New Fire Restrictions Start on Public Lands

BY KIMBERLEE KRUESI kkruesi@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • Fire officials will begin enforcing fire restrictions on state and federal lands now that wildfire danger remains high in parts of south-central Idaho.

Starting Monday, building, maintaining, attending or using a fire, campfire or stove fire will longer be allowed except within a designated recreation site. Smoking is also prohibited on state or federal lands unless you're in an enclosed vehicle, building or in an area at least three feet in diameter that is barren or cleared of wildfire materials.

The last time this level of fire restrictions was enforced was in 2007, said Kyli Gough, spokeswoman for the BLM. During that year, the Murphy Complex wildfire consumed 650,000 acres west of Rogerson, making it one of the worst fires on record in Idaho.

Gough said the ban will be in place until further notice. Fire restrictions cover an area south of U.S. Highway 20 to the Utah and Nevada border. This includes Twin Falls, Lincoln, Cassia, Minidoka, Jerome and Gooding counties and parts of Blaine and Camas counties that are south of the highway. Sections of Oneida and Power counties in the Minidoka Ranger District of the Sawtooth National Forest are also included in the restrictions.

Exceptions are allowed within city boundaries, and for people with written permission or who are conducting activities in designated areas where fire activity is allowed by written posted notice.

For a detailed map of the fire restrictions visit www.idahofireinfo.blm.gov/south/firerestrictions.h tml.

Recent Fire Activity

As thunder and lightning storms rolled in on Friday afternoon, mild rainfall helped keep wildfire damage to a minimum.

The storms may have sparked two wildfires.

West of Rogerson, lightning caused a 100-acre wildfire to ignite just south of Juniper Butte, said Kyli Gough, a spokeswoman for the BLM. Two engines and one water tender responded to the fire. Fire crews expect to control the fire by this afternoon.

Near Brown's Bench, BLM and Salmon Tract Rural Fire Protection District firefighters responded to a two-acre wildfire, Gough said.

"In both fires, the rain helped keep the fires at a smolder," she said.

Oakley's Cemetery Inscriptions Reflect Its History

LAURIE WELCH • TIMES • NEWS Keith Warr, former sexton of the Oakley cemeteries, picks up a tumbleweed Friday from a gravesite at the Oakley Cemetery.

OAKLEY • A couple of thousand marked graves scattered across five cemeteries hint at the winding tendrils of the Oakley Valley's deep roots.

For any who care to stop, the inscriptions on the stones whisper about a century of history. The gravestones that speak the loudest bear etchings worn away by harsh mountain winters and no one left to care.

The cemeteries sprang up as a necessity soon after the first settlers arrived in 1878, said Marge Woodhouse, treasurer for the Oakley Valley Historical Association. Mormons from Utah and ranchers were the first pioneers to see the valley and want call it home.

The Basin, Oakley, Marion, Island and Warm Springs Creek cemeteries sprang up to serve the needs of the various communities in the valley, said Woodhouse. At only two graves, Warm Springs Creek is the smallest.

Frank Carl Bedke, who came from Germany, was one of the first settlers in the valley and was laid to rest in the Basin in 1916.

"When you are walking through the cemeteries and looking at the markers you can tell a lot about the people," Woodhouse said. "The younger women probably died in Please see CEMETERY, A2

THE MARKET AT A GLANCE

U.S. Stocks Plunge after Weak June Jobs Report

NEW YORK (AP) • Investors abandoned stocks Friday after the U.S. government reported that only 80,000 jobs were created in June, the third straight month of weak hiring. The Dow Jones industrial average fell 124.20 points to close at 12,772.47. The loss wiped out the Dow's gain for the week. The reluctance of U.S. employers to add jobs shows that the economy is still struggling three years after the recession officially ended. An average of just 75,000 jobs were created every month in the April-June quarter.

Water Safety

Each year, more than 830 children, aged 14 and under die as a result of unintentional drowning. Drowning is the secondleading cause of unintentional death among children aged 1 to 4 years and children 10 to 14 years. For infants less than 1 year, drowning is the third leading cause of death. Most of these deaths occur in bathtubs, buckets or toilets.

WHERE, WHEN AND HOW?

Home swimming pools are the most common site for a drowning to occur for a child between the ages of 1 to 4 years. According to a national study of drowning-related incidents involving children, a parent or caregiver claimed to be supervising the child in nearly 9 out of 10 child drowningrelated deaths.

Between May and August, drowning deaths among children increase 89 percent over the remaining months of the year.

PROVEN INTERVENTIONS:

 Four-sided isolation fencing around home pools could prevent 50 to 90 percent of childhood drownings and neardrownings. When used properly, door alarms, pool alarms and automatic pool covers add extra protection.

 Between 1999 and 2003, it is estimated that 85 percent of boating drowning could have been prevented if the victim had been wearing a personal flotation device.

children are injured daily due to bicycle-related crashes. National estimates report that bicycle helmet use among child bicyclists ranges from 15 percent to 25 percent. Apart from the automobile, bicycles are tied to more childhood injuries than any other consumer product.

WHO?

It has been estimated that 75 percent of fatal head injuries among child cyclists could have been prevented with a bicycle helmet. Children are five times more likely to be injured in a bicyclerelated crash than older riders (15 years and older).

More children aged 5 to 14 are seen in hospital emergency rooms for injuries related to biking than any other sport.

PROVEN

INTERVENTIONS: The use of bicycle helmets by children ages 4 to 15 could prevent 135 to 155 deaths, between 39,000 and 45,000 head injuries, and between 18,000 and 55,000 scalp and face injuries annually.

childbirth and you can tell when the diseases and flu epidemics came through. And there are a lot of children's graves."

Island Cemetery was originally on an island in Goose Creek, when the creek – now dried up - flowed from Oakley to Burley.

Florence Wilson, who lived for only one day in August 1882, was one of the first buried there.

Keith Warr, 80, was the sexton for 13 years for the Oakley Valley Cemetery District before his retirement last year. The district cares for all of the cemeteries, except the one at Warm Springs Creek.

Friday, Warr walked around a family plot in the Oakley Cemetery and stooped to remove an errant tumble weed. Like most of the plots in the cemetery, it's been left to the natural prairie grasses and wildflowers.

Community members come out once a year to clean and care for the plots in the valley's cemeteries.

"I was really glad to take care of the cemeteries," said Warr, who lives a quartermile from the home he was born and raised in. "I have a lot of ancestors in these cemeteries."

JESSA MOSER • TIMES-NEWS

Warr's great-grandfather George Whittle also helped settle the valley and rests in the Oakley Cemetery beneath an ornately carved headstone – and between his two wives.

"He spent a little time in jail for polygamy," Warr said.

A few rows to the west, two white stone spires mark the graves of Daniel Cummins and John Wilson, victims of the Oakley Valley sheep- and cattleherder conflict, which was a microcosm of the battle for grazing land that played out across the West in the late 1800s.

A portion of the inscription depicts the tragedy and grief of those left behind. "Assassinated while on duty sadly in the early springtime," it reads.

Warr, who spent his years as caretaker looking at every marker, said it's hard not ponder about their lives.

"I think about the families and my own ancestors' trials and what they went through when they first came into this valley," Warr said.

Even death was hard, he said.

Warr said large equipment is now used to open and close graves at the cemeter ies. In the early days, it was backbreaking work made even more difficult by a layer of rock not far from the surface.

WENDELL • The Wendell City Council will hold an appeal hearing regarding a bid for wastewater construction on July 16.

During a special council meeting on June 27, Wendell awarded a $961,500 contract to Summit Excavation of Twin Falls to complete phase two of its wastewater project.

Summit's bid was the lowest among three bids collected but Boise's Western Construction is appealing the award, arguing the company did not follow Idaho law when completing its bid package.

Western Construction's bid came in at $971,338 and was the second-lowest price quote for the project, which includes work at the lagoon site.

"Western Construction is guaranteed the right for a hearing but after that we're not sure what comes next," Mayor Brad Christopherson said Thursday. "We'll have the hearing and then if we need to take further action we'll find out what those are."

The city received Western's formal protest on June 29 through the company's attorney, Jeff Sykes of Boise. Sykes argued that Summit's bid should be set aside and the next lowest bid (Western) be awarded the job because Summit failed to list a licensed plumbing contractor to disconnect the pumphouse from the sewer system and convert it for a supplemental irrigation system.

Awarding the bid was delayed a week so the city could investigate whether work to the pumphouse required a licensed contractor.

City Attorney Calvin Campbell issued an opinion to the city arguing the specific job did not need a licensed plumbing contractor, likening it to a demolition project.

"For example if the current pumphouse and its facility were to be demolished and replaced in its entirety there would be no need to have a plumber either demolish it or construct the new facility for purely irrigation purposes," Campbell wrote.

Christopherson said phase two is already several weeks behind schedule and further delays could mean the project won't be completed before winter.

"We have a narrow window of opportunity for seepage testing but we can't pull water from the canal while farmers are still using it, but we can't be so behind schedule to finish and then the water not be there for testing," Christopherson said. "It's going to be close."

Children, Teens Help at Idaho Horse Rescue

BY BRANDON MACZ

Moscow-Pullman Daily News

MOSCOW • When Randy and Rhonda Kent retired, they were hoping to settle down with a few riding horses and take it easy. But the abundance of neglected and abused horses in Latah County was a harsh reality they couldn't tolerate, they said, and other rescue facilities were already at maximum occupancy in their minds.

So the Kents started the Retired Equine And Care Habitat, using their pasture north of Deary to address the medical, nutritional and physical training needs of horses in need.

"Ours are a lot of law enforcement seizures, it's what we try to focus on," said Rhonda. "By the time we seize them, they're pretty bad."

"We do take in from the public, but it's got to be the right situation," Randy said.

There are 24 horses of various ages and stages of recovery from their sordid pasts at the R.E.A.C.H. facility, the older ones benefitting last weekend from several extra sets of hands coming from the Ponderosa 4-H group in Deary and members of the Washington State University's Center for Civic Engagement. Started just this year, the Ponderosa 4-H group consists of 14 members from kindergartners to high school seniors. Younger members gathered Saturday to learn about grooming horses and trimming their hooves.

"We try to get them to do community service once a month," said 4H leader Cathy Williams.

Emily Suswal, 8, jumped at every opportunity to brush a horse – a step ladder was required - and eventually got the opportunity to go for a ride.

"I like horses," she said. "They're nice. They're happy. ... I have chickens, though. They don't lay eggs yet, but they will."

Laura Chellson, 10, owns three horses, and has a soft spot for animals.

"I can't stand the commercial on TV about cats and dogs at the pound," she said.

Rhonda said while many horses are past their prime and unadoptable, R.E.A.C.H. has a respectable 40-percent turnover rate.

Mary Zuhn and her 15year-old daughter, Bekka, have three rescue horses they keep at their home in St. Paul, Minn., and while on vacation, they decided to drop by the Deary rescue facility after finding out about the organization online.

"We thought we'd come out and hang out and help," she said. "They're very nice people, and they do good stuff."

While WSU students with CCE are sparse in the summer, project leader Nick Montanari said he still gets out to the horse rescue when he can. Typically, students come out every weekend during the school year.

"I use to live on a farm and that's what really attracted me out here," he said as he braced a horses leg on his and began clipping its gnarly hoof. "Getting out from behind the desk and getting dirty, that's what I really want to do."

Another Board Member Resigns from Wendell Library

BY BLAIR KOCH For the Times-News

(Editor's note: Read an extended version of this story at Magicvalley.com.)

WENDELL • Another Wendell Library Board resignation was read into the record during Thursday's City Council meeting.

Mayor Brad Christopherson received Briana Low's letter on Tuesday. Although he had a few days to let the news sink in, the disappoint ment was obvious as he relayed Low's message to the community.

"I've decided to resign my position with the library board effective immediately. I'd like to thank all of the volunteers who were so generous with their time, energy and effort. I truly hope the library will be back on its feet quickly and that you can acquire a team that can successfully manage the library," Low wrote.

Low's is the latest resignation in the continuing drama that is the Sherburn Smith Memorial Library Board. Within the past month, director Suzanne O'Berry and board president Stephanie Green quit, board vice president Kali Lasater was removed by the council and member Octavio Saldana resigned after getting a job out of town.

When reached by phone Friday, remaining board member Carrie Bellum said for nearly two weeks, and discussing the city's next steps.

Christopherson said the city closed the library due to lack of personnel and no functioning board.

Hiring a library director is a function of the library board, so identifying and filling the library's governing body is a must.

Christopherson said a good board member would be someone willing to attend meetings, pay bills, give direction to the librarian and who then "stays out of the way."

He said part of the library's problems arose because board members volunteered at the library.

"I don't know if board members shouldn't or can't volunteer, but there seems to be problems when they do because librarians feel like they can't do their job and hurt feelings among other board members arise when they do," Christopherson said during a phone interview Thursday.

After O'Berry resigned in mid-June, Lasater said she continued volunteering at the library to make sure it stayed opened.

Christopherson wouldn't comment directly about why Lasater was removed from the board.

Adequate staff at the library is a dilemma, Christopherson admits, but not one the city can tackle head on.

"The city is still working is a board that is willing to cooperate and board members should do that," Green said. "When he asks for something, they should do it and the board should understand the vision comes from the city. Because without the city there would be no library."

Christopherson hopes a possible new library building will solve some of the problems.

"When you have 70 kids in there that's a great thing when it's for the Summer Reading Program, but you can't have that many kids just hanging out," Christopherson said. "We really do need a bigger facility ... it's a good problem to have."

The possible deal involves a facility swap trading a city/rural fire department building for a school district building.

"I think getting the bigger building will solve a lot of the problems," Christopherson said. "I've been working on it for two years. The building is about three times the size of our current library, which is about 1,800 square feet. It just isn't big enough to meet everyone's needs."

Right now, the school district is determining if the building's doors can be raised.

Trustee Cole Prestwich said the district planned to use the building for bus maintenance. If the door can't be raised, the buses won't fit and the building won't meet the district's

HAVE YOU BEEN CONVICTED OF A DRUG CHARGE?

If you, a friend, or a loved-one were convicted of a drug charge between 2003 (possibly earlier) and 2011, you may be able to get your case dismissed and/or record cleared, or even be released from probation/incarceration.

A recent investigation of several employees at the Idaho State Forensic Laboratory has revealed that certain employees were found to have violated procedures relating to the handling and auditing of controlled substances at the Pocatello lab from 2003 to 2011. Said violations were of such a serious nature that they may call into question the accuracy and integrity of the entire ISP Forensic Lab between 2003 and 2011. And, because of U.S. Supreme Court cases, Brady v. Maryland, U.S. v. Bagley and Giglio v. U.S., etc. these violations also call into question the legality of all resulting convictions.

If this information effects you, a friend, or a loved-one, please call Fuller Law Offices at 208-734-1602 or 1-800-967-1133 to schedule a free consultation.

IDAHO

Ore. Marijuana Finds Its Way to Idaho

BY NIGEL DUARA Associated Press

ON THE OREGON-IDAHO BORDER • Hurtling down I-84 with a bag of medical marijuana and no legal right to possess it, the 23-year-old Idaho man with the crooked grin drove out of Oregon, making a break for home.

But he was soon glancing at his rearview mirror as it filled with blue bursts from a cruiser's lights. He pulled over, studying his rearview, and watched as a very big Idaho State Police officer wearing a black Stetson walked his way.

The trooper said he smelled pot. The young man thought about lying, but didn't. He stepped out of the car, accepted a pat-down and a ticket and was sent on his way.

David Kosmecki was on the same trip dozens of others make on this hilly spit of four-lane asphalt every week, leaving Idaho to buy medical marijuana in Oregon. Police argue the number of travelers is more likely in the hundreds.

Even in Oregon, Kosmecki doesn't have legal access to pot, but a friend does, one who strolled into a border marijuana co-op and walked out with an ounce of Hindu Kush. In his home city of Kuna, Idaho, marijuana costs Kosmecki $300 per ounce and the quality is iffy. In Oregon, he gets highquality, sticky bud every time, and it's $60 cheaper.

More than a decade ago, voters made medical marijuana legal in Oregon, which critics say sent plentiful supplies into markets gray and black. They added a quirk unique to Oregon's law: Outof-staters can get in-state pot cards, too, as long as they have an Oregon doctor's signature. Across the border in Idaho, simple possession can mean a trip to jail.

The difference creates a kind of tectonic fault line where the states meet. At the epicenter of where it might break loose is Idaho State Police Trooper Justin Klitch.

Klitch, the trooper who arrested Kosmecki, is a sixyear veteran. His father served 30 years in the state police and his grandfather was a city cop in Ohio. Klitch face. But home beckoned.

He applied to other places, but turned down job after job. Finally, the Idaho State Police called.

Now, he has a month-old son of his own. He has earned professional accolades for making more DUI stops than any other trooper, and he prefers that to pot busts at the state line drunks kill people, he said.

"I'd take a drunk over a pound of dope any day of the week," Klitch said.

But pot possession is often what Klitch finds.

Forty percent of pot seizures in Idaho came from Oregon medical marijuana, according to Idaho State Police records. In Klitch's sector along the border, it was 53 percent.

Officially, only 196 people in Idaho have medical marijuana cards from Oregon, and their best hope for purchasing the drug is Bill Esbensen.

Esbensen and three cofounders opened the 45th Parallel marijuana cooperative in 2010, and its location in Ontario, Ore. about 5 miles from the border isn't a coincidence. Esbensen said he knows people from Idaho, Utah and Nevada need medical marijuana. "We have oncologists all over the state of Idaho and other states sending patients to our clinic," Esbensen said. "They're afraid to speak out in their state, but they're willing to send them over here?"

Eastern Oregon is not a traditional fit for a medical marijuana cooperative. Hours from Portland and sparsely populated, the eastern third of the state is part of one massive Congressional district, the only one in Oregon where Republicans outnumber Democrats.

Kosmecki, the 23-year-old arrested in Idaho, said his friend got his marijuana from Esbensen's establishment. While not surprised, Esbensen said there's nothing he can do about it. He compares his operation to a pharmacy. Once the prescription drugs go out the door, he has no further control.

Esbensen said he has raised two daughters, each in college, and sold a successful car dealership. With enough money to leave, Esbensen could relocate to a place friendlier to his lifestyle. But that, he says, would violate the trust he's established in the area, leaving behind hundreds of people who rely on him for marijuana. Now, he devotes all of his time to the clinic.

He said he knows of people who have moved to Oregon, just to make sure they're following the law. He also knows of several Idaho patients who regularly make what can be a harrowing journey across the border and back.

"It's like crossing the Berlin Wall. It's like going into another country."

People like Kendall Jeffs. When Klitch, the state trooper, looks for signs a driver is concealing something, he checks for sweaty palms, visibly-thumping heart, thrumming carotid artery.

Jeffs, 41, would be an easy mark. "I just tighten up;" she says, and indeed as the Idaho border approaches on I-84, her hands grip the steering wheel tighter. She breathes faster. Her toes curl. Her eyes widen.

Jeffs won't say how often she makes this run, nor will she reveal the route she typically uses. But traveling back from the 45th Parallel to her family farm in Idaho, she's visibly shaking. This, she says, happens

Pocatello

Revokes Day Care Center's License

The city's unusual step — the first time it's yanked a license — comes after a 4-year-old boy was abandoned on a park trip.

POCATELLO (AP) . City Council members in the eastern Idaho city of Pocatello have revoked the license of one of the region's largest daycare centers after police say workers left a 4-year-old boy alone at a park for about 90 minutes.

Councilman Roger Bray told the Idaho State Journal that Thursday's decision to pull Adventure for Kids' operating license - which effectively shuts it down marked the first time the city has taken such a measure.

"We have to set aside adult concerns and look at kids," Bray said.

About 70 children attend the daycare, and their parents now have 10 working days to find new daycare arrangements.

City leaders made the decision on the recommendation of the Pocatello Police Department, which is investigating the daycare owned and operated by Marianne Cowgill.

Police Capt. Jim Peterson said the department responded to a lost-child call June 13, after a 4year-old boy was found wandering around Alameda Park. Peterson said the daycare had taken kids to the park on a field trip, but left the boy behind when the rest of the group returned to the facility. He said the daycare workers had no idea the child was even missing until the boy's mother arrived that afternoon to pick him up.

"We have several issues were dealing with here," Peterson said.

The department also is investigating allegations that one of the adult workers at the daycare was unlicensed, and that a similar incident happened in 2007 when an unattended child was left sleeping in a van after a field trip.

Cowgill's attorney, Kyle Hansen of Idaho Falls, asked the council for a less harsh punishment, and said it was unfair to bring up the 2007 incident because the facts of that case are in dispute. He said Cowgill, who has operated the daycare for 16 years, understands how serious it was to leave a child behind and has taken steps to ensure it won't happen again.

"She takes that responsibility very seriously," Hansen said of his client.

Cowgill apologized to the council for leaving the child at the park and said her employees were overcome with regret.

Areva Could Delay Idaho Uranium Enrichment Project

BY JOHN MILLER

Associated Press

BOISE • Areva has yet to announce a financial partner to help build its proposed gas centrifuge uranium enrichment plant near Idaho Falls, raising the potential that construction on the $3 billion project will be delayed until 2014.

By then, the French-based company said Friday, its balance sheet will have recovered sufficiently to tackle the nuclear fuel facility independently.

Initially, Areva hoped to build in 2011, but deep losses scuttled those plans. The company began searching for a partner and pushed back building until 2013.

Spokesman Mike French said Friday that Areva continues to seek an investor to help with the project. If nobody suitable is found or steps forward, however, that would push construction back months more.

Since the facility's first phase will take about 3 1/2 years to complete, it wouldn't be done until least mid-2017, in that event.

Even so, Areva remains firmly committed to the Idaho Falls project, is continuing engineering work and is confident signed contracts with U.S. utilities for a "significant" share of the plant's projected enriched uranium output are intact, French said.

"We've worked with our utility customers and negotiated agreements that satisfy what their needs are, based on our strategy with moving this project forward," he said, from the company's U.S. offices in Bethesda, Md. "They are comfortable?

The French state-controlled nuclear giant lost more than $3 billion in 2011, a year plagued by management changes, a soured uranium mining venture and jitters following the earthquake and tsunami that caused a nuclear disaster in Japan.

Given Areva's shortfall and existing financial commitments including to complete a new uranium enrichment plant in France, it decided in January it didn't have the capital to stick to its initial Idaho Falls construction schedule.

That meant workers from URS Nuclear, the company due to help build the plant, had to be diverted outside of Idaho, including a streetcar project in Atlanta.

Areva has already secured a federal license to build the plant and has received a $2 billion loan guarantee from the U.S. Department of Energy, which French said wouldn't be endangered by pushing the project back until 2014.

"We've briefed the department on everything we're doing," he said.

The Idaho Falls region is banking on thousands of construction jobs from the project to help bolster an economy that's already anchored by the Idaho National Laboratory nuclear energy research station.

There would be another 700 permanent positions, once operations commence.

State economic development officials said they've been kept abreast of Areva's construction projections and are aware of the potential for a 2014 start.

Even if building is delayed again at the site on former agricultural land in the desert west of Idaho Falls, Department of Commerce Director Jeffery Sayer says that doesn't give him pause about prospects of the plant being completed.

"That's the encouraging part, we're hearing strong indicators they want to move forward, it's just a matter of financing," Sayer said. "It's a matter of time and money."

Idaho Falls Resident Shoots Home Intruder

IDAHO FALLS (AP) • Police in eastern Idaho are investigating after an Idaho Falls man shot and injured an intruder in his home.

Falls Police Idaho spokeswoman Joelyn Hansen says 32-year-old Charles Hopkins told police he was sleeping in his basement early Thursday morning when his dogs began barking and woke him up. Hansen says that's when Hopkins apparently grabbed his pistol and went upstairs to investigate, where he found an intruder using his bathroom.

Hopkins said he told the intruder not to move but the man charged him, so he shot the man twice in his left leg, after which the intruder fled.

Hopkins' 15-year-old daughter called police, and the responding officers found a 22-year-old Idaho Falls man with gunshot wounds nearby.

Farm Bill's Food-Stamp Cuts Raise Alarms

BY ALAN BJERGA Bloomberg News.

WASHINGTON • A House Agriculture Committee plan to push cuts in farm spending beyond levels the Senate approved relies mostly on reductions in food stamps, alarming nutrition activists.

Of $35.1 billion that would be saved over a decade under the draft plan released Thursday, about $16.1 billion would come from food stamps, while growers of corn, cotton and other crops would see subsidies reduced by about $14.1 billion, according to congressional estimates. The cuts in nutrition assistance would be about four times more than those included in legislation the Senate passed last month and about half the size of an earlier House plan that would have dropped 1.8 million people from assistance rolls.

"It's pretty disturbing these are needy people" being targeted, said Ellen Vollinger, food-stamp lobbyist with the Food Research and Action Center, a Washington-based antihunger advocacy group. "They're living at or near poverty, and there doesn't seem to be a connection to that reality."

About 46.2 million people - more than one in seven Americans - received food-stamps in April, the last month for which statistics are available. That was down 0.7 percent from the record in December. Funding for the program reached a record $75.7 billion last year, double the level of four years earlier. This expenditure plus record farm profits are making the agriculture bill - a five-year reauthorization of U.S. Department of Agriculture programs - a target for budget cutters.

Under the House proposal, which will be considered by the agriculture committee July 11, subsidies would fall by about $14 billion over 10 years, or $1 billion less than the Senate plan. That legislation calls for a total of $23.6 billion in savings across all programs.

The House plan, which cuts farm subsidies and crop insurance by 9.2 percent and food stamps by 2 percent, is "reform-minded, fiscally responsible policy that is equitable for farmers and ranchers in all regions," Rep. Frank Lucas, R-Okla., said in an emailed statement.

BY DONNA GORDON BLANKINSHIP Associated Press

SEATTLE • Although more than half the states are now exempt from the toughest requirements of the federal "No Child Left Behind" education law, Education Secretary Arne Duncan said Friday his goal remains to help Congress fix the law, not to sidestep the stalled overhaul effort.

The Obama administration's announcement Friday that Washington and Wisconsin have been granted waivers from the education law brought to 26 the number of states now free from many of its requirements.

The Idaho State Department of Education submitted a waiver in February, but it hasn't been approved. If approved, schools could be held accountable under a new five-star system.

Allowing waivers has brought a level of creativity to education reform that was unexpected when Duncan and President Barack Obama opened the waiver process nearly a year ago.

Congress could come up with a great plan for reauthorizing the federal law by adopting the best ideas from the states' waiver applications, Duncan said at a news conference Friday.

Lawmakers remain at a stalemate over the long overdue rewrite of the widely criticized law, which was a signature accomplishment of the George W. Bush administration. Obama sent Congress an overhaul proposal two years ago.

Making the law formally known as the Elementary and Secondary Education Act irrelevant is not the Obama administration's goal, Duncan said.

"Our Plan A is to reauthorize. We stand ready to reauthorization if it's on Monday or next week or six months from now," he said.

The Education Department began granting waivers in February in exchange for promises from states to improve how they prepare and evaluate students and their teachers. The executive action by Obama is part of an ongoing effort to act on his own when Congress is rebuffing him.

"A strong, bipartisan reauthorization of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act remains the best path forward in education reform, but as 26 states have now demonstrated, our kids can't wait any longer for Congress to act," Duncan said in a statement released Friday.

The 10-year-old law requires all students to achieve proficient math and reading scores by 2014, a goal that many educators say is impossible.

Members of both parties say No Child Left Behind is broken, but they have been unable to agree on how to fix it. While the law has been praised for focusing on the performance of minorities, low-income students, English language learners and special education students, it has also labeled thousands of schools as "failing" because of the stringent ways it measures success.

U.S., Allies Press Assad as Top Syrian General Flees

BY BRADLEY KLAPPER Associated Press

PARIS • U.S. Secretary of State Hillary Rodham Clinton on Friday hailed an accelerating wave of defections in President Bashar Assad's inner circle as the United States and its international allies pleaded once again for global sanctions against the Syrian regime. Frustrated by the slow pace of diplomacy, Clinton lambasted Russia and China for standing in the way.

Speaking after a 100-nation conference in Paris, Clinton said Syria's "regime insiders and the military establishment are starting to vote with their feet" by abandoning the four-decade Assad dynasty. She spoke after Western officials reported top Assad aide aide Brig. Gen. Manaf Tlass had left the country.

"Those with the closest knowledge of Assad's actions and crimes are moving away," Clinton told reporters. "We think that is a very promising development. It also raises questions for those remaining in Damascus, who are still supporting this regime."

Tlass' departure from Syria provided welcome news for the U.S. and its European and Arab partners after another gathering of the "Friends of Syria" group that demonstrated the international community's continued inability to end 16 months of bloodshed that activists say has killed some 14,000 people.

The defection of Tlass, a member of the elite Republican Guards and a son of a former defense minister, is the first major crack in the upper reaches of Assad's regime, which has remained largely cohesive throughout the uprising.

Tlass has not spoken publicly since his defection and his whereabouts remain unknown, though French Foreign Minister Laurent Fabius announced that the general was en route to France, where Tlass' sister lives. Fabius later backtracked, saying he was not sure of Tlass' final destination.

Even those closest to him "are starting to realize that you cannot support a butcher like Mr. Bashar Assad," Fabius said.

WASHINGTON • U.S. troops in Afghanistan have quietly achieved one small but important victory over the past year: They are finding and avoiding more improvised explosive devices, or IEDs, than a year ago.

That's thanks to a surge in training, equipment and intelligence.

Lt. Gen. Michael Barbero is director of the Pentagon's effort to defeat the bombs. Barbero says half as many bombs hit their mark from January through March as during the same time last year.

Bomb-planters have picked up the pace again during the summer months, planting explosives along roadsides or footpaths.

But new figures released to The Associated Press show a slow, steady decline over the past three years in the effectiveness of IEDs, which had been the leading cause of death and injury in Afghanistan.

$?(&! What Did that Politician just Say?

BY JENNIFER PELTZ

Associated Press

NEW YORK • What the $?&(! is going on with our politicians?

The mayors of New York and Philadelphia and the governor of New Jersey let loose with a few choice vulgarities over the past two weeks in otherwise G-rated public settings, including a town-hall meeting and a City Hall event.

And all three men knew full well the microphone was on.

While foul language has been uttered in politics before, the blue streak is making some wonder whether it reflects the coarsening effects of pop culture in this reality-TV era of "Jersey Shore" and "The Real Housewives," a decline in public discourse, a desire by politicians to come across as average Joes, or just a really hot summer.

First there was famously blunt New Jersey Gov. Chris Christie branding a lawmaker "one arrogant S.O.B." at a town hall last month (and using some stronger epithets in discussing his passion for the music, though not the politics, of Bruce Springsteen in an interview published in The Atlantic this month.)

Then New York Mayor Michael Bloomberg, apparently having trouble stomaching a slew of puns in his prepared remarks for Tuesday's contestant weigh-in at City Hall before the Fourth of July hot dog-eating contest, chuckled, "Who wrote this s—-?" to guffaws from the crowd.

Then it was Philadelphia Mayor Michael Nutter's turn on Thursday at a news conference where he discussed a shooting a few blocks from the center of the city's July Fourth celebration. He said he wasn't going to let the city's image be harmed by "some little ass— 16-year-old."

"My sense is: Because they want to appear to be in tune with popular culture, politicians feel free to express themselves in profane ways," said Rutgers University political scientist Ross K. Baker. And he finds that troubling: "I honestly do believe that, in aping the coarseness of popular culture, people in public life are really dragging us into a discourse of fang and claw."

President Harry S. Truman was criticized for his use of such salty language – for his time – as "hell" and "damn." And many Americans were shocked by Richard Nixon's liberal use of profanities on the Watergate tapes, which made "expletive deleted" a pop-culture catchphrase.

In more recent years, then-candidate George W. Bush was caught on what he didn't realize was a live microphone describing a reporter as a "major-league ass -," and Vice President Dick Cheney hurled the F-word at Vermont Sen. Patrick Leahy on the Senate floor.

In 2010, Vice President Joe Biden was heard using the F-word on live television in a whispered congratulation to President Barack Obama at the signing of his health care bill.

CHEERS & JEERS

JEERS to another year of struggling to pay for fireworks. By all accounts, this year's 20-minute fireworks display was a crowd hit. Even though it was a couple of minutes shorter that prior years, there were lots of surprises.

The problem this year was that raising the money to fund the $1,000-per-minute fireworks display was well-publicized fiasco.

The problem, said pyrotechnics specialist Neil Chrstensen, is the same every year. Everyone expects others to pay for it.

While the Fourth of July funding trouble is still on everyone's mind, now is a good time to sit down and examine what will be done for next year so we aren't singing the same chorus next June. If and when the community's help is needed, let us know well before it's time to hit the panic button.

CHEERS to the city of Twin Falls for its showing at the Association of Idaho Cities Conference in Boise. The city won five awards. The awards were for improving water quality, the city's recycling program, the city's five-year budget forecasting model, the Chobani project and the arsenic-reduction project. Congratulations.

CHEERS to the Magic Valley and Sun Valley firefighters who spent the Fourth of July far from home, battling blazes in Pocatello, Nevada, Colorado and Alaska.

Firefighters from Sun Valley, Hagerman and Minidoka County helped to fight and then mop up the 1.038-acre-fire near Pocatello. Twin Falls firefighters were in Wyoming and Utah this week fighting wildfires.

And it's only the beginning of July. Thanks for all you do to keep lives and property safe at home and around the West.

Libyan Election: Winning Means Standing out in Crowd ^{BY NANCY A.} YOUSSEF

McClatchy Newspapers

TRIPOLI, Libya • Shukri Baker's notion of politics — like most Libyans' was once limited to the four-decade push to get rid of former Libyan leader Moammar Gadhafi, in Baker's case as an underground organizer during last year's uprising that led to Gadhafi's fall.

On Saturday, Baker will experience an overdose of democracy during Libya's first election in more than 50 years. He is one of 158 candidates for three seats in a district of 300,000 people. Baker is one of 4,000 candidates vying for 200 parliamentary seats.

His job for the last month as a candidate has not been to sell his views or his vision for Libya, but to stand out in the crowd.

With so many candidates running in such a short election cycle, a vote slated to redefine Libyan politics in the post-Gadhafi era has very little to do with political vision. The winning candidates will largely consist of those with the most posters, the largest tribes, the best social network or the most number of friends, Baker and other parliamentary candidates said.

Farm Parody of 'Sexy and I Know It' Goes Viral

BY ROXANA HEGEMAN Associated Press

WICHITA, Kan. • Kansas State University student Greg Peterson and some friends were unwinding at a drive-in restaurant when LMFAO's song "Sexy and I Know It" came on the radio. He groaned.

But as the chorus droned on, the 21-year-old found inspiration. He switched "sexy" to "farming" as he began rapping. Then he started coming up with lyrics. It would be fun, he thought, to do a video parody with his brothers when he returned home to the family farm in central Kansas.

Peterson said the brothers aimed the video at their city friends on Facebook because they "hardly knew anything about the farm." They ended up educating the world. "I'm Farming and I Grow It" video has become an Internet sensation with more than 3.2 million views since it was posted June 25 on YouTube. Its success has been hailed by farm groups, documented by newspapers and even won the brothers a whirlwind trip to New York City for a television appearance on Fox News Channel's "Fox & Friends."

Peterson said he and his family have been a little bit overwhelmed by all the attention and he's doing "some normal things" now to keep sane.

"I am just trying to rest my brain a little bit and get back to, you know, this is reality," he said by cellphone. "This is something I can understand, whereas when I was in New York, everything was just hitting my mind, and it was kind of like, 'I can't believe this, I can't believe this.'" State University senior isn't the first to parody LMFAO's club hit. Spoofs include "Elmo and I Know It," which features the popular "Sesame Street" character, "I'm Average and I Know It," and "Santa and I Know It."

Peterson's 3:32-minute video begins at the break of dawn with him and his brothers, Nathan, 18, and Kendal, 15, walking across a field of golden wheat that sways gently in the wind. The scenes then shift rapidly to the song's beat, showing the brothers doing chores, driving combines and tractors and jumping on hay bales. It ends with the three walking off into the sunset across a field where the wheat has been harvested.

DARPA has tested highly experimental versions of a rocket-launched unmanned glider designed to fly at speeds 20 times the speed of sound, or Mach 20. The goal is to give the U.S. a defense capability of reaching any spot on Earth in an hour.

But such aircraft have to endure blast-furnace heat and require extraordinary controls. specially designed to spray fire retardant from the back of U.S. military C-130 cargo planes has some experts worried about the future viability of a program that has helped fight wildfires for 40 years.

The Modular Airborne Firefighting System is a bussized device that can be shoved into the belly of a cargo plane and then used to spray retardant, or slurry, at 3,000 gallons in less than 5 seconds. The $4.9 million device's only manufacturer, Sacramento, Calif.-based Aero Union, went out of Guard and one reserve unit in Wyoming, Colorado, North Carolina and California. Wyoming's MAFFS have been deployed as far away as Indonesia. Last year, MAFFS C-130s flew to wildfires in Arizona, New Mexico, Texas, Oregon and Mexico. They've been critical again this year against wildfires in Colorado, Montana, Wyoming and South Dakota.

"Thank God we have them. Can you imagine if we didn't have them?" said Tony Morris with the Wildfire Research Network, a Pacific Palisades, Calif., group Aero Union closed after the U.S. Forest Service canceled a contract worth a guaranteed minimum $14.5 million a year for firefighting services by six P-3 Orion air tankers. The Forest Service said Aero Union wasn't keeping up with inspections for those planes.

Baby Beluga Whale's Rescue in Alaska Marks a Hopeful Milestone

BY LAURA J. NELSON Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES • The two Alaskan fishermen had stopped to examine a bald eagle when they noticed something sleek and gray in the Bristol Bay surf: a baby whale in the shallows, faintly whistling and clicking.

The beluga whale, already dehydrated and disoriented, soon swam away, but then circled back to shore.

The fishermen began making phone calls. In almost no time, marine specialists raced in. The Alaska SeaLife Center — a research and rehabilitation organization — grounded local flights, then settled the whale calf on an air mattress, draped him in wet towels and airlifted him toward safety.

"It was a nail-biting hour and a half," SeaLife President and Chief Executive Tara Riemer Jones told the Los Angeles Times. "They thought they lost him a couple times."

But the baby beluga is a fighter, his handlers say. He survived the June 18 rescue and continues to recuperate, marking the first successful American rescue of a baby beluga whale on record.

Such a recovery is so rare that teams from around the country — including the Shedd Aquarium in Chicago, the Georgia Aquarium in Atlanta and SeaWorld in San Diego — have flown in to help with the calf's around-the-clock feedings and care. The efforts cost more than $2,000 a day, Jones estimates.

The newborn was most likely separated from his mother during a fierce windstorm off the southwestern coast of Alaska, Jones said, and never drank her milk. A baby mammal's first feedings provide antibodies that build a strong immune system. The beluga now has little to no protection against disease.

Recovery from the trauma of starting life alone in a big ocean may take months, Jones said. Typically, baby whales stay with their mothers for two years.

"Just like a baby in the NICU, it can go either way," Jones said. "He's on the path, but not out of the woods."

The calf was underweight, dehydrated and hypoglycemic when he was checked into the pool. Feedings through a stomach tube and a bottle, when he takes it, have brought the 5-foot calf's weight up to 115 pounds. He has begun to tentatively whistle and click again through his blowhole, the cetacean version of a newborn's first wails.

Until his weight improves and his immune system stabilizes, two marine mammal workers remain with the calf at all times. To keep him alert and entertained, they use the whale version of pool toys: foam noodles, plastic kelp and weighted balls.

When he's tired, he swims slowly, one side of his brain asleep. When he's alert, he darts in circles around his handlers, nuzzling them with his rubbery skin, his broad nose stretched in what looks like a smile.

Two Dead as Violent Storm Lashes Great Smokies

BY ERIK SCHELZIG Associated Press

TOWNSEND, Tenn. • Crews spent Friday clearing trees and reaching stranded visitors at Great Smoky Mountains National Park in Tennessee, a day after violent thunderstorms swept through the popular tourist spot, killing at least two people and injuring several others.

The storms hit Thursday evening at the west end of the 500,000-acre, densely forested reserve on the Tennessee-North Carolina line. The storms then moved down the mountains to the Tennessee River Valley.

At Abrams Creek Campground, a tree fell into a swimming hole, killing 41-year-old Rachael Burkhart, of Boats and covered docks litter the shore after a sever storm Thursday evening at the Mountain Cove Marina on Friday in Sevier County Tenn. No injuries were reported.

Corryton, Tenn., park officials said. The same tree struck a family, including a 7-year-old girl, who was unconscious when pulled from the water, but revived after her mother performed CPR. The father suffered vertebrae fractures, multiple broken ribs and a collapsed lung and the mother was injured less seriously.

Carole Cooper came upon the scene when she was returning to her private cabin nearby after swimming with friends.

Campers helped bring the 7year-old to Cooper's SUV, where Cooper performed first aid. Meanwhile Cooper's friends, one of whom is a physician, went to the creek to try to help Burkhart and the girl's father.

Cooper used her OnStar satellite communications service to call for help, but with the roads blocked, emergency workers had to walk in to the campsite, she said. Her vehicle became a makeshift command post as the rescue workers used her OnStar to communicate with other first responders.

"We were many hours with the injured because we couldn't get them out," she said.

After about four or five hours, enough trees had been cleared that emergency workers could drive Cooper's SUV partway out of the park, but they still had to walk the injured on stretchers to waiting ambulances.

The girl and her father were airlifted to a Knoxville hospital. Their conditions were not available Friday.

Also killed in the park was Ralph Frazier, 50, of Buford, Ga., who was riding a motorcycle when a falling limb struck him in the head, park officials said. His passenger was uninjured.

California OKs Funding for High-speed Rail Line

BY JUDY LIN Associated Press

SACRAMENTO, Calif. California lawmakers approved billions of dollars Friday in construction financing for the first segment of what would be the nation's first dedicated high-speed rail line, eventually connecting Los Angeles and San Francisco.

The state Senate voted 21-16 on a party-line vote after intense lobbying by Gov. Jerry Brown, Democratic leaders and labor groups.

The bill authorizes the state to begin selling $2.6 billion in voter-approved bonds to build an initial 130-mile stretch in the Central Valley. That would allow the state to collect about $3.2 billion in federal funding that could have been rescinded if lawmakers failed to act Friday.

Critics call the bullet train a boondoggle, but supporters hailed the vote as the start of a much-needed infrastructure project. The bill also includes about $1.9 billion in funds for local rail projects.

The bill, which passed the state Assembly, now heads to the governor. The final cost of the completed project from Los Angeles to San Francisco would be $68 billion.

"This is a big vote," Senate President Pro Tem Darrell Steinberg said before lawmakers took the action. "In the era of term limits, how many chances do we have to vote for something this important and long-lasting?"

Dan Richard, chairman of the California High-Speed Rail Authority, which is managing the project, said California would have lost billions of dollars in federal aid if the Senate failed to pass the bill before adjourning Friday for a monthlong recess. Richard said California entered a contract that called for the federal government to provide money for building the Central Valley segment if the state also put up its share.

The bill allows the state to begin selling bonds to finance the first 130 miles of track from Madera to Bakersfield.

California was able to secure more federal aid than expected after Florida, Ohio and Wisconsin turned down money.

Onetime Michael Jackson Attorney Loses License

LOS ANGELES (AP) • Brian Oxman, who was once an attorney for Michael Jackson, will no longer be able to practice law in California.

The California Supreme Court has denied an appeal of a state bar ruling that found Oxman and his wife mixed clients' and personal funds to evade creditors. Oxman's wife is his law partner.

The state bar said Ox-man was disciplined previously and that was among reasons for seeking revocation of his license.

The allegations against Oxman did not involve the late pop star or his family.

Oxman was on Michael Jackson's molestation trial defense team until being dismissed in 2005. He later represented the singer's father and appeared on talk shows as a legal expert.

U.N.: Peacekeeper Killed in Congo

BY SALEH MWANAMILONGO

Associated Press

KINSHASA, Congo • The United Nations said a peacekeeper in Congo was killed by an exploding shell as rebels allegedly backed by Rwanda made major advances in the country's volatile east, taking a border crossing into Uganda and threatening a strategic town.

Panicked residents were fleeing the town of Rutshuru on Friday night amid reports that the rebels had advanced within shelling distance, according to a statement from the North Kivu Civil Society. Fears were heightened by the evacuation of U.N. and independent aid agencies, followed in the late afternoon by the retreat of Congolese army soldiers, it said.

The Indian peacekeeper was killed overnight on Thursday as fighters from the M23 rebel group attempted to take the town of Bunagana, said Madnodje Mounoubai, the United Nations spokesman in Congo.

"I confirm the death of a peacekeeper of Indian origin working for the United Nations mission in Congo," he said. "He was hit by shrapnel from an exploding shell during an attack by the M23 mutineers in Bunagana last night."

Congo's two-year-long peace was shattered in April when an army unit led by Gen. Bosco Ntaganda defected.

Yahoo, Facebook Strike Patent Truce

BY BARBARA ORTUTAY AND MICHAEL LIEDTKE

Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO • Facebook and Yahoo have agreed to settle a months-long patent dispute, averting a potentially expensive battle over the technology running two of the Internet's most popular destinations.

In dropping the lawsuits, the companies agreed to license their patents to each other and form an advertising and content-sharing alliance that expands their existing partnership. Friday's settlement involves no exchange of money.

Now that the antagonism is dissolving into an accord that could benefit both companies, the hundreds of millions of Web surfers who use both Yahoo and Facebook should find even more common ground on the two services.

The advertising alliance could help Yahoo recover some of the revenue that it has been losing as marketers shift more of their spending to a larger and more engaged audience on Facebook's online social network. Facebook, in turn, gains the opportunity to show the ads tailored to fit the individual interests of its 900 million users in other heavily trafficked areas besides its own website.

The truce ends a conflict provoked by Yahoo's shortlived CEO, Scott Thompson, who was dumped from the job two months ago after misinformation on his official biography raised questions about his integrity.

So far 0-3 in major finals, without claiming even one set, Murray can become the first British man to collect any Grand Slam title since Fred Perry won Wimbledon and the U.S. Championships in 1936. "Everyone loves Roger at Wimbledon, but a majority of people are going to want to see Andy win this time. ... They can inspire Andy. They can pick him up. But at the same time, they might make him feel like he's pulling all the hopes and dreams of a nation on his shoulders. That's a lot to deal with," Sampras said in a telephone interview. "And he has to play Roger Federer, so he'll have his hands full."

TWIN FALLS • Friday's rain couldn't postpone the Twin Falls Cowboys' hit parade, just delay it.

After seeing their scheduled doubleheader scrubbed in favor of a single nine-inning game, the Cowboys cranked out 10 hits and capitalized on shaky Idaho Falls Royals pitching to run away with a 13-3 win in Class

A action at Bill Ingram Field.

Twin Falls got production from top to bottom in its lineup, getting hits from eight of the nine slots in the order. None was bigger than cleanup hitter Wyatt Doyle's lone hit, a three-run single that snapped a 2-2 fourthinning tie and saw the Cowboys race into the distance.

to speed school or something," quipped Doyle, who is also a lineman on the Twin Falls High School football team. "When I hit it I didn't think it was going to do anything, and I definitely didn't think it would score all three runs. But we just go hard all the time, because we want to make it harder for them than for us."

Doyle went 1-for-4 and drove in four runs, while four other Cowboys drove in at least one run.

That was more than enough support for Robert Montoya, who got into the fifth before giving way to Cody Root.

Root settled in almost immediately, striking out six - including five in a six-batter stretch spanning the sixth to eighth innings - and walking just one.

Serena Close to Capping Comeback

ASSOCIATED PRESS

WIMBLEDON, England • More than once during the past fortnight, Serena Williams has won an important point at Wimbledon and then returned to the baseline, her clenched fist leading the way.

The ferocity of the gesture is understandable, given the obstacles she has beaten back in the past couple of years.

A succession of health issues led to a long layoff that forced Williams to mount a career comeback, and she'll try to cap it Saturday when she plays Agnieszka Radwanska, the first Polish player to reach a Grand Slam final since 1939.

Williams seeks her 14th major title, and would tie her sister Venus with a fifth win at Wimbledon.

"I'm so happy to be playing," she said. "I've been through so much in the past year or two years, it has been unbelievable."

This week Radwanska has been ailing herself, battling an upper respiratory illness that makes it difficult to speak and forced her to cancel a news conference Friday.

"I will do whatever it takes to make sure I'm ready to play the best I can," she said in a statement.

older sister With Venus' fortunes in decline as she deals with an autoimmune disease, some speculated the family might never win another major title.

Now, with one more victory, Wimbledon will again become the Williams Open. Serena, Venus or both have reached the final in 11 of the past 13 tournaments. They've combined to win nine titles at the All England Club, and the sisters will try for their fifth Wimbledon doubles title on Saturday.

While Serena's a familiar finalist, her perspective these days is different.

"I have so much appreciation for every moment on the court," she said. "I really take pride in playing, especially playing such big, amazing tournaments like this. I just want to do the absolute best that I can at all moments."

After scares in the third and fourth rounds, Williams has lately been close to her absolute best. She eliminated defending champion Petra Kvitova in the quarterfinals, then defeated reigning Australian Open champion Victoria Azarenka on Thursday, winning both times in straight sets.

"It's a different Serena we see now," said 18-time Grand Slam champion Chris Evert, an analyst for ESPN. "We haven't seen Serena play as well as she has these last two matches since before she hurt her foot. She has great power and movement, and the confidence she needs to go with that."

Kenseth Wins Pole at Daytona

ASSOCIATED PRESS

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. • Daytona 500 winner Matt Kenseth will start from the pole Saturday night at Daytona International Speedway, where he'll try to pull off a season sweep.

No driver since Bobby Allison in 1982 has won both NASCAR races at Daytona in the same season, but Kenseth thinks he has a good chance. The restrictor-plate package at Roush Fenway Racing is powerful, and its engines have been strong all season: Roush driver Carl Edwards opened the season by winning the pole for the Daytona 500.

"That'd be pretty cool," Kenseth said about tying Allison. "I never thought, especially early in my career the way speedway went and I don't feel like I'm particularly good at it and never thought I'd be able to win. So it's pretty neat. Certainly I think for our team, our confidence is high."

earn the top starting spot. It's the first pole of the season for the series points leader, and his first pole in 26 races at Daytona.

Tony Stewart was second, turning a lap at 192.361 in a Chevrolet, but his time was thrown out by NASCAR after the session. NASCAR said an open cooling hose was found pointed inside the cockpit - the same violation discovered earlier Friday after Austin Dillon's pole-winning run in the Nationwide Series.

Dillon had to forfeit his pole and will start at the back of the field in Friday night's race. Stewart, the three-time series champion, will start in the back of Saturday night's Sprint Cup race.

Stewart's teammate, Ryan Newman, qualified third at 192.353.

"I think the biggest advantage of us qualifying well is we've got a better chance of missing whatever happens," Newman said. "If there's a crash early in the race, there's a better chance of it being behind us."

Kasey Kahne qualified fourth and was followed by Greg Biffle, Kenseth's teammate.

Jeff Gordon was sixth, followed by Bill Elliott in a Turner Motorsports entry. Casey Mears was eighth, AJ Allmendinger was the highest qualifying Dodge at ninth and Penske Racing teammate Brad Keselowski rounded out the top 10.

Keselowski, the winner at Talladega this year, likes his chances Saturday night.

"Our car is one of the fastest race cars that I've ever driven," Keselowski said. "It's fast. We just need to keep all the fenders on it and go get 'em at the end."

Denny Hamlin, who sat out of all activity Thursday because of a bad back, qualified his Joe Gibbs Racing car. He'll start 24th and is not planning to have a driver on stand-by.

Paul Leaves First Practice With Thumb Injury

ASSOCIATED PRESS

LAS VEGAS • The U.S. men's basketball team held its first practice Friday, and there was a quick reminder of the rocky run-up to the London Games.

Chris Paul was forced to leave the opening day of training camp to get an Xray after hurting his thumb. The Americans don't believe the injury is serious, USA Basketball chairman Jerry Colangelo calling it a tweak of a previous injury, and they hope Paul can practice Saturday.

That would be some rare good news for a team has been severely weakened by injuries. Dwight Howard, Derrick Rose, Dwyane Wade and Chris Bosh all were forced to pull out, leaving the Americans with 15 players vying for 12 spots. The roster will be announced Saturday night.

Colangelo said he would discuss the roster with the surpassed Federer in the rankings. But after losing six of his last seven matches against Djokovic, all on clay or hard courts, Federer had the upper hand on grass, the first time in 27 career meetings they've played each other on that surface.

"People were like, 'How are we going to survive a Wimbledon final without you?"' Federer joked about his earlier-than-usual exits in 2010 and 2011. "For me, it was no problem. I went on vacation and relaxed. Of course, it feels great to be in the Wimbledon final."

No need to tell that to Murray.

Not since Bunny Austin in 1938 had someone representing Britain won a men's semifinal at Wimbledon — until, that is, Murray hit a forehand return winner that clipped a sideline to eliminate No. 5 Jo-Wilfried Tsonga of France 6-3, 6-4, 3-6, 7-5. It was a thrill-aminute match, with both players smearing their

"A big relief," Murray said. "It was a very emotional end to the match. I've just got to try to keep it together for the final."

He had lost in the semifinals each of the past three years, part of an 0-11 rut for British men in the final four. For decades, the locals who love their tennis dealt with the angst of seeing their players come so close, yet so far.

"He's got sort of one monkey off the nation's back with the first finalist in 74 years, but I think a good opportunity to kill two birds with one stone," said Tim Henman, a Brit who lost in four semifinals from 1998-2002, twice to Sampras. "It seems like it could be destiny."

Even Prime Minister David Cameron weighed in on what he called the "great news."

"I'll be watching the final on Sunday and like the rest of the country, will be getting right behind Andy Murray," Cameron said in a statement. "I wish him the best of luck."

coaching staff on Friday night but would put off any judgments until after Saturday's practice.

"Tonight we'll have some deliberations about what took place today, but we're still not making the final decision until we practice tomorrow," he said. "We told the players we were going to do that and we're not going to change."

You want a defensive specialist, it's Iguodala. You want another guy with length who can shoot the ball and run the court, it's Rudy Gay."

What the Americans really want is another big body, having lost their 2008 center rotation with the absences of Howard and Bosh.

James and Carmelo Anthony even could see time at center, which would create offensive mismatches for the Americans but would leave them undersized on defense.

The need for size has Colangelo intrigued by Davis, the shot-blocking college player of the year who led Kentucky to the national title. But he's not ready to go full speed yet after hurting himself less than a week ago while working out with the Hornets, leaving him frustrated but eager.

asphalt, the drainage. I'm trying to break into consulting now that I'm old and decrepit. It's not so taxing?

Ultimately, the purpose of every track, whether it's an entirely new facility or a resurfaced one, is about performance and health. The tricky thing is that both conditions can't always be satisfied.

As Stone and Grindstaff both explained, track performance improves as the surface gets harder. That's why Stone's efforts at Oregon were a one-shot deal – as soon as the Trials were over, a more forgiving surface was installed.

Obviously, a high school does not have the kind of money to do that with its track. The new surface at Twin Falls, which is actually two coats of rubber, is more forgiving on runners' legs, but yields slower times. At the same time, the "squishiness" - Grindstaff's term - is easier on jumpers, especially triple jumpers.

"It saves on kids with shin splints and things like that," Grindstaff said. "The harder the surface, the more shin splints you have. This new surface will be good for our kids to train on over the next couple of years."

Even the color of the surface plays a factor in usage. The option was there for Twin Falls to have the track rubberized with a shade of Bruin blue. That, however, would have pushed the price tag near, or in excess of, six figures.

The flip side is that black tracks absorb the sun's rays better than any other color. That's important because the track can more quickly dry itself after a morning rain or light snowfall, something not uncommon in Twin Falls during the track season's early months.

And by the time the summer sun turns the track into an "inferno" another Grindstaff term – the track season is long over.

Ultimately, an entirely new track will be needed at Twin Falls. The asphalt under the track's surface is cracking in spots, and eventually there will be so many cracks that merely slapping on more rubber will not be an effective method of repair. Ideally, it will be another five years before The Track Doctor will head back to Bruin Stadium. With a few more mild seasons such as this year's spring, it could last even longer.

But that's a distant concern for Grindstaff.

"I'd rather have a softer track and work our runners harder and not tear up their legs," he said.

"The big key is it's better to train on and getting rid of the trip hazards was the big issue out there," Stone said.

Milwaukee's Norichika Aoki connects for an RBI single against Houston in the seventh inning of his team's game Friday in Houston.

Braves Spoil Return of Phillies' Howard

ASSOCIATED PRESS

PHILADELPHIA • Brian McCann hit a grand slam, Tim Hudson tossed fourhit ball over seven innings and the Atlanta Braves beat the Philadelphia Phillies 5-0 to spoil Ryan Howard's season debut Friday night. Howard doubled in his first at-bat and was 2 for 4 in his first game since rupturing his left Achilles tendon on the final swing in a postseason elimination loss to St. Louis last October.

But even with their regulars together for the first time, the struggling Phillies generated nothing on offense. The five-time defending NL East champions are a season-worst 11 games under .500.

ROCKIES 5, NATIONALS 1 WASHINGTON • Tyler Colvin homered twice off Stephen Strasburg to back a masterful pitching performance by Drew Pomeranz and lead Colorado past Washington, ending the Nationals' four-game winning streak.

CUBS 8, METS 7

NEW YORK • Anthony Rizzo hit a three-run homer and Cubs closer Carlos Marmol caught a line drive and started a game-ending double play that blunted the Mets' bid for another ninth-inning comeback.

first inning and Rickie Weeks later hit a two-run shot, leading Yovani Gallardo and Milwaukee over slumping Houston.

American League YANKEES 10, RED SOX 8

BOSTON • Mark Teixeira hit a two-run single in New York's five-run first inning and a two-run triple in the seventh to give the Yankees the lead for good.

David Ortiz and Adrian Gonzalez had three hits apiece for Boston, and Jarrod Saltalamacchia hit a three-run homer to help the Red Sox rally after Josh Beckett gave up five runs in the top of the first inning.

WHITE SOX 4, BLUE JAYS 2

CHICAGO • Jake Peavy pitched one-run ball into the eighth inning for his first victory since May 26, A.J. Pierzynski homered and Chicago won its fourth straight.

RAYS 10, INDIANS 3

CLEVELAND • Luke Scott snapped his team-record hitless streak with a tworun homer and Tampa Bay broke out of its slump by routing Cleveland.

TIGERS 4, ROYALS 2

DETROIT • Rookie Drew Smyly struck out a careerhigh 10 in six impressive innings and Delmon Young homered as Detroit beat

POKER

Thousands Expected for WSOP Main Event

ASSOCIATED PRESS

LAS VEGAS • The legends of Amarillo Slim, Benny Binion and Gentleman Jack Keller will be in the air, and several recent champions will be in the seats when play begins in the marquee Main Event of the 2012 World Series of Poker.

The four most recent winners – Peter Eastgate of Denmark, Joe Cada of Michigan, Jonathan Duhamel of Canada and Pius Heinz of Germany will have the proverbial chip and a chair when the $10,000 buy-in No Limit Texas Hold'em World Championship begins this weekend in Las Vegas, event spokesman Seth Palansky said.

Amateurs, celebrities and pros from dozens of countries begin 10 days of play at noon Saturday, with opening rounds continuing Sunday and Monday.

The tournament field will narrow until July 16, when a final table of nine players will emerge with a chance to share in a prize pool topping $60 million. They'll resume play Oct. 28, with a winner to be crowned late Oct. 30 or early Oct. 31.

The number of entrants determines the size of the prize. This year's winner could take home almost $9 million and a coveted championship bracelet like the one awarded to Johnny Moss in the event that Binion started with one table of invited players at his Binion's Horseshoe casino in 1970.

They'll be trying to top a field of perhaps 7,000 players to become repeat champions. No one has done that since Johnny Chan won in back-to-back years, 1987 and 1988, in tournaments attracting fewer than 170 players most of whom he had faced before.

Since then, a poker playing boom made card-dealing terms like "flop," "turn," and "river" widely known to television audiences. Fields at the World Series of Poker have exploded.

"The odds of a repeat now, because of the field size, are very long," Palansky said.

METZ, France • Peter Sagan of Slovakia avoided a bloody, across-the-road pileup to capture a stage for the third time at the Tour de France on Friday while Fabian Cancellara of Switzerland also steered clear of the mayhem to keep the yellow jersey.

The 129-mile ride from Epernay to Metz began in the Champagne region of France, with roadside fans holding aloft glasses of bubbly to cheer the riders.

But as the pack picked up speed to chase four breakaway riders with about 16 miles to go, at least two dozen riders spilled across a rural road. Many were downed and dazed, looking for team staffers in a jumble of injured riders and bikes.

"It was like a trench hit by a (grenade) when I entered the crash to give my bike to Bauke," Rabobank's Laurens Ten Dam said on Twitter, referring to teammate Bauke Mollema. "Lots of blood and screaming, Carnage."

The U.S. Garmin-Sharp team bore the brunt of the crash.

Tom Danielson, who finished in last year's Tour in eighth place, was already nursing a separated shoulder from a crash earlier in the week. In Friday's spill, he was briefly knocked unconscious, and later rushed to a hospital for hip, collarbone and elbow injuries. He was one of at least four riders to drop out of the race because of the crash.

"It was the scariest crash I've ever been in," Garmin veteran David Millar said. He had black marks of chaingrease all over his arm and said the riders were going at least 43 mph at the time.

"God knows how it happened," Millar said.

Garmin's Ryder Hesjedal

of Canada — winner of the Giro d'Italia in May — injured his knee and lost more than 13 minutes, all but ending his chances for a topthree finish. He had started the stage in ninth place, 18 seconds back.

RadioShack leader Frank Schleck of Luxembourg, who was third in last year's Tour, said he had pain in his hip, elbow and shoulder and that team tactics may need to be revised for Saturday. Two other contenders, Bradley Wiggins and defending champion Cadel Evans, escaped unscathed.

A Tour medical report listed 27 riders as injured on the day — two hospitalized from the first crash, and eight from the second. Aside from Danielson, Tour officials listed the other dropouts as Mikel Astarloza of Eustaltel-Euskadi, Davide Vigano of Lampre and Wouter Poels of Vacansoleil.

After Landing Kidd, Knicks Can Focus on Lin

ASSOCIATED PRESS

The New York Knicks view Jason Kidd as Jeremy Lin's teammate, not a replacement.

And once they finish the deal that would bring Kidd to New York, they can move on to keeping Lin.

They have a chance for a tantalizing tandem at point guard, the 39-year-old veteran who is one of the most accomplished ever at the position and the undrafted Ivy Leaguer who took the NBA by storm last season.

"If we can get Jeremy back, I would love that," forward Carmelo Anthony said. "Overall just to have him back him and Jason Kidd, him learning under Jason Kidd, for however long Jason Kidd is there, I accept that, we accept that, and that's a great opportunity for us."

Step one is nearing its completion. The Knicks and Kidd were still working Friday on terms of the deal that will get him from Dallas to New York, according to a person familiar with the details. Kidd would be able to make a higher salary if the teams are able to work out a sign-and-trade arrangement, rather than him signing in New York as a free agent.

The person spoke on condition of anonymity because deals can't be signed until July 11. Coach Mike Woodson, in Las Vegas to watch Anthony and Tyson Chandler practice with the U.S. Olympic team, declined comment on the Knicks' moves until then.

That's when Lin will be able to sign the offer sheet he agreed to Thursday with the Houston Rockets. It would pay him a little more than $5 million in each of the first two years and $9.3 million in each of the last two years, according to a person with knowledge of the salaries. The fourth season is a team option.

The Knicks will have three days to match the offer for the restricted free agent, and they have repeatedly said they plan to keep Lin, who became a breakout star when he took over the starting point guard role in February.

His season was cut short after 35 games, including 25 starts, because of torn knee cartilage that required surgery. But the Knicks had already seen enough on the court – and at the box office and souvenir stands – to know they don't want Lin to get away.

But as good as he was in his brief stint, questions remain whether he is the player to best complement the Anthony and Amare Stoudemire. Perhaps that would be Kidd, who has played with both on USA Basketball teams and teamed with Chandler on the Mavericks' 2011 NBA championship team. Tiger Headed Home After Missing Cut

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, W.Va. • One week after he won for the third time this season, Tiger Woods gets a rare weekend off.

Woods missed the cut in the Greenbrier Classic by a stroke Friday, following an opening 71 with a 69 to finish at even par. He missed a cut for only the ninth time in his PGA Tour career, and for the third time in a tournament following a victory.

"I didn't quite have it," Woods said. "I drove it really good today and I just did not have the feel for the distances. The ball was just going forever. I know we're at altitude, but I just couldn't get the ball hit pin high no matter what I did, and subsequently, Imade some bogeys."

Phil Mickelson also failed to advance to weekend play, the first time Woods and Mickelson have missed the cut in the same tournament as professionals.

Mickelson shot his second straight 71.

U.S. Open champion Webb Simpson topped the leaderboard at 9 under when play was suspended because of darkness in the round that was delayed because of rain.

Simpson made a 6-foot birdie putt on the par-3 18th for a 4-under-66. LPGA U.S. WOMEN'S OPEN KOHLER, Wis. • Even as she climbed into the lead in the second round, Suzann Pettersen took some time to admire Michelle Wie's big move into contention.

Pettersen, the Norwegian star ranked sixth in the world, shot a 4-under 68 at Blackwolf Run and moved to 5 under for the tournament. But Wie was even better on the day, carding a 6-under 66 to reach 4 under and put herself in position to break out of a season-long slump.

Wie was tied with Cristie Kerr, the 2007 Open winner, one stroke off the lead.

Pettersen was playing in the group directly behind Wie, giving her a pretty good view of what turned out to be an impressive display of accurate approach shots and made putts.

For Egypt's New Government, Jobs Are First Priority

BY STEVE HENDRIX The Washington Post

CAIRO • After their dramatic rise to power - and it's hard to imagine one more operatic than the clash of revolution, democracy and religion that swept the formerly outlawed Muslim Brotherhood into Egypt's presidential palace - the country's untested new leaders now face a more prosaic first priority: Egypt needs jobs.

The Arab Spring has left the Egyptian economy in shreds. As crowds filled Tahrir Square, foreign investors fled, tourists stayed away and businesses closed. Unemployment soared, especially among the young. Growth has nearly flat-lined, and by some measures, more than half of Egyptians have slipped below the poverty line.

For President Mohamed Morsi, the first freely elected leader in a history that stretches to the pharaohs, expectations are crushingly high. The Arab world's most populous country is struggling to pay its international bills, and Morsi's moves will be watched to see whether the rise of Islamists will be more about ideology or competence.

On the street, his supporters expect results.

"Morsi is going to solve unemployment, fix security and improve pensions, may God assist him," said Mohamed Salah, 28, a jobless jewelry maker and Muslim Brotherhood voter, idling in the tiny shade of a vending cart awning on a Cairo sidewalk.

Morsi and his advisers know that Egyptians expect them to make jobs their job one.

"The economic crisis is at the top of our priorities," said Jihad el-Haddad, a member of the economic planning committee of Morsi's Freedom and Justice Party (FJP). "We're nearly out of foreign currency reserves. Foreign investors have come to have no confidence in Egypt. It's a very, very urgent situation."

In the short term, Morsi is scrambling to avoid a balance-of-payments crisis, which could lead to a ruinous devaluation of the Egyptian pound. A billion-dollar loan from a Saudi-based development bank has bought Egypt a little time, and there are signs that Morsi and the International Monetary Fund are close to an agreement on a $3.2 billion infusion.

Saturday, July 7, 2012 • Sports 5

Such a deal would be a huge relief to those who have worried that the Islamist group would not accept the IMF's strict conditions. But doing so would help attract additional international funding and, even more, signal a willingness by the new government to do what it must to shore up finances.

"It's an encouraging first step," said Mustafa Kamel el-Sayed, a political science professor at Cairo University. "They're saying the right things."

U.K. Agency Opens Criminal Probe of Bank Rate Fixing

LONDON (AP) • Britain's Serious Fraud Office said Friday that it has formally opened a criminal investigation of the manipulation of a key market interest rate that has shaken Barclays. The bank was fined $435 million last week by U.S. and British agencies for making false reports of its borrowing costs between 2005 and 2009, specifically of the London interbank offered rate, or LIBOR, which influences the costs of a range of financial instruments including home mortgages.

Regulators are known to be looking into similar allegations against other banks in Britain and elsewhere, but Barclays is the only bank so far to have been publicly shamed. The Serious Fraud Office announcement did not mention Barclays by name but referred to "the LIBOR matter."

The agency said it was uncertain whether the investigation would result in Tuesday.

Shoket did not identify Julia by name in her full-page declaration, which also denied the magazine ever changed the shapes of bodies and faces. She had no further comment Friday.

The editor did cite the support of the National Eating Disorders Association. The group's president, Lynn Grefe, lauded the effort as a first step but said far more Barclays' share price closed 2 percent lower at 164.75 pence following the announcement.

This week, Bob Diamond resigned as chief executive of the bank and Chairman Marcus Agius announced his intention to leave as soon a replacement has been appointed.

The Serious Fraud Office could prosecute individuals or the company. The U.S. Justice Department said last week that it would not prosecute the Barclays because of its full cooperation in the investigation, but it might pursue charges against individuals.

The British Parliament voted Thursday to launch its own investigation of the banking industry.

Barclays is among several banks which submit daily data on the rates they are paying to borrow from other banks. That data is used to calculate LIBOR.

Ministering to the Young

Magic Valley church leaders say youth ministries are important in developing young people's faith and character.

BY ANDREW WEEKS

aweeks@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • Young people need to be trained in the faith. That's where youth ministries can help, according to some Magic Valley church leaders.

A number of area churches offer children's and youth ministries to inspire and educate the rising generation to live Christian lives.

One of the challenges, leaders say, is keeping youth involved so they want to keep coming back. This especially is true for junior high and high school students - the age bracket for most youth ministries. Children's ministries serve a younger crowd.

The teen years are spiritually important, said Chuck Swoboda, who oversees children and youth ministries at Twin Falls Reformed Church. "It's an ideal time for them to take ownership from what they've learned in children's ministry," he said.

A number of churches in the valley hold Bible study, service projects or other activities on Sundays or at other times during the week. The Reformed Church holds its youth activities on Sunday evenings, Swoboda said, because it doesn't compete as heavily with other activities the youth might be involved with the rest of the week.

The main focus of the ministry? "Basically, we try to connect with them on their level rather than expecting them to have the faith of adults," he said. "The challenge is to try to help them grow in their faith - where they're at, and not as adults. ... They're not adults and shouldn't be expected to have faith wanting to be a part of the ministry. But, Swoboda said, he sees a lot of youth who ask questions. They're curious about religion, faith and values, and other important things in life. Many of them do want to be involved, but they also want to feel like they fit in.

They'll go where they are most comfortable, Swoboda said, whether that's in church, at a faith-based activity or something completely away from church.

Brian Phillips, the church's new youth minister, echoed similar thoughts.

"I truly believe that kids are looking to be where the kids are," he said. Phillips, who moved from North-

Help the Youth

Youth at Twin Falls Reformed Church will hold a car wash fundraiser from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. today at the church, 1631 Grandview Ave. N. The car wash is free, but donations are accepted. Money raised will go toward an upcoming trip to Creation Festival in Medford, Ore. Information: 733-6128.

Youth ministry also involves fun activities such as backpacking, camping and fundraising.

Today, for instance, the youth are hosting a car wash at the church to raise money for a trip to Creation Festival, a concert of gospel-themed music in Medford, Ore.

Phillips, who has 10 years of experience ministering to youth, said mission trips, service projects, and weekly activities are important to young people's spiritual development. The church's youth - about 70 junior high and high school age children – frequently help out at places like The Mustard Seed.

"I think youth ministry is a good foundation for growing up," said 18year-old Logan Vander Stelt, a member of the Reformed Church who recently graduated from Lighthouse Christian School. "I get to see people, friends I haven't seen all week. It's a good place to go back and dig deeper into the Bible with people your own like that of adults."

That means proper friendships are especially important, he said. If youth aren't fellowshipped or have friends during weekly activities they usually have a tough time coming back or

Who is your church leadership?

Pastors Clay and Heather Ramirez have been in ministry the majority of their lives and are committed to the people of Magic Valley. They attended Bible college and are continuing their education, currently through Northwest University. We have leaders over each department of the church from First Impressions to Production, and Children to Young Adults. All leaders have a foundation in the Bible truths and many are students in Bible school.

What does the church believe?

The Bible is the inspired word of God. We believe in the church as the corporate, all denominations and age groups, working together for the purpose of loving God, loving others and serving our community.

What's a typical service?

Typically, we welcome everyone and sing songs with a live band; then Pastor Clay and/or Pastor Heather share a passionate message relevant to today's life. You are guaranteed to leave refreshed and challenged.

Do you offer childcare? Yes, childcare is available every service. We offer newly remodeled rooms for children up through 12 years of age. Children are welcome in service with parents as well.

Describe your children's ministry:

Our children's department is called BC Kids and includes tiny babies through preteens. The motto is, "To love and be loved like Jesus loves." Kids are valued and put first in all we do at Believer's Church. Each age group is taught a Bible-based truth with illustration at their level of learning by knowledgeable caregivers. We have activities scheduled throughout the year to encourage children to have fun serving God. Upcoming events include BC Kids Camp, Summer Please see BELIEVER'S, S6

Looking for Work without Losing Heart Deb Seles

ecause I spent nearly 25 years as a vocational rehabilitation counselor, my heart aches for people who are out of work. Our sense of purpose and meaning is so intimately connected to our vocation, our individual calling. Work is the thing that not only puts bread on the table but also helps us say to the world, "This is who I am."

For many Americans, work does not do this. Many people work to live; they find their identity in other roles: spouse, parent and coach, for example. Millions of Americans would be happy to find any gainful employment - never mind if it is fulfilling or not.

In this role I helped men and women with disabilities to maintain their employment through reasonable accommodations. When people could not perform their jobs, we explored skills that might transfer to new jobs. I also advocated with employers to see the abilities of individuals, not their disabilities. Together we faced the challenges of a changing economy, changing workforce realities (growing computerization and the need for more technical training) and I watched as many people found new identities while others struggled to make ends meet on disability incomes.

The connection between these two callings of mine is this: as a pastor, my work involves helping people reconnect with their core human vocation – the calling to reflect God in our daily lives. The three great Abrahamic traditions (Jews, Christians and Muslims) believe that humanity was created in God's image. Through sin the image is lost, tarnished, spoiled and now we are on lifelong jour neys to restore that image Christians see in Jesus the Way to that destination: not only is He the model, his life's work was to draw all people back to their true vocation.

Work is indeed a spiritual issue if you believe that we are "wonderfully and fearfully made" with God-given gifts to develop and use in the service of the world.

That millions of people around the world cannot find meaningful work is not only a tragedy, it is a social sin. The call to faithful people is to recognize our brothers and sisters who struggle to find work, to do more than pray for them.

Churches can support job clubs and those agencies that help people find meaningful work.

Faithful people consider the impact of broad economic policies on the average American worker and work towards economic justice for all.

Furthermore, we can speak the truth about both, lament and hope - that both of these responses are holy and faithful.

Describe your youth ministry:

The Pursuit is our teens group for students ages 13-18 years. Our name comes from 2 Timothy 2:22 "Run from anything that stimulates youthful lust. Instead, pursue righteous living, faithfulness, love and peace. Enjoy the companionship of those who call on the Lord with pure hearts."

We do exactly that through activities like rafting, concerts, community service, paint balling, weekend camps and student conferences. Pastors Mike and Stephanie teach teens how to live out what the Bible teaches at 6:30 p.m.Wednesdays.

What other programs do you provide?

We offer a group just for meets at 7 p.m. Thursdays to serve the community and ignite passion for living for God. Believer's Church has men's Bible study every Wednesday at 6 a.m. and Ladies Bible study the second and fourth Tuesday of every month with child care provided. We will also begin a mentoring program this fall; we're excited to start!

What community service does your church provide?

Believers Church does Faith In Action each summer. The event teams with widows, seniors and anyone else in need of chores, tasks, yard work, building maintenance at no expense to them. We provide all the supplies, necessary skills and time to get the job done. We also hold food give-a-ways that help thousands of people in our community with no regard to their socioeconomic status. We ship truck loads of quality food to our parking lot, and families come to take full boxes of food. We do it because we enjoy blessing others.

What mission work does your church do?

We team with others when it comes to missions, both locally and worldwide. We partner with What Matters Ministries in Guatemala, Fire for All Nations, and a local family now doing missions work in Senegal. We believe in the corporate body of Christ and helping those already in place with the resources they need; this includes the Pregnancy Crisis Center and Fellowship of Christian Athletes in the local community.

We can sit in a classroom and get only so far, but taking them out on a hiking trip is an opportunity for them to open up about what's happening in their own life. There's nothing like sitting by a stream with a young person, taking the time to talk and connect."

He said it also allows the youth to see that even though they might have challenges, life isn't all about tough times.

Youth ministries might attract some new families to church, said Brian Slusher, assistant pastor of River Christian Fellowship in Twin Falls, but it's an exception and not the rule. That's not the ministry's primary focus.

The focus, he said, is helping youth grow their faith and religious experience. Youth ministries are important to a young person's developing character. And, he said, the experiences they have in ministry help prepare them to become better church leaders.

"I think youth ministry is very important because they are the next generation to continue the church into the future."

Presbyterians Reject Redefinition of Marriage

BY RACHEL ZOLL associated press

The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) narrowly rejected a proposal to revise the traditional definition of marriage on Friday, a year after it struck down a barrier to ordaining gays.

The Presbyterian General Assembly, meeting in Pittsburgh, voted 338-308 against changing how marriage was defined in the church constitution from a "civil contract between a woman and a man" to a "covenant between two people."

Other mainline Protestant churches have approved gay ordination or permitted individual parishes to celebrate samesex unions in recent years. The U.S. Episcopal Church, which is holding its national convention through next week in Indianapolis, will consider prayer services for same-sex unions. However, only one major mainline group, the United Church of Christ, has endorsed same-sex marriage outright.

The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), like many Protestant groups, has debated for decades whether the Bible prohibits samesex relationships. The discussion has focused mainly on whether to ordain gays and lesbians who aren't celibate. But as gay acceptance has grown in the broader culture, the church debates have started to include the issue of gay marriage.

George Zimmerman leaves the Seminole County Jail after posting bail Friday in Sanford, Fla. Zimmerman left the Seminole County Jail a day after Circuit Judge Kenneth Lester granted a $1 million bail.

George Zimmerman Leaves Florida Jail

BY MIKE SCHNEIDER Associated Press

ORLANDO, Fla. • Former neighborhood watch volunteer George Zimmerman was released from jail Friday for a second time while he awaits his second-degree murder trial for fatally shooting Trayvon Martin.

Zimmerman left the Seminole County Jail a day after Circuit Judge Kenneth Lester granted a $1 million bail with strict conditions. He wore a white shirt and dress jacket as he walked out and got into an SUV, igtainly it's been a sobering experience spending the last month in jail in that kind of environment?'

Zimmerman had been released on a $150,000 bond in April in the shooting of the unarmed black teenager, but the judge revoked it last month after prosecutors presented evidence that he and his wife misled the court about how much money they had available to pay for the bond. They didn't tell the judge that donations from a website for Zimmerman's legal defense had raised around $135,000 at the time of his first bond hearing. Prosecutors argued Zimmerman and his wife talked in code during recorded jailhouse conversations about how to transfer the donations to different bank accounts. For example, George Zimmerman at one point asked how much money they had. She replied "$155." Prosecutors allege that was code for $155,000. Their reference to "Peter Pan" was code for the PayPal system through which the donations were made, prosecutors said.

Obama, Romney Use Ruling to Rally Backers

BY THOMAS BEAUMONT Associated Press

Associated Press

DES MOINES, Iowa • President Barack Obama and Mitt Romney both are using the Supreme Court decision upholding the federal health care insurance requirement, loved by liberals and hated by conservatives, to rally core supporters in the most competitive states in the presidential race.

Yet while each side may be benefiting from groundswells of volunteers and money, the ruling seems unlikely to sway the legions of undecided voters who are focused heavily on the economy — not on the health care debate that has raged in this country for years.

As a result, Republicans and Democrats alike say how the health care ruling influences a race that polls show is close will depend on how the campaigns use it to ramp up activity in the dozen or so states that Obama and Romney are contesting most aggressively.

"Whoever gets the organizational advantage ... "What the court did not do on its last day in session, I will do on my first day if elected president of the United States. And that is I will act to repeal Obamacare."

Presidential candidate Mitt Romney

that's the real impact of the decision," said Jesse Harris, who led Obama's 2008 early vote effort in Iowa. "In a state like this, that could be decisive."

A week after the decision, Democrat Obama's campaign is pointing to swollen ranks of campaign volunteers, in places like Iowa and Michigan, who have been emboldened to protect the health care overhaul now that it has been declared the law of the land. Opponents had argued that the requirement that all individuals to buy health insurance was a constitutional overreach.

"The law I passed is here to stay," Obama said to applause in Ohio this week.

Republican challenger Romney says the anger on the right has boosted fundraising in presidential battlegrounds, with millions in small-dollar contributions pouring in from conservatives who see the former Massachusetts governor as the last hope for getting the law repealed.

"What the court did not do on its last day in session, I will do on my first day if elected president of the United States. And that is I will act to repeal Obamacare," Romney said last week in response to the ruling.

Americans across the country, and in the most hotly contested states like Colorado, Florida, Iowa, Ohio and Virginia remain skeptical about Obama's signature policy accomplishment. Several polls taken in the last year in key states show narrow majorities opposing the law and supporting its repeal.

After reacting to the Supreme Court decision, both candidates quickly shifted their public rhetoric back to the economy — vot-ers' No. 1 issue. Meanwhile, their campaigns began using the ruling to fire up support-ers online and in key states in hopes of signing up more volunteers and encouraging donations.

In Nevada, where Obama is in a tough fight with Romney over a state economy that's struggling to overcome double-digit unemployment, Democrat John Bruce Krausman said the ruling gives him a bit more confidence that Obama can win.

"It means for the country that we can move forward," Krausman said.

In Michigan, callers at the phone bank in Obama's Detroit campaign office and volunteers registering voters at nearby bus stops touted the ruling. Said John Hardy, a Detroit office volunteer, "It's energized some people who support the president but were on the fence about helping."

Tasked With Recovering Millions in Bad Loans

BY JOSHUA PARTLOW The Washington Post

KABUL, Afghanistan • Abdullah Dowrani's obscure government office didn't even exist during the early years of Kabul Bank's meteoric rise, when the bank took advantage of a fast-andloose wartime boom and political connections to lavish illegal loans on its shareholders and attract depositors with lucrative lotteries.

But now this 40-year-old, soft-spoken bureaucrat is the chairman of Afghanistan's Financial Dispute Resolution Commission and finds himself at the center of his government's attempt to resolve the notorious financial scandal. His job is simple: recover as much as possible of the nearly $1 billion in loans Kabul Bank doled out to its Karzai was slow to take action and blamed Western advisers for the problems. U.S. officials were further angered that the indictments did not include the president's brother, Mahmood Karzai, or the vice president's brother, Haseen Fahim, and saw this as the president protecting those closest to the palace.

Abuse by Sri Lanka's Army Rubs Salt in Wounds of War

BY SIMON DENYER

The Washington Post

JAFFNA, Sri Lanka • In the final days of Sri Lanka's civil war, as the army closed in for the kill against Tamil Tiger rebels, tens of thousands of civilians cowered in the crossfire.

"The children were crying because they were so hungry, so when we heard congee in coconut soup was being given out, we let them leave the bunker where we were sheltering," a 35-year-old woman from the northern district of Thunukkai recalled recently. "Then the army bombed the place. Most of the kids were killed on the spot, including my son."

Three years have passed since the end of the war. But for members of the Tamil minority of northern Sri Lanka — who suffered a heavy civilian death toll during the three-decade conflict, and years of fear and oppression when the Tigers controlled the area — the peace has been a painful disappointment.

Gathering in a spot that they judged safe enough to speak freely, a group of Tamil women recounted the daily humiliation of life under the victorious Sri Lankan army – almost exclusively made up of ethnic Sinhalese Buddhists.

Twice a month, the women said, soldiers enter their homes to photograph everyone. Permission from the military is required for even the smallest gathering or just to collect firewood in the nearby forest.

"I even have to go and ask someone for permission to have a birthday party for my daughter in my own home," said a 46year-old mother of six from the Kandavalai area.

Loss of Her Children wasn't Properly Notified

BY CHUCK LINDELL

Austin American-Statesman

AUSTIN, Texas • State childprotection workers improperly relied on a newspaper ad to notify a Dallas mother about an upcoming trial to take away her four children, the Texas Supreme Court ruled Friday.

Parental rights — "far more precious than any property right" — cannot be terminated unless the courts and state workers exercise a high degree of diligence, the unanimous Supreme Court ruled.

That standard was not met when Child Protective Services published a classified ad to notify Lamia Raibon about her pending trial in 2007 particularly because Raibon wasn't that hard to find, the court said.

Serving notice by publication is a last resort typically reserved for lawsuits involving somebody who is missing or unknown, but Raibon had met with a CPS caseworker and attended two court hearings around the time state officials moved to end her parental rights, the court noted.

"Service by publication deprived (Raibon) of due process," Chief Justice Wallace Jefferson wrote for the court. "It was both possible and practicable to more adequately warn (Raibon) of the impending termination of her parental rights." But the court stopped short of ordering a new trial for Raibon, who was accused of physically abusing her children and who tested positive for methamphetamine at the birth of her youngest child.

The principal balance owing as of this date on said obligation is $45,678.10, plus interest, costs and expenses actually incurred in enforcing the obligations thereunder and in this sale, together with any unpaid and/or accruing real property taxes, and/or assessments, attorneys' fees, Trustees' fees and costs, and any other amount advanced to protect said security, as authorized in the promissory note secured by the aforementioned Deed of Trust. Therefore, the Beneficiary elects to sell, or cause said trust property to be sold, to satisfy said obligation. NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT THIS FIRM IS ATTEMPTING TO COLLECT A DEBT AND ANY INFORMATION OBTAINED WILL BE USED FOR THAT PURPOSE, AND THAT THE DEBT MAY BE DISPUTED. THE ABOVE GRANTORS ARE NAMED TO COMPLY WITH SECTION 45-1506(4)(a) IDAHO CODE. NO REPRESENTATION IS MADE THAT THEY ARE, OR ARE NOT, PRESENTLY RESPONSIBLE FOR THIS OBLIGATION. R THE ACES ON BF

"Victory comes late, And is held low to freezing lips Too rapt with frost To take it."

– Emily Dickinson

The final deal from last year's European Open Championships was played by Vitas Vainikonis in four hearts. Consider it first as a single-dummy problem. You sit South, and no doubt when dummy comes down, you regret not doubling four diamonds. But you have to make the best of the spot you are in.

The good news is that when the defenders lead three rounds of diamonds, West has six and East can only ruff in with the heart six, not the jack. You overruff and draw the remaining trumps in two rounds. Now what?

You know that West has six diamonds and two hearts, together with very short spades. The auction strongly suggests that he has five clubs, given East's revealing pre-empt. So East has only two clubs, making the club finesse unnecessary — if East has the club queen, it is dropping.

Therefore, you cash the club ace and king, then lead a spade to your jack; East must duck his ace or it falls on empty air. Next, you lead a spade to the king, and East must duck a second time, since if he wins, he is immediately endplayed. With only spades left, he will have to play into the tenace.

But now you exit with a club. When West wins the club queen, he must give you a ruff and discard with the lead of one minor or the other, and your last spade goes away. Contract made!

Today is Saturday, July 7, the 189th day of 2012. There are 177 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight: On July 7, 1937, the Second Sino-Japanese War erupted into full-scale conflict as Imperial Japanese forces attacked the Marco Polo Bridge in Beijing. (The end of the fighting coincided with the conclusion of World War II.)

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:

In 1846, U.S. annexation of California was proclaimed at Monterey (mahn-tuh-RAY') after the surrender of a Mexican garrison.

In 1865, four people were hanged in Washington, D.C., for conspiring with John Wilkes Booth to assassinate President Abraham Lincoln.

In 1887 (New Style calendar), artist Marc Chagall was born in Vitebsk in present day Belarus.

In 1898, the United States annexed Hawaii.

In 1919, the first Transcontinental Motor Convoy, in which a U.S. Army convoy of motorized vehicles crossed the United States, departed Washington, D.C. (The trip ended in San Francisco on Sept. 6, 1919.)

In 1930, construction began on Boulder Dam (later Hoover Dam).

In 1941. U.S. forces took up positions in Iceland, Trinidad and British Guiana to forestall any Nazi invasion, even though the United States had not yet entered the Second World War.

In 1952, the Republican National Convention, which nominated Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower for president and Sen. Richard Nixon for vice president, opened in Chicago.

In 1969, Canada's House of Commons gave final approval to the Official Languages Act, making French equal to English throughout the national government.

In 1981, President Ronald Reagan announced he was nominating Arizona Judge Sandra Day O'Connor to become the first female justice on the U.S. Supreme Court.

In 1983, 11-year-old Samantha Smith of Manchester, Maine, left for a visit to the Soviet Union at the personal invitation of Soviet leader Yuri V. Andropov.

In 1987, Lt. Col. Oliver North began his long-awaited public testimony at the Iran-Contra hearing, telling Congress that he had "never carried out a single act, not one," without authorization. years Ten ago: Afghanistan's vice president, Abdul Qadir, was buried with full military honors a day after being assassinated. Texas Gov. Rick Perry saw by helicopter the devastation days of torrential rain had brought to central and southern Texas. Lleyton Hewitt crushed David Nalbandian in straight sets, 6-1, 6-3, 6-2, in the Wimbledon final to win his second Grand Slam title. Five years ago: A truck bomb devastated the public market in Armili, Iraq, killing at least 115 people. A 24hour music marathon spanning seven continents reached the Western Hemisphere with rappers, rockers and country stars taking the stage at Live Earth concerts to fight climate change. Venus Williams claimed her fourth Wimbledon title with a 6-4, 6-1 victory over Marion Bartoli. One year ago: Rupert Murdoch's media empire unexpectedly jettisoned News of the World, Britain's best-selling Sunday newspaper, after a public backlash over claims it had used phone hacking and other illegal tactics to expose the rich and famous, royals and ordinary citizens. A Texas Rangers fan, 39-year-old Shannon Stone, died from a fatal fall when reaching out to grab a baseball tossed his way by All-Star outfielder Josh Hamilton during a Rangers game. "Harry Potter and the Deathly Hallows: Part 2," the final movie based on the wizard fantasy books, debuted in London on its way to becoming the year's top-grossing movie.

DEAR ABBY: My brother left his wife of nine years and his children for another woman. They now have a baby together. His wife nearly had a nervous breakdown because of it, and his children are understandably upset with the situation.

My question has to do with his new baby. I would like to send my brother a congratulatory card, even though his divorce isn't final. Our mother is furious and refuses to speak to him, let alone congratulate him. Still, I would like to send a card and a gift for the baby. How should I handle this?

- UNDECIDED DEAR UNDECIDED: Send a card and a gift to the baby. The child should not be punished because of the behavior of the parents. However, considering the circumstances, forgo the congratulatory card to your brother.

DEAR ABBY: My two friends and I will be 12 soon. We would like to try to make our own money so we can get off our parents' backs. There are things like lip gloss and magazines we'd like to buy.

We have considered babysitting. But are we old enough? We'd appreciate your input.

– KAYLA IN MISSOURI

DEAR KAYLA: In babysitting, it isn't how old a person is but how MATURE and responsible the prospective sitter is. Some 12- and 13year-olds are mature enough to handle it; others are not.

However, before deciding how your earnings will be spent, talk to your parents to determine how much they would like you to begin saving. It's never too early to start.

DEAR ABBY: In the 17 years I have been married, my husband has never called me by my name. Nor has he ever used a term of endearment such as "Honey" or "Sweetheart." It's just "Hey ..." or "Ummm"

Am I crazy? I was raised to believe you address a person by name, say "thank you" if someone does something nice, and compliment a per-

IF JULY 7 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: You will find that hanging out in a comfortable rut is the best place to be during the next several months. This is an excellent time to engage in sports or competitions as your friendliness and fairness will endear you to others. Widen the scope of your social contacts by joining a club or organization. By repeating the steps that have brought you success in the past, you can continue to enjoy success. This may not seem exciting, but sometimes safety and security are comforting. Wait until January to make important changes, when you will have the opportunity to break new ground successfully.

19): Try to see the forest instead of just the trees. There is a big picture you must grasp to succeed with a financial scheme. You may have an incentive to invest in entertaining weekend events.

TAURUS (Apr. 20-May 20): Only fools rush in where angels dare to tread. You usually have good sense, but you are in danger of igniting a misunderstanding. Or you might be tempted to stir up controversy. Be as nice as possible.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A leopard never changes its spots. If a loved one upsets you with unpredictable responses or seems to be deliberately contrary, just recall times when you were in harmony. Don't be irritated by small things.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): The tables are turned. It might be your turn to play hard to get or utterly romantic. You are no longer in the mood for hard work and business. Today you need an escape from boring reality.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): All the kids of the '60s knew the times "they are a-changing." Even now, it impossible to predict whether anything will stay the same, especially with technology. It is wise to give in to changes with good grace.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Keep your money and your credits cards in your wallet. This isn't a good time to gamble that your good taste and expertise is in tiptop condition. Hold off on haircuts or buying new clothes

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Be prepared for unforeseen contingencies. You might find that the most predictable situations contain a sudden shock or that people frown on what seems politically correct. Delay making key decisions.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Make your mark through mental gymnastics. Use your head to ferret out the answer to a complicated puzzle. Share ideas, and perhaps some secrets. with others if you want them to share with you.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Fulfillment comes full circle. Someone very close to you may have worthy ambitions and could use your support. This could be a good day to learn about a viable business opportunity.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Talk may be cheap, but it may also be valuable. If you aren't sure which way to turn or are confused by a changing of the guard, you may benefit from a heartto-heart chat with a welleducated friend.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Give a shout out to your friends. A loved one's dedication to achieving a dream isn't neglect, so don't feel neglected. Scrutinize your budget and see if there are luxuries that can be omitted.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): High tech or high fashion may look more enticing than they really are. Rather than flaunting the love beads or bling or insisting on reciprocal love, it's time to work at achieving your dreams and goals.
