More Potato Disease Found in T.F. County

Psyllid sample tested positive June 19 in a grower's field. Samples taken the following week also tested positive for liberibacter.

BY STEVE KADEL
skadel@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • Two more samples from Twin Falls County farm fields have tested positive for the bacterium that causes zebra chip, a disease that damages potatoes by causing flecking in their flesh.

Zebra chip reached severe levels in the Southwest, resulting in millions of dollars worth of crop loss.

The first potato psyllid sample to test positive here was found June 19 in a grower's field. Samples taken the following week from the same field and the Kimberly Research and Extension Center also contained the bacterium known as liberibacter.

A few more adult potato psyllids collected July 3 were found in two other commercial fields in Twin Falls County and are being tested for liberibacter this week, according to an update on the Pacific Northwest Pest Alert website.

Erik Wenninger, an entomologist with the University of Idaho's Kimberly center, urged growers not to be unduly alarmed.

"We don't want people to panic," he said. "We definitely want people to be aware of this issue. They should stay vigilant and keep a close eye on what is going on in their fields."

Garrett Hall, with the U.S. Forest Service, mops up part of the 216,000 acres Kinyon Road Fire west of Castleford on Tuesday.

Calm Winds Help Dissipate Kinyon Road Wildfire

BY KIMBERLEE KRUESI
kkruesi@magicvalley.com

CASTLEFORD • As quickly as the winds blew the Kinyon Road Fire across 216,050 acres, it took only a dead calm to kill the flames.

A blackened landscape and streaks of fire retardant are all that remain to remind people the Kinyon Road wildfire once blazed through federal land.

"That's fire for you, never know where it's going to go," said Jerry Rohnert, a fire information officer contracted with the U.S. Bureau of Land Management.

Firefighters believe they have a good idea of where the fire's headed now — nowhere. The wildfire was declared 75 percent contained on Tuesday evening. Full containment — when a fireline or fuel break is completed around a wildfire — should come at 11 a.m. today. And control — when a fire is completely extinguished — is expected Saturday.

It's an abrupt change. Starting the afternoon of July 7, the lightning-caused fire swelled to more than 150,000 acres in less than three days. Heavy winds and high temperatures pushed the fire west of Castleford to the top of the Bruneau Canyon rim.

Type II fire teams who have more experience fighting larger wildfires joined the effort Monday.

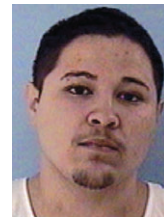

Also Monday, the Kinyon Road Fire jumped a defensive line at Saylor Creek Road and onto the Saylor Creek Bombing Range operated by Mountain Home Air Force Base. It was a rare event; the fire mainly stayed on public lands, with the exception of it briefly threatening a few homes near the community of Roseworth.

The Saylor Creek wild horse herd, disrupted from its range by 2010's Long Butte Fire, was not affected by the Kinyon Road Fire despite it burning a portion of the herd's habitat.

Police: Walmart Employee Threatened with Knife

BY ALISON GENE SMITH

Padilla

TWIN FALLS • Police say a 21-year-old man brandished a knife, waved it at a Walmart security guard and threatened to kill him.

On July 2, Twin Falls police were dispatched to Walmart, at 252 Cheney Drive in Twin Falls, for a call about an assault.

When police arrived they talked with a loss prevention officer who said he watched a man in the health and beauty department take a pack of razors, then walk to another section of the store to try to open the package, court documents state.

The loss prevention officer told police he was standing in another department watching the man, later identified as Omar Christopher Padilla, when Padilla approached him and shoved him on the left shoulder, court documents state.

Rock Creek Fire: Burning 30 acres southwest of Hailey, this fire threatened a structure Tuesday evening. The Wood River Rural Fire Department assisted BLM efforts, including six BLM smokejumpers.

The Proposed Budget Breakdown

Higher water rates, city parks improvements among highlights of 2013 Twin Falls proposal.

BY MELISSA DAVLIN

TWIN FALLS • This spring, the city of Twin Falls asked how you wanted it to spend your money.

You responded with your wishes: a community garden, a dog park, better roads and economic development.

Now it's time to see how much those goals cost.

At Monday's City Council meeting, Twin Falls City Manager Travis Rothweiler unveiled the city's proposed $49.2 million budget for fiscal year 2013. The city council will consider the recommendations and vote on a final

But this isn't the final word. An Aug. 20 public hearing gives Twin Falls residents the chance to speak up.

Before you decide whether to go, here are some of the highlights.

A proposed property tax increase: Cities are allowed to increase taxes by a maximum of 3 percent. This year, that means paying $7.13 per $1,000 of taxable value.

What this means for you: If your home is valued at $142,300 — the median home value in Twin Falls — and you qualify for the homeowners' exemption, you'll pay $1.23 more in

According to court documents, Padilla told the loss prevention officer, "Hey, man, I don't appreciate you following me. I just got out of prison and I will (expletive) kill you."

The security guard then went and found a coworker and the two called police. Padilla then allegedly approached the man, pulled out what appeared to be a folding knife and made stabbing motions toward him with the blade, court documents state.

The employee said Padilla then ran and got into an old red two-door car with a fin.

On Friday, officers reportedly spotted the vehicle traveling eastbound on Filer Avenue. A man in the car matched Padilla's description. Police approached the car when it parked in the Dollar Tree parking lot at 1147 Filer Ave. E. in Twin Falls.

According to the police report, when Padilla spoke with an officer, he admitted to going to Walmart intending to steal razor blades.

"Omar told me that he knew he was being watched by loss prevention and felt like he was being harassed," the officer wrote in the report.

Padilla allegedly admitted to pulling the knife on the employee because he wanted loss prevention to "quit harassing him," the report states.

Padilla was arrested on a charge of aggravated assault and held at the Twin Falls County Jail on $50,000 bond. A preliminary hearing is scheduled for July 20.

WILDFIRE CONSUMES 600 ACRES TUESDAY SOUTHEAST OF OAKLEY

BY LAURIE WELCH
lwelch@magicvalley.com

OAKLEY • A wildfire on public and private land eight miles southeast of Oakley consumed about 600 acres by 5 p.m. Tuesday.

The Little Birch Creek Fire is burning on property owned by Steve and Heidi Manning, who live on Birch Creek Road.

"I can still see flames from the house," Heidi Manning said at 5 p.m. Tuesday.

She said the structures on their ranch were not threatened. They moved horses and cattle to safety from a pasture where they were grazing.

"Steve is up on the mountain and he says they have laid a good line of fire retardant," Heidi Manning said. "I think at this time the fire is burning back on itself. But, the wind keeps shifting."

Oakley Fire Chief Harlo Clark said the blaze broke out about eight miles southeast of Oakley.

Another wildfire reported near Goose Creek had not yet been confirmed, he said.

The U.S. Bureau of Land Management reported Tuesday evening that the fire did threaten some nearby structures. On top of ground resources belonging to both it and the Oakley Rural Fire Department, BLM aircraft also worked to suppress the flames.

On Tuesday, fire officials reported that the wildfire had come to a sudden halt. While firefighters don't have it fully contained, it is no longer moving or burning. Crews are still responding to the fire but are in charge of putting out "hot spots" — areas that are still smoldering.

Back at the firefighters' headquarters at Castleford High School, fire officials pored over maps and began dividing the fire into sections. Once the fire was split up into four sections, fire managers began dispatching crews to mop up hot spots.

Textbooks were moved to hallway floors to make room for extra radios, and desks were pushed to the side of the classroom to organize extra batteries and medical supplies.

"We replace radio batteries every day," said Tenna Butler, a telecommunications specialist with the BLM. "Each radio takes nine batteries, so we're easily going through hundreds of batteries every day."

Once fire officials finish mapping the fire's succession, they will study how much of the fire destroyed critical sage grouse habitat.

Certain dangers remain. While putting out the flames, Rohnert said, firefighters had to be careful to not step on rattlesnakes. And on the Air Force range, Rohnert said, some crews are running across unexploded bombs as they put out the fire.

"Never really know what you're going to get," he said.

Minidoka Co. to No Longer Helm Animal Facility

BY LAURIE WELCH
lwelch@magicvalley.com

RUPERT • Minidoka County announced it will no longer oversee operations of the animal control facility located in Paul.

But the county will continue to contribute funds and dispatch services, remaining in a joint agreement with the cities of Rupert, Paul, Acequia and Minidoka.

It's the latest development in the story of a facility that faced a severe budget shortfall last year, but through volunteer and community efforts managed to turn its fortunes around.

In a July 2 letter to the Rupert City Council, the Minidoka County commissioners asked to turn over administrative oversight of the facility to Rupert. The letter also gave 90 days' notice of the county withdrawing from that role.

taxes per month, or $14.79 more per year, for a total of $507.30 annually.

Proposed increases in water and sewer rates: The budget calls for 2 percent sewer rate increase and a 3 percent water rate increase, to be exact.

What this means for you: The average Twin Falls household uses 18,000 gallons of water, equaling $1.04 added to your monthly bill. For sewage use, capped at 8,000 gallons, you'll pay about 37 cents more per month.

A bump in pay for city employees: On average, Twin Falls city employees receive less pay than those who work equivalent jobs in other similarly sized Idaho cities. With this budget proposal, that may change for employees who perform well. The proposal means a $1.3 million increase in personnel costs for the city.

What this means for you: For city employees, it means a 2.5 percent performance-based raise, on average. The pay table, which takes into account the employee's position and hiring date, will eventually go up 8 percent.

An increased parks budget: Parks spending will go from $1,306,020 to $1,402,887, an increase of 7.4 percent.

What this means for you: Improving access at Auger Falls, moving forward on plans for a dog park and repairing and replacing playground equipment, among other projects.

Seal Coat Planned for Highway near Stanley

TIMES-NEWS

STANLEY • Work crews will begin to seal coat a 28-mile stretch of Idaho Highway 75 on Thursday, starting near the base of Galena Summit up to Valley Creek in Stanley.

Sound familiar? It's the same area of highway that received a new asphalt overlay last year. The seal coat is meant to preserve that asphalt, according to the Idaho Transportation Department.

An ITD press release states the work will start with an asphalt coating — called a fog coat — to the road's shoulders and turnouts. The seal coat will be applied starting Monday.

Any gravel chips left over after the work will be used to extend the seal coat onto the north slope of Galena. The project should be finished in less than two weeks.

ITD urges drivers to use caution in all areas of seal coating. Observing posted speed limits and increasing the distance between vehicles will reduce the risk of windshield damage caused by loose gravel. The work zone will be managed with flaggers and a pilot car.

Knife River Corp. of Boise is the contractor for the $4.26 million project. Its workers finished paving the stretch in early September, and the contract allowed them to return this year for the seal coat.

Standoff Ends in Surrender

BY ALISON GENE SMITH

TWIN FALLS • A Twin Falls man surrendered to police Tuesday afternoon after threatening to shoot himself inside a home in the 1100 block of Imperial Street, just west of the College of Southern Idaho campus. Twin Falls police responded after getting a report of a man threatening to shoot himself at about noon, said Lt. Craig Stotts. Stotts said the man's wife called police to report his actions. Police advised the woman to leave the area, Stotts said. The family was away from the scene when police arrived. Stotts said most officers on duty responded to the scene and evacuated several neighboring homes during the incident. After an hour and 15 minutes the man surrendered by himself, Stotts said. The man was placed in protective custody and then transported to the emergency room at St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center for an evaluation, Stotts said. No one was injured in the incident.

JEROME • A Houston man falls asleep at the wheel and drove off the road while traveling eastbound on Interstate 84 just east of the U.S. Highway 93 junction, according to a report from Idaho State Police.

Felipe Rodriguez-Vale-sco, 47, was driving a 2003 Ford pickup Tuesday when he went off the road to the left. He then woke up and overcorrected back to the right, rolling the vehicle, the report states.

A female passenger, Mireya Rodriguez, and two children were taken to St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center with non-life-threatening injuries.

Everyone in the car was wearing a seat belt, the report says.

Buhl Officer Awarded for Being a Perfect Shot

BY BLAIR KOCH
For the Times-News

BUHL • During Monday's Buhl City Council meeting, Buhl Police Department Lance Cpl. Rusty Hawkins received an award for earning a perfect score on a recent shooting test. Hawkins, a certified law enforcement firearms instructor, earned the perfect score during recertification exercises through the Idaho POST Academy in Meridian.

Chief Eric Foster said a Buhl officer told the council a perfect score hasn't come from the department since former Chief Mark Grimes earned one more than a decade ago.

Foster said the perfect score means Hawkins' is an authorized "distinguished expert," a level for which it is "not easy to qualify."

The training was on the same Glock .40 caliber standard-issue firearm used by the department, Foster said.

Hawkins has been with the department for five years.

On Monday, the council also discussed tightening up its agreement with the Buhl Rural Fire Protection District clarifying how to share costs.

Mayor Tom McCauley said, according to the current agreement, it looks like the city is "technically and legally operating OK under the agreement. It's just not spelled out as clearly as it should be."

The city has a meeting with the fire district next week, and the agreement will be discussed, with language needing formal approval by both entities.

Man Allegedly Crashes into Outbuilding after Leaving Accident

BY ALISON GENE SMITH
alismith@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • Two Twin Falls men were charged with misdemeanors Tuesday afternoon after one man drove away from an accident and into an outbuilding at the Twin Falls Livestock Commission.

Police were initially alerted to an accident at Kimberly Road and Locust Street in Twin Falls, said Lt. Craig Stotts with the Twin Falls police.

"The guy that called us, he didn't think the accident was his fault," Stotts said. "The officers on scene didn't see it that way."

The man who called, John Megyese, 43, said the other man involved in the accident, Chase Herzinger, 20, drove away from the accident, Stotts said.

At that point, Megyese allegedly began chasing Herzinger in his car, Stotts said.

"Dispatchers were saying, 'Don't follow him,'" Stotts said.

During the pursuit, Herzinger crashed into the building at the Livestock Commission.

Herzinger and Megyese were both cited for reckless driving. Herzinger was also cited for leaving the scene of an accident. Megyese was at fault in the initial accident, Stotts said.

The Livestock Commission did not want to pursue charges for the damaged building, Stotts said.

Work Planned for T.F. Freight Traffic Roads

TIMES-NEWS

TWIN FALLS • The Twin Falls City Streets Department plans this week to perform regular road maintenance on several streets that serve as a beltway for freight trucks in the southern part of the city.

Affected streets include: Washington Street from Second Avenue West to Sixth Avenue West; Sixth Avenue West from Washington Street to Shoshone Street; and Minidoka Avenue from Shoshone Street to Kimberly Road.

Street crews will mill and patch selected areas of the roads, then seal coat them to prolong the life of the roadway.

Crews expect work to end July 19. The seal coats will start the following week.

Idaho Sand & Gravel is expected to start laying new pavement next week on part of Minidoka Avenue from Third Street South to Fifth Street South.

Detours and road closures will change frequently throughout the work. Motorists and freight trucks are advised to avoid the affected areas to allow streets workers to complete the projects as soon as possible.

IDAHO

Otter Open to Insurance Exchange

BOISE (AP) • Gov. C.L. “Butch” Otter isn’t dismissing an insurance exchange or expanding Medicaid eligibility rules for his state because he doesn’t want to cut off opportunities to make health care more affordable for Idaho residents.

Otter said Tuesday he plans to study both options following the U.S. Supreme Court’s decision to uphold President Barack Obama’s health care overhaul.

Otter said he understands why states rejected exchanges and Medicaid expansion, in hopes Obama will lose in November to Mitt Romney, who pledged to fight the overhaul.

But Otter said that amounts to putting all Idaho’s eggs in one basket.

He said study groups will gather information, including how many new people would qualify for Medicaid.

Emergency Software Created by Police Office

NAMPA (AP) • A Nampa police officer is creating a digital database that allows his colleagues to dump their three-ring binders filled with emergency information and get it all online.

Jacob Peper, a 17-year law enforcement veteran and former school resource officer, said the idea came from school resource officers who were tired of trying to quickly find important information like building layout and visitor policies in three-ring binders during emergencies. Because the binders weren’t used very often, they were sometimes misplaced or outdated.

“What we want to do is have a game plan ready,” Peper told the Idaho Press-Tribune. “We want to know the layout of the building, know the entry points, who is allowed to be there.”

He created Ten33, named after a police code for emergencies, and the software went live earlier this year. It includes data from area schools, businesses and some private residences.

Emergency workers already used the software during a mock bank robbery drill, and Peper said he’s now working with the Nampa Family Justice Center to add information about high-risk domestic violence cases.

Nampa Police Sgt. Tim Randall said the software will work in conjunction with a program the department already has in place called Aware Alarms that victims can set off in their homes. Now if an alarm comes in, the department can use the software to get information about possible weapons in the home and other dangers to victims and first responders.

Peper said he hopes to eventually make the program available to more law enforcement agencies.

“What I want to do is work with our domestic violence task force and the different communities and provide it as a free resource for them,” he said.

He originally tried to develop the software himself, but he found it to be a daunting task and hired programmers to help. Though he paid for it out of his own pocket, he’s letting the Nampa police and fire departments use it free of charge.

Invasive quagga mussels cover this formerly sunken boat at Lake Mead National Recreation Area in July 2009 in Lake Mead National Recreation Area, Nev.

States Seek Help Fighting Mussels

BY JOHN MILLER
Associated Press

BOISE • Regional energy planners for four Western states are asking Congress for help building a stronger line of defense against what some officials call an unfolding environmental disaster — an invasive mussel that is clogging Colorado River reservoirs like Lake Mead outside Las Vegas after ravaging the Great Lakes region.

The Northwest Power and Conservation Council guides power and environmental policy in Idaho, Montana, Oregon and Washington, all of which are frustrated because boats continue to leave Lake Mead in Nevada and Arizona contaminated with quagga mussels.

It’s seeking $2 million in federal aid to add watercraft inspection and decontamination stations to intercept boats carrying these rapidly multiplying, thumb-sized mollusks that could wreak havoc on Columbia River hydroelectric dams, farmers’ irrigation systems and lakes prized for recreation. The water district in Los Angeles already estimates up to $15 million in annual expenses tackling quagga infestations that have damaged its aqueduct and reservoir system extending from the Colorado River.

“A second line of defense is not as good perhaps as stopping them at Lake Mead, but it’s something we absolutely need to do when we can’t depend on interdiction efforts,” Phil Rockefeller, Washington’s appointee on the council, said Tuesday at a meeting in Boise.

“We can’t allow any more boats to come out of Lake Mead that aren’t decontaminated.”

Idaho state Rep. Eric Anderson

In 2012, a $1 million appropriation pushed by U.S. Rep. Mike Simpson, R-Idaho, was directed to support “mandatory operational inspection and decontamination stations” at sites including Lake Mead.

But only about half the money has gone toward inspection and decontamination work, according to the council, prompting Rockefeller to complain that federal agencies including the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service and National Park Service aren’t sufficiently invested in fighting the scourge.

Researchers don’t know exactly how the mussels arrived at Lake Mead, where their numbers have increased tenfold to 1.5 trillion since their 2007 discovery. Some speculate they hitchhiked aboard a boat from the Great Lakes region, where the mussels have been proliferating for more than 20 years after arriving in the ballast of ocean-going ships from Eastern Europe. Mussels have damaged ecological systems and done hundreds of millions in damage in the Great Lakes region.

Given the mussels’ rapid proliferation on the Colorado River, Idaho state Rep. Eric Anderson said stopping contaminated boats before they go elsewhere is the best way to combat the mussels’ spread.

This year alone, nearly 80 infested boats have been stopped on the borders of Idaho, Montana, Oregon and Washington, most coming from Lake Mead.

“The fire is Lake Mead,” said Anderson, a Republican who has become Idaho’s leading legislative champion of fighting mussels. “We can’t allow any more boats to come out of Lake Mead that aren’t decontaminated.”

Earlier this year, Anderson left 500 Idaho license plates underwater at a Lake Mead marina. After they’ve been encrusted with the mussels, he’ll distribute them to Idaho outlets that sell boat tags — as visual examples of the mussels’ potential toll. Revenue from these tags funds Idaho’s $850,000 annual effort to keep mussels out of Idaho, including border inspections that began in 2009.

Amy Ferriter, invasive species coordinator at the Idaho Department of Agriculture, fears Lake Mead managers aren’t doing enough. There are still no mandatory inspections, and Ferriter said she observed idled decontamination stations on a recent visit.

She also complains National Park Service officials have largely balked at requests to ask departing boaters for their destinations, then share the information across state lines, to better monitor such traffic.

Communication is so poor, the Northwest power council is considering filing a Freedom of Information Act request to force Lake Mead officials to divulge boater details.

“Given the high percentage of fouled boats coming from Lake Mead, this seems like a high-risk pathway,” Ferriter said Tuesday.

Park Service managers at Lake Mead contend they’ve done more than anybody to try to keep mussels from leaving, but cite privacy laws governing boaters’ personal information they say prevent them from passing along details from boaters to states.

Randy Lavasseur, assistant chief ranger at the Lake Mead National Recreation Area, said the vastness of the 248-square-mile reservoir, where water behind the Hoover Dam is diverted through pipelines and aqueducts for use in California, Arizona and Nevada, presents a challenge to federal managers in making sure every boat that leaves is mollusk-free. More than 8 million people visit every year.

Other states also are casting a wary glance at Lake Mead.

At sparkling Lake Tahoe on the California-Nevada border, two infested boats were intercepted before the July 4 holiday.

Both came from Lake Mead, said Ted Thayer, who manages the Tahoe Regional Planning Agency’s aquatic invasive species program.

His group estimates damage from a mussel-infested Lake Tahoe would result in $22 million in annual costs to the water supply, recreation and property values.

Man Accused of Driving Drunk with 5 Kids in Car

BOISE (AP) • Boise authorities charged a 35-year-old man with driving drunk while he had five children in his car.

Cory Ashbaker faces charges of excessive DUI and injury to child following his arrest Saturday night.

Boise police say Ashbaker registered a .222 blood-alcohol content after taking a breath test at the Ada County Jail. That’s three times the legal limit of .08.

The Idaho Statesman reports that Boise police pulled Ashbaker over after seeing him drive a Honda Accord with a flat tire. Inside the car were five children between the ages of 8 and 11.

Wyo. Man Sentenced for Child Pornography

POCATELLO (AP) • A former eastern Idaho resident was sentenced to eight years of probation by an Idaho judge for felony possession of child pornography.

The Idaho State Journal reported Daniel Shane Bleak, a former Pocatello resident, was arrested in February and charged with 14 counts of possessing child pornography.

He pleaded guilty to one count in May, and in exchange for that plea prosecutors dropped the remaining 13 counts.

Sixth District Judge Stephen Dunn sentenced Bleak on Monday to up to eight years in prison, but then suspended that sentence and placed him on probation. The sentence means that if Bleak, who now lives in Thermopolis, Wyo., violates his probation the judge may decide to reinstate his prison sentence.

Court Decision Creates Turmoil for Leaseholders

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) • An Idaho Supreme Court decision has created uncertainty for hundreds of leaseholders with cabins on Priest and Payette lakes.

The state owns the land under the cabins. On June 29, the state’s high court overturned a state law that protected those leaseholders from having that land auctioned off.

The court ruled the protections violated the Idaho Constitution’s requirement to maximize financial returns on endowment lands.

The Spokesman-Review reports that 354 cottage sites at Priest Lake and 167 at Payette Lake are affected.

Many cabin owners are putting off improvements to cabins and property until the state decides on changes to the lease program.

The state is working toward offering leaseholders the choice of either public auction for the land or a land exchange that meets strict requirements.

Murder Trial Delayed for Idaho Shooting Suspect

BOISE (AP) • The murder trial of a shooting man accused of murdering his wife’s boss has been pushed back to October.

Robert Dean Hall’s trial was scheduled to begin on Aug. 8.

The Idaho Statesman reported it was delayed to Oct. 9 because the prosecutor on the case, deputy Idaho attorney general Melissa Moody, was recently appointed as a district judge.

BUILDING FOR BOISE’S DOWNTOWN HOLE READY TO BREAK GROUND

BOISE (AP) • Construction of a new, $60 million building that will fill Boise’s infamous downtown hole is expected to break ground later this week.

The Idaho Statesman reported a ceremony will be held Thursday at the property on the corner of 8th and Main streets. The site — jokingly referred to in Boise as “The Hole” — has been vacant since fire destroyed the Eastman building in 1987.

Several developers proposed projects for the site over the years, but those efforts have failed. Current plans from the Gardner Co., call for a 16-story building that will be anchored by Zions Bank and house other tenants.

A portion of 8th Street will be closed during the groundbreaking ceremony.

IDAHO FIREFIGHTER PLEADS GUILTY TO LEWD CONDUCT

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) • A North Idaho firefighter has pleaded guilty to a charge of lewd conduct after he was accused of having sex with a girl who was 13 and 14 years old.

The Coeur d'Alene Press reports that 38-year-old Billy E. Miller Jr. of Athol entered his plea Monday before 1st District Court Judge John Luster.

He is to be sentenced Oct. 17 on the charge that carries a maximum sentence of life in prison.

The Kootenai County Sheriff's Department investigation report says Miller admitted having sex and receiving oral sex from the girl at his home in 2009 and 2010. The report says Miller told investigators he used a condom to prevent a pregnancy.

Miller was a lieutenant for Northern Lakes Fire District. He was fired on May 24.

Woman Allegedly Threatened People With Gun

BY ALISON GENE SMITH
alismsmith@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • A Twin Falls woman was arrested for aggravated assault with a deadly weapon after she allegedly waved a gun at a male relative and several other people in her home.

Twin Falls police responded to a home in the 900 block of Capri Drive in Twin Falls at about 2:40 a.m. Sunday.

At the home, police spoke with Pamela Nichole Holloway, 26.

According to a police report, Holloway told police she was with a male relative at the bar at Montana Steakhouse, at 1826 Canyon Crest Drive. The two began to argue, and the man left in the car without her, the report states.

Holloway then walked to her home, about two miles, to find the man "partying" with several other people, the report states.

"Holloway stated she was upset when she arrived home, at which time she walked upstairs and retrieved a .380 caliber handgun and began to wave it around yelling at people to leave," an officer wrote in the report.

According to the report, Holloway told the man to leave, then allegedly pointed the handgun the man's face and cocked the gun. One of the man's friends grabbed him and took him outside, but he later returned to retrieve clothing, at which point he claimed he saw Holloway fumbling with the gun, the report states.

Holloway was arrested, transported to the Twin Falls County Jail and held on $10,000 bond. A preliminary hearing is scheduled for July 20.

"This is the start of a battle that has for some time been brewing."

Negad Borai, a prominent rights lawyer and activist, after Egypt's Islamist president fired the first volley in his battle with the nation's powerful generals, calling on the Islamist-dominated parliament to reconvene despite a military-backed court ruling that dissolved it.

OUR VIEW

Firefighters are the Reason we Can Sleep at Night

If the Kinyon Road fire seems far away, or if the people of Castleford feel safe enough to sleep at night or if we have enjoyed an uninterrupted electrical supply, we have the Bureau of Land Management wildland firefighters to thank.

At 3 p.m. Sunday, a thunder cell stirred up part of the Kinyon Road Fire and pushed it across Salmon Falls Creek Canyon up onto the east side near farmland and power lines.

The BLM crews quickly realized that the fire was close to a power line that runs across Salmon Falls Creek Canyon moving power from Hagerman to Wells, Nev.

According to Idaho Power spokesperson Anne Alenskis, flames were 35 feet tall. For safety reasons, power crews were not allowed into the area.

The firefighters immediately mobilized, said Twin Falls County Commissioner Terry Kramer. "The fire was roaring so hard."

The section of fire was only three miles long, Kramer said, but BLM and area firefighters responded with two helicopters, three airplanes, five tankers and a ground rig unit to fight it.

Kramer said the fire was a half mile from his farm and he watched in awe.

"They saved all those power lines," Kramer said. "The BLM did a great job."

By 4 p.m., an immense force was going after the fire. They knocked it down and had it virtually out by 8 p.m.

"It was an amazing sight to see what they did," he said. "They put a lot of resources in to stop it before it hit power lines and farmland."

Kramer said he never felt in danger.

"It was a great show," he said. "The pond where they dipped the water was out in front of my farm. They flew in with this huge belly mounted thing and made the trips in about five minutes.

"I was so impressed with their response time."

This is just one story of many in the fight against the Kinyon Road Fire. We know it happened because one person witnessed it. But how many more battles have they fought without an audience? How many more times have we been in danger and not known it?

It says a lot about their efforts that we do not know the answer to that question.

We owe a huge debt of gratitude to the men and women who are out there on the fire line in this extremely hot weather, protecting homes, livelihoods and, it turns out, power supply.

'What Happened to Twin Falls?'

The "Letter to the Editor: What has Happened to Twin Falls?" struck a chord with many. The discussion continues online at Magicvalley.com.

Andre Leonard: "It's easy to reflect on the past and contrast that with today, but it's not fair. Twin Falls is and has been a good community, so is Jerome."

Twin Falls has many parks that are well manicured and well kept. City workers can always be seen cleaning and landscaping the ones I have been to.

Drugs are a problem everywhere. ... On the whole, I have been very impressed with the parks. They're free and few things in life are."

484436: "Not as safe?"

I went on TFPD in 1973 and spent most of my working career there.

Our average response time to all calls were from 3-5 minutes. That included animal calls. No unsolved homicides. Our crime rate was one of the lowest in Idaho. ...

What happened? The City is growing up! We are situated on I-84 and we are at a crossroad between Idaho, Washington and California. We knew it was going to happen we just didn't know when. ... Places like the old Harman Park are history but the City would be better off with their old park back.

It ain't like it used to be here, so keep your stuff locked up, and do your part to keep from being a victim. ..."

While some are commenting on Twin Falls, others are commenting on Jerome. In response to "Letter to the Editor: Please Tell Me More About the Jerome Community," an online reader wrote:

IdahoHeathen: "As a fellow Tennessean who made the move out here, I can tell you what to expect. If you don't march in lock-step with the prevailing social and cultural winds be prepared to be told "if you don't like how we do it, go back to where you came from, you damned foreigner!" Expect lots of people to be rude, self-centered, stand-offish, and inconsiderate. The lines that designate parking spaces are generally treated as "only a suggestion" rather than something to which most drivers actually pay attention. People aren't friendly like they are in the South, so don't expect strangers to say "Hello" or ask how you are doing at the grocery store and expect strange looks if you try to be neighborly yourself. There are lots of nice people here but you'll have to seek them out since they are a minority rather than a majority. ... I recently went back to Tennessee for a visit and I was happy to get back home to Idaho because I've been fortunate enough to find lots of the good and nice people but it took a few years ..."

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Idaho's Take on Animal Cruelty

Idaho 1 of 3 would like to thank the many Idahoans who supported our initiative to add felony penalties for animal cruelty. We did gather enough signatures to put in on the ballot; unfortunately about one-third were invalid because of non-compliance with stringent legal requirements.

Even though they co-authored the language in our initiative which was presented as a bill in 2009, the Cattle Association and Woolgrowers convinced Sen. Bert Brackett and the Legislature to pass a felony in name only. Their stated intention was to block our initiative. Why those groups find the language they helped write threatening to their industries remains a mystery.

Idaho law contains five definitions of animal cruelty, but only one was used in the fake felony that became law on July 1: "the intentional and malicious infliction of pain, injury or death upon an animal." It sounds good until you realize it is a felony on the third conviction and that it is virtually impossible to prove malicious intent once, let alone three times by the same person!

Idahoans have been duped into thinking we have a felony for animal cruelty; we do not. I was present in a meeting where the bill was being discussed. Rep. Ken Andrus (R-Lava Hot Springs) wanted torture added as a second conviction felony. Sen. Brackett refused to even consider adding it to his bill.

Please contact Sen. Brackett and let him know animal torture deserves to be a first offense felony. We will reorganize and give Idahoans the full 18 months allowed by law to gather signatures for an initiative on the 2014 ballot. But we need your help and money to accomplish this important endeavor. Please contact us at IDRIGHTS@aol.com and help Idaho's animals get the protection they deserve. Idaho remains one of three states without adequate felony penalties for the worst animal cruelty.

Fireworks Belong on July 4

I agree wholeheartedly with Nancy Ihler in her letter about the fireworks. Only I have further gripes.

She was complaining about the fireworks going late at night on the Fourth. I'm complaining that as of Sunday night, July 8, they were still going off. Our dog has been traumatized the whole week; whimpering, shaking and shivering and hiding out. We gave him Benadryl, but it didn't really help. My husband has had to sleep in the basement in hopes that poochie couldn't hear them.

Saturday night, I heard the fireworks at 1:30 a.m. I went downstairs to check on the dog and he was nowhere to be found. After searching and searching and wondering what to do, I found him rolled up in a tight little ball behind the toilet, shaking like crazy. I had to pull him out and let him sleep in my bed with me, which I never do. Every little sound set him off. At 3:30 a.m., it started all over again.

Come on, people! I love holidays and I even enjoy the fireworks, but the Fourth is the Fourth. We don't celebrate Christmas, Thanksgiving and Halloween for days on end after the event. Even the night before the Fourth doesn't bother me, but after the holiday, knock it off! Have respect for people and animals.

Fix the Road Leading to Salmon Falls Dam

Fishermen: What does it take to fix the road into Salmon Falls Dam? I have been fishing here for 30-plus years and the road into Lud Drexler park seems to get worse every year.

It is interesting to me that all the monies we donate to license fees never seems to get into the areas we designate. The docks were changed years ago but never finished. The road at the cattle guard, if a person isn't careful, will take the lights off your trailer. The hole at the pavement has pitched my dog off his seat in the front of my pickup.

Come on, people, let's be heard. I know the money is there!

Murdoch to Buffett Converge on Sun Valley as Mobile Shapes Media

BY CLIFF EDWARDS AND EDMUND LEE
Bloomberg News

Media executives gathering at Allen & Co.'s conference this week in Sun Valley will look for opportunities to capitalize on an entertainment environment shaped by the shift toward mobile and online viewing.

Apple's success with the iPad, iPhone and iTunes store has spawned competition from tech companies trying to catch up, from Microsoft and Google to Amazon.com. The trick for News Corp.'s Rupert Murdoch and Hollywood studios such as Walt Disney Co. is to capture new sales without destroying the traditional markets that still dominate their businesses.

"Content companies are the arms dealers in this race," said Shahid Khan, chairman of MediaMorph, a New York-based media advisory and venture firm. "They don't care which ecosystem wins the war as long as the Amazons and Googles are buying weapons."

The annual gathering, held at the Sun Valley Resort in the Sawtooth National Forest since 1983, provides a relaxed setting for moguls such as Murdoch, the chief executive officer of New York-based News Corp., to discuss deals and interact with tech figures, such as Facebook founder Mark Zuckerberg, whose products are shaping viewer habits.

No device maker has had a bigger impact than Apple in freeing consumers to watch movies and TV anywhere, any time. Microsoft is mounting a challenge with the Xbox console and the Surface tablet, as is Google, with YouTube, Google TV and the market-leading Android operating system.

"Everything you see will be around the battle to own the ecosystem — devices, operating systems and content," Khan said. "The only company that has that end to end is Apple."

Tim Cook, Apple's CEO, is scheduled to attend Sun Valley, according to a person with knowledge of his plans who declined to speak publicly. Some of media's largest deals have been hatched or advanced at the retreat, including Comcast Corp.'s 2011 purchase of NBC Universal.

For the moment, entertainment companies have the upper hand, according to Khan. Industry leaders, including CBS Corp. CEO Leslie Moonves and Time Warner Inc.'s Jeffrey Bewkes, both on the attendee list, have used the popularity of their TV shows and films to wring licensing revenue from the technology companies.

Coming Up

"It's the Apples and the Googles who are battling to get in front of the consumer," Khan said.

Apple, based in Cupertino, Calif., controls about 63 percent of the worldwide tablet market, researcher IDC said in June, while the iPhone held 32 percent of the U.S. smartphone market in the three months to May, trailing only Android at 51 percent, according to ComScore. The company is also working on a TV set that may be unveiled this year and released in 2013, Gene Munster, a Piper Jaffray Cos. analyst, said in May.

"Content companies are the arms dealers in this race. They don't care which ecosystem wins the war as long as the Amazons and Googles are buying weapons."

Shahid Khan, chairman of MediaMorph, a New York-based media advisory and venture firm

Microsoft, based in Redmond, Wash., is stronger in the home, with more than 66 million of its Xbox video-game consoles sold worldwide and more than 40 million active Xbox Live subscribers using the device to access films, TV and other entertainment.

"Everyone's still trying to figure out the content portion," said Anthony LeCour, a New York-based media investment banker with Compass Advisers. "A lot of the deals now are about taking that content or buying them out and layering them on to their system."

This year's Allen & Co. conference begins with no shortage of deals on the table.

Vivendi, the Paris-based owner of Universal Music Group, has put its 61 percent stake in Activision Blizzard, the world's largest video-game company, on the market, a person with knowledge of the matter said last month. Activision CEO Bobby Kotick is among those invited.

Publishing assets have also received attention in recent weeks as investors debate whether they can build enough digital subscriptions on devices like the iPad or Amazon's Kindle.

News Corp.'s Murdoch heads to the conference with sons Lachlan and James two weeks after deciding to spin off his publishing division, including the Wall Street Journal — a move reflecting the low valuation investors place on the shrinking newspaper industry.

At the same time, billionaire value investor Warren Buffett, who attended last year and helped cement Disney's purchase of Capital Cities/ABC weeks after the 1995 retreat, has been buying newspapers, betting local publications can thrive in markets where there is little competition.

"News companies are trying to work out deals that will allow them get more people to come online to their content," LeCour said. "The New York Times is trying to do that — you'll see more joint ventures on this front."

In a move designed to extend its hold on home entertainment, Microsoft plans to let customers of its Xbox music service stream songs and store content on company servers, people familiar with its plans said last month.

Microsoft is in talks with major record labels on the needed rights. Sony CEO Kazuo Hirai is among those invited to Sun Valley, and his music division is a potential partner.

On the mobile front, where Apple has sold more than 365 million devices using its iOS operating system, Microsoft announced in June it will make its own tablet computer this year. The company also said it plans to take a more active role in hardware makers' designs for Windows-powered smartphones.

Google's Android mobile operating system has been a winner for Samsung Electronics, with Galaxy model phones that are selling at a rate of about 380 every minute, the Suwon, South Korea-based company said in a recent earnings report.

Google is focused on improving its marketplace for Android applications, games and entertainment, called Google Play, to make it easier to download content to its Nexus 7-inch tablet, scheduled for release this month, and other devices.

Idaho Democrats Use State Seal for Campaign Email

BY JOHN MILLER
Associated Press

BOISE • Three Boise Democratic candidates sent voters a campaign newsletter emblazoned with Idaho's official state seal, even though the secretary of state's office discourages people from using the seal on anything but official state business.

Sen. Elliot Werk, Rep. Sue Chew and candidate John Gannon distributed the mailer by email Monday to south Boise voters. It aims to highlight what the candidates say are Republican ethics transgressions — and Democrats' push for stronger ethics laws. The email also asks for donations for two of the candidates.

But Tim Hurst, deputy secretary of state, says Idaho's seal should only be used for official business. Using it for political purposes could imply Idaho's endorsement for a candidate or issue, when none exists, he said.

"Electing them is not a state program," Hurst said, adding there is no penalty for abusing the policy.

More Idaho Lawmakers Improperly Using State Seal

BOISE (AP) • After Democrats used Idaho's official seal on their campaign material, minority party members are now complaining that Republicans are engaging in similarly inappropriate behavior.

Idaho's secretary of state warns candidates and lawmakers not to misappropriate the seal for election purposes, contending it's only for official business.

Republican Sen. Mitch Toryanski of Boise incorporates Idaho's seal into his re-election website.

His opponent in November, former Democratic Rep. Branden Durst, complained to The Associated Press Tuesday, contending Toryanski's use of the seal merits reporting — "in the name of impartiality."

That's after news reports that three Democrats — Sen. Elliot Werk, Rep. Sue Chew and House hopeful John Gannon — sent a note emblazoned with the seal to voters Monday seeking to highlight GOP ethics transgressions.

Toryanski didn't return a call.

For Dental Implant Treatment, it's a ClearChoice!

ClearChoice team of specialists brings you a dental implant solution that fits your budget ... in just one day!*

A LEADER IN DENTAL IMPLANT TREATMENT

Virtually every adult will lose a tooth, and as we get older, more Americans will suffer with missing and failing teeth. These days, however, there are dental implant solutions that either didn't exist in the past or which were difficult to access. But now, ClearChoice Dental Implant Centers are leading the way in innovative dental implant treatments. Dental Implants are a permanent solution for dental problems. And now your treatment, from our team of specialists, can often be accomplished in just one day*... and without the need for additional bone graft surgeries. In fact, dental implants can last a lifetime and have become the treatment of choice for replacement of missing and failing teeth. With more than 10,000 dental implant procedures performed, ClearChoice Dental Implant Centers have become a leader in dental implant treatment delivery.

TECHNOLOGY

Every ClearChoice Dental Implant Center includes an on-site 3D CAT Scan. The 3D CAT Scan technology costs hundreds of thousands of dollars. This technology provides three-dimensional and cross-sectional views that allow ClearChoice doctors to examine the quality and density of the bone that will anchor the dental implants; select the correct type and size of implants; determine the precise placement of implants, and avoid the nerves and sinuses.

Since every smile is custom designed, each ClearChoice Center has a specialized Dental Implant in-house lab to custom make your smile.

Dental Implants are a surgical procedure and the ClearChoice doctors have extensive experience in this area including administering anesthesia to provide comfort.

Actual ClearChoice Patient

TEAM OF SPECIALISTS

The technology alone cannot elevate ClearChoice Dental Implant Centers in their field. Our technology is paired with an expert professional team of doctor specialists enabling ClearChoice to empower so many patients around the country to change their lives. These qualified specialists include an oral surgeon who places implants, and a prosthodontist who designs your custom new smile. Each of the doctors has special expertise and can be trusted to deliver your high quality implant care. Dental Implants are a surgical procedure and the ClearChoice doctors have extensive experience in this area including administering

HEALTH CARE

How Will the Young, Healthy and Broke Buy Insurance?

BY CONNIE CASS
Associated Press

WASHINGTON • They're young, healthy and flat broke — and now the government says they have to buy thousands of dollars' worth of medical insurance. What should tapped-out twentysomethings do?

Well, some may just do nothing. The annual fine for shrugging off the new federal insurance requirement, which is to begin in 2014, starts out at a relatively low $95, depending on income. That would be far cheaper than paying premiums.

But that doesn't necessarily make blowing off the mandate a good idea for the fit and frugal. Millions of young people will qualify for good deals on health care if they take time to sort through the complicated law.

Many will get Medicaid coverage at virtually no cost. Others will qualify for private insurance at a fraction of the full premiums. And health plans offered under the law will limit individuals' out-of-pocket expenses to about $6,250 per year or less — a bulwark against gigantic, unexpected medical bills.

"It doesn't have to be cancer or a heart attack or even a bad car accident," said Karen Pollitz, a health policy expert at the Kaiser Family Foundation whose own son needed $15,000 worth of surgery after he broke his wrist while skateboarding at age 20. "Once you show up in the ER, it starts to cost you some money"

The plans also will cover at no charge preventive care such as HIV tests, screening for depression or alcoholism, flu shots, hepatitis vaccine, contraception and pregnancy care. And insurers will no longer be able to exclude or charge extra for people who already have health problems.

"It's the 15 percent of young people who have chronic conditions like asthma or diabetes, and the young women looking to have a baby," said Aaron Smith, 30, co-founder of Young Invincibles, which advocates for young adults' health care. "That discrimination won't fly in 2014."

Young Americans are the least likely to be insured: almost three of 10 adults who are under 35 aren't covered. And they go to emergency rooms more than any other group except seniors.

GOP Offers Health Care Repeal without Alternative

BY DAVID ESPO
Associated Press

WASHINGTON • House Republicans generally avoided talk of replacement measures on Tuesday as they mobilized for an election-season vote to repeal the health care law that stands as President Barack Obama's signature domestic accomplishment.

Instead, they lambasted the 2-year-old law as a threat to the nation's economic recovery and predicted some Democrats would join them in repudiating it.

"This is nothing short of economic malpractice," said Rep. Nan Hayworth of New York, citing tax increases, government mandates and other items in the law. "We can and we must do better."

She did not elaborate, nor did any of the members of the leadership in their remarks to reporters after the meeting.

Republican officials said the general reluctance to sketch any sort of alternative resulted from a desire to focus public attention on the health care law itself. It generally fares poorly in public polling, both nationally and in surveys of independent voters.

In addition, they said that while many Republicans ran on a slogan of "repeal and replace" in 2010, the rank and file is far from united around any precise alternative.

Republicans in both houses have suggested numerous measures in recent years to remake parts of the sprawling health care system. The last time the party offered a full-fledged legislative alternative was in 2009, meaning that none of the dozens of first-termers elected in 2010 were involved in its drafting.

That measure called for capping medical malpractice judgments, allowing insurance companies to sell policies across state lines and permitting small businesses to pool together to purchase coverage for their employees.

It also would have provided funds to the states to help maintain high-risk insurance pools for people with pre-existing conditions, for whom insurance is otherwise either unavailable or prohibitively expensive.

US Military Deaths in Afghanistan at 1,900

Maj. Gen. Thomas Vandal hands a United States flag to Emily Nichols, widow of Chase Prasnicki, during her husband's memorial service in Buena Vista, Va., Tuesday. Prasnicki, 24, was killed by an improvised explosive device June 27 in Afghanistan. As of Tuesday, at least 1,900 members of the U.S. military had died in Afghanistan as a result of the U.S.-led invasion of Afghanistan in late 2001, according to an Associated Press count. The AP count is 13 less than the Defense Department's tally, last updated Tuesday at 8 a.m. MDT. At least 1,588 military service members have died in Afghanistan as a result of hostile action, according to the military's numbers.

U.N. Envoy Presses Syrian Peace Plan with Iran, Iraq

BY QASSIM ABDUL-ZAHRA AND ALI AKBAR DAREINI
Associated Press

BAGHDAD • The U.N.'s special envoy on the Syrian crisis sought to build support for his peace efforts Tuesday with the leaders of Iran and Iraq, saying President Bashar Assad has agreed to a plan to quell the bloodshed in the most violent areas of Syria and then expand the operation to the whole country.

Top diplomat Kofi Annan said at a news conference in Iran that the plan still must be presented to the Syrian opposition. But he said his talks with Assad a day earlier focused on a new approach to ending the violence, which activists say has killed more than 17,000 people since March 2011.

"(Assad) made a suggestion of building an approach from the ground up in some of the districts where we have extreme violence — to try and contain the violence in those districts and, step by step, build up and end the violence across the country," Annan told reporters in Tehran, his first step on a tour of Syria's allies. He did not elaborate on the plan.

Annan later visited Iraq and met Prime Minister Nouri al-Maliki to discuss ways to end the fighting.

"I think we've all watched the tragic situation in Syria, the killings, the suffering of the people," Annan said in Baghdad. "And everyone I've spoken to shares the concerns and the needs for us to stop the killing."

The conflict in Syria has defied every international attempt to bring peace, and there was no sign that the plan Annan described Tuesday will be a breakthrough. Although the Assad government's crackdown has turned the Syrian president into an international pariah, he still has the support of strong allies such as Russia, Iran and China.

There is little support for military intervention of the type that helped bring down Libya's Moammar Gadhafi, and several rounds of sanctions and other attempts to isolate Assad have done little to stop the bloodshed.

Still, Annan's latest efforts to reach out to Syrian allies suggest he sees them as integral to solving the crisis.

Egypt's President Flexes Power but Keeps Cautious

BY HAMZA HENDAWI
Associated Press

CAIRO • The faceoff between Egypt's new Islamist president and the old guard military sharpened Tuesday with parliament defying orders to disband and the highest court slapping back at Mohammed Morsi in what has become an early glimpse into how he may flex his power.

Morsi's rapid-fire gambits against Egypt's entrenched institutions show he is willing to push against the establishment left from the era of deposed President Hosni Mubarak. But — so far at least — he and his Muslim Brotherhood allies also have displayed some restraint and pragmatism to avoid setting a collision course during a sensitive transition period.

It could point to a compli-

Two female Egyptian lawmakers greet each other at a brief session of Parliament, the first since the country's high court ruled the chamber unconstitutional, in Cairo, Egypt, Tuesday.

cated and protracted shake-out between Morsi and Egypt's security and judicial power centers, as all sides test the limits of their powers while the country awaits its post-Arab Spring constitution — possibly by the end of the year.

In place of an all-out confrontation, Egypt may be witnessing the new rules of political engagement being defined in a time of highly unclear guidelines: tough statements, conflicting orders and attempts to push the envelope but not tear it up.

"One of them came through the ballot box and the other is trying to monopolize power," said Gamal Eid, a prominent rights lawyer.

Already, Morsi has shown his ability to multi-task his political messages and end up somewhere in the middle.

During the campaign, he catered to hard-line Islamists with calls to strengthen Shariah law and celebrated his deep allegiance to the Brotherhood, which was long banned under Mubarak's Western-backed regime. But he also portrayed himself as son of the Arab Spring and appeared with women without head coverings.

PSU Report on Sex-abuse Scandal Due out Thursday

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. (AP) • An internal investigation into whether football coach Joe Paterno and other Penn State officials helped cover up reports that Jerry Sandusky was molesting children in the school's locker rooms will be released Thursday, officials said Tuesday.

The report, commissioned by school trustees following the former assistant football coach's arrest last year, is expected to reveal how the university treated Sandusky after fielding complaints about his encounters with young boys in 1998 and 2001. It is also expected to cast additional light on how Paterno exerted control over the football program while Sandusky worked under him and after Sandusky retired from coaching.

Not only could the report shape how Paterno is remembered, but it also could affect an ongoing NCAA probe into the school's conduct and criminal cases against two Penn State administrators.

The report is being issued by former FBI director Louis Freeh, who was hired by the university to find out what school officials, including Paterno, knew about the child molester in their midst. It will be published online at 9 a.m. Thursday. Investigators will hold a news conference at 10 a.m. in Philadelphia to discuss the findings and recommendations in the report.

THE MARKET AT A GLANCE

Stocks Fall for a Fourth Day as Tech Profits Slump

NEW YORK (AP) • Stocks fell for the fourth straight day Tuesday following a profit slump at technology companies and a steep decline in oil prices, which sent energy stocks sharply lower.

The Dow Jones industrial average fell 83.17 points to close at 12,653.12. Aluminum maker Alcoa was the biggest loser in the Dow, giving up 4 percent after reporting a slump in revenue late Monday. The broader Standard & Poor's 500 lost 10.99 points to 1,341.47. The index is in its longest slump since May 18.

Chip maker Advanced Micro Devices fell sharply after reporting that a slowdown in China and Europe led to an 11 percent drop in second-quarter revenue.

EU Extends Spain's Deficit Timeline by 1 Year

BRUSSELS (AP) • The European Union worked towards stabilizing Spain's finances Tuesday as it backed up the blueprint for the country's €100 billion bank bailout plan with plans to grant the country an extra year to cut its budget deficit. Finance ministers from the 27 EU countries, meeting in Brussels, approved extending Spain's deadline for achieving a budget deficit of less than 3 percent of its annual economic output, until 2014, said Vassos Shiarly, Cyprus' finance minister and chair of the meeting.

The move comes on the heels of an overnight meeting at which the 17 euro area finance ministers agreed on the terms of a bailout for Spain's troubled banks, saying that the first €30 billion in aid can be ready by the end of this month.

U.S. Job Openings Rose in May, Good Sign for Hiring

BY CHRISTOPHER S. RUGABER
 Associated Press

WASHINGTON • U.S. employers advertised more jobs in May than April, a hopeful sign after three months of weak hiring.

Job openings rose to a seasonally adjusted 3.6 million, the Labor Department said Tuesday. That's up from 3.4 million in April. It's also the second-highest level in nearly four years, just behind March's 3.7 million.

A rise in openings could mean hiring will pick up in the coming months. It typically takes one to three months to fill a job.

The report "suggests business attitudes toward hiring are not in complete free-fall," Michael Feroli, an economist at JPMorgan Chase, wrote in a note to clients.

Even with the increase, the competition for jobs remains fierce. There were 12.7 million unemployed people in May, or an average of 3.5 unemployed for each open position. That's down from a ratio of 3.7 in April. In a healthy job market, the ratio is usually around 2 to 1.

And more openings have yet to translate into greater hiring.

For the April-June quarter, the economy added an average of only 75,000 net jobs a month, according to the government June employment report released last Friday. That's roughly a third of the average monthly jobs added in the January-March quarter.

Businesses and governments have been slow to fill jobs in the past year.

Since May 2011, openings have increased by more than 18 percent. But gross hiring has risen only about 4 percent.

Openings are more than 50 percent higher than they were in June 2009, when the recession ended. But they are still below pre-recession levels of about 5 million per month.

The government's monthly employment report measures net hiring.

Tuesday's report, known as the Job Openings and Labor Turnover survey, measures gross hiring. That rose in May to 4.36 million, the second-highest level in two years.

But when layoffs, quits and other separations are subtracted, the net gain is close to the 77,000 reported Friday for May.

Layoffs increased in May to the highest level since July 2010.

A weaker job market has also led to smaller pay increases. Wages for those who have jobs are barely keeping up with inflation. Without more jobs and higher pay, consumers won't have the income needed to fuel more spending and economic growth.

The slow pace of hiring also suggests businesses aren't confident enough in the economy to add permanent employees. Nearly a third of the jobs added last month were temporary hires. That is usually seen as a good sign, because it indicates employers need more workers and will soon hire permanently. But many economists now say it suggests that companies are simply reluctant to add workers for the long term.

Wikipedia Founder Weighs in on Internet Laws, Apple

BY CECILIA KANG
 The Washington Post

According to Jimmy Wales, founder of Wikipedia, laws to prevent online piracy are working just fine. Just look at the FBI's big bust of file-sharing site Megaupload last January, he said in an interview.

Efforts around the world to create new Internet laws are too often overbearing and can hurt users, he said. Wales's thoughts are supported by tech firms, but frustrate Hollywood and media firms that are fighting against rampant illegal distribution of their content on the Internet.

Just Tuesday, Wikipedia went dark in Russia in protest of Internet laws that would allow the government to blacklist certain websites. The online community's protest of U.S. anti-piracy laws late last year helped strike down the Stop Online Piracy Act, aimed at blocking sites that engaged in illegal distribution of copyrighted material.

"Anything that causes it to be difficult for the volunteers to share information... is an anathema to us. We will always be quite keen on these issues," Wales said during a discussion with reporters and editors at The Washington Post. Wales is in Washington D.C. for the annual gathering of Wikipedia editors and contributors called Wikimania.

But what really gets under his skin, and what may be feeding piracy on the Web, is the increasingly closed nature of tech systems that make it hard to move movies, music and books across devices. Just recently, he wanted to buy "Star Wars" for his 11-year-old daughter, but the Blu-ray disk he bought in London didn't work on his player in the United States. He turned to iTunes to download, but the title wasn't available.

The business battles between Hollywood and tech firms is making it too difficult for consumers, he says.

"Large scale commercial piracy is a problem," Wales said. But if you can't find "Star Wars" from the mobile marketplace, it becomes even more tempting to download or stream illegally, he says.

"What we need to do is to be realistic about how consumers want to use media and pay for it," he said.

Obama Struggles to Make Headway on Outsourcing

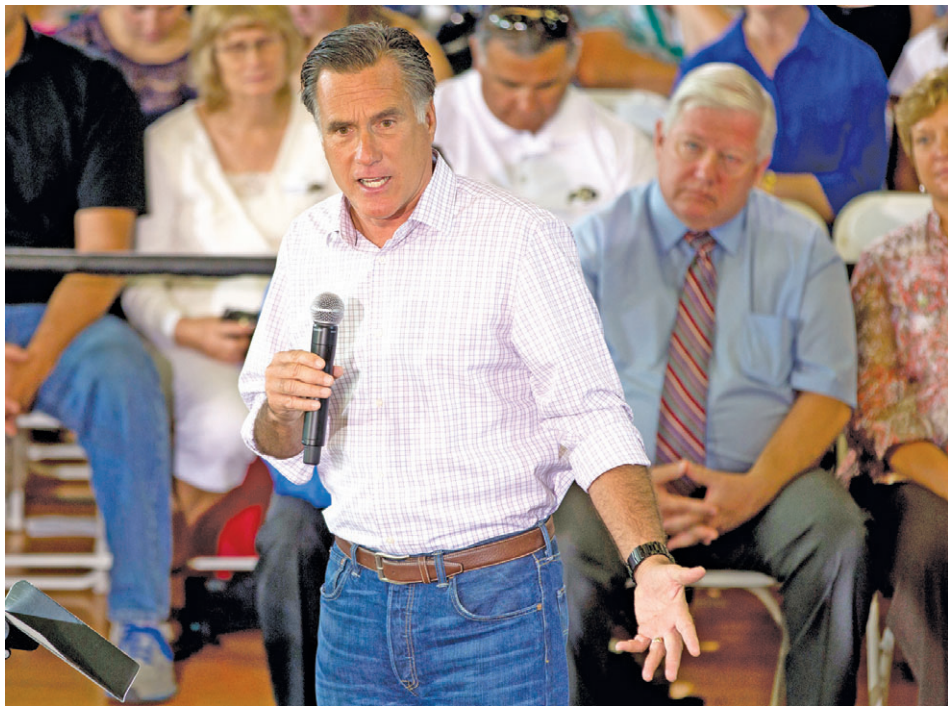

BY ZACHARY A. GOLDFARB
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON • Barack Obama promised voters four years ago that he would work to slow the outflow of American jobs to other countries, proposing to revamp a federal tax code that encourages companies to maintain overseas operations.

Obama has continued to call for rewriting the rules that allow U.S. corporations to avoid paying taxes for a time on income generated overseas.

But the tax changes have not happened.

While White House officials say they are waiting on Congress to act, Obama's critics, primarily on the political left, say he repeatedly failed in other ways to protect American jobs from being moved overseas. They point to a range of actions they say he should have taken: confronting China, reigning in unfettered trade and reworking a U.S. visa program that critics say ends up sending high-tech jobs abroad.

Obama Team Targets Mitt Romney's Private Finances

BY JULIE PACE
Associated Press

WASHINGTON • The Obama election campaign has a politically loaded question it wants voters to think about: What is Mitt Romney hiding?

Not a thing, Romney says. The Democrats are just trying to change the subject from the weak economy.

It's a newly intense back-and-forth as President Barack Obama's campaign team tries to cast his Republican opponent as a secretive rich guy who keeps his money in offshore accounts and refuses to release more of his tax returns.

The coordinated push, which includes stinging criticism from Obama and Vice President Joe Biden, web videos and television advertisements, comes as the Democrats grasp for ways to gain an advantage in a closely contested election and overcome a steady stream of lackluster economic news.

Getting personal, Biden declared Tuesday that Romney was "making a lie of the old adage, like father, like son" by not meeting the standards his father, George Romney, set when he released 12 years of tax returns during his 1968 presidential bid.

In a speech to Hispanic leaders in Las Vegas, Biden said of Romney: "He wants you to show your papers, but he won't show us his." It was a criticism that hit both Romney's financial reticence and his support for an Arizona immigration law that allows police to check the immigration status of people they stop.

$3.2 Million Yacht Sinks in Lake Tahoe Marina

BY MICHELLE RINDELS
Associated Press

Witnesses at the Tahoe Keys Marina say they heard screeching, the sound of tearing metal, and a passenger yell "oh, no!" late Sunday night.

By about 3 a.m. Monday, a three-story, $3.2 million yacht so big that it has its own helicopter pad was sunk, one end of it touching the South Lake Tahoe marina bottom at a Titanic-esque tilt.

It's still not clear what sent the Sierra Rose to the lake bed, where it remained partially submerged Tuesday and waiting for a private contractor to remove it sometime within the next few days.

Witness Heather Contreras, who was visiting the marina from Turlock, Calif., told the Tahoe Daily Tribune that more than a dozen people were on the vessel at the time of the screeching noise. The luxury liner didn't immediately sink, and some people stayed on it for more than an hour after the apparent mishap, she said.

Nobody was injured, marina general manager Robert Spinnato said.

On Monday, a big-screen TV, leather couches and floating slices of bread were visible inside the partially submerged watercraft, which was billed as the largest non-commercial boat on Lake Tahoe as recently as 2006.

Options

It's still possible President Barack Obama's health care law won't be around in 2014, when the big changes are to kick in. Congressional Republicans and GOP presidential candidate Mitt Romney want to repeal "Obamacare" if they win the November elections. Still, with open enrollment for the law's new state-based insurance markets scheduled to begin in October of next year, it's prudent to start considering the options for getting covered.

Got a Job? Start There

More than half of Americans already are covered through their jobs. But young adults have the nation's highest unemployment rate and also are more likely to toil in low-wage jobs without benefits.

Some employers, especially smaller businesses paying lower wages, may now drop their plans and expect their workers to get government help. Other businesses, but not quite as many, will probably begin coverage in response to the law's penalties and incentives for employers, the Congressional Budget Office predicts.

Under 26? Lean on Mom or Dad

One of the law's most popular provisions, already in effect, ensures that parents with family plans can keep their adult kids enrolled until they turn 26, if the children don't have a suitable workplace option. Pollitz's skateboarding son is one of them.

The government estimates that 3.1 million uninsured young people already have gained coverage this way.

Consider Medicaid

Right now, Medicaid mostly covers children and low-income adults who are disabled, pregnant or raising kids. But the health care law will push states to expand Medicaid to also cover other adults with incomes up to around $15,000, adjusted for inflation in 2014. That's designed to account for about half of the 30 million people expected to gain insurance coverage under the overhaul.

It may fall short, however. The Supreme Court recently ruled that the federal government can't coerce states into joining the Medicaid expansion. Some states may decline to add people to their rolls.

There's Other Help

Most people with incomes up to four times the poverty level — which currently comes out to $44,680 for an individual or $92,200 for a family of four — will qualify for some help paying for private insurance. Aid drops off sharply as income climbs, and younger people get smaller subsidies than older folks whose insurance rates are higher.

The lowest earners shouldn't have to pay more than 2 percent of their incomes toward insurance premiums for mid-level plans; those at the high end would have to contribute 9.5 percent. These plans also have significant co-pays and deductibles, but some help is available there, too.

For example, a single 26-year-old earning $16,000 might pay $537 toward the annual premium for a mid-level "silver" plan, according to estimates from the Kaiser

Family Foundation. The rest of the premium would be covered by a $2,853 tax credit. (Deductibles and co-pays could cost up to an additional $2,083, depending on how much care the person needs.)

A 26-year-old earning $35,000 would pay $3,325 in premiums — $277 a month — for the same plan, after only a $66 tax credit. (And that patient might be on the hook for another $4,167 in out-of-pocket costs.)

A Cheaper but Skimpy Choice

For those under 30 there's a special option to buy "catastrophic" insurance with the lowest premiums but scant coverage until a deductible of about $6,250 is met. While it may be tempting, caution is advised.

"We really encourage folks to do their homework and look at the details of the plan," said Smith, who's organizing efforts to help young people learn about their choices. "It's not just the premium. You have to look at what's being covered, what the deductibles are."

Go Bare

People who would have to spend more than 8 percent of their income to buy basic insurance are exempt from paying a penalty if they go without.

For others who feel they can't afford or just don't want coverage, the penalties start off relatively low in 2014.

Private insurers have yet to set the prices for their 2014 plans, because coverage that will comply with the law is still being developed. The Congressional Budget Office has estimated that premiums for the bare-bones plan, called "bronze" level, might average between $4,500 and $5,000 per year. Family plans might cost $12,500 per year.

Rates for young adults would be lower. Kaiser's cost calculator gives a ballpark estimate of about $3,400 for an average single 26-year-old who doesn't get subsidies.

In contrast, the first year's minimum penalty for an individual is $95; that's what a worker making $16,000 would pay. A $35,000 earner would owe $255 — not even a tenth of the estimated $3,325 in premiums.

In 2016, the minimum penalty rises to $695 and it's capped at a little less than 2.5 percent of taxable income. That's about a $1,600 fine for someone making $75,000 per year.

Even for the wealthiest folks the law says the penalties can never exceed the average cost of a "bronze" plan. But most of those people already have insurance, anyway.

The Internal Revenue Service could withhold the penalties from taxpayers' refunds if they don't show proof of insurance. About 4 million people are expected to end up paying the penalties.

"For many young people, this is the first time they've had to deal with health insurance and the health care system," said Smith. "There will be a learning curve."

Pentagon to Make Database to Track Medal Awardees

BY ROBERT BURNS

Associated Press

WASHINGTON • The Pentagon plans to establish a searchable database of military valor awards and medals, hoping for a technological fix to the problem of people getting away with lying about earning military honors.

Pentagon press secretary George Little said details have yet to be worked out, but the intention is to have a digital repository of records on a range of valor awards and medals going back as far in history as possible.

The move is in response to a June 28 Supreme Court ruling that invalidated a law making it a crime to lie about receiving the Medal of Honor and other military decorations. An authoritative database would make it easier to check on award claims, and perhaps would deter some who would make false public claims.

The high court ruled that the 2006 Stolen Valor Act infringes upon speech protected by the First Amendment.

Veterans organizations and some in Congress have long argued that the Pentagon needs such a database. As recently as 2009 the Pentagon argued that it would be too costly and could pose Privacy Act problems. It also argued that any government database would be incomplete because a 1973 fire at the National Personnel Records Center in St. Louis destroyed millions of personnel records, including those citing medals and awards, and that even a complete database would do little to reduce the number of false award claims.

The Veterans of Foreign Wars of the U.S., which had expressed sharp disappointment in the Supreme Court ruling, believes that publicizing the false claims of military valor can be an effective deterrent to others.

VFW spokesman Joe Davis said Tuesday that his group welcomes the Pentagon's new approach.

"The cost is minimal compared to the verifiable proof it provides to honorable service members, veterans and all their families," Davis said.

Little said no final decisions have been made about the type of government database that would be created. He said the goal would be to have it include information not only about recipients of the Medal of Honor, which is the nation's highest military award, but also those who hold other decorations for valor, such as the Silver Star and Bronze Star.

"There are some complexities involved in looking back into history," Little said. "We would obviously hope to be able to go as far back as possible, but we also want there to be integrity in the data. So these are factors that are being weighed, and we're in the process of exploring those options. So the door is open."

Members of Congress, meanwhile, are taking their own steps to address the problem of fraudulent claims.

Sen. Jim Webb, D-Va., who served in Vietnam as a Marine officer, announced Tuesday that he will introduce legislation which could bring criminal penalties to any individual making a false claim to have served in the military or to have been awarded a military medal or decoration in order to "secure a tangible benefit or a personal gain."

"Profiting from the misrepresentation of military service or the award of a decoration or medal for personal gain undermines the value of service and is offensive to all who have stepped forward to serve our country in uniform," Webb said.

Dining Tidbits

BY JAMI WHITED
For the Times-News

Pizza for Night Owls

One of the biggest hits for Tomato's Italian Grill patrons isn't as much on the menu as on the front door. The Twin Falls restaurant (1309 Blue Lakes Blvd. N.) is now open a half-hour later for summer, closing at 10:30 p.m. on weekdays and 11:30 p.m. on weekends.

"We're open later than any other dine-in pizza restaurant," said Roger Sutherland, co-owner and manager. "That's been a huge hit for us."

Aside from appealing to night owls, the restaurant is offering gluten-free options. The most popular: chicken Marsala over vegetables.

"We get a lot of requests for gluten-free options," Sutherland said. "We went to a food show last month and we learned a lot more about the theories behind it."

Wheat-free options include replacing pasta with vegetables and using a special pizza dough. A gluten-free meal may not appeal to everyone, but Sutherland said people are asking for it more as word spreads. "People that know the taste enjoy it and appreciate that we have it."

Now Serving Dinner

Jesse's Country Grill in Bellevue (401 N. Main St.) saw new owners in March, with head cook Brandie Lepley and her husband, Russell Lepley, taking over for a Peruvian family. The restaurant is known for bountiful breakfasts and hearty lunches, but the Lepleys are breaking into the dinner scene with gusto.

After three revisions, a supper menu offers options such as hot roast beef sandwich, three-piece fried chicken dinner, popcorn shrimp, taco salad and beef enchiladas. A spinach salad — with sauteed mushrooms, bacon and raspberry vinaigrette — has proven to be a favorite. The salad can be a meal or scaled down for a smaller appetite.

Portions that are big in size but not in budget make the restaurant popular among locals and visitors.

"There's nowhere else in this area you can get a real fried chicken dinner rather than at the deli section in grocery stores," Russell Lepley said. "We still have our regulars — people will drive down from Ketchum for our breakfasts — but some never knew we were open for dinner too."

What You See ...

If diners at Garibaldi's Mexican Restaurant (645 Filer Ave., Twin Falls) order molcajete, they may be surprised to see a rock bowl set in front of them. This menu item, about four months old, is being received well. The mixture of steak, chicken, shrimp and cactus is served with sour cream, fresh Mexican cheese and a side dish of rice and beans for $15.95.

Ramon Cardoso, head waiter, also described a couple of traditional Mexican dishes that have been on the Garibaldi's menu for some time. But one small revision increased their draw: "We added pictures to the menu," he said, laughing. "That has really helped."

Torta is once again on the menu, with a picture. With the choice of steak, chicken or pork, the meat is cubed and sandwiched with jalapenos, avocado, beans, lettuce, tomatoes and mayonnaise. Torta is offered off and on, at $6.75 a plate.

Tostadas de ceviche has been a constant staple on the menu. But about six months ago it saw new life when — you guessed it — a picture was added. The fish fillet is finely chopped and cooked in lime juice, refrigerated while it marinates for three or four hours, then served on a crispy corn shell. Topped with cilantro, avocado, onion and tomatoes, the tostadas are $3.50 each.

Switched for Summer

To create lighter fare for the lighter months, Elevation 486 general manager Paul Claasen brought in new appetizers and entrees and made changes to side dishes.

Summer appetizers at the Twin Falls restaurant (195 River Vista Place) include Baja ceviche and a prawn cocktail. A pork tenderloin and a honey-glazed, oven-roasted Chinese chicken add to entree selections; instead of the spicy noodle soup of fall and winter, a rice side complements the lighter menu items. Blended cocktails also add to the summertime flair.

Simple changes can make a big difference in matching sustenance to Idaho's weather.

CREATIVE Concoctions

Local businesses create 16 unique ice cream flavors for you to taste test at a charity fundraiser.

BY TETONA DUNLAP
tdunlap@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • Not even Ben and Jerry could come up with more unique and fun ice cream flavors.

If your taste buds seek adventure, grab a spoon and sample 16 delightful flavors this weekend — without traveling all the way to Vermont.

Sixteen Magic Valley businesses created signature ice creams they hope will melt your heart at Rotary's Second Annual Ice Cream Funday, noon to 3 p.m. July 14 at Twin Falls City Park. This is an all-you-can-eat event, and admission is $6 for adults and $4 for children 11 and younger. The charity fundraiser — organized by Rotary Club of Twin Falls — coincides with this weekend's Art in the Park and Kids Art in the Park in the same grassy, shaded downtown block.

"We anticipate that this will be a better day for ice cream," committee chairwoman Jill Skeem said.

Don't forget to vote if you scream for a certain ice cream. The winning flavor will become Buhl-based Cloverleaf Creamery's August flavor of the month. Winners of best flavor and best name receive a mounted ice cream scoop trophy.

Ice Cream Funday is not only about the most creative concoction, it's about raising money for local charities and projects.

Last year's winning flavor was Lemon Cheesecake Cool Breeze concocted by New Leaf Properties, and the best-name winner was St. Edward's Catholic School's fourth-grade class for Jesus' Reese's Pieces.

Each participating business comes up with a name and selects ingredients from a list of available ice cream bases, nuts, candies, dry toppings, spices, fruits, swirl-ins and flavor add-ins. After the businesses marked the ingredients

Turkish Market Expands into Russian Foods

BY VIRGINIA HUTCHINS
vhutchins@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • Magic Valley foodies have another close-to-home option for global adventure.

International Food Market's late-June move to a new Twin Falls location meant an expansion of its merchandise lineup.

"It's a bigger place ... and we bring more products," co-owner Eldar Sharafov said this week.

Now at 430 Blue Lakes Blvd. N., Suite B, the market added fresh beef, dried salty fish (try it as a snack with beer) and many Russian products: candies, cookies, juices, dried apricots, teas, smoked cheeses and sausages. The store significantly lowered its prices on sweets and olives. And it gained parking space with the move; now there's room for at least 20 cars.

"A lot of customer was crying for parking," Sharafov said.

The market opened in November with Turkish foods including yogurt, cheese, phyllo dough, sausages, cookies, candies, pickled and canned vegetables, flatbread and croissants. You'll still find all that at International Food Market, along with a few Bosnian specialties. Sharafov hopes soon to add fresh chicken, plus Arabic, Iranian and more Bosnian foods.

Agave Nectar: What It Is and How to Use It

BY J.M. HIRSCH
Associated Press

Finally ... a way to enjoy agave without the hangover!

That's right, agave nectar — the current darling of the alternative sweetener world — is made from the same plant that is used to produce tequila. And it goes down so much easier (squeeze of lime and dash of salt are optional).

But let's start with some basics. Agave nectar (sometimes called agave syrup) is an amber liquid that resembles honey, but has a cleaner, sweeter, even fruitier flavor. Not long ago it was mostly unheard of in the U.S., existing primarily in the backwaters of the natural foods world.

In recent years, it has evolved into a booming $200 million industry. Suddenly, it's being used in everything from ketchup and barbecue sauce to baked goods and ice cream. And don't even get me started about the cocktail scene.

Why all this attention to what amounts to the juice of a large cactus-looking plant native to Mexico?

It helps that agave syrup is sweeter than conventional sugar. So while it has the same calories as white sugar, you can use less of it without sacrificing flavor. When substituting, aim to use about 25 percent less than you would with refined sugar.

Many consumers also have latched on to agave's glycemic appeal. That is a fancy way of saying that agave syrup is believed to have a less intense effect on blood sugar levels.

When shopping for agave, check the grocer's baking or honey sections, as well as the natural foods aisle. It usually is sold in squirt bottles. While some companies offer flavored varieties, the most common choices are light and amber.

Light agave syrup is highly filtered and lightly heated. Amber syrups are less filtered and heated slightly more. The latter also has a more robust flavor. Think of it this way — light agave is to amber agave as honey is to maple syrup.

Now that we've had our SAT moment, what should you do with agave? In general terms, light agave works well with light, fruity desserts. Heavily seasoned items, such as pumpkin pie, call for amber. The darker agave also makes a fine pancake or waffle topping on its own.

Agave-Barbecue Roasted Chicken

Start to finish: 1 hour.
Servings: 6.

3- to 5-pound whole chicken
Kosher salt and ground black pepper

For the barbecue sauce:

6-ounce can tomato paste
5 tablespoons agave syrup
3 tablespoons olive oil
5 tablespoons cider vinegar

MATTHEW MEAD • ASSOCIATED PRESS

- 1 1/2 tablespoons Dijon mustard
- 1 teaspoon kosher salt
- 2 teaspoons ground cumin
- 1 teaspoon cinnamon
- 1 teaspoon garlic powder
- 1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
- 1/2 teaspoon ground black pepper

Heat the oven to 400 degrees.

Place the chicken on a cutting board with the breast down. Use kitchen shears to carefully cut from the neck hole down the length of the backbone and out the rump. Repeat on the other side of the backbone. Discard the backbone. The cutting will require a little effort, but the shears should cut through the bones without too much difficulty.

Spread open the chicken, exposing the cavity. Sprinkle the inside with salt and pepper. Overturn the chicken and place it cavity side down in a roasting pan just a bit larger than the chicken. Gently press the chicken to flatten. Season over and under the skin with salt and pepper. Cover tightly with foil and roast for 30 minutes. Meanwhile, prepare the barbecue sauce. In a medium bowl, whisk together all ingredients. Set aside.

After the chicken has roasted for 30 minutes, remove the pan from the oven and remove the foil. Use a pastry brush to brush the barbecue sauce thickly over the entire chicken. Return the chicken to the oven and roast for another 30 minutes, or until the meat at the thickest part reaches 165 degrees.

Raspberries Are Ripe in Twin Falls You-pick Patch

TWIN FALLS • Raspberries and an increasing number of vegetables are available for sale at the College of Southern Idaho's Breckenridge Endowment Farm on North College Road. Families may come to the farm during its open hours and pick the produce themselves.

The CSI Agriculture Department makes the you-pick produce available each summer. Three varieties of raspberries will be sold at $3 per pound — purples, reds and goldens — but so far only the purples are ripe for picking.

Vegetables at the you-pick garden include peppers, tomatoes, eggplant, beans, herbs, cucumbers, squash, watermelons and other melons. Only a few of the vegetables are ripe enough to pick now. All vegetables are 50 cents a pound.

Appointments are not necessary. The garden is staffed from 8 a.m. to noon and 5-8 p.m. Mondays, Filer residents Jace Hall, 6, and his twin sister, Keelyn Hall, 6, pluck raspberries at the College of Southern Idaho's farm in 2011.

Farro Gives Substance to this Salad

BY STEPHANIE WITT SEDGWICK

Special to The Washington Post

I can make a meal of a salad like this. Farro, a wheat grain similar in texture and size to barley, gives the salad substance. The fruits and vegetables bring freshness. The dressing is light, and the shrimp add a little sweetness.

The recipe calls for pearled farro, which cooks in 15 to 20 minutes. It's a time-saving alternative to whole farro, which requires a long soaking and/or cooking time. If you can't find pearled farro, regular farro is fine, but preparation will take longer.

This salad is best the day it is made.

Farro, Avocado, Shrimp and Orange Salad

4 main-course or 8 side-dish servings.

- 2 3/4 cups cooked farro, preferably pearled (from 1 cup dry farro)
- 7 ounces large shrimp (21-30 count), peeled, deveined, cooked and cut into 1/2-inch pieces; see notes)
- 2 oranges, sectioned, each section cut into 1/2-inch pieces, plus accumulated juice (see notes)
- 4 ounces English (seedless) cucumber or 1 small unwaxed cucumber, cut into 1/4-inch dice (1 cup)
- Flesh of 1 small avocado, cut into 1/2-inch dice
- 2 tablespoons finely chopped fresh dill
- 2 tablespoons white wine vinegar, or more to taste
- 1 tablespoon olive oil, or more to taste
- 1/4 teaspoon sugar
- Salt
- Freshly ground black pepper

Combine the cooked farro, shrimp, orange pieces and juice, cucumber, avocado, dill, vinegar, oil, sugar and salt and pepper to taste in a large bowl. Taste, and adjust the seasoning as needed. Let it sit for 20 minutes before serving. Notes: To cook shrimp, fill a bowl with ice water. Bring a medium pot of water to a boil. Add the peeled and deveined shrimp; cover the pot and turn off the heat. Let sit for 2 to 4 minutes, until the shrimp turn pink and start to curl. Cut one open to make sure they are cooked through. Immediately drain and transfer to the ice water. Drain when cooled.

To section an orange, use a large chef's knife to slice off both ends of the fruit. Stand the fruit on end and slice downward along the curve of the fruit, cutting away both the peel and pith while leaving as much of the flesh as possible. Use a paring knife to cut between the sections to detach each section of fruit from its surrounding membrane. Discard the membrane.

Per serving (based on 4 main-course servings): 370 calories, 19 g protein, 50 g carbohydrates, 13 g fat, 2 g saturated fat, 75 mg cholesterol, 150 mg sodium, 10 g dietary fiber, 7 g sugar.

Question: My old vacuum is making me grouchy! It's a cheapo we bought at a discount store. I feel like it is just spreading the dirt around instead of really sucking it up. I'm thinking I need a professional vacuum. Are they worth the money? "Penny-Pinching Dirt Sucker-Upper"

Lori Chandler
Cleaning Center owner
734-2404

Answer: There are so many advantages of a professional vacuum, I don't have space to list them all. But let me explain just one. Inexpensive vacuums have a HEPA filtration, but are improperly sealed. Turn your vacuum on in a dark room and shine a flashlight: Do you see dust? If so, it's poorly sealed. The very debris you are trying to remove is being re-circulated, contaminating your indoor air. Professional vacuums like MIELE are sealed to trap organisms down to .3 microns in size. For this reason alone, it's worth the money!

HAVE YOU BEEN CONVICTED OF A DRUG CHARGE?

If you, a friend, or a loved-one were convicted of a drug charge between 2003 (possibly earlier) and 2011, you may be able to get your case dismissed and/or record cleared, or even be released from probation/incarceration.

A recent investigation of several employees at the Idaho State Forensic Laboratory has revealed that certain employees were found to have violated procedures relating to the handling and auditing of controlled substances at the Pocatello lab from 2003 to 2011. Said violations were of such a serious nature that they may call into question the accuracy and integrity of the entire ISP Forensic Lab between 2003 and 2011. And, because of U.S. Supreme Court cases, Brady v. Maryland, U.S. v. Bagley and Giglio v. U.S., etc. these violations also call into question the legality of all resulting convictions.

If this information effects you, a friend, or a loved-one, please call Fuller Law Offices at 208-734-1602 or 1-800-967-1133 to schedule a free consultation.

Dinner in 25 Minutes: Salmon with Horseradish Aioli

BY BONNIE S. BENWICK
The Washington Post

(Clarkson Potter, 2012).

Crispy Salmon With Horseradish Aioli

4 servings.

- 1-inch-wide piece fresh horseradish
- About 6 leaves flat-leaf parsley
- 2 large egg yolks
- 1/4 teaspoon kosher salt, plus more as needed
- 1 tablespoon water
- 1/2 cup plus 2 tablespoons canola oil
- 1/2 cup extra-virgin olive oil
- 1/2 lemon
- 1/2 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
- Four skin-on salmon fillets, 6 to 8 ounces each, preferably center-cut
- Wondra or all-purpose flour, for dusting

Peel the horseradish. Use a Microplane grater or the small-holed side of a box grater to grate the horseradish to yield 2 tablespoons. Mince the parsley to yield 1 tablespoon.

If you can break up the timing/prep of this recipe, make the aioli in advance so it's nice and chilled by the time the fish is done.

Fresh horseradish is worth having on hand, so don't be worried if you have to buy a larger piece than is called for here. It brings a bright intensity to the aioli. (The flavor will mellow after a day or two.) Grate it fresh as you need it to make your own cocktail sauce, a dip with sour cream or creme fraiche (for fish, chicken or prime rib); add it to a slaw or mashed potatoes. It lasts in the refrigerator in a food-safe plastic storage bag for weeks; wrap the cut side with a damp paper towel.

You'll have leftover aioli, which can be refrigerated for up to 3 days.

Serve with a mash of minted fresh peas or new potatoes. Adapted from "In My Kitchen: 100 Recipes and Discoveries for Passionate Cooks," by Ted Allen

ASTRID RIECKEN FOR THE WASHINGTON POST

Fresh horseradish is worth having on hand to make the aioli that accompanies this crispy salmon.

Combine the egg yolks, salt and water in the bowl of a food processor. With the motor running, gradually add the 1/2 cup each of canola and olive oils (one after the other) to form an emulsion close to the consistency of mayonnaise. Squeeze in the juice from the 1/2 lemon (1 tablespoon), then add the Worcestershire sauce, the grated horseradish and the parsley. Pulse a few times, just until well incorporated. Transfer to a serving bowl, cover and refrigerate while you cook the fish. Preheat the oven to 400 degrees. Heat a large, ovenproof saute pan or skillet over medium heat for about 5 minutes or until it is quite hot. Meanwhile, use paper towels to pat the salmon fillets dry on all sides. Season them lightly with salt. Use the Wondra flour to dust the fillets on all sides, shaking off any excess flour.

A Sweet Version of Ebelskivers

THE WASHINGTON POST

The primary tool you'll need for making perfectly round ebelskivers is not the specifically designed cast-iron pan with deep molds — though you will need one of those — but a cheap bamboo skewer for slowing turning the little batter balls. The primary skill you'll need is patience: You must slowly and incrementally rotate each ebelskiver until it is evenly cooked.

The ebelskivers can be cooked in advance and frozen until you're ready to reheat them in the oven.

Adapted from the ebelskiver recipe created by Kera Carpenter, chef-owner of Domku in D.C.

Sweet and Airy Ebelskivers

Makes 21 2-inch balls.

- 1 1/2 cups flour, sifted
- 2 tablespoons sugar
- 2 teaspoons baking powder
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 3 large eggs
- 1 1/2 cups whole milk
- 8 tablespoons (1 stick) unsalted butter, melted
- Confectioners' sugar, for dusting

Preheat the oven to 200 degrees. Place an ovenproof platter in the oven. Whisk together the flour, sugar, baking powder and salt in a large mixing bowl until combined.

Separate the egg whites from the yolks, placing the whites in the bowl of a stand mixer or hand-held electric mixer.

Whisk the egg yolks in a medium mixing bowl, then add the whole milk and 6 tablespoons of the melted butter and whisk until the mixture is well combined and smooth. Add the egg mixture to the bowl with the dry ingredients and use a wooden spoon to mix. The batter should be somewhat lumpy.

Beat the egg whites until they are stiff but not dry. Use a flexible spatula to fold about one-third of the whites into the batter to lighten it, then add the rest, folding just until no streaks of white remain.

Heat an ebelskiver pan on the stove over medium heat and brush each well with a small amount of butter; there should be a tiny pool of butter on the bottom of each well. Once the butter starts bubbling, add batter to fill the wells to just below the tops. (Do not overfill or the batter will overflow as it cooks.) After 1 to 2 minutes, use a long bamboo skewer to see if your ebelskivers are ready to rotate; the bottom of each will start to brown and will slide with little pressure. Rotate each ball, a little bit at a time, until each ebelskiver is golden brown and evenly cooked.

Transfer to the oven to keep warm. Repeat to use all of the batter.

Serve the ebelskivers while still warm, either dusted with confectioners' sugar or topped with a sauce or syrup of your choice.

Names Fly for this Chicken

BY KATHLEEN PURVIS
McClatchy Newspapers

Question: My husband had a dish at a restaurant that was described as "frenched" chicken. The waitress could not give us a very clear definition. Can you explain it?

Answer: Usually, frenched is a kitchen term that means scrapping something free from part of the bone. The bones on rack of lamb or a crown roast, for instance, often are frenched to make it easier to serve them.

I hadn't seen it done with chicken, so I called chef John Blumreich of Restaurant 49 in Kannapolis, N.C., to ask. His explanation led to another question. Their chicken vendor calls it frenched, he said, but it's more commonly known as airline chicken, a boneless breast with the first joint of the wing still attached.

Why is that called airline? Some stories claim it's because the wing is attached, but most sources credit the airlines with developing the cut in the 1960s. When meals were free, they wanted something that looked like you were getting something a little more substantial.

It's also called a hotel cut, a Statler breast or a chicken supreme.

Poptails! Chilly Cocktail Served on a Stick

BY ELIZABETH KARMEL
For The Associated Press

To me, summer is margarita season.

My favorite classic margarita is the "Topolo," which is served at Rick Bayless' Topolobampo restaurant in Chicago. It is properly shaken and served in an appropriately small martini glass. I can't stand trying to drink out of stemmed glasses that are too big for my mouth. I end up drenched in my drink instead of quenching my thirst!

When the bartender is perfectly on point, I can see tiny ice crystals in the shimmering liquid. Catching a few icy sips before the crystals melt is my perfect prescription to unwind. That first sip is always the best as the balance of ice cold and tart freshly squeezed lime juice, sweet orange liqueur and robust tequila join to make a refreshing and relaxing libation.

I know people drink them all year long but to me, a well-made margarita is a hot weather cocktail. Summer also is the only time of year (I think) a frozen margarita takes the lead in the great shaken vs. frozen debate.

The frozen margarita has taken repeated hits from professional bartenders and cocktail connoisseurs. But I don't understand why. I consider the frozen versions to live in their own separate (and fun!) category. We have all kinds of grades of beer, wine, steaks, etc. Why not different margaritas for different occasions?

This summer, I decided to make my own version of the Topolo margarita and — since I love the icy coolness — freeze it in fun frozen pop molds to make a decidedly adult cocktail treat. I called it a "poptail."

I love making these because they can be prepared up to a week in advance and are ready as soon as your guests arrive. Or as soon as you get home from work! I sometimes top the pops off with a slice of lime that freezes at the base, just for the look of it. You can embellish or not, depending on your level of craftiness.

My recipe is simple. I use freshly squeezed juice — a blend of tart lime and sweet orange — and sweeten it with powdered sugar. The powdery texture ensures the sugar dissolves, thereby eliminating the need to make simple syrup (the more common sweetener for cocktails). Start with 2 tablespoons of powdered sugar and add more depending on how sweet or tart you like your drink.

I also add a bit of salt to echo the salted rim of the cocktail glass (and to balance the sweetness). I like to use orange triple sec and a top-shelf aged (anejo) tequila to round out the flavor.

These days there are plenty of great frozen pop molds on the market. Pick your favorite and even flavor your pops to match the mold. The orange and vanilla creamsicle just might be the next "poptail" I tackle since I saw that classic pop mold in a catalog the other day.

The recipe is easily customized to suit your taste. You even can leave out the booze for the kids. Just be sure to use two different shaped molds so the pops don't get mixed up!

Margarita Frozen Pops

This recipe makes a classic strong margarita. If you want the "poptails" to be low-test instead of high-test, reduce the alcohol by half or double the other ingredients. If you want to make these pops without the alcohol at all, add the juice of 1 extra orange and an extra 1/4 cup of filtered water. Pour into molds and freeze per the manufacturer's instructions. Because of the alcohol in these pops, they are a bit slower to freeze than traditional recipes. It's best to make them the day before. Start to finish: 5 minutes, plus overnight freezing. Servings: About 8 (depending on the size of your molds).

- 1/2 cup fresh lime juice,
- about 5 to 6 large limes
- Juice of 1 large orange (about 1/2 cup)
- 1/4 cup filtered water
- Pinch of fine-grain sea salt
- 3/4 cup tequila
- 1/4 cup triple sec
- 2 to 4 tablespoons powdered sugar (to taste)

In a pitcher, combine the lime juice, orange juice, water, salt, tequila and triple sec. Stir well. Add the powdered sugar, 1 tablespoon at a time and stirring well between additions. Taste to determine your desired sweetness, then continue stirring until the sugar is completely dissolved.

Fill the pop molds, stopping about 1/2 inch from the top. The liquid will expand to fill the sleeve as it freezes. Put the Popsicle handles in place and freeze overnight.

Positive Momentum

The News from St. Luke's

At St. Luke's Magic Valley and St. Luke's Jerome, we're doing great work every day to improve the health of people in our region and enhance communication with our community. I'd like to fill you in on the latest happenings at St. Luke's, from our hospitals to our clinics to our community programs. Here's this month's news:

St. Luke's Jerome

At St. Luke's Jerome, bright, new exterior signs are making it easier for patients and families to find their way. At night, the new signs are lighted for even greater visibility.

We're also improving the patient experience with new patient beds, and plans are underway for a new nurse call light system and interactive TVs in patient rooms.

St. Luke's Magic Valley

We continue to bring more specialist physicians to our community to serve patients close to home. Please welcome three new doctors to St. Luke's medical staff: Dr. Jonathan Hanovell, Dr. Judith Csanky, and Dr. Brian Berk. Dr. Hanovell is an emergency medicine physician, while Dr. Csanky and Dr. Berk are both gastroenterologists, specializing in the diagnosis and treatment of diseases and conditions of the digestive tract.

Do a favor for your heart and soul: We invite you to try out our beautiful walking trail, which winds around St. Luke's Magic Valley. This one-mile path is available not only to our patients, families, and health care team, but to the community at large. It just may be the start of a healthy habit!

Please feel free to contact me at (208) 814-0000 if you have any questions about St. Luke's, or if you have suggestions about how we can best serve our patients, their families, and our communities.

Here's to your best health,

James L. Angle, CEO

OBITUARIES

Errol Keith Farnsworth Sr.

June 10, 1940-July 9, 2012

JEROME • Errol Keith Farnsworth Sr., 72, of Jerome, passed away Monday, July 9, 2012, at his home.

He was born June 10, 1940, in Alamosa, Colo., the son of Clair Moses Farnsworth and Charline Abbot Tooker Farnsworth. His family moved to Caldwell, Idaho, when Keith was a young boy, where his father worked at the College of Idaho. After a short time there, his father died unexpectedly and the family relocated to Twin Falls. Keith graduated from Twin Falls High School in 1957, where he met Virginia Dillon while participating in the orchestra at graduation ceremonies. He attended Brigham Young University following high school. In 1959, Keith was baptized into The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

On June 20, 1960, Keith and Virginia were married in the Salt Lake City LDS Temple. Keith graduated from Brigham Young University, and he and Virginia returned to Idaho, where they settled in Jerome and raised seven children. Keith spent most of his professional years at the Twin Falls School District, where he taught industrial arts and then worked in the personnel department after earning a master's degree from the College of Idaho. He retired in 2002 and spent the next two years in Boston, Mass., with Virginia serving as missionaries. Keith enjoyed serving in a variety of church callings throughout his life, including home teacher, seminary instructor, high councilor, stake president and temple worker. He loved to do service projects of all varieties. Keith enjoyed music and dancing and creating and building things. He will be remembered as a wonderful husband, father, grandfather, brother, uncle and friend, and he will be sorely missed.

Keith is survived by his sweetheart of more than 50 years, Virginia Farnsworth; their children, Keith (Shelle) Farnsworth Jr., Lisa (Brian) Brown, Ron (Jana) Farnsworth, David (Cheryl) Farnsworth, Matt (Val) Farnsworth and Jared (Angi) Farnsworth; 25 grandchildren; nine great-grandchildren; his sister, Karel Keys; and many extended family members and friends. He is preceded in death by his parents; and one son, Michael Farnsworth.

A funeral will be conducted at 11 a.m. Saturday, July 14, at the Jerome LDS Stake Center Chapel, 26 N. Tiger Drive in Jerome, with Bishop Davis Suttter officiating. Interment will follow in the Jerome Cemetery. A visitation will be held from 6 to 8 p.m. Friday, July 13, at Farnsworth Mortuary Chapel, 1343 S. Lincoln in Jerome, and 10 to 11 a.m. Saturday at the church.

Geneil (Poulsen) Peterson

Jan. 31, 1915-July 9, 2012

JEROME • At age 97, our most loved friend, mother, grandmother, great-grandmother and great-great-grandmother, Geneil Peterson, passed away Monday, July 9, 2012, to live with our Heavenly Father.

She was born Jan. 31, 1915, in Magrath, Alberta, Canada, the fourth child of Christian and Sarah Poulsen. She had three older brothers, Bart, Alex and Ernest Poulsen. Geneil attended grade school in Magrath and high school in Lethbridge, Alberta. After her mother and father died while she was young, she moved to Lethbridge to live with her eldest brother until she was 17. She then moved to Manti, Utah, and lived with an uncle and aunt, finishing high school. While there, she met her future husband. She attended Snow College in Ephraim, Utah, and later earned her bachelor's degree from Idaho State University.

Geneil married Wayne H. Peterson in the Manti Temple on Aug. 28, 1936. They had one daughter, Carol Scherer (Frank) of Twin Falls. From that marriage, she had been blessed with seven grandchildren, Becky (Joe) Miani of Tehachape, Calif., Kris (Ken) Erickson of Boise, Idaho, Jodi (Brent) Ward of Rigby, Idaho, Greg (Ressa) Scherer of North Ogden, Utah, Scot Scherer of Boise, Idaho, Bret (Ashlee) Scherer of Pocatello, Idaho, and Ben (Stacey) Scherer of South Weber, Utah; 20 great-grandchildren; and nine great-great-grandchildren.

Geneil taught grade school for 36 years, five years in Richfield, Utah, during World War II, and then for 31 years, teaching first-graders to read in Jerome, Idaho. After retiring in 1980, Geneil remained very active. For many years she was a volunteer for the St. Benedicts Auxiliary. She sang with the Melodians for 15 years. Being very active in The Church for Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, she held several church positions. After living in her home for 61 years, where she loved to garden, it became too hard so she moved to Twin Falls to live with her daughter and son-in-law for the last 3½ years, until the time of her death.

She loved to sew for her grandchildren when they were young and made several quilts, crocheted afghans and created hardanger items. She enjoyed several trips and cruises with Carol and Frank and extended family. She attended all birthdays and family gatherings up until her last days. She will be sorely missed by all, but her legacy will live on and on with the exemplary life she led.

Her husband, Wayne Peterson, preceded her in death in 1985. The family would like to give a special thanks to Dr. James Irwin of Jerome and Hospice Visions, especially Cindy, Kelly, Steve and Michelle.

The funeral will be conducted at 11 a.m. Friday, July 13, at the Twin Falls LDS 2nd Ward Chapel, 851 Harrison St. S. in Twin Falls. Interment will follow in the Jerome Cemetery. A visitation will be held from 6 to 8 p.m. Thursday, July 12, at Farnsworth Mortuary, 1343 S. Lincoln in Jerome, and 10 to 11 a.m. Friday at the church.

OBITUARIES

Virginia Nelle 'Duke' Larsen

April 11, 1923-July 8, 2012

MERIDIAN • Virginia Nelle "Duke" Larsen passed peacefully from this life Sunday, July 8, 2012, at the age of 89 in Meridian, Idaho.

Virginia was born at home in Grace, Idaho, on April 11, 1923, to Albert Duke and Mary Fern Tanner. After spending her childhood years in Burley, Idaho, she married James Willis Larsen on Feb. 14, 1940, and they were later sealed for time and all eternity in the Logan Utah LDS Temple. They settled on a farm west of Shoshone, Idaho, and later became the owners of a small grocery store and gas station on the south edge of town. They were blessed with six children, Loma, Clifton, Mary Louise, Jeanne, Steven and Terri. Following the death of her husband in 1963, Virginia returned to school and received an associate of arts in library science from the College of Southern Idaho, where she subsequently worked as a librarian. She served as deputy assessor of Lincoln County until her retirement at the age of 65. Her dream of serving a mission for her church was fulfilled in 1994, when she received a call to serve as a family history missionary in Salt Lake City, Utah. Throughout her life, Virginia found joy serving in her church and community. In addition to her friends and family, she loved quilting, family history, gardening, canning, cooking and "tidying" her home.

Virginia was preceded in death by her husband in 1963; her sons, Clifton (age 10) and Steven (age 7); and siblings Paul, Lewis and Alba. She is survived by daughters, Loma Hillman (Verdell) of Stanwood, Wash., Louise Hansen of Boise, Idaho, Jeanne Bateman (Spencer) of Colville, Wash., and Terri Ricks of Meridian, Idaho. She is also survived by 21 grandchildren, 53 great-grandchildren and two great-great-grandchildren.

The family wishes to thank Idaho Home Health and Hospice, the wonderful staff and residents of Meridian Care and Rehabilitation Center, and her beloved roommate, Guadalupe Cordova, for their loving care and comfort during Virginia's last years.

The funeral will be held at 11 a.m. Friday, July 13, at the LDS Church in Shoshone, Idaho, with a reception for family and friends from 10 to 10:45 a.m.

In lieu of flowers, the family suggests donations be made to Primary Children's Medical Center, where Virginia received treatment as a child:

Services are under the direction of Relyea Funeral Chapel, 318 N. Latah, Boise, Idaho.

Rhoda M. Rhodes Jacky

May 15, 1932-July 4, 2012

TWIN FALLS • Rhoda M. Rhodes Jacky, of Twin Falls, Idaho, passed away Wednesday, July 4, 2012.

Rhoda was born May 15, 1932, in Twin Falls, Idaho, to Harry and Lois Rhodes. She was the eldest and only daughter, with two younger brothers, Ralph and Roy. In 1948, she married Robert R. Jacky, also of Twin Falls. Together they had four children, Bill, Curt, Suzan and Ann, and resided in Jerome County. They were later divorced. In January 1955, Rhoda began work as an operator with Mountain Bell Telephone and Telegraph Company in Twin Falls and, years later, transferred with the company to Pocatello. After 37 years as an operator, she retired from U.S. West in November 1992. Rhoda remained in Pocatello until 2006, at which time she moved back to Twin Falls.

After she retired, Rhoda became an avid outdoorswoman and truly seized the most from each day. She could typically be found atop a snowmobile or four-wheeler zipping through the mountains, often with one or more grandchildren in tow. She was passionate about local history and was thrilled by searching the hills for arrowheads, square nails, old bottles or any other relics from years gone by. She loved to laugh and make others laugh, which she did frequently, sometimes until she cried, paralyzed in a fit of giggles. This was infectious. Rhoda will be remembered for her quirky, self-deprecating sense of humor, which she maintained throughout life. She will be remembered for her strength and graciousness. She will be remembered for the adventures she took us on and the stories she told. She will be remembered with love.

Rhoda is survived by three of her children and their spouses, Bill (Becky) Jacky, Suzan (Wes) Vance and Ann (Chuck) Schabacker; nine grandchildren, Gage, Wendy, Janet, Brian, DeAnna, Rob, Matt, Katie and Gabrielle; as well as five great-grandchildren, Mathew, Joshua, Jaylynn, Shelby and Elizabeth. She is also survived by her younger brothers, Ralph and Roy Rhodes. She was preceded in death by her parents, Harry and Lois Rhodes; and her son, Curtis Jacky.

A celebration of Rhoda's life will be held at 11 a.m. Saturday, July 14, at White Mortuary, 136 Fourth Ave. E. in Twin Falls. Services are under the direction of Trent Stimpson and staff at White Mortuary, Chapel by the Park, in Twin Falls.

Condolences may be left for the family by visiting www.whitemortuary.com.

Eugene 'Gene' Theodore Hamilton

Nov. 5, 1933-July 8, 2012

TWIN FALLS • Eugene "Gene" Theodore Hamilton, 78, passed away Sunday, July 8, 2012, in the comfort of his own home surrounded by his beloved wife, children and grandchildren.

Gene was born Nov. 5, 1933, in Portland, Ore. He and his siblings lived at an orphanage during World War II while their mother was working in the aircraft factory. These were difficult times and she could not take care of the four kids. When Gene left the orphanage, he lived with the Robinson family for a year before he moved back in with his mother and siblings. His mother remarried and the family moved to Payette, Idaho. He left home at the age of 16 with his friend, and they traveled to California and worked odd jobs. Eventually, he returned to Payette and worked in a grocery store until he went into the Army.

Gene was drafted and had his basic training at Fort Ord in Monterey. After training in California, his orders brought him to Fort Campbell, Ky., to the 508 Airborne Paratrooper and later the 11th Airborne Division. On leave from basic training, Gene met Gloria Mae Cutler in Ontario, Ore. Gene returned six months later, and he and Gloria were married in Payette, Idaho, on May 21, 1954, and moved to Fort Campbell. After Gene was honorably discharged, they left Fort Campbell and lived in Georgia for two years before settling down in Twin Falls. Gene worked at Reeder's Flying Service as a pilot, mechanic and crop duster. Gene loved aviation and all the related activities. Gene found himself repairing aircraft one day and flying them the next. The passion for flying stayed with him for the rest of his life, taking his family on many trips in the airplanes Gene owned.

Gene learned the insulation business from his stepfather, Lloyd Kelly, and eventually started his own company, Hamilton Mfg., in 1962. The company continued to install insulation and windows but now, in addition, manufactured hydro-seeding mulch and insulation. Gene started American Recycling to collect newspaper for the plant and eventually sold the installing business to Whitehead Home and Energy and expanded the recycling centers throughout southern Idaho. Gene and Gloria worked together in the business for 25 years and later sold the different locations to their children. The children continued the entrepreneurial lessons that Gene had taught them.

Gene enjoyed sailing, cruising and traveling the world with Gloria on just about every continent. They visited more than 42 countries and everywhere Gene went, children were present. Gene carried suckers, balloons, T-shirts and candy to give to kids. He always attracted attention with his huge smile, kind heart and generosity.

Gene's adventurous side led him to race stock cars in Magic Valley and he then moved into sprint cars and raced in Meridian and the western United States. After Gene and Gloria retired, they bought a motor home and sailboat. They traveled around the United States in the motor home and then parked it to live on the sailboat in Florida and the Bahamas during the winter for many years. They sailed around Canada, Alaska and the Bahamas.

The love of his life, Gloria Hamilton, his wife of 58 years, survives Gene. Also surviving are his tree daughters, Tamara (Herb) Hamilton Harney, Christy (Tom) Hamilton Eames and Kia Ramsey; son, Curtis Hamilton; nine grandchildren, Jason (Andrea) Smith, Mathew Smith, Thomas and Patrick Harney, Danielle and Logan Hamilton, Ashley Ramsey, and Emily and Evan Eames; as well as four great-grandchildren, Jacob and Kaiya Smith, and Isaac and Adam Belieu. He is preceded in death by his parents and stepfather; two brothers, Bill and Darrell Hamilton; sister, Jane Owens; and grandson, Herbert Michael Harney. He will be missed by all who knew him!

A celebration of Gene's life will be held at 10 a.m. Saturday, July 14, at Reynolds Funeral Chapel, 2466 Addison Ave. E. in Twin Falls, with Pastor Dale Metzger officiating. Burial will follow at Sunset Memorial Park, with military honors by the Magic Valley Honor Guard and Idaho National Guard. A viewing for family and friends will take place from 6 until 8 p.m. Friday, July 13, at Reynolds Funeral Chapel in Twin Falls.

Services are under the direction of Trent Stimpson and staff at Reynolds Funeral Chapel. Condolences may be left for the family by visiting www.reynoldschapel.com.

OBITUARIES

Alice Mae Cottle Hulse

July 10, 1925-July 6, 2012

BLACKFOOT • Alice Mae Cottle Hulse, 86, a loving, valiant servant, returned with honors to be with her heavenly family Friday, July 6, 2012, at the home of her daughter, Susanne, of natural causes.

In her later years, she dedicated her time and talents to genealogy.

Alice was born July 10, 1925, in Stone, Idaho, to Leiland Thomas and Clara Irene Anderson Cottle. Following high school graduation, she attended college. During her lifetime, she has lived in numerous places in Utah and South Dakota, then made a permanent home in Idaho. On Feb. 29, 1944, she married Boyd LaVon Hulse in the Logan Utah LDS Temple.

Alice was a faithful member of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, fulfilling numerous callings in the organizations of the church. In her later years, she and Boyd served an LDS Mission in Prescott, Ariz. She was active in the Daughters of Utah Pioneers, a leader in 4-H and was an enthusiastic participant in a square dancing club. Alice was very talented and worked magic with her hands. She loved to crochet, knit, quilt, do hardanger, Brazilian embroidery, needlepoint and sew. She also enjoyed reading, gardening and music.

She is survived by her children, Marsha (Steve) Chandler of Arco, Idaho, Keith LaVon (Ruby) Hulse of Filer, Idaho, Wanda (Richard) Baker of Hagerman, Idaho, Shirley (Karl) Bame of Firth, Idaho, Dianna (Richard) Jones of Queen Creek, Ariz., Karl Boyd (Rebecca) Hulse of Prosser, Wash., Judy Bell of Burley, Idaho, Linda E. (Pedro) Ayala of Edinburg, Texas, and Susanne (Lorin) Walton of Blackfoot; 37 grandchildren; 59 great-grandchildren; and five brothers. She was preceded in death by her husband, Boyd; three children, Roy, Raymond and Carol; two grandchildren, five great-grandchildren; one son-in-law and two sisters.

The family will meet with friends and relatives from 6-8 p.m. Friday, July 13, at Hawker Funeral Home, 132 S. Shilling Ave. in Blackfoot, Idaho. The funeral will be held at 1 p.m. Saturday, July 14, at the Jerome LDS 1st Ward Chapel, 825 E. Ave. B in Jerome, Idaho. The family will greet friends from 11 a.m.-12:45 p.m. Saturday at the church. Interment will be in Sunset Memorial Park in Twin Falls, Idaho.

THE WASHINGTON POST

Ebelskivers (pronounced able-skeevers) are rounded, puffy pancakes with roots in Denmark. They can be sweet or savory.

Here's a savory version. The recipe calls for fig jam, but if you're lucky enough to have access to fresh figs, use those.

You'll need an ebelskiver pan. They are widely available, including at Macy's, Bed Bath & Beyond and Target and kitchen specialty stores.

When making the pancakes, speed is key. Because it's difficult to pour, garnish, top off and then turn over 7 pancakes at roughly the same time, you may find it easier to make fewer pancakes in each batch.

Adapted from "Ebelskivers," by Kevin Crafts (Weldon Owen, 2009).

Fig and Prosciutto Ebelskivers

Makes about 14 pancakes.

- 1 cup (5 ounces) flour
- 1/2 teaspoon sugar
- 1/2 teaspoon baking powder
- 1/4 teaspoon salt
- 2 large eggs, separated
- 1 cup whole milk
- 3 tablespoons unsalted butter, melted and slightly cooled

3 tablespoons fig jam
3 tablespoons finely chopped prosciutto, sauteed until crisp

Preheat the oven to 200 degrees. Have 2 short wooden skewers at hand.

Whisk together the flour, sugar, baking powder and salt in a large bowl. Lightly whisk the egg yolks in a medium bowl, then whisk in the milk and 2 tablespoons of the melted butter. Add the egg mixture to the flour mixture and use a wooden spoon to stir until the batter is blended but still a little lumpy.

Beat the egg whites in the bowl of a stand mixer or hand-held electric mixer until they are stiff but not dry. Use a flexible spatula to fold about one-third of the whites into the batter to lighten it, then add the rest, folding just until no streaks of white remain.

Brush the wells of the ebelskiver pan with some of the remaining melted butter and place the pan over medium heat. When the butter starts to bubble, add about 1 tablespoon of batter to each well. Working quickly, carefully spoon 1/2 teaspoon of the jam into the center of each pancake, then place 1/2 teaspoon of the prosciutto on top. (Depending on the number of pancakes you get, you may have prosciutto and jam left over.) Top each with another 1 tablespoon of batter.

After 1 to 2 minutes, use a long bamboo skewer to see if your ebelskivers are ready to rotate; the bottom of each will start to brown and will slide with little pressure. Rotate each ball, a little bit at a time, until each ebelskiver is golden brown and evenly cooked. Spear each ebelskiver and place it on a platter. Put the platter in the oven to stay warm while you make another batch. Serve right away.

Note: To substitute fresh figs for the jam, coarsely chop 5 or 6 figs and combine in a small saucepan with 1 tablespoon of unsalted butter and 1 tablespoon of brown sugar. Cook over medium heat, stirring frequently, until the figs are tender. MLB ALL-STAR GAME

A Blowout of Giant Proportions

ASSOCIATED PRESS

KANSAS CITY, Mo. • Pablo Sandoval and Melky Cabrera turned the All-Star game into a Giant blowout.

Flashing their bright orange spikes and booming bats, the San Francisco sluggers keyed a five-run blitz against Justin Verlander in the first inning that sent the National League to an 8-0 romp over the American League on Tuesday night.

Cabrera homered and won the MVP award, and Giants teammate Matt Cain started a strong pitching performance for the NL in its most-lopsided All-Star victory. Cain combined with Stephen Strasburg, R.A. Dickey, Aroldis Chapman and the rest of a lights-out staff on a six-hitter.

“San Francisco Giants show,” Matt Kemp of the rival Dodgers said during the game.

Ryan Braun, an All-Star again after his drug suspension was overturned last winter, doubled, tripled and made a fine catch in the outfield to help give the NL its first three-game winning streak in two decades.

Chipper Jones singled in his final All-Star at-bat at age 40 as the NL, under retired manager Tony La Russa, once again claimed home-field advantage in the World Series.

Teen sensation Bryce Harper had a shaky All-Star debut. Fellow rookie Mike Trout, only 20, showed off his dynamic skills.

The game was pretty much decided a few moments after it started.

Way-Back Machine Takes us Back to All-Star Game, Reggie

It's been one wild week for the way-back machine, starting with last night's All-Star Game.

How many of you remember the old All-Star Game ballots? In my childhood, my grandfather and I would meticulously study the ballot — sponsored by Gillette — punch out the chads next to our player of choice and drop them in the mailbox.

Unlike Florida voters in the 2000 presidential election, our chad-punching ability could never be called into question, even though we were both diehard National League fans. We would no sooner leave George Brett or Reggie Jackson off the ballot than we would Mike Schmidt or Joe Morgan.

The Midsummer Classic was the highlight of the summer.

As I grew older, physical distance kept me from watching the game with Gramps. And the proliferation of cable television, interleague play and free agency dimmed my interest in the All-Star Game probably as much as it did yours.

It also didn't help that the National League stopped winning every year. Fred Lynn's grand slam off Atlee Hammaker in the 1983 All-Star Game — which essentially ended a National League streak of 11 straight wins and a 19-1 run that dated back to 1963 — is an underrated traumatic sports moment from my childhood.

As I moved further into adulthood, the National League just stopped winning, losing 12 straight to the AL and 18 of 21 since 1988, which is when I graduated high school.

Prior to then, I could give you a recap of every BUHL • Twin Falls did some big things in its 17-1 doubleheader-opening win over Buhl on Tuesday. The Tribe struggled to do the little things well enough to keep pace.

With the leadoff runner aboard in the second inning and Buhl looking to add to its first-inning run, two bunt opportunities were spurned. The next pitch was hit up the middle, where Cowboy shortstop Jason Bride dove, tapped second base with his glove and fired to Wyatt Doyle at first for the double play.

Doyle made a sliding catch in foul territory on the very next pitch to end the second inning.

“I thought it was a base hit, but the coaches tell us to finish every play so I dove and it ended up in my glove,” said

Bride, who augmented that performance with a 2-for-3, four-RBI effort at the plate. “That really stopped their momentum and gave us some.”

Did it ever.

In their very next at-bat, the Cowboys sent 18 batters to the plate and scored 14 runs in a third inning that featured seven hits, eight walks and three pitching changes.

That was plenty for Kaleb Jones, who had to throw twice in the inning to keep loose while also batting twice.

Ex-CSI Pitcher Signs with Twins

BY DAVID BASHORE

dbashore@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • Former College of Southern Idaho pitcher Travis Huber became the final Major League Baseball draftee with local ties to sign a professional contract, inking a deal Tuesday with the Minnesota Twins.

Huber signed four days ahead of the deadline for draft picks to sign. He'll report to the Twins' Rookie League affiliate in Elizabethton, Tenn.

Huber was pitching in a summer league in North Carolina, when he agreed terms with the Twins after they watched one of his outings. He traveled to Minnesota over the weekend to complete the deal.

He said it was a tough wait, particularly after getting drafted in each of the last two years and not getting much of an offer. But it was worth the wait when he put his name on the dotted line.

“We agreed, and I was going to leave (North Carolina) for summer school anyway, and the earliest we could meet up was (Monday) because of the holiday and all that,” Huber said. “I had started thinking about the last two years, not getting an offer or anything like that. Seeing all those guys sign, I'm so happy for them, but I was very anxious to get out there and get started myself. ... I'm really excited to go and see how far I can go with this.”

The 700th overall selection in last month's draft (23rd round), Huber played his junior season at the University of Nebraska after operating as a part-time closer, part-time ace during his time in Twin Falls.

Nebraska's closer this year, Huber posted seven saves and a 3.32 ERA in 20 appearances for the Cornhuskers. In two years at CSI he went 8-5 with seven saves, a 3.48 ERA and 91 strikeouts in 822-3 innings.

Karl Kissner poses for a photo in front of the door to an attic in his grandfather's old home where he and a cousin found a collection of century-old baseball cards in Defiance, Ohio. There are about 700 cards in all that could be worth up to $3 million, experts say, including this one of Ty Cobb (below).

Toys in the Attic: Card Find Worth Millions

ASSOCIATED PRESS

DEFIANCE, Ohio •

Karl Kissner picked up a soot-covered cardboard box that had been under a wooden dollhouse in his grandfather's attic. Taking a look inside, he saw hundreds of baseball cards bundled with twine. They were smaller than the ones he was used to seeing.

But some of the names were familiar: Hall of Famers Ty Cobb, Cy Young and Honus Wagner.

Then he put the box on a dresser and went back to digging through the attic.

It wasn't until two weeks later that he learned that his family had come across what experts say is one of the biggest, most exciting finds in the history of sports card collecting, a discovery worth perhaps millions.

The cards are from an extremely rare series issued around 1910. Up to now, the few known to exist were in so-so condition at best, with faded images and worn edges. But the ones from the attic in the town of Defiance are nearly pristine, untouched for more than a century. The colors are vibrant, the borders crisp and white.

“It's like finding the Mona Lisa in the attic,” Kissner said.

Sports card experts who authenticated the find say they may never again see something this impressive.

“Every future find will ultimately be compared to this,” said Joe Orlando, president of Professional Sports Authenticator.

The best of the bunch — 37 cards — are expected to bring a total of $500,000 when they are sold at auction in August during the National

ALL-STAR PROBLEMS, BUT NO EASY SOLUTIONS

BY MIKE SCHMIDT
For The Associated Press

I was on 12 All-Star rosters, most as a legit All-Star deserving of the honor of representing the National League as one of that year's best players.

In 1980, I missed the game with a pulled muscle. And in 1989, I was voted to the team as a starter after I had retired. In each case the replacement was a player deserving and capable of carrying out the assignment in my place. His first-half body of work that season was rewarded.

Back then, the fans picked the game's starters. That's all, the starters. The managers picked the remainder of the roster so that as the game progressed into the deciding innings, each league would have its best on the field.

Every year, the fan voting is skewed to elect players based on popularity, not on production. That's OK because the game has been labeled "for the fans." This game for the fans, however, now carries a significant prize: World Series home field, which is why the field personnel must decide on the final roster.

The All-Star game has become the black sheep event of Bud Selig's tenure as baseball commissioner. Try as he might, he can't get it to where it once was.

Back in the day, it was a game each league wanted to win. Willie Mays was picked for 24 All-Star games and played nine innings in many. When I started my run in the '70s, reporting to the game meant joining Pete Rose, Johnny Bench, Joe Morgan, Joe Torre, Lou Brock, Willie Stargell, Dave Parker, Tony Perez, and others who demanded we play to win.

Get this: Winning didn't mean anything other than league pride. Mr. Selig is still hunting for the answer as to why the All-Star game these days has gotten away from that attitude.

Maybe his game has given way in importance to other All-Star events, like the Home Run Derby? Maybe his player voting and selection system has created confusion. By placing the World Series home-field advantage on the game's outcome — while at the same time allowing fan voting to play the major role in roster selection — he confuses not only baseball fans, but me, too.

Maybe the players themselves just aren't of the mind to accept the game as serious. Understandable, as their entire existence as athletes is an open book to the media and TV already, why would they consider another three days of national TV exposure an exciting opportunity? For them, a chance to rest or heal a small injury is more important. For us back in the day, it was a chance to actually see a national TV camera. We wanted to be there, and win.

One reason the old-school charm and league pride is missing — inter-league play. There is no Big Red Machine or Lumber Company that the other league is jealous of. There is no mystery or challenge in facing the other league's players. There is no Hatfields vs. McCoys mentality. Today, it's rosters of many who once were teammates, who have played in both leagues or have faced one another many times.

said the slow-footed Sandoval, known as Kung Fu Panda. "We had some fun with that in the dugout."

Cabrera was flanked by his mom as he received his award.

"I was surprised for me, the MVP, but thank you, the fans," he said.

and if his career strikeout mark of 2,597 isn't passed by Jim Thome, it might stand forever.

But it was classic Reg. Shoot from the hip now, worry later about the fallout.

It's why Reggie was, is and almost certainly will always be my favorite baseball player. Reggie's failures were more exciting than the accomplishments of most. Seeing Reggie hit a home run was as much a part of a visit to New York City as the Statue of Liberty and a Broadway show.

Even his critics helped burnish his legend. One of the best lines of smack uttered in the world of sports came from Yankees manager Billy Martin, who delivered this famous line to New York reporters about his two primary adversaries shortly before he was fired for the first of five times by George Steinbrenner.

"One's a born liar and the other's convicted."

Took me over a decade to figure out who was lying and what convicted meant, much less toward who Martin was directing his comment.

Hey, we didn't have Wikipedia to reference such matters in 1978.

But we have it today, which makes trips in the way-back machine that much easier to take.

After their NBA finals battle, Oklahoma City's Kevin Durant will have to quickly get past any ill feelings toward the Miami Heat and LeBron James in preparation for this summer's Olympic Games.

Finals Pain Remains for Durant With James Around

ASSOCIATED PRESS

LAS VEGAS • Kevin Durant can't hide from the hurt this summer.

LeBron James is right there every time he steps on the basketball court now. The NBA Finals ended in Miami only about three weeks ago, with James' victory celebration interrupted only briefly to embrace his opponent in a consoling hug.

Durant admits it bothers him coming to the gym and seeing James every day.

"It does. It does, but what can I do?" Durant said Tuesday. "He's my teammate now. I'm a team player. I can't let that affect this. This is bigger than that. It's tough to lose in the finals and play the guy you've been going up against for five games who beat you. So me, I'm just going to get over it, still be a great teammate, come out and play hard."

Kobe Bryant was in Durant's shoes four years ago, having to shake off the disappointment of a finals loss to the Boston Celtics and get back out on the court for the Olympics. He said it's normal to not want to play for a few days, but figures Durant has had enough time to get over it by now.

"But then again, I wasn't playing on the Olympic team with, you know, Ray Allen and Paul Pierce and Garnett," Bryant said. "He's got to look at LeBron every day. I didn't have to do that. So I don't know if I could do that. I'd probably be trying to destroy him every single day in practice to try to, I don't know, take a little of the edge off maybe."

James and Durant are actually friends, James inviting Durant to work out with him last summer in Ohio. That wouldn't make much difference to Bryant, one of the NBA's fiercest competitors.

"Being the friends thing, I mean that's fine," Bryant said. "Once you start playing, I'd really, I'd have to go after him. There's just no way."

James experienced the heartbreak of a finals loss last year, the Heat beaten by Dallas in their first season together. It was especially difficult on James, who played poorly in the fourth quarters of those games, adding a new level of criticism piled onto what he had already been facing since his departure from Cleveland the previous summer.

He hardly wanted to do anything in the days after that loss, and agreed that it would have bothered him if he had to play with then-Mavericks center Tyson Chandler last summer. So he knows what Durant must be feeling.

"It bothers him," James said. "Tbet it bothers him and (Russell) Westbrook, you know, they probably don't want to hear about it. It would bother me, it would bother anyone that you lose to someone in the finals, where everyone's competing at the highest level and you want to win and then you have to team up with them not too long, not too far removed from the games."

There's usually more time between the finals and the Olympics, but the lockout moved back the start of the NBA season and pushed the dates closer together this year. The finals ended June 22 and the U.S. opened its training camp on July 6.

game played the previous 10 years. Good luck on getting much recall after that, although last night was a nice reminder of uncompromising, crushing dominance by the NL.

There was one notable exception. Last summer, the family made a slight detour on our vacation to California. As we checked into our hotel, the All-Star Game was playing on the lounge's TV set.

Too tired to watch, I picked up the local newspaper the following day for a recap.

That newspaper was the Times-News. It was my first time in Twin Falls and my job interview here was just a few hours away ...

The justification behind voting for Reggie Jackson on our All-Star ballot was always a hot topic for me and Gramps. This was Exhibit A regarding the sports generational gap that existed in the 1970s.

It made Reggie's remarks about the recent batch of Hall of Famers, both recent and prospective, in this week's issue of Sports Illustrated another reason to take a ride in the way-back machine.

Reggie wasn't entirely a lone wolf with his remarks. There were voters who didn't go along with the selections of guys like Gary Carter and Kirby Puckett, at the same time.

Among other things, he needed to look in the mirror and realize no Hall of Famer carried a career batting average as low as Reggie's .257 at the time of his induction,

Cards

Sports Collectors Convention in Baltimore. There are about 700 cards in all that could be worth up to $3 million, experts say. They include such legends as Christy Mathewson and Connie Mack.

Kissner and his family say the cards belonged to their grandfather, Carl Hench, who died in the 1940s. Hench ran a meat market in Defiance, and the family suspects he got them as a promotional item from a candy company that distributed them with caramels. They think he gave some away and kept others.

"We guess he stuck them in the attic and forgot about them," Kissner said. "They remained there frozen in time."

After Hench and his wife died, two of his daughters lived in the house. Jean Hench kept the house until she died last October, leaving everything inside to her 20 nieces and nephews. Kissner, 51, is the youngest and was put in charge of the estate. His aunt was a pack rat, and the house was filled with three generations of stuff.

They found calendars from the meat market, turn-of-the-century dresses, a steamer trunk from Germany and a dresser with Grandma's clothes neatly folded in the drawers.

Months went by before they even got to the attic. On Feb. 29, Kissner's cousin Karla Hench pulled out the dirty green box with metal clips at the corners and lifted the lid.

Not knowing whether the cards were valuable, the two cousins put the box aside. But Kissner decided to do a little research. The cards were at his office in the restaurant he owns when he realized they might have something. He immediately took them across the street and put them in a bank vault.

Still not knowing whether the cards were real, they sent eight to expert Peter Calderon at Heritage Auctions in Dallas, which recently sold the baseball that rolled through the legs of Boston Red Sox first baseman Bill Buckner in the 1986 World Series for $418,000.

Calderon said his first words were "Oh, my God."

"I was in complete awe," he said. "You just don't see them this nice."

The cards are from what is known as the E98 series. It is not clear who manufactured them or how many were produced, but the series consists of 30 players, half of them Hall of Famers.

The experts at Heritage Auctions checked out the family's background, the age of the home and the history of the meat market. They looked at the cards and how they were printed.

"Everything lines up," said Chris Ivy, the company's director of sports auctions.

They then sent all the cards to Professional Sports Authenticator, which had previously authenticated fewer than 700 E98s. The Ohio cards were the finest examples from the E98 series the company had ever seen.

The company grades cards on a 1-to-10 scale based of their condition. Up to now, the highest grade it had ever given a Ty Cobb card from the E98 series was a 7. Sixteen Cobbs found in the Ohio attic were graded a 9 — almost perfect. A Honus Wagner was judged a 10, a first for the series.

Retired sports card auctioneer Barry Sloate of New York City said: "This is probably the most interesting find I've heard of."

The highest price ever paid for a baseball card is $2.8 million, handed over in 2007 for a 1909 Honus Wagner that was produced by the American Tobacco Co. and included in packs of cigarettes.

the youth card and show us some leadership."

The second game had not finished as this edition of the Times-News went to press.

JEROME 13, TWIN FALLS HAWKS 12

Dom Baker's RBI double capped a three-run ninth and the Cyclones had the last rally in defeating the Hawks in a Class A game.

David Pak's RBI double in the eighth gave the Hawks their last lead at 12-10 before the Cyclones bounced back in the top of the ninth. Kaleb Price went 3 for 7 for the Hawks.

This Vacation Paying Off for Texas Club Pro

ASSOCIATED PRESS

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. • What makes golf so appealing is that it can be played for a lifetime.

And the dreams that go with it don't expire easily, either.

Such is the case of Tim Thelen. His name might not be familiar outside the PGA of America or south-east Texas. Thelen spent his career as a golf professional, working at a country club in College Station and a resort in New Ulm, and once giving lessons at a driving range that since has been replaced by a Wal-Mart.

He was good enough to play college golf at Houston Baptist — a Scottish kid named Colin Montgomerie was on his team — but he never made it through Q-school, and that was before there was an alternative like the Web.com Tour. Back then, there wasn't even a web. The one year he reached the final stage of Q-school, he was 38. And while there was a developmental tour and Thelen had conditional status, he also had a steady income and an 11-year-old son.

Thelen won the Club Pro Championship twice and played in the PGA Championship nine times without ever making the cut. He played in 22 regular PGA Tour events, through his status as a club pro or Monday qualifying, and made four cuts and the grand sum of $78,742 over 15 years.

But as he approached his 50th birthday, a conversation with the late club pro Bob Boyd changed everything.

"He played on the European Senior Tour. This was late 2009 and he had been playing for five years, and he loved it over there," Thelen said Tuesday morning from his home in College Station. "It's different over there. But it's like I told my wife, there's Before giving it a shot on the Senior European PGA Tour, Tim Thelen told his wife they would either make money or go broke. But in the last two weeks, Thelen has won against fields that included Bernhard Langer and Ian Woosnam.

an opportunity to make money and we'll see the world."

It has turned into so much more than he expected.

Two weeks ago in Munich, with wife Lucinda on the bag, Thelen holed out with a 6-iron for an albatross on the par-5 opening hole in the Berenberg Bank Masters. On the back nine, with Bernhard Langer and Barry Lane among those chasing him down, Thelen closed with three birdies on the last four holes to win.

Bags packed, hotel booked, they headed off to Switzerland for the Bad Ragaz PGA Seniors Open. This time, it was a pair of Ryder Cup captains — former world No. 1 Ian Woosnam and Mark James — applying the pressure. Thelen made two late birdies to thwart the charge and won again.

And so ended his six-week journey that began in Michigan for the Senior PGA Championship and took him to Spain, England, Holland, Germany, Switzerland and finally back home to Texas for two weeks.

That allowed the 51-year-old Thelen time to reflect before heading back over to Turnberry for the Senior British Open.

"I had a really good career as a club pro," said Thelen, who resigned from The Falls when he earned his European Senior card. "Winning the Club Pro Championship twice, winning the National Assistant Pro Championship once ... I knew I could play. I didn't know I could reach the level I have today. You always dream of playing on a tour, and I never lost focus. But as a golf pro, you have to find time to play and practice.

"Every golf professional has that opportunity," he said. "It's whether he takes that opportunity when the shop closes at 7 p.m. and there's still two hours to practice or play nine holes. Unfortunately, it's hard on the wife and kid. But you've got to keep your dreams alive."

He remembers the conversation with his wife after earning his card.

"Two things can happen," he said. "We can make some money. Or we can go broke. And we've been there before."

Three Lance Associates Receive Lifetime Bans

Another Drug Bust

AUSTIN, Texas • With Lance Armstrong digging in for a legal fight, the U.S. Anti-Doping Agency issued lifetime sports bans Tuesday to three former staff members and consultants on the cyclist's winning Tour de France teams for drug violations.

Luis Garcia del Moral was a team doctor; Michele Ferrari was a consulting doctor; and Jose "Pepe" Marti (team trainer) worked for Armstrong's U.S. Postal Service and Discovery Channel squads. All had been accused by USADA of participating in a vast doping conspiracy on those teams during part or all of Armstrong's seven Tour victories from 1999-2005.

Armstrong also has been charged and has declared his innocence.

Several hours after USADA announced its sanctions against the others, Armstrong's attorneys refiled a lawsuit asking a federal judge in Austin to prevent the case against from going forward.

U.S. District Judge Sam Sparks had thrown out Armstrong's initial 80-page complaint Monday, but invited him to submit a new one that was shorter, more to the point and less about his career and personal battles with anti-doping officials.

Armstrong's attorneys refiled a 25-page suit arguing that USADA violates athletes' constitutional rights, that the agency doesn't have the jurisdiction to bring the charges and that it may have violated federal law in its investigation.

Armstrong wants the court to rule by Saturday, his deadline to either accept

Another Drug Bust

The longtime problem of doping hit the Tour de France head on Tuesday when a French rider was arrested at his team hotel and suspended by his team.

Police made their move on the Tour's first rest day in arresting Cofidis cyclist Remy Di Gregorio, with judicial officials saying two other people suspected of supplying the Frenchman with banned substances were also arrested — one along with the rider in Bourg-en-Bresse, and another in Marseille.

The officials requested anonymity because they were not authorized to speak publicly as the investigation is ongoing.

USADA's charges and sanctions or send his case to arbitration.

An Armstrong spokesman declined immediate comment on the USADA bans issued Tuesday.

Under USADA rules, Moral, Marti and Ferrari had until Monday to challenge the allegations against them in arbitration or ask for a five-day extension. If they did not respond, USADA could impose sanctions.

Although none lives in the United States, USADA says the ban blocks them from participating in any sport that falls under the World Anti-Doping Agency code.

LEGAL NOTICE

The Idaho Department of Fish and Game was informed by the Bureau of Fisheries that by close of fishing on July 8 anglers will have harvested more than 90 percent of the sport fishery share of adipose fin clipped salmon destined for the Rapid River Hatchery. The fraction of fishery encounters of fish that originate from other hatchery and natural populations upstream is increasing. The fraction of Rapid River Hatchery returns in the harvest in the Lower Salmon River is highest in the Park Hole section from the U.S. Highway 95 Time Zone Bridge upstream to the Mouth of Short's Creek. The fraction of hatchery and natural returns from the South Fork Salmon, Middle Fork Salmon, and Upper Salmon rivers at this point in the season is highest in the river sections of the Lower Salmon River upstream and downstream of the Park Hole section. To reduce interceptions of hatchery and natural origin fish destined for terminal areas other than the Little Salmon and Rapid rivers while still providing access to harvestable hatchery fish destined to the Little Salmon and Rapid Rivers the Fisheries Bureau recommends closing the section of the Lower Salmon River from the mouth of Short's Creek upstream to the uppermost boat ramp at Vinegar Creek and the sections from the Rice Creek Bridge upstream to the U.S. Highway 95 Time Zone Bridge to fishing for Chinook salmon. Pursuant to his authority under Idaho Code Section 36-106(e)(6) (A), the Idaho Department of Fish and Game Director hereby closes the section of the Lower Salmon River from the mouth of Short's Creek upstream to the uppermost boat ramp at Vinegar Creek and in the sections from the Rice Creek Bridge upstream to the U.S. Highway 95 Time Zone Bridge to fishing for Chinook salmon effective the end of fishing on July 8, 2012. Copies of Order 12-12 are available at the Idaho Department of Fish and Game headquarters, 600 South Walnut, PO Box 25, Boise, ID 83707. DATED this 3rd day of July 2012. THE ACES ON BRIDGE® Bobby Wolff

"The bigger the choice, the harder it is to choose."
— German proverb

After seeing dummy, given today's auction, would you think your next move might be critical? If not, give the problem a couple of extra seconds' thought!

The hand is from the Individual at the 1st World Mind Sports Games, held in Beijing, where pairs scoring was in use.

First, let's see the action at the table where Gay Keaveney of Ireland was partnering Bob Hamman of the United States. Hamman had no easy way to get his values across, but decided to treat his hand as invitational, banking on his three black honors to be working overtime, and treating his spades as a three-card suit. Had this been teams, Keaveney would have bid the spade game, but at matchpoints he preferred to be circumspect and try to insure a plus score.

Against three spades West led the diamond queen; East rose with the ace and returned a diamond. Keaveney played his king, cashed the club ace and king and got off play with a third club. The trump return from East came too late. South could no longer be prevented from ruffing his fourth club in dummy and coming to 10 tricks, losing just two diamonds and a club.

It was Patrick Huang of Chinese Taipei who found the defense to beat four spades. On winning the first trick with the diamond ace, he recognized the danger and switched to a trump, then continued with a second trump when in with a club. That killed the club ruff and set the game.

ANSWER: Your partner's two-club call shows spade support and at least the values for a raise to three spades (perhaps starting at a good 10-count with three trumps). Your nice trumps and extra shape coupled with good controls suggest you have enough for a try for game. A bid of three clubs should show your side suit and get partner to evaluate his club length.

Today is Wednesday, July 11, the 193rd day of 2012. There are 173 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight:
On July 11, 1937, American composer and pianist George Gershwin, whose works included "Rhapsody in Blue," "Concerto in F," "An American in Paris," and "Porgy and Bess," died at a Los Angeles hospital of a brain tumor; he was 38.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:
In 1767, John Quincy Adams, the sixth president of the United States, was born in Braintree, Mass.

In 1798, the U.S. Marine Corps was formally re-established by a congressional act that also created the U.S. Marine Band.

In 1804, Vice President Aaron Burr mortally wounded former Treasury Secretary Alexander Hamilton during a pistol duel in Weehawken, N.J.

In 1859, Big Ben, the great bell inside the famous London clock tower, chimed for the first time.

In 1922, the Hollywood Bowl officially opened with a program called "Symphonies Under the Stars" with Alfred Hertz conducting the Los Angeles Philharmonic.

In 1934, President Franklin D. Roosevelt became the first incumbent chief executive to travel through the Panama Canal.

In 1952, the Republican national convention, meeting in Chicago, nominated Dwight D. Eisenhower for president and Richard M. Nixon for vice president.

In 1960, the novel "To Kill a Mockingbird" by Harper Lee was first published by J.B. Lippincott and Co.

In 1962, American diver Fred Balasare completed an underwater crossing of the English Channel using scuba gear, arriving in Sandwich Bay 18 hours after leaving Calais.

In 1972, the World Chess Championship opened as grandmasters Bobby Fischer of the United States and defending champion Boris Spassky of the Soviet Union began play in Reykjavik, Iceland. (Fischer won after 21 games.)

In 1979, the abandoned U.S. space station Skylab made a spectacular return to Earth, burning up in the atmosphere and showering debris over the Indian Ocean and Australia.

In 1989, actor and director Laurence Olivier died in Steyning, West Sussex, England, at age 82.

Ten years ago: Lawmakers balked at moving the Coast Guard and the Federal Emergency Management Agency into a new Homeland Security Department despite pleas from senior Cabinet officials to stick to President George W. Bush's blueprint. (Both agencies did end up being included in the new department.)

Five years ago: Lady Bird Johnson, the former first lady who'd championed conservation and worked tenaciously for the political career of her husband, President Lyndon Johnson, died in Austin, Texas, at age 94. Pakistani army commandos captured the Red Mosque from militants following a 35-hour battle.

One year ago: Rupert Murdoch's media empire was besieged by accusations that two more of his British newspapers engaged in hacking, deception and privacy violations. Eight-year-old Leiby Kletzky went missing while walking home from religious day camp in Brooklyn, N.Y. (his dismembered remains were discovered two days later; a suspect, Levin Aron, has been charged with kidnapping and murder). So Yeon Ryu won the U.S. Women's Open, defeating fellow South Korean Hee Kyung Seo by three shots in a three-hole playoff.

JUMBLE

Unscramble these four Jumbles, one letter to each square, to form four ordinary words.

AFTER THE GUITARIST DONATED HIS KIDNEY, HE BECAME THIS.

Now arrange the circled letters to form the surprise answer, as suggested by the above cartoon.

DEAR ABBY: I have been in an on-again/off-again relationship with a man for 16 years — more on than off. We have two boys together. He recently moved back in, and things are going well.

We're in our 30s, and I'm ready to be more than girlfriend and boyfriend. I'd like to ask this special man in my life to marry me, but I'm not sure if a woman should ever propose marriage to a man. Should I go ahead and do it, or just be patient and hope that one day he will ask me to take the next big step?

— LONGING FOR MORE IN TEXAS

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

DEAR LONGING FOR MORE: By all means, ask him to formalize your relationship. After 16 years and two children, you deserve to know where the relationship is going. And when you do, mention that you'd like him to go to the altar WILLINGLY — before the boys are big enough to hog-tie and drag him there to make an "honest woman" of their mother.

DEAR ABBY: I have been a vegetarian and anti-fur advocate for many years, and most of my friends and family know it. I feel strongly that wearing fur and leather is cruel and unnecessary, but I don't lecture anyone who doesn't ask my opinion.

What would be the proper response when someone gives me an item with real animal fur or genuine leather? It has happened before, and while I appreciate that someone has bought me a gift, I'm horrified and heartbroken seeing what's inside the box when I open it, and disappointed knowing that the person has contributed to the unkind and atrocious fur industry. I find it difficult to bring myself to say "thank you" for something I find so morally abhorrent.

What is the appropriate response in this situation? Is it acceptable for me to use this as an opportunity to educate the person on the horrors of fur fashions?

— VEGGIE IN NEW YORK

DEAR VEGGIE: No, it isn't. Good manners dictate that you graciously thank the giver and then, if you wish, give the gift a respectful, private burial or regift it to a carnivore.

DEAR ABBY: My ex-husband is remarrying. We have always tried to be civil toward each other because of our daughter, who is 16. I try to be the bigger person in dealing with him in order to set a good example for her.

He called her last night after not having called her in several weeks and told her that if she wants to be in his wedding, I (meaning me) should purchase her dress. I thought it was inappropriate for him not only to tell her that, but also to expect me to pay for it.

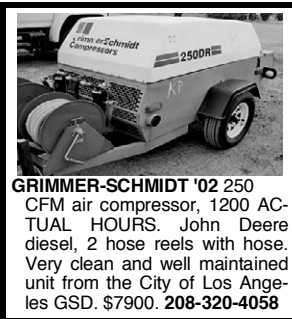

When I remarried years ago, I never would have dreamed of asking him for money for her attire. My daughter even thinks this is unrealistic.

I usually try to keep things positive when it comes to situations with him, but I don't think I'm giving in on this one. Do you agree?

— EX IN ILLINOIS

DEAREX: You said you try to keep things positive to set a good example for your daughter. While I agree your ex's demand that you pay for the dress is petty (and cheap), be the bigger person one more time and buy it for her if she wishes to participate rather than argue about it. Then cross your fingers and hope it's his last wedding.

IF JULY 11 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: During the next month, your friendliness sparkles like a beacon and can make you the bright center of any group. You can attract new friends and have more fun if you join a gym, a club or sporting group. Your judgment about material matters, such as career and finances, is at its best in late October and early November. Your fondest dreams have every chance to become a reality in late February when important opportunities can come your way that help you to achieve security on both a material and spiritual plane.

HOROSCOPE
Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Stay ahead of the curve. Others expect big things of you and you are up to the challenge. As a salesperson, you aren't afraid to make the first contact. As a lover, you prefer to play hard to get.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A bird in the hand is worth two in the bush. There are plenty of temptations in your life right now, but you know that a loyal partner and steady paycheck are better than a dream lover and get-rich-quick scheme.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Double your pleasure, double your fun. With jolly Jupiter in the sign of the twins, it is a simple matter to hook up with congenial others for work or play. Two heads are better, and more fun, than one.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A little romance makes your heart dance. Someone might flirt with you outrageously and make your heart go pitty-pat. It is a good time to start a new job or enhance your public image.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): When your head is in the clouds, you don't notice the dirt at your feet. It is easy to overlook minor imperfections when you are in close contact with an inspiring person and to just live in the moment.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): This is the time to act if you want to enlist the support of key supporters. Use your gift of gab and analytical powers to convince others of the value of your views. You must spend money to make money.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You are able to safely navigate potential pitfalls. A minor roadblock may take center stage — but behind the scenes, you will receive abundant assistance from others to help you stay right on track.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You may see endless possibilities where others see only pitfalls. During the daylight hours, everything might be business as usual — but by nightfall, a sensitive lover makes fantasies come true.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Cooperation from others is easily obtained. Your understanding of the principles of sound financial strategies is at a peak. Whatever wheels you put into motion today should lead to prosperity.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Dare to take a chance. Dream big dreams; listen to brilliant and wise friends who offer sound guidance. Pay close attention to loved ones and you will watch romance and affection flourish.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): It's wise to overlook unexpected changes. As you know, an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure. Someone could throw you a curve ball, but you'll be ready with a catcher's mitt.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Concentrate your energies on making the home a place of harmony and comfort. It might be a good time to find a small accessory that puts the finishing touch on decorating or to just enjoy domesticity.

Sudoku is a number-placing puzzle based on a 9x9 grid with several given numbers. The object is to place the numbers 1 to 9 in the empty squares so that each row, each column and each 3x3 box contains the same number only once. The difficulty level of the Conceptis Sudoku increases from Monday to Sunday.
