A New Plan for Idaho's Water

Water Resource Board is currently taking public comment on the proposed changes that offers 'public accountability.'

TWIN FALLS • A proposed revision to Idaho's state water plan would highlight climate, supply and the balance between surface and underground sources of Idaho's most precious resource.

The Idaho Water Resource Board is currently taking public comment on its newly drafted state water management plan. The plan is a guide to how state and regional officials can best use Idaho's water. However, since the plan hasn't been updated since 1996, it's becoming outdated.

"We've seen a lot of changes from 1996," state Deputy Attorney General Clive Strong said.

GETTING CONNECTED

Trip Offers Insight into University's Reach Across State

HAGERMAN • University of Idaho administrators peered down over outdoor raceways with moving water as 2-year-old rainbow trout swam below.

It was part of a Thursday morning tour of the university's Aquaculture Research Institute facility in Hagerman.

About two dozen UI deans and employees in leadership roles made a stop at the center as part of a statewide tour.

University President M. Duane Nellis said the trip is designed to help administrators gain a sense that the university is part of the fabric of the state.

"It's an opportunity for them to get connected to the extent of the institution in the state," he said. UI has about 70 locations statewide.

The tour also coincides with the 150th anniversary of the Morrill Act, which created land-grant universities.

President Abraham Lincoln signed the act — which boosted access to higher education — into law on July 2, 1862.

"In recognition, we wanted to do something celebratory of that," Nellis said about the statewide tour.

The tour started Tuesday in Moscow and concluded Thursday night. On Wednesday, the group toured the university's research and extension center in Kimberly.

New Director, Same Goals

Gary Spackman's recent appointment as state water resources director firms up the course he's already steered as an interim leader.

TWIN FALLS • The new director overseeing Idaho's water has a familiar face.

Last week, Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter appointed Gary Spackman to serve as director of the Idaho Department of Water Resources. Transitioning into the new job won't take long — Spackman has already led the department for the past three years as interim director.

"I'm excited to be permanently appointed," Spackman said. "I treated the work as interim in the same way had I been the permanent director. Approaching it in any other way would not have served the water users well."

TWIN FALLS • A jury found Jason Jay Ward guilty of raping a then-19-year-old woman in May 2011.

The jury of four women and eight men reached the unanimous verdict a little more than an hour after closing statements ended Thursday afternoon.

The maximum penalty for a rape conviction is life imprisonment. The minimum sentence is one year in prison.

Water

Members of the water board and local water users attended a public hearing in Twin Falls on Wednesday to learn more about the new plan. Among the issues addressed are climate variability, water supply, recharge and storage projects, and conjunctive management of surface and groundwater.

Idaho's water plan splits its management policies when addressing different water basins. For the Magic Valley, changes in the Snake River Basin include better management of the Eastern Snake Plain Aquifer and addressing water planning above Milner Dam.

"The objective is to allow future development above Milner without impacting those below," Strong said.

How the board and the Idaho Department of Water Resources will choose which strategies to begin, and the eventual impact of a staggered approach to tackling the new plan's goals, were among questions asked during the meeting.

"We are going to have to prioritize," said Helen Harrington, planning section manager with IDWR. Harrington has been involved in developing the plan since 2007.

"Past plans didn't have im-

Water Board Meets Today

The board will consider accepting proposed changes for rules on underground injections, and giving loans to Consolidated Canal Co. and Point Springs Grazing Association. Discussions will include water transaction activities, updates on recharge and Idaho Power cloud seeding efforts. The meeting begins at 8 a.m. at the Best Western Burley Inn, 800 N. plementation," Strong said. "This plan allows for public accountability."

The only testimony heard during the meeting asked that the plan address converting consumptive-use water rights.

"When you sever the water from the land, that water is never going to return back. You're retiring that water," said Norm Semanko, executive director for the Idaho Water Users Association. "We need to look to see if there's a better way to balance this."

The water board will host public hearings on the plan throughout Idaho until mid-September. The next hearing is scheduled for Aug. 13 in Salmon. For more information for locations and times, go to <http://1.usa.gov/NBLSv5>.

Tour

The tour of the Hagerman facility began with an introduction by Ron Hardy, director of the Aquaculture Research Institute.

The university's aquaculture institute has two locations — Hagerman and Moscow. The institute was established in 1988 and the Hagerman facility opened in 1996.

Hardy said the Hagerman center employs about 45 people, making it one of the largest employers in the western Magic Valley.

So what makes Hagerman a good location for a research center?

"It's because of the water," Hardy said, noting the constant temperature and good quality.

University administrators went through the laboratory building — a $3.4 million facility completed in 2006 — as well as outdoor facilities and indoor wet labs.

Matt Powell, associate professor of animal and veterinary science, described to the group how one particular piece of lab equipment works.

Scientists once worked on only 10 to 20 samples at a time. Now, through robotic equipment, thousands of fish tissue samples can be analyzed at a time.

Through UI, undergraduate and graduate students from around the world come to the Hagerman center to study.

About 70 percent of undergraduates at UI have some sort of research or creative experience outside the classroom, Nellis said.

While outside looking at facilities, John Hammel — dean of the College of Agriculture and Life Sciences — said the tour was a chance to see the breadth of the university's programs.

"It's been really informative," he said.

Many of the other administrators present weren't involved with agricultural programs.

Dean of Library Services Lynn Baird said she'll take away ideas from the tour about how to build the university's special collections, as well as better capture the agricultural components of the state's economy.

"From a library perspective, I'm very interested in the stories, background and history," she said.

Spackman

position, he focused on short- and long-term goals for the department. These include reducing a backlog of water rights to issue and preparing the department to better handle potential water calls.

"We're happy Gary was made permanent director," said Lynn Tomlinaga, executive director of the Idaho Ground Water Appropriators. "It'll help provide consistency to the department. Gary knows the issues. If you didn't have someone with that knowledge, it just creates confusion."

Lynn Carlquist, chairman of the North Snake Ground Water District, agreed.

"He's the most knowledgeable from our standpoint," he said. "It'll be a tough job but we're supportive of him."

In the coming weeks, Spackman will sign an order to start using a new groundwater model based on updated details of water use levels from across the state. The department uses the model to monitor the impacts of groundwater use on the springs feeding the Snake River.

"This is a big deal," Spackman said. "There's a lot of technical expertise that goes into planning this. We need to be able to see what the depletions mean in terms of stream flows, changes in water use, and managing recharge."

Spackman also said IDWR's future will include the creation of more water districts as most of Idaho's water right claims are settled through the Snake River Basin Adjudication — a court dedicated to resolving water ownership. The court settled hundreds of thousands of water claims and is coming close to resolving the few that remain.

Water districts are designed to help regulate water right disputes outside of the courtroom and into an administrative process, Spackman said.

"In the wake of those rights being issued, there's an expectation the department will create districts," he said.

Spackman also anticipates the department will receive a water call from water users in the Wood River Valley. A call is when senior water users accuse junior users of infringing on their water rights, and ask the state to correct the problem.

State water officials are still collecting data on water use in the area. Spackman said IDWR is trying to come up with some sort of water budget for the area. However, limits in resources and funding may slow down the project.

"We don't when this call will be filed but we want to anticipate as much as possible," he said.

In the meantime, Spackman said he remains hopeful about the future. He says the support from the water community makes the challenges of his job worthwhile.

"When it comes right down to it, this community cares about each other," he said. "Everybody wants each other to go about their business but make sure peoples' lives aren't destroyed. That's my hope and I sense that it's the heart of the individual users. I admire it."

WELLS, Nev. • Three people suffered minor injuries when a small airplane crashed in northeast Nevada on approach to landing at the Wells Municipal Airport.

The Elko County Sheriff's Office said a single-engine Cessna inbound from Wendover was trying to make an emergency landing about mid-morning Thursday.

At least two people on board were from Gooding, Idaho, according to Gooding County Sheriff Shaun Gough. Their names were not available Thursday

When the plane hit the ground, its landing gear folded up — causing the plane to tumble and flip upside down about one-quarter mile east of the runway.

The pilot and both passengers on board were taken by ambulance to North-eastern Nevada Regional Hospital for treatment of unspecified, minor injuries.

No names have been released. The cause of the crash is under investigation.

Idaho Transportation Board Approves Interchange Project

TIMES-NEWS

TWIN FALLS • The Idaho Transportation Board approved plans Thursday to expedite key transportation projects, including completing the interchange at Interstate 84 and U.S. Highway 93 north of Twin Falls.

The approximately $14.7 million project will add a new eastbound interchange to the junction. The westbound portion of the interchange was completed in 2003.

Construction is expected to begin in late 2012. The projects utilize Grant Anticipated Revenue Vehicle bonds, which allow the state to borrow money for highway projects, then pay back that money with future federal highway funds.

Other Major Projects Include:

- Improvements to U.S. 2 in Sandpoint that will improve safety and mobility
- Realigning seven miles of U.S. 95 from Thorn Creek to Moscow
- Reconstructing the Meridian, Broadway and Gowen interchanges on I-84 in the Treasure Valley
- Restoring pavement on I-84 between the Meridian Interchange and Five Mile Road
- Constructing a new interchange on U.S. 20 in eastern Idaho
- Adding a turn bay on Idaho 39 west of Blackfoot

he then withdrew that plea in March, citing bad advice from his attorney at the time.

Earlier Thursday, Ward took the stand in his own defense and denied raping the victim, instead saying the sex was consensual.

The attack came after Ward, the woman and her boyfriend spent an evening at Ward's Twin Falls County home.

During his testimony, Ward said after the victim's ex-boyfriend asked him to drive the victim home. He said he agreed and she got in his truck voluntarily. After a short time, he said, she told him to pull over so they could have sex.

"It took some persuasion but I eventually agreed," Ward said when asked if he wanted to.

Ward said the alleged victim told him she wanted to be bitten or have her hair pulled and asked to be choked. He said he put his hand on her neck, but did not put pressure on it.

On Tuesday, the alleged victim testified Ward pulled her into his truck by her hair while she was walking away from his house. She also testified Ward bit her, punched her and pinched the inside of her thighs hard during the alleged attack.

During closing arguments, Twin Falls County Senior Deputy Prosecutor Rosemary Emory told the jury the evidence clearly backed up the victim's story, not Ward's.

Ward's defense attorney David Smethers said he wasn't trying to make the victim out as a bad person, just as untruthful and called much of her testimony lies. He also reminded the jurors that the victim said she did not resist Ward during the second alleged rape and described her crying during her testimony as seeming practiced.

"It didn't seem real," he said.

Emory countered Smethers in her final argument, saying the victim was clearly upset, even more than a year after the brutal attack. She also countered Smethers' argument that the woman agreed to have sex with Ward a second time.

"By the second time she already had these injuries," Emory said, pointing out the bite mark, scratches and bruises on the victim. "What would she reasonably think would happen if she resisted more?"

Ward showed no reaction and the court was quiet as the verdict was read. Shortly after, the jury was sent out and Ward also pleaded guilty to a persistent violator enhancement that is added when a person has three felony convictions. He has previous convictions for driving under the influence and malicious injury to property.

Ward's sentencing is set for Sept. 14.

TWIN FALLS • Police say a 30-year-old Twin Falls man hit another man in the head with a bat without warning.

Joshua Dwayne Wolters was arraigned on a charge of aggravated battery Monday in Twin Falls County 5th District Court.

On June 21, Twin Falls police were dispatched to the 800 block of Locust Street in regards to a battery. A deputy at the scene said he was contacted by a concerned citizen who witnessed the altercation, a police report states.

The deputy spoke to the alleged victim who was transported to a hospital by ground ambulance, the report states.

"He told me that he has had a long term dispute happening between Joshua Wolters and himself," it states.

According to the report, the man told police he heard something hit his house several times. When he went outside to investigate he saw Wolters walking away and asked him if he wanted to talk about something, the report states.

Wolters then turned around and began walking toward the alleged victim and hit him on the head with a small baseball bat without any provocation, the report states.

Wolters was held on a $10,000 bond and a preliminary hearing was scheduled for July 27.

13 Seek to Replace Cannon as Magistrate Judge

TIMES-NEWS

TWIN FALLS • Thirteen attorneys from across Idaho have applied to be Twin Falls County's newest magistrate judge.

One of them will be picked to replace former Judge Nicole Cannon, who resigned in June after being cited for driving under the influence in Boise earlier this year. Cannon's case is set for an Aug. 28 jury trial.

The 5th Judicial District Magistrates Commission has now asked for feedback on the applicants from attorneys and the general public. The commission will send out attorney questionnaires, while forms for public comment can be obtained from www.5thjudicialdistrict.com or at the Trial Court Administrator's office, Theron Ward Judicial Building, 427 Shoshone Street N., Twin Falls.

Comments should be returned by Aug. 3 to the Trial Court Administrator's Office, P.O. Box 126, Twin Falls, ID 83303-0126.

Applicants for the position include:

- Samuel Beus of Twin Falls, an attorney.

- Theodore Booth of Twin Falls, a special master for the Snake River Basin Adjudication.

- Peter Bredeson of Coeur d'Alene, an attorney.

- Calvin Campbell of Wendell, the Gooding County prosecutor.

- Blaine Cannon of Burley, a Cassia County deputy prosecutor and Nicole Cannon's ex-husband.

- Theodore Fleming of Emmett, an attorney.

- Garry Gilman of Boise, a Boise County deputy prosecutor.

- Brian Harper of Twin Falls, an attorney.

- Randolph Neal of Idaho Falls, an attorney.

- Bryson Perkins of Caldwell, an attorney.

- Gregory Swanson of Meridian, a senior deputy prosecutor for Canyon County.

- Anne Taylor of Hayden. An Anne Taylor is recorded as a Kootenai County deputy public defender; a call to that office to confirm her position was not immediately returned Thursday.

- Jeremy Vaughn of Filer, a Gooding County deputy prosecutor.

Online Students Lag Behind

BY JESSIE L. BONNER
Associated Press

BOISE (AP) • A new report takes aim at the nation's largest for-profit online education provider and finds students taking K12 Inc. classes in Idaho and four other states are falling more behind in math and reading than their traditional school counterparts.

The study was released Wednesday by the National Education Policy Center at the University of Colorado Boulder.

Along with lagging test scores, the report says the rate at which K12 students graduate on time is far lower than in regular schools.

The study "into K12 Inc. raises enormous red flags," center director Kevin Wel-ner said. The group previously issued reports critical of on-line learning.

A study released by the center in October said school-choice advocates are pushing states to rush headlong into virtual education despite limited data on these programs.

The latest report looked at schools managed by Virginia-based K12 in Idaho, Arizona, Arkansas, Ohio and Pennsylvania and found that on average, they had a consistently lower proportion of their students meeting or exceeding state standards in reading, according to 2010-2011 test scores.

The report also said math scores were lower compared to the state average.

The on-time graduation rate for K12 students was about 49 percent for that year, compared to about 79 percent for the states, according to the study. In Idaho, where K12 provides curriculum for the state's largest online charter school, state officials say students beat slightly the statewide average for graduation rates in the most recent year.

K12 has managed online schools in 29 states with mixed academic success.

The company contended that the report is flawed and fails to show the academic progress of students over time.

The report finds K12 students are falling further behind in math and reading than students in regular schools, but doesn't provide evidence to back up that claim, the company said.

"To make such conclusions, one would need to know the academic starting point of the students, in this case, test scores from a prior school year when they were enrolled in a brick-and-mortar school," the company said. "That test data is largely unavailable and is certainly not included in the NEPC report."

The report relies on "static, end-of-the-year test data" said the company, which also noted that K12-managed schools tend to enroll students who are behind academically.

More schoolchildren than ever are taking classes online.

A few smart, garden maintenance choices can help your lawn and garden make it through a drought without much damage. Here are four garden maintenance tricks to try:

1. Mow high. A longer lawn might look a little shaggy to you, but an extra inch or two shades out weeds, helps strengthen roots, and fights water loss.

2. Water in the morning. When to water may be up for debate in other seasons, but in hot, dry weather the answer is always "in the morning." If you water early, the water won't evaporate before it gets to the roots of plants and grass. If you water later in the day, the sun can sap moisture before it has a chance to do its work.

3. Skip the lawn fertilizing. Fertilizing in the heat of summer is a disastrous idea. You're almost guaranteed to scorch your lawn. What your yard needs is to put all its resources into hanging tough until conditions improve, not pushing out new growth. Wait until September to fertilize, and you'll have much happier grass.

4. Let your lawn go dormant. This may sound like heresy to green lawn lovers, but if there's a shortage of water in your area, sometimes the best idea is to let your lawn go dormant during the summer, endure a month or two of that yellow-brown hue, and know that it will come back strong when the fall rains return.

Whatever the conditions in your area this summer, a little garden maintenance know-how can help your yard survive and thrive.

Radioactive Waste Cleanup Won't Make Deadline

IDAHO FALLS (AP) • U.S. Department of Energy officials say the agency will likely miss its deadline for cleaning up radioactive liquid waste at the Idaho National Laboratory.

Tom D'Agostino, the DOE's nuclear security undersecretary, told the Post Register Wednesday that the department won't have all 900,000 gallons of sodium-bearing waste removed by Dec. 31 because a facility built to package the waste isn't operational.

A settlement agreement between the federal government and the state of Idaho requires all liquid waste at the site be removed from above the Eastern Snake River Plain Aquifer by 2013.

In 2007, the DOE began building the $571 million Integrated Waste Treatment Unit to condense the liquid into a powder similar to laundry detergent that would then be stored on site. But a filter at the facility was clogged with non-radioactive material in June, and contractor CH2M-WG Idaho is still working to diagnose and correct the problem. Until it's fixed, the building will remain closed.

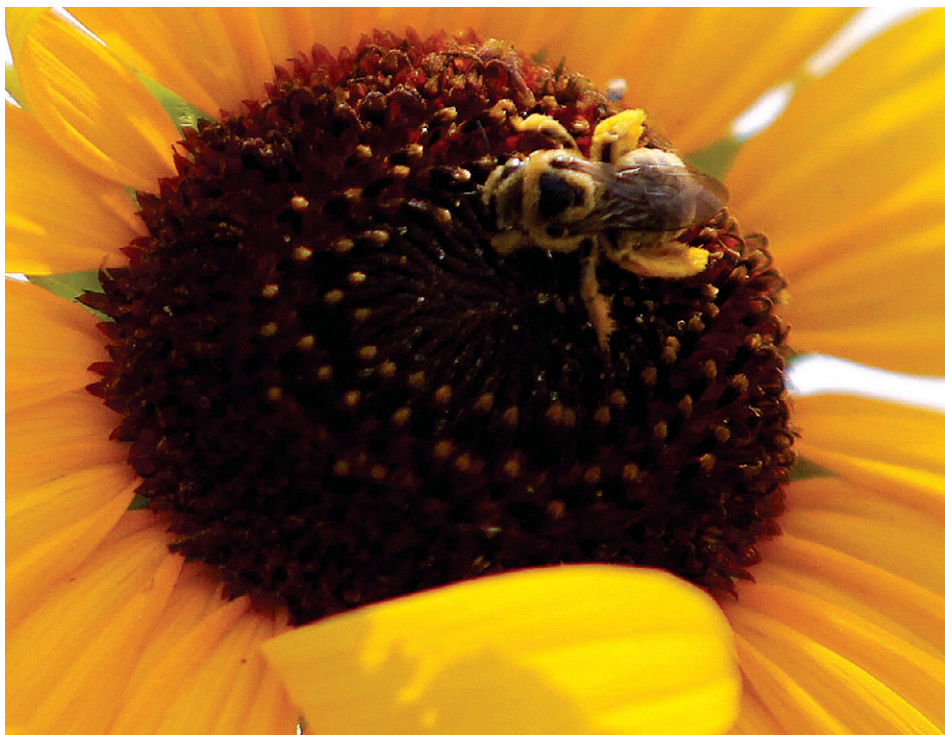

D'Agostino said the facility will be up and running soon. Once it is, he said, processing the 900,000 gallons of waste will go quickly.

Jim Cooper, the DOE's deputy manager for the cleanup project, said liquid waste poses a greater environmental risk than solid waste. Once the waste is converted into a dry powder, it will be placed in stainless steel canisters and then into concrete vaults. No fines will be levied if the deadline is missed, Cooper said, and the Idaho National Laboratory won't receive shipments of spent nuclear fuel until all of the liquid waste is converted into a solid form.

The department is ahead of schedule on a separate cleanup deadline set for 2023, Cooper noted.

Court Hears Parents' Rights Case

BOISE, Idaho (AP) • A federal appeals court is expected to hear the case of a former Boise couple who claim their constitutional rights were violated when police took custody of their infant daughter so a doctor could perform a spinal tap against their wishes.

The Muellers allege their rights were violated in 2002 when a police officer took custody of their five-week-old daughter so a doctor could perform a spinal tap to check for signs of meningitis or other major infections. The mother was also barred from being with her daughter during the procedures.

Zoning Decision Process Wasn't Fair to County

At the July 9 Twin Falls City Council meeting, county commissioners asked the city to waive zoning requirements for a lot the county owns at 141 Rose St.

The county hopes to build a storage facility for marine search and rescue equipment and boats so all its search and rescue vehicles can be in one spot. The change kicks in city code requirements for paving and landscaping, but following the code would be a financial hardship, county commissioners argued, adding more than $200,000 to the cost of the project.

If commissioners hoped for a quick approval of their request, they instead got a heated debate among city council members. In the end, the council denied the county's request for a waiver.

Did they make the right decision? Yes, we believe they did. But the more important question is ... did they come to that decision using a defined set of criteria? No, they did not.

Instead, it appears the council made its final decision to make an example of the county.

But the truth is that individuals and businesses ask for waivers all the time when making changes to private property. And many of those requests are granted.

So denying a waiver to send out a message that minimum zoning standards must be met is not an accurate representation of the city's approach.

By this logic, the county would not be wrong to say they were treated unfairly.

The reasons council members gave for considering the waiver were equally unsound.

Council members Rebecca Mills-Sojka and Jim Munn argued that the added cost for compliance would fall on the taxpayers.

But that line of thinking could just as easily apply to businesses that come into town on the backs of taxpayers — through tax abatements and improvement districts.

If we bend regulations whenever it might save taxpayers money, we might as well burn the rule books.

The county offered hardship as its first argument for a waiver, saying they do not have the money to make the required improvements.

If the county does not have the money for this project, then this is not the time. Moving all search and rescue equipment to one storage area seems like a good idea, but the county offered no proof that there is a danger to public safety if this move does not happen immediately. There is no hardship, only impatience.

The county also argued that the lot is not seen from the street so the landscape requirements don't make sense.

Council member Mills-Sojka agreed. She said, "The point of the code is to beautify the community," adding that landscape requirements make sense for high traffic areas. "But to just store equipment?"

If that is a valid argument — that landscape requirements should be waived if the lot is not visible from the street — then the city should change its code to include that exemption.

There's no denying this decision was a political minefield for the council.

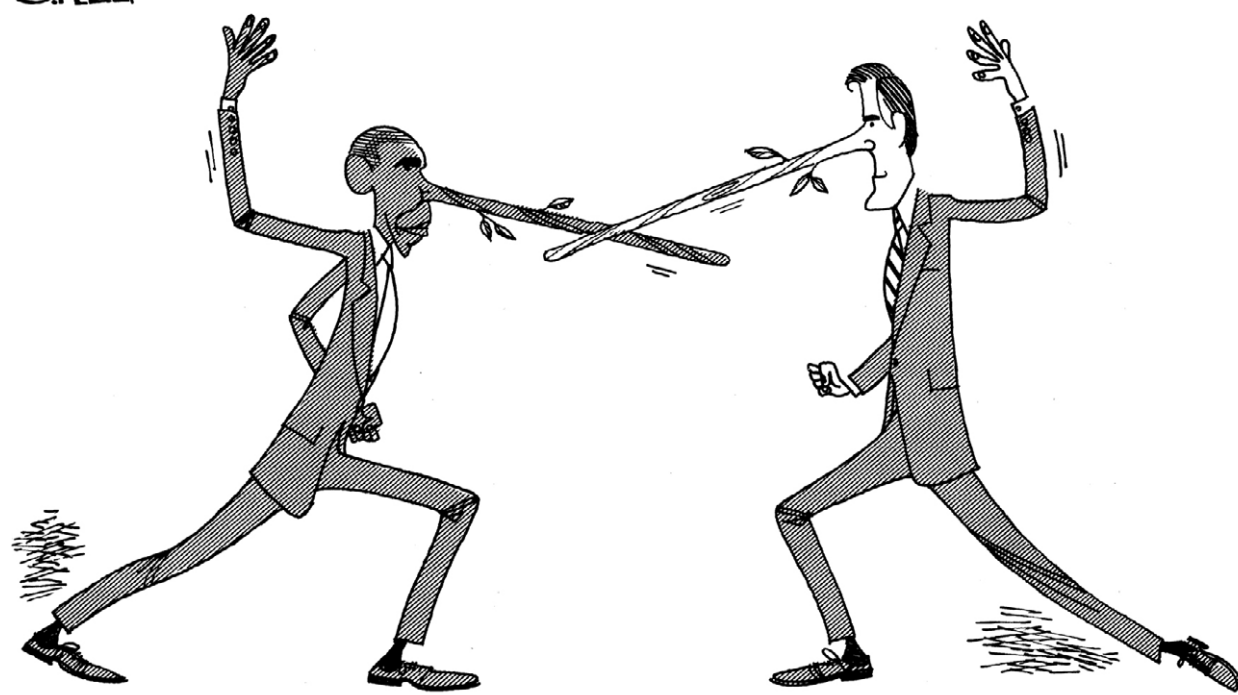

On one hand, they have a close working relationship with the county and don't want to offend, and on the other hand they have constituents who might have previously asked for a similar waiver watching their every move.

In this tight-knit community, the council will find itself walking this tightrope again.

The issue could have been easily resolved if the criteria for granting a waiver were more clear. Council members could have gone down the checklist with the commissioners and shown them how their request did or did not merit approval.

Throwing out reasons to see what sticks is no way to make decisions and certainly in this case wasn't fair to the county.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Japan Has Downplayed its Murderous Role

Will we ever know the ever elusive truth? Probably not, but remember, as allies after World War I, the League of Nations, with some exceptions, gave Japan the Marshall, Mariana and Caroline Islands for its role in removing the German Imperial Navy from the Pacific, making Japan the dominant power in the Pacific.

The Japanese diplomatic code was breached in 1921, and all Japanese diplomatic discussions were open to American eyes. By the mid-'20s, Japan adopted the well-published "Tanaka Plan," where the Japanese government detailed its strategy for future conquest, which in brief brought all Asian peoples — key point — no matter where they were located geographically, under Japanese domination; the Nazis did the same with the German people scattered around the world by 1936.

Japan initiated this plan on Sept. 18, 1931, with its deceitful attack on Manchuria, butchering hundreds of thousands of civilians in the process. On this date began World War II, not Dec. 7, 1941.

The Japanese attacked China on July 7, 1937, and their well-publicized slaughter of the population was so horrible even the Nazi delegation in Nanking complained to Adolf Hitler.

From a continuous stream of reports from western observers inside China, one U.S. Marine Corps' Lt. Col. Lewis "Chesty" Puller, the Japanese attack on the USS Panay killing several American sailors and independent physical attacks by Japanese soldiers on neutral American Marines and members of western diplomatic corps defined our future relationship with the Japanese Empire by the beginning of 1938. War!

Also, it was fully known by U.S. Intelligence a large contingent of Japanese agents were operating out of Mexico City and directing known Japanese agents on the West Coast.

Imperial Japan knew it would fight the United States when it initiated the Tanaka Plan. And, as of this day, Japan has downplayed its murderous role in World War II.

Investing Money in Hunt Camp Memorial

Very thought provoking opinion page in your paper on Sunday.

We have been concerned about the millions of dollars that are to be spent making some kind of super memorial to honor the memory of the internment camp near Minidoka. First hand, we know that there is only a trickling of people that come to the town and ask directions to the Hunt Camp.

Mostly, they are just passing through and have a desire to visit; very few have any close ties to the camp. There is already a memorial there and, for the most part, that seems to suffice any sincere visitor.

How can we judge history? Those that lived it did the very best they could with the information and time they had to act. Pearl Harbor was a very severe wake-up call. Every time we watch "Bora Bora," we tend to judge those who were in charge, but they had reasons and hopes too.

My father was in the military and we lived in Hawaii during the early '50s. There was still an element of distrust between the locals and some of the Japanese-descent residents. Probably mostly young men, who resented being associated with losing the war. When our family moved to this area, we were surprised to be so near an "internment" camp. We have never visited it, but we hear the stories.

Personally, I have nothing but admiration for the people interred there. They, like all good Americans, the military draftees, factory workers, people who complied with the food stamps, rationed gas, recycling of all metal and dozens of other inconveniences of the war, were just doing their part to help the war come to a close as soon as possible. They have always had a special place in my heart for their sacrifice. They have been compensated somewhat, but we know that we can never repay them completely for what they had to go through.

But I do not hear them complain like the rest of us; they picked up their lives and went forward. Thank you all for your sacrifice for our great country!

Award Changes Name Amid Wolf Spat

HELENA, Mont. (AP) • The Rocky Mountain Elk Foundation removed the name of Olaus J. Murie from a conservation award after the family of the man known as the father of modern elk management objected to what they called an all-out war against wolves.

The demand came after the foundation backed removing federal protections for wolves, donated money to kill wolves that prey on livestock, and supported wolf hunts and trapping.

"The Murie name must never be associated with the unscientific and inhumane practices you are advancing," Donald Murie, youngest son of Olaus Murie, write in a letter to the foundation.

Foundation president David Allen said Wednesday the foundation would no longer call the honor the Olaus J. Murie award.

"We are going to accommodate the request because we are not going to change our position on wolf management," he said.

The foundation created the award in 1999 for individuals who demonstrate tremendous accomplishments in wild-life research and conservation.

It was named after Murie, a famed naturalist, author and wildlife biologist who conducted groundbreaking field work on many large North American mammals, including elk and caribou, in the early part of the 20th century.

Murie and his wife Margaret helped create the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge, and as a founding board member of the Wilderness Society, he fought a proposal in the 1940s to construct Glacier View Dam, which would have flooded more than 10,000 acres of Glacier National Park.

Donald Murie said Tuesday he only recently became aware of the foundation's position on wolf management and later read a quote attributed to Allen in an Oregon newspaper suggesting states would have to hold hunts, shoot wolves from the air and gas their dens to keep wolf populations in line.

Alaskans Wonder Where the Kings Salmon Have Gone

BY MARY PEMBERTON
Associated Press

ANCHORAGE, Alaska • Alaskans again this summer are wondering: Where are the king salmon?

Some of Alaska's largest and best rivers are closed to king fishing because state and federal fisheries managers determined that the largest of the salmon species, also called Chinook, isn't showing up in enough numbers to ensure sustainable future runs.

In western Alaska, people living in dozens of villages along the Yukon and Kuskokwim rivers are turning to less desirable salmon species — fish with lower oil and fat content — to fill their freezers for winter in what one official described as a summer of "food insecurity."

"It is pretty scary," said Timothy Andrew, director of natural resources with the Association of Village Council Presidents in Bethel. "Chinook salmon is probably the biggest species that people depend on for drying, salting and putting away in the freezer to feed the family throughout the winter."

Fishery managers predict this year's Yukon River king salmon run will be worse than last year, and that was the worst showing for Chinook in 30 years.

Commercial fishermen on the Yukon and Kuskokwim are turning to less desirable but more plentiful species of salmon that sell for under $1 a pound. King salmon sells for more than $5 a pound. With gas costing $6.70 a gallon in Bethel, many fishing boats are sitting idle, he said.

People living in the region's 56 villages are devastated, Andrew said.

"It is an incredibly stressful time," he said.

In mid-July, the Kenai River — considered by many to be Alaska's premier river for salmon fishing — is normally crowded and chaotic with fishing guides steering their boats to give their clients the best opportunity to catch a trophy king.

But a ban on king fishing on the Kenai and Kasilof rivers went into effect Thursday.

Robert Begich, the Alaska Department of Fish and Game's area management biologist, said the Kenai king run looks to be the lowest on record going back to the 1980s.

Judge Reconsiders Boy Scout Ruling

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) • A state judge agreed to reconsider his earlier ruling that cleared the way for a proposed land trade involving a historic Boy Scout campsite along Lake Coeur d'Alene.

At the end of a hearing Wednesday, 1st District Judge John Luster said he will consider a series of new points raised by representatives of Camp Easton Forever Inc. and the Inland Council of Boy Scouts.

"I have some matters to look at closely, and I will do so," Luster said, according to a story published by The Coeur d'Alene Press on Thursday.

Camp Easton Forever sued the Boy Scout council last year seeking to block the council's plans to trade the 80-year-old camp to a developer in exchange for another parcel of lake property with a new camp facility. Arizona-based Discovery Land Co. wants to convert the 420-acre parcel into lakefront properties.

In May, Luster dismissed the lawsuit and rejected arguments that the land donated in 1929 had conditions that it always be used as a Boy Scout camp.

The ruling enabled the council to pursue a land trade with the developer.

Attorney Kathleen Kolts, representing the supporters of the historic camp, told Luster the camp is part of an implied trust based on the nature and desires of the original donor, F.W. Fitze, in 1929. She said Fitz was clear, as reported in the minutes of a 1929 meeting, that he wanted the land used in perpetuity as a boys' camp.

Richy Named Head of Idaho Homeland Security

BOISE (AP) • Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter announced a new director of the state's Bureau of Homeland Security.

The governor announced Thursday that Col. Brad Richy will take over at the agency, replacing Brigadier General William Shawver.

The 54-year-old Richy is currently serving as the commander of the 124th Fighter Wing of the Idaho Air National Guard. He was appointed to the post by Major General Gary Saylor. The department works with local government to help manage a state response to disasters and emergency preparedness.

Richy

Otter thanked Shawver for his service to the state and expressed confidence in Richy's ability to provide veteran leadership.

Shawver is stepping down Friday after five years on the job, but will continue to serve as commander of the Idaho Air National Guard.

Melba Woman Killed After Car Falls in Sinkhole

MELBA (AP) • Authorities say a woman died after her car fell into a sinkhole near Melba.

A section of roadway 15 feet wide and 40 feet long collapsed on Saturday, killing 32-year-old Sonia Lopez of Melba.

Nampa Highway District Director Casey Bequeath says irrigation water from a nearby field running through gopher tunnels likely weakened the ground beneath the street.

Bequeath said it is difficult to detect such problems ahead of time and that transportation officials had no idea the road was going to collapse.

The Idaho Press-Tribune reported that crews reopened the road around noon Saturday, and completed repairs Tuesday.

Police Probe Death of Pilot Who Stole Aircraft

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) • Authorities are trying to determine how a pilot suspected in a homicide was able to slip into a small Utah airport and steal an empty passenger plane that he drove into some cars. He was later found dead in an aisle of the aircraft with a gunshot wound to the head. SkyWest Airlines pilot

Brian Hedglin used a rug to scale the razor wire-topped fence at the St. George Municipal Airport early Tuesday. The plane crashed in an airport parking lot before it got off the ground. Authorities were trying to determine just how Hedglin — wanted in the murder of his girlfriend in Colorado — gained access to the 50-passenger plane while the airport was closed, among other details. The short ride was jarring enough to collapse the plane's front landing gear as it careened over landscaping, crossed a road and hit a curb before crashing into cars in the parking lot, St. George police Capt. James Van Fleet said.

Lawmakers: Protect Privacy From Drones

WASHINGTON (AP) • Before thousands of civilian drones begin flying in U.S. skies, Congress should take steps to protect the public's privacy and prevent terrorists from hacking or jamming signals that control the aircraft, lawmakers said Thursday.

House members from both parties said at an oversight hearing they're worried about potential privacy and security threats as the use of small unmanned aircraft becomes widespread. The Federal Aviation Administration forecasts an estimated 10,000 civilian drones in the U.S. within five years.

Even Rep. Henry Cuellar, D-Texas, co-chair of bipartisan group of lawmakers promoting greater domestic use of drones, acknowledged that legislation to protect privacy may be necessary.

There is tremendous demand to use drones at home for all kinds of tasks that are too dirty, dull or dangerous for manned aircraft. Drones also are often cheaper than manned aircraft. The biggest market is expected to be state and local police departments.

Rep. Michael McCaul, R-Texas, chairman of a House Homeland Security subcommittee, complained that no federal agency is willing to tackle the issue of drones and privacy. He said Department of Homeland Security officials refused a request to testify at the hearing, saying regulating civilian use of drones wasn't its responsibility.

McCaul said he is considering seeking a subpoena to force officials to testify at a future hearing or asking the White House to issue an executive order requiring the department take responsibility for the matter.

A defiant Maricopa County Sheriff Joe Arpaio pounds his fist May 10 on a lectern as he answers questions regarding the Department of Justice announcing a federal civil lawsuit against his department.

Racial Profiling Trial Begins for Ariz. Sheriff

PHOENIX (AP) • Arizona Sheriff Joe Arpaio's anti-illegal immigration patrols are taking center stage in federal court in Phoenix.

A lawyer for a group of Latinos who filed a civil lawsuit against his department said in opening statements Thursday that the evidence will show Arpaio and his deputies racially profiled Hispanics.

"It's our view that the problem starts at the top," attorney Stan Young said.

Tim Casey, who is defending Arpaio, said the patrols were properly planned and executed. He said they exceeded police standards. He said, "Race and ethnicity had nothing to do with the traffic stops."

The plaintiffs aren't seeking monetary damages. They want a declaration that Arpaio's office racially profiles and an order that requires it to make changes.

The lawsuit, filed by a handful of Latinos, will serve as a precursor to a U.S. Justice Department's case that alleges a broader range of civil rights violations by Arpaio's office.

For years, Arpaio, the self-proclaimed toughest sheriff in America, vehemently denied allegations his deputies in Arizona's most populous county racially profile Latinos in his trademark patrols.

The plaintiffs say Arpaio's officers based some traffic stops on the race of Hispanics who were in vehicles, had no probable cause to pull them over and made the stops so they could inquire about their immigration status.

"He is not free to say whatever he wants," said Dan Pochoda, a lawyer for the American Civil Liberties Union of Arizona, one of the groups that pushed the lawsuit against Arpaio. "He will be called as a witness."

If Arpaio loses the civil case, he won't face jail time or fines.

Congress' Debates Turn Presidential

WASHINGTON (AP) • The Senate is spending this week debating, and summarily rejecting, Democratic-written bills to disclose the names of people who give more than $10,000 to help elect people such as, say, Mitt Romney, and to take away tax breaks from companies taken over by people such as, say, Mitt Romney, who move operations overseas.

Their latest effort, unveiled Wednesday, would make candidates for federal office, like, say, Mitt Romney, disclose any of their financial holdings in offshore tax havens, such as Bermuda or the Cayman Islands.

Senate Democrats certainly aren't alone in devoting congressional workdays to bills attacking the other party's presidential candidate.

House Republicans last week voted to repeal President Barack Obama's health care overhaul. Next week, they plan to vote on freezing all of former President George W. Bush's tax cuts for another year, including those on the top 2 percent, whom Obama says should pay more. On Wednesday, the House passed a GOP bill ordering Obama to specify how many thousands of defense workers will lose their jobs if the deficit-cutting deal he and Republicans negotiated a year ago stands.

Congress is just two weeks away from a five-week August recess, with plenty of critical issues hanging over the Capitol. But neither party seems able to resist the allure of presidential politics.

Rancher Donny Nelson doesn't necessarily trust the oil companies who are drilling on his land. He has some well rigs on his property (background) but is cautious and not sure how much more he wants to let them use his land.

THE COST OF AN OIL BOOM

An influx of money means lifestyle changes and high costs for small towns among the North Dakota oil fields.

BY STEVEN MUFSON
The Washington Post

KEENE, N.D. • Donny Nelson is the epitome of old-time North Dakota. A lean, sharp-featured man sporting a thick goatee, jeans and dirty boots, Nelson is the grandson of homesteaders. Over the past century his family collected 8,000 acres of prime cattle-grazing acreage and cropland.

But now Nelson has some unwanted company: oil prospectors.

This remote corner of North Dakota is the site of the biggest U.S. oil rush in decades. It is pumping new supplies into oil markets and swelling state coffers; advocates say it could help reduce U.S. dependence on foreign oil. But the boom is also spreading a degree of chaos across the rural towns and gently undulating pasturelands here.

Two towering oil rigs are drilling holes on Nelson's property. One of the rigs, alongside two rows of 25-foot storage tanks, is planted on a red dirt pad, or clearing, right below a majestic butte that Native Americans over the ages visited for ceremonial fasts. When they were kids, Donny and his brother climbed up and carved their names on the flat-topped butte next to others going back to 1880.

This is Nelson's land, but he won't see any money from those wells, or nearly a dozen others that firms are planning to drill. The mineral rights were sold years ago, starting in the 1950s, when oil was discovered in North Dakota. Nelson and his family have leased out rights they do own, and his share of the royalties from four wells comes to about $8,000 a month.

It's a modest sum, he said, for the headaches that go with it. He's squabbled with oil companies over drilling waste, a saltwater spill and decades-old storage tanks eaten away by chemicals.

"I'd give it all back if I could for all the trouble it's been," said Nelson, 48.

Above all, he misses a time when people didn't lock their doors and knew all their neighbors.

"I don't like what it's done to our communities and lifestyle," he said. "We had a good life, and now it's gone forever, or at least for my lifetime."

All across this stretch of western North Dakota, an oil boom is in full swing, kicking up dust and controversy among longtime residents.

About seven years ago, oil companies figured out how to use horizontal drilling and hydraulic fracturing to extract unconventional oil resources trapped in a geological formation called the Bakken, which was previously too difficult and expensive to tap. This was not a conventional reservoir, but the source rock for oil up to 15,000 feet deep, spanning parts of Montana, North Dakota and Saskatchewan.

Somalis Dying on Food Walks

DOLO, Somalia (AP) • The long, dusty walks from hungry homes to far-away refugee camps are again claiming lives in Somalia one year after up to 100,000 people died in the country's worst famine in generations.

Two lethal factors are again combining to send families fleeing from their homes: too little rain and too many guns.

Enough rain did fall in Somalia this year to prevent a repeat of last year's massive famine, but it wasn't enough to keep everyone fed. In addition, al-Shabab militants who were forced from larger cities are infiltrating smaller towns where they are demanding payments from families in money, livestock or children, residents said.

The weeklong walks to refugee camps made by hundreds of thousands of Somalis last year turned sandy paths into roads of death for the famine's weakest victims. Refugees in Dolo are telling similar heartbreaking tales of weak children being left behind to die. One baby being carried on her mother's back in recent weeks died during the walk, a doctor said.

In a cruel replay of last year's hunger marches, many families who left refugee camps as the crisis eased this year went home, attempted to plant food but are now returning to the stick-hut camps.

"Before we were hoping for a good rain. But we got very little," said Ali Ganoon Abdi Rahman, a 75-year-old who walked nine days with his wife, daughter and four grandchildren. They arrived in Dolo earlier this week.

ASSOCIATED PRESS

Somali women and children who recently arrived at a refugee camp in Dolo, Somalia, sit under a tree Wednesday while waiting for food rations.

Rahman said that al-Shabab militants are active in his village in the Bay region of Somalia, but he hopes to return. "We came here because of hunger and security. Let these two things be sorted then we will go back."

The U.N. declared a famine in Somalia last July 20 as hundreds of thousands of people set out on foot in search of food, filling refugee camps in Mogadishu, Ethiopia and Kenya. The U.N., which declared the famine over in February, never released a death toll. But the British government estimated between 50,000 and 100,000 people died.

Some 12 million people needed assistance at the height of last year's famine. The numbers are much lower this time around but still staggering. The U.N. says 2.5 million people need aid to survive.

ASSOCIATED PRESS

Assad Appears on Syrian TV

BEIRUT (AP) • Syrian President Bashar Assad made his first appearance Thursday since a bomb killed some of his top lieutenants, looking calm and composed on state TV even as his forces turned parts of Damascus into combat zones and rebels seized two of the country's border crossings.

The unprecedented attack on Assad's inner circle Wednesday, along with the government's inability to crush the rebels after five days of intense clashes in the Syrian capital, point to an unraveling of his grip on power after 16 months of violence.

"It is a war going on here, literally a war," said a 25-year-old woman in the Muhajereen neighborhood.

The sounds of battle kept her up all night and she stayed home from work because she feared random gunfire, she added.

"It reminded me of that night when the Americans shelled Baghdad nine years ago," said the woman, who spoke on condition of anonymity because she feared for her safety. "I was watching it on TV, but today I'm living a very similar situation."

Even though Assad's powerful military remains mostly loyal — suggesting a total collapse may not be imminent — the rebels appeared to be making startling gains as the civil war intensified.

Besides the fighting in Damascus, about a half-dozen rebels took over a Syrian border crossing near the Iraqi town of Qaim, said Iraqi army Brig. General Qassim al-Dulaimi. There are four major border posts with Iraq.

Rebels overtook an army outpost near the Syrian-Iraq border after clashes killed 21 Syrian soldiers, he added.

In addition, amateur video posted online showed rebels taking over the Bab al-Hawa border crossing with Turkey, where they stomped on portraits of Assad.

A diplomatic solution to ending the bloodshed seemed even more remote after Russia and China again vetoed a Western-backed U.N. resolution aimed at pressuring Assad's government to end the escalating conflict.

Boom

Technological advances enabled companies to unlock that oil. With petroleum fetching record prices over the past year and a half, North Dakota is the scene of an old-fashioned oil rush.

This isn't entirely new. North Dakotans experienced drilling booms in the 1950s, when oil was discovered, and in the early 1980s, when prices soared. But this boom is the biggest yet and may be the longest-lasting.

Oil output has more than doubled in two years and jumped fivefold since 2006, to 609,503 barrels a day in April, providing about 3 percent of U.S. oil consumption.

What to do with all that oil? Pipeline capacity is limited, and companies are loading it onto trucks or trains, which move it to refineries that turn it into gasoline, diesel and other products in other parts of the country. The Keystone XL pipeline that TransCanada has proposed to build would carry 100,000 barrels a day to refineries on the Gulf of Mexico coast.

But the oil rush has also brought soaring home prices, makeshift camps for workers, overbooked hotels, and an explosion of heavy truck traffic and crime. Towns are gritty and cheerless. Stacks of pipe lie along the roads, waiting to be buried.

Consider a few recent news items:

The number of oversize and overweight trucks using roads and bridges in the Oil Patch more than doubled over the past three years; the state issued 236,530 such permits in 2011. McKenzie County, with about 7,000 residents, needed nearly $200 million to repair roads damaged by the truck traffic.

Williston public schools are trying to figure out how to cope with 1,200 additional students expected next year. The Bakken Breakout Weekly, which the Bismarck Tribune launched in print and online last year to keep up with and get ads from the boom, reported the 43 day-care centers in Williams County stopped taking names for waiting lists and in some cases stopped answering phones.

Construction contractor permits have doubled since mid-2011. Dickinson, a town with fewer than 20,000 people, just approved the construction of work camps for 3,000 people.

Felony cases soared 85 percent from 2006 to 2011.

For many energy and national security policymakers, the Bakken boom is welcome news. North Dakota has overtaken Alaska as the nation's second-biggest oil producer. In 2008, after boosting previous estimates 25-fold, the U.S. Geological Survey said the Bakken formation held 3 billion to 4.3 billion barrels of technically recoverable reserves. Last year, however, the USGS said new technical information called for a revision, which might ratchet the estimate higher.

CDC: Whooping Cough Rising at Alarming Rate

ATLANTA (AP) • The U.S. appears headed for its worst year for whooping cough in more than five decades, with the number of cases rising at an epidemic rate that experts say may reflect a problem with the effectiveness of the vaccine.

Nearly 18,000 cases are reported so far — more than twice the number seen at this point last year, the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention said Thursday. At this pace, the number for the entire year will be the highest since 1959, when 40,000 illnesses were reported.

Nine children died, and health officials called on adults — especially pregnant women and those who spend time around children — to get a booster shot as soon as possible.

"My biggest concern is for the babies. They're the ones who get hit the hardest," said Mary Selecky, chief of the health department in Washington, one of the states with the biggest outbreaks. Washington and Wisconsin reported more than 3,000 cases each, and high numbers were seen in a number of other states, including New York, Minnesota and Arizona.

Whooping cough has generally been increasing for years, but this year's spike is startling.

Health investigators are trying to figure out what's going on, and theories include better detection and reporting of cases, some sort of evolution in the bacteria that cause the illness or shortcomings in the vaccine.

The vaccine that was given to young children for decades was replaced in the late 1990s following concerns about rashes, fevers and other side effects. While the new version is considered safer, it is possible it isn't as effective long term, said Dr. Anne Schuchat, who oversees the CDC's immunization and respiratory disease programs.

Some parents in California and other states rebelled against vaccinations and got their children exempted from rules that require them to get their shots to enroll in school.

Washington state has one of the highest exemption rates in the nation. But the CDC said that does not appear to be a major factor in the outbreak, since most of the youngsters who got sick were vaccinated.

THE MARKET AT A GLANCE

Stocks Creep Up; Tech Stocks Rise

NEW YORK (AP) • Strong earnings from IBM and other technology companies nudged the stock market higher Thursday, but a trio of weak economic reports kept the gains in check. IBM surged 4 percent after it posted a jump in profits late Wednesday even as revenue fell. It marked the 38th consecutive quarter that IBM's net income rose over the previous year. IBM leapt $7.09 to $195.34. The Dow Jones industrial average rose 34.66 points to close at 12,943.36 on Thursday, the third straight day of gains. The Standard & Poor's 500 index gained 3.73 points to 1,376.51. The Nasdaq composite index rose 23.30 points to 2,965.90.

Yahoo CEO Compensation Worth up to $59 Million

NEW YORK (AP) • Yahoo is giving its new chief executive Marissa Mayer a compensation package worth up to $59 million over the next several years.

Yahoo Inc. said in a regulatory filing Thursday that Mayer will receive an annual salary of $1 million. She's also eligible for a $2 million bonus, and $12 million in restricted stock and stock options that will vest over several years.

Meyer, who is 37 and was lured away from Google Inc., will also receive $30 million in the form of a one-time retention award if she stays at Yahoo for 5 years.

Yahoo says it will also give Mayer restricted stock valued at $14 million to partially compensate her for forfeiting money she would have received at Google.

Microsoft reports first loss as public company

Microsoft has posted its first quarterly loss in its 26 years as a public company as it declared a struggling online ad business a bust and prepared for one of the biggest product updates in its history.

The software company had warned two weeks ago that it would take a $6.2 billion charge in the April-June quarter because its 2007 purchase of online ad service aQuantive failed to help it compete with Google Inc. The amount reflected the bulk of the $6.3 billion it paid for aQuantive.

Lee, Times-News Expand Digital Presence in Q3

TIMES-NEWS

DAVENPORT, Iowa • Lee Enterprises Inc., the parent company of the Times-News, reported Tuesday that its operating revenue was slightly down year-to-year for the third quarter, but that the company is on course with a number of initiatives to evolve its business and expand its digital presence.

In May, the Times-News became the seventh Lee newspaper to convert its local website to a metered-pay model.

“Our decision to ask readers to pay for unlimited access to Magicvalley.com is important,” said Times-News Publisher John Pfeifer. “It’s about emphasizing the value of what we do at our core — finding, reporting on and aggregating local news of interest to our readers.”

According to Pfeifer, ad revenue was up slightly from prior year.

Company-wide, Lee announced a loss of 3 cents per diluted share for the quarter, compared with a loss of $3.46 per share a year ago. But excluding reorganization costs in 2012, non-cash impairment charges and a non-cash curtailment gain in 2011, and debt financing costs and other unusual matters in both years, adjusted earnings per diluted common share totaled 2 cents, compared with 21 cents a year ago.

The majority of the decline is attributable to higher interest cost in 2012, according to the company’s report. Its third fiscal quarter ended June 24.

Among the highlights:
• Operating revenue for the quarter totaled $179.3 million, a decrease of 4.3 percent compared with a year ago. But operating expenses also declined by 4.1 percent, excluding depreciation, amortization and unusual matters.
• Lee reported growth in an array of digital products. Its websites and mobile and tablet products attracted 22.2 million unique visitors in the month of June, an increase of 3.1 percent from a year ago. Mobile page views in June increased 156 percent to 45.5 million. Digital advertising revenue grew by 10 percent year-to-year,

“Our decision to ask readers to pay for unlimited access to Magicvalley.com is important. It’s about emphasizing the value of what we do at our core — finding, reporting on and aggregating local news of interest to our readers.”

Times-News Publisher John Pfeifer

and the company has now launched digital subscription models for its websites in 17 markets, including south-central Idaho.

• Company debt was reduced by $9.5 million in the quarter and $38.3 million for the year to date.
• Though revenue results were erratic, total May revenue equaled the previous year, making it the company’s best month since December 2006.

“Lee continues on course with waves of initiatives to speed the evolution of our business,” said Mary Junck, chairman and CEO, in the announcement. “In nearly all our markets, the slow economic recovery seems to start and stall unpredictably, producing erratic overall revenue results from month to month. ... With a little more help from the economy, we hope to begin seeing many more upbeat months like May, and better.”

OIL PRICES

THE IRAN EFFECT

A fuel delivery truck leaves Arkansas Terminaling and Trading storage facility July 2 after taking on a load for gasoline and diesel fuel in North Little Rock, Ark. For oil and gas companies, the math was simple in the second quarter: lower prices equal lower profits.

BY JONATHAN FAHEY

Associated Press

NEW YORK • Rising tensions in the Middle East pushed oil prices up 19 percent over the past three weeks and are leading to a rise in prices at the gasoline pump.

Since the start of July, average gasoline prices in the U.S. climbed 11 cents to $3.44 per gallon. Pump prices are expected to creep higher in the coming weeks, and they aren’t likely to fall back to their June low of $3.33 for the rest of the summer, analysts say.

Crude rose $2.79, about 3 percent, to $92.66 per barrel Thursday, its highest level since mid-May. The price has risen $15 per barrel since June 28, when oil hit a low of $77.69.

The oil market is responding to a series of events in recent days that have raised concerns — yet again — that Iran will try to block oil shipments through the Strait of Hormuz, a narrow waterway in the Persian Gulf through which one-fifth of the world’s oil travels every day.

Iran raised this threat late last year after the U.S. and Europe announced sanctions designed to crimp Iran’s oil sales, sending oil soaring above $100 per barrel. Western nations are trying force Iran to abandon what the West says are efforts to develop a nuclear weapon.

Tensions eased, and oil prices fell, when Iran agreed to enter negotiations over its nuclear program.

But in the past few weeks, those negotiations appeared to have failed, a U.S. Navy ship fired on a boat in the Persian Gulf and Iran said it has devised a specific plan to block oil shipments.

Then, on Wednesday, seven Israelis were killed in a suicide attack in Bulgaria. Israel blamed Iran for the attack, and vowed to strike back. Iran has denied involvement.

formation Service. “This was more than just talk and taunting.”

If oil buyers worry that oil will soon be in short supply, they buy oil futures contracts to lock in the price as insurance against future price spikes.

Those purchases drive up benchmark oil prices and can eventually lead to higher prices at the pump.

Brent crude, which is used to benchmark the oil bought by most U.S. refineries, has jumped 21 percent in about a month. On Thursday Brent rose $2.64 to $107.80. Brent hit a low of $89.23 on June 22.

Brent would be most affected by a disruption in the Middle East because it is used to price seagoing crude that competes with crude shipped through the Persian Gulf. Also Brent, which is priced in London, has been pushed higher by lower oil production in the North Sea.

Further increases are possible over the next few weeks, a development drivers are unlikely to welcome.

Nelson Lyon, Director of Raunchy Comedy 'The Telephone Book,' Dies

BY VALERIE J. NELSON
Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES • Decades after writer-director Nelson Lyon released the X-rated sex comedy "The Telephone Book" in 1971, the film was hailed as a neglected masterpiece. By then Lyons was a former "Saturday Night Live" writer long known for a darker connection: He went on a drug-fueled binge with John Belushi during the comedian's final days in 1982.

"He was blamed for Belushi's death, and it ruined his career," said Dennis Perrin, author of "Mr. Mike," a 1999 biography of former "Saturday Night Live" head writer Michael O'Donoghue, who had been Lyon's writing partner.

Lyon, 73, died Tuesday of liver cancer at his home in Los Angeles, said Mark Mothersbaugh, the lead singer of Devo and a close friend.

When the Los Angeles County Grand Jury investigated Belushi's drug-overdose death, Lyon testified in early 1983 under a grant of immunity from prosecutors. He presented a sordid portrait of the end of Belushi's life.

Three days before he died, Belushi began a "boys' night out" at Lyon's apartment when the comedian arrived with Cathy Evelyn Smith. A former backup singer, she would later admit giving Belushi the heroin-cocaine mixture that killed him and would then serve a 15-month prison sentence.

"I have a big surprise for you," Lyon said Belushi told him. "Roll up your sleeves."

Smith injected Belushi and Lyon several times that day and on March 4, 1982, the day before Belushi's body was found at the Chateau Marmont hotel in West Hollywood, according to Lyon's testimony.

At a private nightclub, Belushi and Lyon mingled with celebrities before Smith injected the two men with a "speedball," a mixture of heroin and cocaine. It "rendered me a walking zombie," Lyon testified.

Belushi became ill on his way back to his bungalow, where actor Robert De Niro and comedian Robin Williams stopped by, according to Lyon. He testified that he left an exhausted Belushi with Smith about 3:30 a.m. March 5. The 33-year-old Belushi was found dead later that morning.

In his testimony, Lyon said he had taken drugs to please Belushi.

Lyon's resume as a filmmaker was thin, but "The Telephone Book" experienced a renaissance nearly 40 years after it was made when it was screened internationally.

Initially dismissed by mainstream critics as pornographic and obscene, it is now regarded as a "lost gem," Mothersbaugh said.

In his 1971 Times review, critic Kevin Thomas praised the risqué farce about a woman who falls in love with an obscene telephone caller. The satire of pornography was "so bleakly brilliant that those in search of the usual sexploitation entertainment attend at peril," he wrote.

The film "was made with an agreement of freedom to offend and assault and attack the audience, as well as try to amuse the audience," Lyon told The Wall Street Journal in January. "It was an era of sexual obsession, and the movie was focused on life's biggest problem: sex."

Through the movie, Lyon met O'Donoghue and was soon writing for "Saturday Night Live" in the early '80s. The burly and imposing Lyon became the basis of one of O'Donoghue's recurring characters on the show — the grim Mr. Mike.

"When you met Nelson, you saw the staccato rhythms of Mr. Mike," Perrin said, "and certainly the dark humor."

Born Feb. 28, 1939, in Troy Hills, N.J., Lyon attended Columbia University.

He was a writer-designer for a New York ad agency when he met Andy Warhol in 1966, and he later worked for the artist's studio, the Factory.

When Warhol was struggling with a concept for the cover of the 1971 Rolling Stones album "Sticky Fingers," Lyon told him to incorporate a working zipper into a close-up portrait of jeans, according to an unpublished memoir by Lyon. After Warhol went with the idea, he gave Lyon five Marilyn Monroe prints to pay him, the writer later recalled.

Lyon co-produced spoken-word records for writers William Burroughs and Terry Southern, and photographs Lyon took of Burroughs have been featured in galleries.

After Belushi's death, Lyon opened a company that made trailers for movies, essentially becoming "a filmmaker without a camera," Perrin said. Lyon tired of the work and closed the business some years ago.

"He was down to nothing in the last couple of years," Mothersbaugh said. "He had burnt all his bridges.... He didn't censor himself, and he was smarter than most of the people he worked for."

Mothersbaugh, who is also an artist, hired Lyon to work on a project called "Dick Vanderbeek," about a modern Dick Tracy in an off-kilter world. The work may debut as a graphic novel.

"The stuff he wrote in the last five years was some of his best," Mothersbaugh said. "He wasn't going to parties. He was clean and concentrating on his work."

Lyon is survived by his wife, Jill, whom he married weeks before he died; and two daughters from previous marriages, Stephanie and Natalie.

OBITUARIES

Raquel Hernandez Solis

March 26, 1947-July 15, 2012

KIMBERLY • Raquel Hernandez Solis, 65, of Kimberly, Idaho, was returned to our heavenly father Sunday, July 15, 2012, due to injuries sustained in an automobile accident.

Raquel was born in San Ignacio, Texas, on March 26, 1947, to Julian and Aurora Hernandez. Raquel grew up in a large but very close and loving family. She had eight sisters and three brothers. As a family, they would migrate from Texas to Idaho every season to work as farm laborers. In 1970, Raquel married Arnoldo Solis, also from San Ignacio. After their marriage, the two made the decision to permanently settle in Twin Falls, Idaho. They had three children, all born in Twin Falls. The happy couple would have just celebrated their 42nd wedding anniversary on July 17.

Raquel worked at Lamb Weston/ConAgra for approximately 25 years. During her time there, she met many good people, some with whom she developed lasting friendships. Raquel attended St. Edward the Confessor Catholic Church. She was a member of Mystagogia and was blessed with the opportunity to travel with them to Rome in 2010. Raquel was very devoted to her faith and loved to sing church hymns and pray; she read her Bible faithfully every morning before beginning her days. Raquel found happiness in being with her family. She would travel to California, Texas and Illinois to visit her brothers, sisters and many nieces and nephews. But most of her time was spent at home with her husband, two daughters, son, son-in-law and her three precious grandchildren.

Raquel is survived by her loving husband, Arnoldo Solis; daughters, Norma Amanda Lopez and Nelda Solis; son, Luis Carlos Solis; grandchildren, Claudia Raquel Benavides Lopez and Lyla Guzman; sisters, Minerva Solis, Sofia Galindo, Rosa Rodriguez, Bertha Galindo, Margarita Perez and Noemi Hernandez; brothers, Mario Alberto Hernandez and Pedro Hernandez; and many nieces and nephews. She was preceded in death by her parents, Julian and Aurora Hernandez; grandson, Thomas James Navarrete; sister, Aurora Martinez; and brother, Julian Hernandez Jr.

Raquel touched the lives of all who knew her with her gentle, kind, loving and giving personality. The sparkle in her eyes and beautiful smile will be missed by all. The family would like to send out a sincere heartfelt thanks for all prayers and support.

A funeral Mass will be celebrated at 11 a.m. Monday, July 23, at St. Edward the Confessor Catholic Church, 161 Sixth Ave. E. in Twin Falls, with Father Marcos Sanchez as celebrant. Burial will follow at Sunset Memorial Park. A rosary prayer service will be recited at 7 p.m. Sunday at Reynolds Funeral Chapel, 2466 Addison Ave. E. in Twin Falls, with Deacon John Hurley reciting. A viewing for family and friends will take place from 5 p.m. until the time of the rosary Sunday at Reynolds Funeral Chapel in Twin Falls.

Donations in Raquel's memory can be given to the St. Edwards Kitchen for the Needy and may be left with funeral chapel staff or mailed to Reynolds Funeral Chapel, P.O. Box 1142, Twin Falls, ID 83303-1142.

Arrangements are under the direction of Trent Stimpson and staff at Reynolds Funeral Chapel. Messages of support can be left at www.reynoldschapel.com.

Sylvia Woods, Who Started Harlem Restaurant, Dies at 86

NEW YORK (AP) • Sylvia Woods, founder of the famed Harlem soul food restaurant that carries her name and is a must-stop for locals, tourists and politicians, has died. She was 86.

Woods died Thursday afternoon at her home in Mount Vernon, N.Y., said her granddaughter Trenness Woods-Black. She had been dealing with Alzheimer's disease for the past few years.

Woods and her husband Herbert, natives of South Carolina who met as children, started Sylvia's Restaurant in 1962. The restaurant is a Harlem fixture, with tourists and locals coming there for cornbread, ribs, collard greens, fried chicken and other staples of Southern cooking, and politicians making frequent visits while on the campaign trail.

One of those politicians, Rep. Charles Rangel, said he celebrated his recent victory in the Democratic primary for Congress at the restaurant, which is in his district and which he described as "a magical place that brought the community together."

"Ms. Sylvia created a special place on Lenox and 127th street. Sylvia's may have been famous nationally and internationally, but its soul has always remained in Harlem," he said. "Nothing can replace its founder, but her legacy will live on in the memories she helped make." Rev. Al Sharpton said

In this Jan. 17, 1996 file photo, the self-described 'Queen of Soul Food' Sylvia Woods, right, greets patron Carrie Haynes-Madsen at her restaurant, 'Sylvia's,' in the Harlem neighborhood of New York. Wood died in Mount Vernon, N.Y. on Thursday. She was 86.

Sylvia's was "more than a restaurant, it has been a meeting place for Black America." He said he had dined there with many famous faces including President Barack Obama and Caroline Kennedy.

Mayor Michael Bloomberg said, "We lost a legend today. For more than 50 years, New Yorkers have enjoyed Sylvia's and visitors have flocked to Harlem to get a table. In her words, the food was made with 'a whole lot of love' and generations of family and friends have come together at what became a New York institution."

From its start as a restaurant, Sylvia's has grown to include multiple cookbooks and a nationwide line of food products.

Woods-Black said the restaurant, marking its 50th anniversary in August, is more than just a place to eat, that it's a place where her grandmother could express her hospitality, a tradition that following generations have maintained.

"If you come alone, you're never going to dine alone," she said.

Tom Davis, Al Franken's 'SNL' Writing Partner, Dies at 59

BY CLAIRE NOLAND
Los Angeles Times

Tom Davis, a comedy writer who teamed with Al Franken to write memorable bits on "Saturday Night Live" from the time the late-night show first aired in the mid-1970s, has died. He was 59.

Davis died Thursday at his home in New York's Hudson Valley, his wife, Mimi Raleigh, told the Associated Press. He had throat and cancer.

The duo, who met as classmates growing up in Minneapolis, created for "SNL" the Coneheads, a raft of characters and skits featuring Bill Murray's Nick the Lounge Singer.

Davis was among the "SNL" writers who won Emmys in 1976, '77 and '89. He won another writing Emmy in 1978 for a Paul Simon variety show.

In his 2009 memoir, "Thirty-nine Years of Short-Term Memory Loss: The Early Days of SNL From Someone Who Was There," Davis wrote about his friendship and falling out with Franken. The two later reconciled.

Franken is now a Democratic U.S. senator representing Minnesota.

Sample Your Neighbors' CULTURES at Tonight's Refugee Day

BY TETONA DUNLAP
tdunlap@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • The sounds of Burundi echoed through the basement of the First United Methodist Church. Standing in a semicircle around microphones, Burundian men and women swung their arms rhythmically with the chime-like melody from an electric keyboard. Their joyous voices rang in unison as they danced.

"Singing and dancing is a big part of the culture," said Ndayisenga Nyabenda, a refugee who arrived in Twin Falls four years ago and the director of the Burundian Hope Choir.

The choir met in the Twin Falls church's basement in anticipation of its performance at tonight's third annual Magic Valley Refugee Day. The free event runs from 6 to 9 p.m. at Twin Falls City Park's band shell, and it's an opportunity to relish the music and cuisine of your new neighbors.

Performances such as the Burundian Hope Choir will start at 7:30 p.m., as will other presentations on the stage that feature ethnic music, singing and dancing.

Performers Rally Around Sick Thespian

BY ANDREW WEEKS
aweeks@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • A doctor's visit didn't turn out the way Jennifer Miller expected.

After experiencing pain in her sides and persistent coughing, she went to the doctor to find that she had broken ribs — and a couple of diseases, one still undiagnosed. The single mother of two has missed work for six months.

To help the Magic Valley High School drama teacher, her friends from OutCast Theater plan a benefit dinner and variety show on Monday.

"It's going to be a music, drama and dance performance," said friend Nancy Bowman, who is organizing the event with about eight other people.

Performers Johnny U, Jud Harmon, Lori Henson and Front Porch Flavor signed on right away, Bowman said.

"The offers from so many more came pouring in so fast, I could put on five shows," said director Dusty Blackburn, noting that other acts will be a mix of talent. "We have something that not only raises money, but reflects Jennifer's personality, energy, and her vast range of performance taste."

Bowman, who has known Miller for about two years, describes Miller as "a very upbeat person," so it's tough to see her so worn out.

"She gets really tired of being out for just a half-hour at a time," Bowman said, explaining that Miller wasn't feeling well enough to make it to a recent meeting to review plans for the show.

"We've been meeting a few nights ... collecting donations for the silent

Cultures

Ten ethnic groups will set up tents featuring food, clothing and information about their respective cultures. Tasting the foods that best represent each country is free, too.

The Burundian group will make two dishes. Njano — yellow beans with tomatoes, carrots, salt and palm oil — is like a thick stew and is popular in Burundi. Golden potatoes will be fried in palm oil with tomatoes, onions and salt. Palm oil is essential in Burundian cuisine, and choir member Sostene Ndbacekure said people rub palm oil on their eyes to protect their vision.

Be sure to check out the Burundian tent as it will have traditional clothing on display, such as the woven baskets women carry on their heads.

Other tents will house cultures from Afghanistan, Armenia, Bhutan and Nepal, Bosnia, Eritrea, Iran, Iraq, Myanmar and Turkey.

At the Bosnian tent, you can taste homemade cheese or ground beef pitas with baklava for dessert. Stay and watch a social dance called kolo during the group's performance.

Or you can try Bhutanese

Rally

198 mph in his black 2008 Porsche GT2 down a straight, downhill section of Idaho Highway 75 near Cathedral of the Pine.

Shillington, Unser and other drivers will attempt to push the limits on some two dozen cars again this year during the fourth annual Sun Valley Road Rally on July 28.

"We anticipate someone breaking last year's record," said Andrea Walton, development coordinator for the rally. "With every year, the competition gets stiffer."

The big day will kick off 9-11 a.m. July 28 with an opportunity to meet the drivers and see Ford GTs, Porsches, Ferraris, Jaguars, a Lamborghini, Cobras and Lotus Espirits in the parking lot at the base of Bald Mountain.

Spectator tickets are $10 each, $20 per family and free for children younger than 6 and include transportation to and from the rally site, where bleachers will be set up. Spectators can hop on one of three buses leaving at 8:30, 8:40 and 8:50 a.m.

The buses will continue to loop throughout the rally, bringing back spectators who can't stay for the entire roster, which includes five heats of 12 drivers each. The rally is expected to last through 1 p.m.

Nonprofit vendors will have hot dogs, sandwiches, cotton candy, fruit smoothies and other foods for sale at the viewing site. Emily Stone will keep little ones busy with face painting.

The event will culminate with a gala and auction from 6 p.m. to midnight July 28 at River Run Lodge.

The evening, which costs $150 per person, will include a gourmet dinner, live dance music by Boise's High Street Band and live and silent auctions.

Dave Stone, who owns Sun Valley Auto Club in Hailey, started the road rally with former Blaine County Sheriff Walt Fleming. He calls it "a rush."

"You're going three times the speed limit, seeing that white line blurring by like a double line at that speed," he said. "We're the only place in the country where you can do this, so we get people from everywhere — California, England, New Zealand. I even had ESPN interview me last year."

Those with a need for speed can buy $25 raffle tickets for a chance to ride with Unser, who lives in Sun Valley. Raffle tickets for $100 offer a chance to win a 2012 Porsche Cayenne; by Monday about 600 had

A Free Taste

This year's road rally will include a Friday-night Cruise, 6-8 p.m. July 27, that's free for spectators.

Forty drivers plan to participate. Dick Brewer will be there in his 1957 Cadillac Eldorado, Dave Crowe in his 1946 Woody and Roger Sanger in his 1964 Corvette Coupe.

The drivers will start at Serenade Lane on Ketchum's south side and cruise to Ketchum Town Plaza, where there will be live music and a chance to vote on favorite vehicle.

"A lot of drivers told us they have beautiful cars that they want to showcase but they don't want to race," said Andrea Walton, development director for Sun Valley Road Race. "This was our response to that."

been sold.

Raffle tickets are available at the rally tent across from Atkinsons Market in Ketchum and at the road rally.

Last year's event raised a quarter-million dollars for the Blaine County Drug Coalition, said coalition Executive Director Terry Basso.

Savor the Night Sky from Magic Valley's Darkest Places

TWIN FALLS • The Herrett Center and Magic Valley Astronomical Society will team up again for their two annual "dark sky" star parties on July 21 and Aug. 17. The events are in two of southern Idaho's most accessible areas where people can enjoy sky views not washed out by city light.

• The sixth annual Pomerelle Mountain star party will begin at 3 p.m. July 21; follow the signs south of Albion on Idaho Highway 77 to reach the Pomerelle ski resort. The event will begin with water bottle rocket building and launching and solar viewing at the ski lodge. At 5:30, visitors may have picnics or dinner at the lodge. A night sky talk at 7:30 p.m. will be followed by ski lift rides to the mountaintop, where sky viewing will begin at dark. The event is free, but there is a charge to ride the ski lift.

• The fifth annual City of Rocks star party will start at 2 p.m. Aug. 17 with solar viewing at the Smoky Mountain Campground at Castle Rocks State Park, about one mile southwest of Almo. Visitors may camp overnight at the campground; state park fees apply. Nighttime sky viewing will begin at 9 p.m. and run until midnight.

See Chinese Mining Artifacts before End of July

vhutchins@magicvalley.com

FILER • Among the most engrossing exhibits at the Twin Falls County Historical Museum is a diorama of Chinese gold miners living in the Snake River Canyon.

Accompanying the scene of miniature figures are real artifacts — ceramics, opium paraphernalia, mining tools like a scale pan and rock drill bits — and explanations of the conditions and prejudice the Chinese faced in southern Idaho.

To see it all, visit the county museum before the end of July, when the artifacts will leave for some time in storage.

The Mon-Tung Collection of late-1800s artifacts comes from Twin Falls master's degree candidate Ron James' 1989 excavation on Bureau of Land Management property in the Snake River Canyon. It's owned by the BLM but curated by the Idaho Museum of Natural History at Idaho State University, said Mychel Matthews, administrator of the Twin Falls County Historical Museum.

"It was to be a temporary loan, and we've had it since 2006, which is a very long time for a loan," Matthews said Wednesday.

It's customary in the museum business to let artifacts rest in storage from time to time, she said. "Some things are quite sensitive to the environment, and that's why that's a standard policy."

But the diorama will stay and will remain on display.

It belongs to the county museum and was part of the late Norman Herrett's first museum on Twin Falls' Kimberly Road. Herrett, who taught generations of Twin Falls youth about archeology and astronomy, is the man for whom the Herrett Center for Arts and Science is named.

"The diorama itself is truly a local treasure," Matthews said. The county museum hopes eventually to pair it with other mining artifacts from the Snake River Canyon.

Twin Falls County Historical Museum is at 21337-A U.S. Highway 30; that's near Curry Crossing, halfway between Twin Falls and Filer. Hours are noon to 5 p.m. Tuesdays through Saturdays.

Information: 736-4675.

auctions and putting together performances," Bowman said.

Miller, 34, has been associated with theater as long as she can remember.

"My first play was, I don't know, when I was 6," she said. Over the years Miller has made costumes, constructed sets, designed makeup and lighting themes, and directed and performed in competitions, dances, festivals and plays.

She also created an award-winning drama and speech program that in 2009 earned Magic Valley High statewide recognition by placing third in a sweepstakes of all Idaho schools. In 2011, Miller was honored as teacher of the year by Idaho speech and theater associations.

Of the help she now is receiving from her friends, she said: "It's overwhelming. I'm just completely overwhelmed by the outpouring of love."

Miller became ill in January; before then, besides a sinus surgery, she felt healthy. Her broken ribs were caused by persistent coughing, doctors determined. The doctors, she said, attributed that to pleurisy. She since has been diagnosed with celiac disease; another illness is yet undetermined.

ED GLAZAR • FOR THE TIMES-NEWS

"They think it might be Zollinger-Ellison syndrome — basically, tumors in the pancreas," she said. "I can't get nutrition, that's one of my problems. I can do rice, sometimes a banana, but everything else is a gamble."

She tries to maintain an upbeat attitude, she said, but some days are tougher than others. She's thankful, however, for a strong network of family and friends who share encouraging words and are working hard to raise money for her.

Helping Miller

A dinner and variety show to benefit Jennifer Miller will begin at 7 p.m. July 23 at 681 Encore Performance and Event Center, Twin Falls; dinner, entertainment, raffles and silent auction. Admission is by donation, plus $6 for dinner. Or help Miller by donating at any branch of DL Evans Bank, under "Benefit of Jennifer Miller."

Information: Nancy Bowman at 961-1222.

Miller hopes to be well enough to make it to the benefit show.

"I have friends that will be coming from out of town to perform and people that I've watched my whole life," she said. "I'm just so excited. ... Even if I have to be in a hospital gown, I'll be there."

Encaustic, Creativity and Photo Classes

TWIN FALLS • The Twin Falls Center for the Arts will offer an encaustic workshop, taught by Boise artist Barbara Michener, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Aug. 4. Cost is $125 for Magic Valley Arts Council members and $150 for others; all supplies are included. The encaustic medium uses beeswax, resin and color pigments.

Other upcoming classes at the center:

- Karen Fothergill will teach a "Creativity Class" open studio for adults, 7-9 p.m. July 30, Aug. 1 and Aug. 3. Three-session cost is $35 for Magic Valley Arts Council members and $45 for others; all supplies are included. Expect projects designed to encourage self-expression and build artistic confidence.

- Landscape photographer Terry Halbert of Twin Falls will teach a "Digital Photography Class," 1-4 p.m. Aug. 4. Cost is $10 for arts council members and $12 for others. He'll take you from camera basics to seeing a new, artistic vision of the world. The class is for beginner point-and-shooters to more advanced digital SLR photographers. Bring your camera and manual.

Preregistration is required: magicvalleyartscouncil.org or 734-2787. The center is at 195 River Vista Place.

Free Chamber Series Kicks off Symphony Season

Hear Met soprano Deborah Voigt in a free chamber concert July 27.

BY KAREN BOSSICK
For the Times-News

SUN VALLEY • The Sun Valley Summer Symphony season gets under way July 22 with the first of four chamber music evenings.

The four free performances — part of the Edgar M. Bronfman In Focus Series — will focus this year on the music of late-19th-century Vienna, said the symphony's executive director, Jennifer Teisinger.

The performances, which each feature a handful of musicians, will include a discussion by Sun Valley Summer Symphony music director Alasdair Neale about each piece. They begin at 6:30 each night in the Sun Valley Pavilion and run until about 8 p.m.

Sunday's performance features guest artist baritone Eugene Brancoveanu. The lineup of songs includes Brahms' "Lullaby," Mendelssohn's "Old German Song of Spring" and Mahler's songs from "The Boy's Magic Horn" and "Songs of a Wayfarer."

The July 23 program includes Bruckner's "Scherzo" and Brahms' "Clarinet Quintet in B minor." The July 25 program includes Schoenberg's "Transfigured Night."

The four chamber concerts will climax on July 27 with an appearance by soprano Deborah Voigt, a regular performer and host in the Metropolitan Opera's "Met: Live in HD" series. The program includes Johann Strauss' "Emperor Waltz" and Wolf's "Italian Serenade."

Voigt, who was featured in a "60 Minutes" profile, will return on July 30 to open the symphony orchestra season, which concludes Aug. 14.

Davis

officer for Zions Idaho. The film also starred Sun Valley homeowner Tom Hanks, along with Lori Petty, Madonna and Rosie O'Donnell.

Davis said she was struck by the dearth of female characters on screen while watching children's TV and videos with her young daughter several years ago. In response, she created the Geena Davis Institute on Gender in Media and its programming arm, See Jane, to increase the percentages of female characters in media.

A study by the Annenberg School for Communication of 400 G-, PG-, PG-13- and R-rated movies demonstrated that there are nearly three males for every one female character, Davis said.

"Research done between 1990 and 2010 showed that there has been no increase in female characters at all," she added. "I don't think it's part of a plot to keep women off the screen. If I've learned anything it's that it's completely unconscious. They just don't realize."

Zions Bank invited Davis to introduce the film and her effort. The bank, which has branches in the Magic and Wood River valleys, had the actress speak at a conference for women earlier.

Davis will also appear at events in Salt Lake City and Idaho Falls, where she will throw out the ball for an Idaho Falls ball club.

"I don't think I will dazzle anyone with my first pitch, but I do hope I throw it well enough that they don't think that whole movie was a fake," she said.

Davis, 56, has embraced many roles, such as serving as a fashion model and window mannequin and placing 24th among 300 women vying for a semifinals berth on the Olympic archery team for the 2000 Summer Olympics in Sydney, Australia.

She is best known for her iconic roles in "Thelma and Louise," for which she received an Oscar nomination as Best Actress, and "A League of Their Own," for which she received a Best Actress Golden Globe nomination. Davis, who received an Oscar as Best Actress for her role in "The Accidental Tourist," also is quick to point out she portrayed a pirate captain in "Cutthroat Island."

She portrayed the first female president of the U.S. in the ABC series "Commander in Chief," earning a Golden Globe for Best Actress in a Drama Series in 2006, along with an Emmy nomination.

"I was thrilled to do the show. We didn't do it with the idea of changing the world. But because media images are so powerful, it did have an effect. People who were familiar with the show were 68 percent more likely to vote for a female presidential candidate than those who had not seen it," said Davis, who also fronted the Women's Sports Foundation campaign Geena Takes Aim in support of Title IX, which focused on inequality in sports.

Zions Bank is thrilled to have Davis in Sun Valley to celebrate her story of pioneering women athletes, said Zions Bank regional president Bryan Furlong. "This event is an extension of our commitment to empowering women to achieve financial independence."

Nelson's Second Round Solid at Nationals

TIMES-NEWS

ROCK SPRINGS, Wyo. • Valley High School's Jesse Nelson stands in 10th place in bareback riding during early results of the second round at the National High School Finals Rodeo at the Sweetwater Events Center.

Nelson also competed in trap shooting, scoring 16 points, good for a tie for 66th.

Kimberly's Raeli Prescott put together a strong second round in cow cutting, finishing fourth, good for 10th overall. Minico's Jaylee Stimpson finished tied for 19th after her second round in cow cutting and stands in 13th place overall.

Cole Lickley (Valley) and Pake-os Palmer (Richfield) are 13th in average in team roping after finishing 9th in their round Thursday morning.

Overall, the state of Idaho is fourth overall, with the boys fourth and the girls fifth.

LASSO MOVES TO COACHING HANSEN BOYS

Jim Lasso has been named the new boys basketball coach at Hansen High School, replacing Mike Pfeiffer.

Lasso was the Huskies' girls basketball coach for the past eight seasons, compiling a 65-106 record.

Hansen's boys came with in a game last season of making the state tournament, losing to eventual 1A Division I champion Glenns Ferry in the District IV-V-VI Tournament and then falling 88-84 to Liberty Charter in the 1A Division I play-in round.

Pfeiffer went 116-131 in 13 seasons coaching Hansen.

POOLE PICKS UP BASKETBALL DUTIES

New Raft River football coach Brian Poole has taken on head boys basketball coaching duties as well.

Trojan athletic director Randy Spaeth confirmed the move in an email to the Times-News late Wednesday evening.

Poole replaces Greg Scott, who led the Trojans to a 0-22 record in his only season in charge. Poole replaced Spaeth as football coach.

Harper Placed on Walker Watch List

TIMES-NEWS

Harper

BOISE • Boise State senior running back D.J. Harper was one of 52 players named to the preseason watch list for the Doak Walker Award, which is given to the nation's top running back.

Harper was the Broncos' second-leading rusher last season, gaining 557 yards on 115 carries while backing up Doug Martin, a first-round draft pick of the Tampa Bay Buccaneers. His nine rushing touchdowns last year gave him 24 for his career, good for ninth-most in school history.

Harper, who has four 100-yard rushing games in his career, is hopeful for a healthy senior campaign. The senior earned a sixth year of eligibility in 2012 for season-ending knee injuries suffered in the 2009-10 campaigns.

Harper is the third Boise State player to receive preseason recognition for a major college football award. Matt Miller (wide receiver) was similarly honored for the Biletnikoff Award, while Joe Kellogg (offensive guard) was put on the Outland Trophy watch list.

Track and Field

The University of Idaho women's track and field team announced the signing of three top-tier high school throwers on Thursday to National Letters of Intent for the 2012-13 season.

Vandal head coach Julie Taylor, who oversees the team's throws program, said she's very excited about the addition of Adara Winder of Bonney Lake, Wash. (Bonney Lake HS), and teammates Tayler Feinauer and Kaylie Van Loo of Hillsboro, Ore. (Glencoe HS).

"Each of them is very accomplished and they all come in at a high level, as far as being able to compete right away," Taylor said. "They're also all very good athletes - all of them at one point did multiple sports and they haven't totally focused on track and field year-round, so I think they all still have a lot of potential for improvement."

Winder is a three-time Washington Class 3A shot put champion, while Van Loo was a state champion in Oregon's Class 5A as a sophomore before moving up to Class 6A and recording top-three state finishes as a junior and senior.

JEROME CYCLONES SIZZLE, FIZZLE, GO FLAT IN SWEEP

BY DAVID BASHORE
dbashore@magicvalley.com

JEROME • The American Legion baseball season Jerome's had can be summed up by the first three innings of Game 2 of the Cyclones' doubleheader with Idaho Falls on Thursday.

Jerome stormed out of the gates with four runs in the first inning. Then the bats went silent, and then the Cyclones capitulated, giving up the lead on their way to an 11-4 loss, their 12th setback in as many Area C games.

Idaho Falls won the opener 9-4.

"That's just been our season. We're consistently in peaks and valleys, and we can't sustain," said Jerome coach Kenneth James. "We're very young and we're getting experience, but we feel like we're capable of more. Are we getting better? Yes, but 0-12 or whatever it is, there are some tight games in there we should win."

Ethan Bragg tripled in two runs to key Jerome's big first inning in Game 2, but the Cyclones had precious little luck at the plate other than that inning. They managed just 10 hits on the day, and struck out 26 times - 13 in each game against Bandit pitchers Kohl Hostert and Lincoln Clayton.

Idaho Falls, by contrast, banged out 26 hits. Clayton went 5-for-7 on the day including a double, a homer and three RBI.

The Bandits clinched a tie for the Area C regular-season championship, and they can win it outright if Twin Falls takes at least one game from Pocatello on Saturday. Otherwise a coin flip will be necessary to decide seed order for the Area C Tournament, held at Twin Falls starting next Thursday.

Jerome will take the fourth seed into the tournament. The Cyclones have one more non-area doubleheader to prep for the tournament, when they visit the Boise Gems on Saturday.

It's one last chance to get through the growing pains before the games that really matter.

"A month ago we were treating it like a chance to get set for districts, but now it's just a matter of getting through it," James said. "We're pretty much out of arms, and we want maximum rest for the tournament. We're just treating it as another chance to get these guys some experience."

SCOTT STROLLS TO EARLY LEAD AT BRITISH OPEN

ASSOCIATED PRESS

Adam Scott plays a shot on the 15th hole at Royal Lytham & St Annes golf club during the first round of the British Open on Thursday.

ASSOCIATED PRESS

LYTHAM ST. ANNES, England • Unlike the guys in charge of the weather forecast, Adam Scott got everything just about right Thursday in the British Open.

Scott was determined not to take himself out of contention in the opening round at Royal Lytham & St. Annes, as he had done in the first two majors this year. Caddie Steve Williams gave him a pep talk to play the first hole like it was the last one. Even more inspiration came from the international flags posted above the massive grandstand down the left side of the first tee.

They weren't flapping. They were sagging.

In surprisingly calm conditions, Scott raced out to the lead and almost into the record book. He stood on the 18th tee needing a birdie to break the major championship scoring record, and instead made bogey to settle for a 6-under 64.

It matched the lowest Open round ever at Royal Lytham and gave the Australian a one-shot lead over Paul Lawrie, Zach Johnson and Nicolas Colsaerts.

"It was just like a nice walk in the park today," Scott said. "And it was not what we've experienced in the practice rounds. I'm sure there's going to be some weather elements thrown at us the next three days, so just going to have to knuckle down to handle that. But I'm confident. My ball striking is good. I think I can get it around no matter what the conditions are."

The proof was in limp flags and red numbers on the scoreboards.

Scott was among three dozen players with rounds in the 60s, a group that included Tiger Woods. Trying to end a four-year drought in the majors, Woods raced out to four birdies in seven holes to take the early lead, only to settle into a series of pars and one adventure through

MANCHESTER, England • Carmelo Anthony and Deron Williams responded to a lineup change with 19 points apiece, and the U.S. men's Olympic basketball team beat Britain 118-78 on Thursday in an exhibition game.

LeBron James added 16 points and Russell Westbrook had 15 for the Americans, who built a 40-point lead early in the fourth quarter against their inexperienced and over-matched opponent, and every basket from there seemed to be a dunk.

U.S. coach Mike Krzyzewski changed up his starting lineup, inserting Kevin Durant for Anthony, and Williams for Chris Paul, and both Anthony and Williams flourished in their new roles.

Williams, who couldn't scrimmage with the Americans when they opened camp because he hadn't signed his $98 million extension with the Nets yet, made 7-of-8 shots, going 5 of 6 from 3-point range and adding five assists.

OLYMPICS

Nadal Won't Seek Gold Repeat at Olympics

ASSOCIATED PRESS

MADRID • Defending champion Rafael Nadal pulled out of the London Olympics on Thursday with an undisclosed injury, leaving the tennis competition without one of its leading stars and robbing Spain's team of its flag bearer for the opening ceremony.

Nadal won the French Open for a record seventh time this year but has struggled with left knee problems at times during the season. Shortly after winning his 11th Grand Slam title at Roland Garros, he lost to 100th-ranked Lukas Rosol in the second round at Wimbledon.

Nadal has not played since.

The third-ranked Nadal said Thursday he wasn't in condition to compete at the Olympic tennis tournament — which also will be held at Wimbledon.

"This is one of the saddest moments of my career," Nadal said in a statement. "I have to think about my companions, I can't be selfish and I have to think of what's best for Spanish sport, especially tennis and Spanish players, and give fellow sportsmen with better preparation the chance to compete.

"I tried to hurry my preparations and training to the very last minute, but it was not to be."

The 26-year-old Spaniard has won two Wimbledon titles and claimed gold at the 2008 Beijing Olympics.

"You can imagine how difficult it was to take this decision," he said.

Nadal had been the last of the four singles finalists from 2008 in the London Olympics. Men's silver medal winner Fernando Gonzalez of Chile, who Nadal beat in straight sets in Beijing, and women's finalists Elena Dementieva and Dinara Safina of Russia, will also be missing from the London Games.

Nadal did not mention a specific injury in his statement but he canceled a charity match in Madrid on July 4 because of tendon problems in his left knee. He has had recurring knee problems in the past.

"I am not in condition to compete in the London Olympics and therefore will not travel as planned with the Spanish delegation to take part in the games," Nadal said. "(This) is one of the saddest days of my career as one of my biggest ambitions, that of being Spain's flag bearer in the opening ceremony of the games in London, cannot be."

It wasn't immediately known who would replace Nadal on Spain's tennis team or who would carry the flag at the opening ceremony in his place.

TOUR DE FRANCE

ASSOCIATED PRESS

BAGNERES-DE-LUCHON, France • Britain's Bradley Wiggins overcame the mountains and challengers to retain the yellow jersey, while Spain's Alejandro Valverde won the 17th stage of the Tour de France on Thursday.

After the last hard ascent, Bradley maintained his overall lead and said he sensed "that it was pretty much over" with just three racing days left. He's trying to become the first Briton to win cycling's biggest race.

Wiggins faces one last test — the individual time trial, his specialty — on Saturday.

Flat stages await Wiggins on Friday and Sunday, which features the ride to the finish on the Champs-Elysees in Paris. Those stages aren't expected to alter the standings.

He appears on pace to make some history: Wiggins would become the first Olympic track champion to become a Tour winner. He took the yellow jersey in Stage 7, and hasn't let go of it since. No rider has done that since France's Bernard Hinault held a lead from the same stage in 1981 all the way to the finish.

An 89-mile ride from the southwestern town of Bagneres-de-Luchon to the ski station of Peyragudes on Thursday featured three hefty ascents in the Pyrenees and an uphill finish.

Valverde, the Movistar leader who returned from a two-year doping ban this year, won his third Tour stage in a breakaway. Christopher Froome of Britain was second, and Wiggins was third, both 19 seconds back.

Stage winner Alejandro Valverde of Spain climbs towards Peyragudes during the 17th stage of the Tour de France, which started in Bagneres-de-Luchon.

Overall, Wiggins leads Sky teammate Froome in second by 2 minutes, 5 seconds, and Italy's Vincenzo Nibali trails in third, 2:41 back, after losing 18 seconds to them in the final ascent.

A 2-minute lead after nearly 80 hours of racing and 2 1/2 weeks might not seem like much of a margin. But in stage races like the Tour, the strategy of success for a leader is keying on his closest rivals.

Wiggins wasn't much worried about any other riders. After Nibali and Froome, his next closest challenger was Jurgen Van Den Broeck, who was 5:46 back, a deficit almost impossible to erase without a collapse by Wiggins.

Defending champion Cadel Evans of Australia, after dropping out of contention in the first Pyrenean day on Wednesday, lost more time and trailed by 9:57. Still, he rose to sixth overall, after Spain's Haimar Zubeldia lost nearly a minute to the Australian.

American Tejay Van Garderen — a BMC teammate of Evans — rose a notch to fifth, and was 8:30 back.

Valverde, with tears in his eyes in the winner's circle, had a rough start to the Tour with at least three crashes. He also sensed Wiggins and Froome closing on him at the end of the stage.

"I went all out," said

Britain's home game was similar to the Americans' opener against China in the Beijing Olympics, where plays for both teams were loudly cheered. The boos were brief, when a light "USA!" chant broke out in the fourth quarter.

Basketball has little place in British sports, but with the national team returning to the Olympics this year as the games' host, the sport got some attention with a visit from the powerful U.S. squad.

In an unusual pregame scene, the crowd didn't seem interested in the home team's strange set of pregame warm-up exercises, choosing instead to watch the Americans' practice dunks, oohing and aahing along the way.

The rules of the game were then written shown on the overhead video scoreboard and explained by the public address announcer before play began.

The British, also including the Portland Trail Blazers' Joel Freeland and coached by Houston Rockets assistant Chris Finch, hung with the Americans for 10-plus minutes before the visitors' athleticism ran them off the floor.

grass up to his knees for a lone bogey that gave him a 67. In his third Open at Lytham, Woods said it was as easy as he had ever seen it play.

"The wind wasn't blowing, and we're backing golf balls up," Woods said. "That's something we just don't see."

Lawrie won his British Open in nasty conditions at Carnoustie in 1999, and the Scot showed he could handle the calm weather with equal aplomb. He ran off three birdies over the last five holes. Johnson, who won the 2006 Masters in the wind and cold at Augusta National, flirted with a major record-tying 63 until a bogey on the 17th hole. Colsaerts, the big hitter from Belgium, holed out with an 8-iron on the 481-yard second hole for eagle and added four birdies for his 65.

Brandt Snedeker was another shot behind at 66.

"We had a little wind early on the front nine, but it kind of calmed down the second half," Snedeker said "That's the best Americans are going to see over here."

Rory McIlroy was panned last summer at Royal St. George's for saying he prefers calm conditions, so maybe this was more to his liking. He wound up in the group at 67 after a wild day filled with great shots, bad luck and a bump on the head for a 16-year-old spectator standing in the wrong spot.

McIlroy was at 3 under with four holes remaining when his drive on the 15th hole sailed to the right of the fairway. It plunked the teenager in the head and caromed farther to the right. The teen was OK. The ball settled a few inches beyond the out-of-bounds stakes near a corporate tent, sending McIlroy back to the tee to play his third shot. McIlroy gave the lad a glove on which he wrote "Sorry" with a frown face and "Rory."

"He could have headed it the other way," McIlroy joked later. "It would have been on the fairway."

He bounced back from that double bogey by driving the 336-yard 16th hole and two-putting for birdie, then making birdie on the final hole to join guys like Ernie Els, Masters champion Bubba Watson, Graeme McDow-

GARDEN CITY, N.Y. • Hall of Fame trainer Frank "Pancho" Martin, who oversaw 1973 Kentucky Derby and Preakness runner-up Sham, has died. He was 86.

lost to Secretariat in the Kentucky Derby and Preakness. They hooked up again in the Belmont Stakes, and Sham duelled with Secretariat around the first turn and into the backstretch before fading. Secretariat won by a record 31 lengths to become horse racing's ninth Triple Crown winner. Sham finished last, beaten 45 1/4 lengths, and never raced again.

"Frank was sharp," said retired jockey Angel Cordero Jr., who rode for Martin. "He was one of the best we ever had."

Big-talking Ryan Cut Down in Size

when Ryan happened to weigh himself. He would get short of breath going up stairs but never expected to see the number that left him "mortified": 348.

The 58-year-old Ryan thought a fellow coach was playing a trick on him, putting pressure on the scale while he stood on it. "There was nobody there. It was just me," Ryan said. "I was shocked. I thought I was about 300 to maybe 310."

He had tried all sorts of diets in the past, losing lots of weight only to gain it all back — and more. Ryan decided to have Lap-Band surgery after hearing the success stories of former players Jamie Dukes and Tony Siragusa.

The device can be adjusted, so Ryan had it loosened a bit when he and his wife recently went to Paris for their 25th anniversary so he could fully sample the French cuisine.

His goal is to drop another 20 pounds or so. Ryan has gone from a 48 to a 38-inch waist, so he's had to replace all his clothes except for his socks. His blood pressure and cholesterol have plummeted.

Without being asked, Ryan volunteers that he's getting paid to serve as a spokesman for Lap-Band. "My message is: Do I believe in it? There's no question, 100 percent," he said.

Saban: 'Bama Vets Know Repeat Traps

HOOVER, Ala. • Alabama's Barrett Jones knew the question was coming: How can the defending champion Crimson Tide avoid the missteps that caused the 2010 team to stumble?

Winning two national championships in three years gives Alabama veterans like Jones some perspective on how to handle attempts to repeat.

"Obviously, complacency is a big word for us this year and we want to avoid it at all costs," said Jones, last year's Outland Trophy winner, as Southeastern Conference media days Thursday. "In 2010 — which I'm sure one of you (reporters) is going to ask about eventually — coach Saban really preached to us to avoid complacency and warned us about what was going to happen the year after a national championship, but I really don't think the leaders bought into that."

"And I think the difference this year is that we realize it's more than just a coach saying something. It's realizing the 2012 Alabama team has zero wins and zero losses. We have a lot to prove and a target on our back."

Then again, the SEC Western Division is a target-rich environment. After all, Alabama head football coach Nick Saban signs autographs for fans at the Southeastern Conference media days on Thursday in Hoover, Ala.

Alabama is among the pre-season favorites to win the national title, but media covering the SEC picked West rival opponent LSU — not the Tide — to win the league the West in balloting released Thursday.

Those two teams split last season, with LSU winning in the regular season and taking the SEC title, and Alabama capturing the national title game in New Orleans.

Alabama did lose 13 starters, including a handful of All-Americans like tailback Trent Richardson and safety Mark Barron.

The strength might lie on the offensive line. Jones, who has moved from left tackle to center, and fellow offensive linemen Chance Warmack and D.J. Fluker all are first-team preseason All-SEC picks.

Saban said the challenge of repeating in college football is that teams must often replace a quarter of the players each year, with graduation and early exits.

Richardson and fellow underclassmen cornerback Dre Kirkpatrick and linebacker Dont'a Hightower all left with eligibility remaining and were NFL first-round draft pick

"This team that we have this year seems to be less affected by the past and really more focused on trying to create their own identity,

Saban Proposes PSU 'Penalty'

Nick Saban says one option to address the Penn State tragedy might be a ticket tax on athletic events and giving the proceeds to child abuse funds.

The Alabama coach didn't go into details of how a tax would be implemented, but said Thursday at the Southeastern Conference media days such a move to benefit victims would have a positive affect rather than punishing those who didn't have anything to do with the Jerry Sandusky case.

Saban says the Sandusky child sex abuse case and Penn State fallout "is a very, very criminal case that probably reflects poorly on a lot of folks." He says his feelings are too raw to express publicly, Saban says the focus should be on "what do we need to do to make it better."

— Associated Press

which I think is a good thing," Saban said. Saban and the three players who appeared at media days — tight end Michael Williams, Jones and defensive end Damion Square — all sprinkled in the C-word, "complacency," on Thursday.

The default for which this sale is to be made is failure to:

Pay, when due and before delinquency, the entire balance of principal and interest payments as set forth on said Deed of Trust and Promissory Note. The original loan amount was $25,000.00 together with interest thereon at the rate of 13% per annum, as evidenced in Promissory Note dated December 5, 2007. The loan matured on November 11, 2008 and is now in default. The principal balance as of May 24, 2012 is $25,000.00 together with accrued and accruing interest thereon. The Beneficiary may choose to raise the interest rate to the default rate of 18% per annum as provided for in the Promissory Note. In addition to the above, there is also due delinquent real property taxes for 2009, 2010 and part of 2011, together with penalty and interest, and any other real property taxes that may become delinquent during this foreclosure, any late charges, advances, escrow collection fees, attorney fees, fees or costs associated with this foreclosure.

The balance owing as of this date on the obligation secured by said deed of trust is $25,000.00, excluding interest, costs and expenses actually incurred in enforcing the obligations thereunder or in this sale, as trustee's fees and/or reasonable attorney's fees as authorized in the promissory note secured by the aforementioned Deed of Trust.

TIMES-NEWS Media Sales

The Times News is seeking an experienced, dynamic media sales professional to join our sales team.

Selling in today's media business is complicated. We are looking for competent sales professionals who can simplify the sales process, rapidly uncover customer needs and deliver solutions that meet and exceed the advertiser's business objectives.

Our team gets results! We develop and implement company-wide programs to drive ad revenue. We incorporate Lee Enterprises Strategies (that's our parent company) into local market conditions to create long-term win-win advertising packages.

The perfect candidate will thrive on closing new business, excel at seizing multiple sales opportunities across a diverse customer base, develop strategies and solutions, and effectively function in an entrepreneurial sales environment. Can you show us a strong selling track record in a competitive industry? Do you have excellent one-on-one closing skills? Are you a strategic thinker? Have you shown an innovative approach to growing new revenue? If so, apply now!

We offer a great base plus bonus compensation package and full benefits. Other key competencies required for this positions include:

- Bachelors degree or commensurate experience.
- At least 2-5 years of sales and/or sale management experience. Internet savvy; comprehensive understanding of prominent online advertising products helpful.
- Proven ability to consistently meet or exceed sales goals
- Ability to uncover needs, offer suitable solutions and close business.

DEAR ABBY: Seven years ago, while on a business trip to Europe, I went to a bar, got drunk and went back to my hotel with one of the “hostesses.” It was a one-night stand, but my wife found out. I quit drinking with the help of AA and have never had another affair. However, I am a sociable, friendly person, and I like to share laughs and light-hearted conversation with members of both sexes.

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

Although my wife claims to have forgiven me, she constantly brings up my “fling” and makes it clear that she doesn’t trust me to this day, despite my repeated apologies, my desire to make amends and my determination never to do it again. She has made my life a living hell. She has an extremely caustic tongue that she uses at every opportunity to embarrass and humiliate me.

I no longer love her, but her health isn’t the best and she hasn’t worked for several years. What can I do, Abby? I feel so alone and stuck.

—DESPERATE IN THE U.S.A.

DEAR DESPERATE: Because you are both miserable, do what other couples with troubled marriages do — get marriage counseling to see if you and your wife can reach an understanding you both can live with. If that doesn’t work, however, and she continues to berate and humiliate you, consult a lawyer and go on with your life.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I are going to Italy next year and taking our two sons, ages 8 and 12, with us. We have planned and saved for this trip for five years.

When my sister-in-law heard about it, she invited herself along, with her husband and two children who are my sons’ ages. Although I love all of them, I don’t want to spend my vacation of a lifetime with her. She often pawns her children off on others while she goes and does her own thing. She’s a pro at it and has done it to me many times.

How do I approach this without anyone’s feelings being hurt? There’s no way I can go on this trip with her. I’d rather not go. Help!

—BOUND FOR ITALY

DEAR BOUND: You may be “bound,” but were you also gagged when your sister-in-law invited herself and her family along? That’s when you should have had the gumption to say no.

The longer you put off telling her, the harder it will be, so tell her NOW. If you don’t have the courage to do it alone, you and your husband should do it together. You have every right to go on your dream trip the way you and your husband planned it. His sister can schedule her family’s visit to Italy at another time.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have clearly stated more than once that we didn’t plan to have children. Recently, however, we realized that we had simply not been ready.

We have decided to try for a baby in the near future. If we are lucky enough to conceive, how will we respond to the inevitable barrage of questions about whether or not the baby was planned?

—TAKING IT BACK IN NEW YORK

DEAR TAKING IT BACK: Just say you changed your mind and the baby not only isn’t an accident but is a welcome blessing.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE

Bobby Wolff

*“The secret which the mountains kept
The river never told.”*

— John Greenleaf Whittier

Today’s deal saw North produce an old-fashioned strong jump shift on a spade suit that would normally be regarded as subminimum, but he wanted to support diamonds next and get across the strength of his hand. The results were entirely satisfactory as regards the auction, since eventually South took control, finding out about the missing aces and trump queen. He could now bid seven diamonds with some confidence.

Alas for him, his play did not measure up. When the bad trump break came to light, he played to ruff a heart in dummy, but East could overruff. As Whittier said, “Of all sad words ... the saddest are these, ‘It might have been.’” What declarer should have done on a club lead was to cash dummy’s two high trumps, then take the second top club and the heart ace, come to hand with the spade king, cash the club queen to pitch dummy’s small heart, and ruff a heart in dummy. Now he can draw the last two trumps, and his hand is high.

This line of play will go down only if the clubs break 6-2, while the unsuccessful line goes down when hearts are 5-2, a far more likely eventuality. (For those of you interested in the percentages, a 5-2 break comes up almost one time in three; a 6-2 break, one time in six.)

ANSWER: This hand has the values for a jump to two no-trump, which is natural and encouraging, but not forcing. If you decide you want to play game facing anything but a rank minimum overcall, you can cuebid, then bid two no-trump, which is all but forcing. I’d make that call with the club 10 instead of the two.

Today is Friday, July 20, the 202nd day of 2012. There are 164 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight:

On July 20, 1969, astronauts Neil Armstrong and Edwin "Buzz" Aldrin became the first men to walk on the moon after reaching the surface in their Apollo 11 lunar module.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:

In 1861, the Congress of the Confederate States convened in Richmond, Va.

In 1871, British Columbia entered Confederation as a Canadian province.

In 1917, the draft lottery in World War I went into operation.

In 1942, the first detachment of the Women's Army Auxiliary Corps — later known as WACs — began basic training at Fort Des Moines, Iowa. The Legion of Merit was established by an Act of Congress.

In 1944, an attempt by a group of German officials to assassinate Adolf Hitler with a bomb failed as the explosion at Hitler's Rastenburg headquarters only wounded the Nazi leader. President Franklin D. Roosevelt was nominated for an unprecedented fourth term of office at the Democratic convention in Chicago.

In 1951, Jordan's King Abdullah I was assassinated in Jerusalem by a Palestinian gunman who was shot dead on the spot by security.

In 1954, the Geneva Accords divided Vietnam into northern and southern entities.

In 1960, a pair of Polaris missiles were fired from the submerged USS George Washington off Cape Canaveral, Fla., at a target more than 1,100 miles away.

In 1976, America's Viking 1 robot spacecraft made a successful, first-ever landing on Mars.

In 1982, Irish Republican Army bombs exploded in two London parks, killing eight British soldiers, along with seven horses belonging to the Queen's Household Cavalry.

In 1988, Massachusetts Gov. Michael S. Dukakis received the Democratic presidential nomination at the party's convention in Atlanta.

In 1990, Supreme Court Justice William J. Brennan, one of the court's most liberal voices, announced he was stepping down.

Ten years ago: Twenty-nine people died in a blaze started by bartenders who were doing tricks with fire at Utopia, an unlicensed night club in Lima, Peru.

Five years ago: President George W. Bush signed an executive order prohibiting cruel and inhuman treatment, including humiliation or denigration of religious beliefs, in the detention and interrogation of terrorism suspects. Tammy Faye Messner, who as Tammy Faye Bakker helped her husband, Jim, build a multimillion-dollar evangelism empire, then watched it collapse in disgrace, died at age 65 near Kansas City, Mo.

One year ago: Six Republican presidential hopefuls traded tweets in the first presidential debate conducted through Twitter, outlining their agendas across the popular social media service. The last fugitive sought by the U.N.'s Balkan war crimes tribunal, Gordan Hadzic, former leader of Croatia's ethnic Serbs, was seized in a remote mountain forest in northern Serbia. NBA star Yao Ming announced his retirement in his hometown of Shanghai. German-born British painter Lucien Freud, 88, died in London.

IF JULY 20 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Many areas of your life can improve during the next several weeks, because your business and financial judgment is better than usual. You are motivated by a vision of success in love or money, and will work hard to realize your dream, so are more likely to succeed. Don't take good luck for granted in mid-September. During that month, making a career change or initiating a business venture could be unwise, but joining clubs or organizations can be fruitful. In October and November, your energy levels perk up again, and ambitions can be realized.

HOROSCOPE

Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Business buzz is bountiful. Focus your energies on improving business connections and widening your sphere of influence. Find extra benefits and opportunities at the workplace or through coworkers.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Control destiny, without letting it control you. It's not what happens to you that will determine how far you can go, but how you handle what happens to you. Wiggle your way into someone's affections.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Your productivity is in direct proportion to the pride you take in your position. Opportunity, like lightning, seldom strikes twice. Don't hesitate to take advantage of what is right in front of you.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Procrastination merely puts off a bright future. Get all the last-minute details off your desk so you can enjoy the weekend. If you are partnered with the right person, you can make a positive difference.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Focus on the future, rather than pondering over the past. The more obligations you honor or commitments you fulfill now, the more free time you'll have to move on to bigger and better things.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Comparison shopping works both ways. People will judge you by the way you treat your loved ones, value your friendships and the care you take with your possessions – not by the things you own.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Persevere. Unforeseen obstacles are unfortunate, but not your undoing. Dreams will be fulfilled if you follow a policy of always giving without remembering, and always receiving without forgetting.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You can find some worthwhile task or objective that gives you a sense of accomplishment. You can turn a frown upside down by extending a friendly hand or by sharing your whimsical ideas.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Independence is invigorating. One sun sign description says that Sagittarians "dislike a master and will not be driven." Use, don't abuse, your knack for making wise business decisions.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Recover from a rebuff. Someone else will be more than happy to spend time with you. Be grateful when someone points out your mistakes, because this gives you a chance fix errors.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Rise above anything beneath you. Retain your dignity, without making others feel diminished. Use a hands-on approach so that you are intimately connected with any project you begin.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Father knows best. Pay close attention to the advice, opinions and ideas that arise from within your family circle. Your sense of nuclear family is strong; you might find others far away who feel like kin.
