Castleford Becomes Base for Fighting 190,000-acre Wildfire

CASTLEFORD • While the main body of the Kinyon Road Fire blazes southwest of Twin Falls, the heart of the action remains in Castleford.

Fire officials began setting up headquarters at the Castleford High School on Monday. While staying at the school, officials will be able to dispatch crews, divvy up resources and catch a quick shower.

And supporting the fire crews were the residents of Castleford. Maintenance workers came in to help prep the school for the fire crews. A nearby sign for a bar welcomed the firefighters and advertised $3 margaritas.

Air Support Keeps T.F. Airport Busy

BY KIMBERLEE KRUESI
kkruesi@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • As Jasper Lloyd directed the heavy engine air tanker to a complete stop, the rest of the aviation crew swarmed the plane.

Working under the hot sun on a Monday afternoon, crew members connected a snaking hose to the bottom of the tanker and began fueling it with fire retardant.

In less than 15 minutes, the pilot left with 2,200 gallons of retardant and a boxed lunch from the airport's cafe.

Lloyd works out of the Twin Falls airport and helps direct aircraft fighting the Kinyon Road Fire when they come in to refuel.

Activity at the airport this year is already well above last year's, said Rob Werner, a private aviation contractor with the U.S. Bureau of Land Management.

"Last year, we didn't send anyone out until mid-July," Werner said. "This year, we've already sent out 100,000 pounds of retardant. But that's kind of what's going on everywhere else now that the whole nation is on fire."

Fighting the 190,000-acre Kinyon Road fire requires plenty of air support.

City of Twin Falls Unveils Budget Proposal for Fiscal Year 2013

BY MELISSA DAVLIN
mdavlin@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • A budget proposal of $49.2 million for fiscal year 2013 was presented Monday to the Twin Falls City Council. That budget represents a 7.56 percent increase from the fiscal year 2012 budget of $45.7 million.

In his introduction, City Manager Travis Rothweiler said the budget is "not just a series of numbers" but a plan for the city's policies and development. To make the budget, city staff took into account revenue estimates, requests from department heads and input from the community.

The proposal includes a 3 percent raise in property taxes, the maximum annual increase allowed in Idaho. Tax collections would also go up from new construction in the city.

Even with the proposed increase, the tax rate for fiscal year 2013 would be lower than the rates assessed from 2004-2007, and is lower than other

Strong Winds Cause Damage in Heyburn

BY LAURIE WELCH

HEYBURN • Ferocious winds blew through Mini-Cassia Monday, leaving the city of Heyburn strewn with downed power lines, roof shingles and fallen trees.

The high winds started about 5:30 p.m.

A trampoline was blown up against Mount Harrison High School and part of a metal roof was torn off United Electric's storage building.

"There was a lot of noise," said Sue Dedrick, who lives in the 2000 block of Palace Place in Heyburn. "My cats just went crazy."

Dedrick said the storm blew shingle tiles from her roof and at least four homes around her sustained damage.

"It sounded like something was up on the roof and when the wind went down and I went outside, there were shingles all over my backyard," Dedrick said. "There are trees down all over and it's a mess."

Amy Despain, who lives in the McBride Addition in Heyburn, was out after the storm with her family helping to clear a tree that was blocking V Street between 18th and 19th streets.

She said there were at least seven trees down in her section of town and two fences.

"We figured it was important to help with this tree since it's blocking the road," Despain said.

Heyburn resident Brian Duncan also helped cut up tree limbs and move them off the road.

"I think it's pretty cool how everyone is out here helping out," Duncan said.

Contested Feedlot near Hunt Camp Can Proceed

The Idaho Supreme Court upheld Jerome County's handling of a permit application for an 8,000-animal CAFO.

BY STEVE KADEL
skadel@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • A decision by the Idaho Supreme Court cleared the way for a heifer operation near the Minidoka National Historic Site, largely ending a legal fight that raged for several years.

The court's decision, filed Friday, upheld Jerome County's handling of a permit application for the confined-animal feeding operation just more than a mile west of the historic site — an internment camp in eastern Jerome County for Japanese-Americans during World War II.

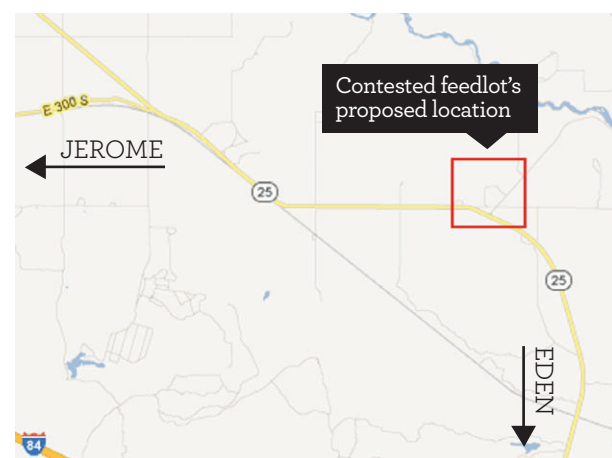

Big Sky Farms initially sought the permit in 2007. The land was later purchased by South View Dairy of Wendell, which continued the application.

Among other actions, Friday's decision upheld an Idaho law that restricts public testimony at hearings regarding CAFO permits to people whose residences are within one mile of the proposed site. Counties have the choice to broaden the range involved, and in this case Jerome County officials did for one public hearing.

John Lothspeich, the attorney representing South View, said the company will proceed "as soon as they are able" to place up to 8,000 cattle on the 1,204 acres. They will raise the calves for use in their own dairy and may also sell some to other dairies, he said.

"It has been a long journey, but we're glad the court got it right," Lothspeich said.

Romney Sun Valley Event Postponed

TIMES-NEWS

TWIN FALLS • A Sun Valley fundraiser for presidential candidate Mitt Romney scheduled for today was postponed.

Last week, The Missoulian reported Romney would be in Sun Valley for a July 10 fundraising dinner. That event has since been moved to August, said Idaho House Assistant Majority Leader Scott Bedke, R-Oakley.

Watch the Times-News for more details.

similarly sized cities in Idaho, Rothweiler said.

Other highlights:

- A 2.5 percent performance-based raise for city employees, plus an eventual 8 percent adjustment of the city's pay table to bring wages closer to market value.

- A 2 percent sewer rate increase and a 3 percent water rate increase to account for rising costs.

- Increased appropriations for maintenance and planning for streets, water and wastewater funds. Those include two appropriations of $250,000 each for planning improvements to the city's water and wastewater facilities.

The budget meets the city's needs for the next year, Rothweiler said. "There's still more to do in future years," he added.

The City Council will review the proposal and, on Aug. 6, adopt a preliminary budget. On Aug. 20, the council will hold a public hearing on the budget.

For a detailed analysis, including breakdowns of how the proposal would affect Twin Falls residents, read Wednesday's Times-News and visit Magicvalley.com.

On Monday, the council also:

- Approved a request to award the $2.3 million Kimberly/Highland Water Extension Project to Sawtooth Construction Inc., and a $99,214.50 airport parking lot construction bid to Robert Durham Excavation.

- Deferred a landscaping and paving requirement to a property owned by Twin Falls County for search and rescue storage.

Opponents argued the law is unconstitutional, but the court disagreed.

"We find that the one-mile radius limitation ... is rationally related to a legitimate government purpose," the justices wrote. "The state clearly has an interest in promoting efficiency, and the provision certainly allows for an efficient hearing process for the Board to collect comment and to hear from those wishing to comment."

In addition, the court ruled that the Jerome County commissioners followed all relevant ordinances.

The board first ruled against the application. However, it reversed itself in September 2008 after a remand from a district court judge.

Reached Monday, County Commission Chairman Charlie Howell said he was pleased with what the court's decision meant for the county.

"I'm happy with the ruling because it upholds the process," he said.

Charlie Tebbutt, the Oregon attorney who represented the CAFO's opponents, did not return a phone call Monday.

Feedlot

Dean Dimond, one of those who testified against the feedlot during hearings before the Jerome County commissioners, expressed surprise at the ruling.

"It's really quite shocking," he said.

He said opponents will now oppose a U.S. Environmental Protection Agency permit for South View, but acknowledged his chances of winning are slim.

Dimond farms within a mile of the proposed site, which is north of U.S. Highway 25 near Eden. He said several opponents weren't allowed to present evidence, adding that the court sided with big business rather than listening to citizens.

Because the proposed operation would be just a mile and a quarter from the Minidoka National Historic Site, many with interest in the internment camp wanted to go on record opposing the application. However, the court's decision upheld the law that says only people with residences within the one-mile radius of the site have a legitimate concern.

Schools Expand Summer Programs as Migrant Numbers Increase

"Really, it's about honing in the skills they need."

Amy McBride, Robert Stuart Middle School vice principal

BY JULIE WOOTTON

jwootton@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • About 100 children of migrant farm workers are participating in two sessions of summer school at Oregon Trail Elementary School in Twin Falls.

Students qualify as "migrant" if they have a parent who is an agricultural worker and moved from one town to another in the past 36 months, according to the Idaho State Department of Education.

Since the children move around frequently, summer school is a chance to fill academic gaps and participate in other activities.

"I think it's a wonderful opportunity for the kids," said Shari Cowger, principal at Oregon Trail Elementary School.

The school district had 157 migrant students at the end of the school year. That led to more federal funding for summer programs for those students.

The Twin Falls School District expanded its migrant summer program this year to include two sessions instead of one. And around south-central Idaho, other districts are also ramping up their summer offerings. A three-week session for migrant students in preschool through fifth grade wrapped up in late June and a two-week session begins in August.

The Murtaugh School District also has a summer program for migrant students, as well as students living in poverty.

Superintendent Michele Capps said there are about 65 students participating, including incoming kindergartners. That's more than one-third of the district's total population of fewer than 250 students.

Migrant summer school programs aren't funded by the state. Luci Willits, chief of staff for the Idaho State Department of Education, said the state does pay for alternative summer school — programs that focus on remediation.

At Robert Stuart Middle School, Vice Principal Amy McBride said there are three main reasons why about 250 middle schoolers are in summer school.

Some had too many absences during the year, while others didn't do well on one or more Idaho Standards Achievement Tests. And some students are behind on requirements or failed a class.

In the past, students had to come for the entire summer term. But this year, those attending summer school for ISAT remediation can leave once they show mastery of topics.

"Really, it's about honing in the skills they need," McBride said.

In Jerome, Superintendent Dale Layne said the district added a middle school summer program last year.

The reason: Two years ago, the state ended the practice of socially promoting middle school students to the next grade. Now, students are held back if they don't earn 80 percent of the required class credits.

Jerome administrators also added more days to summer school programs this year.

There's a three-week program for kindergarten through third-graders who are struggling with reading, as well as a federally funded program for intermediate grades through a partnership with Catholic Charities of Idaho.

In Kimberly, there's a less traditional approach to summer school. For nearly two months, the district has been offering science, technology, engineering and math classes for fifth through 12th graders.

Other school districts — such as Shoshone — haven't always offered summer school. Superintendent Rob Waite said the program was cut a few years ago, but returned last week.

A four-week session is open to any Shoshone student, not just those who need extra help.

ACLU Sues Idaho over New Protest and Rally Rules

BOISE (AP) • Members of Occupy Boise and the American Civil Liberties Union of Idaho are suing the state over a new set of rules created for protests and rallies around the Capitol.

The lawsuit filed in federal court in Boise Monday claims the rules infringe on the First Amendment right to free speech and assembly.

It's the latest legal twist since Occupy Boise protesters set up a camp in December near the Capitol.

During the 2012 Legislature, lawmakers passed a law intended to boot the protest and its tents from the Capitol Annex. A federal judge intervened and ultimately decided the state could ban overnight camping and cooking but could not evict the protesters entirely.

Ex-Stanford Basketball Captain Sauer Dies at 35

BY JANIE MCCAULEY
AP Sports Writer

STANFORD, Calif. • Peter Sauer, a former captain at Stanford who helped lead the Cardinal to the 1998 Final Four, has died. He was 35.

The school said Monday that Sauer died Sunday night in White Plains, N.Y., while playing in an adult league recreational basketball game. The 6-foot-7, 225-pound forward from Pittsburgh was part of a Stanford team that reached four straight NCAA tournaments under former coach Mike Montgomery.

"Peter was a guy who when he stepped on the court, he always played with a huge heart," former teammate and current Stanford assistant coach Mark Madsen said. "He was a great shooter and a tough guy, but when he went off the court, his heart and the amount he cared about people was even bigger."

Stanford's coaching staff received details that Sauer was shooting free throws after a game, collapsed and hit his head. He couldn't be revived after 20 minutes by EMTs. He was later pronounced dead at a nearby hospital.

Karen Pasquale in the White Plains mayor's office said Sauer hadn't complained of not feeling well before collapsing and hitting his head on the concrete. An autopsy was underway, she said.

HAVE YOU BEEN CONVICTED OF A DRUG CHARGE?

If you, a friend, or a loved-one were convicted of a drug charge between 2003 (possibly earlier) and 2011, you may be able to get your case dismissed and/or record cleared, or even be released from probation/incarceration.

A recent investigation of several employees at the Idaho State Forensic Laboratory has revealed that certain employees were found to have violated procedures relating to the handling and auditing of controlled substances at the Pocatello lab from 2003 to 2011. Said violations were of such a serious nature that they may call into question the accuracy and integrity of the entire ISP Forensic Lab between 2003 and 2011. And, because of U.S. Supreme Court cases, Brady v. Maryland, U.S. v. Bagley and Giglio v. U.S., etc. these violations also call into question the legality of all resulting convictions.

If this information effects you, a friend, or a loved-one, please call Fuller Law Offices at 208-734-1602 or 1-800-967-1133 to schedule a free consultation.

RosaLee Brown Hansen

June 5, 1918-July 8, 2012

BURLEY • Our beautiful and beloved mother and grandma, RosaLee Brown Hansen, 94, slipped quietly through the veil Sunday, July 8, 2012, at Rosetta Assisted Living in Burley, Idaho.

RosaLee Brown Hansen was born June 5, 1918, in McHessor, Mont., to Jesse Jerome Brown and Anna Kenison Brown. Her early years were spent in Armstead, where she attended a one-room school. Her vivacious personality made her popular with her fellow students. Her early loves included horses and playing the violin. She graduated from Beaverhead County High School in Dillon, Mont., at age 16. She then attended Montana State Normal College (now the University of Montana Western) in Dillon and participated in school government and extracurricular clubs. She graduated with high honors and a B.A. She went on to obtain an M.A. at University of Northern Colorado in Greeley. Throughout her life, she had a great thirst for learning and a devotion to excellence in all she did.

She began her teaching career at age 19 in Conrad, Mont. She also taught art in Billings, Mont., Idaho Falls, Idaho, and arts and crafts at Burley High School for 17 years. She also attended the Art Students League in New York City and the School of the Art Institute of Chicago. Over the years, she attended many classes and workshops as well as teaching extension classes in art for Idaho State University.

During World War II, she became a recreation specialist in arts and crafts for the American Red Cross. She served two years at Camp Bowie, Texas, at Bruns General Hospital in Santa Fe, N.M. (where she worked with many soldiers who had contracted tuberculosis during their imprisonment as POWs), and what is now Lackland Field in San Antonio, Texas. She loved her Red Cross work and developed many lasting friendships. After the war, she spent a short time in Kansas City, Mo., as a commercial artist, but soon decided to return to her first love, teaching. She was offered a position at O. E. Bell Junior High School in Idaho Falls, Idaho, where she had many outstanding students and experiences.

She was baptized into The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints on March 5, 1949. She married Duane Allen Hansen on June 1, 1949, in Ammon, Idaho, and their marriage was solemnized Dec. 22, 1950, in the Idaho Falls LDS Temple. They moved to Burley, Idaho, in 1958 and have resided there since. Following their retirement, Duane and RosaLee enjoyed traveling the world, visiting their children and grandchildren and working in various church callings. Duane preceded her in death on Sept. 29, 2007.

She is survived by her two daughters, Rae H. (Mike) Waite of Hazelton, Idaho, and Christine H. (Paul) Jones of Spanish Fork, Utah. She has seven grandchildren, Christopher (Julie) Jones of Spanish Fork, Utah, Brett (Nikki) Waite of Gilbert, Ariz., Melissa Waite of Provo, Utah, Andrew (Leah) Jones of Orem, Utah, Kelli Waite of Provo, Utah, and Jennifer and Alix Jones of Spanish Fork, Utah; and two great-grandchildren, Michael and Caleb Waite of Gilbert, Ariz. Jackie Lee McFall Montgomery

March 3, 1953-July 6, 2012

TWIN FALLS • Jackie Lee McFall Montgomery, 59, of Twin Falls, passed away Friday, July 6, 2012, at St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center after a long battle of kidney failure.

Jackie was born March 3, 1953, to Harry and Mary McFall in Winner, S.D. They later moved to Idaho. Jackie married Jack Montgomery on Aug. 23, 1969, in a little white church in Filer. Together they raised their three children, Laurall, Frankie and Kippi, in the Magic Valley area. Horses were Jackie's passion; whether being a 4-H leader, training, racing or showing and going on wagon trains, they were always a part of her life.

Jackie is survived by her loving husband, Jack; her children and immediate family.

A memorial Mass will be celebrated at 11 a.m. Friday, July 13, at St. Jerome's Catholic Church, 216 Second Ave. E. in Jerome, with Father Ron Wekerle celebrating.

L. Joe Rowbury

Sept. 10, 1943-July 5, 2012

BOISE • Larry Joe Rowbury, 68, of Boise passed away at a local hospital Thursday, July 5, 2012.

Joe was born Sept. 10, 1943, to Sherwin J. and Kathryn B. Rowbury in Boise, Idaho. Joe spent his early childhood years living on a ranch in Oakley, Idaho, and later the family moved to Twin Falls, Idaho. Joe graduated from Twin Falls High School in 1961. He loved his beautiful fast cars and was always looking to drag race his 1961 Impala!

Joe began his career in "heavy equipment" as a mechanic in Salt Lake City, Utah, for Foulger Equipment Company in 1965. Shortly afterward, he moved to Boise following in his Dad's footsteps selling construction equipment for most of his working career. It has been said that Joe was one of the best most genuine, loyal and honest salesman in southern Idaho. He met countless customers that became his treasured friends.

Joe loved spending time with his family. He was especially proud of his four children and five grandchildren. He enjoyed returning to his early childhood stomping grounds of the Oakley Basin to deer hunt each season, going to the movie theater and reading a good book. Later in life, he enjoyed collecting antique horse-drawn farm equipment (which he refurbished), coins, and Coca-Cola and M&M memorabilia.

Joe spent half of his life fighting liver disease and, as a result, cancer toward the end of his life. His passion for life and his determination to live was inspirational. The family would like to thank all the doctors and nurses over the years who helped sustain his life.

Joe is survived by his Uncle Bob and Aunt Marilyn Hoke; his brother, Ron H. Rowbury; and sister, Vicky A. Elliott (Jerry); his daughters, Kimberly L. Kenny (Jeff) and Jennifer J. Miller (Terry); his son, J. Ryan Rowbury (Kacie); his granddaughters, Tyler M. Kenny and Josie E. Rowbury; and grandsons, William K. Kenny, Maxwell D. Kenny and Brody K. Rowbury; and numerous nieces, nephews, and cousins. Joe was preceded in death by his youngest daughter, Stephanie J. Rowbury; his parents, Sherwin J. and Kathryn B. Rowbury; his maternal and paternal grandparents; and two nieces, Kathi N. Hall and Staci L. Hall.

Dad (Joe) loved life and all it had to offer despite his medical/health issues. His smile, laugh, love and positive outlook will be greatly missed. We love you dad!

The funeral will be held at 2 p.m. Thursday, July 12, at the Cloverdale Funeral Home, 1200 N. Cloverdale Road in Boise, with a reception following at the Cloverdale Reception Center.

Q. I worry about keeping my grandparents safe in the sun and heat this summer. Do you have any tips I can share with them?

A. You are correct that summer poses some special dangers. Dehydration, sunburn, and heat stroke are very real concerns. Remind your loved ones to drink plenty of liquids every day during the summer and to limit caffeinated beverages. Loose-fitting clothes can help people keep cool; encourage your grandparents to select cotton wear for every day, and to enjoy light bright colors that will reflect sun and heat. Be sure they have and use sunblock, hats and sunglasses when outdoors. If an outing is planned, stress the need to balance time in the sun with time in the shade. Caution your grandparents about over-exertion and review signs of heat stroke (flushed face, high body temperature, headache, nausea, rapid pulse, dizziness and confusion). While there is "fun in the sun" for people of all ages, it is very important for most seniors to stay inside during extreme temperatures.

Having More Retirement Accounts Is Not The Same As Having More Money.

When it comes to the number of retirement accounts you have, the saying "more is better" is not necessarily true. In fact, if you hold multiple accounts with various brokers, it can be difficult to keep track of your investments and to see if you're properly diversified.* At the very least, multiple accounts usually mean multiple fees.

Bringing your accounts to Edward Jones could help solve all that. Plus, one statement can make it easier to see if you're moving toward your goals.

* Diversification does not guarantee a profit or protect against loss.

To learn why consolidating your retirement accounts to Edward Jones makes sense, call your local financial advisor today.

Euro Finance Ministers Agree on Bailout for Spain

BY DON MELVIN
Associated Press

BRUSSELS • Euro area finance ministers agreed on the terms of a bailout for Spain's troubled banks, saying 30 billion euros can be ready by the end of this month. The finance ministers for the 17 countries that use the euro as their official currency will return to Brussels on July 20 to finalize the agreement, officials said earlier this morning. As part of the agreement with Spain, finance ministers from all 27 European Union countries are expected Tuesday to approve a one-year extension, until 2014, of Spain's deadline for achieving a budget deficit of 3 percent.

Dispute over Bankrupt Dairy Heads to Supreme Court

BY ALISON GENE SMITH
alismsmith@gmagicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • The outcome of a lawsuit between a defunct Buhl dairy and Farmers National Bank has some area farmers worried.

Specifically, local dairy men fear an attempt by a group of feed sellers to re-coup loans from a bankrupt dairy will make it more difficult to borrow money.

"It has the potential to lower the value of what you can borrow based on cattle," said Bob Naerebout, executive director of the Idaho Dairymen's Association.

When a dealer sells an agricultural product, like feed, a lien is created on the sold product. The question is whether Idaho law (Idaho Code 45-1802) states a lien by a feed seller attaches only to the actual feed sold, or if it also attaches to the livestock that eat the feed.

The case has its roots back in 2008 and 2009, when Green River Dairy, owned by Herculano and Frances Alves, took out 10 loans with Farmers National Bank with their dairy's cattle as collateral.

Court records state several feed sellers - including Hull Farms, Carter Hay and Livestock, Lewis Becker, Jack McCall and Tim Thornson - sold hay and wheat to the dairy to be used as cattle feed.

Dairy cows feed at a local dairy. A lawsuit now headed to Idaho's highest court could define how loans connected to cattle feed are treated.

Later, Green River Dairy defaulted on its loans with Farmers. The bank then took possession of the cattle and sold them through an auction, raising $211,957.58.

With money still owed the feed sellers, they sought part of the proceeds, arguing their liens should not become invalid just because the feed is eaten. A lien would become of little value if it disappeared with the feed, given how quickly feed is eaten, they argued.

Twin Falls County 5th District Judge G. Richard Bevan ruled in favor of the feed sellers, denying Farmers' claim that its lien on the Alcoa slides to 2Q loss, but backs growth forecast • Alcoa Inc. said Monday it slid to a second-quarter loss from a year-ago profit, dragged down by hefty charges and weak aluminum prices. But the results edged above analysts' expectations and the aluminum maker backed its forecast for solid global demand later this year. The aluminum industry has faced rising inventories and lackluster demand as the global economy slowed. Sales to the construction industry continue to be weak. Aluminum prices dropped 18 percent this past year, dragging Alcoa's second-quarter revenue down 9 percent to $5.96 billion.

"They could drop that again. Instead of $950 they could say less," he said. "In certain cases the bank could say no."

The dairy association will file an affidavit for the Supreme Court to consider during the appeal, Naerebout said. The case shouldn't just be important to farmers and dairymen, he said.

"People understand borrowing and being able to borrow against your equity," he said. "This is potentially don't being able to do that."

New Law Gives US Companies a Break on Pensions

BY ALAN FRAM
Associated Press

WASHINGTON • A new law will let companies contribute billions of dollars less to their workers' pension funds, raising concerns about weakening the plans that millions of Americans count on for retirement.

But with many companies already freezing or getting rid of pension plans, many critics are reluctant to force the issue.

Some expect the changes, passed by Congress last month and signed Friday by President Barack Obama, to have little impact on the nation's enormous $1.9 trillion in estimated pension fund assets. And it is more important, they suggest, to avoid giving employers a new reason to limit or jettison remaining pension benefits by forcing them to contribute more than they say they can manage.

The equation underscores a harsh reality for unions, consumer advocates and others who normally go to the mat for workers and retirees: When it comes to battling over pensions, the fragile economy of 2012 gives the business community a lot of leverage.

"That wouldn't do our members any good" if the government forces companies to make pension contributions they can't afford, said Karen Feldman, benefits policy specialist for the AFL-CIO, the giant labor federation that supported the legislation.

AARP lobbyist Debbie Chalfie said the seniors organization was concerned companies contribute the right amount to their pension funds, but at the same time, "We want to make sure employers continue offering these plans."

Even the Pension Rights Center, which advocates for pensioners, was torn. Executive Vice President Karen Friedman said the group was "sympathetic to business concerns" that companies have been hurt by the recession, though still worried that reducing corporate pension contributions could hurt consumers.

The short-term contribution cuts worry University of Pennsylvania insurance professor Olivia S. Mitchell, who says the fact that Congress can change the formula "does not mean that pension funds will be able to defy the laws of economics and finance."

Nearly half of Americans say they are counting heavily on their pensions for retirement, according to an Associated Press-LifeGoesStrong.com poll conducted last October. Yet times are rough for pensioners.

Only 15 percent of private sector workers participate in defined benefit plans, which guarantee company-paid monthly retirement payments, according to the Employee Benefit Research Institute. That 2008 figure was down from 38 percent in 1979.

During that same period, the number of workers in defined contribution plans, like 401(k) investments to which workers and companies contribute, has grown to 43 percent. These plans are considered less advantageous for employees because workers contribute much of the money and bear the investment risk.

Four of every five of the 27,000 single-company pension plans insured by the government's Pension Benefit Guaranty Corp. were considered underfunded in 2009, meaning their liabilities exceeded their assets. The average plan carried just 81 percent of the money it needed, a record low, the PBGC says. Liabilities are due over workers' lifetimes, not all at once.

More than one in four companies have frozen benefits, meaning employees can no longer collect a bigger check in retirement by working additional years or getting promotions and raises. In the government's 2011 budget year, the PBGC took over 152 plans, bringing to nearly 4,300 the number it controls or is planning to take over, covering 1.5 million workers and retirees.

Obama Seeks to Shift Election Toward Tax Debate

WASHINGTON (AP) • Facing sagging jobs numbers, President Barack Obama sought to recast the November election as a fight over tax fairness on Monday, urging tax cut extensions for all families earning less than $250,000 but denying them to households making more than that.

The president's pitch was aimed at painting Republican rival Mitt Romney as a protector of the rich at a time of economic unease, as Democrats intensify efforts to raise questions about the Romney's own wealth and offshore bank accounts.

Romney supports extending the federal tax cuts, first signed by George W. Bush, for all income earners.

Obama said if Congress passes a one-year extension for those making less than $250,000, voters can use the November election to decide the fate of the cuts for higher income earners.

"My opponent will fight to keep them in place. I will fight to end them," said Obama, flanked by a dozen people the White House said would benefit from the tax cut extension.

Detroit Mom Questions How Daughter Got Shot during Hug

BY COREY WILLIAMS
Associated Press

DETROIT • The mother of a Detroit woman shot and killed while dancing with an off-duty police officer questioned Monday why he would carry a loaded gun at a party in his own backyard.

Police said Adaisha Miller was dancing with the officer when she hugged him from behind. His gun, which was in a waist holster, went off, and the bullet punctured Miller's lung and hit her heart. She died at a hospital.

Detroit Police Chief Ralph Godbee described Miller's death during a Monday news conference as a tragic, "unfathomable" accident.

"Somehow, in the course of dancing with the individual to his rear and touching his waist, his Detroit Police Department-issued weapon discharged, striking Ms. Miller," Godbee said. "There is absolutely no indication that the officer placed his hand on his weapon at all!"

Godbee implied contact from Miller appeared to have caused the gun to go off, but he stopped short of saying she pulled the trigger on the .40-caliber handgun.

The officer, 38-year-old Isaac Parrish, has been placed on desk duty while the case is investigated. There was no answer at his home early Monday afternoon. Godbee said Parrish is "very remorseful!"

Miller's mother, Yolanda McNair, told The Associated Press her daughter would have turned 25 Monday and she was celebrating the weekend before her birthday. Miller was invited to the Saturday night fish fry at Parrish's home by friends who knew him, her mother said.

"Why do you need a gun at your own house? Why do you need a gun at your own party?" McNair asked. She said she would be watching the police investigation closely.

Godbee said the officer's gun had a safety mechanism built into the trigger.

The Smith & Wesson M&P primarily was designed for police and military use. It does not have a safety switch, but the trigger has to be pulled back completely for the gun to fire, certified firearms instructor Rick Ector said.

Ector said that if properly holstered, the gun cannot be fired accidentally.

US Military Buries Airmen Killed in 1965 Laos Crash

It was Christmas Eve 1965 when the Air Force plane nicknamed 'Spooky' took off from Vietnam for a combat mission. The crew sent out a 'mayday' signal while flying over Laos, and after that, all contact was lost. Two days of searches turned up nothing.

BY MATTHEW BARAKAT

ARLINGTON, Va. • Ever since Sherrie Hassenger's husband went missing with five other U.S. airmen over Laos in 1965, her purpose has been to wish and to hope he would come home. When those men's remains were buried in a single casket Monday at Arlington National Cemetery, she said, some of that purpose was taken away.

"All I listen to is '50s, '60s music," she said. "When I saw those Air Force men in those dress blues, just like back then, I just wanted to go up and hug them and kiss them. It felt like maybe I could find a piece of my husband in them."

The charred remains of the six airmen — identified not through DNA matches but through dental records, personal items and other circumstantial evidence — were buried in a single casket with full military honors, as is common in situations where remains can't be conclusively linked to a specific individual. The remains are representative of six Air Force servicemen: Col. Joseph Christiano of Rochester, N.Y.; Col. Derrell B. Jeffords of Florence, S.C.; Lt. Col. Dennis L. Eilers of Cedar Rapids, Iowa; Chief Master Sgt. William K. Colwell of Glen Cove, N.Y.; Chief Master Sgt. Arden K. Hassenger of Lebanon, Ore.; and Chief Master Sgt. Larry C. Thornton of Idaho Falls, Idaho.

The Air Force gave all six posthumous promotions, a military spokeswoman said.

It was Christmas Eve 1965 when their Air Force plane, nicknamed "Spooky," took off from Vietnam for a combat mission. The crew sent out a "mayday" signal while flying over Laos, and after that, all contact was lost. Two days of searches turned up nothing.

For nearly half a century, the airmen's families endured an emotional kaleidoscope that they say is difficult to describe to those who never had to face it. The men were listed for years as missing, and family members held out hope at first that their loved ones had survived. For most that hope faded over time, despite an occasional unconfirmed report that crew members were seen alive. The crash site has been excavated several times over the past decade, but it was not until 2010 and 2011 that human remains were recovered.

Even though Sherrie Hassenger's husband perhaps had the most conclusive identification of all six crew members — a tooth of Hassenger's was recovered and matched through dental records — she and her son Keith Hassenger said they still have nagging doubts about what happened. Both said they appreciated Monday's service and were grateful so many people came to pay respects, but they said they had a difficult time getting answers over the years. The tooth, in their mind, raises more questions than answers: If a single tooth was found, they wonder, wouldn't it make sense that other teeth or perhaps his skull could be found also?

Keith Hassenger said that while they approached Monday's service with the feeling it might help provide closure, that comfort proved elusive.

"This may be the only thing we get," he said.

United Nations-Arab League special envoy to Syria Kofi Annan, left, meets with Syrian President Bashar Assad in Damascus, Syria, on Monday.

U.N. ENVOY SEEKS IRANIAN HELP ON SYRIAN CRISIS

BEIRUT (AP) • International envoy Kofi Annan tried to rescue his peace plan for Syria by seeking help Monday from Iran, a staunch ally and military backer of President Bashar Assad's regime.

Before flying to Tehran, Annan said he agreed on a new approach with Assad to stop the violence, which activists say killed more than 17,000 people since the conflict began in March 2011.

Annan did not spell out the agreement or say what kind of involvement he saw for Iran in resolving the crisis. Anti-regime fighters dismissed any role for Iran in a plan they and some experts say has little hope of succeeding.

"Kofi thinks you can't have a political transition and solution without the Iranians on board, but this is still part of the understanding that Assad and the regime will be part of the solution — an idea many of us have given up on," said Salman Shaikh, director of the Brookings Doha Center and an analyst on regional politics. The United States rejected Iranian participation in international meetings on the crisis in Syria.

Annan, the joint envoy for Syria from the U.N. and the Arab League, presented a peace plan earlier this year, but it was deeply troubled from the start.

Government forces and rebels have widely disregarded a cease-fire that was to begin in April, and spreading violence kept nearly 300 U.N. observers monitoring the truce stuck in their hotels in Syria.

After a two-hour meeting with Assad on Monday, Annan said the men agreed on "an approach" to stop the violence, and that the diplomat would share it with the armed opposition.

"I also stressed the importance of moving ahead with a political dialogue which the president accepts," Annan said.

Annan then flew to Tehran to seek help from Iranian officials. Iran's semi-official Fars news agency said he would meet with Foreign Minister Ali Akbar Salehi and top security official Saeed Jalili.

Egypt's Top Court Says Ruling on Parliament Final

BY HAMZA HENDAWI
Associated Press

CAIRO • Egypt's highest court insisted Monday that its ruling to invalidate the Islamist-dominated parliament was final and binding, setting up a showdown with the country's newly elected president after he ordered lawmakers to return.

The announcement on state TV came a day after President Mohammed Morsi recalled the legislators, defying the powerful military's decision to dismiss parliament after the Supreme Constitutional Court ruled that a third of its members had been elected illegally.

However, both sides appeared together Monday at a military graduation ceremony. Morsi sat between the head of the armed forces Field Marshal Hussein Tantawi and Chief-of-Staff Sami Anan. The three sat grim faced for most of the ceremony, but Tantawi and Morsi exchanged a few words while seated on the reviewing stand.

The powerful military, meanwhile, delivered a thinly veiled warning to Morsi, saying it trusted that all state institutions will respect the constitutional declarations issued by the military during its 16 months in power since the fall of Hosni Mubarak.

The declarations are an interim measure after the constitution in effect under Mubarak's 29-year rule was suspended. A new and permanent constitution has yet to be drafted.

The last of the two declarations, issued June 17, gave the military far-reaching powers after handing over control to Morsi on June 30.

The statement said the military would continue to support "legitimacy, the constitution and the law" — language that means the generals would likely take the judiciary's side in its tussle with Morsi over the fate of parliament.

What Does Morsi Mean for Israel

Is the election of Mohamed Morsi, the Muslim Brotherhood candidate, as president of Egypt the beginning of the end of the Camp David peace treaty between Israel and Egypt? It doesn't have to be. In fact, it could actually be the beginning of a real peace between the Israeli and the Egyptian peoples, instead of what we've had: a cold, formal peace between Israel and a single Egyptian pharaoh. But, for that to be the case, both sides will have to change some deeply ingrained behaviors, and fast.

Thomas L. Friedman
New York Times

First, let's dispense with some nonsense. There is a mantra you hear from Benjamin Netanyahu's government in Israel and various right-wing analysts: "We told you so." It's the idea that somehow President Barack Obama could have intervened to "save" President Hosni Mubarak of Egypt and he was just too naive to do so, and the inevitable result is that the Muslim Brotherhood has taken power. Sorry, naivete is thinking that because it was so convenient for Israel to have peace with one dictator, Mubarak, rather than 80 million Egyptians, that this dictator — or some other general — would and could stay at the helm in Egypt forever. Talk about naive.

I truly appreciate the anxiety Israelis feel at seeing their neighborhood imploding. But it is also striking that a people for whom the Exodus story of liberation is so central — and who for so long argued that peace will happen only when the Arabs become democratic — failed to believe that the liberation narrative might one day resonate with the people of Egypt and now proclaim that the problem with the Arabs is that they are becoming democratic. This has roots.

"In their relations with power, Jews in exile have always preferred vertical alliances to horizontal ones," notes Leon Wieseltier, the Jewish scholar and literary editor of The New Republic. "They always preferred to have a relationship with the king or the bishop so as not to have to engage with the general population, of which they were deeply distrustful — and they often had reason to be distrustful. Israel, as a sovereign state, reproduced the old Jewish tradition of the vertical alliance, only this time with the Arab states. They thought that if they had a relationship with Mubarak or the king of Jordan, they had all they needed. But the model of the vertical alliance only makes sense with authoritarian political systems. As soon as authoritarianism breaks down, and a process of democratization begins, the vertical model is over and you enter a period of horizontality in which the opinions of the people — in this instance, ordinary Arabs — will matter."

As a result, Israel will have to make the man on the street "not only fear it, but also understand it. This will not be easy, but it may not be impossible. Anyway, nostalgia for dictators is not a thoughtful policy.

"I don't know whether the current Palestinian leadership can be a partner for a secure, two-state peace with Israel, but I do know this: Israel needs to be more creative in testing whether that is possible. Because the alternative is a one-state solution that will be the death of Israel as a Jewish democracy and deadly for peace with a democratic Egypt.

And what are Morsi's obligations? Have no illusions: The Muslim Brotherhood at its core holds deeply illiberal, anti-pluralistic, anti-feminist views. It aspires to lock itself into power and exploit a revolution it did not initiate. I just don't think it is going to be so easy. Iran is political Islam in power with oil — to buy off all the pressures and contradictions. Saudi Arabia is political Islam in power with oil. Egypt will be political Islam in power without oil. Egypt can't survive without tourism, foreign investment and aid to create the jobs, schools and opportunities to satisfy the Egyptian youths who launched this revolution and many others who passively supported it. Also, the U.S. cannot, will not and should not give the Muslim Brotherhood the same deal it gave Mubarak — just arrest and torture the jihadists we want and you can have a cold peace with Israel and no constitutionalism at home.

As the analyst Hussein Ibish wrote in Now Lebanon, with the Muslim Brotherhood in power, it is now vital for liberals in Egypt and abroad to focus on ensuring that Egypt's new constitution is built on laws that constrain "the powers of government and ensure ironclad, inviolable protection for the rights of individuals, minorities and women."

So Morsi is going to be under enormous pressure to follow the path of Turkey, not the Taliban. Will he? I have no idea. He should understand, though, that he holds a powerful card — one Israelis would greatly value: real peace with a Muslim Brotherhood-led Egypt, which could mean peace with the Muslim world and a true end to the conflict.

Hillary Finally Has Her Moment

Will the blonde flip and sunglasses be Hillary Clinton's last fashion statement?

To put it another way: Is being a stellar secretary of state the end of the political line for Clinton? Or will she run for president again, opening more fissures in the glass ceiling in which she made 18 million cracks in 2008?

Clinton's answer is wistful. She longs for the time "to collect myself and spend it doing just ordinary things," she said last month. "Like taking a walk without a lot of company?"

For a more satisfying response, tune in to a new show on USA Network premiering July 15 called "Political Animals." In this season of political dramas (HBO's "Veep" and "Newsroom"), this one stands out partly because of Sigourney Weaver's Elaine Barrish, who is a thinly disguised Clinton. Weaver's Clinton, however, has more troublesome offspring (two sons, one of whom is an addict), a divorce (she dumped her philandering spouse), and snappier dialogue (she asks a dogged female reporter how it feels to win awards for "stepping on the throat of someone else's marriage").

If anyone's life doesn't need added drama, it's Clinton's. That's TV for you. Before she was the most admired woman in the world, she was the most fascinating one, equally endearing and maddening from the moment she appeared in Life magazine in 1969 after delivering a commencement address at

Margaret Carlson

Bloomberg News

Wellesley criticizing the prior speaker, Senator Edward Brooke.

She went on to become first lady of Arkansas (the first to hold a job outside the mansion, famously leaving her no time to bake cookies and have tea), the first woman to become a partner at the state's leading law firm, and the first not to take her husband's name (until he lost re-election and she swiftly depsexed the Rodham). As first lady, she was the first to run for the Senate (and win) and for president (and lose). Now as the improbable secretary of state in her former opponent's Cabinet, she has one name, rock-star status around the world.

So why wouldn't she take the power accumulated as the most successful female presidential candidate ever — and run again? Clinton has been coy before; in 2004, she began preparing for the campaign she denied would ever occur. Is she being coy again when she says she wants to kick back and smell the roses (and perhaps a grandchild, should one come along)?

Many think so. Former House Speaker Nancy Pelosi, former Democratic National Committee Chairman and Pennsylvania governor Ed Rendell and, of course, former president Bill Clinton have mused that she will run.

There was even a rumor she might challenge Barack Obama for the 2012 nomination. (Hogwash, her staff said.) Then there was the spate of talk about Clinton and Vice President Joe Biden trading places. (Just as absurd.) Now there is constant musing over what would be the next perfect job for Clinton, as if she's actively searching. President of the World Bank? Secretary of Defense? Supreme Court justice?

All this speculation is a testament to the remarkable job Clinton has done as secretary of state. She's still the best student in class, mastering every detail, taking every trip, attending every meeting, not leaving a country until after she has thanked the foreign service staff there.

With the benefit of a serious traveling press corps, she's shifted attention away from her headband to her head. She reaps much of the credit for handling the Libyan uprising and little of the blame for Iraq and Afghanistan. The parallel government her detractors said she would set up in Foggy Bottom never materialized. She has been nothing but loyal to the president, and Obama appreciates her all the more as an expert on how to live in the White House fishbowl.

Could it be that suffering has made Clinton whole?

Much of her time in the White House, she was hunted and haunted by forces beyond her control. While she may be sleepless now in multiple time zones, she can rest knowing she's the master of her fate. She can let go with the big laugh in public that her friends knew in private, toss back Bellinis with journalists in Rome, drink beer and dance with State Department staff in Cartagena. (This last earned her the headline "Swillary" in the New York Post.)

What would have sent her into damage-control mode in the 1990s now makes her want to join in the fun. Take the example of Texts From Hillary, which used a photo of her in big, dark glasses on a big, wide military plane sending a text message as the basis for a Tumblr of made-up captions, mostly to and from celebrities.

The site became a viral sensation, and instead of protesting it, Clinton got in to it. The real "Hilz" texted the site's founders, saying it had her ROFL and inviting them over for a visit.

What didn't kill Clinton made her stronger — and more at peace. In two roller-coaster decades, Clinton has suffered crushingly low poll numbers as first lady, the suicide of her best friend in the White House, her husband's humiliating affair and impeachment, and her own devastating defeat at the hands of the upstart she now works for. She has discovered other ways to be happy than being president.

Hillary has not only endured, she has prevailed. What comes next in her public life may be less important than what she has found in her inner life.

Malware Deadline Passes, Very Few Knocked Offline

BY LOLITA C. BALDOR AND BARBARA ORTUTAY
Associated Press

WASHINGTON • If you're reading this online, you're fine. The day that was supposed to see thousands of people knocked off the Internet has arrived, but only a few people were affected.

Thousands of Internet users across the U.S. and beyond waited too long or simply didn't believe warnings that they would lose access to the Internet just after midnight because of malware that took over computers around the world more than a year ago.

At 12:01 a.m. on Monday, the FBI turned off Internet servers that were functioning as a temporary safety net to keep infected computers online for the past eight months. A court order the agency had gotten to keep the servers running expired, and was not renewed.

FBI officials are tracking the number of computers they believe still may be infected by the malware. As of Sunday night, there were about 41,800 in the U.S., down from 45,600 on July 4. Worldwide, the total is roughly 211,000 infected. An estimated 2.3 billion people around the world use the Internet, according to Internet World Stats.

Considering there are millions of Internet users across the country, several thousand losing access isn't a big deal — unless you are one of them.

As the deadline approached, Internet service providers such as AT&T Inc. and Time Warner Cable Inc. set up their own safety nets to allow the affected computers to continue to access the Internet.

AT&T said only a "small percentage" of its customers were affected by the virus. To make sure they can continue to access the Internet, the company will maintain legitimate Internet servers for them through the end of the year.

Earthquake-Damaged Washington Monument May Be Closed Until 2014

BY MICHAEL E. RUANE
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON • The earthquake-damaged Washington Monument could remain closed into 2014, the National Park Service said, and its repairs will require the exterior and part of the interior of the 555-foot structure to be shrouded in scaffolding.

The estimated $15 million project could require the temporary removal of part of the granite plaza surrounding the monument and involve construction of an access road on the south side of its grounds.

Robert Vogel, superintendent of the Park Service's National Mall and Memorial Parks, said the project also may require the temporary removal of some of the plaza's flagpoles and benches.

The marble and granite monument was extensively damaged by the 5.8 magnitude earthquake that struck the area Aug. 23, 2011.

The structure — especially near the top — sustained cracks and loosened pieces of stone and lost mortar when it was essentially whiplashed by the quake.

The monument, which is entered by about 600,000 visitors a year, has been closed since the quake struck. Officials had said it might be closed until next year, but they now say the complex work could stretch into the following year. Repairs should be under way by fall and could take 12 to 18 months, Vogel said.

The monument repair project manager, Michael Morelli, said the park service issued a request for bids late last month and hopes to get proposals by July 31. Contracts should be awarded by next month.

Vogel said the exterior scaffolding is required because of the difficulty of working in the confined interior of the monument. But Morelli noted that some inside scaffolding will be needed for interior work near the top.

Large chunks of stone were shaken loose by the earthquake, and other cracked pieces were removed by inspectors in the weeks after to prevent debris from falling.

The removed pieces were saved, Morelli said, and engineers hope to fasten them back into place with metal dowels.

Where stone is missing, new patches — called "dutchmen" — can be cut from extra monument stone the Park Service has in storage or from a quarry that has previously provided repair stone, Morelli said.

He said eight to 10 feet of the granite plaza pavers around the monument probably would have to be removed to pour the foundation for the scaffolding. The pavers would be saved and reset after the repairs are finished.

The scaffolding will be much like that used when the monument's exterior was refurbished 12 years ago, Morelli said, adding that the Park Service would like to use the decorative nylon "scrim" that was on the scaffolding 12 years ago, if it can afford it.

He said the repairs also will include the installation of 31 metal brackets to better fasten some of the exterior slabs on the monument's pointed pyramidion. Some of the stone lips, or "rib tips," on which the slabs rest were cracked by the quake, and the slabs need to be more securely attached.

"Even though that panel's on an angle, if you got another shake or something, you wouldn't want that falling out and then falling down 500 feet to the ground," Morelli said.

"Those stone panels weigh about 2,000 pounds. You'd hate to see even a part of one fall out and start heading toward the ground."

The project will create an extensive construction site, with a crane likely required to install the scaffolding and an access road built to the monument from a staging area nearby.

Abuses Surface at Legion School

BY NICOLE WINFIELD
Associated Press

VATICAN CITY • Dozens of women who attended a high school run by the disgraced Legion of Christ religious order urged the Vatican to close the program, saying the psychological abuse they endured trying to live like teenage nuns led to multiple cases of anorexia, stress-induced migraines, depression and even suicidal thoughts.

The women sent a letter this weekend to the pope's envoy running the Legion to denounce the manipulation, deception and disrespect they say they suffered at the hands of counselors barely older than themselves at the Rhode Island school. For some, the trauma required years of psychological therapy that cost them tens of thousands of dollars.

A copy of the letter was provided to The Associated Press by the letter's 77 signatories, a dozen of whom agreed to be interviewed about their personal problems for the sake of warning parents against sending their children to the program's schools in the U.S., Mexico and Spain.

"I have many defining and traumatic memories that I believe epitomize the systematic breakdown of the person" in the school, Mary told The Associated Press in an email exchange. She developed anorexia after joining in 1998, weighed less than 85 pounds when she left and dropped to 68 pounds before beginning to recover at home. "The feelings of worthlessness, shame and isolation that are associated with those memories are still vivid and shocking."

Mary, who asked that her last name not be used, blamed her eating disorder on acute loneliness — girls were prevented from making close friends or confiding in their families — and the tremendous pressure she felt as a 16-year-old to perfectly obey the strictest rules dictating how she should walk, sit, pray and eat.

It's the latest blow to the troubled, cult-like Legion, which was discredited in 2009 when it revealed that its founder was a pedophile and drug addict who fathered three children.

The Legion suffered subsequent credibility problems following its recent admission that its most famous priest fathered a child and the current Legion superior covered it up for years.

Seasonal Firefighters Seek Health Care Coverage

Thousands of wildland firefighters aren't eligible for federal health insurance, so they have launched an online petition to change that — drawing more than 90,000 signatures in a matter of days.

BY DAN ELLIOTT
Associated Press

DENVER • They work the front lines of the nation's most explosive wildfires, navigating treacherous terrain, dense walls of smoke and tall curtains of flame. Yet thousands of the nation's seasonal firefighters have no health insurance for themselves or their families.

Many firefighters are now asking to buy into a federal government health plan, largely out of anger over a colleague who was left with a $70,000 hospital bill after his son was born prematurely.

Their request has been bolstered by more than 125,000 signatures gathered in an online petition during this year's historic fire season in the West and the ongoing national debate over health care.

"You pray you don't get sick," said firefighter John Lauer, a member of the Tatanka Hotshots crew based in Custer, S.D., who recently worked the massive High Park Fire in northern Colorado and started the petition.

The fire crews are heroes to those in the path of the flames. Politicians praise their bravery. Grateful residents buy them pizzas and send thank-you cards.

"That's what makes the job great," Lauer said. "But sometimes I wonder to myself. I wonder if people know we're uninsured?"

Firefighters do get workers' compensation if they are hurt on the job, but that doesn't cover them in the off-season.

The National Interagency Fire Center in Boise, Idaho, which coordinates firefighting efforts nationwide, says 15,000 wildland firefighters are on the federal payroll this year. Of that number, some 8,000 are classified as temporary seasonal employees, who work on a season-to-season basis with no guarantee of a job the following year and no access to federal benefits.

Some seasonal firefighters say they put in a year's worth of hours in six months.

In two years, the Affordable Care Act, the new federal health care law, will allow seasonal firefighters the same opportunity to buy health insurance as other uninsured Americans. But firefighters want to be able to choose among the plans offered by the federal government, like other federal employees, said Cory K. Bythrow, a spokesman for the National Federation of Federal Employees, a labor union.

Mark Davis, president of the Forest Service Council of the union, estimates it would cost the federal government $17.5 million a year to pay its share of premiums for seasonal firefighters working for the Forest Service, which employs about 70 percent of federal firefighters. The rest work for the Bureau of Land Management, the Bureau of Indian Affairs and other agencies.

The union is in talks with the Office of Personnel Management to extend health benefits to seasonal firefighters.

The agency declined to comment. Bythrow said he is optimistic a solution can be found.

Forest Service spokeswoman Julie Anne Overton cited one health care plan that would cost a firefighter $185 a month for individual coverage and $430 month for a family. Permanent year-round federal firefighters are paid from $24,500 to $54,000 before overtime. Seasonal workers make less, Overton said.

The case that prompted Lauer and others to start their petition drive was the 2008 birth of Nathan Ochs' son. Ochs, then a temporary seasonal wildland firefighter, had no insurance.

His wife, Constance Van Kley, said the family couldn't find health insurance at any price — though the hospital did eventually forgive most of the $70,000 bill.

Ochs subsequently became a permanent seasonal federal firefighter and got government insurance. But the experience galvanized him and others to press the government to make health coverage available to all federal wildland firefighters.

"I feel that it's unfair and that it sends a message that the work isn't valued as it should be," said Ochs, who also worked in Colorado's blazes this year.

No one disputes the dangers of the job: lightning, falling trees, a dangerous landscape, as well as smoke and flames. Since 2003, 157 people have died battling wildfires in the U.S., according to the International Association of Wildland Fire. Injury statistics were unavailable.

Would-be Burglar Gets Tangled in Window Blinds

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. • Police say a would-be burglar was halted by unlikely obstacles — window blinds.

KRQE-TV reported that police found Thomas Molina on Sunday tangled in some window blinds at Central New Mexico Community College in Albuquerque after police received a call about a break-in.

Police say the 38-year-old Molina told police he was looking for computer hardware.

Molina was arrested and charged with burglary and breaking and entering. He is being held on a $10,000 bond.

It was unclear if he had an attorney.

Wildfire

"We want the firefighters here," said Winson, owner of King and Hart's Bar and Grill. "We don't want our town to burn down."

The severity of a wildfire's damage remains raw to Dana Winson, who recently lost her house to fire in May.

As of Monday evening, the Kinyon Road grew to 190,000 acres in less than three days. The fire southwest of Castleford has jumped a defensive line at Saylor Creek Road and onto the Saylor Creek Bombing Range operated by Mountain Home Air Force Base.

Bureau of Land Management officials don't expect the fire to threaten homes but they aren't ruling anything out yet, said Chris Simonsen, fire manager officer for the agency.

The fire is believed to be 25 to 40 percent contained, with no estimate for full containment or control, Simonsen said. Fire officials believe the fire could grow to cover up to 250,000 acres before it's completely stopped but that could change depending on weather patterns.

Monday, the wildfire was among the largest in the nation — behind fires in Montana and New Mexico.

"The weather hasn't been our friend," he said. "It's been that it's warm all day and then there might be a down draft wind that really pushes the fire. That's how it's grown so big."

With 220 crew members currently fighting the blaze, the small town of Castleford is seeing an uptick in activity, said Stephanie Gonterman, an employee at the Corner Merc and Castleford resident.

U.S. Bureau of Land Management firefighters start a backburn while battling the Kinyon Road Fire on Saturday night. More than 250 firefighters are fighting the blaze that has consumed more than 190,000 acres.

Also Burning

The BLM reported two other fires in its Twin Falls District Monday:

• The Laidlaw Fire has burned 8,100 acres south of the Bear Den Butte Wilderness Study Area, which sits 23 miles southeast of Carey on the Blaine-Minidoka county line. Containment is estimated for 6 p.m. today. No structures were threatened as of Monday night.

• The Centennial Trail Fire was started by lightning Monday afternoon about six miles northwest of the Kinyon Road Fire. It was estimated at 100 acres, with no structures threatened.

"There are a lot more unfamiliar faces," she said. "We have a lot of people coming in and buying water or Gatorade."

Her home wasn't one of the few structures threatened during the early blazes on Saturday but her neighbors have been expressing concern over the fire's damage.

"We got a few people who are worried about grazing and their cows," she said.

Located at the high school are several semi-trucks providing resources for firefighters and personnel working to coordinate efforts on the fire.

Lee Devaeke contracts with the BLM to provide portable showers and sink stations across the country. In less than 24 hours, Devaeke was called from working in Colorado to move to Idaho.

"I got here at 4 a.m. this morning, I had less than two hours of sleep before I had to move," he said.

Devaeke will stay with the crews until he's called out to the next fire.

As crews begin to settle into the town, both fire officials and locals can't help but notice the similarities this year has with the 2007 Murphy Complex fire.

"There are lots of parallels with this fire season and 2007," Simonsen said. "But we've been bracing for this kind of fire all year."

A sign greets people at a bar along Main Street in Castleford on Monday.

Ed Kinyon works as the maintenance director for the Castleford School District. He helped clean and prep the building five years ago when firefighters used the school to battle the 650,000 acre wildfire.

"The amount of fire activity already happening this year is just like 2007," he said. "And it's only early July."

Notable Wildfires

At 190,000 acres, the Kinyon Road Fire has become one of the larger wildfires to burn a path through south-central Idaho in recent years. Here are some other notable fires from the last five years:

Red Bridge Fire • Burned 35,000 acres between Jerome and Shoshone in July 2007. On one frightening night, the Red Bridge fire raced up to the city limits of Shoshone before turning back just in time. Along the way, it knocked down 45 power poles, burned cattle and destroyed thousands of acres of pasture.

Murphy Complex Fire • Burned 650,000 acres in the desert west of Castleford in July 2007. The largest wildfire the region has seen in recent history, the Murphy Complex burned cattle, devastated rangeland and wildlife habitat, and sparked a debate over the role of grazing in fire management.

Castle Rock Fire • Burned 48,500 acres just west of Ketchum in August 2007. Castle Rock prompted evacuations and an intervention by Idaho politicians as it danced in the mountains above the resort town.

Auger Falls Fire • Burned 1,000 acres in the canyon near Twin Falls in July 2010. Though not as large as the others on this list, the fire scorched nearly 450 acres of the city's new Auger Falls Park and came dangerously close to homes on the canyon rim.

Long Butte Fire • Burned 300,000 acres west of Hagerman in August 2010. This fire tore through the Hagerman Fossil Beds National Monument and displaced a wild horse herd for about a year.

Members of an aviation crew pause a moment before they relocate away from Kinyon Road on Saturday.

Airport

At the Twin Falls airport, the BLM has gathered resources from around the state to help dump water and retardant on the flames.

"When it the fire first started, it was a little stressful getting everything in," said Mark Michelson, an assistant unit aviation manager also contracted with the BLM. "It's calmed down now that we're kind of on a rotation."

Aviation crews were scheduled to fuel seven heavy engine air tankers all throughout Monday, Michelson said.

"We're here to assist," he said. "If they (BLM) need something, we'll contact other resources across the nation to help find it."

The Idaho Boy's Latest Adventures

Editor's Note: Buhl High School alumnus and current Washington State pitcher J.D. Leckenby is pitching in the Cape Cod League this summer and sending periodic updates of his summer back east. This is the second update J.D. has written for the Times-News.

Life on the Cape

Brewster (Mass.), Buhl Indian alumnus and Washington State pitcher J.D. Leckenby gets ready to deliver a pitch during a recent game in the Cape Cod League.

It has been almost three weeks here in Brewster, Mass., and I have already made friendships and memories that will last a lifetime. We are getting into the daily grind of summer baseball, with games nearly every day and a number of limited off days that the team always looks forward to.

The Brewster White-caps is a very talented team and we have won a good amount of games against the best opponents in the league. We beat the Harwich Mariners 8-2 and 19-1, and the Mariners were the leader in the Cape until they ran into us. But the life here on the cape is just getting started.

Jason Monda my roommate from Washington State, catcher Spencer Navin (Vanderbilt), third baseman Dan Olinger (Minnesota) — who is from Great Falls Montana as well, so he kind of understands where an Idaho kid like me is coming from — and Erik Forgiore (Washington) has made up the main group of guys that have made a strong friendship out here.

We have teamed up for our off days in finding fun stuff to do out here on the Cape. Fishing has made it into our agenda quite often; there are plenty of ponds to catch pike bass and always a chance to run into an alligator snapping turtle — which almost tipped our canoe over I might add — but fishing is always we have enjoyed throughout our lives so why not cast out a line here on the Cape?

Recently we have been out deep-sea fishing with a fellow host dad. He has

Broncos to Help Christen New Husky Stadium

TIMES-NEWS

BOISE • Boise State will be the visiting team when the University of Washington unveils its newly remodeled Husky Stadium for the 2013 season, Bronco athletic officials announced Monday.

The game, which was originally scheduled for Sept. 7, has been bumped up to Aug. 31. To accommodate the move, Boise State moved its game against Tennessee-Martin — originally the season opener — to the following week.

The Broncos' remaining two non-conference games are at Brigham Young and at Bronco Stadium against Southern Mississippi. Additionally, the Broncos begin play in the Big East Conference, making the 2013 slate the most adventurous, if not most competitive as well.

"The 2013 schedule is going to be one of the toughest, if not the toughest, schedule in school history," Broncos head coach Chris Petersen said. "I think fans know how tough it is to play on the road at Washington and BYU. Add a game against an always-talented Southern Miss team and a very competitive Big East schedule with some teams we've never faced before and you have the makings of one of the strongest schedules in school history?"

ISU's Rumble Earns Preseason Honor

Idaho State wide receiver Rodrick Rumble was named to The Sports Network preseason FCS all-American team as a second-team selection, one of 14 Big Sky Conference players to earn such honors.

Rumble caught a school-record 112 passes for 1,348 yards (second-most, single-season) and nine touchdowns in his junior campaign. Twice, he caught 14 passes in a game, which is third all-time in ISU history. His 218 yards against Washington State is the third-best mark in school history.

Astros, Hawks Split Legion Twinbill

TWIN FALLS • Kimberly pitcher Clay Matthews made all of two bad throws in his team's Class A American Legion game at Canyon Ridge High School on Monday against the Twin Falls Hawks.

And one of them wasn't even to home plate. Matthews' throwing error to first base on what should have been a routine, inning-ending out instead extended the fifth inning, and Garrett Basham made Matthews pay for his mistake by lining a two-run single for the tying and go-ahead runs in the Hawks' 3-2 victory.

Kimberly's Sam Bourgeois went the distance in the second game, striking out six while walking just one as the Astros rebounded to earn a split with a 4-2 victory.

"It would happen that way," Kimberly coach A.J. Schroeder said of the tough-luck result in the opener. "He's running the show the whole game and a little play like that comes up to him ... if he makes the play, we win.

92-year-old World War II veteran hits the golf course three times a week.

TWIN FALLS • Sitting in the cool of the clubhouse, Roy Gikiu takes another swig from his Styrofoam coffee cup. Today is a good day to golf.

The sun is out, but it is not hot yet. A slight breeze blows, but it is not enough to affect his swing. Slowly others join the table and the group begins to chatter.

The ritualistic gathering is almost always the same.

They meet and drink coffee and then golf. It is just that simple.

As the others sit and trade verbal jabs, Gikiu quietly sits. Perhaps reflecting on his life or maybe he is just ready to hit the greens.

Gikiu, 92, still hits up the Twin Falls Golf Club three times a week to get his golf fix.

"I started as a caddie back in the '30s," said Gikiu. "They didn't let us golf that much back then. There were several years that I was gone to school and then I went to Gikiu served in the 442nd RTC during World War II where he was awarded both the Silver Star and Purple Heart, but it is not something that he likes to brag about. Instead, he likes to fo-

Prince Reigns Supreme in HR Derby

ASSOCIATED PRESS

KANSAS CITY, Mo. • Detroit's Prince Fielder became only the second player to win multiple titles in the All-Star Home Run Derby, thrilling the crowd at Kauffman Stadium with eight splash shots into the right-field fountain and beating Toronto's Jose Bautista 12-7 in the final Monday night.

On a night when the Yankees' Robinson Cano was repeatedly booed and went homerless, Fielder put on the most powerful display among baseball's big boppers. Winner at St. Louis' Busch Stadium three years ago, Fielder hit a total of 28 home runs over three rounds to cap the main event on the eve of the All-Star game, hitting the long drive of the night at 476 feet into the water.

Ken Griffey Jr. won three titles, in 1994, 1998 and 1999.

While the ball stayed out of McCovey Cove during the 2007 Derby at San Francisco's AT&T Park and the right-field swimming pool last year at Chase Field in Phoenix, there was plenty of aquatic activity in Kansas City, second only to Rome for most fountains in cities around the world.

After three splash shots among his five homers in the first round, Fielder started off the second round as the setting sun lit up clouds in a pretty pink behind the left-field wall. His mop of dreadlocks visible as he hit without a helmet, Fielder deposited four more balls into the 322-foot-wide water spectacular, which by then was illuminated in the twilight.

He added another water drive in the final round, then leaned against one of his sons while he watched Bautista swing.

Prince Fielder, of the American League's Detroit Tigers, takes a swing en route to winning the Home Run Derby for the second time in his career.

When he won three years ago in St. Louis, Fielder's 23 homers included a 503-foot drive that disappeared between two sections of bleachers in right-center.

Cano set a final-round record of 12 en route to last year's title in Phoenix, where he hit 32 overall. This year he was the object of loud booing throughout by fans upset he didn't select the Royals' Billy Butler after promising to take a hometown player for his derby team.

Fans chanted "Bil-ly Butler!" in between their boos. When it was over, Cano got hugs from Boston's David Ortiz and Yankees teammates Curtis Granderson and CC Sabathia.

"Everywhere the Yankees go play, they get booed all the time. I'm used to it," Cano said.

It was the 17th time a player went homerless in the Derby, the first since Detroit's Brandon Inge in 2009.

"that was the most interesting reaction to a home run derby i've ever seen, but the fans were excited which is all that counts," Granderson tweeted.

Carlos Gonzalez and Andrew McCutchen (four each) and Matt Kemp (one) also were dropped after the first round.

Carlos Beltran (12) was dropped after the second round, when Mark Trumbo and Bautista were tied with 13 apiece, leading to a swingoff won by Bautista 2-1.

Wiggins in Command After Time-trial Win

ASSOCIATED PRESS

BESANCON, France • If Monday's time trial at the Tour de France was "the test of truth" — as one top rider called it — then Bradley Wiggins aced it.

The Olympic champion, aiming to be the first British winner of cycling's showcase race, sped to victory in the first big time trial, tightening his grip on the yellow jersey.

"That was my physical best out there," he said. "It's probably my best time trial ever."

The race against the clock is a discipline Wiggins loves. And it showed in the ninth stage, a 25.8-mile ride from Arc-et-Senans to Besancon. He finished 35 seconds ahead of sky team-mate Christopher Froome, the runner-up.

Defending champion Cadel Evans of Australia, seen as Wiggins' most formidable rival, was a disappointing sixth. He called Wiggins and Froome "very, very, very strong riders."

A day earlier, Evans was all too aware of the stakes in the time trial: "Tomorrow is the test of truth. It's each with their own two legs," he said.

Evans was 1:43 behind. He remains second overall, trailing Wiggins by 1:53. Froome rose to third, from sixth, and is 2:07 behind his teammate.

"I was really motivated — the time trial is my thing," Wiggins said, adding he had worked hard on his riding position, breathing and study of the course. "I am very happy now."

Overall, Italy's Vincenzo Nibali is fourth, 2:23 behind. Russia's Denis Menchov is fifth, 3:02 back, and Spain's Haimar Zubeldia is sixth, 3:19 off the pace.

Wiggins has been the favorite since a dazzling stretch of three stage-race victories this season. At the Tour, he was fourth in 2009 and 24th in 2010, just behind Lance Armstrong, riding in his final Tour. He crashed out last year.

As this 99th Tour continues, Sky is likely to shelter Wiggins in the flats and escort him up Alps and Pyrenees climbs by pressing the pace with him in their draft, trying to wear out rivals.

Then it will be up to Wiggins to deliver solo again in the next-to-last stage — an even longer, 33-mile time trial from Bonneval to Chartres before an often-celebratory ride to the Champs-Elysees finish.

Wiggins insists the three-week race is far from over, saying a crash or illness could douse his victory hopes. He also noted that Evans has promised to fight to the finish.

"It's never over until the fat lady sings, and she hasn't entered the building yet," Wiggins said.

But the stage raises questions about whether Evans — or anyone else — can challenge Wiggins and his team, which has shown strength in both the climbs and time trials that often determine the Tour winner.

For the Australian, it will mean trying to attack on the climbs. Two uphill finishes remain, one each in the Alps — on Thursday — and the Pyrenees next week.

For Wiggins, the task may be psychological: Holding the yellow jersey for nearly two weeks comes with mental strain, for the rider and his teammates.

If Wiggins goes the rest of the way in yellow, it would mark the first time only two riders had worn the leader's jersey in a Tour since Armstrong took it from Estonia's Jaan Kirsipuu en route to winning the first of his seven titles in 1999.

Tejay Van Garderen, a BMC teammate of Evans, surprised even himself with

Armstrong Suit Dropped ... For Now

A federal judge has dismissed Lance Armstrong's lawsuit against the U.S. Anti-Doping Agency, but says the cyclist can refile it within 20 days.

The seven-time Tour de France champion sued USA-DA on Monday in an attempt to prevent it from moving forward with charges that he used performance-enhancing drugs throughout much of his career.

U.S. District Judge Sam Sparks ruled just hours later. He criticized Armstrong's attorneys for filing an 80-page complaint the judge says seems more intended to whip up public opinion for his case than focus on the legal argument.

Sparks, however, did not decide on the merits of Armstrong's case and said he can refile his lawsuit.

Armstrong wanted Sparks to rule in his favor by Saturday, the deadline he faces to either accept sanctions from USA-DA or go to arbitration.

before the Astros strung together three singles, the last coming from Matthews for a 1-0 lead. And a throwing error eerily similar to the one Matthews would make just a half-inning later — second baseman Connor Stubblefield's throwing error to first — scored Holt Bright for a 2-0 lead.

"We had our mistakes as well," Hawks coach Nathan Bishop said.

The Hawks didn't have to live with them for long. Stubblefield made amends by drawing a walk and advancing to second on Price's sacrifice bunt. Cody Gates flied out to right and Trae Bishop was hit by a pitch.

David Pak followed with a squibber that reached Matthews a few feet in front of the mound, but instead of taking his time, Matthews needlessly rushed his throw and threw past first baseman Riley Carlton, scoring Stubblefield to tie the game.

"He knew. I didn't have to tell him. I was upset, but I wasn't going to get on him," Schroeder said. "It happens. It's baseball."

Instead of settling up behind home plate, catcher Basham was given a chance with runners in scoring position and he delivered.

"I was looking for a fast ball," Basham said, "and I found it. Something I could get up the middle."

That was enough for Price, who didn't allow a Kimberly baserunner to get into scoring position over the final two innings. He struck out nine and walked just three while scattering four hits, with only one coming outside the fifth inning.

"He's our workhorse," Bishop said. "The sad thing is, you hope we could support him better with more runs."

magicvalley.com

Today is Tuesday, July 10, the 192nd day of 2012. There are 174 days left in the year.

Today's Highlights:

On July 10, 1962, AT&T's Telstar 1 communications satellite, capable of relaying television signals and telephone calls, was launched by NASA from Cape Canaveral. President John F. Kennedy signed the All-Channel Receiver Act, which required that new TV sets be capable of receiving UHF (ultra-high frequency) channels 14 through 83 in addition to VHF (very high frequency) channels 2 through 13.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:

In 1890, Wyoming became the 44th state.

In 1919, President Woodrow Wilson personally delivered the Treaty of Versailles (vehr-SY') to the Senate, and urged its ratification. (However, the Senate rejected it.)

In 1929, American paper currency was reduced in size as the government began issuing bills that were approximately 25 percent smaller.

In 1940, during World War II, the Battle of Britain began as Nazi forces began attacking southern England by air. (The Royal Air Force was ultimately victorious.)

In 1951, armistice talks aimed at ending the Korean War began at Kaesong.

In 1961, Mildred E. Gillars, also known as "Axis Sally," was paroled from a federal prison in West Virginia after serving 11 years for treason for her propaganda broadcasts from Nazi Germany during World War II.

In 1973, the Bahamas became fully independent after three centuries of British colonial rule.

In 1982, Pope John Paul II named Archbishop Joseph L. Bernardin of Cincinnati to succeed the late Cardinal John Cody as head of the Archdiocese of Chicago.

In 1985, the Greenpeace protest ship Rainbow Warrior was sunk with explosives in Auckland, New Zealand by French intelligence agents; one activist was killed. Bowing to pressure from irate customers, the Coca-Cola Co. said it would resume selling old-formula Coke, while continuing to sell New Coke.

In 1991, Boris N. Yeltsin took the oath of office as the first elected president of the Russian republic. President George H.W. Bush lifted economic sanctions against South Africa.

In 1992, a New York jury found Pan Am guilty of willful misconduct and responsible for allowing a terrorist bomb to destroy Flight 103 in 1988, killing 270 people, opening the way for civil lawsuits.

Ten years ago: The House approved, 310-113, a measure to allow airline pilots to carry guns in the cockpit to defend their planes against terrorists (President George W. Bush later signed the measure into law). A unified Senate approved harsh new penalties for corporate fraud and document-shredding (however, the legislation was never enacted).

Five years ago: China executed the former head of its food and drug agency for approving untested medicine in exchange for cash. A judge in Los Angeles sentenced pizza deliveryman Chester Turner to death for murdering 10 women and a fetus during the 1980s and '90s. The American League defeated the National League 5-4 in the All-Star game. Pulitzer Prize-winning cartoonist Doug Marlette, 57, died in an auto accident near Holly Springs, Miss.

One year ago: The space shuttle Atlantis docked with the International Space Station, the final such hookup in orbit. An overloaded cruise vessel sank in Russia's Volga River, killing 122 people. Some 70 people were killed when a train derailed in northern India. Britain's best-selling Sunday tabloid the News of the World, brought down by a phone-hacking scandal, signed off with a simple front page message: "THANK YOU & GOODBYE!" Acclaimed French choreographer Roland Petit, 87, died in Geneva.

DEAR ABBY: I am a long-time reader. This is the first time I have ever written to you, and I'm hoping you will have an answer for me. I'd like to know the proper way to address a surviving gay spouse in the unfortunate event of a death.

Is a gay man who has lost his husband a widower or a wid-ow (seeing as he lost his hus-band and not a wife)? Is the title of the survivor dependent on his or her gender or the gender of their partner?

I'm only 29 and I hope I won't have to use this information for many years, but I'd like to know the proper terminology. For the record, I support gay marriage because I believe in true love in all its forms.

—HANNAH IN CARROLLTON, GA.

DEAR HANNAH: Regardless of sexual orientation, if a male loses his spouse, he is a widower, and if a woman loses her spouse, she is a widow. The terms don't change because the union was a same-sex relationship.

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

DEAR ABBY: I was diagnosed with bipolar disorder many years ago. I started a combined therapy about a year ago — individual and a dialectical behavioral therapy group. Everything has been going great, and I have learned a lot about myself. The problem is, I have become very attracted to my therapist and, as a result, I feel it is interfering with my treatment.

Lately, my only interest in going to group or therapy is to see him and be in his presence. I also find myself canceling group if I know he won't be there. I am confused as to why I am having these feelings. Is it part of my bipolar disorder, or something else? Surely, this would be something I would bring up to my therapist, but unfortunately, I'm embarrassed.

Abby, what do you suggest I do in a situation like this? I feel like putting a hold on therapy for a while because of this, but I know that I still need it.

—NEEDS THERAPY IN ILLINOIS

DEAR NEEDS THERAPY: Please don't use this as an excuse to stop your therapy. Your feelings are very common in psychotherapy. The term for it is "transference." It is the process by which emotions associated with one person — such as a parent — unconsciously shift to another. In your case, that's your therapist.

Because you're finding it distracting, it's important that you discuss this privately with your therapist. It won't be the first time he has heard it, I guarantee. I'll bet if you asked in a group session, "How many people here are in love with Dr. So-and-So?" almost every hand in the room would go up.

DEAR ABBY: My husband makes his living doing general construction. We have no employees. We get along fantastic, except for one point of contention.

Over the years we have made investments in tools for his trade. Another family member constantly asks to borrow them for personal projects. My husband willingly lends them out. If he needs that tool for a job, he will go without, reschedule his work or make a special trip to retrieve it.

I say the only way he should lend out his tools is if there is a slim to zero chance at all of his needing it himself, and if he does, then it must be returned immediately.

Also, we are a paycheck-to-paycheck family and this family member is wealthy. These tools are our way of making a living, and we need to be ready for any job at a moment's notice. Please advise.

—TOOLS OF THE TRADE DEAR T.O.T.T.:

Your husband appears to be a very nice person, but providing for his family should come first. His tools are his livelihood, just as those belonging to a barber, beautician, seamstress or doctor would be. Because his relative has the money, he (or she) should inquire about RENTING the necessary tool from a home improvement store, or search for "tool rentals" in the Yellow Pages or online.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE Bobby Wolff

"The world abounds with laws and teems with crimes."
— Anonymous

This month on Tuesdays I shall be running deals from a new book by Jeff Rubens, editor of the Bridge World, the monthly publication that is generally acknowledged to be the world's most interesting bridge magazine.

Rubens' new book is called "It's All in the Game," a mixture of humorous and informative deals, together with a selection of mind-bending problems. Quite a few of the latter demonstrate that bridge and reality have only a small overlap. I can guarantee that all my readers will find something to enjoy.

Here is Rubens at work as South in a chapter mischievously trying to prove that one can take certain dictums at bridge too far — such as "second hand low." Against four spades West stumbled upon a club lead; East topped the king with the ace and shifted to a trump. Rubens won and led out the three top hearts. "Second hand low!" chortled West, as he carefully ruffed with the lower of his two remaining trumps, the seven. Declarer would have made the contract had West discarded (he would pitch a diamond from dummy and score his 10th trick with a diamond ruff), or if had he ruffed with the spade nine (he would then use the spade eight as an entry to run the clubs), but West's actual play left him without recourse.

Rubens overruffed and led the club queen for a diamond discard, but West ruffed, then cashed the two top diamonds for a one-trick set.

Check out The Bridge World on the net for details about the book.

ANSWER: When the opponents pre-empt in this sequence, they leave your side short of descriptive actions. A double here shows a good hand and is optional. In fact, it may be closer to takeout than penalties in the modern style, so you should simply bid three hearts. A rebid of three clubs would show weakness, but would not get the extra heart length across.

IF JULY 10 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Social functions might be of key importance during the next four to six weeks. Your ability to form new contacts is heightened — so if networking is your game, this is a prime time to enlist in a group or local club to meet new people. During October and November, you are at your best with business, career or financial affairs. Castles in the air are within reach, so be sure to grab the ring of opportunity when it passes by in February. That's a time when you might meet a casual romantic partner with the potential for lasting love.

HOROSCOPE

Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): With your boundless energy, you run like a ninja and work like a dog. This is a great time for accomplishment because you have both the desire and the means to make your fondest dreams come true.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): In the middle of a difficulty lies an opportunity. Impulsive actions can throw a wrench in plans, but there is probably a silver lining. Surprise phone calls or letters are likely.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): "P" is for popularity. Your outgoing friendliness might attract a new admirer or a helpful acquaintance. You are an asset to the community and considered a valued member of any work group or team.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Enjoy being the star attraction for a few days. Some admiration, even if you think it is undesired, will act like a vitamin B-12 shot to your ego. Intriguing insights can help you make a crucial decision.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Like Don Quixote, you dream the impossible dream. However, that dream may be more possible to achieve than you think. Strike a pleasing balance between endless enthusiasm and sensible caution.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Your mind is running at full speed and on all eight cylinders. You can count on a special someone to remain steady as the Rock of Gibraltar. You can't go too far wrong if you follow your intuitions.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Go for the gold. Your willingness to try something completely new and different is matched by your exuberance. Act as if you know what you are doing and money will jump right into your pocket.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You are vivacious about your visions. Whether you are indulging in an exotic vacation or just dreaming about what you can do with some extra money, you know how to charm others with your ideas.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Old wives and their tales might not apply. Ignore the old saying that no news is good news. The news might bring you in touch with a lucrative opportunity. Be sure to read the fine print.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Bright ideas that pop up probably have merit. Go ahead, implement changes. You have a knack for knowing what is hot and what is not. Win by using other people's money instead of your own.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Go after what you want. Under these planetary conditions, you are infused with enthusiasm and a touch of inspiration. Remain sensitive to a significant other who will be supportive of your efforts.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You can set your course and take advantage of prevailing winds. It is the set of the sails, not the direction of the wind that determines which way you go. Make a firm decision and the rest will follow.
