IDAHO'S WORST INTERSECTIONS

TWIN FALLS • This isn't a top 100 list on which counties want to land.

By the end of the month, the Idaho Transportation Department will release its High Accident Locations report, which ranks the severity and frequency of accidents on highway intersections.

The Times-News looked at the last report, which examined accident locations from 2008-2010. In District 4, which covers south-central Idaho, six intersections make the top 100 High Accident Location list.

Will those rankings change in the upcoming report? That depends, said Idaho Transportation Department District 4

"It's based on multiple factors: the type of corrective action that would be needed, whether it be a signal, turn lane, something major."

Nathan Jerke, Idaho Transportation Department District 4 spokesman spokesman Nathan Jerke. Since compiling the 2008-2010 list, the ITD made corrective improvements on some of those intersections.

Take No. 72, the intersection at Golf Course Road and US 93 in Jerome County. In August 2011, the ITD put in a stoplight at those crossroads, just north of the Perrine Bridge.

In Blaine County, the junction at state highway 75 and US 20 near Bellevue came in at 73.

That's another ranking Jerke predicts may change, thanks to improved lighting, flashing beacons and a lowered speed limit.

At No. 10, Burley's 5th Street and Overland Avenue is the highest ranked District 4 intersection, but it hasn't yet seen improvements, Jerke said.

"We're in conversations with Burley" about improvements, he said. Those fixes likely will come in the form of updated signal technology and changing the radius of the curve.

How does the department determine where to make improvements? It's not just a matter of how dangerous an intersection is, or how frequently accidents happen, Jerke said.

"It's based on multiple factors: the type of corrective action that would be needed, whether it be a signal, turn lane, something major," Jerke said. The department also looks at funding sources.

The Five Points intersection at Addison Avenue and Blue Lakes Boulevard in Twin Falls comes in at No. 17 statewide and is the second highest ranked District 4 intersection. The crossroads of 3500 East and US 30 near Kimberly and Burley's Albion Avenue and Main Street also make the list.

Accident Prone Intersections

According to the Idaho Transportation Department's Intersection District Summary Report, south-central Idaho has 21 intersections that are especially accident-prone. The compilation takes into account frequency and accidents, plus traffic flow at the intersection.

Twin Falls and Cassia counties each have seven intersections on the list, with the bulk of those being in or around Twin Falls and Burley. Of the 21 on the list, 11 had traffic signals in 2008-2010 when the data were compiled.

Statewide rank:

Machete Road Rage Hits Walmart Parking Lot

BY ALISON GENE SMITH
alismith@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • A Shoshone man is behind bars after allegedly threatening another man with a machete in the Twin Falls Walmart parking lot late Wednesday night.

Police say the victim called 911 after leaving the scene. According to a police report, the victim said he accidentally cut off another man, later identified as Richard Stromberg, 43, while driving south on North Washington Street while turning into the Walmart parking lot at about 11:30 p.m., Wednesday.

Stromberg began honking his horn while the two drove into the parking lot, the report states.

"(The victim) stated that this subject approached his vehicle with the machete in his hand, pointed it at him, and told him, 'You don't know who are you (explicative) with,'" the report states.

According to the report, the victim then drove away, watched Stromberg put the machete in the trailer he was hauling, and called police.

Beer Fest Tickets Now on Sale

BY NATE POPPINO
npoppino@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • With a little more than one month to go before the Magic Valley Beer Festival, tickets for the Aug. 18 event are now on sale.

Organizer Shayne Carpenter said tickets can be bought at O'Dunken's Draught House, Anchor Bistro and Bar, Barry Rental - Twin Falls, Brizee Heating and Air Conditioning or the Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce. They're also available online at <http://magicvalleybeer-fest.com> or can be bought from any Blue Lakes Rotarian.

The festival, planned for noon -5 p.m. in Twin Falls City Park, is a spiritual successor to beer-centric events local Rotary clubs put on about 15 years ago.

Organizers currently list 20 breweries that will have beer present — at least 10 will have brewers actually attend, Carpenter said. Locally, the list includes Twin Falls' Von Scheidt Brewing and Ketchum's Sawtooth Brewery. A number of other Idaho breweries will appear, and a few prominent regional brands — Colorado's Odell and Washington's Elysian, for example — will also have beer available.

Advance tickets are $25 (a discount on the $30 day-of-price at the gate) or $10 for designated drivers, who will receive unlimited Coca-Cola products during the festival. The festival will use the token system: Each ticket comes with 20 tokens, which can be exchanged for 2-ounce pours.

The money supports Blue Lakes Rotary — primarily the club's efforts to finish a new public park in south Twin Falls — and the Twin Falls Senior Citizens Center.

Jerome Dissolves Urban Renewal Agency

BY MELISSA DAVLIN
mdavlin@magicvalley.com

JEROME • That's a wrap.

On Thursday, the Jerome Urban Renewal Agency Board passed a resolution to close out the Urban Renewal Agency I taxing district.

The reason, said board chairwoman Marj Schmidt, is the agency finished its development objectives ahead of schedule.

By the end of the process the URA will have approximately $50,000 left, which will be redistributed to taxing districts in the area. Urban renewal agencies fund themselves through tax-increment financing, taking a slice of increased property taxes in the areas they target.

Jerome Mayor John Shine commended the URA for achieving its economic development goals 12 years before its deadline.

"I'm so proud of the work you've been able to do and the resolution that got passed today," Shine said.

Filer High School to Replace the Fuzzy Paw

BY JOHN E. SWAYZE
For the Times-News

FILER • Students returning in the fall may notice the gymnasium floor at Filer High School has a whole new look.

Boys basketball coach Kody Ketterling proposed to the Filer School Board Wednesday that the court's current logo be replaced with a more intense example of the district's Wildcat school spirit.

"I've always referred to what's on the floor right now as the fuzzy paw, and it's been that way since '96," Ketterling said. "The new design you see here would be a red cat that looks like it's tearing up through the floorboards."

Board members agreed that a fresh logo would inspire students but declined to give full approval for the change until they could see a digital copy of the final product. The design could be installed later this month when maintenance crews reseal the floor.

"I like this because it pops out at you, is more age-appropriate and donors are making it so this won't cost the district anything," Trustee Bruce Banks said. "But I still would like to see a finished version."

The school board also earmarked $2,000 to continue funding drug testing for high school athletes and other student organizations where participation requires members sign the pride code. Each test costs the district about $15.

"I've always referred to what's on the floor right now as the fuzzy paw, and it's been that way since '96. The new design you see here would be a red cat that looks like it's tearing up through the floorboards."

Kody Ketterling

"I drug-test a select number of students every week, and I think it's a great deterrent," said Filer Athletic Director LaRell Patterson. "Last year, I think we expanded the program to include the student council, cheerleading squad, the speech team, pep band and rodeo."

In other action, school board officers were selected for the 2012-2013 school year. Fred Jaynes, the district's Zone 4 representative, will serve as school board chairman. Zone 1 representative Banks accepted the position of vice chairman.

Public school board meetings were moved to the first Thursday of each month at 7 p.m. in the Filer Intermediate School conference room.

CSI Welcomes New Director

BY LAURIE WELCH

BURLEY • Amy Christopherson has taken the helm as director at the College of Southern Idaho's Mini-Cassia Center.

Christopherson, 41, has worked for CSI for the past seven years as an adjunct biology professor and the director of the college's science camp.

"I'm really excited to focus on these college students," Christopherson said. "They are so motivated and make so many sacrifices to be in class."

School District. Beck is the daughter of CSI President Jerry Beck; CSI officials defended that hire, though the college's board later revised its nepotism policy.

Christopherson holds a master's degree in biological science education from Brigham Young University in Provo.

Her job duties will include making sure the college meets the needs of students and their families, as well as understanding the education needs of businesses in the community.

Christopherson said the center draws many non-traditional students who are older or just want to fulfill a dream of continuing education. It also provides an opportunity for students to remain closer to home for the first two years of their college education.

"We want to be a support system for them," she said.

Students of all kinds can enroll online or visit the center, where staff is always available for help, Christopherson said.

"I want to communicate with and engage our community so we can meet our students' needs and the needs of our community," she said.

The center's fall academic enrollment for 2011 was 1,817 students, and 800 more took dual-credit classes. The fall semester begins Aug. 27.

Machete

Officers arrived to find the vehicle described by the victim, and they saw Stromberg leaving the store. While talking with police, Stromberg allegedly asked "if it was about the guy that cut him off?"

According to the report, officers put Stromberg in handcuffs because they were concerned he might have another weapon.

"I asked Stromberg why he felt it was necessary to confront (the victim) with a weapon and he told me that he believed it was common for individuals to arm themselves when in a confrontation," an officer wrote in the police report.

According to the report, Stromberg told police he never saw the victim with a weapon and told another officer he had a black belt in jujitsu.

After the interview, police found the machete, which was about 24 inches long with one sharp side and one serrated side, in the trailer, the report states.

Stromberg was arrested for aggravated assault with a deadly weapon and held in the Twin Falls County jail on a $20,000 bond. A preliminary hearing is scheduled for July 20.

Christian Mackin flew his sailplane from his home in Orange County, Calif., and landed just short of his goal of Twin Falls. Mackin landed in Gus and Kimberly Brackett's field, near Rogerson Sunday.

California Man Glides into Idaho

BY ALISON GENE SMITH
alismith@magicvalley.com

ROGERSON • Christian Mackin and his sailplane almost made it to Twin Falls on Sunday.

"I had it in the bag, I just needed one more thermal," he said.

Instead, Mackin, who left his home in Orange County, Calif., about seven hours earlier that day, had to make the decision to land in a pivoted field near Rogerson.

"I was approaching the Jarbidge Mountains from the southwest, hoping to find a thermal to take me back up to 17,500 feet, which would have given me a safe glide for Twin Falls," Mackin said. "Unfortunately, I did not find the thermal I needed."

Mackin said he takes his engine-less plane out nearly every weekend during the summer. The typical goal for a sailplane flight is 1,000 kilometers, or about 620 miles, he said.

"Typically we go out and return, so we'll go out 500 kilometers and back 500 kilometers or go in a triangle shape that distance," Mackin said.

This time, Mackin found himself headed straight out as changing weather patterns altered his original flight plan.

On Sunday afternoon, Mackin found himself over the Jarbidge Mountains, at about 11,000 feet. With another patch of warm air to push the glider higher, he could have made it to Twin Falls, he said. Among his friends, at least, it would have been a record-setting flight.

"Twin Falls would have been pretty spectacular," he said. "It's always been a goal for us to make it to Idaho. Of my friends I'm the first one to make it."

Eventually, as he glided downward, Mackin saw a farm field and thought it would be safer than trying to make it to a nearby airstrip.

"Airstrips can sometimes be too narrow for my 50-foot wingspan," he said.

Without knowing whether the ground below was smooth or rocky, Mackin decided to land. At about 20 feet above the ground he realized the terrain was covered in soccer ball-sized rocks and had to pull back up. He soon found a safe spot to land, he said, but still didn't know if he would be able to find someone to help him.

"I wasn't concerned about having enough water or food. I was just focused on making a good landing," he said. "After I landed I was concerned about the possibility the field or property owner might not be there."

After walking for a bit, Mackin found the home of Gus and Kimberly Brackett.

"From a distance I saw a beautiful ranch house with sprinklers watering the lawn," he said. "I knew then there was somebody home."

After explaining his predicament, Gus Brackett agreed to drive Mackin to Jackpot, Nev. There, the pilot waited for his wife and kids to arrive with a trailer to haul the plane back to Southern California, Mackin said.

With the help of the Bracketts' four children, the families took the airplane apart and loaded it into the trailer.

"My wife was definitely very nice to come out and get me," he said. "All my friends think I must be very lucky to have somebody like that who will come out and get me."

Project to Fill Boise's Downtown Hole Under Way

BOISE, Idaho (AP) • The public got a closer look at Boise's infamous downtown hole as officials broke ground on an 18-story building slated to fill the long-vacant space.

Some construction barriers were temporarily removed Thursday for a groundbreaking ceremony at the property on the corner of 8th and Main streets, which has been empty for the past quarter century. Locals jokingly refer to the site as "The Hole."

Several developers have proposed projects for the property over the years, but those efforts failed. The latest plans by the Gardner Co. call for a building designed to be the tallest in Idaho. It will be anchored by Zions Bank and house other tenants.

Top House Republicans Urge Idaho to Nix Exchanges

BOISE (AP) • The top two House Republicans are in lockstep in urging Idaho to reject the federal health care overhaul, despite the Supreme Court decision upholding its legality.

House Speaker Lawrence Denney and Majority Leader Mike Moyle released a guest editorial on Wednesday.

In it, they contend insurance companies are putting pressure on lawmakers and Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter to adopt an insurance exchange — because they'll benefit the most from it.

If Idaho doesn't establish an exchange, an online marketplace for individuals to shop for coverage, then it will get a federal version.

That's something Idaho insurers including Blue Cross hope to avoid.

Denney and Moyle also urged Idaho to reject expanding Medicaid eligibility rules.

On Tuesday, Otter announced he'd study Idaho's choices before deciding what to do sometime this fall.

New Charge for Former Prosecutor

NAMPA (AP) • An indicted former Canyon County prosecutor is facing a new charge of felony tampering with evidence.

It is the third criminal charge filed against John Bujak, who resigned in 2010. He also is accused of misusing public funds over his management of a prosecution contract with the city of Nampa and of grand theft for his representation of an estate as a private attorney.

The Idaho Press-Tribune reported Idaho State Police arrested Bujak on the evidence tampering charge. He was booked into Ada County Jail Wednesday night.

Military Firefighting Planes Moved to Utah, Idaho

BY MEAD GRUVER
Associated Press

CHEYENNE, Wyo. • Six military cargo planes that are employed to drop fire retardant around wildfires have been moved to air tanker bases in Utah and Idaho to put them closer to the most active fires in the West.

Four of the C-130s were staged at the Boise Air Terminal and two were at Hill Air Force Base near Salt Lake City on Thursday. In recent weeks, the planes were staged in Cheyenne and Colorado Springs, Colo., to fight fires in Colorado, Wyoming, Montana and South Dakota.

Last weekend, a cold front brought rainy weather to the eastern Rocky Mountains. On Wednesday, firefighters succeeded in fully containing the Waldo Canyon Fire that killed two people and burned 350 homes in Colorado Springs, making it the most destructive fire in Colorado history.

Massive fires that prompted evacuations in Wyoming also cooled off somewhat.

"With all the recent rain in the Rocky Mountains, they just don't need us down there right now," Col. Jerry Champlin, commander of the Wyoming Air National Guard 153rd Air Expeditionary Group, said in a release.

On Thursday, the most active fires were in Idaho. There, 10 fires had burned some 445 square miles of mostly grass and brush, according to the National Interagency Fire Center in Boise, Idaho.

The six C-130s were already flying some missions into Idaho before the U.S. Forest Service asked the military to move them closer to the more active fires.

A total of eight C-130s outfitted to drop fire retardant were operated by four military units: two each by the 153rd in Wyoming, the California Air National Guard 146th Airlift Wing, the North Carolina Air National Guard 145th Airlift Wing, and the 301st Airlift Wing, a Colorado Air Force Reserve unit.

One of the North Carolina planes crashed in the Black Hills on July 1, reducing the fleet to seven.

The other North Carolina plane is not presently fighting wildfires. Forest Service officials said they only needed the use of six C-130s.

The crash killed four crew members and injured two others, and remains under investigation by the military.

Each plane is fitted with a bus-sized device called a Modular Airborne Firefighting System that is specially designed to be rolled on and off a C-130. The MAFFS devices owned by the Forest Service carry up to 3,000 gallons of slurry that can be sprayed in less than 5 seconds.

IDAHO TEEN CRITICAL AFTER NEARLY DROWNING

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) • Authorities say a Spirit Lake teenager is in critical condition after he nearly drowned in a mill pond.

The Kootenai Sheriff's Office said Thursday that 16-year-old August "A.J." Marksworth and 15-year-old Nathan Thiers were wading across the pond Wednesday when Marksworth stepped into an area about 8 feet deep.

Marksworth's family told investigators he is not a good swimmer. Thiers tried to pull his friend to shallower water but became tired and let go. Marksworth then sank to the bottom.

The Coeur d'Alene Press

reported a person nearby called emergency officials.

A sheriff's deputy rescued Marksworth from the bottom and he was taken to a Spokane, Wash., hospital, where he was in critical condition.

Thiers was treated and released at Kootenai Medical Center.

Fans of k.d. lang Left Craving, Idaho Concert Canceled

BOISE (AP) • Fans of singer k.d. lang were left with a "constant craving" for her music after she canceled an Idaho concert, citing poor air quality caused by wildfires.

The state Department of Environmental Quality issued an alert Thursday saying air quality had worsened in southwestern Idaho, where lang was scheduled to perform at the Eagle River Pavilion west of Boise.

The DEQ posted an orange alert, which means the air is unhealthy for those with breathing issues. The agency also advised that any strenuous outside activities be postponed until the air quality improves.

The Idaho Statesman reported lang, who wrote the song "Constant Craving," made the decision to cancel her performance.

Anyone who purchased tickets for the concert through the service Ticketfly will automatically be refunded.

JUDGE REJECTS EASTERN IDAHO MAN'S APPEAL IN 1996 MURDER

IDAHO FALLS (AP) • A judge denied the latest appeal from an eastern Idaho man serving life in prison for the 1996 rape and murder of an Idaho Falls woman.

Christopher Tapp, 36, has long argued he did not kill Angie Dodge, and his most recent appeal focused on interviews he had with police in January 1997. Tapp detailed his involvement in Dodge's murder during one of those interviews, police said.

Seventh District Judge Joel E. Tingey rejected Tapp's appeal Wednesday.

"We're satisfied with the judge's ruling," said Bonneville County Prosecutor Bruce Pickett. "We hope this is able to close a chapter for the people affected by this tragedy."

Tapp failed to prove that he believed he was in police custody during the interview on Jan. 29, 1997, when he incriminated himself in the Dodge homicide, the judge found. Tapp plans to appeal, his attorney said.

"Of course it is incredibly disappointing," attorney John Thomas said. "But we'll push forward with the appeal."

Tapp was convicted in 1998 of the rape and first-degree murder of Dodge, who was 18 when she was found slain June 13, 1996, at her Idaho Falls apartment. Tapp was arrested after telling investigators he held Dodge down while Benjamin Hobbs and a man named "Mike" raped her.

Tapp said Hobbs forced him to stab Dodge before Hobbs slit her throat.

DNA evidence never linked Hobbs or Tapp to the crime, and "Mike" has never been identified.

Hobbs was never charged in Dodge's slaying but is serving a prison sentence in Nevada for an unrelated crime.

Crews Battle Southern Idaho Fires

BY TODD DVORAK
Associated Press

BOISE • Crews battling a wildfire in the forest northeast of Idaho's capital city have nearly half the blaze contained and are hoping to finish the job Thursday.

The Avelene Fire, burning in a section of the Boise National Forest about 25 miles northeast of Boise, has scorched 210 acres so far and is responsible for the evacuation of nearby homes.

The fire is one of a handful of fires in southwestern Idaho and eastern Oregon responsible for the thin veil of smoke hovering above the Boise area, prompting state health officials Thursday to downgrade the air quality rating for the Treasure Valley.

"There is another hot day ahead of us, and we need to get through the main burning period, but that being said, crews have made excellent progress," Boise National Forest Spokesman Dave Olson said of the Avelene Fire.

The voluntary evacuation order issued Wednesday remains in effect. Officials say residents from fewer than 10 homes within a mile of the fire perimeter stayed away from their home Wednesday night. Fire managers are hoping to have the fire contained by Friday night.

For the second consecutive week, fire crews and air tanker pilots have been busy battling blazes across southern Idaho. Weeks of high temperatures and sparse rain have dried up rangeland and lower elevation mountain forests faster than normal.

Despite abundant winter snow and a moist spring, Olson said conditions in the forests ranging between 2,500 feet and 6,500 feet are dryer than the 20-year average.

"If you're walking through the woods at those altitudes, you'll notice the pine needles are starting to crunch and the branches cracking more than bending," Olson said. "Higher up, it's still reasonably wet and green because the snow held for so long. But more high heat and dry days could change that pretty quickly."

State and federal forest managers are also considering imposing tougher restrictions on campfires in state and national forests across the state.

Yellowstone Plans Meetings on Winter Plan

YELLOWSTONE NATIONAL PARK, Wyo. (AP) • The National Park Service plans to hold a series of public meetings to get comment on its proposal to increase the number of snowmobiles and other snow machines allowed in Yellowstone National Park.

Yellowstone spokesmen have emphasized that despite proposing to allow more snow machines into the park, they believe that new pollution and noise control requirements on the machines should curtail the environmental effects.

Four public meetings, each starting at 6:30 p.m., are set in communities surrounding the park:

- Mon., July 16 at The Virginian Lodge in Jackson.
- Tues., July 17 at the Holiday Inn in West Yellowstone, Mont.
- Wed., July 18 at the Wingate by Wyndham in Bozeman, Mont.
- Thurs., July 19 at the Holiday Inn in Cody.

Massive Landslide Sweeps Over Glacier

BY MARY PEMBERTON
Associated Press

ANCHORAGE, Alaska • Even by Alaska standards, the rock slide in Glacier Bay National Park was a huge event.

It was a monumental geophysical event that was almost overlooked until a pilot happened to fly over where the cliff collapsed and snapped some photographs nearly a month later.

When the cliff collapsed in the national park in southeast Alaska, it sent rock and ice coursing down a valley and over a lovely white glacier in what perhaps was the largest landslide recorded in North America.

The rumbling was enough so that it showed up as a 3.4-magnitude earthquake in Alaska. The seismic event also was recorded in Canada. The massive landslide occurred in a remote valley beneath the 11,750-foot Lituya Mountain in the Fairweather Range about six miles from the border with British Columbia.

"I don't know of any that are bigger," Marten Geertsema, a research geomorphologist for the provincial Forest Service in British Columbia, said Thursday, when comparing the landslide to others in North America.

If someone were standing in front of the slide, the air blast alone would have flattened that person, said Geertsema, who studies natural hazards resulting from geophysical processes on the earth's surface.

"I think they would be blown over by the air blast," he said.

Despite the extraordinary size of the landslide, which was estimated at a half-mile wide and 5 1/2 miles long, it went virtually unnoticed until air taxi pilot Drake Olson flew over it on July 2. The landslide, which rolled over the glacier, is not noticeable to the thousands of cruise ship passengers that visit Glacier Bay National Park near Juneau each summer. That is because it is about 12 to 15 miles up the glacier from the bay.

While this one was huge by North American standards, bigger ones have occurred, including a September 2002 landslide in Russia that extended for 20 miles, Geertsema said.

Lituya Mountain has been the scene of extraordinary geophysical events before. In 1958, a landslide on the other side of the mountain produced a wave estimated at 1,700 feet.

OPINION

“The intent of the president's health care law was to lower costs and to help create jobs. ... Instead, it is making our economy worse, driving up costs and making it harder for small businesses to hire.”

House Speaker John Boehner, R-Ohio in a statement after Republicans pushed yet another bill through the House to repeal the nation's two-year-old health care law.

OUR VIEW

Grazing only a Piece of Rangeland Solution

Nature did some rangeland management this past week as it burned nearly 200,000 acres outside of Castleford.

It's frightening to watch nature cleaning up our mess.

When will we get it right? A century ago, we overgrazed this area — keeping too many sheep and cattle in one spot for too long. Native grasses were pulled up by their roots, leaving a stripped landscape that was easily filled by the modern-day tinder, cheatgrass.

In his paper “Cheatgrass: The Invader that Won the West,” Bureau of Land Management rangeland ecologist Mike Pellant called cheatgrass a “curse and a blessing.” Cheatgrass, he writes, came to Idaho in the 1890s as weed seeds inside contaminated grain from southwestern Asia. It was perfectly adapted for this climate and found a comfortable home in the overgrazed landscape that would become the Magic Valley. Cheatgrass is a drought-tolerant, prolific seed producer and naturally won the competition for space with native grass.

After a history of over-grazing, the pendulum swung the other way. In an effort to protect sage grouse, we limited grazing and shortened the time between the cheatgrass-wildfire cycle. This summer alone, we've seen two wildfires in the Castleford area near Balanced Rock.

“They call this a 100-year fire, but we've had five of them in the last six years in this area,” rancher Jared Brackett told the Capital Press this week.

Ranchers responded by blaming tighter grazing restrictions for fueling the fires.

Wyatt Prescott, executive vice president of the Idaho Cattle Association, told Capital Press that if Bureau of Land Management federal grazing restrictions hadn't prevented ranchers from grazing more cattle in the area, there would have been less fuel to burn and firefighters could have gained control of the fire quicker.

If we don't manage sage grouse habitat now, it will lead to tougher grazing restrictions handed down from the federal government. And no amount of kicking and screaming is going to stop that train.

The Kinyon Road Fire this past week was started by lightning. High winds, dry conditions and record temperatures fueled the fire — ideal conditions for a blaze, even on the most ecologically balanced rangeland.

Blaming environmentalists and offering up cattle as the only way to stop wildfires gives grazing too much credit and doesn't offer a complete picture of the issues or the road back to a healthy rangeland.

Rangeland management strategies must include responsible grazing techniques, prescribed burns and cultivation of native grasses.

The first step is to manage the balance between native plants and cheatgrass, and then grazing can be used as an effective management tool.

On June 9, we published a story titled “It's Hard to Go Native” about Shoshone resident Kelvin Jones who is returning 10 acres of land to native grass. (<http://bit.ly/Naw5P1>) His story shows bringing back native grass takes work and doesn't happen overnight. But our rangeland problem didn't develop overnight.

If we choose to grow the urban / wildland interface — making a living off of rangeland, building our homes next to public lands — to let nature take its course is no longer an option. Rangeland must be managed for wildlife habitat, for safety from wildfires and for the grazing upon which so many base their livelihoods.

In an effort to protect sage grouse, we have limited grazing and are shortening the time between the cheatgrass-wildfire cycle.

Why Romney Welcomes the Boos

Mitt Romney was booed. It was a good day for Mitt Romney.

When the Republican nominee told the NAACP that he was committed to eliminating Obamacare, audience members shouted out. The negative reception Wednesday in Houston might have been momentarily jarring to the candidate, but the moment had a political upside. It offered a chance for a candidate criticized for his malleability to look principled in the face of opposition. That might not have mattered to the audience in the auditorium, but as Romney advisers explain, this speech was not just aimed at the people sitting in their seats or African-American voters in general.

Like Romney's contentious visit to the largely African-American school in West Philadelphia weeks ago, this speech was aimed at rounding out Romney's image. “I believe that if you understood who I truly am in my heart, and if it were possible to fully communicate what I believe is in the real, enduring best interest of African-American families, you would vote for me for president,” he said.

Hearing this, swing voters might think Romney has a bigger heart than those mean Democratic ads claiming he sent jobs overseas. At the very least the speech, and the negative reaction it provoked, replaced the outsourcing of American jobs as the political topic of the day. That may be the biggest political benefit of all of Mitt Romney's NAACP speech: He changed the conversation.

John Dickerson

In an election that is so close, both campaigns seem less concerned about the substance of their argument than that the argument take place on favorable turf. On issues from health care to charges and counter-charges about outsourcing, both Romney and Obama are willing to endure boos, howls from fact-checkers and even some cries of hypocrisy if it will keep the argument on the topics that do them the most political good.

Romney was also applauded by the NAACP audience, as his supporters were quick to point out. True, but it's in their candidate's interest to get booed and to have that booing reported. Quiet golf clapping and even sustained applause would rob Romney of explaining how steadfast he is going to be in the interviews that followed. It would weaken the Daniel in the Lion's Den story. Big deal, Daniel, the lions just purred at you.

This is why, when candidate Obama in 2008 told of being grumbled at by auto executives for his position on auto emissions, he left out the part about how they gave him a standing ovation at the end of the speech.

The boos are particularly helpful in building ties with conservatives who prize constancy in the face of opposition among all political tributes and who have specific concerns about Romney's commitment to repealing the president's health care plan.

It should be noted that the appearance of bravery is distinct from actual bravery. This was not a Sister Soulja moment, named for Bill Clinton's comments at a conference sponsored by the Rainbow Coalition criticizing a popular rap artist for contributing to the coarsening of the culture.

In this case, Romney was telling leaders of a community disproportionately lacking quality health care that legislation expanding the system is a bad thing. Romney asked the audience to see his heart, but after so quickly dismissing this policy that has deep consequences for the African-American community, he offered no alternative health care vision or hint that he understood the depth of the need that Obamacare — as flawed as it may be — was trying to meet. (When Romney later suggested those who booed simply wanted more “free stuff,” that probably made it harder to see his heart.)

President Obama is also willing to take his own hits to keep the argument on his turf. His campaign is running a variety of ads charging Romney with outsourcing jobs while the head of Bain Capital. A variety of fact-checking organizations called the president on it, giving him the most negative ratings possible, challenging his assertions and saying his campaign can't back up its claims. Yet, the ads are still running. The Obama campaign is convinced the TV attacks are working because any conversation about outsourcing is one Democrats think they are going to win. The idea is unpopular and voters are likely to believe that the candidate who sells himself as a business guy and whose firm sometimes shuttered factories was the one involved in outsourcing.

This is further confirmation of an essential truth both campaigns have embraced about fact checking: The upside from a strong distortion is better than the downside from the hall monitors. If you're not getting four Pinocchios or a pants-on-fire, you're not doing it right. Let them boo — as long as the message gets through.

ONLINE COMMENTS

A Magicvalley.com reader commented on the “Letter to the Editor: ‘Business as Usual’ Approach to Local Politics:”

Uncle Sam: “So you think the state government would serve us better if there were more Democrats and it were more balanced. Since it doesn't have the balance you deem necessary then it must be someone's fault? Blame the Times News for not giving you coverage and that would make all the difference?”

So who are you and what do you stand for? For starters let me guess, since you choose to run as a Democrat I know that your first obligation is to the looting class. Raise taxes and give things away? ... Since blaming is part of the Democrat platform, why not skip the evil Republican stuff and go right to the heart of whose at fault in your perceived unbalance. It's the majority of the electorate! It's the voters that vote! They don't agree with the political philosophy that you stand for and between Democrats and Republicans they lean to the Republican ticket. ...”

In response to the article, “Dispute over Bankrupt Dairy Heads to Supreme Court,” an online reader wrote:

idwindstar: “Those dairy-men better be able to borrow money. If feed liens are deemed worthless, there will be a lot more growers refusing to deliver feed without cash up front.”

An online reader responded to the article, “UPDATE: Woman from California was Victim in Canyon Fall - an Apparent Suicide:”

K Ferguson: “Twin Falls has the highest suicide rate in the state. I have lived here for five years and my family has had a hard time adapting. Idaho is a beautiful state with great people. Sadly, it is hard to fit in. Families here and individuals are very tight knit and it is hard to be accepted. I grieve for this young woman. So many people I meet these days are so sad, upset, or just unhappy because of the downfall of our economy plus ... Many of us know how this woman and others feel. ...”

Girl Allegedly Gets Cooped up by Parents

BUTLER, Ga. (AP) • A Georgia girl told investigators she spent days at a time locked inside a small outhouse and a chicken coop, and had to wear a shock collar because she didn't do her school work, authorities said Thursday.

The 15-year-old girl's parents, Samuel and Diana Franklin, were arrested earlier this week on multiple counts of child cruelty and false imprisonment.

They were released on bond, and declined to comment as they left the courthouse Thursday for what appeared to be a custody hearing.

"I've never seen anything like this personally," said Special Agent Wayne Smith of the Georgia Bureau of Investigation. "If the allegations prove to be true, it's a very severe case."

The girl was adopted around 2007 and homeschooled in a house outside the small town of Butler, about 85 miles south of Atlanta, according to Smith.

The Franklins live on a rural stretch of road sprinkled with a few homes and cow pastures.

The house is surrounded by a split-rail fence with prominent "no trespassing" signs at the entrance of the driveway.

The girl told investigators she spent up to six days at a time in the small buildings in the back of the property as punishment for such things as failing to complete her school assignments, Smith said.

She said she had been put in the buildings for at least the past two years.

Belfast Catholics Riot in Ireland

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) • Irish Catholic militants attacked riot police Thursday in a divided corner of Belfast as the most polarizing day on Northern Ireland's calendar reached a typically ugly end — and yet managed, amid the smoke and chaos, to take a few tentative steps toward compromise.

Many hours of violence in the hardline Catholic Ardoyne district marked the fourth straight year the area descended into anarchy following the annual passage of Protestant marchers from the Orange Order brotherhood.

Massive Orange parades across Northern Ireland each July 12 — an official holiday that commemorates the Protestant side's victory in 17th-century religious warfare — often stoke conflict with Catholics, who despise the marches as a Protestant show of superiority.

But in recent years, a drab stretch of road that passes a row of Ardoyne shops has become the focal point for province-wide animosity.

Nationalist rioters march through a cloud of smoke Thursday in the Ardoyne area of North Belfast, Northern Ireland.

There, the decades-old battle for supremacy between the British Protestant majority and Irish Catholic minority wages a yearly test of wills. A British government-appointed Parades Commission sought to defuse the Ardoyne conflict this year by ordering the Orangemen to march along Crumlin Road by 4 p.m. local time, three hours sooner than normal. Protestant leaders grudgingly accepted the deadline rather than mount a later standoff, and all sides agreed this gesture kept a bad situation from turning worse.

Activists: Massacre Kills More than 100

A string of high-profile defections from the Syrian regime has stirred hopes in the West that Bashar Assad's inner circle will abandon him in greater numbers.

Assad

Death tolls are nearly impossible to independently verify in Syria, where the government restricts journalists and where more than a year of violence has convulsed much of the country.

BEIRUT • Syrian activists reported a new massacre late Thursday in the central Homs province, saying regime forces killed more than 100 people in shelling and other attacks.

There were few details on the attack, which was reported by the Local Coordination Committees activist group and the Britain-based Syrian Observatory for Human Rights.

The Observatory said it was aware of up to 100 killed from sources on the ground, but the group had only confirmed the names of 30 people so far.

There were few details of the violence in Hama's Tremseh area.

Activists say more than 17,000 people have been killed since the uprising against President Bashar Assad began in March 2011, and he is coming under growing international pressure to stop the violence. But as the bloodshed continues and the conflict morphs into an armed insurgency, hopes for a peaceful transition are dimming.

The latest report of violence came in the wake of the highest-level defector yet from President Bashar Assad's regime — his ambassador to Iraq.

Defections from the Syrian regime have stirred hopes in the West Assad's inner circle will start abandoning him in greater numbers, hastening his downfall.

But the tightly protected regime has largely held together over the course of the 16-month-old uprising, driven by a mixture of fear and loyalty.

The latest official to flee, Ambassador Nawaf Fares, announced he was joining the revolution, asserting Thursday only force will drive Assad from power.

"There is no road map ever with Bashar Assad, because any plan, any statement that is agreed on internationally he delays on and ignores," Fares told the Al-Jazeera satellite channel. "There is no way that he can be pushed from power without force, and the Syrian people realize this."

Syria's Foreign Ministry denounced Fares, saying he should face "legal and

Guantanamo Drug Probe Raises New Questions

BY BEN FOX
Associated Press

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico • A newly released Pentagon report says there is no evidence that officials at Guantanamo Bay used mind-altering drugs to interrogate prisoners, but lawyers for men held at the U.S. base in Cuba said Thursday the findings still raise troubling questions.

The report by the Department of Defense Inspector General found some detainees were interrogated while they were also being treated by doctors at the prison for diagnosed mental conditions and receiving prescribed psychoactive medications.

Lawyers for prisoners say that raises the possibility that incriminating statements could have been made under the influence of medication, potentially raising questions about evidence used to justify detaining or charging men held at the base.

"If the government relied on statements by doped up detainees, regardless of why they were doped up, the government has kept men locked up for more than a decade on the basis of evidence that can't be trusted," said David Remes, a Washington-based human rights lawyer who represents 16 prisoners at Guantanamo.

The Inspector General report does not address the content of any interrogations or how prisoner statements may have been used. A Pentagon spokesman, Army Lt. Col. Todd Breasseale, declined to comment on any potential legal implications and said there was no evidence of any deliberate attempt to use mind-altering drugs on men accused of terrorism or some connection to al-Qaida and the Taliban.

"The detainees were not given drugs as a means to facilitate interrogation,

COMING TO AMERICA

The rising violence brought by the spread of Mexican drug cartels has spawned a surge of Central American migrants making the 1,000-mile journey this year to the United States.

TULTITLAN, Mexico • Deported from the United States after years working construction in New Jersey, Hector Augusto Lopez decided to rebuild his life in his hometown in eastern Honduras.

He found a steady job in a shoe store in Catacamas. Then, in March, he watched horrified as robbers shot three customers to death before his eyes. Soon after, he decided to make the hard and dangerous journey north again.

"In Honduras there is a lot of violence, a lot of robberies and a lot of poverty," Lopez, 28, said as he waited to jump a cargo train just outside Mexico City on a recent afternoon. "There is no future there."

Half a block away, dozens more U.S.-bound Central American migrants waited outside an overflowing one-story, crammed shelter, napping on pieces of cardboard, wrapping themselves in garbage bags against the cold and trading stories about their journeys north.

While the number of Mexicans heading to the U.S. has dropped dramatically, a surge of Central American migrants is making the 1,000-mile northbound journey this year, fueled in large part by the rising violence brought by the spread of Mexican drug cartels. Other factors, experts say, are an easing in migration enforcement by Mexican authorities and a false perception that Mexican criminal gangs are not preying on migrants as much as they had been.

Central American migration remains small compared to the numbers of Mexicans still headed north, but their steeply rising numbers

THOUSANDS FALL VICTIM TO UTILITY PAYMENT SCAM

BY SCOTT BAUER

MADISON, Wis. • As much as President Barack Obama wants your vote, he's not actually offering to pay your monthly bills.

But thousands of Americans were persuaded otherwise, falling victim to a fast-moving scam that claims to be part of an Obama administration program to help pay utility bills in the midst of a scorching summer.

The scheme spread quickly across the nation in recent weeks with help from victims who unwittingly shared it on social media sites before realizing they had been conned out of personal information such as Social Security, credit card and checking account numbers.

Paramedics Forced to Turn to Expired Drugs

BY JONATHAN J. COOPER
Associated Press

SALEM, Ore. • When paramedics ran out of a critical drug used to treat irregular heartbeats, the Bend Fire Department in central Oregon dug into its stash of expired medications, loaded up the trucks and kept treating patients.

Paramedics reported asking some of those facing medical emergencies: "Is it OK if we use this expired drug?"

Emergency responders in various jurisdictions have reported turning to last resort practices as they struggle to deal with a shortage of drug supplies created by manufacturing delays and industry changes. Some are injecting expired medications or substituting alternatives. Others are simply going without.

As the drug crisis mounted for the Bend Fire Department earlier this year, the agency had 11 medications in drug kits that were expired, despite risks the pharmaceuticals might not work as intended in life-or-death situations. The crisis has eased a bit, but the agency still carries expired doses of two drugs in serving a city of 80,000 people.

"We've never (before) had to go diving back into the bin to try to retrieve expired boxes of drugs," said Tom Wright, emergency medical services coordinator for the Bend Fire Department, which has been administering outdated medicines for about a year. "We had the backing of our insurance company that giving expired drugs is better than giving no drugs at all."

He said medics have not reported any adverse reactions.

Medications are only guaranteed to work as intended until their expiration date. When stored properly, most expired drugs won't be harmful to patients but will become less effective with time, according to medical professionals. However, EMS officials said it's often difficult to get information from manufacturers or regulators about how long specific medications will work.

Research Murky on Danger of Asian Carp Invasion

BY JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press

HAVANA, Ill. • As scientists aboard a research boat activate an electric current, the calm Illinois River transforms into a roiling, silvery mass. Asian carp by the dozen hurtle from the water as if shot from a gun, soaring in graceful arcs before plunging beneath the surface with splashes resembling tiny geysers.

Water quality specialist Thad Cook grunts as a whopper belts him in the gut. His colleagues duck and dodge to avoid the missile-like fish that plop onto the deck, writhing madly until someone can grasp the slimy, slithering critters and heave them over the side.

It's like a scene from a Hitchcock movie — and indeed the flying carp have played villainous roles in many a YouTube video. Biologists, however, fear a different kind of horror story may be taking shape underwater: a war for survival between the aggressive Asian carp newcomers and native species important to people who catch fish for a living or fun.

"We suspect at some point there will be a real crash in the populations of some of these native fishes," said John Chick, an aquatic ecologist with the National Great Rivers Research and Education Center on the Mississippi River near St. Louis.

While years of study have turned up ominous signs that the carp are capable of crowding out other species and changing ecosystems, the worst-case scenario scientists expect to unfold hasn't yet been realized. Some scientists say dire predictions about the damage carp can do may be premature. That makes the research Chick and his colleagues are conducting critical: It likely will influence how the debate over managing waterways made vulnerable by carp plays out in Congress and the courts.

Asian carp, jolted by an electric current from a research boat, are seen jumping June 17 from the Illinois River near Havana, Ill.

U.S. research so far has focused on rivers, where Asian carp are most plentiful. A common method for determining which fish are in a given location is to shoot an electric charge into the water that temporarily stuns them so crews can scoop them up in nets. Silver carp, an Asian type known for springing from the water when startled, manage to jump first.

Imported decades ago to cleanse algae-choked aquaculture ponds and sewage treatment lagoons, they escaped during floods and marched up the Mississippi watershed in more than two dozen states, ranging as far as Kansas and the Dakotas. They're taking dead aim at the Great Lakes, with the leading Ohio rivers and you'll find them," said biologist Ron Brooks of the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources.

Those environments are hotbeds for research, and could foretell what will happen if carp invade other waterways. What's missing, though, is smoking-gun evidence that Asian carp will devastate other fish. Even in places such as the Illinois and Mississippi, where carp are rampant, changes have been incremental.

For example, while indigenous bigmouth buffalo and gizzard shad both have gotten skinnier since the carp arrived, the buffalo's population has declined only moderately while the shad have fluctuated. Commercially harvested buffalo are found on grocery shelves from Alabama to Minnesota. The shad are crucial prey for bass and other sport fish.

"When you get a species invasion ... typically you see some native species decline or go extinct locally," said biologist Jim Garvey of Southern Illinois University at Carbondale. "We haven't seen that yet. We're kind of wondering what the heck's going on."

Chick and others have found that silver and bighead carp, the most menacing of several Asian varieties in the U.S., eat the same food as the bigmouth buffalo and gizzard shad. A separate study detected weight declines among buffalo and shad in the Illinois River, believed to have the largest concentrations of Asian carp.

Researchers are looking for proof that Asian carp are at least partially to blame for the drop-offs. "It's just a correlation at this point," Chick said.

Other research supports the potential that the newcomers could take over the neighborhood. Garvey and associates reported this year that Asian carp account for more than 60 percent of the biomass — the combined weight — of all fish species along the lower 150-mile stretch of the Illinois River. They also make up virtually all fish longer than 16 inches.

Such findings stir unease in the Great Lakes region, which could become the Asian carp's next frontier. Ravenous and prolific, the carp typically weigh 30 to 40 pounds but can exceed a hefty 100 pounds. They gorge up to one-fifth of their body weight daily on plankton — tiny plants and animals that nearly all fish eat.

disciplinary accountability?"

In Washington, State Department spokesman Patrick Ventrell hailed what he called the "first major diplomatic defection," adding: "We think this a wider sign that the regime is feeling the pressure. The pressure is up and the regime is really starting to fall apart."

Fares is the second prominent Syrian to break with the regime in less than a week. Brig. Gen. Manaf Tlass, an Assad confidant and son of a former defense minister, defected last week, but has not spoken publicly.

French Foreign Minister Laurent Fabius said Tlass has been in contact with the Syrian opposition. He would not comment on reports that Tlass was in Paris.

"I know that there is some closeness between the opposition and the general. ... Contact has been made," Fabius told journalists in Paris.

Assad's regime has suffered a steady stream of low-level army defectors, who joined a group of dissidents known as the Free Syrian Army, now numbering in the tens of thousands. There were several high-level defections in the past — including a Syrian fighter pilot who flew his plane to neighboring Jordan during a training mission in June in a brazen move.

Although the defections are notable, Assad's regime has remained remarkably airtight, particularly compared with the hemorrhaging of Moammar Gadhafi's inner circle in Libya in 2011.

Within weeks of the Libyan revolt, a number of Libyan ambassadors and other high-ranking officials quit the government, and many joined the opposition leadership. The early defection of huge sections of the army in eastern Libya gave the rebel movement a safe zone where they could freely organize their political and military strategies.

let me clear about that," Breausseale said.

The investigation was conducted in 2008-2009 at the request of members of Congress. It was prompted by an April 2008 story in The Washington Post in which a prisoner alleged he had been drugged and questioned in apparent violation of U.S. law and other detainees said they were forcibly medicated. The Inspector General's report was not publicly available until this week, when it was published by the website Truthout, which obtained it through the Freedom of Information Act.

Names of detainees are redacted in the report. But it is clear from a quote cited in the report that investigators looked into the case of Adel al-Nusairi, a former Saudi police officer cited in the Post story who told his lawyer of being injected with an unknown drug while undergoing lengthy interrogations. The prisoner said he gave a made-up confession to get a break from one session.

The Inspector General found the prisoner had been diagnosed as schizophrenic and psychotic with a borderline personality disorder and was treated at Guantanamo with Haldol, a drug that can make people lethargic. The report said there was no evidence shots were administered during his interrogation.

Al-Nusairi was sent back to Saudi Arabia in 2006 and was not interviewed for the report, nor was his lawyer, Anant Raut. The lawyer told The Associated Press he could not comment on the prisoner's case but said the report appears to validate complaints by a number of detainees that they were given mind-altering drugs at Guantanamo, calling into doubt the validity of their statements to authorities. "I commend the investigators for uncovering that," he said.

speak starkly to the violence and poverty at home. The perils of the journey have pushed smuggling fees as high as $7,000, as much as double the earlier rates, for a trip that takes weeks, or even months for those delayed by robberies, health problems or difficulties finding transportation.

Honduras, with a population of 7 million, had the world's highest homicide rate in 2010, with 6,200 killings, or 82.1 murders per 100,000 inhabitants. That's up from 57 murders per 100,000 inhabitants in 2008. Neighboring El Salvador had 66 homicides per 100,000 in 2010. The U.S., by comparison, saw about 5 homicides per 100,000 people.

"The reality is that a lot of Mexicans have sort of given up looking for work in the U.S. and have started to return home, but for Central Americans the conditions may be even more desperate than the ones we're seeing in Mexico," said David Shirk, director of the Trans-Border Institute at the University of San Diego.

About 56,637 non-Mexican migrants, most of them Central Americans, were detained by the U.S. Border Patrol along the border with Mexico between October and May. That's more than double the 27,561 detained in the same period a year ago. Meanwhile, the number of Mexican migrants caught at the U.S. southern border decreased 7 percent this fiscal year, to 188,467.

In fact, the illegal migration of Mexicans to the United States now stands at its lowest level in decades, according to a study released in April by the Washington-based think tank the Pew Hispanic Center. The study found that over the last five years more Mexicans have left the United States than entered it.

Much of the drop is attributed to a weak U.S. economy, which has principally shrunk the number of construction jobs attractive to Mexican workers. Increased deportations, heightened U.S. patrols and violence along the border, as well as Mexico's declining birth rate, also have played a role.

When it comes to Central Americans, the picture is starkly different.

U.S. apprehensions of illegal migrants, including Central Americans, began declining in 2007, when the flow of illegal migrants began slowing, but experts say that has reversed as violence rises in Central America, partly fueled by Mexican drug cartels moving into the area. Although Mexican authorities have pulled back on some immigration enforcement, they also are apprehending more illegal Central American immigrants before they get to the U.S. border, with 29,619 arrested between January and April, a 42 percent increase from 2011, according to the country's National Immigration Institute.

Lt. Col. Roland Long Gardner

May 7, 1925-July 11, 2012

TWIN FALLS • Lt. Col. Roland Long Gardner, 87, went to his final rest Wednesday, July 11, 2012, following an extended illness.

Roland was born in Aberdeen, Md., on May 7, 1925, to Pernelle and Glenola Long. Orphaned at 7, Roland went to live with his uncle. He was always a tireless worker and worked on the family farm, hunted, fished, trapped and caddied golf while attending school. He met the love of his life, Cecile Willingham, while attending Aberdeen High School. After graduating in 1943, Roland enlisted in the U.S. Navy and served in the Pacific Theater during World War II. He was involved in seven invasions as a radioman on the LST 990.

Roland married Cecile on Aug. 7, 1948. He enlisted in the U.S. Army and served in Korea and Vietnam. Roland served with the 1st Air Cav in Vietnam and was very proud of his association with that division. Upon retiring from the U.S. Army after 30 years of service, Roland was very active in civic organizations including the American Legion, VFW and the Masonic Lodge. Roland served as American Legion Department of Idaho commander in 1993 and held numerous leadership positions at the state and local level. He was very active with the Magic Valley Veterans and the Veterans Cemetery in Hansen. Roland loved to be active. He gardened, golfed and spent countless hours on community service.

Roland is preceded in death by three brothers; his daughter, Kristin; and his grandson, William. He is survived by his wife, Cecile; his daughters, LaV-erne Knight and Kathryn (Clark) Muscat; six grandchildren; and six great-grandchildren. He will be sorely missed.

A viewing will be held from 5 to 7 p.m. Sunday, July 15, at Parke's Magic Valley Funeral Home, 2551 Kimberly Road in Twin Falls. A service will be held at 10 a.m. Monday, July 16, also at Parke's. Internment will follow at the Twin Falls Cemetery.

The family wishes to thank the staff of Bridgeview Estates Assisted Living and Hospice Visions for the love and care given during Roland's final months.

In lieu of flowers, please send donations to the Magic Valley Veterans in care of Wayne Goetz, 3149 N. 3375 E., Kimberly, ID 83341.

Melvin 'Moe' Mohwinkel

Aug. 30, 1924-July 10, 2012

GOODING • Melvin H. "Moe" Mohwinkel, 87, of Gooding, passed away Tuesday, July 10, 2012, at his home.

Moe was born Aug. 30, 1924, in Lockwood, Missouri, the son of Frederick William Herman Mohwinkel and Dolie Clementine Hill. He moved with his family to Idaho in 1936 at age 12, attending Shoestring School and Gooding High School.

In 1944, Melvin joined the U.S. Marine Corps. He served as a corporal in the 1st Division, 3rd Armored Amphibian Battalion and was involved in campaigns in Peleliu, Ngesebus, Okinawa, Guadalcanal and Iwo Jima. Moe received two Purple Hearts in Peleliu and Okinawa and was recommended for the Silver Star during the invasion of Okinawa. He was awarded the Presidential Unit Citation Streamer, Asiatic Pacific Campaign Medal Streamer with four Bronze Stars and the World War II Victory Medal Streamer. He was honorably discharged in 1946, at which time he returned to Gooding.

He met the love of his life, Myrl Estep, and they were married Dec. 1, 1946. For the next 65-plus years, they raised their children and shared the ups and downs of life. The couple had two daughters. Family was very important to Melvin. Fishing, hunting, camping and participating in school events were favorite family activities. Moe and Myrl loved helping and being around young people. They opened their home and hearts to several of them who became part of the family over the years.

Melvin worked at many jobs throughout his life. He loved to work. He worked as a bartender for Walt Bonning in Gooding; he drove a beer delivery truck for Lucky Lager; he cut, treated and sold posts and poles; he worked at custom farming; owned and operated his own tree business for more than 20 years, and retired after working 20 years for the city of Gooding.

Until the time of his death, he enjoyed gardening an acre of land, and all produce he and his wife didn't use he gave away to family, friends, acquaintances and many others. He will be remembered for his gardening skills, great sense of humor, love for people, "dragging Main Street" with his daughters and their friends, the principles and values he passed on to others, and his yellow hard hat.

Melvin is preceded in death by his parents, three brothers and one sister. He is survived by his wife; two daughters, Linda (Terry) Mink of Laramie, Wyo., and Sandra (Bob) Negley of Salt Lake City, Utah; two sisters, Katherine (Jim) Shoemaker of Jerome and Velma (Ellis) Spain of Greenfield, Mo.; six grandchildren, Amy Mink, Sarah (William) Hymas, Rebecca (Matt) Ritchie, Joseph (Samantha) Mink, Levi (Erica) Negley and Joshua Negley; and nine great-grandchildren.

Visitation for family and friends will be held from 4 to 7 p.m. Friday, July 13, at Demaray Funeral Service, Gooding Chapel. A funeral service will be held at 10:30 a.m. Saturday, July 14, at the United Methodist Church in Gooding. Burial with military honors will follow at the Wendell Cemetery in Wendell.

Arrangements are under the care and direction of Demaray Funeral Service, Gooding Chapel. Condolences may be sent to the family by visiting the obituary link at www.demarayfuneralservice.com.

Larry Lewis Larson

Jan. 1, 1938-July 11, 2012

JEROME • Larry Lewis Larson, 74, of Jerome, entered into eternity Wednesday, July 11, 2012.

He was born Jan. 1, 1938, in Williston, N.D., the fourth of six children born to Alf and Marie Larson. Larry served his country in the Army. He spent most of his working life as a plumber and retired from Local 32 in 1993. In 1999, he settled in Jerome. Larry married Norma Jean Haffner in 2006, and you never saw so much fun in one package! The two were inseparable and laughed continually. Larry never knew a stranger and was the most generous man you would ever meet. He squeezed every drop of joy out of each day that he lived. Larry loved his family, hunting, fishing, cards, cars and anything fun. He will be missed by all who knew him.

Larry is survived by his wife, Norma of Jerome; six children, Rodney of Kent, Wash., Robert of Sparks, Nev., LaraJo of Springfield, Mo., Mark of Reno, Nev., Teresa of Kent, Wash., Larry of Covington, Wash., and Steve of Tri-Cities, Wash.; 29 grandchildren; 38 great-grandchildren; his brother, Jack of Jerome, Idaho; and many extended family members and friends. He is preceded in death by his parents; one sister, Lois; and three brothers, Pete, Bob and Darrel.

A memorial service will be conducted at 4 p.m. Saturday, July 14, at the Snake River Elks Lodge, 412 E. 200 S. in Jerome. Arrangements are under the care of Farnsworth Mortuary of Jerome.

U.S. to Iraq: Review Case of Militant

BY LARA JAKES AND QASSIM ABDUL-ZAHRA
Associated Press

BAGHDAD • The White House has asked Iraq to review the case of a Hezbollah commander who was accused of masterminding a 2007 attack that killed five American soldiers or hand him over to the United States, a senior Obama administration official said Thursday, though two Iraqi courts declared him not guilty.

The case is a tricky aftermath of the long U.S. military campaign in Iraq that ended last year and has elements of both Iraqi and U.S. internal politics.

Ali Mussa Daqduq was released from prison but is being held under house arrest in Baghdad's heavily-fortified Green Zone as Washington considers bringing U.S. charges against him. Daqduq, a Lebanese citizen, is considered a top threat to Americans in the Middle East and was detained for more than four years by the U.S. military before it left Iraq last December.

In an interview with The Associated Press, Antony J. Blinken, the national security adviser to Vice President Joe Biden, said the U.S. wants to keep Ali Mussa Daqduq locked up for as long as legally possible.

Blinken said the Obama administration also will file a request on behalf of the victims' families for Iraq's highest appeals court to review and correct its June 25 order to free Daqduq. But he said the U.S. asked to extradite Daqduq even before the final court ruling declaring him not guilty.

"The process has not concluded," Blinken said Thursday. "It is still ongoing."

He said the White House has consistently urged Baghdad to use any legal means to prosecute and detain Daqduq "for the crimes he committed on Iraqi soil, including any crimes against U.S. service-members."

"And that has been a constant message," Blinken said.

Abdul-Sattar Bayrkdar, spokesman for Iraq's Supreme Judicial Council said the appeals court ruling is final and there are no charges pending against Daqduq. Ali al-Moussawi, media adviser to Iraqi Prime Minister Nouri al-Maliki, said he was unaware of any U.S. request to extradite Daqduq.

The U.S. believes Daqduq plotted a brazen 2007 raid on a military camp in the holy Iraqi city of Karbala that killed five American soldiers. He is accused of working with Iranian agents to train Shiite militias to target the U.S. military.

Protesters rally to save more than 450 homes in Haiti

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) • About 100 people marched in Haiti's capital Thursday to protest a government plan that threatens to demolish their homes.

The protesters said they won't let authorities destroy their houses even though they sit on the edge of a ravine looming over Port-au-Prince and sometimes crash down the hillside during heavy rains and leave people dead.

"I built my own house, and I'm not going to let anyone come and destroy it," said Jony Juichelle, a 26-year-old protester. "If the government thinks that it's going to destroy my house, they will have to kill me first."

The demonstration was the second in as many weeks since Haitian officials announced the plan to demolish up to 450 homes in the shantytown to make way for a flood-protection project in the ravine.

More than 1,000 people participated in the first protest against the plan, which officials say would provide new land northeast of the capital for homes but for only about 200 people now living in the targeted shantytown.

The steep ravine snakes through one of Haiti's biggest shantytowns and ends in front of an elite private school attended by the children of foreign diplomats and Haitian professionals. Seasonal rains cause the ravine to flood and sweep debris to the school entrance.

Abortion Fight Continues in Mississippi

BY EMILY WAGSTER
PETTUS

Associated Press

JACKSON, Miss. • The owner of Mississippi's only abortion clinic said Thursday she expected legislators to keep trying to put new restrictions on the facility and the procedure, regardless of how a federal judge rules in a fight over a new state law.

"They've made their intent quite clear," Diane Derzis told The Associated Press. "They're going to keep coming back. They're not going to be satisfied until they have driven us out of business. I think everybody can see that."

A new law would require anyone who performs abortions at the clinic to be an OB-GYN with privileges to admit patients to a local hospital. The clinic filed a lawsuit June 27 seeking to stop the law, which it says creates unnecessary bureaucratic hurdles that could drive it out of business.

Judge Daniel P. Jordan III issued a temporary restraining order to block the measure on July 1, the day it was supposed to take effect.

Republican Gov. Phil Bryant said when he signed the bill he wants Mississippi to be "abortion-free." Derzis said Bryant's statement shows lawmakers were trying to eliminate access to a constitutionally protected medical procedure.

The law's sponsor, Republican Sam Mims of McComb, is chairman of the House Public Health Committee. Mims sent the Health Department a letter in late June saying he wanted the department to quickly enforce the law because it was one of his priorities — a letter the clinic cites as an example of political pressure.

6 Tricks to Organic Weed Control

by Shannon Dauphin, All About Lawns Columnist

Here are six ways to move toward more organic weed control in your green lawn maintenance efforts:

1. Use ground covers. Plants that grow wildly and remain low to the ground can choke out the sunlight and nutrients that weeds need to thrive. An added bonus? They can often eliminate the need for mowing, too.

2. Mulch like mad. The use of organic mulch can block sunlight, and thus kill weeds before they have a chance to become a problem. Mulch also keeps your lawn looking neat and tidy.

3. Raise the mower's cutting height. Let your grass grow a bit taller to choke out weeds. A little competition can do your lawn a world of good!

4. Watch out for weeds in compost. Avoid putting weed clippings in your compost pile, but if you must, make certain your compost is completely broken down before spreading it on your lawn or garden. This helps eliminate the possibility of seeds germinating and undoing all your hard work.

5. Give your garden the good news! Newspapers are biodegradable and kind to the environment, while forming a perfect barrier for weeds. Lay newspaper between rows of emerging plants, wet them thoroughly to keep them in the proper place, and then cover the papers with a layer of straw.

6. Pull them. Some weeds can tough it out, despite your best efforts. Every few days, look for those hardy weeds, and simply pull them out of the ground by hand.

THE MARKET AT A GLANCE

Stocks Slide on Wall Street for Sixth Straight Day

NEW YORK (AP) • U.S. stocks slid for a sixth day Thursday as concern spread that weaker global economic growth and the European debt crisis will hurt U.S. corporate earnings. The Dow Jones industrial average and Standard & Poor's 500 index had their longest losing streaks since mid-May. Billionaire investment guru Warren Buffett set a gloomy tone before the market opened, telling CNBC that weak demand is hurting his retail, jewelry, carpet and other businesses. He said business in Europe has dropped off quickly in the past two months.

FDA Plans Database for Identifying Foodborne Germs

WASHINGTON (AP) • The Food and Drug Administration plans to create a database of 100,000 foodborne germs in an effort to speed up the government's response to outbreaks of salmonella, E. coli and other food-related diseases. The five-year effort aims to sequence the genetic code of the most common foodborne germs. With this information, FDA says scientists may be able to create tests that can identify foodborne germs in a matter of days, rather than weeks. Every year about 48 million people in the U.S. get sick from foodborne bacteria. The agency will partner with scientists at the University of California, Davis, The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention and Agilent Technologies Inc., a company that specializes in testing equipment.

FEWER AUTO CLOSINGS REDUCE U.S. UNEMPLOYMENT CLAIMS

BY CHRISTOPHER S. RUGABER AND TOM KRISHER
AP Business Writers

WASHINGTON • The number of people seeking U.S. unemployment benefits plunged last week. But a big reason is that automakers skipped some of their usual summer shutdowns to keep up with demand, causing fewer temporary auto layoffs. Economists expect the number of Americans seeking unemployment aid to go back up in coming weeks. The auto industry's recovery helped support the struggling U.S. economy.

U.S. auto sales in the first half of the year jumped 15 percent over the same period a year ago. Sales of new vehicles surged in June. Automakers also began Independence Day promotions early, lifting sales at the end of the month. The Labor Department adjusts the number of applications for unemployment aid to account for seasonal factors. But it underestimated this summer's drop in temporary shutdowns of auto plants. That distorted the seasonally adjusted data it released Thursday. And that may largely explain why applications for unemployment aid tumbled 26,000 last week to a seasonally adjusted 350,000 — the fewest since March 2008. "Take July with a grain of salt," Jill Brown, an economist at Credit Suisse, said in a note to clients. The auto shutdowns "often cause extreme volatility." Automakers traditionally close their plants in the first two weeks in July to prepare them to build new models, and their employees often file for unemployment benefits. But Ford Motor Co. said in May that it would reduce its usual two-week closing to just one week. And Chrysler canceled the normal two-week shutdowns at three factories. Applications for unemployment benefits measure the pace of layoffs. When they consistently fall below 375,000, it generally suggests that hiring is strong enough to reduce the unemployment rate. The number has fluctuated at or above that level since April. At the same time, hiring has slowed sharply compared with the first three months of the year. Employers added only 80,000 jobs in June, the third straight month of weak hiring. The unemployment rate was stuck at 8.2 percent.

All Eyes on JPMorgan as Banks Report Earnings

NEW YORK (AP) • It's been a scandal-filled few months for banks. JPMorgan Chase revealed a $2 billion trading loss, triggering an investigation by the government and hearings in Congress. Then the large banks were implicated in a global dust-up over interest rate manipulation. All this happened amid signs of a slowdown in the U.S. and Chinese economies and a debt crisis in Europe, which won't help the banks as they report their financial results for April through June. All eyes will be on JPMorgan on Friday, when it becomes the first bank to report. The trading loss rattled the company's stock price and hurt both its reputation and that of CEO Jamie Dimon, who is expected to provide an update. JPMorgan, the country's largest bank, has a conference call with analysts at 7:30 a.m., two hours before the stock market opens. The call usually happens at 9 a.m. The bank also doubled the length of the call, to two hours. Besides its usual presenters, Dimon and chief financial officer Douglas Braunstein, the bank will also have Mike Cavanaugh available to answer questions. Cavanaugh leads a team of senior executives overseeing the loss. Analysts aren't expected to give the company a pass. "We expect a detailed account of what went wrong, what has changed and what is remaining," said Jason Goldberg, a bank analyst at Barclays Capital, a global investment bank. Goldberg, like most investors and analysts, has no idea how deep JPMorgan's loss is. He said it could range from $2 billion to $9 billion. JPMorgan said it lost the money trying to hedge against financial risk. JPMorgan's stock has been pummeled, falling from $40.74 before the announcement of the trading loss on May 10 to about $34.59 on Wednesday. Other bank stocks have also been dragged down because of uncertainty over how Europe is handling its debt crisis, the recession that has gripped some countries there and economic slowdowns in China and India. Those worries have led to fewer corporate deals, such as mergers and acquisitions, which require Wall Street help and provide much-needed fees for the big banks.

A Yahoo sign stands outside the company's offices in Santa Clara, Calif.

Yahoo confirms theft of 450,000 passwords

LONDON (AP) • Some 450,000 Yahoo users' email addresses and passwords were leaked because of a security breach, the company confirmed Thursday, adding that just a small fraction of the stolen passwords were valid. The company said in a statement that an "old file" from the Yahoo Contributor Network was compromised Wednesday. Among the stolen emails and passwords were many from Yahoo's own email service along with those of other companies. The Yahoo Contributor Network is a content-sharing platform. Yahoo said it is fixing the vulnerability that led to the disclosure, changing the passwords of affected Yahoo users, and notifying other companies whose users' accounts may have been compromised. "We apologize to all affected users," the company statement said. Technology news websites including CNET, Ars Technica and Mashable identified the hackers behind the attack as a little-known outfit calling itself the D33D Company. The group was quoted as saying it stole the unencrypted passwords using an SQL injection — the name given to a commonly used attack in which hackers use rogue commands to extract data from vulnerable websites. "We hope that the parties responsible for managing the security of this subdomain will take this as a wake-up call," the group was quoted as saying.

Data Firm: Global Spending on Drugs Slows to 2016

TRENTON, N.J. (AP) • Growth in global spending on medications will slow markedly over the next four years due to a slew of new low-cost generic drugs coming to pharmacies in the U.S. and other developed countries, along with slower increases in what those countries spend on brand-name drugs, according to a new forecast.

That's good news for patients and the employers, labor unions and taxpayer-funded government health programs that help pay for drugs.

During a same period, from 2012 through 2016, the pharmaceutical industry will sharply boost its sales in emerging markets including China, India and Russia, according to the report from data firm IMS Health, which collects and analyzes data on pharmaceutical sales around the world.

The company's latest forecast on global medicine sales and trends predicts total spending will rise from about $956 billion in 2011 to just under $1.2 trillion in 2016, based on reported wholesale drug prices. However, IMS estimates the undisclosed rebates and discounts drug companies give to commercial and government prescription plans, a strategy to win more of their business, reduce the actual cost by about 15 percent. That would put total pharmaceutical spending at about $1 trillion in 2016.

Spending will grow at "historically low levels" in the U.S. and might even decline by a percent in Europe, the report states.

"We're going to see the cost of medicines drop dramatically in the U.S." because of all the new generic drugs, said Michael Kleinrock, head of research development at the IMS Institute for Healthcare Informatics.

This year alone, patent expirations will bring new generic competition in the U.S. for nearly 10 blockbuster drugs with $1 billion or more in global annual sales. Those include Singulair for asthma and allergies, Plavix for stroke prevention, high blood pressure drug Diovan, Lexapro for depression and anxiety, osteoporosis treatment Boniva and two medicines for schizophrenia and other serious psychiatric disorders, Seroquel and Geodon.

More than two dozen other big sellers are set to get generic competition from 2013 through 2016. Over six months or so, the prices for generics usually drop by 80 percent or 90 percent from the brand-name price.

Kleinrock noted that about 80 percent of the prescriptions filled in the U.S. now are generics, and he expects that to hit about 85 percent by 2016.

Groupon's Stock Hits Lowest Level Since IPO

NEW YORK (AP) • June 2011. Groupon's stock hit its lowest level Wednesday since the online deals company went public last November amid concerns about traffic to its website and its exposure to Europe's weak economy.

Internet trends tracker ComScore Inc. said traffic to Groupon declined 15 percent in June from a year earlier. Groupon.com had about 12.2 million unique visitors last month from 14.5 million in

In addition, a Citi Investment Research analyst expressed some concerns about Groupon's exposure to Europe and its weak economy. Mark Mahaney said Groupon gets a quarter of its revenue from Europe. The analyst said that this, along with currency exchange trends, will weigh on the company's chances of beating Wall Street's earnings expectations for the second quarter.

Where History Sounds Like a Fiddle and Looks Like a Quilt

BY BLAIR KOCH
For the Times-News

SHOSHONE • Where can you spend this weekend enjoying fiddlers, fiber arts and artists' wares? At Shoshone Arts in the Park.

The event, begun in 1987, has grown from an arts festival to include a quilt show and fiber fair, the Idaho State Old-Time Fiddlers Championship, the Mannie Shaw Jamboree and more.

Festivities run Saturday and Sunday, with vendors selling handcrafted jewelry, paintings and other artwork on the Lincoln County Courthouse lawn.

Two years ago the Shoshone Chamber of Commerce took over management of the event, and last year it drew some of its largest crowds, chamber President Payson Reese said. "Vendors said it was their best show with 1,500 people walking through the park."

Free fun includes a sidewalk art competition, a petting zoo and other children's activities as well as the Idaho Operation Lifesaver Trolley.

"The trolley will be giving rides for free with an emphasis on safety around trains and the train track," Reese said. "Other activities include historical buggy rides and a walking tour, although those do have a small charge."

The fiddle contest is Saturday, and the Mannie Shaw Jamboree is Sunday.

"The jamboree and fiddle contest is huge because it attracts renowned musicians and it's free," Reese said. "The jamboree is pretty neat because Mannie Shaw originally started it in his front lawn in Fairfield and brought it to Shoshone years ago and it's become an annual tradition."

Music at the jamboree runs the gamut — bluegrass, swing, waltz.

"Of course, it's a fiddle jamboree because Mannie was a fiddle player," said Jenni Jacobson of Twin Falls, a participant and organizer.

"We have about 20 musicians coming to play in the jamboree. A lot of the music will be old-time fiddle music from the late 1880s," Jacobson said. "Some of the traditional tunes include 'Arkansas Traveler' and 'Liberty!'"

Pioneer Picnic Pays Tribute to Fiddling Legend

BY TETONA DUNLAP
tdunlap@magicvalley.com

FAIRFIELD • Ninety-nine years ago you couldn't even sit at the table during the Pioneer Picnic unless you'd lived in the area for at least 25 years.

Rules in Fairfield have changed since then. Now all are welcome. But the one thing that hasn't changed is the appreciation of the pioneer spirit that brought the town into existence.

The 99th annual Camas County Pioneer Picnic is July 15 at the 4-H Park on Fairfield's West Camas Avenue.

This year's Pioneer Picnic will celebrate the life and legacy of the late Mannie Shaw, a Camas County fiddling legend. This year's picnic will particularly welcome back descendants of Shaw.

The picnic begins at 11:30 a.m. with the Old Time Fiddlers performing, followed by lunch at 1 p.m. Roast beef and chicken will be served; just bring your appetite and a salad or dessert to share.

Shaw's grandson Randy Jewett will make a presentation after lunch. Awards will be handed out to the oldest and youngest people in attendance as well as those who traveled the farthest and more.

Pioneer Picnic Association president Nancy Davies said the event drew 125 people last year, and this year they hope to bring in more — especially Shaw descendants.

Even if you have lived in the area for just a few years or have never stepped foot in Camas County, the association welcomes you.

"It celebrates the old and new pioneers to the Fairfield area," Davies said.

If you want to participate in what organizers call the area's peak event, remember to bring a folding chair, as seating is limited.

Art Sale, Children's Workshops Draw Art Lovers to T.F. Park

BY TETONA DUNLAP
tdunlap@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • Art lovers of all ages will find inspiration this weekend in Twin Falls City Park.

The 53rd annual Art in the Park, July 14-15, coincides with the 21st annual Kids Art in the Park, July 14.

"This year we decided to combine the two, so it's a full day of arts in the park," said Carolyn White, program director for Magic Valley Arts Council. "It's fun to collaborate the project and draw, hopefully, a larger crowd."

Art in the Park, with free admission, runs from 9 a.m. to 8 p.m. July 14 and 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. July 15; artists and craftsmen offer their wares in rows of booths. Kids Art in the Park is 9 a.m. to 11:30 a.m. July 14; its visual and performing arts workshops are geared for ages 3-14.

Children's classes on Saturday are open until filled. There is a limit of 120 children for each of three age categories; early registration is past, and the late registration fee is $7 per child. A lunch of hot dogs, soda, fruit and chips is optional for $3. Be sure to stay and listen to the music of the Kids Art in the Park jazz show at 11:30 p.m. Saturday.

Each child may participate in three of the day's art projects, and choices for children in grades K-

7 include painting big sunflowers like Vincent Van Gogh, making a sculpture from recycled materials, creating watercolor flowers and learning how to Zumba dance, for instance. Parents should dress children with mess in mind.

There is also a Happy Hands preschool session for children ages 3-5 who have not completed kindergarten. Each child must be accompanied by an adult to attend the 45-minute session of making cellophane stained glass windows, a burlap texture wall hanging and a giant happy hat. It's limited to 90 preschoolers.

"It's a really fabulous things for the kids,"

Sixteen-year-old Will Gardner of Elko, Nev., front, and Dominic Schmid, 17, of Fruitland jam together Tuesday at Great Basin Jazz Camp in Twin Falls. Campers will present a public concert tonight.

Tonight, Hear Jazz Campers' New Rhythms

BY BLAIR KOCH
For the Times-News

TWIN FALLS • One message sent to the eight saxophone players huddled in a combo session: Playing a rhythm correctly is more important than getting all the notes right.

"We all react to rhythm first," said instructor David Deacon-Joyner, during Tuesday rehearsal at the Great Basin Jazz Camp at College of Southern Idaho. He's a professor of music and director of jazz studies at Pacific Lutheran University at Tacoma, Wash.

The saxophonists — five alto players and three wielding bright golden tenors — stood at rapt attention as Deacon-Joyner explained that when playing in jazz groups they might need to listen for the bass line, instead of a driving drum, for percussive cues.

"This camp meets students where they are. Some are already playing at much higher levels while others don't have much experience with jazz, but all will leave better musicians," Deacon-Joyner told a reporter.

Now in its sixth year, the camp has grown from just a handful of students to more than 50, with teen musicians coming from across the country and from Australia. The camp started Monday and ends today.

Deacon-Joyner said the camp has become top-tier through the use of faculty such as trumpeter Carl Saunders of Los Angeles.

"He's like having the Pope at your prayer convention," Deacon-Joyner said. "If you're at all familiar with the world of jazz you know who he is."

Learning improvisation is one skill that sets a jazz camp apart from other music or vocal camps.

Bass player Beck Perrine, 15, of Middleton said: "I'm having an awesome time learning a lot of chords and how to assemble chords, coming up different arpeggios ... a lot of music theory."

This is Perrine's first time attending the camp but he fits right into the mix of serious students, who each paid about $500 to attend.

"Everyone's a nerd here, so it's awesome," he said.

Campers stay in campus dormitories, eat in the Student Union and hang out with fellow jazz students.

"I've made a lot of new friends,"

White said. Parents of children older than 5 don't need to stick around, as monitors will escort children from class to class. So those parents can check out the more mature side of the park to browse the artists' booths. But both art events are family friendly. At Art in the Park you can view 20 to 30 booths of juried fine art and crafts by local and regional artists, enjoy live music and see community booths providing information and demonstrations. Twin Falls resident Dawn Blair is this year's featured artist and is known for her fantasy landscapes. Blair is also a writer and photographer. Other artists will show their work with jewelry, glasswork, fiber art, puppets, drawings, woodwork, photography and pottery. Art Hoag, program director of the Art Guild of the Magic Valley, said four artists will show work in the foyer of Elevation 486 during Jazz on the Canyon Rim on July 13-14. "There are a number of things going on ... it builds up to better events," Hoag said.

Positive Momentum

The News from St. Luke's

At St. Luke's Magic Valley and St. Luke's Jerome, we're doing great work every day to improve the health of people in our region and enhance communication with our community. I'd like to fill you in on the latest happenings at St. Luke's, from our hospitals to our clinics to our community programs. Here's this month's news:

St. Luke's Jerome

At St. Luke's Jerome, bright, new exterior signs are making it easier for patients and families to find their way. At night, the new signs are lighted for even greater visibility.

We're also improving the patient experience with new patient beds, and plans are underway for a new nurse call light system and interactive TVs in patient rooms.

St. Luke's Magic Valley

We continue to bring more specialist physicians to our community to serve patients close to home. Please welcome three new doctors to St. Luke's medical staff: Dr. Jonathan Hanovell, Dr. Judith Csanky, and Dr. Brian Berk. Dr. Hanovell is an emergency medicine physician, while Dr. Csanky and Dr. Berk are both gastroenterologists, specializing in the diagnosis and treatment of diseases and conditions of the digestive tract.

Do a favor for your heart and soul: We invite you to try out our beautiful walking trail, which winds around St. Luke's Magic Valley. This one-mile path is available not only to our patients, families, and health care team, but to the community at large. It just may be the start of a healthy habit!

Please feel free to contact me at (208) 814-0000 if you have any questions about St. Luke's, or if you have suggestions about how we can best serve our patients, their families, and our communities.

Here's to your best health,

James L. Angle, CEO
St. Luke's Magic Valley and St. Luke's Jerome

Next Generation Expected to Emerge at Wake in the Snake

BY RYAN HOWE
rhowe@magicvalley.com

BURLEY • It's someone else's time to shine.

The 14th annual Wake in the Snake is Saturday at Burley's Golf Course Marina, and this year's competition is wide open. Many past competitors past have gone off to college or otherwise moved on, leaving the door open for the next crop of riders to step up.

The best of the best recently has been Braxton Tomlinson of Mud Lake. He's been Wake in the Snake's outlaw class champion two of the past three years — and it would have been three straight had he not snapped his board in half while landing his first trick last year. But Tomlinson is gone, serving a church mission.

Also, last year's outlaw class winner, Colton Brockbank, won't return to defend his title. It's anybody's competition to win.

"It's going to be a whole different ballgame this year," said Carol Warr, manager of Idaho

Benefit of Doubt Runs up Score on Paterno

There is no benefit of the doubt any longer because, well, because there should no longer be any doubt.

Joe Paterno called his failure to do more to stop Jerry Sandusky's serial child abuse

Jim Litke

Associated Press

"one of the great sorrows of my life." When he made that statement last November, there was an exemplary lifetime's worth of reasons to accept the man at his word, accomplishments piled one atop another that had nothing to do with football and everything to do with the values for which his former players revere Paterno to this day.

Up until Thursday, I believed it still.

JoePa's flaw seemed to be that in this case he did his job and no more.

Instead, Paterno's real sin turns out to be how much he had to do — avert his eyes, hold his nose, bite his lip over and over — while his once-trusted assistant and heir apparent continued victimizing kids in plain sight for a decade and more. Paterno's complicity, his leadership role, really, among the gang of four atop the Penn State administration, leaps off the page time and again in a report prepared for the board of trustees by former FBI director Louis Freeh and released Thursday.

Freeh acknowledged that in instances where investigators couldn't obtain witnesses or original materials, they looked at all the available evidence, applied their experience and judgment and arrived at

PRICE'S IGNORANCE TURNED TO BLISS

The Twin Falls resident thought he was a runner-up, not a surprise winner at USA Cycling mountain bike national championships.

BY DAVID BASHORE
dbashore@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • Steve Price thought he was going to finish second.

As he passed a fellow rider in the late stages of his event in USA Cycling's mountain bike cross-county national championships in Sun Valley on July 5, the Twin Falls resident asked the rider how far ahead the leader was.

No reply. A second query was greeted only with a grunt.

Price had no idea he'd just passed the leader and was going to win the race.

"I heard my name riding up and they announced me as going to win the national championship. I thought, 'They'd better check their scoring,'" said Price, the winner of the Category 3 race for men ages 40-49. "After we finished, the guy I passed said, 'You had no idea I was the leader, did you?' I really thought I was second place, didn't think I'd won at any point on the course.

"They staged the 40-49 year olds and the 50-54 year olds at the same time. Going down the bike path at the start there were a couple guys who screamed right into the lead. ... Turned out the guy that smoked the whole field was in the other division?"

The guy ahead of him was Timothy Harmon of Sun Valley, and they were two of five local riders who won their races last Thursday. The others were Hailey duo Brad Walker (Category 2 Men's 30-34) and Brett Stevenson (Category 2 Women's 30-39) and Ketchum's Miles Fink-Debray (Men's Category 2 19-29).

Other local winners during the weekend's races included Hailey's Sara Schroeder (Women's 19-29 Super D), Sun Valley's Hans Muehlegger (Men's 70-99 Cross Country) and Gabriele Andersen (Women's 60-99 Cross Country), and Ketchum's India Wysong (Women's SS Cross Country) and Muffy Ritz

WILLIAMS EXCITED ABOUT START WITH JAZZ

ASSOCIATED PRESS

SALT LAKE CITY • Any apprehension Marvin Williams had about coming to the Utah Jazz was eased in a conversation with North Carolina coach Roy Williams.

"He thought it would be a new start for me," Marvin Williams said Thursday. "Anytime he feels good about something, it definitely calms my nerves a little."

Marvin Williams won a national championship with the Tar Heels as a freshman in 2005.

The 6-foot-9 small forward was drafted No. 2 overall a few months later, ahead of Deron Williams and Chris Paul.

While Marvin Williams never reached the superstar status of the two point guards, he still believes he has plenty of upside and can make the Jazz better.

"This is a team that's already been established," Marvin Williams said Thursday upon being introduced as the team's newest member. "They made the playoffs last year, so whatever role I have to come in and fill, I want to go out there and do it to the best of my ability."

Fox, Jones Lead 10 to Nationals

ROCK SPRINGS, Wyo. • The National High School Finals Rodeo begins Sunday in Rock Springs, Wyo., with 10 regional cowboys and cowgirls representing the area.

To qualify for the finals, one must have finished in the top five at the state meet, held last month in Pocatello. However, since all participants must pay their own way, the number of actual qualifiers varies from the number of actual participants.

Glenns Ferry is the lone school with two participants. Darby Fox will compete in barrel racing, where she took top honors at state, while Wilder Jones will compete in cow cutting, where he also took home a state title.

Haillie Taylor (Wood River) and Jesse Nelson (Valley) continue their busy summers with another national competition. Both competed at the Silver State International Rodeo in Winnemucca, Nev., last week and both will compete in cow cutting, and shooting trap and bareback riding, respectively.

Jerome's Cole Lickley and Richfield's Pake-os Palmer will partner up again in team roping, with Tanner Nielson (Raft River, tie-down roping), Raeli Prescott (Kimberly, cow cutting), Jaylee Stimpson (Minico, cow cutting) and Coy Surret (Castleford, tie-down roping) rounding out the field of area participants.

The National High School Finals Rodeo, with over 1,500 participants coming from 41 states, five Canadian provinces and Australia, is the world's largest rodeo. In addition to more than $200,000 in prize money, competitors will also be seeking for a piece of $350,000 worth of collegiate scholarships, as well as the chance to be named national champion after the final round of competition on July 21.

Unflappable Wiggins Cements Tour Lead

ASSOCIATED PRESS

LA TOUSSUIRE, France • Try as they might, rivals of Bradley Wiggins can't take his yellow jersey.

The three-time Olympic track champion, looking to become Britain's first Tour de France winner, beat back repeated attacks Thursday in a crucial Alpine stage won by ace French climber Pierre Rolland.

As Stage 11 began, Wiggins' main challengers were planning to unsettle him in the 92-mile ride along three big climbs from the 1992 Winter Olympics town of Albertville to the ski station at La Toussuire.

First, defending champion Cadel Evans took a shot at Wiggins on the longest climb — a tactic some questioned. On the way to the uphill finish, Belgium's Jurgen Van Den Broeck tried, too. Then Vincenzo Nibali did, twice.

Each time, Wiggins steadily, meticulously reeled them in.

Evans petered out early. The 35-year-old Australian was dropped by Wiggins and others who finished nearly a minute behind Rolland. Evans began the day in second place, but finished 1 minute, 26 seconds behind

Bradley Wiggins of Britain, wearing the overall leader's yellow jersey, climbs Croix de Fer pass during the 11th stage of the Tour de France cycling race over 148 kilometers (92 miles) with start in Albertville and finish in La Toussuire, French Alps, Thursday.

Wiggins and fell to fourth overall. He's now 3:19 back.

The Briton also dispensed with Russia's Denis Menchov, who won the Spanish Vuelta twice and the Italian Giro once. He began the day

3:02 back in fifth place but lost more than 13 minutes to Wiggins.

Overall, Wiggins leads Sky teammate Christophe Froome, who rose to second, by 2:05. Nibali is third, 2:23 back. Van Den Broeck is fifth, 4:48 behind.

Wiggins also patched things up with Nibali, who a day earlier hadn't taken kindly to a seeming glare from the Sky leader. As they finished together Thursday, Wiggins gave him a peace-making pat on the back.

The Alpine stage shaped up as a pivotal moment because mountains and time trials tend to determine who wins the Tour. Wiggins' rivals saw it as their chance to strike. He looks unstoppable in the time trials: He won one Monday and another one comes the day before the July 22 finish in Paris. Their last opportunity could await in yet another uphill finish in the Pyrenees next Thursday.

Rolland, a 25-year old Europcar rider, gave his team its second straight stage victory. It was his second in two years following his victory on the fabled Alpe d'Huez in 2011.

The joy of victory contrasted with his "immense pain" weeks earlier. Two days before the Tour start, a French sports daily revealed a previously unknown investigation of his team over allegations of improper use of a controlled substance in the 2011 Tour. The team denies the claim.

But fans in Belgium — where the race began June 30 — jeered at some Europcar riders, and Rolland said he was spit on.

"The evening after the prologue I was really down," he said. "I told myself: 'If that's what the Tour is all about, I'd rather go home.'" He said the fans' reaction at home in France has been more charitable.

Seau's Brain Tissue Donated for Research

ASSOCIATED PRESS

SAN DIEGO • Junior Seau's family has donated some of his brain tissue for research amid questions about whether damage from his football career contributed to his decision to commit suicide, officials said Thursday.

The San Diego County medical examiner's office recently released preserved brain tissue to the National Institutes of Health, coroner's spokeswoman Sarah Gordon said.

"We have no information about the type of study that will be done," she said.

The tissue was released at the request of Seau's family, she added. She declined to disclose whether Seau's entire brain was released.

The 43-year-old former NFL linebacker shot himself in the chest at his Oceanside home in May, less than 2 1/2 years after ending his Pro Bowl career.

Seau's death echoed last year's suicide of former Chicago Bears defensive back Dave Duerson. Duerson left a note asking for his brain to be studied for signs of brain trauma. That raised anew questions about whether brain damage from repeated concussions on the field lead to long-term problems such as depression. To date, however, no link has been found between Seau's death and his football days. Although is death was ruled a suicide, a final autopsy report and results of drug-screening tests are pending.

BSU's Kellogg Named to Outland Watch List

TIMES-NEWS

BOISE • Boise State offensive lineman Joe Kellogg was named Thursday to the pre-season watch list for the Outland Trophy, awarded to the nation's best interior lineman.

Kellogg has started in each of the past three seasons for the Broncos, helping them finish in the top three nationally in sacks allowed in each of the past two seasons and top five in scoring offense in each of the last three.

Seventy-one athletes were named to the watch list, three of them from the Mountain West. Kellogg is the first Boise State player to be named to a watch list this season.

Miley Slips Down Callaway Standings

SAN DIEGO • Twin Falls senior-to-be Kyle Miley slumped on Thursday, shooting an 81 to tumble down the standings at the Callaway Junior World Golf Championships at Torrey Pines Golf Course.

Miley was 6-over through five holes in his third round, rallying to shoot even on the back nine to limit the damage. He sits tied for 74th ahead of today's final round.

T.F.'s Donaldson Commits to George Fox

TWIN FALLS • Marcus Donaldson may have graduated high school, but he'll still be a Bruin.

The former Twin Falls baseball player has committed to play collegiately at George Fox University.

Donaldson batted .440 with a team-high 34 RBI this season for Twin Falls, which finished fourth at the Class 4A state tournament in Nampa.

George Fox is a NCAA Division III school in Newberg, Ore.

(Women's 55-59 Cross Country). Ketchum native Georgia Gould, of Fort Collins, Colo., won the women's pro cross-country race.

Price qualified for his event through a racing series in Arizona — he's been in Phoenix for work most of this year. Those races were around 12 to 15 miles long, but the Category 3 course last week was around 20.5 miles with two killer climbs.

He got through the first couple of miles in good positions, then made his moves by knowing his limitations on the two climbs.

"When we started climbing, the top four guys just started hammering. I was looking at my heart rate monitor and I know what I can sustain and I knew I'd blow up if I tried to go with them," said Price, 41, who finished the course in 1 hour, 55 minutes. "Turned out those guys blew up. They couldn't sustain the pace they were heading up that hill."

Categories 1, 2 and 3 are classed as amateur races, Price said. There are some semi-professionals that hold down "regular" jobs and don't try to accumulate series points at every open to them, sponsors, and all that. 98 percent of the amateurs are self-funded. You may get some deals with guys that have bike shops and race teams, but you're not getting a free bike, or anything like that," Price said. "They had really nice medals and all that for nationals. In the Arizona state championships, you get gift certificates to bike shops and things like that. It's a perpetual black hole. It costs more in the entry fees and transportation costs than you're ever going to win."

Registration is $60 and check-in for riders is at 7:30 a.m., followed by a mandatory riders' meeting at 8:30. Competition begins at 9 a.m.

For the ninth consecutive year, Idaho Water Sports will bring in Ryan Shimabukuro of Salt Lake City to serve as head judge. Shimabukuro has judged pro and amateur wakeboard tournaments since 1999, including prestigious events such as the Gravity Games, Pro Wakeboard Tour, Malibu Open, USA Nationals and Collegiate Nationals.

The competition draws top competitors from all over Idaho and Utah. About 30-50 riders are expected to pull out their high-flying bag of tricks. It is open to all ages and abilities, as riders are divided into classes: outlaw, advanced, intermediate, novice, groom (9 and under) and women.

North Korean Recalls 'Ping Pong Diplomacy'

ASSOCIATED PRESS

PYONGYANG, North Korea • Her eyes well up when Li Pun Hui recalls her role in a historic example of "ping pong diplomacy."

In 1991, the North Korean table tennis star paired with her archrival, South Korea's Hyun Jung-hwa, as part of the first "unified Korea" team to march into international competition wearing the blue flag of the Korean Peninsula. With relations between the foes at a low point, the episode is not about to be repeated at the London Olympics. But Li and Hyun fondly recall how they met as enemies and parted as friends, and champions.

"For 50 days, 24 hours a day, we lived together as one, trained together, slept in the same room and ate all our meals together," Li told The Associated Press at an interview in Pyongyang. "We shared the same food — and our feelings."

As separate squads, neither of the Koreas had been able to beat the team they called the "Great Wall" of table tennis: China, winner of eight consecutive women's world team titles leading up to that year's championships in Chiba, Japan. But Hyun, a 20-year-old from the southern port city of Busan, and the baby-faced 22-year-old Li teamed to help the Koreas finally break China's streak and clinch the gold medal.

The recent South Korean film "As One" reconstructs the complex bid to field a united team of players from both sides of the world's most heavily militarized border. It was just four years after North Korean agents blew up a South Korean airliner, killing all 115 people on board.

At first, the players regarded one another suspiciously. Their countries had fought against one another for three years in the 1950s, and the Korean Peninsula has remained in a state of war since a truce was signed in 1953. In the film, trash talking at a team banquet leads to a brawl.

"Did you see their faces?" one South Korean athlete says in the film. "So morbid."

In a telephone interview with AP, Hyun recalled her dismay when she learned she would be playing doubles with Li, whom she considered a notch lower in skill.

"I was too young to understand how symbolic it was," she said.

Both players were fiercely competitive. Getting past their rivalry, as well the cultural clashes, took time. The film contrasts the rigid orderliness of the North Koreans with the constant horse-play among the southerners.

Then, one day, Li missed practice, debilitated by hepatitis.

"My heart ached," Hyun said. "Aside from the rivalry between us and between our countries, I started hoping Li would get better and do well for her country."

Against all odds, friendships blossomed. The once-reluctant teammates together sang ballads that predated the peninsula's division. Their coaches bonded in a marathon drinking session. Stiff handshakes became high fives.

Li and Hyun developed a profound respect and affection for one another. They became confidantes as well as teammates, and their performances were crucial in helping the unified team win the women's title.

Bad News Day For London Olympics

ASSOCIATED PRESS

LONDON • With the Olympics just two weeks away, embarrassing logistical problems about security, staff, phones and traffic made the mood Thursday in London as gloomy as the weather.

British lawmakers clamored for an explanation of why the armed forces need to field more troops to protect the games, eclipsing the day that U.S. track star Michael Johnson held the Olympic flame aloft at sunrise at the ancient monument at Stonehenge.

London's aging infrastructure kept offering up unpleasant surprises as the main road near Heathrow Airport remained closed following emergency repairs. The British mobile phone company O2, meanwhile, acknowledged that thousands of customers had been affected by outages on its network — a bad omen ahead of the first iPhone games.

And then there was the weather. Rain on and off and on again.

London's Hyde Park — the site of outdoor concerts and other live events — has trucked in piles of wood chips to cover a muddy quagmire after the wettest June on record. Someone apparently decided that recreating Woodstock wasn't very Olympic-friendly.

Here's a look at the tsunami of bad news.

BRING ON THE TROOPS: British Home Secretary Theresa May confirmed that the government will deploy an additional 3,500 servicemen at the London Olympics amid concerns that a private security contractor had failed to recruit enough staff. The firm G4S had been enlisted to provide the bulk of the 13,200 private security guards across 100 Olympic venues.

British lawmakers questioned why the apparent gap in security had surfaced so late.

"G4S have let the country down and we have literally had to send in the troops," said opposition Labour Party lawmaker Keith Vaz, demanding to know when the issue was first identified and if G4S — which has millions in contracts from the British government — will suffer any financial penalties.

The move brings the total number of armed forces staff at the games to 17,000, dwarfing the 9,500 troops Britain has in Afghanistan.

The massive Olympic security operation also will feature 12,000 police, 3,000 volunteers, Typhoon fighter jets, helicopters, two warships and bomb disposal experts.

WELCOME TO BRITAIN: THE LINE FORMS HERE: The British media has been full of bad news lately about the queue, that long line at passport control while entering the island nation.

Those lines have been blamed on everything from airline schedules to too much wind, but everyone is looking for a way to bring the wait down. More people than ever used London's Heathrow Airport last year — nearly 70 million passengers — straining its traditional immigration desks.

A report from John Vine, the independent chief inspector of borders and immigration, warned that border staff with only basic training and little immigration experience were being used to cut the length of the queues.

But the Home Office insists help is on the way. Starting this weekend, 500 more people will be manning those desks.

WILL YOU BE ABLE TO GET THERE FROM HERE?: London's aging transport network continued to befuddle planners who have been working — some for years — to get the city spruced up for the games and for the hundreds of thousands of tourists expected.

The main road linking Heathrow to London and Olympic Park remained closed. The Highways Agency said repairs had reached a critical stage and would continue on a damaged overpass least until the weekend.

Saudis to Send Two Women to Olympics

ASSOCIATED PRESS

LONDON • Every country competing at the London Games will include female athletes for the first time in Olympic history after Saudi Arabia agreed Thursday to send two women to compete in judo and track and field.

The move by the ultraconservative Muslim kingdom to break with its practice of fielding male-only teams followed decisions by Qatar and Brunei to send women athletes to the Olympics for the first time.

"With Saudi Arabian female athletes now joining their fellow female competitors from Qatar and Brunei, it means that by London 2012 every national Olympic committee will have sent women to the Olympic Games," IOC President Jacques Rogge said.

Saudi Arabia had been under intense pressure from the International Olympic Committee and human-rights groups to include female athletes. The announcement Thursday followed months of IOC negotiations with the Saudis to bring women to London.

The two female Saudi competitors are Wodjan Ali Seraj Abdulrahim Shahrkhani in judo and 800-meter runner Sarah Attar.

"A big inspiration for participating in the Olympic Games is being one of the first women for Saudi Arabia to be going," the 17-year-old Attar said in an IOC video from her U.S. training base in San Diego. "It's such a huge honor and I hope that it can really make some big strides for women over there to get more involved in sport."

Attar, who has spent most of her life outside of Saudi Arabia, said she hopes her inclusion will encourage women in the conservative kingdom that does not allow women to vote, drive or participate in sports.

"To any woman who wants to participate, I say 'go for it,' and don't let anybody hold you back," Attar said in the video after running a lap on the track wearing pants and a headscarf.

Lawmakers Fume Over Olympians' Uniforms

ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON • Uniforms for U.S. Olympic athletes are American red, white and blue — but made in China. That has members of Congress fuming.

Republicans and Democrats railed Thursday about the U.S. Olympic Committee's decision to dress the U.S. team in Chinese manufactured berets, blazers and pants while the American textile industry struggles economically with many U.S. workers desperate for jobs.

"I am so upset. I think the Olympic committee should be ashamed of themselves. I think they should be embarrassed. I think they should take all the uniforms, put them in a big pile and burn them and start all over again," Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid, D-Nev., told reporters at a Capitol Hill news conference on taxes.

"If they have to wear nothing but a singlet that says USA on it, painted by hand, then that's what they should wear," he said, referring to an athletic jersey.

House Democratic Leader Nancy Pelosi told reporters at her weekly news conference that she's proud of the nation's Olympic athletes, but "they should be wearing uniforms that are made in America."

House Speaker John Boehner, R-Ohio, said simply of the USOC, "You'd think they'd know better."

In a statement, the U.S. Olympic Committee defended the choice of designer Ralph Lauren for the clothing at the London Games, which begin later this month.

"Unlike most Olympic teams around the world, the U.S. Olympic Team is privately funded and we're grateful for the support of our sponsors," USOC spokesman Patrick Sandusky said in a statement. "We're proud of our partnership with Ralph Lauren, an iconic American company, and excited to watch America's finest athletes compete at the upcoming Games in London."

Riley Keeps Getting Talent on the Cheap

ASSOCIATED PRESS

MIAMI • Upon hearing the news that Ray Allen had decided to take less money and join the Miami Heat, reigning NBA MVP LeBron James sounded less than surprised.

He knew who closed the deal.

“Pat done it again,” James said that night.

Sure enough, Pat Riley had done it again — gotten someone the Heat coveted at a discount price.

Whether it’s the lure of no state taxes, the South Florida weather, the chance to play alongside a trio of stars like James, Dwyane Wade and Chris Bosh or some combination thereof, Riley and the Heat have figured out a way to get who they want and fit them into some pretty stringent salary parameters. The plan delivered the 2012 NBA title, and now with a sharpshooter like Allen taking essentially a half-price offer, the Heat could be heavy favorites to repeat next season.

“I just mention LeBron and Chris and Dwyane,” Riley said, addressing his recruiting style. “And then we take it from there.”

It’s a bit more detailed than that.

The Hall of Fame coach is showing he’s a master executive as well.

“He understands players and he’s a winner,” Heat guard James Jones said. “And the guys he targets are winners.”

James, Wade, Bosh, Udonis Haslem and Mike Miller signed deals worth roughly $70 million less than they could have gotten elsewhere two summers ago. Shane Battier took a discount last year, and now Allen has done the same — taking $3 million from Miami for next season as opposed to $6 million to stay in Boston. Allen’s previous contracts added up to about $175 million in salary anyway, which surely cushioned his choice to leave $3 million on the table now.

By now, Riley getting deals like this done has almost become expected.

“Enthusiasm is contagious, and Coach Riley (is) a carrier,” agent Arn Tellem wrote on his blog in 2010, when Miller — his client — sacrificed some dollars to have a chance to be part of Miami’s championship chase. “Had he not become coach of the Heat, he could have made millions by opening a chain of tanning salons in the Sunshine State. He’s that good. Pat had a vision for the team, a vision that he laid out with evangelical fervor. We left the room converted.”

Riley doesn’t have one sales pitch.

There was the infamous story from 2010, when Riley put his seven championship rings in a bag and dropped it

ASSOCIATED PRESS

before James, letting the clinking of the jewelry be a selling point for the title-starved superstar. (“Pretty cool,” James said.) He’s been known to make videos for free agents that he’s wooing. With Allen, they talked about books — Riley gave him one — and discussed some quotes that Riley thought Allen would find inspiring.

Michael Jordan tells the Associated Press that he laughed when heard Kobe Bryant said this year’s USA Olympic basketball team could beat the Dream Team that Jordan played on. “We had 11 Hall of Famers on that team. Whenever they get 11 Hall of Famers you call and ask me.”

Jordan Laughs off Kobe’s Suggestion

ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHARLOTTE, N.C. •

Michael Jordan said there’s no way Kobe Bryant and this year’s USA Olympic basketball team could’ve beaten the 1992 Dream Team.

Jordan told The Associated Press Thursday that he laughed — “I absolutely laughed” — when hearing Bryant’s comments that the squad training in Las Vegas could take Jordan and company.

Jordan said there’s “no comparison” which team is better.

“For him to compare those two teams is not one of the smarter things he ever could have done,” Jordan said prior playing in a celebrity golf tournament in Charlotte.

Jordan said the 1992 team, which included 11 future Hall of Famers and won its six Olympic games by an average of more than 43 points en route to capturing the gold medal, was a better overall team largely because of the experience it put on the floor.

“I heard Kobe say we were not athletic,” said a smiling Jordan as he sat in a golf cart puffing on his cigar while waiting to tee off. “But we were smart. He said we were too old, but I was 29 and in the prime of my career. Pip (Scottie Pippen) was 26 or 27, (Charles) Barkley was 29, Patrick (Ewing) was 29 and Chris Mullin was 29. Almost everybody was still in their twenties.”

Jordan’s response came after Bryant told reporters in Las Vegas that this year’s team could pull out a win against the Dream Team if they faced each other in their primes. Bryant said this year’s team has a bunch of racehorses, players who are incredibly athletic while the Dream Team consisted mainly of players at the tail end of their careers.

Bryant’s comments received immediate and sharp rebuttal from some members of the Dream Team, including Barkley.

Jordan joined in on Thursday.

“Most of us were in the prime of our careers, at a point where athleticism doesn’t really matter,” said Jordan, the owner of the Charlotte Bobcats. “You have to know how to play the game.”

Jordan shook his head when asked why he thinks Bryant made the comments.

“I imagine he’s trying to say it to legitimize his own Dream Team,” Jordan said. “But to me it’s not even a question what team is better.”

DURANT SCORES 24, U.S. HOOPS WINS EXHIBITION

LAS VEGAS • Kevin Durant picked up where he left off in international competition, scoring 24 points and grabbing 10 rebounds to lead the U.S. Olympic basketball team to a 113-59 victory over the Dominican Republic on Thursday night in an exhibition game.

The MVP of the world basketball championship two years ago, Durant came off the bench to shoot 9 of 11 from the field, making 5 of 6 3-pointers in 22 minutes.

Andre Iguodala added 18 points and Carmelo Anthony had 13 for the Americans, who were without All-Star forward Blake Griffin. He returned to Los Angeles for evaluation Thursday after experiencing discomfort following practice Wednesday in his left knee, the same one that bothered him in the playoffs.

The Los Angeles Times reported Thursday night that Griffin suffered a torn medial collateral ligament, meaning Griffin will miss the Olympics.

Alternate Anthony Davis took his place and was in uniform against his college coach, John Calipari of national champion Kentucky. But Calipari was the on the wrong end of the talent mismatch in this one, calling a few timeouts but probably knowing there was no strategy to stop the onslaught of U.S. fast breaks.

Davis, the national player of the year as a freshman and No. 1 pick in the NBA draft, had been unable to make the 12-man roster after being unable to scrimmage before it was selected while recovering from a sprained ankle. But USA Basketball leadership believes his rebounding and shot blocking could be a good addition to an undersized team in case of an injury, and he scored nine points in 10 fourth-quarter minutes.

Al Horford of the Atlanta Hawks shot 1 of 12 and had seven points and the Dominicans’ other NBA player, Francisco Garcia, missed all three attempts.

LeBron James and Kobe Bryant both had limited duty, playing less than 20 minutes and combining for 11 points.

Marvin Williams was acquired last week in a trade that sent Jazz point guard Devin Harris to the Atlanta Hawks. The deal was formally announced Wednesday when a league-wide moratorium on player signings was lifted. Utah also acquired point guard Mo Williams in a four-team trade last week.

Marvin Williams said he has yet to talk extensively with coaches about their plans for him, but he could step into a starting small forward role if Gordon Hayward moves to shooting guard as expected.

Marvin Williams acknowledged Thursday he was a bit surprised at being traded, but had no major apprehension about coming to Utah — other than having to buy some new clothes to deal with the harsh winters.

The eighth-year pro said he already knows the team will compete hard, as evidenced by a four-overtime thriller the two clubs played in Atlanta last season.

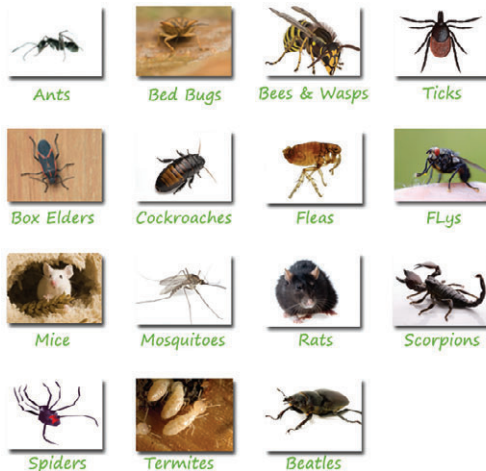

“I get tired just rethinking it ... four overtimes,” he said. “It was by far the longest game I ever played in ...”

PIRATES RIDING POWER OF 'Z' TO FIRST PLACE

ASSOCIATED PRESS

PITTSBURGH • Forget about Andrew McCutchen's MVP-caliber season. Or the emergence of ace-in-training James McDonald. Or the calming presence of playoff-tested veterans A.J. Burnett and Rod Barajas.

Want to know the Pittsburgh Pirates' secret behind their rise to first in the National League Central?

It's all about the Zoltan.

It started the way most of these things start, in a bored clubhouse in the meandering hours before first pitch. A group of players were watching the 2000 movie "Dude, Where's My Car?" — considered the "Citizen Kane" of "pair of slackers lose car/hi-jinks ensue" comedies — before a game in Atlanta in April when second baseman Neil Walker started goofing off by making a "Z" symbol.

The sign — left hand facing out, thumb down, right hand facing in, thumb up — is a tribute to the character Zoltan, an alien whose followers wear bubble wrap jump suits.

No, seriously.

Walker started flashing it whenever the Pirates made an impact play. It really took off, however, when Barajas smacked a two-run, walk-off homer against Washington in May. When Barajas crossed home plate, the entire team made the "Z" sign in tribute.

Over the last two months, it's taken on a life of its own. Zoltan t-shirts have become a fixture at PNC Park (where the Pirates have put together the best home record in baseball) and people have taken to flashing the "Z" to manager Clint Hurdle when he's out on a grocery run.

"We Are Family" — the disco anthem the Pirates turned into a touchstone while winning the 1979 World Series — is it not. Though Hurdle hardly cares.

"I think that's just the men taking ownership of what they're doing and having some fun with it," he said.

No wonder some fans are saying "Dude, Where's My Pirates?"

The same franchise that carries an ignominious streak of 19 consecutive losing seasons is 11 games over .500 (48-37) for the first time since the Pirates last made the playoffs in 1992. McCutchen is greeted by chants of "MVP! MVP!" every time he steps to the plate at the suddenly packed home ballpark and the pitching staff has been lights out.

The Pirates flirted with first place last July before crumbling under the weight of heightened expectations and a series of injuries that gutted a fragile offense. It was a painful lesson to learn, but one Hurdle believes will pay off during the dog days to come as Pittsburgh tries to make an extended run atop a watered-down NL Central.

"I think the confidence level is a lot higher than it was last year," pitcher Kevin Correia said. "I think last year we were in it, but I don't think people were taking it seriously, even ourselves a little bit, not knowing how long this thing was going to last. Now, we feel we're as good or better than the teams we're playing right now."

And the Pirates are playing like it. Pittsburgh has the NL's best record over the last two months as an offense that slogged through the spring has awakened behind McCutchen. The All-Star center fielder didn't hit his first homer of the season until May 8. Now he's got 18, fourth-best in the NL.

ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Pirates' Rod Barajas, top, is greeted by teammates as he gestures with the sign of Zoltan after hitting a two-run home run against Washington in May in a 5-4 victory. The power of Zoltan craze, based on a fringe character in the 2000 comedy 'Dude, Where's My Car?' has found a life of its own in Pittsburgh where the Pirates are in first place at the All-Star break for the first time in 15 years.

Phillies Headed From Best to Worst

ASSOCIATED PRESS

PHILADELPHIA • For nearly three months, the battle cry surrounding the Philadelphia Phillies was this: Just wait until Chase Utley and Ryan Howard are back.

Well, they're here and the Phillies can't win with them.

They've lost 10 of 11 since Utley, the five-time All-Star second baseman, made his season debut on June 27. They lost three straight games after Howard, the former NL MVP, returned last weekend.

The five-time defending NL East champions limped into the All-Star break at 37-50 after setting a franchise-record with 102 wins last year. They're on pace to become the first team in major league history to lose 90 games the season after winning 100.

When the second half resumes Friday, the Phillies will face a monumental challenge if they are to extend their postseason streak to six years. They are 14 games behind first-place Washington and trail Atlanta by 10 games for the second wild-card spot.

After having the best record in the majors in each of the last two seasons, the Phillies have the fifth-worst mark in the NL this year.

Manager Charlie Manuel has run out of explanations.

"The way we play, it's not good enough to win and we don't win because we don't play good enough," Manuel said before the All-Star break. "We have trouble playing the games completely. We get outplayed and that's what happens."

Injuries have clearly been a major part of the problem for the Phillies. They went nearly three months without their Nos. 3-4 hitters in the lineup, and ace Roy Halladay hasn't pitched since May.

Despite their record since Utley and Howard returned, missing the two sluggers hurt the offense. The Phillies were 9-16 in one-run games that Howard and Utley didn't start. Flip that around and the Phillies would be 44-43 and right in the mix.

Losing Halladay forced Kyle Kendrick to stay in the rotation. He's 2-8, including 1-4 since Halladay went down.

But the Phillies can't blame their disastrous first half on injuries alone. Several key players have underperformed. Cliff Lee didn't get his first win until July 4. Shane Victorino is hitting .245. Jimmy Rollins is at .256. Hunter Pence, despite solid overall numbers, has a .226 average with runners in scoring position.

The bullpen, except for All-Star closer Jonathan Papelbon, has been abysmal. The other relievers combined are 6-12 with a 5.01 ERA.

Add in sloppy defense, mental lapses, baserunning miscues, and poor execution of fundamentals.

SILVIS, ILL. • Troy Matteson scored 10 birdies Thursday en route to a bogey-free round of 10-under 61 for a three-stroke lead after one round of the John Deere Classic.

Matteson, a two-time winner on the PGA Tour, birdied five holes on each nine of the TPC Deere Run to surpass the 7-under 64 of second place Ricky Barnes. Matteson started by making birdies on three of his first four holes and finished with birdies on four of his first five.

He nearly holed out from a bunker on the par-4 ninth for a 60, but settled for par.

Barnes, out in the second group of the day, birdied all three par-5s and two of the four par-3s to pace the morning half of the field.

Robert Garrigus, among a group tied for third at 6-under 65, eagled the par-5 17th by hooking a 270-yard second shot around a tree to set up a 30-foot eagle putt.

Steve Stricker, chasing a fourth straight victory in the Deere, shot a 65 punctuated by an 80-yard wedge for an eagle 2 on the par-4 14th.

U.S. SENIOR OPEN LAKE ORION, Mich. • Tom Kite set a U.S. Senior Open record with a 28 on the front nine at Indianwood and finished a 5-under 65.

Corey Pavin's sixth birdie on his 17th hole pulled him into a tie atop the leaderboard, but a penalty pushed him back to the pack after completing his first round.

Pavin hit a chip after his ball moved back a fraction of an inch when he grounded his club on his 14th hole and that later cost him two strokes.

That setback put Bernhard Langer and Lance Ten Broeck in second place, one shot behind Kite. It pushed Pavin into a five-way tie for fourth with Fred Funk, Jeff Sluman, Tom Pernice Jr. and Mikael Hogberg at 3-under 67.

SCOTTISH OPEN INVERNESS, Scotland • Francesco Molinari tied the best round in this event's 40-year history, shooting a 10-under 62 to take a two-shot lead into the second day of the British Open warmup tournament.

The Italian rolled in 10 birdies in his first 15 holes in calm early conditions on the Castle Stuart links course, but missed out a chance to shoot the first 59 on the European Tour by finishing with three straight pars.

Top-ranked Luke Donald looked set to finish close behind Molinari until he bogeyed two of his last five holes for a 67. Alejandro Canizares of Spain was second after a 64, with Soren Kjeldsen of Denmark and Raphael Jacquelin of France another shot behind.

Phil Mickelson had a 73 on a day he was supposed to be at the Vatican with his wife and daughter. He cut short his vacation to get more practice ahead of the British Open.

Hunter-Reay Carrying the American Flag in IndyCar

ASSOCIATED PRESS

When Ryan Hunter-Reay picked up his third consecutive win last week, it pushed him into the lead of the IndyCar points standings for the first time in his career.

It also marked the first time an American has led the points since Sam Hornish Jr. in 2006, and many believe drivers draped in red, white and blue is what IndyCar needs to flourish.

"It certainly does need successful Americans because it's an American series that competes mostly in the U.S.," said Hornish, who left IndyCar after the 2007 season for NASCAR. "I like watching IndyCar races, the racing has been really good this year, and it's great that Ryan has been able to do what he's done. It's nice to see American drivers succeed."

It was league founder Tony George's intent to create a series for American drivers when he broke away from CART in 1996. Americans dominated through 2002, but since then Hornish's 2006 championship is the last title for a U.S.-born driver.

The other championships went to Scott Dixon (2003, 2008) of New Zealand, Tony Kanaan of Brazil (2004), the late Dan Wheldon of England (2005) and Scotland's Dario Franchitti (2007, 2009-11).

Why? Hunter-Reay has a theory.

"For a little while, there was a lack of American talent," he said. "There was far less American talent than there is now. You had myself, Graham (Rahal) and Marco (Andretti). Certainly we have more numbers this year, and more Americans a little farther along in their careers."

The series boasts seven full-time American drivers this season, the most since 2007. Among them are Andretti and Rahal, the sons of racing royalty, and youngsters JR Hildebrand and Charlie Kimball, who both deferred college to pursue IndyCar careers. Josef Newgarden, a 21-year-old rookie from Nashville, Tenn., has shown flashes of promise this season, and Ed Carpenter of Indiana is the only owner/driver in the series.

Hunter-Reay is the veteran, and he is finally hitting his stride in his ninth season at open-wheel's highest level.

His three wins this year are a career best, and it has doubled his win total in IndyCar. He has also led a 1-2 American finish in the last two races, leading teammate Andretti across the finish line at Iowa, and beating Kimball on Sunday at Toronto.

Prior to the Iowa race, Americans hadn't finished 1-2 in the series since the 2006 Indy 500 when Hornish defeated Andretti.

Michael Andretti, owner of the Andretti Autosport organization that fields cars for Hunter-Reay, Marco Andretti and Canadian James Hinchcliffe, believes the lack of proper development has slowed American drivers.

Michael Andretti fields teams in all three IndyCar ladder systems.

"The farm system, frankly, hasn't been great," he said. "We haven't had a real good one for a long time, and now we are finally starting to see more Americans coming along and see the fruits of that labor."

Paterno's Legacy Likely Damaged Beyond Repair

BY NANCY ARMOUR
Associated Press

For decades Penn State was considered special, immune from the corruption of college athletics by virtue of Joe Paterno's high ideals, long list of victories and even longer list of graduates.

Now, to many people outside Penn State and even some insiders, that's been exposed as an illusion.

A blistering report released Thursday found Paterno helped hush up allegations of child sex abuse against a former assistant that went back more than a decade, sacrificing the ideals he preached to protect his football program. Paterno, former FBI Director Louis Freeh said, was "an integral part of this active decision to conceal."

"I doubt anybody could have imagined this. In eight months, he's gone from St. Joe to something approaching the devil," said Frank Fitzpatrick, a Philadelphia Inquirer columnist and author of two books on Paterno and Penn State, including a biography last year, "Pride of the Lions."

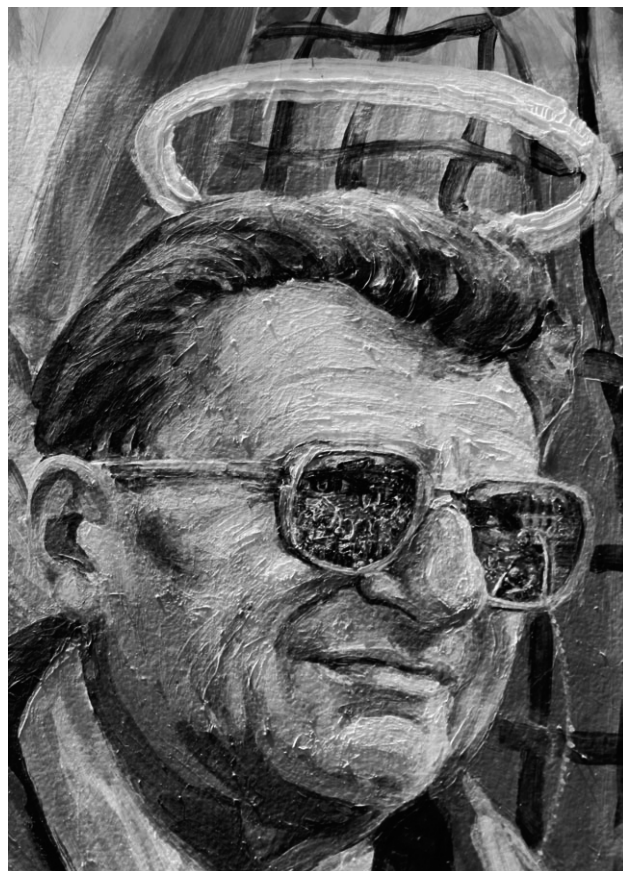

"The contrast between the ethical standards we always associated with Joe and the complete lack of them in how this was handled — if what the Freeh Report says is true, and I have no reason to doubt it is, to sacrifice kids for the reputation of a football program, that's pretty despicable. I can't imagine anything more shocking than that."

Nike announced it was stripping Paterno's name

"Despite their knowledge of the criminal investigation of Sandusky, Spanier, Schultz, Paterno and Curley took no action to limit Sandusky's access to Penn State facilities or took any measures to protect children on their campuses."

This painting of former Penn State head football coach Joe Paterno, on a mural by artists Michael Pilato and Yury Karabash, might need some changes after a 267-page report that concluded that Paterno and other top Penn State officials hushed up child sex abuse allegation against Jerry Sandusky more than a decade ago for fear of bad publicity, allowing Sandusky to prey on other youngsters.

clamor online to remove Paterno's statue outside Beaver Stadium, and USA Today columnist Christine Brennan called on Penn State to drop football for at least a year until the university has addressed the failings that led to the scandal.

There could still be more fallout from court cases — criminal charges against two administrators, civil suits from victims of Jerry Sandusky — and the NCAA has yet to decide whether it will weigh in on the scandal or not.

"A statue should be least of someone's worries at this point," Penn State's former star linebacker LaVar Arrington said on his radio show in Washington, D.C. "A name on a building should be the least of someone's worries."

"On the one hand, Joe messed up. Joe was not perfect, Joe was not God. Joe was a person, and he messed up. ... On the other hand, if you're looking at everything Joe has done and all the lives he's impacted and all the things he's done ... that still remains as well. So how do you separate the two? I don't know. I don't have the answer for that one, I really don't."

Until last fall, Paterno symbolized all that was right about college sports. His teams won, but he didn't sacrifice his standards to do it. Penn State's graduation rates

"The most sad- dening finding by the Special Investigative Counsel is the total and consistent disregard by the most senior leaders at Penn State for the safety and welfare of Sandusky's victims."

Penn State Report

were impeccable, his players were as good off the field as they were on, and his financial support of the university often had nothing to do with the football program.

Even after the November arrest of Sandusky, the architect of Penn State's ferocious defenses and Paterno's one-time heir apparent, many were hesitant to put too much blame on Paterno or let his one failing outweigh all his good deeds. Paterno acknowledged before his January death that he should have done more after a then-graduate assistant told the Hall of Fame coach he'd seen Sandusky assaulting a child in the Penn State showers in 2001, but insisted he had no knowledge of any accusations prior to that.

Spanier, Schultz, Paterno and Curley "repeatedly concealed critical facts" about Sandusky's abuse from authorities and others "in order to avoid the consequences of bad publicity..."

Penn State Report

"I have touched base with the coach," Curley informed his colleagues. "Keep us posted. Thanks."

The next three pages contain several more e-mail requests from Curley for an update: "Coach is anxious to know where it stands," he wrote.

It takes another 120 pages or so to complete Paterno's transformation from interested observer to willful, out-of-touch tyrant. That moment, too, is revealed in another of Curley's e-mails, this one in 2001, after assistant coach Mike McQueary witnessed Sandusky and a boy naked in a shower at the football complex and told Paterno at his home the following morning.

The coach listens to the report and did as he was required, eventually notifying his superior. Paterno passed the immediate legal test, but not the ethical one. Worse, he would maintain until his death that his involvement ended there. In truth, it only deepened.

Soon after the incident, Curley, Schultz and Spanier decided to go ahead and report Sandusky to the state Department of Child Welfare, then abruptly abandoned the plan. Curley said in an e-mail that his change of heart came about "after giving it more thought and talking it over with Joe."

Paterno could be as persuasive as he wanted when ever he wanted to be. Signs of Paterno's influence at Penn State well beyond the football program bubble up repeatedly in the rest of the report as well as all over the campus, and just as importantly, anytime you ask those who were around him for any length of time. They talk about learning lessons in accountability that were taught by example instead of slogans scribbled on a blackboard.

"reasonable" conclusions. Some people, beginning with Paterno's family, have argued with conviction that such a standard sets the bar too low. Sad to say — especially from those of us who pleaded against a rush to judgment — but in a story from which the word "reasonable" has largely been absent, nearly every one of those conclusions rings true.

The most important of those arrives on page 48. It's the one that puts the lie to so much of what he would say after the scope of the scandal spilled into the public.

Contrary to Paterno's claims — including his testimony before a grand jury — it becomes clear that he was aware of a 1998 investigation of Sandusky by law-enforcement authorities that failed to result in charges. In an e-mail titled "Joe Paterno," athletic director Tim Curley wrote the following to Gary Schultz, the university's vice president of business and finance, and Penn State president Graham Spanier:

Selanne Returns to Ducks For 20th Season

ASSOCIATED PRESS
ANAHEIM, Calif. • Teemu Selanne says he's far from finished with hockey, and the Anaheim Ducks are grateful he's still not feeling his age.
The 42-year-old Selanne agreed Thursday to a one-year, $4.5 million deal with the Ducks to return for the 20th NHL season of his remarkable career.
Selanne could end up being the NHL's oldest active player next season, yet he shows no signs of slowing after leading the Ducks in scoring last season. Only Gordie Howe ever scored more points as a 41-year-old than Selanne's 66 last season, and Selanne sees no reason he shouldn't keep going.
"Sometimes, age is just a number," Selanne said in a phone interview while on vacation in Italy. "Age is a funny thing. A lot of times, I don't really feel 42. It's just a number. It all depends on how you feel."
The Finnish Flash's real numbers are much more impressive: Selanne is the 19th-leading scorer in NHL history with 1,406 points in two decades spent mostly in Anaheim, his home for parts of 13 seasons. The right wing is 12th in league history with 663 goals, and could crack the top 10 with another strong season.
"I just enjoy the game so much," Selanne said. "I still feel I have something to give."
Selanne has been with the Ducks for the past seven years, winning the Stanley Cup in 2007. Although he has contemplated retirement every offseason since raising the Cup, his latest return to the Ducks has been widely expected after he played all 82 games — the oldest player in NHL history to do that — without injuries.

"It was a little bit easier than last year," said Selanne, who needed offseason knee surgery a year ago. "Last year, I had my knee and wasn't sure if I was able to play again. I just enjoy the game so much."
He's in the middle of a long summer break after Anaheim missed the playoffs, but the Ducks surged in the second half of the year under new coach Bruce Boudreau. Selanne was impressed by Boudreau's energy and management technique, and he believes the Ducks are ready for a rebound after winning just one postseason round in the past five seasons since their championship.
"Our team, we want to win again, so that was a part of my decision, too," Selanne said. "I truly believe we have all the pieces. We obviously have some unfinished business from last year, and I can't wait to start the season again."
Selanne could be the NHL's senior player this winter if goalie Dwayne Roloson — nine months older than Selanne — remains unsigned, although 47-year-old Czech goalie Dominik Hasek is entertaining the prospect of an NHL comeback.
Yet Selanne's production, enthusiasm and fitness have remained incredibly steady as he advances into his 40s. He has scored at least 25 goals in six of his last seven seasons with Anaheim, and Selanne was the NHL's eighth-leading scorer in 2010-11 with 80 points.

Phelps Downplays Clary's Criticism

ASSOCIATED PRESS
KNOXVILLE, Tenn. • Michael Phelps has talked with Tyler Clary after his Olympic teammate questioned his work ethic and isn't worried about what anyone says.
"Clary told the newspaper, 'I think it's too bad. ... I think the things he could have done if he'd worked as hard as I do would have been even more incredible than what he has pulled off.'"
Clary, a first-time Olympian, said Thursday he regretted creating a distraction and should have kept his comments focused on himself. He said he spoke to Phelps and there are no hard feelings.
"It was more of a relief to me to make sure that he knew that's not how I feel about him," Clary said.
Bob Bowman, Phelps' long-time coach, laughed when asked if he put Clary up to making those comments. The coach said there wasn't much reaction with Phelps just focusing on what he's doing.
A year ago, Clary won silver in the 400 individual medley at the world championships in Shanghai. Phelps and Ryan Lochte are the two Americans in that event in London, part of a showdown Lochte compared to Michael Jordan versus Magic Johnson.
The comparison raises the question who is Jordan?
"We'll have to decide that after this Olympics," Lochte said.

Michael Phelps, left, brushed off U.S. teammate Tyler Clary's comments on his work ethic, saying "there's nothing else that needs to be said about it."

CITY OF SHOSHONE ORDINANCE NUMBER 529
 AN ORDINANCE CREATING A NEW SECTION, 5.26, "BUSINESS REGISTRATION AND REGULATIONS," TO PROVIDE FOR DEFINITIONS; TO REQUIRE REGISTRATION WITH THE CITY OF SHOSHONE OF ANY TRADE, BUSINESS, OR PROFESSION; TO PROVIDE FOR THE INFORMATION TO BE REQUIRED BY THE APPLICANT ABOUT THE BUSINESS AND ITS PHYSICAL LOCATION IN THE CITY; TO REQUIRE INSPECTION OF A BUSINESS' PHYSICAL LOCATION TO INSURE COMPLIANCE WITH CITY, STATE, AND/OR FEDERAL STATUTES, RULES, AND/OR REGULATIONS FOR HEALTH, SAFETY, AND WELFARE; TO PROVIDE FOR THE COLLECTION OF REGISTRATION FEES; DEFINING THE INFORMATION TO BE CONTAINED IN THE REGISTRATION GRANTED TO AN APPLICANT; TO DEFINE HOW LONG THE GRANTED REGISTRATION SHALL REMAIN VALID; TO REQUIRE POSTING OF THE REGISTRATION AT THE PLACE OF BUSINESS; TO DEFINE VIOLATIONS AND PENALTIES OF THIS ORDINANCE; AND, TO PROVIDE FOR A PUBLICATION AND EFFECTIVE DATE.

Whereas, the City of Shoshone lacks any ordinance regulating the registration of businesses within city limits,

Whereas, to further the health, safety, and welfare of the residents, guests, and visitors to the City of Shoshone,

Whereas, the health, safety, and welfare of the residents, guests, and visitors to the City of Shoshone is increased when police, paramedics, and firefighters, have knowledge of business activities present within the city limits in the event of an emergency,

Whereas, a business registration ordinance would allow the City of Shoshone, and other interested parties to better communicate with the City of Shoshone Business Community and to understand how businesses may better serve the residents, guests, and visitors to the City of Shoshone,

BE IT ORDAINED by the Mayor and Council of the City of Shoshone that:

A new Shoshone City Code Section, 5.26, Business Registration and Regulations, is hereby adopted and states:

TITLE 5
BUSINESS REGISTRATION AND REGULATIONS
Sections:

CHAPTER 1
GENERAL REGISTRATION PROVISIONS

5.26.01.010 Purpose:
 The purpose of this chapter is to maintain an accurate listing of trades, businesses, and professions located within the City of Shoshone in order to:

- A. Further the health, safety, and welfare of the citizens of Shoshone so that the city, especially the police, paramedics, and firefighters, have knowledge of activities present within such businesses in the event of emergencies; and
- B. Allow the City of Shoshone and other interested parties to better communicate with the Shoshone business community and comprehend the business categories that may be over or under served in the area.

5.26.01.020 Definitions:
 As used in this chapter, trade, business and entities, or activities, excluding solicitor, special event, temporary merchant, or vendor as defined in chapter 3 of this title, which hold themselves out to the public as businesses, trades, or professions regardless of size and including such trades, businesses, or professions constituting home occupations.

5.26.01.030 Registration:
 No person shall engage in or carry on any trade, business, or profession within the limits of the City of Shoshone until such person or entity has registered with the City Clerk's office, located at Shoshone City Hall, as described in this chapter.

5.26.01.040 Payment of fees; Registration, Issuance:
 Every trade, business, or profession shall pay, in advance to the city clerk, the required fees as adopted by resolution of the city council. With the receipt of such fee, the city clerk shall issue a registration to the parties applying therefor.

5.26.01.050 Contents and Authority of Registrations:
 Every registration issued pursuant to this chapter shall contain and set forth the name, location, and type of each trade, business, or profession for which such registration is granted. Said registration shall authorize the continuance of the business named therein for the term of such registration, unless the place registered shall be closed. In such cases, the city clerk shall be notified of the change and shall note the same in the register of registrations.

5.26.01.060 Term of Registration:
 All registrations shall expire the last day of each year, and shall be dated from the first day issued until the last day of the current year. Each such general business registration may be renewed before the end of each calendar year by notice to the city clerk in writing, and payment of the registration fee.

5.26.01.070 Building and Premises:
 A. No registration shall be issued for the conduct of any business and no registration shall be issued for anything or act if the premises and building to be used for the purpose do not fully comply with the requirements of the city.

B. In every case where more than one business, trade, or profession shall be pursued or carried on in the same place by the same person or other persons at the same time, a registration must be taken out for each business accordingly.

C. In the absence of any provision to the contrary, the location of any registered business or occupation or of any permitted act may be changed, provided ten (10) days' notice thereof is given to the city clerk's office, and provided the building requirements of this code are complied with.

5.26.01.080 Inspections:
 It shall be the duty of the Fire Chief to inspect or cause to be inspected by the Shoshone City and Rural Fire Department, its officers or members, as often as may be necessary, but not less than twice a year within the city limits, all buildings, premises and public thoroughfares, except interior of private dwellings, for the purposes of ascertaining any conditions liable to cause fire, or any violations of regulations promulgated by the City for the purpose of reducing fire hazards.

5.26.01.090 Posting of Registration:
 It shall be the duty of any person conducting a registered business in the City of Shoshone to keep his/her registration posted in a prominent place on the premises used for such business at all times.

5.26.01.100 Violation and Penalties:
 If any person, persons, or entities exercise or carry on any trade, business, or profession without first receiving a registration from the city as required by this chapter, or violate any of the provisions of this chapter, he, she, or they shall be guilty of an infraction punishable by a collection of a fine of Seventy Five dollars ($75.00); provided further, however that such person's or persons' failure to pay such a fine within thirty (30) days of notice of such infraction shall constitute a misdemeanor punishable as set forth in 1.24 of this code.

This Ordinance shall become effective upon adoption and publication as provided by Idaho Code.

Dated this 19th day of June, 2012.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

"One can relish the varied idiosyncy of human action during a panic to the full, for, while it is a time of great tragedy, nothing is being lost but money."

— J.K. Galbraith

We have all seen hands where you are declarer in three no-trump and you need to hold up your ace for at least one round to cut the defenders' communications.

Then there are some more-advanced hands where you have K-J-x and the lead is a small card to the queen. You may have to duck to sever opponents' communications (when the suit breaks 5-2 and you need to lose the lead to your right-hand opponent). Today's deal takes that principle a step further.

Against three no-trump doubled, West led the heart four to the jack and queen. When declarer discovered the bad diamond break, he played a club, but East rose with the ace and played a second heart for one down.

Declarer felt that he had been unlucky, not only because of the diamond break, but also because West had not led spades, and because East had a second heart to play. However, a careful look at the spot-card led at trick one would have told him East had two hearts. If the heart jack was singleton, then West's initial holding would have been A-K-9-7-4-3, from which he would have led the seven.

So hearts are 5-2, East must have the club ace, and diamonds strongly rate to be breaking badly, given the final double. Declarer should have ducked the heart at trick one. Now nothing can beat him if he leads a club to the jack after finding the bad diamond break.

ANSWER: In a competitive auction like this, your partner would normally raise to two hearts with four trumps — if he had them. But as he has guaranteed three-plus hearts by his double, you should nonetheless compete to two hearts yourself. You know you can, if necessary, ruff diamonds in dummy, so you should be protected from a force.

Today is Friday, July 13, the 195th day of 2012. There are 171 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight:
On July 13, 1787, the Congress of the Confederation adopted the Northwest Ordinance, which established a government in the Northwest Territory, an area corresponding to the present-day Midwest and Upper Midwest.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:
In 1793, French revolutionary writer Jean-Paul Marat was stabbed to death in his bath by Charlotte Corday, who was executed four days later.

In 1812, New York became the first U.S. city to adopt regulations on how pawnbrokers could conduct business.

In 1863, deadly rioting against the Civil War military draft erupted in New York City. (The insurrection was put down three days later.)

In 1923, a sign consisting of 50-foot-tall letters spelling out "HOLLYWOODLAND" was dedicated in the Hollywood Hills to promote a subdivision (the last four letters were removed in 1949).

In 1939, Frank Sinatra made his first commercial recording, "From the Bottom of My Heart" and "Melancholy Mood," with Harry James and his Orchestra for the Brunswick label.

In 1960, John F. Kennedy won the Democratic presidential nomination on the first ballot at his party's convention in Los Angeles.

In 1965, President Lyndon B. Johnson appointed Thurgood Marshall to be U.S. solicitor general.

In 1972, George McGovern received the Democratic presidential nomination at the party's convention in Miami Beach.

In 1977, a blackout lasting 25 hours hit the New York City area.

In 1978, Lee Iacocca was fired as president of Ford Motor Co. by chairman Henry Ford II.

In 1985, "Live Aid," an international rock concert in London, Philadelphia, Moscow and Sydney, took place to raise money for Africa's starving people.

In 1999, Angel Maturino Resendiz, suspected of being the "Railroad Killer," surrendered in El Paso, Texas. (Resendiz was executed in 2006.)

Ten years ago: The nation's governors opened their summer meeting in Boise, Idaho, with high health care costs the main topic. Photographer Yousuf Karsh died in Boston at age 93.

Five years ago: Former media mogul Conrad Black was convicted in Chicago of swindling the Hollinger International newspaper empire out of millions of dollars. (Black was sentenced to 6 1/2 years in federal prison, but had his sentence reduced to three years; he was freed in May 2012.) Family prayer services and a huge public outpouring in Austin, Texas, ushered in three days of memorial ceremonies honoring the late Lady Bird Johnson.

One year ago: California became the first state in the nation to add lessons about gays and lesbians to social studies classes in public schools under a measure signed by Gov. Jerry Brown. Three coordinated bombings in India's busy financial capital killed 26 people in the worst terror attack in the country since the 2008 Mumbai siege. Abby Wambach broke a tense tie with a thunderous header in the 79th minute, and the United States earned its first trip to the Women's World Cup final since winning it in 1999 with a 3-1 victory over France. (Japan, which went on to win the Cup, upset Sweden 3-1 in the other semifinal.)

NEED COUPONS?

DEAR ABBY: My son is 24 and was honorably discharged as a corporal after a four-year enlistment in the U.S. Marine Corps. He was deployed twice to Iraq. Since his return he has been attending community college, but he lacks the focus and is bored. He has recently announced that he would like to return to the military.

DEAR ABBY Jeanne Phillips

When he approached the Marine recruiter to re-enlist, he was told he's ineligible due to tattoos on his arms. After four years of honorable and devoted service, this rejection is insulting. He has announced to family that he will pursue enlistment in the French Foreign Legion next year.

This is very distressing to me, and I'm sick with worry about his well-being. I do not want him to go off to fight in a foreign military. Can you offer any words of wisdom?

- WORRIED MOM IN GAINESVILLE, FLA.
DEAR WORRIED MOM: Encourage your son to explore enlistment opportunities with other branches of the U.S. military regarding their tattoo policies. However, while you and I might consider his desire to join the French Foreign Legion to be an extreme overreaction to his rejection by the Marines, as an adult he has a right to make that choice. If he goes through with his plan, he may see less action than he would as a member of the U.S. military.

While I can't make this easier for you as a parent, I do have this advice to offer. Tell your son it would be in his best interest to learn some basic French before he goes.

DEAR ABBY: My twin sister and I have lived across the country from each other for many years, but have remained close through phone calls. Two years ago she began talking politics, and we realized we differ on the topic. I asked her if we could not talk so much about the subject and just "agree to disagree."

Things were fine until she planned a visit to see me and also a friend who agrees politically with her. I told her she was welcome to use my car to see her friend, but I didn't want to go because I knew politics would be brought up. It made her very angry, and she ended up canceling her trip.

We have continued our phone chats, and I stayed with her several days last year to celebrate our brother's birthday. But the bond we had is no longer there. I can feel her and my brother pulling away from me. I'm sure it's because of our political differences.

I don't know how to turn things around. I have never argued with them, but feel they are making me an outsider. How can I get them back without compromising my own views?

Twenty years ago, my sister and I differed on some religious points, and she wanted nothing to do with me for the next two years. It took our mother's death to get us back together. Help!

- LOVES MY TWIN
DEAR LOVES: While you and your twin were womb-mates, nowhere is it written that because of your twinship you must think in unison. For the time being, my advice is to calm down. This being an election year, feelings are running high. Keep the lines of communication open as far as your sister and brother will allow. After the election is over, your relationship may normalize.

However, if it doesn't, then it's important you remember that the experiences we have as we travel life's path can turn even twins into very different people. Accept that, and your heart will be less fragile.

IF JULY 13 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: During the next four to six weeks, you can expand your social circle by joining groups, clubs or organizations. Some of your new contacts may turn into lifelong friends. In August, as well as again in November, your leadership abilities may receive recognition. Those are good times to make crucial decisions because you will be wiser and may have access to sage advice. If you make an important change or accept an opportunity in those months, it is likely that everything will unfold exactly as planned.

HOROSCOPE

Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Trust in intuitions. Generous gestures and mental acrobatics will be appreciated and your social instincts could be right on the mark. You must still follow the guidelines to ensure that your ideas are heard.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Tune in and turn on. Rivet your attention on pleasing a special someone and you will magically create a win-win situation for both of you. Once you put your charm to work, you are totally irresistible.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Friday the 13th needs your help. Your happiness spreads out and encompasses everyone you meet. Don't sign agreements now, but do your best to help the needy and be a Good Samaritan.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): To achieve your lofty dreams, you must be grounded. Use your shrewd business sense to analyze debts and find smart ways to shave off a few cents here and there. A penny saved is a penny earned.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Walk boldly within conventional circles. As long as you don't cross the line, everyone that really counts will be pleased by your productivity and conscientiousness. People will admire your sense of responsibility.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): It has been said that it takes money to make money. However, after careful analysis, you might decide to make do or do without. Use brainpower today, not financial clout, for the best results.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Let everyone see you just as you are. Put important business deals into play or start a new job while your ability to perfect every iota is at its height. Your ability as a lover gets high marks tonight.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Anything worth doing is worth doing well. You earn points because you never shirk your duties. Become a master of all you survey and attain what you want. No black cats will dare to cross your path today.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Remain intensely and passionately focused. Career, school, job or business can make heavy demands, but can also provide bountiful rewards. Don't discard something that is still useful.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Shrewdness is your secret weapon. Try to calculate mentally just how people will react in any given situation. You possess the drive and determination to make your fondest dreams come true.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): It's only a silly superstition, but it still isn't a good idea to walk under a ladder on Friday the 13th. In any case, you are probably too busy meeting deadlines and pleasing the boss to find one.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Your admirers think you are poetry in motion. If you play along long enough, a sense of rhythmic comfort may become a habit. Someone may fall at your feet because you are more sensitive than usual.

Sudoku is a number-placing puzzle based on a 9x9 grid with several given numbers. The object is to place the numbers 1 to 9 in the empty squares so that each row, each column and each 3x3 box contains the same number only once. The difficulty level of the Conceptis Sudoku increases from Monday to Sunday.

WARNING
When purchasing a vehicle, make sure that the title is in the name of the seller. Under Idaho motor vehicle code a vehicle cannot be sold unless the title is in the name of the seller (exception: Idaho licensed dealer). The seller shall provide the new purchaser a signed bill of sale showing the following: Full description of the vehicle, vehicle identification number, amount paid and name(s) and address of the new purchaser. The bill of sale must be signed, dated and show actual mileage at the time of sale. If you have any questions, please contact your local assessor's office.
