that they are hard to break without coaching and positive reinforcement. That is why I advise those who feel constantly put upon to consider taking classes in assertiveness training.

Sudoku is a number-placing puzzle based on a 9x9 grid with several given numbers. The object is to place the numbers 1 to 9 in the empty squares so that each row, each column and each 3x3 box contains the same number only once. The difficulty level of the Conceptis Sudoku increases from Monday to Sunday.

IF JULY 4 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: You are very likely to develop helpful connections this summer and have plenty of enthusiasm for group activities. Your friendliness shines through and you compete fairly. Practical experience and expertise needs more polish, however, in order to achieve ambitions. October or November is the best time to put business, career, and financial plans into motion. But you can also wait until late December to make crucial decisions, because you may be presented with heaven-sent opportunities that solve your problems and needs, and can successfully make major decisions or launch new initiatives.

HOROSCOPE
 Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): No display of fireworks is ever the same. There is something unique in every Independence Day celebration. You might find that your special someone expects a great deal of extra attention tonight.

TAURUS (Apr. 20-May 20): You have a great yearning for affection and romance. However, the only fireworks you are likely to experience are going to be in the sky. Avoid misunderstandings with a special someone.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Beauty lights up the night skies, but the impact is lessened when holidays fall midweek. Focus on being understanding and sympathetic with your special someone. Don't be daunted by small blowups.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Love might mean just holding hands. Holiday pleasures might end up off center due to someone's unpredictable behavior. Good advice can come from a family friend who thinks highly of you.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Wave the red, white and blue. It won't take much effort to get into the holiday spirit today. Show your enthusiasm for anything out of the ordinary without overlooking routines and ordinary daily tasks.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You could be on the wrong end of the seasaw. You may think that a new romantic prospect who avoids intimacy is showing respect, but you must admit that you crave caresses and something more.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You can't pretend to be just an innocent bystander. There are times when you must stand for someone else's rights. Mars enters your sign today, so for a few weeks you might experience bursts of energy.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Getting along with others is easier said than done. Hurt feelings and misunderstandings are a possibility. One thing you can agree upon is that it is appropriate to honor the flag and country.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Don't mistake togetherness for intimacy. Friendships will fare better than passions. Take plenty of time getting to know someone thoroughly before hopping headlong into an intimate relationship.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Fanciful fireworks and bombs bursting in air might be just what the doctor ordered. They will remind you that what is important now just a fleeting experience. Promise only what you can deliver.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Don't give in to an impatient thirst for excitement. If money burns a hole in your pocket put it in the piggy bank before you spend it on a passing fancy. Take a rain check on a romantic request.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Your safe assumptions might be challenged. Watch the fireworks, but avoid setting any off within a relationship. Tender feelings may get trampled by your insistence on being the center of attention.
