The Twin Falls City Council heard passionate arguments on both sides in a public hearing Monday evening regarding the appeal of the Planning and Zoning Commission's June 12 decision to approve a special use permit for the drug, alcohol and gang rehabilitation program to operate a homeless shelter at 570 Shoup Ave. W.

Lopez said he wanted to expand the services he already offers at his small facility on Second Street.

"We see such a great need in this community, and we have the opportunity to use this building," Lopez said at the meeting.

Potato Disease Crops Up in Area Fields

BY JULIE WOOTTON jwootton@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • Researchers confirmed the first known cases of zebra chip in the Pacific Northwest this season in local potato plants.

Nora Olsen, extension potato specialist at the University of Idaho's Kimberly Research and Extension Center, said at least eight plants from two different locations tested positive for the bacterium that causes the crop disease.

"This does not pose a human health risk."

The wildfire spread violently just northwest of Hazelton and south of Dietrich throughout the night. It only stopped growing after fire crews began lighting a back burn late Sunday night. By mid-morning Monday, crews reported the flames were gone.

However, the fire did attempt to encroach on farmers' property, causing minor damage to fences and fields.

"The fire burned about 10 acres of our wheat," said Rick Astle of Dietrich. "It kind of burned all around me. I got kind of lucky, though. If this had happened a couple weeks later, it probably would have burned more Please see OWINZA FIRE, A2

Filer Man Sentenced for Fairgrounds Arson

BY ALISON GENE SMITH alismith@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • A Filer man who pleaded guilty in May to setting trailers on fire at the Twin Falls County Fair Grounds was sentenced to probation Monday.

Roman Scott Barbier, 19, was sentenced to serve up to four years of probation until he meets his monetary obligations to the county and the victims in the case.

Barbier

Twin Falls County 5th District Judge Richard Bevan also ordered Barbier to attend mental health court and write an apology to the victims whose property was destroyed in the fire.

The amount of restitution for the victims has not yet been decided.

Should Barbier violate his probation, he faces a three to 10 year prison sentence.

Frank Muir, president and CEO of the Idaho Potato Commission, said there's no evidence of zebra chip being a widespread issue in the state.

"This does not pose a human health risk," he said.

One of the potato plants that tested positive for the bacterium was found last week in a field at UI's Kimberly center.

Samples taken last week were sent to the university's campus in Moscow for testing, according to a pest alert from UI. Researchers removed the plant from the field and destroyed it.

In the southwestern U.S., zebra chip has led to millions of dollars in lost crops. Olsen said it's hard to predict the possible economic impact in south-central Idaho yet.

Zebra chip is caused by a bacterium spread by potato psyllids, a type of insect. UI scientists said earlier this month that Liberibacter, the bacterium that causes zebra chip, had been found on psyllids in Twin Falls County farm fields.

Symptoms of the crop disease include pink coloration and curling of the crop's leaves. It also causes flecking in potatoes' flesh. When affected potatoes are fried, there is severe darkening of the chip or fry.

"One of the key indicators would be the aerial tubers," Olsen said.

Muir said the Idaho Potato Commission will work on continuing to educate growers on how to identify symptoms and encourage them to report potential problems immediately.

"We're trying to be very vigilant," he said.

The outbreak so far is outside of Idaho's potato heartland. Jan Roeser, regional economist for the Idaho Department of Labor, said Bingham and Fremont counties have large numbers of potato producers.

In south-central Idaho, Cassia and Minidoka counties had the largest number of farms in 2007 that produced potato crops, according to the latest information available from the Census of Agriculture.

In Cassia County, for instance, there were 56 farms in 2007 with potato crops with a total of 29,164 acres harvested

The afternoon crash delayed traffic on Addison Avenue East in Twin Falls.

Officers were looking for a dark blue Toyota Corolla with Utah plates headed westbound into Twin Falls County around 3 p.m., said Lt. Craig Stotts with the Twin Falls Police Department.

On Monday afternoon, a new fire had crews rushing to the junction of U.S. Highway 93 and Interstate 84.

According to Jerome County Sheriff's Deputy Nick Thiemann, the Cloverleaf Fire was started by a burnt blanket left along a road. The circumstances of how the blanket ended up there were unclear Monday.

"We're still looking into it," he said. As of Monday, three BLM engines and the Jerome Rural Fire Department responded to the fire. Air support was also called in to help tame the 33-acre fire.

What Also Burned?

Sunday's lightning spree sparked six wildfires to around the Magic Valley. Most were contained and controlled by Sunday evening. They included:

Rattle Snake Butte • This fire grew to more than 660 acres just 15 miles east of Minidoka. As of Monday, eight engines, two water tenders, one dozer and air support responded to the fire. Crews expected the fire to be controlled by Monday evening

3 Mile Springs • Located north of Jackpot near milepost 9 on U.S. Highway 93, flames only consumed seven acres. After sending two engines to the fire, it was contained and controlled by 8 p.m. on Sunday.

2300 East • Around 4 p.m. on Sunday, one BLM engine and the Salmon Tract Rural Fire Protection District responded to a fire near Hollister. By 6:30 p.m., crews had contained and controlled the fire.

Council to Reject and Rebid in Water Extension Project

BY ALISON GENE SMITH

alismith@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • In what city engineer Lee Glaesemann called an "awkward situation" the Twin Falls City Council withdrew a construction company's award for the 2012 Kimberly/Highland Water Extension Project at Monday's meeting. Glaesemann explained that after the council awarded the project to Sawtooth Construction of Ketchum on July 9, it was discovered the company didn't list the proper licenses for electrical work in the bid. According to Idaho statute, the bid must include all licenses, he said. At first, city staff was prepared to recommend the council award the project to the second lowest bidder, Knife River Corporation of Boise, whose bid was $500,000 more than Sawtooth, said City Manager Travis Rothweiler. After discussion, the staff decided to reject all of the current bids and ask for new ones. The biggest questions the staff looked at was whether there would be schedule or budget problems with rebidding, said city engineer Jackie Fields. "If you don't, that radically influences the outcome of choice," she said. Rejecting the bids could put the project back six to eight weeks while still meeting deadlines. But it could potentially save money, Glaesemann said.

Rothweiler said the recommendation to ask for new bids was not a reflection of the companies involved, and all the companies can bid on the project again.

The motion to reject all current bids for the project and ask for new bids was unanimously passed by the council.

According to the call notes, a Twin Falls County deputy later located the suspect or the suspect's vehicle, Lewin said.

By 3:50 p.m., the deputy had arrested an adult male, he said.

Officers also helped direct traffic at the scene of the collision, Stotts said.

Details of the collision, including any injuries, were not immediately available Monday.

In a Monday press release, the organization suggests extreme heat and severe storms have hampered efforts to collect blood donations.

Donations are now at the lowest the nonprofit has seen in 15 years, according to the release. But just two additional donors at each of the blood drives planned through the end of this month would get the Red Cross on track to meet patient needs, the release states.

Locally, the Red Cross must collect more than 1,200 pints of blood each week to meet the needs of patients at more than 40 hospitals and transfusion centers in Idaho and eastern Oregon.

Parents Against Doctors in Court Hearing

TIMES-NEWS

BOISE (AP) • The 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals is in Boise to hear arguments in a lawsuit that pits parents against doctors and police for the right to determine a child's medical care.

Arguments in the case brought by Corissa and Eric Mueller against the city of Boise and St. Luke's Regional Medical Center are set for Tuesday in federal court.

The case began in 2002, when Corissa Mueller took her 5week-old daughter to the emergency room because the child was running a slight fever. She believed little Taige had a cold the rest of the family had just gotten over a virus but doctors feared the baby might have spinal meningitis, a potentially deadly infection of the spine and brain.

The lawsuit says doctors insisted on giving the baby an invasive and painful spinal tap and immediately starting antibiotics, but Mueller refused. Soon police were called, the baby was whisked away, and Mueller was kept in a room alone, away from her baby and a phone, for more than an hour.

Spinal taps have risks, including the possibility of paralysis, infection and headaches. Spinal meningitis has risks as well, and if left untreated in an infant it can quickly lead to brain damage or death.

Taige made it through the spinal tap fine, and the test results showed she would have been just as fine without it: She really did have just a cold.

Still, the repercussions of that contentious night linger, leaving all involved with a chronic legal headache.

NORTHWEST STATES LAUNCH CAMPAIGN FOR FERAL PIGS

'Squeal on Pigs' asks people to report sightings in an effort to curb the spread of the animals

BOISE (AP) • Wildlife officials in three Northwest states are intensifying their battle against wild swine by launching a campaign urging hunters, anglers, hikers and others to report any feral pig sighting on a public hotline.

The states of Idaho, Washington and Oregon on Monday unveiled "Squeal on Pigs," an effort designed to eradicate and curb the spread of feral pig populations and get a better sense of the population numbers.

The presence of the invasive and trouble-causing species across the three states varies.

Wildlife officials in Oregon estimate as many as 5,000 wild pigs are roaming the state, the majority of them migrating from northern California. There are no confirmed populations established in Washington, while wildlife officials in Idaho are keeping tabs on a small collection residing in the Bruneau Valley area in southwestern Idaho.

"Early detection and rapid response are key," said Amy Ferriter, invasive species coordinator in Idaho. "We recognize that eradicating small populations and minimizing the impacts of these invasive species is important to the economy and natural resources of the region."

Biologists describe feral pigs as any swine not confined in fences. Their spread is blamed by federal officials for an estimated $1.5 billion worth of damage to crops, livestock, wildlife and the ecosystem, and by some projections, more than 5 million wild pigs are root ing around in nearly every state. Feral pigs are also carriers of disease that pose a threat to livestock and humans, including swine brucellosis and pseudorabies.

The hairy, tusked pigs are native to Europe but have spread across the globe with the help of humans, in many cases hunters looking for a new challenge.

The pigs typically forage in areas around rivers or streams, and their destructive rooting behavior can increase erosion, degrade water quality and help spread noxious weeds.

So far, northwestern states are hoping a public awareness campaign will help curb the spread of wild swine in the region. The states are collaborating on a hotline or Swine Line - for people to report sightings and provide other information critical to managing and eradia tougher approach. Michigan and Wisconsin have adopted a zero-tolerance policies that make rogue pigs an invasive species and illegal to possess. In Kentucky, anyone caught releasing wild hogs can face up to a year on jail and fines under a law that went into effect earlier this month.

In Southern California, the U.S. Forest Service is taking public comment on a plan to kill hundreds of feral pigs living and multiplying outside of San Diego. In Texas, the government has sanctioned hunting wild hogs from helicopters to reduce numbers in some parts of the state.

"We're really just trying to enlist the public, along with hunters, fisherman, hikers, anyone who sees something resembling a wild pig, we want to know about it," said Wendy Brown, invasive species coordinator in Washington.

Bison Could Roam Outside Yellowstone All Year Long

BILLINGS, Mont. (AP) . Bison could roam yearround in large areas adjacent to Yellowstone National Park under a proposal released Monday by Montana officials who want to further ease restrictions on the iconic, burly animals.

For decades migrating bison have been slaughtered or hazed back into the park to prevent them from passing the disease brucellosis to cattle.

The plan announced Monday would allow the animals to remain year-round in the Hebgen Basin and surrounding areas of the Gallatin National Forest. To the north, some bison would be allowed year-round in the Gardiner Basin.

Current rules allow some bison to migrate to grazing areas in Montana each winter. But they must return to the park each spring – a perennial source of friction between conservationists who want more room for bison and ranchers who say they are a disease threat.

The proposed changes are certain to stoke the argument. Some in the livestock industry already are lining up in opposition.

"They try to talk it down and say we've downgraded the disease," said John Youngberg with the Montana Farm Bureau Federation. "There's still brucellosis in those bison up there. It hasn't gone away."

The proposal for the Gardiner Basin covers an estimat ed 70,000 acres and would be restricted to bull bison only except during winter.

No acreage figure was available for the Hebgen Basin, where the proposal would apply to both male and female bison.

Yellowstone has one of the largest and most geneticallypure bison populations in the world.

Grizzly Bear Delisting Set for 2014

CHEYENNE, Wyo. (AP) • Interior Secretary Ken Salazar has informed Wyoming Gov. Matt Mead that he shares the governor's desire to end federal protections for Yellowstone grizzly bears.

Salazar wrote to Mead late last week, saying he expects the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service and other agencies will finish their analysis of the effect of the decline of the whitebark pine tree on bear populations by 2014.

Scientists with the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service and other agencies have been addressing the whitebark pine issue, Salazar wrote. "All participants agreed the Yellowstone grizzly population was recovered and that declines in whitebark pine do not threaten the future of the grizzly population," he stated.

The bears in the Greater Yellowstone area, which includes the nation's oldest national park and surrounding lands in Wyoming, Idaho and Montana, originally were delist ed in 2007. However, a legal challenge from environmental groups resulted in the bears being relisted in 2009.

Biologists estimate the Greater Yellowstone area has at least 600 grizzly bears. A federal appeals court last year ruled that more work was necessary to document how the decline of whitebark pine might affect the grizzly population before they could be delisted again.

The whitebark, an important food source for grizzlies, has declined by 90 percent in some areas of the northern Rockies.

Idaho Insanity Case Heads to Supreme Court

BY ROBERT BARNES The Washington Post

WASHINGTON • There's no doubt John Joseph Delling knew what he was doing. His carefully planned 2007 crime spree lasted weeks, covered 6,500 miles and culminated in two people dead and one seriously wounded.

He had his reasons, too. Delling, then 21, had become "a type of Jesus," he later explained, and the men he attacked, two of them former classmates he had not seen in years, were stealing his "energy." An MRI of his brain would have revealed the damage the men had already caused, he told authorities.

"I had to defend myself," he said.

As the nation confronts another act of unfathomable madness, Delling's story is one chapter in a distressing and violent genre: the loner who tries to impress a movie star by shooting the president; the mother who drowns her children to save them from damnation; the black-clad shooter who seems to step from the movie screen to kill.

But Delling's case presents an intriguing legal question as well. He committed his crimes in Idaho, which is one of only four states - Kansas, Montana and Utah are the others - in which a defendant may not use insanity as a defense to criminal charges.

Delling's lawyers are now at the Supreme Court, asking the justices to rule that the Constitution mandates that such a defense be available.

"For centuries, the moral integrity of the criminal law has depended, in part, on the insanity defense," Stanford law professor Jeffrey L. Fisher wrote in a petition on Delling's behalf.

Punishment is traditionally justified on the basis of an individual consciously choosing evil over good, Fisher wrote. "Laws such as Idaho's abandon that basic tenet," he said.

Fisher contends that Idaho's law violates the Constitution's guarantee of due process of law, as well as the Eighth Amendment's prohibition of cruel and unusual punishment.

All states and the federal government once allowed the insanity defense. But that changed with the public outrage over John W. Hinckley Jr.'s acquittal for reasons of insanity in his assassination attempt on President Ronald Reagan in 1981.

Many states and the federal government reacted by shifting the burden of proving insanity to the defense.

Drought Helps Fracking Foes

BLOOMBERG NEWS

WASHINGTON • The worst U.S. drought in a half century is putting pressure on natural-gas drillers to conserve the millions of gallons of water used in hydraulic fracturing to free trapped gas and oil from underground rock.

From Texas to Colorado to Pennsylvania, farmers, activists and opponents of the technique, also known as fracking, are using the shortage of rain to push the industry to recycle water and reduce usage efforts that could prove costly to the industry.

One company, Devon Energy Corp., estimates that recycling is as much as 75 percent costlier than pumping wastewater into deep wells. That disposal method, common in the industry, has also drawn complaints because it is linked to earthquakes.

"We just would like the oil and gas companies to figure out better ways, maybe a better use of this water," Bill Midcap, renewable-energy development director at the Rocky Mountain Farmers Union covering Wyoming, Colorado and New Mexico, said in an interview. "It's a concern about the future, it is the concern about the price of water, as we look forward, and also taking water away from agriculture."

Environmentalists in Texas are lobbying the Legislature to pass water-conservation requirements during next year's session. In Pennsylvania, the Susquehanna River Basin Commission on July 16 suspended water intake for companies including Talisman Energy Inc., Chesapeake Energy Corp. and Exxon Mobil Corp.

Fracking boosted the nation's output of natural gas, pushing prices down more than 70 percent in the past four years and toppling coal as the chief fuel to generate power. Gas helped cut electricity bills, reduce emissions of greenhouse gases when producing power and lift employment in states with large reserves, such as Colorado, Pennsylvania and Texas.

The nation's biggest reserve of trapped gas is in the Marcellus Shale, which stretches from New York to Tennessee.

"The vast majority of water used to aid in responsible natural-gas development across Pennsylvania is treated and recycled for future use," Kathryn Klaber, the president of the Marcellus Shale Coalition, a trade group representing gas producers, said in an email. "Wide-scale deployment of waterrecycling technology, which was pioneered by Marcellus operators, has further reduced the need to source fresh water for well-completion activities."

Marcellus drillers in Pennsylvania use less than a 10th of a percent of the 9.48 billion gallons of water consumed every day in the state, the Pennsylvania Environmental Protection Department has reported.

Talisman, the Calgarybased company that operates in Texas and Pennsylvania, said its fracking hasn't been hampered by water re-"Significant strictions. amounts of rainfall" were reported in the Texas region where it has rigs, and Marcellus drilling was scaled back when gas prices fell, Berta Gomez, a spokeswoman, said in an email.

Environment Texas, an Austin-based environmental group, urged the state Legislature to pass bills requiring that water be reused after fracking and limiting the amount of fresh water that can be used.

"There are a lot of problems with fracking, and so we want to minimize the damage from fracking, including by requiring recycling," Luke Metzger, the group's director, said in an interview.

BOISE (AP) • One person has died after a house fire in Boise.

Boise Fire Chief Dennis Doan said someone died in the fire that was reported at about 7:45 a.m. Monday. No details were released regarding the victim's name, gender or age.

The body was found in the bedroom where the fire started. It spread into the attack of the house. Five fire trucks and several dozen firefighters responded.

Candidates Spar over Foreign Policy

RENO, Nev. (AP) • Their goodwill moment gone, President Barack Obama and challenger Mitt Romnev plunged back into their acrimonious political campaign on Monday, Obama doubting Romney's readiness to be commander in chief, Romney accusing the president's team of offering "almost all attack ads."

Days after the Colorado movie massacre brought reflection and talk of national unity from both camps, the fight was on again.

Foreign affairs made a rare move to the fore of the campaign as Republican Romney, the former Massachusetts governor, readied for a closely watched trip overseas. Obama, meanwhile, told a military audience that he was the only one in the race with a record, not just words, on international matters as he sought to undercut Romney's travels before they began.

Both White House contenders are trying to gain the military vote. In the 2008 election, 54 percent of those who said they had served in the military voted for Sen. John McCain, himself a veteran, to 44 percent for Obama, according to exit polls.

More broadly, both sides ended what had been a weekend of political truce in deference to grieving families and victims of the shooting. Obama and Romney returned to raising millions of dollars and taking jabs at each other over jobs, leadership and security.

Both saw little time to waste in a tight, bruising race - and saw little need to apologize for any tactics.

A positive campaign "really would be nice," Romney said even as he declared that sentiment over in an interview with CNBC. He blamed Obama for the tenor.

Obama told the Veterans of Foreign Wars he has kept his promises to end the war in Iraq, wind down the conflict in Afghanistan and go after al-Qaida leader Osama bin Laden wherever he was hiding. The terrorist mastermind was killed in a raid on Obama's orders.

In every example, Obama poked at Romney without naming him. On Iraq, Obama suggested Romney would have kept forces in the war zone indefinitely.

"When you're commander in chief, you owe the troops a plan," Obama said. On Afghanistan, Obama needled Romney for opposing the 2014 timeline for ending the war. "You know what? That's not a plan for America's security," he said.

Romney was to get his say before the VFW, too, on Tuesday before setting out for England, Israel and Poland.

Gas Line Safety Valves Resisted

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The bulldozer was clearing land outside a day care center in Hapeville, Ga., when it broke open a buried 1-inch pipeline. The escaping gas ignited into a fireball that killed nine people, including seven children settling down for their afternoon naps.

That was 1968. Since then, there have been at least 270 similar accidents across the country that could have been prevented or made less dangerous by a valve that cuts off leaking gas and costs as little as $10-$15 for homes and small businesses and $200-$300 for larger buildings, an Associated Press investigation found.

Yet nearly 90 percent of the nation's gas service lines aren't fitted with the valves. Despite persistent government recommendations, the gas industry has argued that they are unreliable and cost too much to install - $207 million over 50 years in one industry-commissioned study, more than $1 billion in another estimate.

In the meantime, the accidents continued: Since Hapeville, at least 67 people have been killed and more than 350 hurt in accidents where the valves could have helped but weren't installed. Six people were killed in a Minnesota store blast in 1972. A 25-story Manhattan building was destroyed in 1974, injuring 70 people. Four people died and six buildings were leveled in an explosion in 1998 in St. Cloud, Minn.

"There were lives lost that did not need to be lost," said Robert Hall, deputy director of the National Transportation Safety Board, which is responsible for investigating pipeline accidents.

The NTSB recommended the valves 16 times, but only in 2009, under pressure from Congress, was a rule approved - to make the devices mandatory only on lines leading to new, singlefamily homes. Now, regulators are considering expanding that to new or replaced pipelines serving millions of multifamily homes and commercial buildings. And the utilities are objecting.

"NTSB has made excess flow valves some kind of holy war where they think everything should have a valve on it," said Don Stursma, an official at the Iowa Utilities Board who sits on an advisory board to the Pipeline and Hazardous Materials Safety Administration.

MOSCOW (AP) • A University of Idaho student from Nepal died in a rafting accident on the Selway River over the weekend.

Idaho County officials said 22-year-old Bishal Shrestha of Kathmandu, Nepal, drowned Saturday evening after the raft he was in got stuck, popped and spilled all five occupants into the northern Idaho river.

Shrestha had been rafting with other University of Idaho students from Nepal, including his brother.

The other four occupants were able to get to shore and were later transported back across the river.

Shrestha was not wearing a life jacket.

His body was recovered at about 10 a.m. Sunday.

The university's online student directory says Shrestha was a senior majoring in materials science and engineering.

Washington In-state Tuition Could Top $20K

BY MIKE BAKER Associated Press

OLYMPIA, Wash. • Washington tuition rates are rising at such a rapid clip that the cost of attending a top university is projected to surpass $20,000 per year for in-state students before the end of this decade.

Those numbers, produced as part of an actuarial analysis for the state's prepaid tuition program, mean that higher education rates may quadruple from 2004 to 2019. Supporters of the university some of the cuts to blunt those rising costs. "We've reached a tipping point," said Democratic Rep. Reuven Carlyle. "We cannot allow tuition to substantially increase in the disproportionate fashion that it has."

Students at the University of Washington are preparing to pay $11,782 in this coming academic year, along with some additional fees not included in the prepaid tuition calculations, up about 15 percent from the year prior. Tuition at the state's most expensive university is projected to grow another 12 percent.

Missing Cousins' Mom Agrees to Polygraph Test

EVANSDALE, Iowa (AP) • The aunt of two missing Iowa cousins says one of their mothers has agreed to take a second polygraph test to show she's cooperating with investigators.

Tammy Brousseau said her sister, Misty Cook-Morrissey, was going through the so-called liedetector test Monday.

Cook-Morrissey is the mother of 10-year-old Lyric Cook-Morrissey, who vanished with her 8-yearold cousin Elizabeth Collins while riding bikes July 13.

Cook-Morrissey had taken one polygraph test last week, but said she would not take another after complaining she was harshly interrogated and accused of having something to do with the disappearance.

Brousseau says that position caused friction within the family and investigators to complain of a lack of cooperation. She says Morrissey agreed to the second test on the condition that she could have a family member present.

Ag Secretary: House Must Pass Drought Relief in Farm Bill

Programs authorized in 2008 have expired.

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) • Agriculture Secretary Tom Vilsack pushed Monday for Congress to act on a farm bill that would reinstate expired disaster assistance programs for farmers experiencing the worst drought in seven decades.

Programs authorized in the 2008 farm bill have expired and won't be renewed unless the House approves a bill passed by the Senate. Vilsack pushed the House to consider the bill, which has passed out of its agriculture committee, before its August vacation.

House Republican leaders have not scheduled a vote.

"There is nothing more important to rural America and nothing more important to producers, farmers and ranchers in this country than action on this bill," Vilsack said. "There's no greater need for this help and assistance than now, and there's no excuse or reason why the House of Representatives cannot take this matter up."

Vilsack, a Democrat and former Iowa governor, toured farms there to assess the crop deterioration in the nation's top corn-growing state.

Farmers in parts of Indiana and Illinois have seen their corn wither and die. Some mowed over the corn and baled it for livestock feed. Iowa was doing better, but an Agriculture Department report released Monday said some farmers have now started to chop their corn.

Nationwide, the corn crop is deteriorating rapidly. The USDA said 45 percent is in poor or very poor condition, compared to 38 percent just a week ago. Soybeans also are showing stress from the drought, with more than a third in poor or very poor condition.

Vilsack said improved, drought-resistant corn varieties and the fact that farmers nationally planted 5 million more acres of corn this year than last could help keep the year from being a total loss.

Iraq Sees Deadliest Day in Two Years

BAGHDAD (AP) • A startling spasm of violence shook more than a dozen Iraqi cities Monday, killing over 100 people in coordinated bombings and shootings and wounding twice as many in the country's deadliest day in more than two years.

The attacks came only days after al-Qaida announced it would attempt a comeback with a new offensive against Iraq's weakened government.

With the U.S. military gone and the government mired in infighting, the Iraqi wing of al-Qaida has vowed to retake areas it once controlled and push the nation back toward civil war. Though there was no immediate claim of responsibility for Monday's attacks, nearly all of them struck in the capital and in northern Iraqi cities where al-Qaida can most easily regain a foothold.

"Terrorists are opening another gate of hell for us," said Kamiran Karim, a sweets-seller in the northern city of Kirkuk, which was hit by five exploding cars throughout the morning. He suffered shrapnel wounds when one of the car bombs blew up about 200 yards from his cart.

Associated press A man stands in front of the scene of a bomb attack Monday in Madain, about 15 miles southeast of Baghdad, Iraq.

So far this summer, militants linked to al-Qaida have claimed responsibility for a steady drumbeat of attacks designed to keep the government off balance as it works to overcome a power struggle that pits Sunni and Kurdish leaders against the Shiite prime minister. The infighting, which escalated the day after the U.S. military withdrew, has all but paralyzed the government and deepened sectarian tensions around the country.

Sir Elton John speaks at the XIX International Aids Conference on Monday in Washington.

US Donates $150M to Fighting AIDS

WASHINGTON (AP) • Science now has the tools to slash the spread of HIV even without a vaccine – and the U.S. is donating an extra $150 million to help poor countries put them in place, the Obama administration told the world's largest AIDS conference Monday.

"We want to get to the end of AIDS," declared the top U.S. HIV researcher, Dr. Anthony Fauci of the National Institutes of Health.

How long it takes depends on how quickly the world can adopt those tools, he said - including getting millions of untreated people onto life-saving drugs.

"No promises, no dates, but we know it can happen," Fauci told the International AIDS Conference.

Part of the challenge will be overcoming the stigma that keeps high-risk populations from getting needed AIDS treatment and services.

"We have to replace the shame with love," singer Elton John told the conference. "We have to replace the stigma with compassion. No one should be left behind."

Some 34.2 million people worldwide are living with HIV, and 2.5 million were infected last year.

Secretary of State Hillary Rodham Clinton said the goal is an AIDS-free generation.

"I am here today to make it absolutely clear the U.S. is committed and will remain committed to achieving an AIDS-free generation," Clinton said.

But it will require smart targeting of prevention tools where they can have the greatest effect. "If we want to save more lives, we need to go where the virus is," she said.

during court appearance, angering victims' relatives.

CENTENNIAL, Colo. (AP) • His hair dyed a shocking comic-book shade of orange-red, James Holmes showed up in court for the first time, but didn't seem to be there at all.

The world's first look at the man accused of killing 12 moviegoers and injuring 58 others in a shooting rampage at a packed midnight screening of the new Batman film was that of a sleepy, seemingly inattentive suspect.

Holmes shuffled into court Monday in a maroon jailhouse jumpsuit with his dazed, Holmes sat virtually motionless, his eyes drooping as the judge advised him of the severity of the case. At one point, Holmes simply closed his eyes.

He never said a word.

Prosecutors said they didn't know if he was being medicated. His demeanor, however, angered victims' relatives. Tom Teves, whose son, Alex, was killed in the attack, watched Holmes intently throughout the roughly 12-minute hearing, sizing up the 24-year-old former doctoral student.

"I saw the coward in court today and Alex could have wiped the floor with said. His son, a physical therapist, dove to protect his girlfriend during "The Dark Knight Rises" shooting at a multiplex in nearby Aurora in the Denver suburbs.

The court appearance gave millions the chance to scrutinize Holmes' every movement, every flutter of his heavy eyelids and form their opinions.

"It struck me that this is a person who's been through an emotional maelstrom and therefore might be totally wiped out emotionally," said Dr. Jeffrey Gardere, an assistant professor of behavioral medicine at Touro College of Osteopathic Medicine.

Focus Shifts to the Strait of Hormuz

• When Pentagon officials announced plans to send U.S. Navy minesweepers and warships into the Gulf for exercises, they carefully tried to avoid framing it as a direct show of force against Iran. Tehran took care of that.

Iranian commanders and political leaders — facing an increasing squeeze from international sanctions — sharply stepped up threats and defiant statements in recent weeks over the Strait of Hormuz, a chokepoint at the mouth of the Gulf that is the route for one fifth of the world's oil.

While it's unlikely Iran is ready to risk a military backlash by trying to close Hormuz, the latest flurry from Tehran shows that Iranian authorities see the strait as perhaps their most valuable asset in brinksmanship over tightening sanctions and efforts to resume nuclear talks with world powers.

In Iran's view, the strait offers a rare combination of strategic and economic leverage. Warnings from Tehran in the past about possible closure have been enough to boost oil prices to offset the blow of sanctions. It's also among the potential flashpoints if military force is used against Iran over its nuclear program. Iran could severely disrupt oil supplies and send the shaky global economy stumbling backward.

"Iran is masterful at keeping the world off balance," said Theodore Karasik, a regional security expert at the Dubai-based Institute for Near East and Gulf Military Analysis. "There are few things that get the world's attention more than the Strait of Hormuz."

Iranians and European Union negotiators are scheduled to meet Tuesday to seek ways to restart high-level nuclear talks, which remain snagged over disputes that include the levels of Iran's ability to make nuclear fuel. Israel claims Iran is simply trying to extend talks to move ahead the process of uranium enrichment. The West and allies worry Iran may be advancing toward weapons-grade material, but Iran insists it only seeks reactors for electricity.

OBITUARIES

Dennis Lee Bokma

Sept. 2, 1959-July 15, 2012

WENDELL • Dennis Lee Bokma, 52, of Wendell and formerly of Elko, Nev., went home to be with his Lord and Savior on Sunday, July 15, 2012, at St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center in Twin Falls, Idaho, surrounded by his loving family. He had a long, hard fight with scleroderma, but he never gave up to the very end.

Dennis was born in Upland, Calif., to Sam and Antoinette (Toni) Bokma on Sept. 2, 1959. He joined his little family as the second born after his brother, Steve. He was soon followed by his sister, Joan, and his brother, Alan. He was raised on a family dairy in Chino, Calif., until his family moved to Pomona, Calif., where he attended a Baptist school. Dennis loved talking about his youth, and he learned from a young age to work hard to help his family. When Dennis was in the seventh grade, his family moved to Wendell, Idaho, where he attended high school. Here he spent some of the happiest times of his life. He worked and trained to be a butcher at Marlow's Meat Market and Parr's Lockers. In 1979, he and his best friend, Don Moore, signed up for the Army and served three years in Furst, Germany. After his discharge, he returned to Idaho. Dennis moved to Elko, Nev., where he did masonry work for Lund Masonry and Gary's Masonry. In 1988, he started working at Newmont Mining as a laborer, where he worked very hard and was promoted to control room operator and later control room supervisor. Dennis continued to work there until he became disabled in 2009.

On Nov. 30, 1989, Dennis married his soul mate, Evelyn Sue Hansen, in Elko, Nev. They had a beautiful daughter, Ashley, in 1991. Dennis and Evelyn made their home in Elko for 20 years. Dennis loved to garden, cook, camp, fish but his greatest joy was being with his family and friends.

memories and be surrounded by his loving family and friends. In Wendell, he made a wonderful home where he continued to garden and fish, and he slowly acquired the workshop of his dreams. He spent countless hours building beautiful items for loved ones.

Dennis is survived by his wife, Evelyn of 22 years; and his five children, Ashley of Twin Falls, Kandi of Michigan, Kristina of Pocatello, Kimberly of Gooding and Spencer of Emmett; also, Jodi and Jayleen of Elko who he loved as if they were his own daughters; his father, Sam of Wenatchee, Wash,; brother, Steve of Hillsboro, Ore.; sister, Joan of Wenatchee, Wash.; and brother, Alan of Wenatchee, Wash. He has seven grandchildren with another on the way.

Dennis had a unique and bright outlook on life. No matter what life dealt in his 52 years, he found the positive side of everything and his love of life and family never ended. His beautiful soul shines through even now to the happiness and joy that he created just by being Dennis.

A celebration of his life will be held at 2 p.m. Friday, July 27, at Parke's Wendell-Gooding Chapel, 380 First Ave. E. in Wendell, Idaho. Followed by a light lunch.

Dennis had a great love for animals, and we ask that any donations be made to Anything Pawsible Animal Shelter in Wendell, Idaho. Please send checks payable to Debbie Carpenter -Wendell Shelter, in care of Debbie Carpenter, 560 Grandview Drive, Twin Falls, ID 83301.

The family would like to thank Dr. Ficklin, Jayne, Lynn; also Michelle, Lynn, Ellie, Becky and Erin from St. Luke's Home Health and Hospice for all your loving care you provided for Dennis. Gloria 'June' Harms Hill

June 17, 1941-July 22, 2012

GOODING • Gloria "June" Harms Hill, 71, of Gooding, Idaho, passed away at her home Sunday, July 22, 2012, surrounded by her family.

Courage is fear that has said its prayers – Mom had plenty of courage.

June was born in Wendell, Idaho, on June 17, 1941, to Lois G. and A.J. Harms. She was raised on the family farm in Wendell. It was there that she found her early love for horses; she had several in her growing up years at home. June graduated from Wendell High School in the spring of 1960. She had recently met a remarkable young cowboy that spring on a double date with a close friend. Her date that evening wasn't her future husband Don; Don was her friend's date. We will say that the situation was quickly remedied. They later announced their engagement and were married July 1, 1960, shortly after her 19th birthday. This began their life story and their family.

An excellent horsewoman, June was a queen contestant at the Gooding County Fair and Rodeo in 1959. She was also a member of the Sagebrush Artist Guild, served as a children's ministry leader Gooding at Nazarene Church, and a 4-H leader for groups in Wendell, Shoshone and Gooding. You could always find her at the local Farmers Markets in Twin Falls and Gooding, selling her carefully grown fruits and veggies from her own "Garden of Eden." June was also a very creative cook she could make a meal out of whatever she found in the cupboard or fridge, and it was good! She sewed for all her family, making clothing and later becoming accomplished at making beautiful quilts that were usually gifts for her children or grandchildren. June was an active member of the General Assembly of the Church of The First Born. Her faith in the Lord carried her through her life in the good days and the bad and never, ever wavered.

To this union was born six children, Donna (Wayne)

Oglesbee of Buhl, Marty Summers of St. Petersburg, Fla., Re-(Denny) becca O'Brien of Buhl, Amy (Cary) Ferrin of Burlev, Adam Hill of Hagerman and Aaron

Hill (Christi) of Kuna; grandchildren, Randy, Rhonda, Rachel, April, Lance, Reva, Dylan, Andrew, Chelsey, Jared, Tanna, Brady, Breezy, Radley and Aspen; greatgrandchildren, Aundre, J.J., Brandon, Bailey, Taylor, Kennedy, Nixon, Joshua, Wyatt, Jeremiah and Isabella; brothers, Larry (Linda) Harms of Wendell, Lionel (Renae) Harms of Wendell and Boyd (Pam) Harms of Weiser; sisters, Bonnie (Stanley) Andrews of Wendell and Theresa Strolberg of Buhl; as well as many beloved nieces, nephews, cousins, dear friends both near and far and extended family members; and special friends, Arden Schmitt of Gooding, Bill and Becky Bellew of Wendell and Victor Bellew of Montana. She was preceded in death by her parents, A.J. and Lois Harms; her husband, Don Hill; and grandson, Matthew Ferrin.

June was well loved by all her grandchildren, and they were dear to her heart and were a big part of the person she was. She was always drawing horses and numerous other animal pictures for the kids and passed the love of art to her children and grandchildren. She often made her great cinnamon rolls that most of her children and grandchildren couldn't resist.

Mama, you will be missed every single day, for your hugs, your humor and your love.

A service will be at 10:30 a.m. Thursday, July 26, at the First Christian Church on Broadway Avenue in Buhl, Idaho. Interment will follow the service at the Filer Cemetery in Filer. A meal and fellowship will be offered at Calvary Chapel in Buhl following the service.

In place of flowers, memorial donations are being accepted by family members to assist with funeral costs.

Services are under the direction of Farmer Funeral Chapel of Buhl, Idaho.

Margaret 'Peg' C. Davidson Marnoch

June 8, 1907-July 20, 2012

KING HILL • Mar-"Peg" garet С. Davidson Marnoch, 105, a resident of Nampa and formerly of King Hill, passed away peacefully Friday, July 20, 2012, at Trinity Mission Health and Rehabilitation of Midland in Nampa. Margaret "Peg" Marnoch was born in the village of Govan, a suburb of Glasgow, Scotland, on June 8, 1907. At the age of 14, she and her family immigrated to the United States, taking up residence in Philadelphia, Pa. During the following 10 years, she was employed by the travel agency, Thomas Cook and Sons of Philadelphia. Prior to coming to the United States, Margaret Davidson and Roy Marnoch had been good friends in Scotland. The relationship was renewed and after an engagement of one year, they eloped to Morristown, Pa., where they were married on April 5, 1930.

They headed west to Idaho, settling in Emmett, where their first son, Ian, was born in 1931, and then moving to the Glenns Ferry area, where their second son, Kenneth, was born six years later. During their many years together, they were involved in ranching, construction, plumbing and finally aerospace at Rocketdyne in California

She was preceded in death by her husband in 1970 after a long bout with cancer and also her two sons, Ian and Kenneth. She is survived by her granddaughters, Paula McDerof Idaho, Cindy mott Jones of Oregon and Pam Edmiston of California; grandsons, Eric and Scott Marnoch of California; eight great-grandchildren; and one great-great-grandson.

Peg will be remembered as a kind and compassionate person who seldom lost her sense of humor and never her Scottish brogue.

Visitation for family and friends will be held from 9:30 to 10:30 a.m. Thursday, July 26, at the United Methodist Church in Glenns Ferry. A graveside service will follow at 11 a.m. at the Glenn Rest Cemetery in Glenns Ferry, with Pastor Martin J.B. Geisel officiating.

Funeral arrangements are under the care and direction of Demaray Funeral Service, Gooding Chapel. Condolences may be shared with the family by visiting the obituary link at www.demarayfuneralservice.com.

In November 2009, the family moved to Wendell, where Dennis found great comfort to be back in a place full of such happy others, you are all angels. Those who wish may share condolences at www.magicvalleyfuneral-

Having More Retirement Accounts Is Not The Same As Having More Money.

When it comes to the number of retirement accounts you have, the saying "more is better" is not necessarily true. In fact, if you hold multiple accounts with various brokers, it can be difficult to keep track of your investments and to see if you're properly diversified.* At the very least, multiple accounts usually mean multiple fees.

Bringing your accounts to Edward Jones could help solve all that. Plus, one statement can make it easier to see if you're moving toward your goals.

* Diversification does not guarantee a profit or protect against loss

2nd Triple-digit Loss for Dow in 2 Days

NEW YORK (AP) • Fear that Spain may need a bailout sent its borrowing costs soaring, the euro to a two-year low against the dollar and stocks around the world tumbling as investors pulled back Monday from all manner of risk. The Dow Jones industrial average, after falling 239 points earlier in the day, ended down 101.11 at 12,721.46. Yields for U.S. government bonds sank to record lows as traders sought the safety of American debt. The Standard & Poor's 500 index fell 12.14 points to 1,350.52. The Nasdaq composite index dropped 35.15 points to 2,890.15.

Moody's Lowers Outlooks on Germany, Netherlands

NEW YORK (AP) • Moody's Investors Service is lowering its outlook for the credit ratings of Germany, the Netherlands and Luxembourg, citing the mounting uncertainty over the debt crisis in Europe and the possibility that those stronger countries would have to provide aid to Spain or Italy.

The rating agency said Monday that it is revising its out look to "Negative" from "Stable" for the three countries' top Aaa ratings. The increasing likelihood that Greece could withdraw from the group of countries that use the euro currency deepens the crisis, Moody's said.

The region's debt debacle flared anew Monday as fears intensified that Spain, the fourth-largest economy in the euro group, would be next in line for a government bailout.

Soft game sales weigh on Hasbro's 2Q earnings • Toy maker Hasbro Inc. said Monday its second-quarter net income dropped 25 percent on weak sales in most categories as revenue in major product categories including boys, girls and games declined.

But higher prices and cost-cutting helped the maker of Monopoly, Nerf and My Little Pony beat analysts' earnings expectations. Its shares rose 4 percent.

The second quarter is seasonally small for toy makers, which make the bulk of their sales during the second half of the year and the holiday season. But it can give indications about the strength or weakness of toy demand.

Neuhoff, Owner of Twin Falls TV Stations, Dies at Age 59

TIMES-NEWS

TWIN FALLS • Geoff Neuhoff, president and CEO of Neuhoff Communications, the corporate parent of KMVT-TV in Twin Falls, has died, the company announced this weekend.

Neuhoff passed away Sunday, according to the company. He was 59.

Neuhoff's career in broadcasting covered more than 30 years. He was named Illinois Broadcaster of the Year in 2010 by the Illinois Broadcasters Association. In spring 2012 a Neuhoff station in Decatur, Ill., was given a Crystal Award by the National Association of Broadcasters for its community service.

In Twin Falls, his company operates the KMVT-TV CBS

affiliate, as well as affiliates for Fox and The CW. Neuhoff Communications also owns a number of radio stations in Illinois.

"Geoff Neuhoff was a giant among small and medium market broadcasters," Neuhoff COO Mike Hulvey said in the company's announcement. "Geoff demanded from all of us a dedication of greatness and excellence no matter the market size or the power of the station."

Neuhoff is survived by his wife Beth (Russell) Neuhoff, son Jamie, and daughters Lexie and Alice.

Arrangements are pending on Martha's Vineyard, Mass.

eed Full Bailout

BY DAVID MCHUGH

Associated Press

FRANKFURT, Germany • Europe is on the brink again. The region's debt crisis flared on Monday as fears intensified that Spain would be next in line for a government bailout.

A recession is deepening in Spain, the fourth-largest economy that uses the euro currency, and a growing number of its regional governments are seeking financial lifelines to make ends meet. The interest rate on Spanish government bonds soared in a sign of waning market confidence in the country's ability to pay offits debts.

The prospect of bailing out Spain is worrisome for Europe because the potential cost far exceeds what's available in existing emergency funds. Financial markets are also growing uneasy about Italy, another major European economy with large debts and a feeble economy.

Stocks fell sharply across Europe and around the world. Germany's DAX plunged 3.18 percent. Britain's FTSE dropped 2 percent and France's CAC 40 fell 2.89 percent. In midday trading on Wall Street, the Dow Jones industrial average was down 1.35 percent. The euro slipped just below $1.21 against the dollar, its lowest reading since June 2010.

The interest rate on its 10-year bond hit 7.56 percent in the morning, its highest level since Spain joined the euro in 1999.

Concern over Spain increased Monday after the country's central bank said the economy shrank by 0.4 percent during the second quarter, compared with the previous three months. The government predicts the economy won't return to growth until 2014 as new austerity measures hurt consumers and businesses.

On top of that, Spain is facing new costs as a growing number of regional governments ask federal authorities for assistance. The eastern region of Valencia revealed Friday it would need a bailout from the central Madrid government. Over the weekend, the southern region of Murcia said it may also need help.

Spain has already required an emergency loan package of up to (euro) 100 billion ($121 billion) to bail out its banks. But that aid hasn't quelled markets because the government is ultimately liable to repay the money. It had been hoped that responsibility for repayments would shift from the government to the banks. But that shift is a long way off – a pan-European banking authority would have to be created first and that could be years away.

U.S. and China will likely decline. China, the world's second biggest oil consumer behind the U.S., already foresees slower economic growth in the third quarter. And the U.S. economy is still sluggish. Less growth means less demand for oil.

Benchmark U.S. crude prices fell by $3.69, or 4 percent, to finish the day at $88.14 per barrel in New York. Brent crude, which sets the price for imported oil, lost $3.57, or 3.3 percent, to finish at $103.26 per barrel in London.

Stocks also fell with major indexes closing down about 1 percent.

At the pump, gasoline prices rose by 2.4 cents over the weekend to a national average of $3.471 per gallon, according to AAA, Wright Express and Oil Price Information Service. The price of a gallon of regular increased in July by an average of 14 cents, but it's still 46 cents cheaper than the peak for the year in April.

Gasoline prices may rise this week following a fire at a Louisiana refinery that forced owner Valero Energy Corp. to shut it down. Valero spokesman Bill Day said the Meraux, La., refinery was taken offline after catching fire early Sunday morning. It will stay shut while the company repairs the damage. No injuries were reported.

McDonald's Showing Signs of Tear from Economy

BY CANDICE CHOI

Associated Press

NEW YORK • Not even McDonald's Corp. has an iron stomach when it comes to the global economic downturn

The world's largest hamburger chain has thrived in boom and bust times by selling cheap eats and constantly updating its menu with popular items such as fruit smoothies and snack wraps. But the company is starting to show signs of wear and tear from global economic pressures, intensifying competition and penny-pinching customers who are eating out less often in some hard-hit regions around the world.

The Oak Brook, Ill.-based company said Monday that its net income fell 4 percent in the second quarter as a strong dollar ate into results.

When the dollar is strong, international sales translate into fewer dollars back at home. That's problematic for McDonald's, which does two-thirds of its business overseas. Making matters worse, the dollar hit a two-year high against the euro Monday amid ongoing fears that Spain may need a government bailout.

McDonald's is also facing higher costs for labor and ingredients, although it said it now expects commodity costs to rise between 3.5 percent and 4.5 percent for the full year, down from the previous forecast of up to 5.5 percent.

Suggesting more challenges ahead, McDonald's said global sales at restaurants open at least a year rose 3.7 percent for the three months ended June 30. The figure, which is a key metric because it strips out the impact of newly opened and closed locations, represents the slowest growth since the company reported sales growth of 2.3 percent in the fourth-quarter of 2009.

America the Launching Pad

can remember bad presidential campaigns in good times and good campaigns in bad times, but it is hard to recall a worse campaign in a worse time. Mitt Romney's campaign has been about nothing, and President Barack Obama's has been about Romney. I'm sure Obama's attacks on Romney's career at Bain Capital have hurt Romney, but they also seem to have hurt Obama – diverting him from offering a big optimistic message that says: Here is the world we're living in; here's why my past policies were relevant; here's where we're going next; and here's why it will work. The president is punching so below his weight. It's like watching Tiger Woods playing Putt-Putt or Babe Ruth bunting. Obama is better than this.

In his interview with Charlie Rose for CBS News last Sunday, Obama acknowledged that one of the biggest mistakes of his first term "was thinking that this job was just about getting the policy right. ... That's important. But the nature of this office is also to tell a story to the American people that gives them a sense of unity and purpose and optimism, especially during tough times."

I'd agree. Looking back, it always felt to me that Obama's nomination was a hugely important radical act – the culmination of the civil rights movement. But his election happened because a majority of Americans thought he was the best man to do something else: revive, renew and rebuild America for the 21st century. Yet he never consistently explained himself in those terms.

His policies – like health care, saving the auto industry, raising mileage standards and Race to the Top in education – were discrete initiatives in the right direction, but each was fought separately, often in congressional cloakrooms, and never synthesized into a whole that voters could fully appreciate or be inspired to get out of their chairs to support. His campaign today is the same.

Is there an integrated set of policies, and a narrative, that could animate, inspire and tie together an Obama second term? I think there is. (I first explored this theme in a recent book I co-wrote with Michael Mandelbaum.) And it's this: America should be for the 21st -century world what Cape Canaveral was for America in the 1960s. Cape Canaveral was the launching pad for our one national moon shot. It was a hugely inspiring project that drove scientific research, innovation, education and manufacturing. But we're not going to have a national moon shot again.

Instead, Obama should aspire to make America the launching pad where everyone everywhere should want to come to launch their own moon shot, their own startup, their own social movement. We can't stimulate or tax-cut our way to growth.

We have to invent our way there. The majority of new jobs every year are created by startups. The days when Ford or GE came to town with 10,000 jobs are over. Their factories are much more automated today, and their products are made in global supply chains. Instead, we need 2,000 people in every town each starting something that employs five people.

We need everyone starting something! Therefore, we should aspire to be the world's best launching pad because our workforce is so productive; our markets the freest and most trusted; our infrastructure and Internet bandwidth the most advanced; our openness to foreign talent second to none; our funding for basic research the most generous; our rule of law, patent protection and investment-friendly tax code the envy of the world; our education system unrivaled; our currency and interest rates the most stable; our environment the most pristine; our health care system the most efficient; and our energy supplies the most secure, clean and cost-effective. No, we are not all those things today - but building America into this launching pad for more startups is precisely what an Obama second term should be about, so more Americans can thrive in a world we invented. If we can make America the best place to dream something, design something, start something, collaborate with others on something and manufacture something - in an age in which every link in that chain can now be done in so many more places - our workers and innovators will do just fine. But a narrative is not just a business plan. It has to be infused with values, and, in our case, the most obvious is "sustainability," which doesn't simply mean "green" or "no growth." It means behaving responsibly in the market and with Mother Nature so we can have growth that lasts. What "freedom" was for our parents' generation, "sustainability" has to be for ours. If we do not bring sustainable values to our banking systems and ecosystems, we are going to end up more "unfree" than if the communists had won the Cold War - because without sustainable practices, repeated crises in the market and Mother Nature will impose more limitations on our way life than anything the Soviets ever could have.

Shooting Sports Should be Given the Recognition They Deserve

It would be nice to see some coverage of our athletes in the shooting sports. Despite the multitudes of medals they have brought back to this country over the years, they are treated with total disdain. They are better respected in foreign nations than in their own country. You can be certain they will receive no TV coverage regardless of their success.

To the citizens of Twin Falls:

I was part of the film crew that recently came to Twin Falls to shoot an Audi commercial.

I am one of the lucky ones who "escaped" LA many years ago and am now living in Boise. I take great pride in living and working in Boise, and the main reason is the kindness of the people.

The people of Twin Falls were very accommodating, and I appreciate it greatly. I personally want to make sure that everyone is happy with our filming in your area. If anyone feels that we left anything unattended, please contact me directly at c.mcgregor@mindspring.com.

I especially want to thank Fire Chief Clark and his wonderful employees, Sheriff Tom Carter, Capt. Hilliard and the employees of both the Twin Falls Sheriff's Office as well as the Jerome Sheriff's Department. I also want to thank Shawn Barigar of the Chamber of Commerce, City Manager Travis Rothwelier, Don Mays of Snake River Canyon Tours, the LaQuinta and Quality Inns, White Cloud Communications, the Visitor's Center, Doug Volmer, and the other many, many people who were of great assistance to you.

I hope to bring more projects to Twin Falls in the future. Best and thank you again. CATRINE MCGREGOR Boise

Gardere said there could be "a psychotic process going on and we see that being acted out there. Or there might be some sort of malingering going on. In other words, trying to make himself look worse than he actually is. Or maybe a combination of all of those things."

The hearing was the first confirmation that Holmes' hair was colored. On Friday, there were reports of his hair being red and that he told arresting officers that he was "The Joker." Batman's nemesis in the fictional Gotham has brightly colored hair.

Authorities declined to confirm if Holmers told officers that he was Batman's enemy. Investigators found a Batman mask inside his apartment, a law enforcement official close to the investigation said Sunday on condition of anonymity because he was not authorized to speak to the news media.

Holmes, whom police say donned body armor and was armed with an assault rifle, a shotgun and handguns during the attack, was arrested shortly afterward. His home was booby-trapped with a trip wire, explosives and unknown liquids that took a day to disarm.

Police said Holmes began buying guns at Denver-area stores nearly two months before Friday's shooting and that he received at least 50 packages in four months at his home and school.

Holmes, who is being held in isolation, is refusing to cooperate, authorities said. They said it could take months to identify a motive.

The shooting was the worst in the U.S. since the Nov. 5, 2009, attack at Fort Hood, Texas. An Army psychiatrist was charged with killing 13 soldiers and civilians and wounding more than two dozen others.

On Monday, security was tight as uniformed sheriff's deputies were stationed outside, including on the roofs of both court buildings.

Holmes' entrance into the courtroom was barely noticeable but relatives of shooting victims leaned forward in their seats to catch their first glimpse of him. Two women held hands tightly, one shook her head. One woman's eyes welled up with tears.

Holmes sat down in a jury box, next to one of his attorneys. When the judge asked him if he understood his rights, his attorneys did all the talking.

Christina "Crispy" Blache, who was shot in both legs during the rampage, watched clips of Holmes' court appearance with her father, Robert Blache. Her father said Holmes looked insane, while the restaurant manager said she believed Holmes had no idea what he did.

"He seemed kind of out of it, just sitting there. I don't really know what to think as far as he goes because he didn't seem remorseful or anything," she said.

Prosecutor Carol Chambers said her office is considering pursuing the death penalty, but a decision will be made in consultation with the victims' families.

David Sanchez, who waited outside the courthouse during the hearing, said his pregnant daughter escaped without injury but her husband was shot in the head and was in critical condition.

Bruins' Hardman Inks Track Letter With Idaho State

TIMES-NEWS

POCATELLO • Idaho State's track and field recruiting class grew by one last week with the addition of Twin Falls High School sprinter Kimball Hardman.

The school could not announce Hardman's signing earlier this month with the rest of his class, which includes Kimberly sprinter Alan Cazeau, because of a NCAA clearinghouse matter regarding a class Hardman took as a senior. That matter has been resolved and Hardman will be eligible for the upcoming season

Hardman finished third in the 100 meters at the Class 4A state meet in 11.22 seconds, but did record the fastest time at state in the preliminaries with a personal-best time of 10.95. That was one one-hundreth of a second faster than the second-fastest time of Mountain Home's J.D. Cristobal, who finished second in the finals and is another Idaho State signee.

Jerome Baseball Field Gets New Scoreboard

BY DAVID BASHORE dbashore@magicvalley.com

the name of Jerome's baseball field. On the last day of the American Legion Baseball regular season, Jerome erected a brand new scoreboard at Neace Field, complete with a giant sign

"It kind of came out of the blue," said former Jerome athletic director Ty Jones, who was in charge of the athletic program when the arrangements were made. "I got a phone call one day, saying Idaho Milk Products would like to donate some money for a scoreboard. It tool a while, but we finally found a scoreboard design we liked and went from there."

According to Jones, with the donation came an insistence that there be a more prominent display of the field's official name.

The field is named after Ken Neace, who played an integral part in the foundation of Jerome's high school baseball program. Neace, along with his wife Judy and daughter Brandy, died in a 1997 plane crash, and the field was renamed in his memory shortly afterward.

For years the name "Neace Field" was displayed in a small box on the aging scoreboard in center field. But now it gets a more prominent display in a large orange sign sitting right above the scoreboard in left-center field.

Rodeo Hall of Fame Brings Filer's Taylor Deserved Honor

BY PATRICK SHELTRA psheltra@magicvalley.com

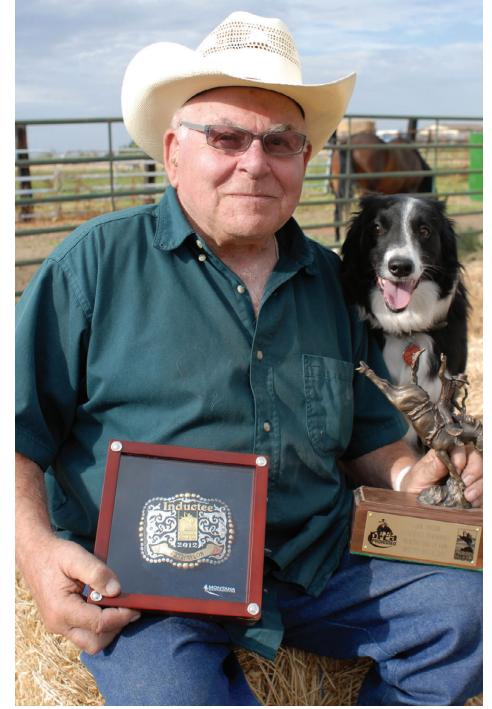

FILER • If you listen to those close to Jon Taylor, they will probably tell you he is as patient as he is funny.

"It's been too long," former College of Southern Idaho coach and famed promoter Shawn Davis repeatedly told Taylor about getting his due for his contributions to the sport of rodeo.

On July 14, the timing was finally right. That's when Taylor was inducted into the Pro Rodeo Hall of Fame in Colorado Springs, Colo., along with saddle bronc riding brothers Billy and Robert Etbauer, radio personality Hal Littrell, three-time Horse of the Year Khadafy Skoal and the Dodge City Roundup.

"I never wrote a speech," Taylor said of his preparation for the induction ceremonies. "I talked from the heart."

Taylor spoke mostly about the people who gave him his biggest boost in the sport – stock contracter Cotton Rosser, South Dakota rodeo promoters Jim and Julie Sutfine handed down Monday by the NCAA won't be nearly enough to buy back Penn State's self-respect.

Sure, the punishment was extreme. It guts a proud program, and makes Saturdays in the fall a lot less pleasurable for alumni and the millions of fans who bought into the facade Joe Paterno created and believed the football factory wasn't just about winning but "Success With Honor."

But there's only so much Mark Emmert – the suddenly empowered NCAA president - can do. There's only so much anybody can do.

He can't turn back the clock to a time before a sexual predator, who Paterno and others did nothing to stop, roamed the campus and raped young boys in the locker room. He can't somehow wave a magic wand and declare that all is well again in State College.

And he can't even begin to try to repair the damage that was done to so many lives because grown men were more interested in protecting themselves and their university than children who needed their protection.

That the punishment was accepted so meekly and quickly by Penn State was an indication of how desperate the university is to find some way - any way to begin crawling out from the morass created by a monster and his eager enablers. There is no moving forward without falling on the sword, and the people who replaced the Paterno lemmings at Penn State seem to have figured that out.

The release of the Freeh report didn't just cement public opinion against the university; it sparked far greater outrage. Ultimately, it gave Emmert the backing he needed in the byzantine NCAA - where power is but a fleeting thought - to suspend the usual punishment process and level the draconian sanctions that do everything but shut down the program Paterno ran with impunity.

Taylor recalled how Rosser gave him his first opportunity as a barrelman in Idaho Falls, how the Suttons were "like a family to my family" and how Davis has been his biggest backer and promoter for one of rodeo's highest honors.

"I've been involved in a lot of inductions and I don't think there was a person more appreciative than Jon," Davis said. "It was great to see him recognized for what Please see TAYLOR, S2

NCAA Slams Penn State With Penalties

ASSOCIATED PRESS

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. The NCAA crippled Penn State football for years to come and practically tore Joe Paterno's name out of the record books Monday, erasing 14 years of victories and imposing an unprecedented $60 million fine and other punishment over the child sexual abuse scandal.

"Football will never again be placed ahead of educating, nurturing and protecting young people," NCAA President Mark Emmert declared in announcing the penalties.

The governing body of college sports shredded what was left of the Hall of Fame coach's legacy – the sanctions cost Paterno 111 wins and his standing as the most successful coach in the history of big-time college football - while dealing a severe blow to the university's gold-plated gridiron program.

for four years, slashed the number of scholarships it can award and placed football on probation, all of which will make it difficult for the Nittany Lions to compete at the sport's highest level.

Raising the specter of an exodus of athletes, the NCAA said current or incoming football players at Penn State are free to immediately transfer and compete at another school.

For a university that always claimed to hold itself to a higher standard - for decades, Paterno preached "success with honor" -Monday's announcement completed a stunning fall from grace.

Penn State meekly accepted its punishment, pledging to hold itself to high standards of honesty and integrity.

But Paterno's family said in a statement that the sanctions "defame the legacy and contributions of a great coach and educator." Echoing the complaints of many outraged and heartbroken Penn State fans, the family also criticized university leaders for accepting the punishment without insisting on a full investigation and hearing on the school's handling of the sexual abuse allegations against former coaching assistant Jerry Sandusky.

"This is not a fair or thoughtful action; it is a panicked response to the public's understandable revulsion at what Sandusky did," the family said.

the Hagerman School District's superintendent, Jones won't get to see the final bill. But he said when he ran the numbers, it was at least a $10,000 operation, with a significant portion of that coming from Idaho Milk er spectator's entrance.

James said the long-term idea is to turn the area with the old scoreboard into a batter's eye.

While the Tigers won't get to use their new scoreboard until March, the setup beyond the fence is already getting them enamored.

he had accomplished in rodeo."

From his start in Idaho Falls, Taylor went on to be the National Finals Rodeo barrelman three times, in 1974, 1979 and 1983, while serving as an alternate in two more years. Along with Ash Cooper, Taylor is the only barrelman to work both the NFR and Canadian National Finals Rodeo.

In 1979, Taylor was voted the Pro Rodeo Cowboy Association's Clown of the Year, which, according to his biography at the Pro Rodeo Hall of Fame, was "just like winning an Oscar or an Emmy." "Jon was cut out to be a clown," said Davis, who warned Taylor about preparing a speech.

That was merely in line for how Taylor "rehearsed" for rodeos.

"He can't rehearse anything," Davis said. "If he does, he'll mess it up. He's got that gift for what he's going to do. He can't plan it, he's just naturally good."

The connection between Taylor and Davis goes back over 40 years, from their days as participants to rodeo productions, both on the national scene and right here in Twin Falls and the region. Davis gave credit to Taylor for helping to make the CSI

"Shawn had always told me, 'It's been too long,' " Taylor said. "And I appreciated him for that."

Asked if there was a moment more special than the others, Taylor went away from the people he mentioned in his induction speech, focusing more on life on the road with his wife Dottie and son Drew, who was all of two weeks old the first time he went with his father to work at a rodeo in San Francisco's Cow Palace.

"I have to give thanks for them," Taylor said. "Sometimes it was a rocky road, but we made it."

Ichiro Suzuki waves to fans as he heads into the Yankees' dugout after briefly taking the field before a baseball game against the Seattle Mariners, the team for whom Ichiro played since 2001 until Monday, when he was traded to the Yankees.

MARINERS DEAL ICHIRO TO YANKEES

SEATTLE • Ichiro Suzuki is headed to a new team and, after all these years, maybe a shot at playing in the World Series.

The New York Yankees acquired the star outfielder from the Seattle Mariners in a trade Monday for two young pitchers.

"I am going from a team with the most losses to a team with the most wins," he said. "It's hard to contain my excitement for that reason."

The Yankees also got cash in the deal that sent 25-yearold righties D.J. Mitchell and Danny Farquhar to the lastplace Mariners. The trade was announced a few hours before the Yankees played at Seattle.

Moving from one clubhouse to another, Suzuki was set to start in right field in place of the injured Nick Swisher and bat eighth for New York on Monday night. ki started a game batting anywhere other than the top Fans at Safeco Field gave third inning. He doffed his base. The game had not finished as this edition of the Times-News went to press Monday evening.

The Yankees made the trade a few days after learning that the speedy Brett Gardner would likely miss the rest of the season because of an elbow problem, and manager Joe Girardi said Suzuiki will mostly play left field.

"We're very excited with the caliber of player we are getting. We feel that he brings the speed element. He's a tremendous hitter. That speed element is what we lost when Gardy had surgery," Girardi said. "So this is a big day for us."

Suzuki was given No. 31 because the number he wore his entire career with the Mariners, No. 51, has not been worn since four-time World Series champion Bernie Williams last played.

"No. 51 is a special number to me, but when I think about what 51 means to the Yankees, it's hard for me to ask for that number."

Mitchell made his major league debut this season and pitched four games for the Yankees. Farquhar made his big league debut last year with Toronto and

NEW YORK • Bryce Harper homered his first time up in New York, then hit a tiebreaking single to key a six-run burst in the 10th inning Monday night that sent the Washington Nationals over the Mets 8-2.

Shortstop Ruben Tejada's error on a potential double-play ball set up the big 10th. Ryan Zimmerman hit a three-run double and Michael Morse added a two-run homer as the NL East-leading Nationals broke away.

CUBS 2, PIRATES 0

PITTSBURGH • Jeff Samardzija gave up one hit over eight innings and Alfonso Soriano hit two runscoring doubles as Chicago cooled off Pittsburgh.

Samardzija allowed only a fourth-inning infield single to Andrew McCutchen, the leading hitter in the majors with a .373 average. The ball ricocheted off Samardzija.

PHILLIES 7, BREWERS 6

PHILADELPHIA • Ty Wigginton hit a sacrifice fly to cap a four-run rally in the ninth inning against Francisco Rodriguez that lifted Philadelphia over Milwaukee.

MARLINS 2, BRAVES 1

MIAMI • Josh Johnson pitched six scoreless innings and Emilio Bonifacio homered to lead Miami over Atlanta.

AMERICAN LEAGUE

WHITE SOX 7, TWINS 4 CHICAGO • Adam Dunn hit his majors-leading 29th homer, Gavin Floyd went six innings after coming off the disabled list and Chicago ended a five-game losing streak.

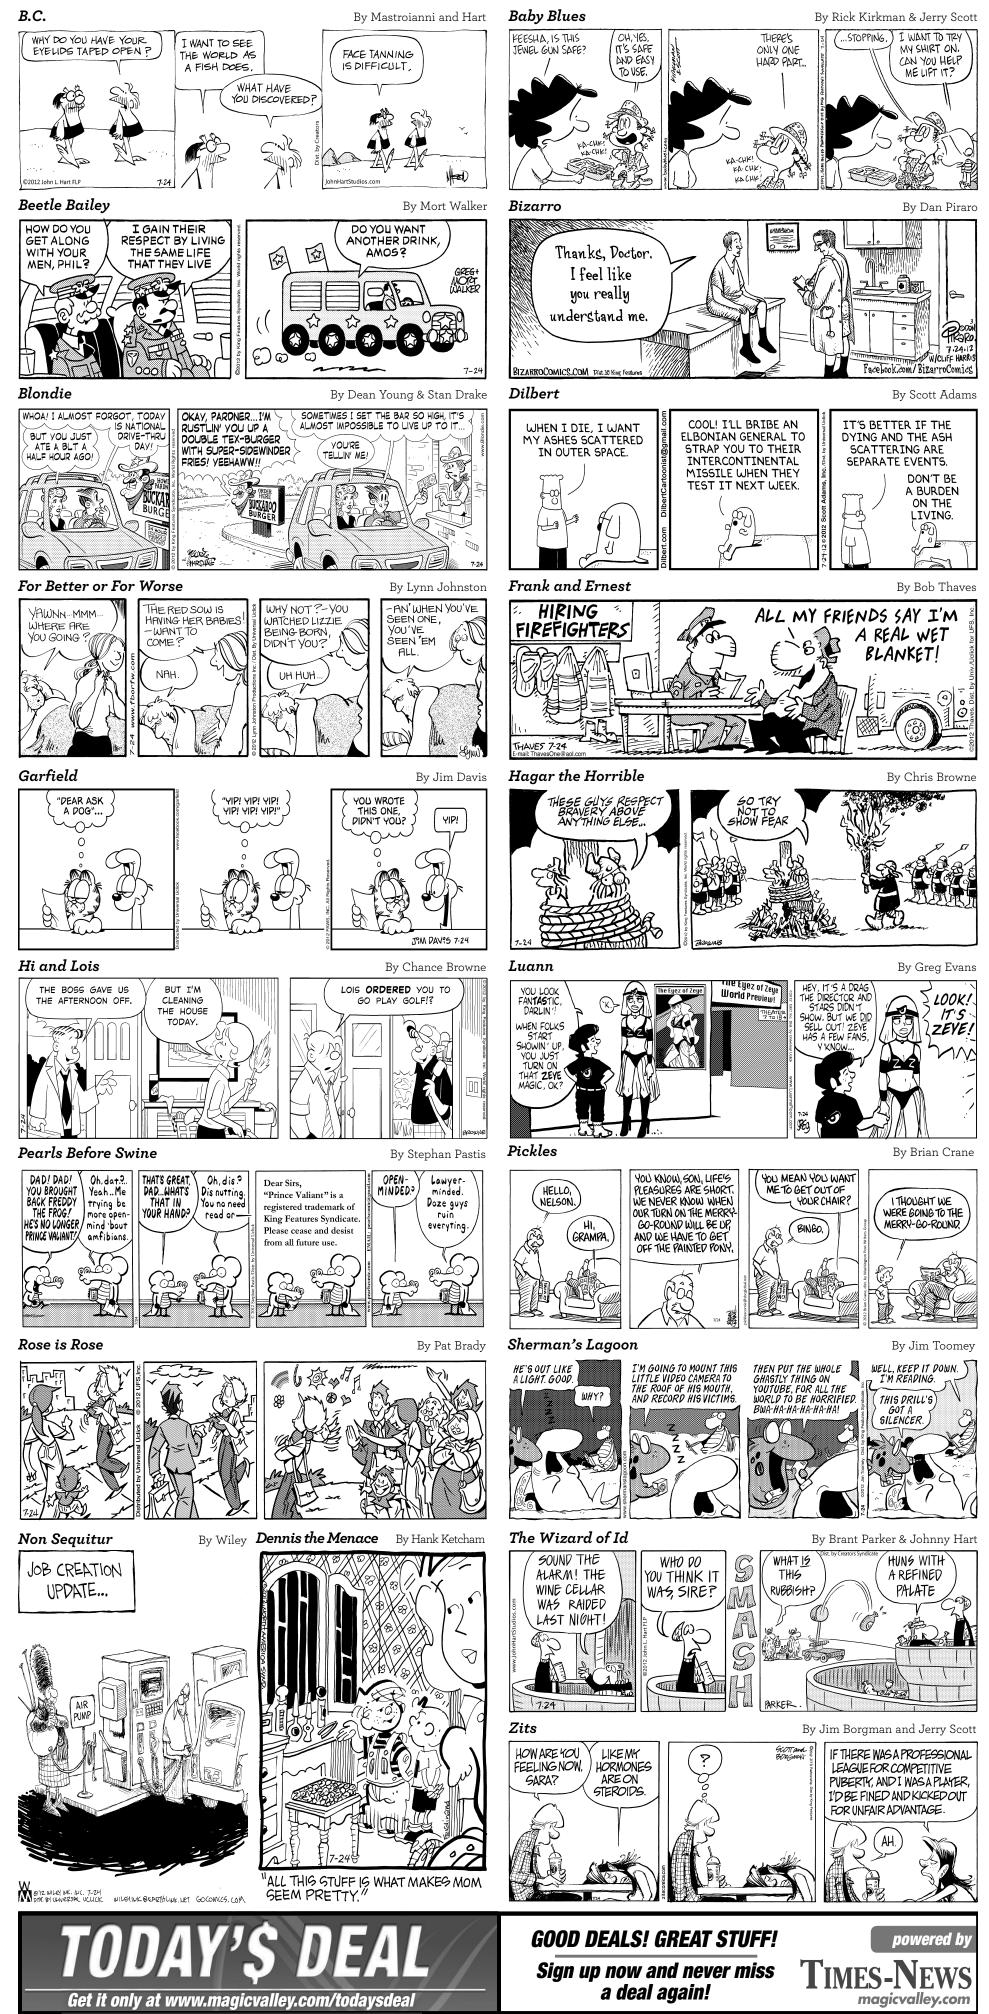

Paul Konerko and Alex Rios also homered off Twins left-hander Francisco Liriano (3-10) to help the White Sox win in their first home game following a 3-7 road trip after the All-Star break that knocked them out of first place in the AL Central.

RANGERS 9, RED SOX 1 ARLINGTON, Texas • Scott Feldman, starting after Roy Oswalt was scratched with back tightness, threw seven strong innings to lead Texas to a victory over Boston.

reflect "the magnitude of these terrible acts" and also "ensure that Penn State will rebuild an athletic culture that went horribly awry."

He said the NCAA considered imposing the "death penalty," or a complete shutdown of the football program for a season or more, but decided to keep Penn State in the fold so that it could begin transforming a culture in which football played an outsized role. The NCAA also worried about the unintended consequences of a complete ban, he said.

"Suspension of the foot-

Penn State Penalties

Notable sanctions handed down by the NCAA to Penn State and its football program, with a brief comment on each by Times-News sports editor Patrick Sheltra

$60 MILLION FINE AND LOSS OF BOWL REVENUE

The NCAA imposed this because it is roughly equivalent to a year of gross revenue from the football program. It will be paid over a five-year period. The money will go to an endowment for "programs preventing child sexual abuse and/or assisting the victims of child sexual abuse." The NCAA specified that Penn State cannot cut other sports programs or scholarships to pay this penalty. The bowl revenue amounts to about $13 million over four years and will be similarly used.

Sheltra: There had to be a significant financial penalty levied, although some will argue that no amount of money could set this matter right. Hopefully, the results of these fines will help satisfy the intent for which it is to be used.

ball program would bring with it significant unintended harm to many who had nothing to do with this case," Emmert said. "The sanctions we have crafted are more focused and impactful than that blanket penalty?

Sandusky, a former member of Paterno's coaching staff, was found guilty in June of sexually abusing 10 boys over 15 years, sometimes on campus. An investigation commissioned by the school and released July 12 found that Paterno, who died of lung cancer in January at age 85, and three other top officials at Penn State concealed accusations against Sandusky to shield the school from bad publicity.

The sanctions came a day after the school took down a statue of Paterno that stood outside Beaver Stadium.

NCAA executive committee chair and Oregon State University president, looks on at right, during a news conference in Indianapolis. Gov. Tom Corbett expressed gratitude that Penn State escaped the death penalty, saying it would have had a "severe detrimental impact on the citizens of State College, Centre County and the entire commonwealth of Pennsylvania."

A drop-off in attendance and revenue could damage both the university, where the powerhouse football team is a moneymaker that subsidizes other sports, and the region as a whole, where Saturday afternoon football at Penn State is an important part of the economy.

But given Penn State's famously ardent fans and generous benefactors, the precise economic impact on Penn State and Happy Valley, as the surrounding area is known, remains unclear.

Separately, the Big Ten announced that Penn State will not be allowed to share in the conference's bowl revenue during the NCAA's postseason ban, an estimated loss of about $13 million.

Emmert fast-tracked the penalties rather than go through the usual circuitous series of investigations and hearings. The NCAA said the $60 million is equivalent to the annual gross revenue of the football program. The money will go toward outside programs devoted to preventing child sexual abuse or assisting victims.

VACATED WINS NCAA President Mark Emmert, left, announces penalties against Penn State as Ed Ray,

Every Penn State win from 1998-2011 has been vacated. This means Joe Paterno no longer has the record for most coaching wins in major college football. He loses 111 wins and the school loses 112 - theNittany Lions beat Ohio State last season after Paterno was fired Nov. 9. Vacated wins are not the same as forfeits — they don't count as losses or wins for either school.

Sheltra: In the big picture this is a petty item but one that had to be done, both for the health of the game and to reduce the mentality that winning is everything in college sports.

LOSS OF 20 SCHOLARSHIPS A SEASON FOR FOUR YEARS

For next season and through the 2016 season, Penn State can only sign 15 recruits a year. Most teams can sign 25. Starting with the 2014 season, the Nittany Lions can only have 65 players on scholarship until after the 2017 season. The usual scholarship limit for major college teams is 85.

Sheltra: Short of the death penalty, this is the ultimate hammer being brought down on Penn State. What's worse, no football or bad football? If you've ever traded a Seattle Seahawks or Idaho Vandals game for another weekend getaway, the answer might come easily. From a personnel standpoint Penn State will be operating with rosters better suited for the Big Sky Conference than it will the Big 10.

WAIVER OF TRANSFER RULES

Players are released from their commitment to Penn State and immediately eligible to transfer without having to sit out a year. Additionally, football players who wish to continue their education without playing football may keep their scholarships as long as they remain academic requirements.

Sheltra: The players can read the writing on the wall and many will not sacrifice their collegiate careers in an attempt to keep afloat a sinking ship. It could be argued that those who don't are merely buying into the same culture at Penn State that created this mess in the first place. The rallying cries from current and former players are myopic and uncaring.

FOUR-YEAR POSTSEASON BAN

Penn State can't play in a bowl game, the Big Ten championship game, or the college football playoff for the national championship until after the 2016 season

Sheltra: A punishment with more teeth would have been for Penn State to be bowl ineligible in years in which it actually qualifies for a bowl game. Think of the postseason ban as a concurrent sentence – it's highly unlikely that Penn State will even be eligible for a bowl game through 2016.

Dahlberg

community that will pay the price is the same one that for many years enjoyed all the benefits of a big-time college team.

Even the NCAA, which long ago abdicated control of college football to the television networks and big conferences, couldn't mess this one up. The outcry was too strong and, for most people, no punishment could be too great. I found that out last week when I urged Emmert to hit Penn State with at least six years of sanctions, only to be innundated with emails from people who claimed even that was not nearly enough.

Argue about the semantics of the so-called death penalty if you want, but this punishment is just as bad. The money is nothing – even with the additional loss of $13 million a year in bowl revenue-sharing from the Big10 because the coffers at Penn State are overflowing. Any shortage will surely be remedied by wealthy alumni. But the combination of a fouryear bowl ban, scholarship losses and the waiver of transfer rules means the football team will find it awfully hard to win more than a few games a year with players who previously never would have gotten offers to play for the Nittany Lions.

The whole thing is sickening, so wrenching that any sympathy we once felt for Paterno is long gone. He may have been an octogenarian, but he was still so all powerful that he dictated terms of his multimilliondollar buyout even as the scandal was still unfolding. Unfortunately, for those who still glorify him, the images over the weekend of his statue being removed will prove even more indelible than those of him prowling the sidelines in his oversized dark glasses.

What happened at Penn State is a cautionary tale for any program so wrapped up in the success of a coach that people begin to deify him.

If there is anything good to come out of the whole sordid mess it's that Emmert finally got a chance to act like a real leader in college athletics rather than a figurehead for the big schools and conferences who keep him in power. That's important because the NCAA's own lack of institutional control over its member schools – allowing them to function as quasi pro teams – has contributed to a culture at many major universities where the coaches are more powerful than the school administrators.

By throwing out all Penn

State victories from 1998 to

2011, the NCAA stripped

Paterno of the top spot in the record book. The governing body went all the tive report, that is the year

ed with 298.

Give Emmert a big college cheer for acting quickly, and dispensing justice harshly. It was a bold stroke that, combined with the Sandusky verdict and the removal of the statue in State College, may finally bring down the cult of Joe for good.

It won't do anything for Sandusky's victims, but it's a step toward regaining control of college football.

And maybe someday that could be the enduring legacy of the whole scandal.

Sports 8 · Tuesday, July 24, 2012

Today is Tuesday, July 24, the 206th day of 2012. There are 160 days left in the year. Today's Highlight:

On July 24, 1862, Martin Van Buren, the eighth president of the United States, and the first to have been born a U.S. citizen, died at age 79 in Kinderhook, N.Y., the town where he was born in 1782.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:

In 1783, Latin American revolutionary Simon Bolivar was born in Caracas.

In 1847, Mormon leader Brigham Young and his followers arrived in the Great Salt Lake Valley in present day Utah.

In 1866, Tennessee became the first state to be readmitted to the Union after the Civil War.

In 1911, Yale University history professor Hiram Bingham III found the "Lost City of the Incas," Machu Picchu, in Peru.

In 1923, the Treaty of Lausanne, which settled the boundaries of modern Turkey, was concluded in Switzerland.

In 1937, the state of Alabama dropped charges against four of the nine young black men accused of raping two white women in the "Scottsboro Case."

In 1952, President Harry S. Truman announced a settlement in a 53-day steel strike.

In 1959, during a visit to Moscow, Vice President Richard Nixon engaged in his famous "Kitchen Debate" with Soviet leader Nikita Khrushchev.

In 1969, the Apollo 11 astronauts - two of whom had been the first men to set foot on the moon - splashed down safely in the Pacific.

In 1974, the Supreme Court unanimously ruled that President Richard Nixon had to turn over subpoenaed White House tape recordings to the Watergate special prosecutor.

In 1983, a two-run homer by George Brett of the Kansas City Royals was disallowed after New York Yankees manager Billy Martin pointed out there was too much pine tar on Brett's bat. However, American League president Lee MacPhail reinstated the home run. (The game was completed Aug. 18, 1983 with the Royals beating the Yankees, 5-4.)

In 1987. Hulda Crooks, a 91-year-old mountaineer

THE ACES ON BR

"I presume you're mortal and may err." — James Shirley

Today's deal comes from Jeff Rubens and Robert Ewen's "It's All in the Game," a compendium of articles written over the last bridge editor. Here is Rubens explaining a hand to his wife: "There will be a lot of competitive bidding on this deal," Rubens said, "but the player with the spades will usually prevail. Suppose South buys the contract in five spades. East has bid hearts vigorously, and the defense starts with two rounds of that suit, South ruffing."

50 years by the world's foremost

"It's a laydown. South trumps the losing diamond in dummy."

"Well, it's not quite that simple. East has a singleton diamond and will trump the second diamond."

"That's peeking. I would have gone down."

"What South should do is play just one round of trump before he goes after the diamonds. As luck would have it, this extracts East's only trump and the contract rolls home. The incomplete trump removal is an interesting theme, and if this deal popped up (as it did at the club this afternoon), you could send it in to the papers if it had been played correctly."

"Was it played correctly?"

"Yes, but not at five spades. North-South tried to mess up the story by doubling East in five hearts. South led the diamond king and switched to the spade king and ace. East ruffed, cashed one round of hearts, and was then able to trump his losing club safely in dummy. So the incomplete trump removal showed up anyway. That's what I mean about things straightening themselves out."

ANSWER: I may not be in line with modern thinking, but my answer would vary here depending on the vulnerability. I would open this hand three diamonds if nonvulnerable, though I would understand passing if vulnerable. My partners would expect a better suit for a three-level pre-empt. If it is not good enough to open at the threelevel, I would pass, rather than open two diamonds.

from California, became the oldest woman to conquer Mount Fuji, Japan's highest peak.

Ten years ago: Nine coal miners became trapped in a flooded tunnel of the Quecreek Mine in western Pennsylvania; the story ended happily 77 hours later with the rescue of all nine. The House, by a vote of 420-1, expelled Rep. James Traficant, D-Ohio, who'd been convicted of bribery, racketeering and tax evasion; it was only the second time a sitting member had been banished since the Civil War.

Five years ago: President George W. Bush, speaking at Charleston Air Force Base in South Carolina, sought to justify the Iraq war by citing intelligence reports he said showed a link between al-Qaida's operation in Iraq and the terror group that attacked the United States on Sept. 11, 2001. A grand jury in New Orleans refused to indict Dr. Anna Pou (poh), who was accused of murdering four seriously ill hospital patients wth drug injections during the desperate aftermath of Hurricane Katrina. Five Bulgarian nurses and a Palestinian doctor, sentenced to life in prison in Libya for allegedly infecting children with HIV, were released after 81/2 years behind bars. The U.S. minimum wage rose 70 cents to $5.85 an hour, the first increase in a decade.

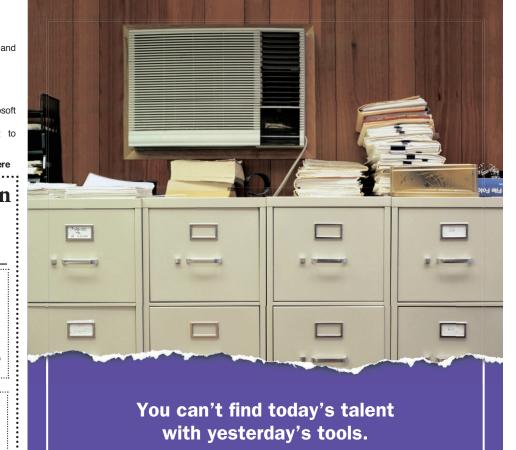

One year ago: Thousands of protesters angry about Spain's brutal economic woes once again filled Madrid's downtown Sol square after many had spent weeks marching hundreds of miles from far-flung cities across the country. DEAR ABBY: I was glad to see the letter you printed from "Fine With My Decision" (April 22). I placed a baby boy for adoption when I was 16. My parents were bitterly disappointed and sent me out of state. But despite my somewhat immature and rebellious nature, I was - and remain - glad my parents made me do the right thing.

In the years since, there has been a trend toward "open adoptions" and emotional reunions between birth mothers and adoptees who were separated under the "closed system." I think open adoption is probably healthier for everyone except in cases of rape, incest or abuse/neglect.

If the child I gave birth to were to come looking for me, I feel that's his right and I wouldn't turn him away. But I have never felt a desire to look for him. His birth was not a happy event in my life, and I don't care to revisit that chapter. I don't regard him as my son. The people who raised him are his parents, not the green kid who got herself in trouble.

I'm somewhat younger than the girls who gave up babies from the 1940s to 1960s, so I didn't get the "keep it a deep dark secret" advice. I also don't feel I was unfairly coerced. I was 16 and couldn't support a child. When I think of how my life would have been if I'd kept him, I'm sure I did the right thing.

Thanks for writing, "Fine With My Decision." You've got company in me, and I'm sure there are plenty more of us out there.

- FINE WITH MY DECISION, TOO DEAR FINE TOO: Your letter expresses the sentiments of many women who responded, as I knew they would. Their comments:

DEAR ABBY: I gave up my daughter when I was 20. I have thought about her many times, but have no other feelings than hoping she's OK. I gave her up because I knew I wasn't ready for motherhood. I never married and have no other children.

I have enjoyed my life. I wish my daughter, wherever she is, the best, and I hope her life has been great. I'd love to meet her someday, to be sure she's all right, but if it never happens, that's OK, too.

Some people are born without that "mother" instinct, and it's best they not have children they really don't want. Too many people become parents because they think it's the thing to do, and the children suffer.

- SINGLE AND HAPPY DEAR ABBY: I'm an adoptee and while our situations are not the same, I can assure the woman who wrote you that she's not a "freak." I applaud her honesty about her feelings and appreciate her willingness to give her child the chance to connect with biological relatives who do want a relationship. The support groups she has encountered exist because people who regret their decisions need support. It's not likely there would be groups for people who don't feel that sense of regret.

In my case, I was conceived because my birth parents wanted to make money. They were ahead of their time, shall we say, in terms of surrogate parenthood. I wish I could have met them, but both died long before I began my search.

Achieving adulthood for me was the realization that no matter how we start out, in the long run, our lives are our responsibility. I hope "Fine" stops beating herself up and uses that energy to nurture the relationships she does have, including the one she has with herself.

WARNING

When purchasing a vehicle, make sure that the title is in the name of the seller. Under Idaho motor vehicle code a vehicle cannot be sold unless the title is in the name of the seller (exception: Idaho licensed dealer). The seller shall provide the new purchaser a signed bill of sale showing the following: Full description of the vehicle, vehicle identification number amount paid and name(s) and address of the new purchaser. The bill of sale must be signed, dated and show actual mileage at the time of sale. If you have any questions, please contact your local assessor's office.
