Hot Temps Lead to Record Power Use

TIMES-NEWS

TWIN FALLS • A recent string of scorching temperatures resulted in record peak-hour energy use this week for Idaho Power Co.

On Thursday, the utility reported its energy demand reached 3,245 megawatts. It would have gone higher, but Idaho Power dispatched 65 MW of its demand response programs.

The previous record was 3,214 MW in June 2008.

Idaho Power experiences its highest demands in the summer due to air conditioners and irrigation pumps adding to everyday electrical usage. The utility's new 300 MW Langley Gulch natural gas plant helped meet the electricity demand, company officials said.

Idaho Power recently received approval to raise rates by 6.8 percent to pay for the new $400 million plant. The utility argues the investment was necessary to keep pace with growth in new business and residential customers.

On Thursday, Langley Gulch produced 275 MW of the power needed. Wind power contributed 14 MW.

"Langley Gulch has come online at the perfect time to help us meet some of the highest loads we have seen in several years, including yesterday's record demand," Mark Stokes, Idaho Power's manager of power supply planning, said in a press release.

Rupert Most Improved City in Project

The three-story headquarters, slated to be completed in spring 2013, will consolidate Glanbia's executive and administrative operations and bring 100 workers to downtown Twin Falls, said Jeff Williams, president and CEO of Glanbia.

The jobs aren't new to the area, but are consolidated into one facility

That's still good news for Twin Falls' economy, Williams said. Those 100 people will be shopping and eating downtown, con-

Cheese Innovation Center, where workers will develop new products and improve existing cheese products, said Dave Perry, director of technical services for Glanbia. The center will include culinary facilities with a pizza oven, deli slicer and more where workers can test how the cheese performs.

The groundbreaking drew Lt. Gov. Brad Little, Glanbia leaders and representatives from Seoul Dairy in Korea, as well as local and state government officials.

Charges Dropped Against Man Accused of Shooting

man who was accused of shooting into another man's house in June.

Prosecutors dropped the charges against James Scott Christensen without a hearing because of a lack of evidence.

"The statements of the complaining witnesses are contradicted by the physical evidence and by the statements of other witnesses," the motion to dismiss states.

Twin Falls County Prosecutor

Grant Loebs said when looking at the physical evidence and other statements, the alleged victim's version of events is "not possible."

"Given that and given what evidence seems to show, it indicates to us if there was a crime there, it's not the way he described it and not anything we can deal with," Loebs said.

Christensen was charged with aggravated assault and discharging a firearm into an occupied dwelling after police said he fired shots into a house in the 700 block of 3rd Ave. N. early June 14.

According to the police report, the resident of the home was standing in his living room talking on his cellphone with the front door open when he saw another man, later identified as Christensen, approaching him and holding a handgun. Christensen then reportedly fired two bullets.

According to the police report, there were two bullets lodged in the east wall of the living room and another lodged in the door frame that appeared to have been fired from the living room. It was unclear who fired the bullet from the living room.

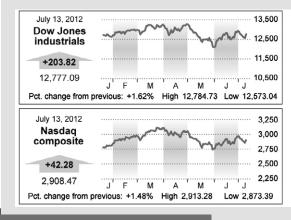

THE MARKET AT A GLANCE

JPMorgan Chase Launches a Stock Market Rally

NEW YORK (AP) • JPMorgan Chase blew away a cloud of concern hanging over the banking industry Friday and set off a rally in stocks. Relieved investors drove up bank stocks, ended a six-day losing streak for the market and sent the Dow Jones industrial average up 204 points, the best day this month.

JPMorgan jumped 6 percent, the biggest gain in the Dow by far. The country's largest bank earned $5 billion in the most recent quarter, easily beating Wall Street's forecasts, even as it took a deeper loss from a complex trade that went wrong. The results brightened the outlook for other major banks.

The Dow rose 203.82 points, or 1.6 percent, to 12,777.09. The S&P 500 rose 22.02 points, or 1.7 percent, to 1,356.78. The Nasdaq composite index rose 42.28, or 1.5 percent, to 2,908.47.

I've heard that nuts are healthy for you, but what about all the fat and calories?

- Terry, Oakley

Answered by Alisa Rawson, MS, RD, LD, Clinical Nutrition Services/MSTI Dietitian:

uts are good for you ... in moderation, really! Nuts are a great source of high-quality plant protein. The FDA approves the qualified health claim that eating 1.5 ounces of most nuts per day may protect against heart disease. What does 1.5 ounces look like? About a quarter of a cup is all you need to see the health benefit of nuts. That's a pretty powerful reason to incorporate nuts into a well-balanced, healthy diet.

The specific nuts that qualify for the health claim are almonds, pistachios, pecans, walnuts, peanuts, hazelnuts and some pine nuts. These nuts qualify based on their ratio of unsaturated fat ("good") to saturated ("bad") fat.

Nuts are also a great source of antioxidants, implicated in a number of potential health benefits. It's best for nuts to be roasted or dry roasted with the skin on to enjoy the most in antioxidant benefit.

What are the advantages of nut consumption? • Portability as a snack food. • No refrigeration necessary. They taste good.

• Protein and unsaturated fats.

• Great source of a variety of vitamins and minerals.

You can enjoy nuts in a variety of ways: roasted by themselves, in nut butter or in your favorite recipes.

Have a burning question about your health? Need assistance navigating the sea of insurance options out there? Send your questions to wellness@magicvalley.c om and we'll answer them in a future column.

Remember that nut but ters are most beneficial as a natural butter, freshly ground, or without added fats or sugars.

who eat nuts in moderation do not weigh more than those who do not eat nuts. Why? Nuts make you feel satisfied, they have a nice crunch, they are a fat/fiber food which helps your stomach stay "full" and they contain nearly zero water content.

have gotten a bad rap. But eaten in moderation, they provide a wonderful source of protein, unsaturated fats, antioxidants and they taste good!

Burley Teens Assist Injured Horse Rider

BY LAURIE WELCH lwelch@magicvalley.com

HANSEN • Five Burley teens who took to heart the Boy Scout motto "Be Prepared" rendered aid and flagged down a motorist Saturday to get medical help after a Buhl man sustained serious injuries in a horseback fall in the South Hills.

Jerry Zinn, 67, was taken by air ambulance to St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center in Twin Falls where he was treated and released. Zinn and his wife, Kathie Zinn, were riding horses on a Third Fork trail in Rock Creek Canyon when Jerry's horse, Beau, startled and stepped off the embankment, throwing Jerry downhill.

Scott Pilling, 16, Cody Hosteen, 18, Jake Garn, 18, Daniel Miller, 18, and Trent Winn, 18, were riding mountain bikes on the trail when they spotted the couple and pulled over to let them pass.

"I think they just looked kind of weird with their bike helmets on and it startled the horse," Kathie Zinn said.

Jerry Zinn sustained a fractured bone in his neck, a dislocated hip in a replacement joint and ear injuries that were bleeding profusely.

"His ear was bleeding horribly," Kathie Zinn said. "Now he's got stitches all up and down his ear. It really tore it up."

As soon as the accident occurred the teens sprang into action. Four of them began helping Jerry Zinn, while Garn raced downhill on his bike to alert some campers and find someone with a cellphone. He eventually loTIMES-NEWS cated a person with OnStar in their vehicle, and they called for medical assistance. OnStar is a satellite service that directly connects the user to an operator in emergencies. Kathie Zinn said after the accident the teens told her to tend to the horses and they would look after her husband.

"They really kept a cool head and did what they could to help," she said.

She said other campers and a surgical nurse who was in the parking lot all raced to help out.

"Someone even offered to drive me home afterward," she said. "All of those people were amazing?

Kathie Zinn said the teens stayed until the end and even followed her vehicle down the mountain.

"They knew what they were doing," she said.

Four of the five teens are Eagle Scouts, and Pilling is currently planning his Eagle Scout project.

"I think being an Eagle Scout totally helped us," Garn said.

The training helped them stay calm, focused and get medical help on the way, he said. The boys also had a first-aid book with them on the trip.

"It's definitely something that you remember for the rest of your life," Hosteen said. "I'm just thankful that I knew what to do."

Garn said this was the first time he'd seen someone seriously injured "except for cuts and scrapes."

"After it was all over it was a relief," he said.

Otter Takes Action on ACA Court Decision

TIMES-NEWS

TWIN FALLS • Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter appointed 26 individuals to two working groups to consider how the state should proceed after the Supreme Court upheld the Affordable Care Act.

One group will work with Department of Insurance Director Bill Deal to study whether to implement a state-run insurance exchange, and one will work with Idaho Department of Health and Welfare Director Dick Armstrong to study whether to expand Medicaid. Rep. Fred Wood, R-Burley, and Gooding County Commissioner Tom Faulkner are among Magic Valley appointees on the committees.

The announcement comes days after Otter said he wouldn't reject Medicaid expansion, like some of his Republican colleagues across the country. In the Tuesday release, Otter said he wanted to study the possible consequences of an insurance exchange and Medicaid expansion before deciding how to proceed.

Suspended Midwives' Birthing Center Gets New Name

BY JOHN MILLER

Associated Press

BOISE • An Idaho birthing center has taken a new name after midwives there were suspended earlier this year following a state investigation into babies that died.

A certificate of organization for New Beginnings Baby Place LLC was filed June 5 with the Idaho secretary of state's office, at the same Meridian address as The Baby Place.

An answering machine message on Friday also indicated that the business's name was changed to New Beginnings Baby Place.

In March, The Baby Place's owner, Coleen Goodwin, and her daughter, Jerusha Goodwin, had their midwife licenses suspended by Idaho regulators after three babies under their care died.

Separately, the Goodwins in April also agreed to a $5 million settlement with a couple that sued them after their baby suffered permanent brain damage in 2008.

In addition, Meridian police said Friday they've forwarded a portion of their criminal investigation of the midwives' role in one of the deaths to Ada County prosecutors.

Nobody at New Beginnings Baby Place returned a message seeking comment on whether the Goodwins remain involved in births at New Beginnings.

The new website indicates that another licensed midwife, Rachel Elling, is practicing at the facility, though images of Coleen Goodwin remain on the website.

Elling's license was issued on March 26, according to the Idaho Bureau of Occupational Licenses. That's just three days after the Goodwins' licenses were suspended.

Elling couldn't be reached for comment.

State documents indicate that the license of another midwife listed on the center's website, Janice Cook, expired July 1 and is no longer current.

Cook didn't return a call seeking comment.

According to Idaho law, it's a misdemeanor to practice mid-wifery without a license.

The Goodwins were barred from practicing in Idaho in March following a lengthy state probe into three babies who died after receiving care at The Baby Place.

The Idaho Board of Midwifery probe underscored numerous incidents in which the two women violated state rules designed to protect mothers and their babies.

Last August, Jerusha Goodwin waited 11 minutes to call paramedics after a baby was born "limp, unresponsive and pale," investigators wrote. The mother labored for more than 48 hours.

In that case, the Meridian Police Department began a criminal negligence investigation after the baby died, given the extended labor of the mother.

Deputy Chief Tracy Basterrechea told The Associated Press on Friday that his agency has forwarded some results of his agency's inquiry to Ada County prosecutors to review for potential charges.

"They're reviewing portions of the case right now," Basterrechea said, adding he expects prosecutors to have the full case within weeks.

On Oct. 11, 2010, a student midwife improperly cut an infant's umbilical cord, resulting in significant blood loss before the baby died.

In that case, Jerusha Goodwin failed to provide medical personnel at St. Luke's Meridian Medical Center with relevant records, investigators wrote.

And on June 30, 2010, Coleen Goodwin delayed paramedics from entering The Baby Place for four minutes, investigators wrote.

When they were finally allowed in, Coleen Goodwin instructed them – against the mother's wishes, investigators concluded – to drive past two nearby hospitals to St. Luke's in Boise, adding time to a journey that ended in the infant boy's death.

Forest Capital Partners Sells Its Timber Portfolio

BY STEVEN DUBOIS Associated Press

PORTLAND, Ore. • Forest Capital Partners sold its 1.88 million-acre timberland portfolio on Friday to Hancock Timber Resource Group and Molpus Woodlands Group.

The company, which has headquarters in Portland and Boston, originally paid $1.65 billion for the timberland. The financial terms have not been disclosed.

Hancock Timber is acquiring 573,000 acres in Oregon, 376,000 acres in Louisiana, 264,000 acres in Washington and 138,000 acres in Idaho. Molpus is buying 286,000 acres in Minnesota, 110,000 acres in Louisiana and 138,000 acres in Idaho.

"This portfolio's timberlands are intensively managed, highly productive and ideally situated near timber markets with competitive pricing," said Dick Molpus, president of Molpus Woodlands Group, which acquires, manages and sells timberland as an investment vehicle for pension funds, college endowments and wealthy individual investors.

Forest Capital Partners had been in the timber investment management business since 2000. Matt Donegan, the firm's Portland-based copresident, said he plans to spend more time with his family and continue his work in community service. Donegan is the presi"This portfolio's timberlands are intensively managed, highly productive and ideally situated near timber markets with competitive pricing."

dent of the state Board of Higher Education and is on the governor's Oregon Education Investment Board, the newly formed panel that oversees all public education in the state.

Donegan said the timing for the sale was right because he and his partner, Scott Jones, decided they had to get bigger to afford necessary investments in research and development, but the acquisition market was dry.

"You've seen a real kind of collapse in the large transaction market over the last few years," he said.

Donegan said the research and development needs were two-fold – biological research to grow trees better as well as economic research and information technology. "It's increasingly becoming an informationdriven, science-based industry, and you just got to have the scale to afford the R&D," he said.

Firefighters Attack Lightning Fire in Yellowstone National Park

BY BOB MOEN Associated Press

CHEYENNE, Wyo. • Firefighters aided by aircraft immediately attacked the first lightning-caused fire in Yellowstone National Park this season, but a park spokesman said Friday there's been no talk of suppressing every blaze. "Our bottom line has always been if we believe that there is a threat to people and property, our goal is to protect people and property," spokesman Al Nash said. "But not every fire in Yellowstone poses а threat? The fire was reported Thursday near the park's northern border in northwest Wyoming. Initially reported at 5 acres, the fire grew to 29 acres by Friday afternoon. No tourist attractions or activities were being affected, Nash said. Nash said the decision was made to immediately suppress the fire because of the dry conditions in the area, the fire's location about a mile from Grand "We look at every fire and decide what is the appropriate method for management; sometimes it's more aggressive and sometimes it's less aggressive." Idaho Democrats Campaign Falters, Raises less than $10K

BOISE (AP) • Democrat Jimmy Farris raised less than $10,000 over the last two months for his 1st Congressional District campaign, leaving him with a pittance to spend on his underdog bid to topple Republican U.S. Rep. Raul Labrador.

According to a Federal Election Commission filing this week, Farris had $8,300 in his election account on June 30.

That's a shadow of Labrador's campaign riches, which totaled some $202,000 after raising $68,000 since April 26.

Democratic state Sen. Nicole LeFavour did significantly better than Farris and even topped Labrador's totals — for her 2nd Congressional District run against seven-term Republican U.S. Rep. Mike Simpson.

LeFavour raised over $88,000.

That still pales compared to Simpson, who raised $193,000 and has nearly $200,000 sitting in his coffers for campaigning before the Nov. 6 vote.

Prison Inmate Who Fled Back in Custody

BOISE (AP) • A state prison inmate who walked away from a job site in Nampa is back in custody after turning himself in to authorities in Coeur d'Alene.

Idaho Department of Correction Spokesman Jeff Ray says 43-year-old Richard H. Michalies showed up at the Kootenai County Jail Friday afternoon. Michalies was assigned to the Nampa Community Work Center and was reported missing Thursday.

He is serving a 12-year sentence for forgery convictions in Bonner and Nez Perce counties and was on track to be released from prison in June 2015. Loop Road and the forecast for more dry, windy weather.

"We haven't had much rain in the past few weeks so our fire conditions are very high," he said. The park has imposed temporary fire restrictions, which include no campfires in the backcountry. Campfires are permitted only in established fire grates in picnic areas or campgrounds.

Nash said Yellowstone has not altered its policy of reviewing each lightningcaused fire on whether to attack it or let it burn. The park suppresses all humancaused fires, and the park has extinguished four human-caused fires this season.

"A lot of factors go into decisions about our management approach to any given fire," Nash said. "It's not a simple cookie-cutter approach."

"We look at every fire and decide what is the appropriate method for management; sometimes it's more aggressive and sometimes it's less aggressive," he said.

Destructive wildfires have been burning throughout the West this summer, destroying hundreds of homes, killing several people and scorching hundreds of square miles of forest.

Yellowstone, which received global attention in 1988 when fires burned about 36 percent of the park's 2.2 million acres and threatened tourist areas such as Old Faithful, has seen relatively mild fire seasons in recent years because of ample winter snowpack and no drought conditions.

In 2011, it recorded 21

fires, the largest at 1,800 acres. In 2010, there were 11 fires, the largest 5,500 acres.

"We always have fires. I mean, that's just the nature of Yellowstone," Nash said.

But the snowpack this past winter was lower than normal, and there's been little measureable rain in the last several weeks.

"We certainly are in a different situation than we were this time last year," Nash said.

The Yellowstone fire is one of several that broke out Thursday in northwestern Wyoming.

A fire on Cody Peak in neighboring Grand Teton National Park may have been started by an illegal backcountry campfire.

Crews were working to contain several other new fires probably caused by lightning in the Bridger-Teton National Forest.

Kuna Couple Accused of Mentally Abusing Teens

BOISE (AP) • A Kuna husband and wife have been arrested for what police say was years of mental abuse of two teenagers in their care after neighbors turned in the couple in mid-June.

Ada County deputies say 38-year-old Brian Bracy and 34-year-old Melissa Louise Bracy fed the teens only rice and water for weeks at a time, as part of a system of psychological punishment that lasted more than four years.

Deputies say the the teenagers were taken out of the home last month and placed in the custody of the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare, while the couple was arrested Wednesday following an agency investigation.

"In cases of mental abuse, there are no bruises – no obvious physical signs of mistreatment," Kuna Police Chief Kody Aldrich said Thursday. "Yet the damage done to these children is just as harmful.

"We credit people living near this family for being willing to come forward and say, 'Something isn't right. These children may be in danger,' "he said. "As a direct result of those neighbors, these kids are out of an abusive environment and in a safe place."

Brian Bracy is charged with felony injury to child. His wife is charged with aiding and abetting felony injury to child.

They are being held in the Ada County jail on $150,000 bonds.

According to law enforcement reports, the Bracys had established an extensive system of keeping tabs on the children, including installing five video cameras that kept track of what happened at the home. If the children left their rooms, their punishments were intensified; even grabbing any other food than the parents allowed resulted in punitive measures.

Before the children were removed from the home, deputies said it took an hour of coaxing through the shuttered windows of their room before they agreed to come out.

The Bracys are scheduled to enter pleas in front of 4th District Judge Richard Greenwood on Tuesday.

The crimes of felony injury to child and aiding and abetting felony injury to child are punishable by up to 10 years in prison.

Woman Fleeing Wildfire Crashes, Ignites New Blaze

ONTARIO, Ore. • A Colorado woman fleeing a deadly wildfire crashed on the way to her father's home in Oregon, sparking a new blaze in Idaho.

Krista McCann said she loaded her most-valued possessions in her car in Colorado Springs, Colo., and fled the 29-square-mile Waldo Canyon fire.

The trip was also supposed to be a surprise for her father. Among the belongings she brought from Colorado was her mother's wedding dress.

"I was afraid that something might happen, or the wind might change in Colorado and my house would be in danger again," McCann said.

The 19-year-old said she lost control of her Subaru while trying to pass another car on U.S. Interstate 84 in Idaho between Boise and Mountain Home.

"I just couldn't go straight anymore and I ended up clipping the car next to me," she said. "The adrenaline was going through me for a while, but after that started to fade it hit me pretty hard.

"I know I got out and I saw that the field was on fire and at that point I was just, I was pretty devastated. I didn't want to do anything like that," McCann said.

Idaho State Police said a mechanical failure caused McCann to lose control of the vehicle.

Positive Momentum The News from St. Luke's

At St. Luke's Magic Valley and St. Luke's Jerome, we're doing great work every day to improve the health of people in our region and enhance communication with our community. I'd like to fill you in on the latest happenings at St. Luke's, from our hospitals to our clinics to our community programs. Here's this month's news:

Man Sentenced after 23-pound Marijuana Bust

IDAHO FALLS (AP) . An Idaho judge has sentenced a Montana man to five years in prison after police found 23 pounds of marijuana in his vehicle.

Power County Prosecutor Randy Kline told the Post Register that 30-year-old Philip Grossi pleaded guilty to three counts of felony possession of marijuana. He originally was charged with marijuana trafficking.

District Judge Stephen Dunn sentenced Grossi Thursday to five years in prison, he will be eligible for parole after two years. But the judge also retained jurisdiction in the case and placed the Bozeman resident in a 90-day treatment program.

St. Luke's Jerome

At St. Luke's Jerome, bright, new exterior signs are making it easier for patients and families to find their way. At night, the new signs are lighted for even greater visibility. We're also improving the patient experience with new patient beds, and plans are underway for a new nurse call light system and interactive TVs in patient rooms.

St. Luke's Magic Valley

We continue to bring more specialist physicians to our community to serve patients close to home. Please welcome three new doctors to St. Luke's medical staff: Dr. Jonathan Hanovell, Dr. Judith Csanky, and Dr. Brian Berk. Auditors Say Billions Wasted in Iraq

BY ROBERT BURNS Associated Press

WASHINGTON • After years of following the paper trail of $51 billion in U.S. taxpayer dollars provided to rebuild a broken Iraq, the U.S. government can say with certainty that too much was wasted. But it can't say how much.

In what it called its final audit report, the Office of the Special Inspector General for Iraq Reconstruction Funds on Friday spelled out a range of accounting weaknesses that put "billions of American taxpayer dollars at risk of waste and misappropriation" in the largest reconstruction project of its kind in U.S. history.

"The precise amount lost to fraud and waste can never be known," the report said.

The auditors found huge problems accounting for the huge sums, but one small example of failure stood out: A contractor got away with charging $80 for a pipe fitting that its competitor was selling for $1.41. Why? The company's billing documents were reviewed sloppily by U.S. contracting officers or were not reviewed at all.

With dry understatement, the inspector general said that while he couldn't pinpoint the amount wasted, it "could be substantial."

Asked why the exact amount squandered can never be determined, the inspector general's office referred The Associated Press to a report it did in February 2009 titled "Hard Lessons," in which it said the auditors — much like the reconstruction managers themselves — faced personnel shortages and other hazards.

"Given the vicissitudes of the reconstruction effort — which was dogged from the start by persistent violence, shifting goals, constantly changing contracting practices and undermined by a lack of unity of effort — a complete accounting of all reconstruction expenditures is impossible to achieve," the report concluded.

In that same report, the inspector general, Stuart Bowen, recalled what then-Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld asked when they met shortly after Bowen started in January 2004: "Why did you take this job? It's an impossible task."

By law, Bowen's office reports to both the secretary of defense and the secretary of state. It goes out of business in 2013.

Bowen's office spent more than $200 million tracking the reconstruction funds, and in addition to producing numerous reports, his office investigated criminal fraud that has resulted in 87 indictments, 71 convictions and $176 million in fines and other penalties. These include civilians and military members accused of kickbacks, bribery, bid-rigging, fraud, embezzlement and outright theft of government property and funds.

NRA VS. GOP Organization Finds Some Republican Lawmakers Resistant to Gun Laws

Traders may have Sought to Conceal $6B Loss

BY PALLAVI GOGOI AND DANIEL WAGNER Associated Press

NEW YORK • JPMorgan Chase said Friday that its traders may have tried to conceal the losses from a soured bet that embarrassed the bank and cost it almost $6 billion – far more than its CEO first suggested.

The bank said an internal investigation uncovered evidence that led executives to "question the integrity" of the values, or marks, that traders assigned their trades.

JPMorgan also said it planned to revoke two years' pay from some of the senior managers involved in the bad bet, and it had closed the division of the bank responsible for the mistake.

"This has shaken our company to the core," CEO Jamie Dimon said.

The bank said the loss, which Dimon estimated at $2 billion when he disclosed it in May, had grown to $5.8 billion, and could grow larger than $7 billion if financial markets deteriorate severely.

Dimon said the worst appeared to be behind the bank, and investors seemed to agree: They sent JPMor-

NASHVILLE, Tenn. • Threats, denunciations and verbal potshots between the National Rifle Association and the leaders of the Legislature were common in the decades that Democrats ran the show in the Tennessee Capitol. Turns out Republicans are just as good at running afoul of the powerful gun rights group.

GOP leaders in Nashville infuriated the NRA this year by refusing to go along with a bill to prevent businesses from banning guns on their property, and now the group is using its deep pockets to try to unseat one of them. Elsewhere, NRA-backed measures also ran into Republican roadblocks in Idaho, Georgia, Alabama and North Carolina this year.

The NRA notes recent successes in the legislatures of Virginia, Ohio and South Carolina, describing the recent set-backs as temporary.

"First of all the legislative process is rarely quick and is rarely pretty," chief NRA lobbyist Chris W. Cox said in a phone interview. "We certainly take the long view and we're committed to bring this not only to Tennessee but across the country."

The NRA is backing up its words with campaign cash in Tennessee, spending $75,000 in an effort to defeat the No. 3 Republican in the state House, Rep. Debra Maggart of Hendersonville.

The effort includes a billboard that depicts Maggart shoulder to shoulder with Democratic President Barack Obama, who is deeply unpopular in Tennessee.

"Defend Freedom – Defeat Maggart on August 2," the sign says, referring to the date of the Republican primary. Early voting began Friday.

The NRA contribution is equal to more than half of Maggart's campaign balance of $147,000, and far exceeds the $10,000 that her challenger, Courtney Rogers, had on hand through the first half of the year. The gun rights group hasn't supported any Democrats in Tennessee this campaign cycle.

House Majority Leader Gerald Mc-Cormick of Chattanooga said the traditional alliance between Republican lawmakers and the NRA has had very little meaning in recent years.

"They're our allies as long as it in their self-interest – and I don't think it's in their self-interest anymore," Mc-Cormick said. gan stock up 6 percent, making it the best performer in the Dow Jones industrial average.

Daniel Alpert, a founding managing partner with the New York investment bank Westwood Capital Partners LLC, said the bank and Dimon appeared to have learned from the crisis.

He said Dimon now realizes how complex and difficult to manage the bank is, will be more diligent in the future and probably won't be the crusader he has been against some proposed financial regulation.

"Did it cost shareholders a few bucks? Yup," he said. "But it was a non-horrible way of learning the lesson, in the sense that the entire institution didn't burn down, the lesson's been taught and Dimon seems ready to take it."

For his part, Dimon concluded: "We are not proud of this moment, but we are proud of our company."

The investigation, which covered more than a million emails and tens of thousands of voice messages, suggested traders were trying to make losses look smaller, the bank said.

Colorado Cantaloupes Return; Growers Push Safety Concerns

BY KRISTEN WYATT

Associated Press

GLENDALE, Colo. • Nearly a year after the nation's deadliest foodborne illness outbreak in more than two decades, Colorado can-taloupes are back in supermarkets.

Farmers near the town of Rocky Ford are going on the offensive to restore the fruit's reputation a year after melons from one of the area's farms caused a nationwide listeria outbreak. They have banded together to trademark Rocky Ford melons and fund $800,000 worth of safety upgrades to prevent future outbreaks, but they must convince buyers the melons are safe.

Last fall's listeria outbreak traced to Jensen Farms in eastern Colorado was blamed for the deaths of 30 people. It infected 146 people in 28 states with one of four strains of the disease, according to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

"When everything happened, after 125 years of growing a safe product, people were so upset," said Nathan Knapp, a Rocky Ford melon grower who drove to a Denver-area supermarket Friday to see the cantaloupes go on sale.

Some farmers who raised melons for decades decided to stop growing Rocky Fords this year. Only about a third of the land devoted to growing the cantaloupes last year is now growing this year's crop, according to the US-DA's Farm Service Agency.

"Quite a few people just dropped out," Knapp said. "They had no interest anymore in dealing with the risk."

But Knapp and a few dozen other farmers in Otero and Crowley counties decided to band together to restore confidence in Rocky Fords, melons with a distinct sweetness thanks to the area's hot, sunny days and cold nights. First the farmers patented the name Rocky Ford — an important step because the source of the outbreak was 90 miles from Rocky Ford but was using the name.

Then the farmers overhauled their production practices to restore public confidence. They hired a full-time food safety manager to monitor melon-picking and started paying the seasonal pickers by the hour, not by the amount of cantaloupes picked. The farmers also built a new central packing shed where all Rocky Ford-labeled melons are washed with soap and a chlorine oxide, then rinsed with well water tested for contamination.

President Barack Obama walks to the Marine One helicopter on the South Lawn of the White House in Washington, Friday. Despite both candidates' lofty policy speeches, voters still sense something's missing.

Obama, Romney Short on Specifics for Voters

NANCY BENAC Associated Press

WASHINGTON • Worried about the economy? The rising cost of health insurance? The burgeoning federal debt?

Yup, the presidential candidates have a bullet point for that.

But despite Republican Mitt Romney's 59-point jobs plan, President Barack Obama's 64-page blueprint for change and both candidates' lofty policy speeches, voters still sense something's missing.

Just 40 percent of Americans feel Obama "has a clear plan for solving the country's problems," according to a June survey by Gallup, while 38 percent say Romney has a specific proposal.

"This election so far has been about the future in only the most general terms," says William Galston, an expert on government and politics at the Brookings Institution and a former Clinton administration official.

Obama and Romney have each "said and written enough to be able to argue that he has been specific," says Galston. "But when it comes down to what really matters - what are the top three or four things that I will do if I am elected or reelected - I scratch my head."

While a lack of specifics is something voters bemoan about their candidates every presidential election, the vagueness of the 2012 race is even more pronounced as both campaigns spend more time arguing about past issues like Obama's health care law and Romney's private sector experience than on what they'd do in the future if elected.

Plus, this year, each side is accusing the other of not being up front with the public about his plans if elected. Romney points to Obama's overheard comment to the Russians that he'd have more flexibility in a second term on issues like missile defense. And Obama and Democrats point to Romney's unwillingness to say exactly what would replace the health care law if he and the Republicans successfully repealit.

There are plenty of ways to distribute blame for the public's fuzziness about the two candidates' intentions.

For one, there are still plenty of significant unknowns about their policy plans - more so with respect to Romney than the president, who's already spent 3 1/2 years governing from the Oval Office.

Romney, for example, pledged to cap total federal spending at 20 percent of the gross domestic product by the end of his first term, increase defense spending and put the federal budget on track to be balanced within eight to 10 years. But he's offered scant detail about the painful spending cuts that would be necessary to pull off such a trifecta.

Obama, for his part, laid out annual proposed budgets for the federal government that are lush with details. But year after year, many of those details are dead on arrival in Congress, leaving voters to wonder how things would be different in a second Obama term.

Poll: Most Americans Want Tax Cuts for All, Even the Wealthy

BY DAVID GOLDSTEIN McClatchy Newspapers

WASHINGTON • A majority of Americans want the Bush tax cuts extended for everyone, despite a strong push by President Barack Obama to eliminate them on higher incomes, according to a new Mc-Clatchy-Marist poll.

The poll found 52 per cent of registered voters saying they want all the tax cuts extended, including the tax cuts for incomes above $250,000, while 43 percent want the cuts extended just for incomes below that threshold.

All of the tax cuts first enacted under President George W. Bush are scheduled to expire on Dec. 31. Republicans want to extend them all. Obama wants to continue only those on income below $250,000 annually, and he vows to veto any move by Congress that would continue the higher-end tax cuts.

Some of the strongest support for extending all of the tax cuts came from some of Obama's most reliable supporters. Young voters ages 18-29 favored tax cuts for everyone by a margin of 69-29, the largest margin of any age group.

Latinos favored tax cuts for all incomes by 62 percent to 36 percent. Whites supported tax cuts for every income by 50 percent to 44 percent. African-Americans split, 48 percent for limiting the tax cuts to incomes below $250,000.

Clinton Talks with Reformist Myanmar President Sein

BY BRADLEY KLAPPER Associated Press

SIEM REAP, Cambodia • Secretary of State Hillary Rodham Clinton declared Myanmar open to American investment Friday, introducing the reformist president to leaders of some of the U.S.'s biggest corporations and still prodding him to do more to expand democracy in his long-reclusive country.

Following the Obama administration's recent loosening of sanctions against Myanmar, Clinton met President Thein Sein for an hour in the Cambodian city of Siem Reap, praising him for several pro-democracy reforms while suggesting more could still be done.

Clinton and Thein Sein shared a warm greeting in a hotel courtyard, their national flags and tropical foliage behind them. The two seemed much more personally engaged than when they met last year, when Clinton became the first U.S. secretary of state in half-a-century to visit Myanmar. The city hosts the famous centuries-old temples of Angkor, recalling an earlier age of regional glory.

"I brought a very prestigious business delegation to see you. I wanted them all to hear from you tonight about your plans for the future," Clinton told Thein Sein, and she also asked after his family.

They then met the largest delegation of American businesses to Southeast Asia, including Coca Cola, Ford Motor Co.,, General Electric, General Motors, Goldman Sachs and Google.

President Obama Wants Wash. to Get More Degrees

BY DONNA GORDON BLANKINSHIP

Associated Press

SEATTLE • A new government report shows Washington is one of 15 states that saw the number of college degrees held by 25- to 34-year-olds decrease during the recession.

The data were released Thursday by the U.S. Department of Education, the day before Education Secretary Arne Duncan plans to speak at the National Governors Association meeting about raising college attainment across the nation.

The report says 40.9 percent of 25- to 34-year-olds in Washington state had college degrees in 2010. About 6,000 more college graduates lived in the state in 2009.

Nationally, the percentage of 25- to 34-year-olds with some kind of postsecondary degree rose from 38.8 percent to 39.3 percent between 2009 and 2010, according to census data.

President Barack Obama says he wants 60 percent of Americans to have college degrees by the end of the decade. Right now, the only place in the U.S. that has met that goal is Washington, D.C.

"As the president has said, the countries that out-educate today will out-compete us tomorrow," Duncan said in a statement.

Cuts in higher education funding in 40 states and double-digit increases in tuition rates at four-year public universities are partly to blame for low degree rates, Duncan said.

Washington state experienced both during the recession, despite state goals to increase college attendance and degrees.

State funding for higher education has been going down for more than 10 years, but most of those cuts have been balanced by steady increases in tuition.

A decade ago, state government paid about 80 percent of the cost to educate a student at one of Washington's four-year colleges or universities. It now pays about 30 percent, with most of the difference covered by tuition.

Budget cuts and tuition increases are not completely responsible for the drop in college attainment in Washington state, said Don Bennett, executive director of the new Washington Student Achievement Council.

The economic downturn has also slowed hiring and stopped some employers from bringing new college educated employees into the state, Bennett said.

Despite the drop in Washington state's numbers, the state still falls in top third of the nation for college attainment, with 14 states beating Washington and 35 states having lower numbers.

The state's strategic plan for higher education, which was written in 2008 by the Higher Education Coordinating Board, focused on increasing public college capacity, keeping up with the demand for financial aid and improving graduation rates.

A 2012 update of the plan, which is now overseen by the Washington Student

WEATHER

Achievement Council, showed all the ways state cuts in higher education dollars can hurt college enrollment and degree attainment:

• By colleges admitting fewer students;

• By making it more difficult for students to get the classes they need to graduate; • By making college too expensive for some students.

The Washington Student Achievement Council was tasked by the Legislature with increasing the number of state residents earning college degrees.

"We are at a point where we've got to figure it out and do better by people in all age segments," Bennett said.

SAUDI'S OLYMPIC OPENING TO WOMEN 'SMALL STEP'

BY BRIAN MURPHY Associated Press

CAIRO • Across the world, word that Saudi Arabia would send women athletes to the Olympics for the first time immediately rocketed to the top of websites and broadcasts. In Saudi Arabia's official media: Not even a hint.

The state-sponsored silent use it to boost their image, but it changes little?'

Even the two athletes selected to compete under the Saudi flag – 800-meter runner Sarah Attar from Pepperdine University in California and Wodjan Ali Abdulrahim Seraj Shahrkhani in judo – live outside the kingdom and carry almost no influence as sports figures. There is no choice: other Women sports remain nearly an underground activity in Saudi Arabia.

Ahmed al-Marzooqi, editor of a website that aims to cover women and men's sporting events in Saudi Arabia, viewed Thursday's announcement as mostly an attempt to quiet international pressure on the lone nation trying to stick with an allmale Olympic team. The other former holdouts, Brunei and Qatar, had already added women Olympic ath-treatment was a lesson into the deep intricacies and sensitivities inside the kingdom as it took another measured step away from its ultraconservative traditions.

While Saudi rulers found room to accommodate the demands of the International Olympic Committee to include women athletes, they also clearly acknowledged that — in their view at least this did not merit billing as a pivotal moment of reform in a nation that still bans women from driving or traveling without the approval of amale guardian.

"It does not change the fact that Saudi women are not free to move and to choose," said political analyst Mona Abass in neighboring Bahrain. "The Saudis may letes — with Qatar even planning to have a woman carry its flag in London later this month.

CHEERS & JEERS

JEERS to threatening fellow residents with machetes. A road rage / machete incident on Wednesday night was the third arrest we've reported on this year resulting from a machete attack or threat.

In the latest incident, a Shoshone man was arrested Wednesday after allegedly threat-ening a man in the Twin Falls Walmart parking lot with a machete.

According to a police report, a man said he accidentally cut off another man while driving on North Washington Street. The other driver followed him into the parking lot and threatened him with a machete.

In mid-May, Twin Falls County Sheriff's Office deputies arrested a California man who used a machete to severely injure another man. The victim went to the hospital with traumatic head and face wounds.

Also in May, three people from Jerome were arrested after they entered a tattoo parlor and started a fight. The fight escalated and one of the three Jerome residents left the shop and returned with a machete.

CHEERS to celebrities in our midst. After a week of covering wildfires burning more than 200,000 acres near Castleford, it was fun to take a break from it all and just gawk at celebrities in Sun Valley. The photo gallery we posted of famous faces like FaceBook CEO Mark Zuckerberg walking down the street in T-shirt and jeans was almost as popular as the wildfires among Magicvalley.com readers.

CHEERS to a break in the weather. The Magic Valley had six days in a row where the temperatures were well over 90 degrees and a couple of those days where it topped 100 degrees. Six days might not seem like much, but the last time the thermometer dipped below 80 degrees was June 26. And the last time most of us saw any rain at all was June 9 (.03 inches), according to weather.com.

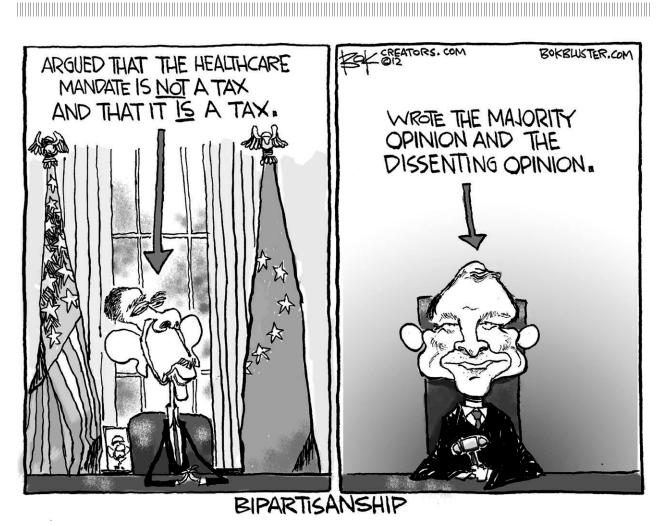

It's been hot and dry.

So, on Friday when some clouds rolled into the sky and a cool breeze came with it, the Magic Valley breathed a collective sigh of relief.

At North College and Wendell by the hospital, it's only a two-way stop with no marked crosswalk. Many pedestrians, especially children walking to and from Xavier, use that route to walk and it can be unsafe during peak hours. I've had quite a few close calls with drivers that don't come to a complete stop or simply don't care about foot traffic."

An online reader responded to the "Letter to the Editor: 'Business as Usual' Approach to Local Politics:' AllThatJazz: "Uncle Sam, I love your selective reasoning: No one should complain about what is going on in Idaho because in the last election a majority of the electorate voted for the current legislature, who did whatever they did and thus it was all good. End of story. All the rest of you just be quiet and/or go away.

Yet, you folks, including your friend Platts, have been moaning and groaning since the second President Obama was duely elected by a large majority of the electorate of the United States (not by a 5-4 SCOTUS decision to not count all of Florida's votes), and you complain about every piece of legislation passed under his administration by duely elected members of congress and the senate, including the Affordable Care Act, which not only got a majority of votes from the duely elected Democratic majority of house of representatives, but also by sixty votes in the senate, with cross over votes from Republicans, back when Republicans still occasionally put country above politics.

So, apparently, Uncle Sam, what is good for the goose isn't good enough for the gander where you come from. You and your party have the right to be politically active and outspoken and domi-

Metro officers and officials investigate the scene where an escaped male chimpanzee was shot and killed by a Metro officer in North Las Vegas, Nev., on Thursday.

VEGAS CHIMP CARETAKER: WILD ANIMALS AREN'T PETS

BY KEN RITTER Associated Press

1330010100117833

LAS VEGAS • Poker pro Lee Watkinson put up the money and girlfriend Timmi De Rosa gave her heart to an effort to rescue two adult chimpanzees that had outgrown their youthful cuteness in a northwest Las Vegas neighborhood.

"We wanted to build a sanctuary," Watkinson said Friday. "We found them in a bad situation. People have them and play with them for five years and then someone has to come and rescue them. That's what we tried to do. We failed."

On Thursday, after three straight days of stifling 110degree days, the chimps burst through one door of their outdoor pen, opened a secondary door with two dead bolt latches, and escaped.

For 30 minutes they rumbled through yards and climbed into and out of at least one unoccupied vehicle. The male, Buddy, dented fenders and jumped atop a police car before veering toward a gathering crowd of people. A Las Vegas police officer killed him with three shotgun blasts.

Buddy and the female, named C.J., had become unmanageable for their former owner, who signed part ownership of the animals over to a nonprofit De Rosa heads, called the Cortland Brandenberg Foundation.

The couple spent $100,000 of Watkinson's winnings from the 2006 World Series of Poker on a sturdy double-fenced enclosure of 800 square feet, about the size of two big-rig trailers, this in the backyard of a home in a horsey neighborhood in unincorporated Clark County. Building codes in the area and Nevada state law allow people to keep exotic animals as pets. Officer Marcus Martin, a Las Vegas police spokesman, said the veteran officer who shot Buddy thought he was the last defense between the rampaging animal and people gathering to watch. Martin recalled a 2009 attack on a woman who was blinded and disfigured by a chimp at a friend's home in Stamford, Conn.

A U.S. student also suffered critical injuries including head wounds and the loss of a testicle and fingers when he was attacked by two adult chimpanzees after he entered their enclosure last month at a primate sanctuary in South Africa.

Animal control officers tranquilized C.J. twice before she succumbed about an hour later beneath a shade tree in neighbor Tony Paolone's backyard. She was returned to her enclosure before she regained consciousness.

Officer Allegedly Made Threatening Comments About Michelle Obama

BY CLARENCE WILLIAMS The Washington Post

A Washington police officer who worked as a motorcycle escort for White House officials and other dignitaries was moved to administrative duty Wednesday after he allegedly was overheard making threatening comments toward Michelle Obama, according to several police officials.

The police department's Internal Affairs Division is investigating the alleged comments and notified the U.S. Secret Service Wednesday, said the officials, who spoke on condition of anonymity because they were not authorized to give details of the investigation.

The motorman allegedly made the comments Wednesday morning as several officers from the Special Operations Division discussed threats against the Obamas. It was not immediately clear where the alleged conversation took place or exactly how many officers took part in the conversation.

During that conversation, the officials said, the officer allegedly said he would shoot the First Lady and then used his phone to retrieve a picture of the firearm he said he would use. It was not immediately clear what type of firearm was allegedly shown.

An officer overheard the alleged threat and reported it to a police lieutenant at the Division, who immediately notified superiors, the officials said.

"We received an allegation that inappropriate comments were made. We are currently investigating the nature of those comments," D.C. police spokeswoman Gwendolyn Crump said in an e-mail. She declined to discuss the matter further.

Police officials declined to identify the officer. Officials from the U.S. Attorney's office declined comment.

In an interview Thursday afternoon, police union chief Kristopher Baumann said he did not have details on the matter.

There was no indication of a legitimate danger to Michelle Obama. A Secret Service spokesman declined to provide further details, saying in an email that the agency was aware of the incident and "will conduct appropriate follow-up."

Police officials immediately reassigned the officer to other duties, the police officials said.

Hawks Forced to Settle for Split

BY PATRICK SHELTRA

psheltra@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • For almost the entire month of July, Twin Falls Hawks coach Nathan Bishop has been warning players about their inability to support pitchers with runs.

So when the Hawks squandered a bases-loaded, one-out situation in the sixth inning, clinging to a 1-0 lead against the Snake River Panthers, the scene was set for the baseball gods to take action.

And after starting pitcher Drew Hurd walked the first two batters of the seventh on nine pitches, it wasn't a matter if, but how the Hawks would lose.

How ultimately came in the form of No. 9 hitter Konner Gilstrap. His tworun triple off reliever Tyler Rosas to deep left-center field scored his team's only runs in the opening game of a doubleheader at Canyon Ridge High BURLEY • Jalen Ovalle's ground ball was thrown away for an error in the bottom of the seventh inning, allowing Clay Stowers to score and give the Burley Green Sox a sweep of a doubleheader against Bear Lake with a 2-1 victory.

Mateo Ortega's sacrifice bunt moved Stowers, who was hit by a pitch, to second. Ovalle's grounder to third was thrown away.

In the opener, Jackson Kunz scored three times to back the efforts of J.J. Timmons and Ovalle, who combined on a four-hitter, in a 10-1 win.

Kunz's two-run single in the fourth inning of the nightcap tied the game at 2-2. It took starting pitcher Joe Ferrin off the hook and made a winner of Jake Mills, who pitched 21-3 innings of one-hit ball to finish the game.

Dom Baker fanned 13, but he wouldn't have been a winner if not for his ground ball in the sixth that was thrown away and allowed Cameron Ahrens to score from second in a 1-0 win against East Side Baseball of Kirkland, Wash., in the Walla Walla Bears Tournament.

Baker walked just one and was throwing "the hardest I've ever seen him throw," Cyclones coach Kenneth Scott said.

On Thursday night, against a team of 18- and 19-year-old collegians, the Cyclones got a game effort from Ahrens (four earned runs and two of his team's three hits) in an 8-0 loss to Pride Baseball of Bothell, Wash. Ahrens struck out four, walked five and singled and doubled at the plate. Jerome continues tournament play with two games this morning.

BURLEY • The sun barely peeks above the horizon as four friends gather at 5:45 a.m. for a 2-mile swim in the Snake River.

If they're not criminals, they're at least a suspicious-looking group as they prepare for the challenge of swimming from one of the world's most famous prisons.

Burley-area athletes Brent Lee, Guy Redder, Mike Tilley and Alice Schenk plan to swim the 17th annual Alcatraz Invitational Sept. 8 in San Francisco.

Lee, an experienced Ironman triathlete, is the only one in the foursome who has swam Alcatraz before, and he's responsible for roping his friends into it this time around.

"It's a great experience. It's one of those things that's emotional, physical and mental," Lee said. 'When you participate in a triathlon, you want to do your best; when you go to Alcatraz, you don't know whether you're going to finish."

Indeed, some swimmers never make it. The swim, while only about 1.75 miles, can be a difficult test. Lee says the San Francisco Bay runs like a river and swimmers must angle themselves properly and have enough strength to battle the side-current. If not, the current will carry them past the destination point

"It just sounds cool — swim Alcatraz. There was a time I would have thought in my own mind something like that would be impossible to do. It doesn't seem like it will be that difficult now."

and under the Golden Gate Bridge where boats are waiting to pick them up.

Not to mention several species of sharks, jellyfish, sea lions and seals make the bay their home. The creatures reportedly don't bother humans, but can still cause a mental block for swimmers to overcome.

The four locals are used to swimming cross-current in the Snake River. They practice swimming across the river, then downstream to simulate the "L" shape of the Alcatraz swim.

Redder, who has completed various running and biking endurance races, says he's excited to add another event to his list of accomplishments.

Shirley was the winner of the July 3 feature division main event after he successfully stood his ground against NASCAR driver Kenny Wallace and held off Hannah Newhouse in the final laps of the race. Shirley has also clawed his way back into fourth in the standings where he is currently 20 points back of Casey Pehrson.

Ernie Hall and Paul Browne continue their battle for command of the Street Stocks division. Hall is the latest main event winner but Browne still holds on to the lead the standings. Despite not yet making it to the winner's circle this season Mitchell Pehrson holds steady to the third position; 67 points behind Hall. With double mains on the agenda the drivers will be scrambling for every point they can gather as the season begins the downhill slide towards the track title.

Jr. Stingers driver Hailey Douglas was the first main event winner in the latest pursuit for a champion in the division. New drivers with familiar last names entering the competition this go-around include Makayla Woll, Triston Shirley and Madi Pehrson.

The Thunderdogs continue their unruliness in tonight's events led by The Tank who recently rolled to the top of the standings in the division.

Sandusky Horror House to Get Renovation

ASSOCIATED PRESS

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. • Penn State plans to renovate the building where former assistant football coach Jerry Sandusky sexually molested boys, confronting one of the most potent and sinister symbols of a scandal from which it is still trying to recover.

The school intends to remodel the football team shower and locker room area as a direct result of Sandusky's crimes, university spokesman David La Torre told The Associated Press on Friday.

Renovation plans for the Lasch Football Building were drawn up shortly after Sandusky's arrest in November, La Torre said, but the university can't move forward with those plans until all possible legal proceedings have been completed.

Sandusky, a longtime member of Joe Paterno's coaching staff, was convicted last month of abusing 10 boys over a 15-year period. Two top administrators face trial on charges of lying to a grand jury and failing to report allegations of child abuse.

disclosure of Penn The State's remodeling plans came as the school weighs how to deal with the ubiquitous imagery associated with the scandal. Besides the Lasch building, there's the bronzed statue of Paterno and the library that's named after him, as well as a downtown mural depicting the Hall of Fame coach and oustedPenn State President Graham Spanier.

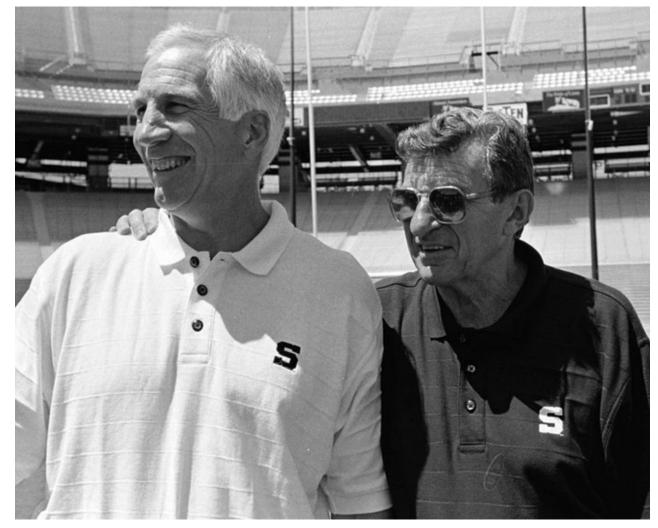

Reminders of the Sandusky scandal, and the senior school officials accused of covering it up, are all over Penn State's campus and State College.

If Joe Paterno were still alive, it's quite possible he could have found himself as a defendant in a criminal trial for his actions in helping to cover up the sexual abuse committed by longtime assistant Jerry Sandusky, left.

LEGAL EXPERTS SAY PATERNO COULD HAVE FACED CHARGES

ASSOCIATED PRESS

HARRISBURG, Pa. • If he were alive today, Joe Paterno – the coach who stood for so long for character and integrity both on and off the football field – could be looking at charges such as child endangerment, perjury and conspiracy.

Legal experts said emails and other evidence in the Penn State investigative report released Thursday suggest that Paterno may have misled a grand jury when asked when he first heard about Jerry Sandusky's misconduct, and show that Paterno and other university officials put boys in danger with their failure to report sexual abuse allegations against Sandusky more than a decade ago.

Duquesne University law professor Wes Oliver said the report by former FBI Director Louis Freeh reads like a prosecution case for a child endangerment charge against Paterno, then-President Graham Spanier, athletic director Tim Curley and now-retired vice president Gary Schultz. Oliver noted that a former top official in the Philadelphia Archdiocese was convicted of that charge in June for allowing a suspected pedophile priest to be around children.

"If you look at what happened here, it's very clear that they were aware that they had a pedophile on their campus," Oliver said.

Will Spade, a former Philadelphia prosecutor who worked on a grand jury investigation of priests about a decade ago, agreed: "Spanier, Paterno, Schultz and Curley are arguably responsible for endangering all of those kids that were abused later."

So far, the only two figures arrested in the alleged coverup are Curley and Schultz. They were charged last fall with perjury and failure to report suspected child abuse and are awaiting trial. They have denied any wrongdoing.

Spanier, who was ousted as Penn State president over the scandal, has not been charged, but a grand jury continues to investigate. Paterno died in January of lung cancer at 85. victims looking to sue the university or Paterno's estate.

The report said that Paterno and the other university officials hushed up child sexual abuse allegations against Sandusky in 2001 for fear of bad publicity. Asked on Thursday whether the actions of the four men amounted to a crime such as conspiracy or obstruction, Freeh said that would be for a grand jury to decide. But the former FBI chief and federal judge said the evidence shows "an active agreement to conceal."

Freeh described Paterno as "an integral part" of that agreement. According to his report, Spanier, Schultz and Curley drew up a plan that called for reporting Sandusky to the state Department of Public Welfare in 2001. But Curley later said in an email that he changed his mind "after giving it more thought and talking it over with Joe."

The report also called into was spotted assaulting a boy in the locker room showers.

"I do not know of anything else that Jerry would be involved in of that nature, no," Paterno testified in a grand jury appearance that lasted only a few minutes. He added that a rumor "may have been discussed in my presence, something else about somebody. I don't know. I don't remember, and I could not honestly say I heard a rumor."

But emails published in the Freeh report suggest Paterno closely followed a 1998 police investigation of Sandusky that ended without charges. In an email captioned "Jerry," Curley asked Schultz: "Anything new in this department? Coach is anxious to know where it stands."

Paterno, "were he alive, he would probably be scrutinized right now, as we speak, by a grand jury," said Jeff Anderson, a lawyer who represents a young man suing Sandusky, Penn State and Sandusky's charity over claims of sexual abuse.

Saints, Brees Agree to $100 Million Deal

ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW ORLEANS • Drew Brees and the Saints reached a deal on par with the quarterback's recordsetting play, giving New Orleans' fans some news they can celebrate after an offseason rife with turmoil.

The team announced Friday that it had agreed to a five-year contract with Brees. A person familiar with the deal said it's for $100 million, with $60 million guaranteed.

The deal will also pay the quarterback $40 million the first year, the person told The Associated Press on condition of anonymity because financial details had not been publicly announced.

Brees posted a note on his Twitter page reading, "Deal is Done! Love you, Who Dat Nation. See you soon!"

He had been tagged as the Saints' exclusive franchise player and could not negotiate with other teams.

Had a deal not been reached, the tender for a quarterback was worth $16.3 million. Brees would have had to play for that amount or hold out for a better one-year deal, which would have left his long-term future in New Orleans uncertain.

Brees skipped the Saints' offseason practices while holding out for his new longterm contract, which now gives him the highest average annual pay ($20 million) in NFL history. Buffalo defensive end Mario Williams also has a $100 million contract, but for six years.

Now Brees is set to report for the opening of Saints training camp on July 24, a needed dose of good news for a club whose offseason has been plagued by the bounty scandal that resulted in the season-long suspensions of head coach Sean Payton and linebacker Jonathan Vilma, among other sanctions.

"Congratulations are in order for our organization, our city, Drew and (his wife) Brittany and certainly for (general manager) Mickey Loomis and his staff," Saints owner Tom Benson said in a Brees' teammates quickly took to the social media website Twitter to congratulate him.

Safety Malcolm Jenkins wrote "Congrats bro … You've changed the game on and off the field!!! No one deserves it more than you … See u on the 24th."

Even LSU coach Les Miles chimed in, tweeting: "It's a great day for New Orleans and the state of Louisiana. Congrats to both Drew Brees and the Saints on reaching a deal. Who Dat!"

Paterno family spokesman Dan McGinn declined to comment on the criminal legal issues on Friday.

At the very least, the Freeh report provides powerful ammunition to Sandusky question the truthfulness of Paterno's grand jury testimony last year, when he was asked whether he knew of any abuse allegations against Sandusky before the 2001 episode in which Sandusky "When he did give testimony, now revealed to have been dubious at best and false on its face, that is illegal perjury because it was given under oath. So he is exposed."

"Does the university want to completely wipe the slate clean? If they do, then they probably want to get rid of something like this — they can still honor Joe in a different way," said Erik Sandell, of Minneapolis, while visiting the Paterno statue with a friend on Friday. "Get rid of this, get rid of that facility."

The statue outside Beaver Stadium served as a focal point for mourners of the late coach, but it has turned into a target for critics angered by former FBI director Louis Freeh's findings that Paterno, Spanier and other university administrators concealed allegations against Sandusky in 1998 and 2001 to avoid bad publicity.

Some newspaper columnists and former Florida

State coach Bobby Bowden have said the statue should be taken down.

"You go to a Penn State football game and there's 100,000 people down there and they got that statute and you know doggone well they'll start talking about Sandusky," Bowden told the AP. "If it was me, I wouldn't want to have it brought up every time I walked out on the field."

University trustees chairwoman Karen Peetz said Friday that the topic of honoring Paterno — a rallying cry for alumni and former players angered by how he was fired days after Sandusky was arrested in November — remained a sensitive issue that would continue to be discussed.

"It's going to take a lot of dialogue with the community," Peetz said. "We want to be reflective, we want to go slowly, and it will be something that will take a lot of deliberation." Anthony Lubrano was a vocal critic of the Penn State board's actions in November before winning election as a trustee this spring. Asked Friday if the statue should be taken down, Lubrano said, "I think this board recognizes the contributions of Joe Paterno at Penn State, and I think that given that they understand all that he's done, he will certainly be respected by Penn State."

While the most glaring on-campus reminder of the scandal might be the Mildred and Louis Lasch Football Building, the Lasch family has no qualms about leaving its name on it, a family member said Friday.

"You don't build a building and put your name on it expecting that something like this is going to happen, but we have seen a lot of good things happen in that building ... and we expect to see a lot of good, "Does the university want to completely wipe the slate clean? If they do, then they probably want to get rid of something like this — they can still honor Joe in a different way."

honorable things happen in that building in the future," said Ken Smukler, a grandson of the Laschs, who helped startPenn State football's booster club in 1959 and donated $1.7 million to build what is billed as one of the finest collegiate football operations facilities in the nation.

Hawks 5-1 victory. Trae Bishop's two-run single in the first inning proved to be the game-winning hit.

For six innings in the opener, Hurd was dominant. He didn't allow a hit until the fifth, and only one Panther baserunner reached scoring position. Even after giving up a pair of singles in the fifth, Hurd rebounded by getting Trey Serr to strike out to end the inning on a positively dazzling curveball.

Whether it was nerves or fatigue that befell Hurd in the seventh – he insisted it was the latter – he knows he will be better prepared for such a situation the next time it comes around.

"In the seventh inning my arm got really tired," said Hurd, who added he first started feeling fatigued in the sixth. "I tried but I'll do better next time."

"He did a great job," Bishop said. "But he's got to dig in and finish the job at that point."

The Hawks didn't go quietly in the seventh, albeit with some help. Pinch-hitter Kaleb Price reached base on shortstop Brett Parkinson's error, Conner Stubblefield drew a walk and Trae Bishop reached base on a dropped third strike to load the bases. But David Pak became the last of pitcher Kaden Schmitt's eight strikeouts, ending the game.

"If you put the ball in play and make them make plays, chances are good things will happen," said Bishop, whose team's only run was unearned and came on a throwing error in the first. "And we didn't do it again."

"Who knows if I'll ever go back again. I don't think it's one of those things like Spudman that you do every year. It's one of those things that you can say, 'Yeah, I did that,'" Redder said.

Schenk says she's "always living in pursuit of the perpetual challenge." In June she ran the 62-mile Sawtooth Relay solo, clocking the fastest time ever by a female.

"The reason I love (training for Alcatraz) is because I will become a better swimmer," said Schenk, who plans to compete at the Ironman World Championship in Kona, Hawaii.

The relative newbie in the group is Tilley, who started swimming just 18 months ago after deciding to get in shape by doing triathlons. In the process he's lost about 40 pounds and is already winning his age group at some races.

"It just sounds cool – swim Alcatraz," Tilley said. "There was a time I would have thought in my own mind something like that would be impossible to do. It doesn't seem like it will be that difficult now."

The bay water temperature is typically 59-62 degrees. The Snake River is currently 72 degrees, but the difference won't bother

• this group.

"I prefer open water swims to the pool," said Tilley, adding that he's never swam in the ocean, other than some snorkeling while on vacation. "I like the cooler water, I don't tire as much and not having to turn around at the end of the pool every time is nice."

People interested in joining these four swimmers, along with about 500 other, in the Alcatraz Invitational can register at www.serc.com.

St. Louis' Rafael Furcal steals second base ahead of the tag by Cincinnati shortstop Zack Cozart in the third inning of their game on Friday.

Teixeira, Yankees Rally Past Angels

ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK • Mark Teixeira homered twice and drove in five runs, Russell Martin hit a go-ahead single and the New York Yankees overcame yet another homer by Mark Trumbo to rally past the Los Angeles Angels 6-5 Friday night.

Teixeira's three-run shot and Martin's two-out single in the eighth inning overcame the Angels' 5-2 edge.

Trumbo homered in his fifth straight game against the Yankees, a three-run shot in the seventh.

INDIANS 1, BLUE JAYS 0 TORONTO • Justin Masterson pitched seven sharp innings, Travis Hafner homered and Cleveland beat Toronto.

RED SOX 3, RAYS 1

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. •David Ortiz hit his 23rd homer and Pedro Ciriaco had three hits and drove in two runs, helping Boston beat Tampa Bay.

TIGERS 7, ORIOLES 2

BALTIMORE • Miguel Cabrera and Jhonny Peralta homered, Doug Fister pitched seven innings of three-hit ball and Detroit beat Baltimore for its sixth straight victory.

ATHLETICS 6, TWINS 3

MINNEAPOLIS • Jonny Gomes' grand slam helped Oakland overcome a career-high 15 strikeouts from Francisco Liriano and beat Minnesota. Liriano's 15 strikeouts were the second most in Twins' history and most since Johan Santana fanned 17 Texas batters at the Metrodome on Aug. 19, 2007.

National League

NATIONALS 5, MARLINS 1 MIAMI • Ryan Zimmerman hit a two-run homer, Jesus Flores drove in two runs, and Washington beat Miami.

REDS 5, CARDINALS 3

CINCINNATI • St. Louis first baseman Allen Craig's throwing error in the seventh inning helped Cincinnati rally for its fourth straight win.

CUBS 8, DIAMONDBACKS 1

CHICAGO • Alfonso Soriano homered twice, doubled twice and had five RBIs in a game that was delayed at the start nearly four hours by rain.

BRAVES 7, METS 5

ATLANTA • David Ross homered and drove in four runs, Chipper Jones also connected and Atlanta beat New York.

ROCKIES 6, PHILLIES 2

DENVER • Christian Friedrich pitched six strong innings, Josh Rutledge had two hits and two RBIs in his major league debut and Colorado beat Philadelphia.

BREWERS 10, PIRATES 7 MILWAUKEE • Cody Ransom hit his first career

Millar Wins Longest Stage; Wiggins Keeps Tour Lead

ASSOCIATED PRESS

ANNONAY, France • David Millar, a reformed "ex-doper," won a stage at the Tour de France on Friday, saying his victory is proof riders can win cleanly.

His British compatriot, Bradley Wiggins, is of like mind. Wiggins, who holds the overall lead, is looking to not only win the race when it ends July 22 but win over cycling fans troubled by the sport's long history with drugs.

won today a clean rider after making the same mistakes that Tommy made."

He added: "I hope that today I've shown where cycling has come in the last 45 years, and even in the last five years."

Millar, who rides for the U.S. Garmin-Sharp team, has been cycling's most vocal critic of doping for years. The 35-year-old Scotsman says he learned hard lessons after "making a mess" of his life through drugs.

"I'm an ex-doper and I'm clean now, and I want to show everyone that it's possible to win clean on the Tour."

Tom Lehman and Corey Pavin were in a pack that will go into the weekend two strokes back.

The 56-year-old Ten Broeck finished tied for 71st in June at his only other Champions Tour event this year. He has a 36-hole lead for the first time in his playing career. The Chicagoan had a share of the lead after two rounds at the PGA Tour's Hall of Fame classic in 1982 and he finished tied for 12th.

PGA John Deere Classic

SILVIS, Ill. • Troy Matteson shot a 3-underpar 68 for a one-stroke lead over Jeff Maggert and Brian Harman after two rounds.

Matteson was at 13-under 129.

Maggert's bogev-free round of 9-under 62 moved him from 39th place after the first round to a tie for second. He birdied half the holes at TPC Deere Run, including five of his last nine.

Harman had a second straight 65, the last two of his seven birdies coming after a 48minute thunderstorm delay.

Matteson bogeved the par-4 18th after getting four birdies in the first 17 holes.

J.J. Henry, Gary Christian, Robert Garrigus and Ricky Barnes are tied for fourth at 11under 131.

A trio of players are at 10-under 132, including three-time defending champion Steve Stricker, whose 4-under 67 placed him within striking distance with 36 holes to play. Tommy Biershenk and two-time U.S. Open champion Lee Janzen are also at 132. Zach Johnson shot 6under 65 and was at 9-under 133.

Scottish Open

INVERNESS, Scotland • Phil Mickelson broke out of his slump with an 8-under 64, leaving him five shots off the second-round lead shared by Alexander Noren and Francesco Molinari.

Noren's second straight round of 66 to move to 12 under alongside Molinari, who couldn't match his blistering 62 on Thursday but managed a 70.

Mickelson charged up the leaderboard in an overcast but largely wind-free round at the Castle Stuart links. The three-time Masters champion broke par for the first time since May. He had an eagle and six birdies, putting him in a strong position for the weekend.

Injury Knocks Griffin off Olympic Team

ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON • Blake Griffin has officially withdrawn from the Olympics and Anthony Davis has been added to the U.S. basketball team's roster.

Griffin needs surgery to repair torn cartilage in his left knee and joins a lengthy list of American stars that are sidelined this summer.

Davis replaced him in the Americans' 113-59 exhibition victory over the Dominican Republic on Thursday in Las Vegas, scoring nine points in the fourth quarter. The No. 1 overall draft pick couldn't be put on the 12-man roster for London until Griffin had withdrawn Friday.

"Blake worked extremely hard in our training camp and certainly would have been a valuable contributor,"

USA Basketball chairman Jerry Colangelo said in a statement. "This is another unfortunate injury, but we have to continue to move on and we're very fortunate to have Anthony Davis available. Anthony offers our team additional height and length, and this will be an incredible experience for him."

Davis sprained his ankle during a workout with the New Orleans Hornets and was unable to scrimmage when the Americans opened training camp last Friday, ruining any chance he had of making the original 12-man roster. But Colangelo, intrigued by Davis' skills, asked the 6-foot-10 forward to stick around with the select team of young players that was training against the national team, knowing he

TIMES-NEWS Saturday, July 14, 2012 • Sports 5 Judge Upholds Child Support in Russian Adoption

BY KRISTIN M. HALL Associated Press

LEWISBURG, Tenn. • The Tennessee woman who ended her adoption of a 7-year-old Russian boy by putting him on a plane to Moscow by himself lost her bid Friday to keep from paying $150,000 in child support.

Torry Hansen made her first court appearance Friday in a case that began in April 2010 when she sent Artyom Saveliev away from her home in Shelbyville with a letter that said he had violent behavior problems and she no longer wanted to be his mother.

Criminal charges were never filed but the Seattle-based adoption agency she used, the World Association for Children and Parents, sued her last year for child support.

Hansen, who now lives in Redding, Calif., went through a string of lawyers as she contested the child support and never responded to summonses to appear in court or at depositions. After Circuit Court Judge Lee Russell ordered her in May to pay $150,000 in child support, she hired a new attorney, former federal prosecutor Edward Yarbrough of Nashville.

Torry Hansen, right, sits with her attorney Ed Yarbrough, Friday in Lewisburg, Tenn. Hansen, who ended her Russian adoption by sending the 7-year-old boy to Moscow on a plane by himself lost her bid to get a judge to set aside an order that she pay child support.

In court on Friday, Hansen told the judge her previous attorneys did not keep her informed about the case and advised her she did not need to come to court. She also said that she gave birth to a daughter last year and could not come to court because of the pregnancy.

Hansen never spoke to the press before Friday, but her mother, Nancy Hansen, told The Associated Press in 2010 that her daughter, then 33, had to return the boy when he developed serious behavior problems. Nancy Hansen claimed he hit, screamed and spit at his adoptive mother and threatened to burn down the Hansen home and kill members of the family.

JUDGE GRANTS MORE TIME TO MISS. ABORTION CLINIC

BY EMILY WAGSTER PETTUS Associated Press

JACKSON, Miss. • A federal judge on Friday allowed Mississippi's anti-abortion law to take effect but said the state's only clinic can remain open and will not face any penalties as it tries to comply with new requirements.

U.S. District Judge Daniel P. Jordan III gave the clinic and the state each a partial victory with his ruling on the clinic's request for a preliminary injunction. The law requires anyone who does abortions at the clinic to be an OB-GYN with privileges to admit patients to a local hospital. The clinic's two out-of-state OB-GYNS don't have those privileges and have had difficulty getting them from local hospihave applied for admitting privileges at most Jacksonarea hospitals but haven't received responses. When clinic employees called a Catholic hospital to ask about applying for privileges, clinic owner Diane Derzis recently said, "We were told not to bother."

The clinic sued the state June 27 seeking to block the law. Jordan temporarily blocked the measure July 1, the day it was supposed to take effect. He heard arguments Wednesday about the clinic's request for a longer injunction, and granted the request in part on Friday.

"The act will be allowed to take effect, but plaintiffs will not be subject to the risk of criminal or civil penalties at this time or in the future for operating without the relevant privileges," the judge wrote.

sissippi "abortion-free."

"Mississippi will continue

I can say he was very violent. I can say he wanted to kill me and he tried to kill my sister," Torry Hansen said in court Friday.

She said the boy threatened to stab her mother to death. She started to tear up when describing how the threats of violence sent her mother to the emergency room in Shelbyville.

"That was when my parents decided to take him, because he was so violent," she said.

She said it was her parents' decision to put the boy on a flight to Russia, but she was aware of the decision and acquiesced.

"I have never mistreated or abused him or any child," she said.

Under cross examination, Torry Hansen told the court that she never called the police or the state Department of Children's Services about his behavior.

"I called numerous psychologists and was told there would be a 6-week wait to get in," she said.

When asked whether she was aware that a Russian court found that her actions constituted neglect and abuse, she said, "I am aware that they felt putting him on the plane was emotionally disturbing?"

Ruling from the bench, Judge Russell upheld his default judgment against Hansen, ordering her to pay child support for Artyom, who now lives in a group home in a Moscow suburb. Russell said Hansen had not cooperated with the court and he wasn't convinced by her arguments.

Yarbrough said Hansen has been making the child-support payments and will be required to continue doing so.

The case contributed to a decision by Russia in 2010 to delay some adoptions by U.S. parents. Russia on Monday ratified a new agreement with the United States that gives the country greater power to regulate international adoptions.

After the judge's ruling, Yarbrough said the litigation is not over and his client still has options, such as appealing the order or requesting that it be modified.

"I think it is a loss, we wanted the judge to set aside the default judgment and have a full trial, but there are other options for us," he said.

The attorney for the adoption agency, Brentwood attorney Larry Crain, said the child spent six weeks in a psychiatric hospital when he was returned to Russia because of the trauma he experienced.

tals

The ruling gives the clinic time to seek the privileges during the next several months. Jordan wrote that the dispute over the law is a "fluid situation?"

"We do not yet know whether the clinic will obtain admitting and staff privileges," the judge wrote. "As both parties stated during the hearing, the resolution of that issue will impact the ultimate issues in this case?

The clinic, Jackson Women's Health Organization, said it could be forced out of business with the admitting privileges requirement, making it nearly impossible to get an abortion in Mississippi.

The U.S. Supreme Court ruled states can't place undue burdens on, or create substantial obstacles to, women seeking abortions.

The clinic said its OB-GYNs

Jordan noted that during Wednesday's hearing, clinic attorneys said the facility would continue to seek hospital admitting privileges. He wrote that he blocked penalties because the clinic had shown it would face "irreparable injury" if criminal prosecution or civil penalties were possible if the clinic didn't obtain the privileges quickly.

"Given the highly charged political context of this case and the ambiguity still present, the court finds that there would be a chilling effect on the plaintiffs' willingness to continue operating the clinic until they obtained necessary privileges," he wrote.

Supporters of the law passed by the GOP-controlled Legislature this year said it's designed to protect patients, and Republican Gov. Phil Bryant has said he

Elmer Lee Miller

April 14, 1931-July 10, 2012

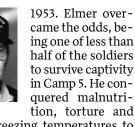

KIMBERLY • Elmer Lee Miller, 81, of Kimberly, Idaho, and formerly of Burley passed away Tuesday, July 10, 2012, at St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center after a long battle with illness.

Elmer was born April 14, 1931, in Gardner, Kan., to Samuel and Rosa Miller.

He is survived by his four children, Gary Lee Hoffman (Mary) of West Valley, Utah, Beverly Schrenk (Doug Archer) of Kimberly, LaVina Dixson (Preston) of Idaho Falls and Sara Brooks (Brandon) of Sedgwick, Kan.; two sisters, Ramona Magee of Anacoco, La., and Lonna Lowry of Glenpool, Okla.; three half brothers, Joe of Neosho, Mo., Danny of Rocky Comfort, Mo., and Gary Miller. He was also blessed with eight grandchildren, Melissa, Carrie, Krystal, Scott, Lynette, Ethan, Kinsey and Crysania; and 12 great-grandchildren. He was preceded in death by his ex-wife, Mary Ann; his wife, Phyllis; his mother and father; a sister; two brothers; and a son-in-law, Hugh Allen Schrenk.

Elmer enlisted in the Army in 1948 at the age of 17, lying about his age so he could serve his country and provide for his family. He served during the Korean War with Heavy Mortar Company, 24th Division, 19th Regiment. He was captured in November of 1950 and was a prisoner of war in Camp 5 until August freezing temperatures to return to his family and offer his support, wisdom, humor and love to those he cared about for the rest of his days. When he returned from the war, he worked a variety of odd jobs ranging from a mechanic to security guard for Pinkerton Security until his retirement in 2002.

He enjoyed working out doors, watching television (especially sci-fi, old cartoons and history shows), visiting with family and friends (or as he would say, "shooting the breeze"), and giving people a hard time. He referred to himself as the "the mean old ironman"), but those who knew and loved him saw the depth of his kindness and compassion. Elmer was a regular at the Depot Grill and Norm's Cafe.

A viewing will be held from 6 to 8 p.m. Sunday, July 15, at Rosenau Funeral Home, 2826 Addison Ave. E. The funeral will be held at 1 p.m. Monday, July 16, at Rosenau Funeral Home. Burial will follow at Sunset Memorial Park, with military honors. The family suggests memorials to Rosenau Funeral Home to assist the family with expenses. Family and friends can share memories at www.rosenaufuneral home.com.

Colorado Housing Hangover Saps Taxes as School Obligation Grows

JENNIFER OLDHAM Bloomberg News

DENVER • Six years after the housing crisis hit Colorado, Claire and Alan Pegg are at risk of losing their home in the Denver suburb of Brighton. Left without an income after their tree farm failed, Claire says she isn't sure her family will be able to keep the ranch-style house they've owned for eight years.

"We have no savings and nothing to fall back on," said Claire Pegg, a 39-year-old mother of two who does voiceover work by day and waits tables at night. "If things go well for a few years we'll get back on our feet, but if anything else happens we'll be out."

While housing prices in the Denver area bottomed out last year and are now posting modest gains, thousands of homeowners are still trapped in homes worth less than they paid, and foreclosures continue to sap property-tax revenue in hard-hit Denver suburbs, forcing the state to raise its share of funding for public schools in those areas and statewide.

The same factors are putting pressure on state governments and school districts nationally, as the lingering effects of the housing crisis are expected to chill property-tax collections into next year and beyond. That's because home prices remain far below pre-crisis levels, and reassessments raising taxes lag behind upticks in property values by as long as three years.

"Property-tax revenues are projected to be essentially flat at the national level," said Tony Yezer, a professor of economics at the Elliott School of International Affairs at Washington-based George Washington University. "That means in real terms, adjusted for inflation, they are down. That's very unusual."

In Colorado, the decline in property-tax revenue, coupled with a falloff in sales and income taxes, meant schools got $1 billion less than they needed to cover expenses over the past four years, Leanne Emm, assistant commissioner of public school finance for the Colorado Department of Education, said in an interview.

Foreclosure sales in Colorado fell to 19,600 in 2011, down 22 percent from a peak of 25,054 in 2007 and the lowest level since the housing crisis began in 2006, according to data from the Colorado Division of Housing. Housing prices in the Denver metro area, meanwhile, rose 3 percent since last September and are down 8.5 percent from their peak in March 2006, according to the S&P Case-Shiller Index.

Oscarwinning Producer Dead at 77 BY BOB THOMAS AND

LYNN ELBER Associated Press

LOS ANGELES • Film producer Richard Zanuck, who won the best picture Oscar for "Driving Miss Daisy" and was involved in such blockbuster films as "Jaws" and "The Sting" after his father, Hollywood mogul Darryl F. Zanuck, fired him from 20th Century Fox, died Friday. He was 77.

Zanuck's publicist says he died of a heart attack at his Beverly Hills home.

Zanuck's run of successes as an independent producer rivaled the achievements of his legendary father who reigned over 20th Century Fox from the 1930s until age and changing audience tastes brought him down.

The production company the younger Zanuck founded with David Brown produced "The Sting" in 1973, as well as Steven Spielberg's first feature film, "The Sugarland Express," in 1974 and Spielberg's first blockbuster, "Jaws," in 1975. "The Sting" also won the best movie Oscar, although Zanuck and Brown were not listed as its producers. "Jaws" was nominated for best picture, as was the Zanuck-produced "The Verdict."

Defuses Potential Crisis

BY TODD PITMAN AND THANYARAT DOKSONE Associated Press

BANGKOK • Thailand's Constitutional Court defused a potential political crisis Friday by dismissing a complaint that the ruling party's attempt to amend the constitution amounted to plotting to overthrow the monarchy.

Had the court sustained the complaint, it could have or dered Prime Minister Yingluck Shinawatra's party dissolved just a year after the landslide election that brought it to power. Many feared such a ruling would have provoked mass street protests and possible violence.

Thailand's constitution was written in 2007 under an interim, unelected government temporarily in power after a military coup. Seeing the charter as undemocratic, lawmakers from Yingluck's Pheu Thai party wanted to establish a drafting committee to amend it. In reading the compromise verdict, judge Nurak Marpraneet said the charter could be amended section by section, though it could not be entirely rewritten.

Nurak then said "there are not enough facts to show" the charter amendment aimed to topple the constitutional monarchy. "What the complainants indicated in the petition was merely speculation," he said.

The complex legal case was the latest convulsion of a sometimes-violent tugof-war between allies and adversaries of the exiled billionaire Thaksin Shinawatra, the populist former prime minister who was overthrown six years ago. It also marked one of the biggest tests yet of the stability of the government led by Yingluck, Thaksin's sister, whose election victory was widely viewed as a referendum on Thaksin's rule.

Pheu Thai lawmaker Korkaew Pikulthong said the decision set a bad precedent, giving the court "the authority to intervene in the affairs of the legislative branch?"

Congress Presses for Harsher Sanctions on Iran

BY JASON REZAIAN

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON • Congress is moving to dramatically tighten economic sanctions against Iran as lawmakers from both major parties express impatience over U.S. efforts to halt the expansion of Iran's nuclear program.

House and Senate officials began crafting legislation this week that congressional leaders say will deepen the pain for Iran across multiple fronts, making it even harder for Iranian businesses to purchase insurance, obtain foreign financing and export goods.

The proposals, some of which could carry financial risks for U.S. allies as well as for Iran, have attracted scores of Republican and Democratic co-sponsors, who say they will push for passage before the August recess. Supporters say the measures would build on sanctions approved last year that helped trim Iran's oil exports by 40 percent.

"What we've done so far has been good, but it's clearly not enough," said Rep. Howard L. Berman (Calif.), the ranking Democrat on the House Foreign Affairs Committee, which is drafting a new sanctions bill. "The pressure needs to intensify."

The search for additional leverage against Iran comes as the Obama administration announced measures intended to expand the list of Iranian companies and individuals covered by existing U.S. sanctions. Treasury Department officials on Thursday named Iran's main oil tanker conglomerate, the National Iranian Tanker Co., to the U.S. blacklist, along with several suspected front companies and financial institutions accused of helping Iran circumvent restrictions on its oil exports.

Some of the firms are alleged to have masked the exports by repainting or reflagging oil tankers to conceal the country of origin, Treasury officials said.

The sanctions also tried to strike at Iran's ongoing efforts to acquire nuclear and missile technology, listing 11 individuals and groups said to have aided those efforts.

4 Drug Tunnels Found along U.S.-Mexico Border

BY ELLIOT SPAGAT AND JACQUES BILLEAUD Associated Press

TIJUANA, Mexico • Three sophisticated drug tunnels equipped with lighting and ventilation — including one with a railcar system were discovered along the U.S. - Mexico border in less than a week, the latest signs that cartels are building passages to escape heightened detection above ground.

Two of the tunnels were incomplete, including one the Mexican army found in a Tijuana warehouse Thursday with more than 40 tons of marijuana at the entry. The passage extended nearly 400 yards, including more than 100 yards into the United States.

Soldiers found the Tijuana warehouse with four moving trucks full of marijuana, a trailer full of dirt, pickaxes, wheelbarrows, drills and other excavation equipment. The tunnel was equipped with a railcar system.

The Mexican army said three people were detained.

It was the second, major incomplete tunnel discovered in the San Diego-Tijuana area in two days and the fourth along the U.S.-Mexico border since Saturday, when a completed passage was found in a vacant strip mall storefront in the southwestern Arizona city of San Luis.

An incomplete tunnel along Arizona's border with Mexico was found Friday during an inspection of a drainage system on the Mexican side of Nogales in early stages of construction, said U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement spokeswoman Amber Cargile. No arrests have been made in the investigation of the crude passage.

The 240-yard tunnel in San Luis, Ariz., showed a level of sophistication not typically associated with other crude smuggling passageways that tie into storm drains in the state.

"When you see what is there and the way they designed it, it wasn't something that your average miner could put together," said Douglas Coleman, special agent in charge of the Phoenix division of the Drug Enforcement Administration. "You would need someone with some engineering expertise to put something together like this."

As Thursday's massive pot seizure in Tijuana demonstrated, tunnels have become an increasingly common way to smuggle enormous loads of heroin, marijuana and other drugs into the country. More than 70 passages were found on the border since October 2008, surpassing the number of discoveries in the previous six years.

More than 150 secret tunnels were found along the border since 1990, the vast majority of them incomplete, according to U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement. Raids last November on two tunnels linking San Diego and Tijuana netted a combined 52 tons of marijuana on both sides of the border.

The first Arizona tunnel was discovered after state police pulled over a man who had 39 pounds of methamphetamine in his vehicle and mentioned the strip mall.

The tunnel was found beneath a water tank in a storage room and stretched across the border to an ice-plant business in the Mexican city of San Luis Rio Colorado. It was reinforced with fourby-six beams and lined with plywood.

VISA, MASTERCARD IN $6B SETTLEMENT OVER CARD FEES

BY ANNE D'INNOCENZIO AND PALLAVI GOGOI Associated Press

NEW YORK • Visa, Master-Card and major banks agreed to pay retailers at least $6 billion to settle a long-running lawsuit that alleged the card issuers conspired to fix the fees that stores pay to accept credit cards. As part of the settlement, announced late Friday, stores from Rite Aid to Kroger will be allowed to charge customers more if they pay using a credit card.

The pact, which is being called by lawyers involved in the case the largest antitrust settlement in U.S. history, is seen as a major victory for merchants have long complained about the billions of dollars in so-called swipe or interchange fees that they pay to banks for purchases made using plastic. But at a time when shoppers increasingly use credit and debit cards, merchants will face a dilemma: Whether to charge shoppers extra for using plastic, and if so, how to do so without angering them.

Marilyn Landis, who was last year's chairwoman of the National Small Business Association, said that the settlement is a victory for small businesses across the country because it could ultimately lead to banks lowering the fees they charge stores for customers' credit card purchases.

Landis, who owns Pittsburgh-based financial services firm Basic Business Concepts, said that would be a big relief. She's now paying 3.75 percent each time a customer pays with a credit card. If bank card companies reduce the fees they charge her to 2.75 percent, she would save a dollar on every $100 in sales.

"That's huge," she said. According to the National Retail Federation, the nation's largest retail group, swipe fees cost stores about $30 billion per year. Mallory Duncan, senior vice president and general counsel for the group, said the settlement is a step in the right direction. "What we need are changes in the rules that bring about transparency and competition that would be here for years to come," he said.

The dispute between stores and banks dates back to 2005. That's when large retailers, including Kroger Co., Safeway Inc. and Walgreen Co. began filing pricefixing lawsuits against Visa, MasterCard and other banks.

The retailers claimed the credit card issuers worked together to fix the fees that stores pay to accept credit and debit cards. The fees, which vary depending on the type of store and the type of card issues, average about 2 percent of the price of a purchase.

Visa and MasterCard make money on the fees that stores pay for each customer that uses credit or debit cards for their purchases. The fees are set by card processing networks but collected by, and split with, the banks that issue the cards.

The card companies long have defended the fees they charge stores. They say stores benefit from being able to accept credit and debit cards from customers, who often spend more when they're using plastic instead of cash or checks.

Chalk Protests at Downtown L.A.'s ArtWalk Draw a Defiant New Line

BY ROSANNA XIA, RICHARD WINTON AND SAM ALLEN

Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES • The chalk scrawls began showing up in downtown Los Angeles in May.

Members of the Occupy L.A. movement, with the support of some homeless rights advocates, used pastel chalk to express their anger about gentrification in downtown and how, in their view, it was pushing the poor out.

For weeks, the chalk protests were little noticed, and Los Angeles police quietly began arresting the socalled chalkers on vandalism charges.

But on Thursday, a small group of activists gathered at the corner of 5th and Spring streets during the heart of downtown's popular monthly ArtWalk, handing out chalk to passersby and using the sidewalks as their canvas for more antigentrification and some anti-police slogans.

For reasons that are not entirely clear, clashes began between some activists and Los Angeles Police Department officers, resulting in a melee that left four officers injured and more than 15 people arrested. The LAPD called a citywide tactical alert, streamed hundreds of officers into downtown and used less-than-lethal rubber bullets to disperse the crowd. The incident highlights long-simmering tensions as downtown L.A.'s major revitalization — after decades of decline — has ushered in thousands of new residents as well as upscale lofts, restaurants and galleries to the city core. The gentrification has transformed large swaths of downtown, but it has spread into areas that were traditionally home to some of L.A.'s poorest residents.

Occupy L.A. has made this a central focus as it attempts to rebound since the group's eviction from City Hall park last year. Both Occupy and Los Angeles Community Action Network, a homeless and lowincome advocacy group, have targeted the Central City Association, the leading downtown business organization, with their protests.

Many of the chalk protests occurred outside the CCA's offices on Wilshire Boulevard, which have been hit by nightly encampments as well as loud demonstrations. But it was Thursday's demonstration at ArtWalk – which is one of the most successful community events of the revitalized downtown – that got the attention.

Soldiers of the Cross

n spite of all resources and ease of access to biblical teaching, we may be among the most spiritually anemic generation of believers in American history. When is the last time the world characterized the church in America with supernatural power of the Holy Spirit? Are we raising diplomats or soldiers of the cross?

I fear many have planted the gospel banner in the rear guard and have hunkered down in the winter quarters.

Read this excerpt from Robert F. Horton's 1903 Missionary Review of the World:

"The Church exist simply and solely to deliver the message, to deliver it to all men. The expansive movement, therefore, is not accidental or occasional, but permanent and essential. Only as the banners move forward does the army remain in discipline. (The church)can know nothing of barracks or of winter quarters, for its purpose is to move on, and always on, until the message is delivered to all nations and the (gospel) is the common property of humanity.

"From this it follows that whenever, or if ever, or even so far as, the (church) forgets its functions, plants the banners, and settles down, it falls into disarray; it becomes disorganized, it is found to be ineffectual for the camp, as it is unequal to the march. When Christianity ceases to be a message, a world wide message, and becomes a system, a polity, it rapidly declines, it loses its tone; the shout of the king is no longer in the midst. The memorization of the arrested banners in the van rapidly spread to the rearguard.

"The first work of the church, the indispensable preliminary to all efficiency, is to resume the march, to advance the banners, to get the host in motion, to recover the watchword. If we would have the church effective for her simplest work, she must be true to the foremost work. She must inscribe on her ensigns and write in her heart the old word of God." Our spiritually anemic condition has crippled us, yet we cry out to God to once again pour out his Spirit in our day that the gospel banner may be advanced. God has moved us to once again place the gospel banner in the vanguard. Church of the living God, let us put on our "gospel-shoes" with urgency as we see the great day of the LORD drawing near. When is the last time we were on Mount Carmel? When Elijah was there he did not host a summit conference with the priests of Baal. Vance Havner, a preacher of old, said it like this: "It was Baal or Jehovah, and in the showdown, the God that answered by fire, let Him be God."

Episcopal Church of the Ascension in Twin Falls offers healing services twice a month.

Healing services at Magic Valley churches help believers with spiritual, physical challenges.

BY ANDREW WEEKS aweeks@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • Toward the end of church services on a recent Sunday at the Episcopal Church of the Ascension, several congregants rose from their seats and walked toward an altar at the back of the sanctuary.

Paul Thompson, pastor of Eastside Baptist Church in Twin Falls, may be reached at 734-7041 or paul@esbctwinfalls.com.

One woman kneeled, while the other people placed their hands upon her body. A prayer was offered to "drive away all sickness" of body and mind. Then the woman rose from the altar and joined others in the prayer circle, placing her own hands on the next one to kneel.

The scene was repeated until everyone in the circle had kneeled and received a prayer of healing.

"It gives them the strength and courage to face whatever it is they have to face," said Sue Carver, one of the women who kneeled at the altar on July 1. "The laving on of hands is a powerful message." What message? That group faith can help make miracles happen.

CHURCH SPOTLIGHT

MAZING GRACE FELLOW

What is your church's denomination?

We are a non-denominational Christian church, associated with Vision Ministry Fellowship. We are a church that promotes "Loving God, Loving People, and Loving Life."

When are church services?

We offer church services at 7 p.m. Saturday, 8:30 a.m. and 10:30 a.m. Sunday, and 7 p.m. Wednesday. Commissioned Youth is 7 p.m. Sunday, and The Pursuit for young adults is 7 p.m. Thursday.

How many members does your church have?

We have about 800 families.

Who is your church leadership? Our pastors and ministry staff include the Rev. Lynn Schaal, founding pastor; Rex Baker, missions and associate pastor; Rob Heidemann, worship leader; Josh Jensen, youth and young adult pastor; Dusty Lapp, who oversees pastoral care and life development; Kathrine Keller, director of our children's ministry; Ben Taylor, media ministries; and Dorette Schaal, ladies ministry and hospitality.

AGF's staff members are men and women who excel in their area of ministry and in helping and loving people. They serve together as a team. A board of elders, along with the ministry staff, make decisions to create a greater impact in the Magic Valley.

What are your key beliefs?

In short, we believe in God the Father, Jesus the Son, and the Holy Spirit and the good news of the gospel in God's Word, the Bible. Everyone has the opportunity to become saved or born again so that they can have an eternal home in heaven. God's provision is for every area of our life, spirit, soul and body. He has a great plan for our life, and our aim as believers is to glory Him and enjoy Him forever.

What's a typical service like? As you enter the AGF building you're greeted with a warm handshake and a smile. Service will begin with a welcome call to worship and prayer, and then there will be praise and worship through music for about 25 minutes. The praise and worship is lively and the songs are contemporary, accompanied by a band. Then there will be video announcements and an offering will be taken. Following, there will be relevant teaching, based topically for a well-rounded foundation in the Bible throughout the year. It is structured, but laid back and down to earth. The atmosphere is uplifting and upbeat and the service will last about 80 minutes.

Do you offer childcare?

There is child care in each service, and a secure system of computer check-in and check-out so your children are safe and protected while in our care.

What's your children's ministry like?

Our children's ministry, called Kidlink, is active and growing. We value children not only as future adult believers but as individuals who, when rooted in Godly principles and beliefs as children, will thrive as adults as they continue to serve the Lord. We want them to connect with God and with each other in relationship and friendship. They have their own ministry wing with dedicated, loving teachers under the direction of our Children's Ministry Director Kathrine Keller.

Describe your youth ministry:

Our youth ministry is called Commissioned Youth and is led by Pastor Josh Jensen. Youth are taught Godly principles of living the abundant life that God has for each believer. They have their own youth wing, and it is youth-centered in Please see CHURCH, S9

VOICES OF FAITH God Didn't Help Me in a Crisis, So Has He Let Me Down?

MCCLATCHY NEWSPAPERS

Worthy of Help?

Over the years I have engaged in prayer with people for many different reasons. Sometimes what they prayed for happened. Sometimes it didn't.

Is there a God somewhere in the heavens judging what prayers to answer and what prayers not to? If so, what criteria does that God use? Does he answer prayer based on a person's worthiness; how often one goes to church; how desperate or incapable one is?

I believe the answer to all of the above is no. Whatever your conception is of God, an old man on a throne or the spiritual energy of the universe that is the essence of your being, God doesn't intervene in our lives. Every living thing has been given everything it needs to live a comfortable and fulfilling life. As human beings we have intelligence, power, imagination, faith, perseverance and many other spiritual attributes.

At times life can be very difficult, but we have been given what is necessary to rise above, move beyond or successfully manage situations and circumstances that arise. We might not like the end result at times, but that's life. When faced with challenges I suggest you get off your knees, back on your feet and step forward, knowing one step at a time, one day at a time will lead you out of the darkness and into the light. - The Rev. Duke Tufty, pastor of Unity Temple on the Plaza, Kansas City, Mo.

Not What You Expected

We are often terrible judges as to what is the best thing for us. When a crisis arises in our lives, we can sometimes create the conditions by which successes, relief or recoveries are measured. That is, we often wield the measuring stick in determining whether God addressed our need.

As God reveals himself in human history, through prophets and kings and eventually in the person of Jesus Christ, he demonstrates a response to our needs that refuses to be dictated by our own timelines or barometers. Instead, God surpasses hopes and expectations. He feeds the hungry with leftovers in tow. He not only forgives sins, but commands the lame to rise and walk. He miraculously produces more wine, saving the best for last.

If God does not answer in the way in which we asked him to intervene, it is not a sign of his absence or his indifference. Rather, such an occasion is an invitation to remain open to how God is addressing and responds to the cry of our hearts. In his son, Jesus, God shows how much he cares about humanity, answering our fallen condition in the most unexpected manner: "he emptied himself, taking the form of a slave." (Philippians 2:7) God knows our needs. May we always trust in God's salvific care, even when not in the manner we expect.

– The Rev. Justin Hoye, pastor of St. Patrick Catholic Church, Kansas City, Mo.

Rev. Deb Seles, but usually at least a few come to receive strength through the prayers.

"In our tradition, healing is related to wholeness," she said. "Wholeness can come about in many different ways. Certainly it could come about in the restoration of health."

The church uses prayer books, based on Scriptures like Psalms 23, but those who act as voice can say their own prayers to fit a certain need. That, sometimes, is what Seles does. Only a priest can anoint with holy oil, she said, but any of the church's congregants can lay their hands on the prayer recipient.

"We give praise to God and ask that he drive away all sickness in body and spirit," Seles said, noting that prayers can be given to even help heal broken relationships and other emotional trauma.

time they seek spiritual or emotional health. Knowing that they have a group of likeminded believers praying for them is encouraging, she said.

For many, the opportunity to serve someone else through the healing prayers becomes a personal experience that helps them feel closer to God.

"It's pretty powerful," Ballard said. "It's a pretty direct connection to God. I'm in the moment at that time."

Life Church of the Magic Valley in Jerome also performs healing services on the first Sunday of each month, and it offers a healing station every Monday evening.

The Rev. Tammy Yearsley, the church's worship pastor, said the church has witnessed a number of healings at services over the years, including the diminishing of pain in sore backs and hips, agnosed with cancer, but after a prayer of healing he went to his next doctor's appointment to find that the growth could no longer be detected in his body. It was a miracle, Yearsley said.

Healing services at the church involve laying on of hands - sometimes. Mainly, they try to follow the Spirit of God, whatever they believe it might dictate.

"Sometimes there's more of a corporate receiving, whatever God is releasing in services at those times," she said.

Healing services also are good training ground for church members, Yearsley said, because it helps them become more attuned to working with people.

"We try to take the needs of the community out to the people, to pray with them in their neighborhoods, in the marketplace, at community events....

to God.

Joyce Ballard

It's not meant to stay within the four walls of the building."

While most who seek healing at the services come because of physical ailments, Yearsley said, sometimes prayers also help their spirits.

"Sometimes they come up to be ministered to for a physical blessing, but what comes out of it might highlight something else," she said. "If you take care of the pain in the heart, a lot of times it helps the physical ailment."

Healing is not a complicated issue if you understand the mission of Jesus Christ, she said. "It really is so simple in that Jesus has come to meet the needs of people and will show what needs to happen to bring somebody around to wholeness."

décor and activities. They meet together at 7 p.m. each Sunday and Wednesday.

We also have a young adults and college ministry called Pursuit, which meets at 7 p.m.Thursdays. During the school year, college students, on the first Sunday of the month, are invited to a free meal after second service.

What other programs do you provide?

We operate on a semester system from September to December, January to May, and June to August. During each semester we have many short-term small group options to be involved in, which we call Grace Groups. We have sports teams for recreation that include volleyball and softball, ultimate Frisbee, and Frisbee golf. We have marriage mentors, financial and parenting classes, and Bible studies and interest groups for ladies and men at various times on various topics. Our largest ladies outreach is our annual ladies Rejoice Conference and a 5k-10K event the last weekend of April.

What community service does your church provide?

AGF funds a radio outreach at KAGF 105.5. We are a part of Love Inc., a network of local churches, helping local people. Each year we have a community clothing sale the first Saturday of August ($1 each item) that benefits local families.

For children we have a community Vacation Bible

School (July 16-20); Water Dayz; Kids Camp; Eggstravaganza Giant Egg Hunt each Palm Sunday with 10,000 stuffed eggs; and a Harvest Party in the fall. We offer Royal Rangers and Missionette's, which is similar to the Boy and Girl Scout programs. We also have AGF preschool.

For youth and young adults we have weekly services, youth camps and G2, a community youth/college event four times a year. Each week we have a detention center outreach. For cowboys and ranchers, we have a monthly Cowboy Church.

What mission work does your church do?

Bulgaria is a primary focus of AGF. There is a Bulgarian Mission's trip right now where seven AGF adults and youth currently are in southel a sister church in a gypsy village. They also are conducting a marriage seminar and simultaneous Vacation Bible School. Our main Bulgarian mission is near Gabravo, where we are helping develop the local economy with farming and business opportunities. We have an annual spring break mission's trip that goes to the Dream Center, and congregation members who go regularly to Africa. We are starting a church plant in Moscow, Russia. We also support missionaries around the world.

Home Churches Create Sense of Faith, Community

BY RYAN TRARES Daily Journal

BARGERSVILLE, Ind. • One by one, churchgoers filed in for their regular Sunday worship.

The congregation joined together to sing the opening hymn. They listened to readings from St. Paul and St. Matthew, after which pastor Robert Lyons delivered his sermon. They took communion together, passing the plate of bread and cup of wine from person to person.

But instead of pews and a lectern, the group sat around a dining room table in a Bargersville home. Besides Lyons and his family, three other people were in attendance, which gave the service a close-knit feeling that is at the heart of the homechurch movement.

Home churches have emerged as a way for local worshippers to re-create the early days of Christianity. Small congregations, sometimes as small as five or six people, meet in living rooms and kitchens to hear sermons and pray together.

Supporters see the movement as a way to more fully connect with other Christians and create a sense of community that can't be copied in a large, spacious building.

"For us, it enables us to know one another more. The people that we meet every week for service become people that we care about on a day-to-day basis," Lyons said. "We become more entrenched in each other's lives. We know everyone who we are worshipping with, as opposed to maybe knowing everyone sitting in our pews."

The concept of a home church dates back to the first century of Christianity, said Herb Drake, a theologian and operator of Home Church Central, an online site where home churches can share ideas and information.

The faith started in small buildings and homes, often with just a few people meeting to discuss the teachings of Jesus. As Christianity spread, it gained footholds in new places with small congregations meeting weekly to pray.

Twitter's Faithful Followers Include Tweeters of Faith

BY BO EMERSON

Atlanta Journal-Constitution

Twitter gives the impression of being obsessed with mindless earthly trivia, from Justin Bieber's latest heartfelt tweet to his Beliebers to LeBron James' reflections on winning the NBA championship.

But Atlanta-based Twitter executive Claire Diaz-Ortiz learned something surprising from an examination of the most popular tweets: Spiritual tweets were whooping up on the mundane.

"We came upon data that religious leaders were completely punching above their weight on Twitter," she said. "They were super-engaged." Though Lady Gaga might have 26 million followers to Joyce Meyer's 1 million, Meyer, a charismatic evangelist based in St. Louis, was having a bigger impact because of her connection with her followers.

"Joyce Meyer will send out, whether a Bible verse or uplifting commentary, or an aphorism or a message, and we see her being retweeted more than Lady Gaga," Diaz-Ortiz said. Such retweeting produces more ripples than the original message, because the rule in social media is that a message from a friend has more impact than a message from an institution.

Twitter, like other social media, is dedicated to serving its big customers, so Diaz-Ortiz relocated to Atlanta this year for easy access to the megachurches in the Southeast, and the religious leaders that set Twitter on fire.

Among them are heavy hitters such as Andy Stanley of Atlanta's 25,000-member North Point Ministries, with 177,000 followers.

Stanley, 54, has embraced social media as a way to stay in touch with a large congregation without being spread too thin.

"You don't have all the time in the world to do this face-to-face relationship building," Diaz-Ortiz said. "Twitter is an excellent way for him to reach his flock."

Vote-Buying Efforts Remain Time-Honored as Mexicans Reap Gifts

BY ERIC MARTIN Bloomberg News

MEXICO CITY • When it comes to accepting campaign gifts, Rogelio Garcia is an equal-opportunity voter.

The unemployed Mexican chauffeur went shopping at his local Soriana supermarket in the capital last week with gift cards worth 2,300 pesos ($170) he says were given to him by the campaign of incoming President Enrique Pena Nieto. He said he also received handouts from supporters of Andres Manuel Lopez Obrador, the runnerup, who accused Pena Nieto's Institutional Revolutionary Party, or PRI, of buying the "I'll take giveaways wherever I can get them," said Garcia, standing outside one of two Soriana supermarkets in Mexico City that were closed due to safety concerns on July 3 and July 4 after throngs of shoppers rushed to spend gift cards supplied by the PRI, according to its opponents. Like Garcia, poor Mexicans who make up about half of the population have grown to expect gifts come election season. While Lopez Obrador may have a tough time proving that fraud by Pena Nieto's side swung the election, given the 3.3-million-vote margin, the charges illustrate one of the challenges facing Mexico's young democracy, said Woodrow Wilson International Center for Scholars.

Twelve years after oneparty rule ended, parties have convinced some voters their support should go to the highest bidder, he said.

"Politicians are preying on peoples' needs in a way that demeans the quality of their vote," said Selee, director of the Washington-based center's Mexico Institute. "It's always a problem when people see their vote as a tool to get concrete benefits and not as a way of setting long-term policy."

While Mexico's democracy has strengthened since Pena Nieto's party began opening up electoral politics to comruling alone for six decades, the continued buying of votes by the nation's dominant parties undermines that progress, said Duncan Wood, a professor of international relations at the Autonomous Technological Institute of Mexico. At the local level, it also raises the specter of drug gangs elevating candidates who are soft on crime, setting back the nation's crackdown on the cartels, Selee said.

While offering gifts for votes may violate electoral law, the presence of international observers makes it difficult for parties to know how Mexicans cast ballots that are secret, said Robert Pastor, a national security adviser for Latin America during the presidency of Jimmy Carter and now a professor at American University in Washington.

Russia Approves New Curbs on NGOs

THE WASHINGTON POST

MOSCOW • Russia's parliament adopted a law Friday imposing stringent new requirements on election monitors, human rights groups and other politically active organizations that receive foreign money.

The law, which was passed 374 to 3 by the State Duma, or lower house, on the last day before a parliamentary recess, requires the groups to register as foreign agents and submit to exhaustive audits. The upper house is expected to approve it.

Action against nongovernmental organizations has been widely seen as inevitable since November, when Vladimir Putin, then prime minister, gave a nationally televised address describing such activists as traitors and excoriating the United States — which provides extensive support to democracy-building groups here – without quite naming it.

"They would do better to use that money to redeem their national debt and stop pursuing their costly and ineffective foreign policy," Putin said, referring to the United States.

Russia has received more than $2.6 billion from the U.S. Agency for International Development since 1992, allocated for social and economic development.

Times News

Today is Saturday, July 14, the 196th day of 2012. There are 170 days left in the vear.

Today's Highlight:

On July 14, 1912, American folk singer-songwriter Woody Guthrie ("This Land Is Your Land") was born in Okemah, Okla.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:

In 1789, during the French Revolution, citizens of Paris stormed the Bastille prison and released the seven prisoners inside.

In 1853, Commodore Matthew Perry relayed to Japanese officials a letter from President Millard Fillmore requesting trade relations. (Fillmore's term of office had already expired by the time the letter was delivered.)

In 1881, outlaw William H. Bonney Jr., alias "Billy the Kid," was shot and killed by Sheriff Pat Garrett in Fort Sumner, N.M.

In 1902, the original, centuries-old Campanile di San Marco in Venice, Italy, collapsed. (The bell tower was rebuilt within a decade.)

In 1911, Harry N. Atwood became the first pilot to land an airplane (a Wright Model B biplane) on the grounds of the White House after flying in from Boston; he was greeted by President William Howard Taft.

In 1913, Gerald Rudolph Ford Jr., the 38th president of the United States, was born Leslie Lynch King Jr. in Omaha, Neb.

In 1921, Italian-born anarchists Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti were convicted in Dedham, Mass., of murdering a shoe company paymaster and his guard. (Sacco and Vanzetti were executed six years later.)

In 1933, all German political parties, except the Nazi Party, were outlawed.

In 1960, British researcher Jane Goodall arrived at the Gombe Stream Reserve in the Tanganyika Territory (in present-day Tanzania) to begin her famous study of chimpanzees in the wild.

In 1966, eight student nurses were murdered by Richard Speck in a Chicago dormitory.

In 1972, the State Department criticized actress Jane Fonda for making antiwar radio broadcasts in Hanoi, calling them "distressing." Jean Westwood was appointed the first female chair of the Democratic National Committee.

won the Democratic presidential nomination at the party's convention in New York.

Ten years ago: A gunman tried but failed to assassinate French President Jacques Chirac during a Bastille Day parade. Joaquin Balaguer, ruler of the Dominican Republic for 22 years, died at age 95.

Five years ago: North Korea told the United States it had shut down its nuclear reactor, hours after a ship cruised into port loaded with oil promised in return for the country's pledge to disarm. Former presidents, fellow first ladies and about 1,800 other people attended a private funeral in Austin, Texas, for Lady Bird Johnson, the widow of President Lyndon B. Johnson.

One year ago: A federal judge in Washington, D.C. declared a mistrial in baseball star Roger Clemens' perjury trial over inadmissible evidence shown to jurors. (Clemens was acquitted in a retrial.)

DEAR ABBY: I'm 17 and hopelessly confused. I'm currently in a long-distance relationship with someone I haven't seen in person for several months. At first, I wasn't "into" him, but after we began talking over Skype and emailing, he told me he liked me, so I said I liked him, too - even though I'm not physically attracted to him. I figured that since he lives so far away and there's no one at my school I could see myself liking, why make him feel bad by telling the truth?

Now he's coming to visit for a few days, and I'm worried that I won't like him. I'm his first girlfriend, and I think his parents are excited to see that he finally found someone. My mom tells me that he's a very nice boy and won't leave me like the rest of my egocentric exes. He's just very immature and so-

I thought I might eventually fall for him because he's smart, motivated and sweet - three things I value in a guy. What do I do about this? Is there something

- HOPELESSLY CONFUSED IN SALT LAKE CITY DEAR CONFUSED: There is nothing "wrong" with you - you are 17 and not experienced. When the young man said he liked you, you should have told him that you like him for all the qualities you mentioned, but as a

When he comes to visit, if he tries to make the encounter romantic, level with him. If you're not attracted to him, it would be cruel to lead him on. You're both still young and have many dating experiences ahead of you. In the future, please remember that honesty is the

DEAR ABBY: My recently divorced, beautiful, intelligent daughter, "Glynnis," is an executive with a global firm and has a high net worth. During her divorce she reconnected with a high school friend who moved in with her.

This "friend" is a jobless, obese, coarse man who has been divorced three times. Glynnis uses him as an errand/houseboy, chauffeur, bodyguard, handvman and general flunky. He will do anything she asks of him at any time. One can only assume he thinks he has won the lottery. This man is an embarrassment of monumental proportions. We live in another state and go to visit them. I am extremely uncomfortable with the bizarre image of a couple they present. At lunch, dinner or out shopping with them, people actually gasp when they realize the two are together. I cannot relate to him. Conversing with him is hopeless. Of course, it's my daughter's business who she wants in her life. But I'm disgusted with the entire scenario. I don't want to damage my relationship with my daughter. Any suggestions? - GLYNNIS' DAD DEAR DAD: Yes. Try harder to find SOMETHING you have in common with your daughter's companion, and you may start to understand what she sees in him. Right now he's serving a purpose. Having been through a divorce, she may want a man around who can perform all the jobs you listed. Or, she may just want someone she can control. If you're serious about his function as a bodyguard, suggest that if she feels threatened, she should talk to the police, who are trained to handle such matters. As you said, your daughter is intelligent. It's unlikely she'll remarry anytime soon. So calm down and try to be less judgmental, because unless you manage it, you will drive a wedge between yourself and Glynnis. Or stay home.

IF JULY 14 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: New friends and possibly a new romance should brighten the next four to six weeks. This is an ideal time to network, join a club or mingle with new people and a fabulous time to take a vacation or escape from the routines. In August, as well as November, you can also be enriched by opportunities that, if you embrace them, will bring lasting improvements into your life. November through mid-December is especially fortunate for business, finance and career.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You have great common sense and can guide others. Call attention to any obvious weaknesses in a plan of action. It is called a drawback because you are expected to draw back and not rush right in.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): An open-minded attitude could unlock fresh opportunities. Keep your ear to the ground to join with helpful contacts for business. Careful strategies can't compete with a sincere and honest approach.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): When apples fall from the tree and land at feet, it is a sign that you should pick them up. In the same vein, when a golden opportunity is waved in front of your nose you would be wise to grab it.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Exude confidence and make the grade. You are like that little train that thought it could. The more you believe in yourself, the more likely you will be able to handle a minor, but overwhelming task.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): By looking to the future and leaving the past behind, you can make enviable progress. If something from the past shows up, then by all means deal with it now. Clear the path ahead of obstacles.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): In the next few days, you may be in the mood to roll the dice, with hopes of winning the pot. Don't be deterred by logic that tells you the odds are against you. Gamble if you can afford to lose

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Show off your talent for organization. Sweep away unecessary debris in your SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Do something good for yourself. You could be totally immersed in a job, business or ambition. This weekend, perhaps you should enjoy some down time with your favorite special someone.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Life is destined to become more comfortable and carefree. Some restraints or obligations will fall away with a little effort. Take a valuable piece of information and put it to good use.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Lay the groundwork for the future. Make a promise only if you are absolutely sure you can fulfill it. Knock on doors, keep in contact, ask for favors, and create opportunities to improve your situation.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Go ahead and fly by the seat of your pants. The pace of your life will soon shift from a waltz to a rumba. It might be a good idea to get living quarters organized and your desk cleared for action.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): When you meet a challenge successfully, put a feather in your cap. Extra responsibilities that seem to hamper your progress may serve to augment it. The more you do, the more that is expected.
