MAN WHO FELL AT PILLAR FALLS IDENTIFIED

TIMES-NEWS

TWIN FALLS • A man who is presumed to have drowned after falling into the Snake River near Pillar Falls Saturday has been identified.

Twin Falls County Sheriff's Office spokeswoman Lori Stewart said 42-year-old Justice Kramer of Graham, Wash., was hiking at about 9:30 p.m. Saturday with his daughter and her son when he slipped on the rocks and went into the water.

Crews were searching until 12:30 a.m. Sunday and again from day-break until dark Sunday without finding him and are out again this morning, Stewart said.

"Hopefully we get him today," she said.

Pillar Falls is about a half mile east of the Perrine Bridge.

Foregone Balances Gives Towns Another Funding Option

BY MELISSA DAVLIN
mdavlin@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • Each fiscal year, Idaho taxing districts are allowed to raise their tax rates a maximum of 3 percent.

But a handful of those districts have the option of going above that limit. Idaho tax law allows districts that have not raised taxes by 3 percent to collect the amounts they passed up. As officials are putting together their budgets for next year, not all take advantage of that option, however.

A foregone balance is the difference between what taxing districts are allowed to levy and what they actually levy, explained Gary Houde, senior research analyst with the Idaho State Tax Commission.

If officials decide not to collect the maximum tax rate, the difference — the foregone balance — is set aside.

Don't think of it as savings or reserve money, as the taxpayers haven't yet paid it.

But if a county, city or other taxing entity wants to take advantage of its foregone balance in a coming fiscal year, it can raise taxes past the maximum 3 percent, collecting some or all of that set-aside amount.

Currently, 29 Idaho counties and 98 cities have foregone balances, Houde said. Those range from substantial amounts — $16.8 million in Ada County — to negligible figures as small as one or two bucks, like in Elmore and Jerome counties.

Panel Discusses Health Care Reform Impacts for Idaho

BY KIMBERLEE KRUESI
kkruesi@magicvalley.com

BOISE • Weeks after the U.S. Supreme Court decided to uphold contested elements of the health care reform law, Idaho lawmakers are now facing the difficult task of how to move forward.

On Monday, a 14-member panel met in Boise to hear more about the questions Idaho must answer in the upcoming months. States have until Nov. 16 to submit their exchange plans.

The critical components of the Affordable Care Act require states to decide if they will expand Medicaid's eligibility requirements and if they should implement some sort of insurance exchange.

For Idaho, these decisions force lawmakers to work with a law they have adamantly opposed since it passed in 2010. Highlights of Idaho's rocky relationship with the law include Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter suing the federal government for passing the law and legislators refusing to accept the $20 million offered from the feds to help fund the exchange.

"We're looking for ways to keep the federal government out of people's decision when it comes to health care," said Sen. Dean Cameron, co-chair of the Senate-House health care task force, during a meeting Monday in Boise.

In just a few months, Idaho must submit a proposal on how it will go about setting up an exchange. The online marketplace would allow individuals to shop and compare health insurance coverage, an option currently unavailable for consumers.

States have three options when it comes to setting up an exchange. 1) Create and manage a state-run exchange; 2) Let the federal government develop and control the exchange; 3) Come up with some sort of partnership that splits the responsibilities of the exchange with the federal government.

Trans IV rider Sadie Thornton jokes with driver Debbie Woodard as she departs the bus Monday for a doctor's appointment in Twin Falls.

Putting Away the Keys

BY ALISON GENE SMITH

TWIN FALLS • Giving up her car was one of the hardest things Sadie Thornton had to do. When her eyesight deteriorated due to complications from diabetes, Thornton had more than 25 laser eye surgeries to try to fix the damage, but eventually retired early at age 63. After that, she decided to stop driving and gave up her driver's license in 2004.

Driving, which she once enjoyed, had become scary.

"I'd drive downtown and be a nervous wreck," she said.

When she lived in Virginia, Thornton would regularly get up at 3 a.m. and drive to Maine for visits with her daughter. With the loss of her sight, she was suddenly faced with relying on friends for simple trips to the grocery store or the doctor.

"I didn't know what I was going to do," she said. "Thank goodness for lots of friends."

According to Jeff Stratten, manager of the Office of Communications at the Idaho Transportation Department, 784 people voluntarily gave up their driver's licenses from January to June this year for medical reasons. Not all of them are seniors, he said.

"They could be younger people with diabetes or some other issue," he said.

On Monday, Thornton rode a Trans IV bus to a doctor's appointment at St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center. She's getting another ride today for a visual impairment support group and she has another appointment on Thursday, she said. Though this is a busy week, Thornton said she sometimes goes several weeks without needing the bus service.

Promise in the Air at Minidoka Fair

RUPERT • A cool breeze Monday at the Minidoka County Fair delivered the promise of blue ribbons and hot buttered corn as children dressed in cowboy hats and precisely pressed western shirts paced nervously, waiting for a turn with a 4-H interview judge.

"I get a little nervous before the interview," said Staci Branaum, 18, who has been in 4-H for five years.

Branaum, who raised two pigs this year, said to combat jittery interview nerves she makes a copy of her record book before turning it in so she can study it the night before.

"This is my last year in 4-H and it's going to be really hard to leave it."

The interview process allows the 4-Her to tell the judges anything "extra about their projects or any special circumstances that happened with their animals," she said.

Nearby, helpful moms ferried cages of pampered-looking bunnies and roosters to spots where they'll remain for the week while other parents lent a hand hanging their youngster's 4-H pen decorations.

Seven-year-old Essence Crown sat in the shade under the pavilion and wrapped her arms around her dog, Ellie — laying her head on her golden coat as she waited for her chance at a blue ribbon.

Gardeners strode to the open class flower booth, nearly hidden behind armloads of their best bounty.

Higher Tax Rate Means Paying Less for Residents

PBY KIMBERLEE KRUESI
kkruesi@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • Twin Falls' property tax rate may be going up but that doesn't necessarily mean people will pay more.

During Monday's Twin Falls City Council special meeting, city officials discussed how it would react to an unexpected decrease in its projected revenue for the upcoming fiscal year.

Twin Falls County surprised the city when it decided to change how it assesses property values. City officials use estimated property tax values in their budget planning to determine how much revenue they will collect each year.

Instead of assessing 20 percent of the county's properties, the county assessed everything, said Travis Rothweiler, city manager. After collecting the data, the county reduced property values across the board by 10 percent.

Scrambling to make up for the loss in revenue, Rothweiler explained that increasing the property tax rate will even out the deficit. The new proposal would require paying $7.66 per $1,000 of taxable value.

However, don't let the higher number fool you.

Tax payers won't see an increase in how much they pay. Instead, it's likely they'll pay even less next year, Rothweiler said.

For example, a home valued at $96,000 during fiscal year 2011-2012 is now valued at a little over $85,601. If you qualify for the homeowners' exemption, you'll pay $5.07 less in taxes per year.

"The values are decreasing faster than the tax rate is going up," Rothweiler said.

Unfortunately for commercial properties, the higher tax rate will probably result in a slightly higher amount they'll pay to the city. But that will be determined by how much the property was improved.

"We could see a three to five percent increase for commercial but we don't know for sure at this time," Rothweiler said.

Council members were receptive to the new budget strategy but because Monday was a special meeting, no decision was made.

"I still feel comfortable with this budget," said Councilwoman Rebecca Mills-Sojka.

FIREFIGHTERS PULLED BACK FROM CENTRAL IDAHO BLAZE

BOISE (AP) • Firefighters were pulled back from a small but dangerous wildfire burning northwest of Stanley in central Idaho, where several campgrounds have been evacuated.

The 60-acre blaze in the Frank Church-River of No Return Wilderness has also prompted the closure of Forest Service roads and a boy scout camp north of Idaho Highway 21.

Authorities deemed the blaze too dangerous to fight from the ground Monday and firefighters were withdrawn. Crews continued dumping water from above while also clearing possible fire fuels along Beaver Creek Road in an effort to contain the blaze.

Newest Bible Translation Has Screenplay Format

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) • A new Bible translation tackles the challenge of turning ancient Greek and Hebrew texts into modern American English and then adds a twist: It's written like a screenplay.

Take the passage from Genesis in which God gets angry at Adam for eating the forbidden fruit from the tree of knowledge of good and evil:

"Adam (pointing at the woman): It was she! The woman You gave me as a companion put the fruit in my hands, and I ate it.

"God (to the woman): What have you done?"

"Eve: It was the serpent! He tricked me, and I ate."

Later, Eve bears her first son, Cain.

"Eve (excited): Look, I have created a new human, a male child, with the help of the Eternal."

Even people who have never read the Bible could probably guess that other translations don't say Adam pointed his finger at Eve when he blamed her for his disobedience. Neither do other Bibles describe Eve as "excited" about her newborn son. That's pure Hollywood, but the team behind "The Voice" says it isn't a gimmick. They hope this new version will help readers understand the meaning behind the sometimes archaic language of the Bible and enjoy the story enough to stick with it.

The idea was a longtime dream of Chris Seay, pastor of Houston's Ecclesia Church. Seay had had success in helping church members relate to the Bible by dividing out the parts of the various speakers and assigning roles to church members who read them aloud.

Post Office Nears Historic Default

WASHINGTON (AP) • The U.S. Postal Service is bracing for a first-ever default on billions in payments due to the Treasury, adding to widening uncertainty about the mail agency's solvency as first-class letters plummet and Congress deadlocks on ways to stem the red ink.

With cash running perilously low, two legally required payments for future postal retirees' health benefits — $5.5 billion due Wednesday, and another $5.6 billion due in September — will be left unpaid, the mail agency said Monday. Postal officials said they also are studying whether they may need to delay other obligations. In the coming months, a $1.5 billion payment is due to the Labor Department for workers compensation, which for now it expects to make, as well as millions in interest payments to the Treasury.

The defaults won't stir any kind of catastrophe in day-to-day mail service. Post offices will stay open, mail trucks will run, employees will get paid and current retirees will get health benefits.

But a growing chorus of analysts, labor unions and business customers are troubled by continuing losses that point to deeper, longer-term financial damage, as the mail agency finds it increasingly preoccupied with staving off immediate bankruptcy while Congress delays on a postal overhaul bill.

Postmaster General Patrick Donahoe described a "crisis of confidence" amid the mounting red ink that could lead even once-loyal customers to abandon use of the mail.

"I think for my generation it was a great asset — if you had a letter or package and you needed it to get up to the North Pole, you knew it would be delivered," said Jim Husa, 87, of Lawrence, Mich., after stopping to mail letters recently at his local post office. Noting the mail agency's financial woes, he added: "Times have changed, and we old-timers know that. FedEx and UPS and the Internet seem to be making the Postal Service obsolete."

Banks are promoting electronic payments, citing in part the growing uncertainty of postal mail.

The federal government will stop mailing paper checks starting next year for millions of people who receive Social Security and other benefits, paying via direct deposit or debit cards instead.

First-class mail volume, which has fallen 25 percent since 2006, is projected to drop another 30 percent by 2016.

Holmes Faces 142 Charges

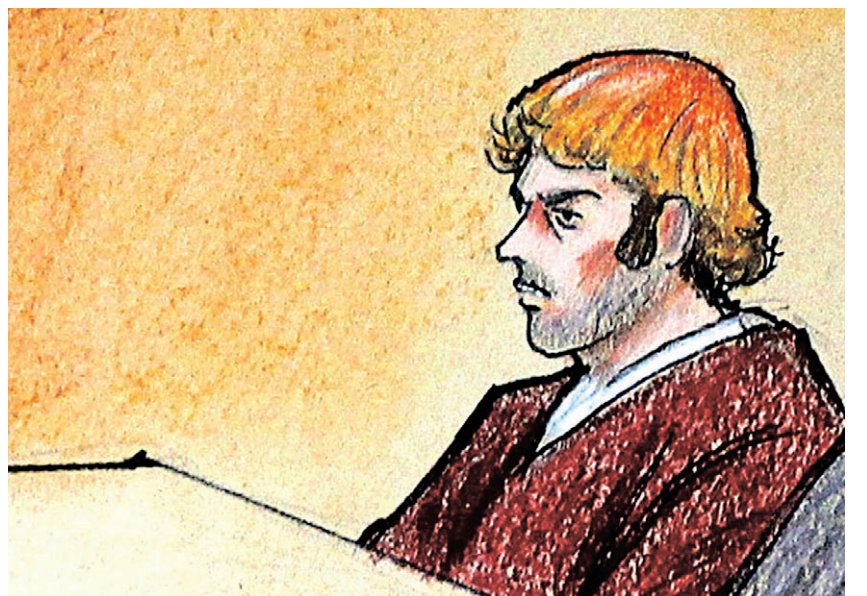

The Colorado shooting suspect's list of charges includes 24 for first-degree murder.

BY JENNA JOHNSON
The Washington Post

CENTENNIAL, Colo. • Prosecutors on Monday filed 142 charges including 24 for first-degree murder against James Holmes, the former graduate student who is accused of killing 12 people and injuring 58 during a shooting spree at an Aurora, Colo., movie theater July 20.

In addition to first-degree murder, Holmes was charged with 116 counts of attempted murder, one count of using a deadly weapon in commission of a violent crime and one count of possession of explosive devices. The murder charges carry a minimum penalty of life in prison and a maximum of death.

For each of the 12 people killed, Holmes faces two charges of first-degree murder, one for acting after deliberation and with intent, the other for acting with malice and having "an extreme indifference to the value of human life." Holmes was charged with two counts of attempted first-degree murder for each of the 58 injured.

In this courtroom sketch, suspect James Holmes sits in district court Monday in Centennial, Colo. Holmes was charged Monday with 24 counts of murder and 116 counts of attempted murder.

The charging document also lists, for the first time, the names of all the victims of the attack.

Holmes, 24, has been in police custody for 10 days, but prosecutors had delayed charging him as investigators and police continued their probe. Police have described the shooting rampage, which occurred during a midnight showing of the new Batman film "The Dark Knight Rises," as a methodical attack that took months of planning, during which Holmes purchased weapons and stockpiled other materials.

Free Syrian Army soldiers gather Sunday at the border town of Azaz, some 20 miles north of Aleppo, Syria.

BUKULMEZ, Turkey (AP) • Smoking a cigarette outside a Turkish hospital near the Syrian border, a man in a gray gown and flip-flops held his sleeping 2-year-old daughter, Aya. On Aya's right eye was a bandage. In her left hand was a chocolate bar.

Aya lost her eye when she was struck by shrapnel from a shell that also killed her 8-month-old brother, Mohammad, and their mother. The father and daughter were among some 200,000 people who the U.N. said late Sunday have fled Syria's largest city, Aleppo, during days of clashes between rebels and the military.

Aleppo residents, some severely wounded, are packing up belongings and loading them onto cars, trucks and even motorcycles to seek temporary shelter in rural villages and schools outside the city and dusty tents across the border in Turkey.

In interviews with The Associated Press, refugees described a city besieged by government troops and beset by incessant shelling. Food supplies and gasoline are running low and black market prices for everyday staples are soaring.

As the violence intensified, the country's most senior diplomat in London defected. Khaled al-Ayoubi is the latest in a string of high-profile diplomats to abandon Bashar Assad's regime over a crackdown that, according to rights activists, killed more than 19,000 people since March 2011.

The battle for Aleppo, a city of 3 million that was once a bastion of support for Assad, is critical for both the regime and the opposition. Its fall would give the opposition a major strategic victory with a stronghold in the north. Activists said regime forces were shelling rebel-held districts of the city and a cluster of surrounding villages relentlessly on Monday, sending entire families and panicked residents fleeing.

Conservatives Target Moderate Republicans

TOPEKA, Kan. (AP) • Frustrated by their inability to achieve some policy goals, conservatives in Republican states are turning against moderates in their own party, trying to drive them out of state legislatures.

Political groups are helping finance the efforts by supporting primary election challenges targeting several dozen moderate Republicans in the Midwest and South, especially prominent lawmakers who run key state committees.

Two years after Republicans swept into power, the challengers say it's time to adopt more conservative policies.

"If you don't believe in that playbook, then why are you on the team?" declared Greg Smith, a Kansas state representative who's running for the state Senate. The push is most intense in Kansas, where conservatives are attempting to replace a dozen moderate Republican senators who bucked new Gov. Sam Brownback's move to slash state income taxes.

The Club for Growth, a major conservative interest group, is spending about $500,000 in Missouri this year. That's double the amount it invested two years ago. The anti-tax group Americans for Prosperity opened new chapters in Iowa, Minnesota and New Mexico. The conservative business group Texans for Lawsuit Reform spent $3.5 million on legislative candidates in the first half of 2012, more than double its total during the same period two years ago.

Study: Older Workers Take Longer to Find Jobs

BY STEVE KADEL
skadel@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • Every unsuccessful job-seeker wants to know why they were passed over when someone else gets the position.

Older Idahoans usually have a hunch what happened: Their gray hair could have been a factor.

A recent survey by a Boise research firm found that older workers take significantly longer than younger people to find a job. Once they are unemployed, those 50 and older average 55 weeks without work, compared to 35 weeks for younger applicants.

That was one of the findings in a nationwide survey conducted by GS Strategy Group at the request of AARP.

"If Idahoans 50 and older are anything like their counterparts across the nation, we know age discrimination is likely something going through their minds when they receive a rejection letter to their job application," said David Irwin, director of communications for AARP in Idaho.

Jack Gilson of Twin Falls is among those who believe age is preventing them from getting jobs they're convinced they could perform. Gilson, 60, gets temporary work through Personnel Plus but can't land a full-time position.

"I put in applications and pass all the tests, but they never get back to you," he said. "I've worked all my life and never had trouble holding down a job."

He wants to be a permanent maintenance man for a hotel or factory, and said he has three years of work at the College of Southern Idaho in a plumbing course. With one more year, Gilson said, he'd qualify for journeyman status.

He says it's frustrating to be turned down again and again.

"I can still work and work hard," he said. "I can outwork most of the 20-year-old kids. It's rough out there finding steady work, but I know what it takes to get the job done."

In 2009, a U.S. Supreme Court ruling made it more difficult for workers to prove age discrimination, according to AARP. The group's survey found overwhelming support for bipartisan legislation to fight age discrimination when it comes to hiring and other workplace issues.

Among the findings in AARP's report:

- Sixteen percent of respondents who were retired said they had to return to work for economic reasons.
- Only 29 percent said they feel close to having enough money to retire.
- Nine of 10 respondents said older Americans must work longer to save money for retirement.

Please see AGE, A6

Keep Up-to-date

It's difficult for older job applicants to prove they weren't hired because of age. But AARP has some suggestions that could help improve their chances.

Revising a resume to reflect accomplishments is better than a chronological listing of education and employment, the organization says.

Also, it's important to keep up-to-date in your field by attending seminars and following industry trends.

Embracing social media such as Facebook and Twitter can help with networking as well as being another skill to list on a resume.

Finally, AARP recommends in-depth researching of the company you're applying to. Showing a knowledge of the firm's history, accomplishments and goals can help impress potential employers.

Businesses Mixed on Parking Meter Removal

BY JULIE WOOTTON
jwootton@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • More than one month after parking meters were removed in downtown Twin Falls, business owners have mixed reactions about the impact.

The Twin Falls City Council voted 5-2 in June to remove all parking meters in the downtown area.

Josh Palmer, public information officer for the city of Twin Falls, said there is mixed feedback from business owners, but most is positive.

"The one thing that I think we've heard from the most business owners is that the lots are full downtown," he said.

Some business owners say they've noticed more customers in the area.

"It seems like there's maybe more people downtown," Desktop By Design owner Shannon Gnesa said.

But she's not sure if it's completely related to the lack of parking meters.

Jayne Fischer, owner of The Cookie Basket, said it's hard to judge why there seems to be more people downtown.

A few decisions and events all happened around the same time, she said, such as the removal of parking meters, the opening of the Twin Falls Sandwich Co. and the Wednesday night summer concert series.

Twin Falls School District spokeswoman Beth Pendergrass said she hasn't heard much feedback from district employees about the absence of parking meters.

The district's administrative offices are located downtown.

Pendergrass said she noticed more traffic in the area and a lot of full parking—especially around lunch time.

Aaron Adams, owner of High Country Bakehouse, said customers can now take their time downtown without worrying about putting coins into a parking meter.

"As far as a customer's perspective, I think it's a positive thing," he said.

For Rod Kinney, owner of Warm Art Tattoo & Body Piercing, there hasn't been a noticeable impact to his business now that parking meters are gone.

"It doesn't make any difference to us, really," he said.

Twin Falls City Council approved changes July 16 to its downtown parking management, including switching out leased parking for business owners and employees with parking passes.

The council also voted to auction off old parking meters to raise money for downtown projects.

Palmer said a date hasn't been set for the auctions, but more information will come in the future.

Twin Falls Home Construction, Sales Soar

The number of single family homes, and their value, is up significantly from 2011.

BY STEVE KADEL
skadel@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • The revival of new home construction in Twin Falls continued in June, according to figures from the city of Twin Falls Building Department.

Not only were more single family home construction permits issued compared with the same month a year earlier, but the values of those homes was slightly higher than in 2011. Overall, the value of new homes being built this year is significantly up from 2011, Building Department statistics show.

Eleven single family building permits were issued in June compared to seven the same month in 2011. It brought the total number of single family building permits allocated this year to 103. A total of 78 were issued through June 2011.

The total value of new homes under construction through June 2012 is $14.1 million compared with $11.7 million during the same period in 2011.

The brisk construction pace coincides with what one Twin Falls real estate sales agent calls a "crazy busy" period for single family home sales.

"Holy cow," said Kilah Wilkinson, buyer's agent for Magic Valley Realty, "I am busier now than during the boom" of 2005 to 2007.

Record low interest rates are partly responsible, she said, but another factor is that buyers tend to be better qualified than in past years. More have been pre-approved for loans and there aren't as many people simply looking.

"We are getting people who are serious about buying," Wilkinson said.

Her mix of clients includes people coming to town to take new jobs as well as those relocating here for retirement. They've come from Utah, Montana, Colorado, Connecticut and North Carolina.

"Some just want out of a hectic environment," Wilkinson said.

Meanwhile, residential additions and remodeling saw a big jump in June from the year-earlier period. Twenty-five permits were issued in June this year compared with nine in the same month last year – with the estimated value up from $62,000 to $400,000.

Four building permits were issued in June for new commercial projects while three were issued in June 2011. The estimated value of the 2012 permits is $11.3 million compared with just $81,603 in June 2011.

Evans to Represent Community Banks to Federal Reserve

BY LAURIE WELCH

Evans

BURLEY • CEO John Evans Jr. of Burley-based D.L. Evans Bank is providing observations, opinions and advice from the frontline of Idaho banks through his representation in the Twelfth District Community Depository Institutions Advisory Council.

The council meets with the Federal Reserve Bank of San Francisco and members of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System once a year.

"It's a real honor to be part of this and represent Idaho and the western U.S.," Evans said.

Evans has served as chairman of the Twelfth District CDIAAC since its inception two years ago. Members reside within the nine-state district of the reserve bank.

CDIAAC provides information on the ability of community banks and credit unions to support local markets in the Twelfth District.

"The stuff we talk about is confidential," Evans said. But in general, the members are asked about the economic conditions of the area they represent.

"They want to know what the head-winds are causing any issues," Evans said. "I think it's very helpful for them to hear about community banks and what we face."

Evans said the advisory council was formed after the sub-prime mortgage lending collapse, which was caused by a small number of lending institutions – not community banks.

iPhone Appeal Dims as Samsung Shines

BY PETER SVENSSON
Associated Press

NEW YORK (AP) • The once-sexy iPhone is starting to look small and chubby.

That's become a problem for Apple, which revealed last week that iPhone sales have slowed. Part of the problem is that the competition has found a formula that works: thinner phones with bigger screens.

For a dose of smartphone envy, iPhone owners need to look no further than Samsung Electronics Co., the number-one maker of smartphones in the world. Its newest flagship phone, the Galaxy S III, is sleek and wafer-thin. It can run on the fastest networks and act as a "smart wallet," too — two things the Apple's iconic phone can't do.

Says Ramon Llamas, an analyst with research firm IDC: The iPhone "is getting a bit long in the tooth."

Apple has become the world's most valuable company on the back of the iPhone, which makes up nearly half of its revenue. The iPhone certainly has room to grow: Only one in six smartphones sold globally in the second quarter had an Apple logo on its back.

When Apple reported financial results for its latest quarter last week, a new phenomenon was revealed: Buyers started pulling back on iPhone purchases just six months after the launch of the latest iPhone model.

Apple executives blamed the tepid sales on "rumors and speculation" that may have caused some consumers to wait for the next iPhone, which is due in the fall. But in the past, iPhone sales have stayed strong nine months after the new model is launched, then dipped as people began holding off, waiting for the new model.

Age

• More than three-fourths of those 50 and older think age would be an obstacle if they had to find a new job in today's economic climate.

Julie Peterson of Personnel Plus says many of her clients seeking work are in their 50s and a few are 60 or older. She's been able to place quite a few of them with employers such as the city of Twin Falls and local factories.

"I have a few that we still weren't able to place," she said. "Most of those were people who maybe were at a job for a long time without a lot of computer skills. Those are harder to place."

Without some sort of computer knowledge, job seekers of all ages are having a tough time today, Peterson said.

Gilson owned a business for 16 years, but admits he lacks computer knowledge. He says he may have to take Social Security benefits early, at age 62, to make ends meet. He isn't letting the situation defeat him, though.

"I'm a survivor," Gilson said.

Nikki Miller, Building Department administrative assistant, said this year's value was boosted by two Glanbia Foods Inc. projects being built downtown. The company's new research and development building is valued at $7.4 million and Glanbia's new three-story office building has an estimated value of $3.8 million.

Miller said the Building Department normally bases estimated value on the square footage, using a formula to calculate value. However, the value of Glanbia's R&D building is from the company, she said.

Evans

Evans said community banks now suffer from the "onslaught" of new regulations enacted by Congress in the subprime wake. The new regulations prevent some smaller banks from participating in certain types of lending.

"The regulatory issues that we face now have blindsided us," Evans said.

Certain types of lending are so difficult, like consumer and real estate loans, that some Idaho banks have simply opted out of those lending sectors.

For instance, Evans said 20 years ago there were seven pages of mortgage documents. Today there are 42 pages.

"It's just too much work for some banks," Evans said.

D.L. Evans Bank has 20 branches and six real-estate divisions.

"I'm happy to say this is the best year we've had in our history," Evans said. "When the economy is doing well and people are doing well it trickles down everywhere."

Evans said he's also seeing economic improvements in Boise and other parts of the state.

"Hopefully, CDIAAC will do some good," Evans said. "We are passing along vital information right from Main Street."

Coming Soon: The Big Trade-off

When you talk to Chinese officials lately, it doesn't take long before they express concern about America's “rebalancing” of forces — the prospect that we'll shift more troops from the Middle East, where they are containing instability, to Asia, where they would contain China. My standard reply is that China is worrying about the wrong thing. It is not that we'll shift our Marines from the Middle East to Asia; it's that we are going to shift them from the Middle East to San Diego — because we can't afford to be the world's policeman much longer, and China will have to fill some of the void.

Good luck, world! It's been fun hanging with you, but we can't pay for it anymore — not with all of us baby boomers about to retire with no savings. We have a new strategic doctrine coming: “U.S. foreign policy in the age of Alzheimer's.” We'll do what we can afford and forget the rest.

Why do I say that? In part it's because I spent time this week with the Washington staff of The Jewish Federations of North America, or JFNA, which represents the 155 Jewish community federations across America. They may seem like an unlikely interlocutor for a foreign affairs columnist, but they're not. Like their counterparts, Catholic Charities and Lutheran Services, these Jewish federations operate nursing homes, hospitals, elder-care programs, meals on wheels, job-training, hospices and family social services in cities across America.

And the financial challenges they're all facing today are profound — as the baby boomers are aging — and so too are the trade-offs we'll have to make between nursing homes in America and nursery schools in Afghanistan. Unless we get some sustained economic growth, Afghanistan is going to lose.

William Daroff, the director of JFNA's Washington office, starts with this fact: Since the 2008 economic crisis, annual donations to Jewish federations have been flat, while there has been a sharp increase in demand for services and significant cuts in Medicaid and block grants that help pay for them.

“We have people who were donors to our programs five years ago, now knocking on the door to use those same programs” — from people in need of job-training to those in need of help to cover a mortgage payment, said Daroff. And we haven't seen anything yet, explains Barbara Bedney, the director of public policy for JFNA.

“We will see a doubling of the number of older adults — people over the age of 65 — by 2030, as the baby boomers age,” she explained, and one of the fastest growing groups will be the “old-old” — those who are 85 and older, who are living longer but requiring even more expensive care.

And wait until the baby boomer cohort reaches their 80s. Alzheimer's Disease Research reports that roughly 5.4 million Americans of all ages had Alzheimer's disease in 2012, and, by 2050, more than 15 million Americans could be living with the disease — a key reason nursing home residents are predicted to double over the next 30 years.

And many baby boomers, says Steven Woolf, the senior tax policy counsel for JFNA, “are nowhere near prepared in terms of retirement savings” for the kinds of costs they are going to incur after they stop working — in an age in which they will be living longer, the government will have less to offer, they each will have fewer kids to care for them and social service agencies will be swamped with demands. Indeed, a 2011 survey by the Employee Benefit Research Institute found that a “sizable percentage of workers report they have virtually no savings or investments.” Among those workers polled in its retirement confidence survey, “29 percent say they have less than $1,000. In total, more than half of workers (56 percent) report that the total value of their household's savings and investments, excluding the value of their primary home and any defined benefit plans, is less than $25,000.”

That could pay for one hospital stay and recuperation in a nursing home, or dealing with just one parent with Alzheimer's. And all that's before the next president and Congress agree on a long-term fiscal rebalancing plan that will surely reduce Medicare, Medicaid and Social Security benefits.

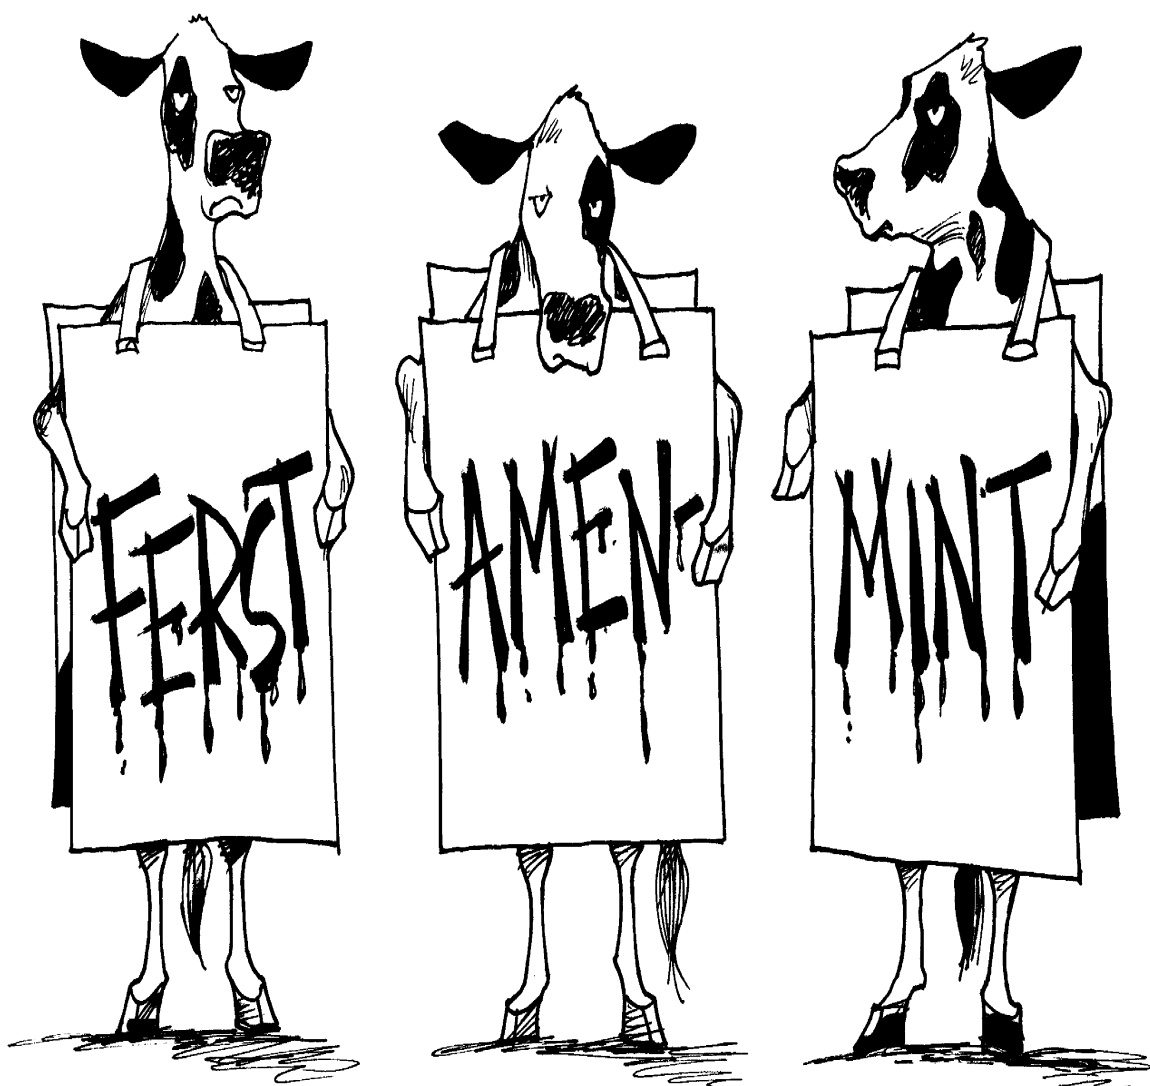

Fortunately, two-thirds of baby boomer households are expected to receive some kind of inheritance over their lifetime to cushion the blow. Also, baby boomers as a generation have been very volunteer-oriented, and we're going to need a lot of family volunteers to work with the elderly.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Many Successful People Make it on Their Own

The president said if you were successful, you didn't get there on your own. He said if your claim to success was because you were smarter or worked harder, there were a lot of people that qualified. But the president left out a feature of successful people and that's fortitude, the ability to go for broke, put all you own up for collateral, put your family's future on the line and go against the advice of experts. My granddaughter, Kristen (Lee) Briggs, recently purchased a business where she had been employed for less than three years. The previous owner saw dedication and drive in her and knew she would be a candidate to take over the company, which she did as owner and president. Recently, she was chosen as Albuquerque's most outstanding business leader under 30. Sorry, Mr. President, she did it on her own.

In the late '40s, a young man came to Filer and bought a blacksmith shop. He had been a welder in the Navy. It didn't take Bill Herrett long to change the shop to a manufacturing business called ACME Machine Shop.

Its product was draper chain used on potato and beet harvesters. Over the years, ACME employed hundreds of people and turned out thousands of rolls of draper chain used all over the world. One man, Bill Herrett, made it a success.

Another business I am acquainted with is Idaho Instrument of Twin Falls, owned and operated by Neils Haslam, who started 50 years ago by rehabilitating spent picture tubes, and escalated into one of the most innovative in the country. Idaho Instrument designs and builds specialized electronics for the auto industry as well as for high schools, universities, dairy and agriculture. Service trainers for mechanics that simulate trouble in automobiles and trucks is a featured product, recently supplying Porsche in Germany with units. Without any tech school training, Neils educated himself to integrated circuit technology, enabling him to design the circuit boards used in the products. Neils Haslam made it happen.

Now, of course in each incident, there are dedicated associates that carry through and contribute to the success of the business.

ONLINE COMMENTS

The conversation continues 24/7 at Magicvalley.com.

An online readers responded to the article “Idaho Teacher Unions See Decline in Membership.”

Brad: “I graduated from a small, rural school in Idaho. I took both the ACT, SAT and qualified to attend a service academy. I was well prepared for college and for life. I was student of the year at the institution I attended. I moved to Washington, California, Nevada and back to Idaho for a short time. I was employed in Idaho, Washington, California and Nevada as either a teacher or a school administrator. Idaho educators are not well paid. In fact, most teachers in Idaho are currently “sick at heart.” I especially find it incredulous that parents are not “mad, mad, mad” that the people (teachers) that they trust their beloved children to educate and care for eight hours a day are not more concerned that young couples who are both teachers are not able to make house payments, buy cars, etc. Come on everybody, check out the legislators who you have voted into the state legislature. ...”

Online readers enjoyed the article “Jerome Rotary Helps Kids Get Library Cards.”

Andre Leonard: “What an incredible story. I am sure I speak for many who were touched by this act of generosity. Good work by many in this story, particularly the Jerome Rotary. That it is opening more doors to do good works in partnering a great community service organization with the schools to identify children who may need and want a library card is very special.

It goes without saying, if Jerome Rotary Club is having an event and you can participate, drop by and thank them.”

The debate continues in response to the “Letter to the Editor: If U.S. Apologizes to Its Citizens, Why Doesn't Japan?”

dlthebs: “Yeah, that's a great idea. There's no sense in us actually being kind-hearted people, right? Who cares if we never get an apology from another nation. We imprisoned American citizens because of their heritage, and that was wrong. It is hate speech like this that convinced voting citizens, like you and I, that internment was necessary. Let's hope we never go to war with Ireland, or my whole family will be rounded up.”

In response to the article “Feds Bust Alleged Drug Conspiracy,” an online reader wrote:

Panson: “Kudos to the agencies that worked in tandem to bring down such ugly forces within our community. Drug dealers tend to make a lot of money off of people with addictions. It's time that they pay up and begin to suffer just a tad by losing their freedom. Maybe then they'll know what it feels like to hurt.”

Online readers responded to the “Letter to the Editor: If You Think for Yourself, You're Not a Republican.”

elcty: “I don't think anyone agrees with everything their party teaches 100 percent of the time. I for one, don't want to repeal the direct election of senators. I don't believe in abortion on demand or things like same gender marriage. I don't believe in charity with someone else's property.

I will stay Republican since there never will be a strong third party and you strengthen a party by keeping people in it, not leaving it. That is how you will make it better. Third parties take away votes and definitely help the Democrat and less desirable policies. ...”

Actor Tony Martin Dies at 98

BY ADAM BERNSTEIN

The Washington Post

Tony Martin, an actor and singer whose virile crooning style made him one of the most popular recording artists of the 1940s and 1950s, died July 27 at his home in Los Angeles. He was 98.

The death was confirmed by his business manager, Stan Schneider.

Martin never sustained the popularity of his peers Frank Sinatra and Perry Como, but he achieved a remarkably long show business career. He briefly mounted a nightclub act at 95 and jokingly introduced a musical selection by telling his audience, "I first sang this song at Abraham Lincoln's inauguration."

Darkly handsome and dapper, Martin was one of the most glamorous actor-singers of his generation. He starred in lavish Hollywood musicals and augmented his allure by marrying singer Alice Faye and, later, dancer Cyd Charisse. He recorded with Ray Noble's orchestra in the late 1930s, sang on the popular George Burns and Gracie Allen radio show, and hosted a live music program from 1954 to 1956 on NBC-TV.

In Hollywood movies, Martin was best remembered for his elaborate serenading style. He warbled "Tenement Symphony" in the Marx Brothers comedy "The Big Store" (1941), sang the ballad "It's a Blue World" to Rita Hayworth in "Music in My Heart" (1940) and portrayed the dashing Gaylord Ravenal in the "Show Boat" segment from the Jerome Kern bio-pic "Till the Clouds Roll By" (1946).

Having More Retirement Accounts Is Not The Same As Having More Money.

When it comes to the number of retirement accounts you have, the saying "more is better" is not necessarily true. In fact, if you hold multiple accounts with various brokers, it can be difficult to keep track of your investments and to see if you're properly diversified.* At the very least, multiple accounts usually mean multiple fees.

Bringing your accounts to Edward Jones could help solve all that. Plus, one statement can make it easier to see if you're moving toward your goals.

* Diversification does not guarantee a profit or protect against loss.

To learn why consolidating your retirement accounts to Edward Jones makes sense, call your local financial advisor today.

Twin Falls Co. Woman Tests Positive for West Nile Virus

TIMES-NEWS

TWIN FALLS • A Twin Falls County woman in her 40s has tested positive for West Nile virus. She is the first human case of West Nile fever reported in Idaho for 2012. The woman traveled to Valley County shortly before her onset of illness, and it is unknown in which county she contracted the virus. The woman has recovered from her illness.

Since mid-July, three Idaho counties in southwest Idaho — Ada, Canyon and Payette — have reported West Nile virus activity in local mosquitoes.

“The positive mosquito pools and the state’s first human infection are good warnings for people to ‘fight the bite’ of mosquitoes no matter where you live,” says Dr. Leslie Tengelsen, Deputy State Epidemiologist. “It is very important that we all prevent mosquito bites and take protective measures, such as wearing repellent and reducing mosquito breeding habitat around our homes.”

West Nile virus is usually contracted from the bite of an infected mosquito; it is not spread from person-to-person through casual contact. Symptoms of infection often include fever, headache, body aches, nausea, vomiting, and sometimes swollen lymph glands or a skin rash on the chest, stomach and back. In some cases the virus can cause severe illness, especially in people over the age of 50.

Last year, three Idahoans were reported with WNV infections. In 2006, Idaho led the nation with almost 1,000 infections, which contributed to 23 deaths.

To reduce the likelihood of infection, people are advised to avoid mosquitoes, particularly between dusk and dawn when mosquitoes are most active. In addition, you should:

- Apply DEET or other EPA-approved insect repellent to exposed skin and clothing. Carefully follow instructions on the product label, especially for children;

- Cover up exposed skin when outdoors;

- Insect-proof your home by repairing or replacing screens; and

- Reduce standing water on your property. Check and drain toys, trays or pots that may hold water. Change the water in bird baths and static decorative ponds weekly as they may provide a suitable mosquito breeding habitat.

West Nile virus does not usually affect domestic animals, but can cause severe illness in horses and certain species of birds. Although there is no vaccine available for people, there are several vaccines available for horses. People are advised to vaccinate their horses annually.

States can also choose to partner with the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services until they come up with their own exchange, said Joy Wilson, health policy director for the National Conference of State Legislatures

“There are pros and cons to that option,” Wilson said. “Kind of depends how comfortable you are having HHS having that big of a role in your insurance market.”

However, if Idaho declines to set up its own exchange, the federal government’s exchange may not be as ideal for the state,

Paul Man Dies in Minidoka Crash

TIMES-NEWS

RUPERT — A 24-year-old Paul man died in a two vehicle crash Monday morning in Minidoka County.

According to a report from Idaho State Police, Kenny Stevenson was pronounced dead at the scene of the crash at the intersection of 400 West and 1100 North, north of Rupert.

Marcus Newton, 30, of Rupert, was headed northbound on 400 West in a 2008 Dodge pickup while Stevenson was westbound on 1100 North in a Polaris Ranger RZR. According to the ISP report, Stevenson proceeded forward into the intersection as Newton also entered the intersection, despite a yield sign.

The report states Newton, who was not wearing a seatbelt, braked and swerved in an attempt to avoid the collision but was unsuccessful.

He was transported to Cassia Regional Medical Center by a private vehicle, treated and released. According to the report, it was unknown if Stevenson had on a seat belt.

Alcohol is not believed to be a factor in the crash, and it is still under investigation by ISP.

Most small cities in the eight-county Magic Valley region don’t have foregone balances, and some have relatively small amounts.

As those cities prepare their budgets proposals for the upcoming fiscal year, some have the option of tapping their foregone balances to boost tax collection revenue.

That doesn’t mean they’re going to.

Currently, the city of Twin Falls has $1.47 million in a foregone balance. In the proposed budget for fiscal year 2013, that balance is left alone, said city manager Travis Rothweiler.

Hansen has a foregone balance of $46,714. Though officials are still working on a budget proposal, that amount will likely stay the same, said Hansen City Clerk Linda Morrill.

“We’re not claiming any of that,” she said.

BEFORE THEY WERE COACHES

Freed from 'Prison'

Before he was a teacher, coach and athletic director at Murtaugh, Clete Edmunson worked as special assistant for education and transportation in the office of Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter.

Murtaugh's Edmunson can joke about his past, which includes time served as an elected state representative and special assistant to Gov. Otter. He's back helping kids as the Red Devils' athletic director and boys basketball coach.

BY RYAN HOWE
rhowe@magicvalley.com

"When you teach and coach, every hour you're with those kids, you can see that you're making a difference. That's what I love about it. It's so rewarding, and I missed that when I was in politics."

Clete Edmunson

MURTAUGH • The shocked look on the kids' faces was priceless.

On his first day teaching at Murtaugh High last year, Clete Edmunson introduced himself to the class and then jokingly added that he'd been in prison the past 10 years.

Had he told them the truth, most wouldn't have believed him, anyway.

Edmunson will enter his second year this fall as Murtaugh's athletic director, varsity boys basketball coach and middle school football coach. When it comes to teaching his government, social studies and history classes, Edmunson's qualifications are more unique than your average teacher.

He didn't come from prison; rather, Edmunson spent three years working as a special assistant to Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter, advising Idaho's top office on education and transportation.

Prior to that, he was elected to three terms in the Idaho State Legislature as a member of the House of Representatives.

Edmunson's path into politics was as straightforward as his path out of them. "I didn't get into politics to be a lifer," Edmunson said. "I went in there to make a difference, help the constituents and then let the next guy take over."

Edmunson grew up in Council, where he excelled in 8-man football, basketball and track. He went to Idaho State on a football scholarship and played linebacker for the Bengals from 1984-88.

After graduating from college with a business degree, he went back and earned an education degree and began teaching and coaching at New Plymouth, where he spent 12 years. During that time, Edmunson ran for the House and won.

"I didn't even own a suit," Edmunson laughed.

For the duration of his three terms, Edmunson taught and coached football in the fall, and then took a leave of absence when the legislative sessions began in January.

"I'm the kind of teacher who really pushes my students to get involved," said Edmunson. "I don't like sitting back and whining about stuff. I tell them, 'If you want to see change, you've got to go make the change!'"

"When I went into the legislature, that was an opportunity to make a difference. The key component in my life is education, so I thought I could help set policies that would help education," he said.

Edmunson found that politics can be a lot like sports.

"You have to get people on your team to get legislation passed and you're competing," Edmunson said. "It's competitive, and I think that's the part that I enjoyed. You have to work as a team, although sometimes I would say our team wasn't as together as much as I would have liked."

Edmunson stepped down from the Governor's office in 2008 to take a program manager position with the Department of Labor, hoping to improve youth programs. But after a year of "running into a bureaucratic brick wall," he decided to go back to school to finish his master's degree in western U.S.

history, which he had put on hold to serve in the legislature.

Now he's back where he started — in the classroom, and on the court and field — but with a different perspective.

"In government you make differences, but they're infinitesimal. Sometimes you feel like you can't make any headway at all because you have to go through the process... It takes a lot of work to get anything done and sometimes it's frustrating for a guy like me," Edmunson said.

He's completed his master's thesis on the early mining history in Idaho, which he's currently working on turning into a book. He says he's happy to be out of the "crazy world of politics" and he's enjoying the slower pace in Murtaugh.

"I call it getting back to the real world. When you teach and coach, every hour you're with those kids, you can see that you're making a difference. That's what I love about it. It's so rewarding, and I missed that when I was in politics. I missed being around young kids."

"Before They Were Coaches" is a periodic series detailing the lives of area coaches outside of their work with prep athletes. Know a coach who did/does something unique? We want to hear about it. Email sports@magicvalley.com or call 735-3239.

U of I Professor Helps Aid Parathletes

BY AMANDA CAIRO
For the Coeur d'Alene Press

MOSCOW • One leg, two legs or no legs, it's all about living a normal life. Unless you're South Africa's Oscar Pistorius, a double amputee who will be the first ever amputee to compete in the Olympics on the track — thanks in part to a team of researchers, including University of Idaho's Craig McGowan.

ASSOCIATED PRESS

In this July 17 file photo, double-amputee sprinter Oscar Pistorius, of South Africa, competes in a 400-meter race in Lignano Stadium, near Udine, northern Italy.

Born without fibulas or the small bones in the calf, Pistorius is looking for more than an ordinary life — he wants an extraordinary life. Despite a storm of controversy and several hurdles, he will compete for South Africa in the 400 meters and the 4 x 400 meter relay in the London Olympics.

"I've never seen anything like him. Oscar is a one-in-a-million athlete, he has extraordinary ability," said McGowan, who watched Pistorius run during testing. "He is amazing. I definitely will be rooting for him."

The biological sciences assistant professor joined in the research of Pistorius' gait, energy consumption and running mechanics, collecting data to present to the International Association of Athletics Federations to rule whether Pistorius' carbon fiber running blades had an advantage over flesh and bone. It was an intense three days of running and collecting and analyzing data.

The verdict?

LONDON • Michael Phelps has yet to win a gold medal, and Ryan Lochte's star is fading. So along comes Missy Franklin, yet to start her senior year in high school, to restore American swim hopes at the Olympics.

Coming back less than 14 minutes after swimming a semifinal heat, the Colorado teenager won the first gold medal of what figures to be a dazzling career, rallying to win the 100-meter backstroke Monday.

"Indescribable," the 17-year-old Franklin said. "I still can't believe that happened. I don't even know what to think. I saw my parents' reaction on the screen and I just started bawling. I can't even think right now."

Matt Grevers kept the gold medals coming in rat-a-tat fashion, following up Franklin's win with one of his own in the men's 100 back. For good measure, Nick Thoman made it a 1-2 finish for the red, white and blue by taking the silver.

Rebecca Soni nearly pulled out a third U.S. gold, rallying furiously on the return leg of the 100 breaststroke. But she couldn't quite catch blazing Lithuanian Ruta Meilutyte, a gold medalist at the tender age of 15.

Good thing for the U.S. that Franklin and the other Americans are coming through. Phelps missed the podium in his 2012 Olympic debut, and Lochte has turned two straight disappointing performances after opening the games with a dominant win in the 400 individual medley. He finished fourth and off the podium Monday night in the 200 freestyle, which France's Yannick Agnel won by a full body length against a field with

Bruins Name Pistole as New Softball Coach

TIMES-NEWS

TWIN FALLS • Jessica Pistole was confirmed Monday by the Twin Falls School District as the Bruins' new softball coach. Pistole replaces Leslie Phillips, who is venturing into the private sector.

Pistole brings a solid background in coaching and in softball to Twin Falls. She was the head coach at Biola University in La Mirada, Calif., and at William Jessup University in Rocklin, Calif., where she was also the head volleyball coach from 2006-08 before becoming the school's softball coach the following three years.

Pistole comes to Twin Falls from Utah State University, where she was an assistant coach for the 17-36 Aggies.

Pistole played both softball and volleyball at Biola from 1998-2002.

"She's going to bring some big-league experience," Twin Falls athletic director Mike Federico said. "She's worked under Dave Finch (father of U.S. national team star Jennie Finch) at his camps and she seems like a high-quality coach. We're excited to have her."

Pistole, like Phillips, will be a walk-on coach, meaning she is not a full-time teacher within the district.

an advantage," said McGowan. "We don't understand enough, and based on what we don't know, we can't exclude him without evidence. He has earned his right to compete."

In the tests, where Pistorius had to both jog for extended periods of time and run full out for several short periods, McGowan said he burned just as much oxygen and didn't generate the same force against the ground as an intact runner. While his blades' elasticity is different than muscles, he was still using as much energy to run. It's the "mechanically different" label that continues the debate.

"We ran him into the ground," said McGowan, who was up late each night to analyze data and determine what needed to be collected the next day. "We pushed him hard, but he was determined."

It's especially poignant for Pistorius. Five years ago, the IAAF ruled prosthetic blades gave an advantage for runners, and they shouldn't be allowed to compete with intact athletes.

That decision, according to McGowan and his group of researchers, had scientific flaws. Pistorius searched for a second opinion and McGowan was brought into the research process for his expertise on musculoskeletal relationships and how they interact to create movement in humans and other animals.

His research has now expanded to include the study of prosthetics and the mechanical and neurological adaptation of how the neuromuscular system uses these devices.

Beyond the Olympics, McGowan's research has a wider impact. Continuing research with professional athletes who use prosthetics, McGowan's work aims to provide for a better, more natural prosthetic that could help amputees function on a level playing field. Using bilateral and unilateral amputees, McGowan can better understand the mechanics of muscle versus prosthetics.

"There is a very distinct difference between unilateral and bilateral amputee function. We can use that data to better understand how the prosthetics work," said McGowan. "We know what works, but not why?"

With a growing population of amputees in the military, these advances could help people return back to duty after an amputation. McGowan has applied for a grant from the military to turn his research toward building better prosthetics that would offer more natural movement.

"It's opening doors, showing people there are no limits, they are no different," said McGowan. "Whatever you choose to do, you can return to healthy, active living."

gold medalists galore.

On Sunday, Lochte anchored the U.S. in the 4x100 free relay, taking over with a seemingly comfortable lead. But Agnel chased him down on the final leg, giving France the gold.

Now, another defeat.

"I did my best," Lochte said. "I guess sometimes you win, sometimes you lose. I gave it 110 percent. There's probably some things I messed up on, but you live and learn. (Agnel is) a great racer. There's no doubt about it. He's quick and he showed it last night and tonight. I'm happy for him. He did good!"

DEAR ABBY: My nephew "George" — who dumped his wife and children for a barmaid — died recently. He was dead broke, so my sister paid for his funeral. I didn't attend, but I was told that George's cremated remains were put in a whiskey bottle by the barmaid, and the bottle was going to be buried in my mother's grave.

Why my sister, his siblings and his kids went along with this idea I'll never know. None of us were raised that way. I found out about it only after the service and put a stop to it. As far as I'm concerned, they could have buried him in a condom, but NOT in my mother's grave! Was I wrong to put a stop to this travesty?

DISGUSTED UNCLE: No, you weren't. Your sister, nieces and nephews may have agreed because it seemed like a low-cost way to dispose of George's remains. But I'll bet they didn't know the cemetery would charge a hefty fee for a second interment.

Because your nephew spent his life with a woman who worked in a bar, there's a certain symmetry to the idea of a whiskey bottle being used as his urn. I was told of a widow who did the same thing with her husband's ashes — and then she had the bottle made into a lamp because her husband "lit up her life." Someone should mention it to George's grieving lady friend as a way to keep him with her until they can be buried (or scattered) somewhere together.

DEAR ABBY: I exercise in the pool at a women's health club. Several women there share personal information with each other in loud voices. One of them talks non-stop with anyone she can get to exercise with her.

By the way, these women are not exercising. They just stand in the pool socializing. Abby, I'm a captive audience! I can't escape from their chatter. I don't want to hear about their divorce, colonoscopy or aches and pains. I have mentioned this to the staff with no success.

Could you please address voice volume and appropriate sharing in confined spaces?

Frustrated in Florida

DEAR FRUSTRATED: The staff at the gym may be reluctant to speak to the women because they're afraid it will cause them to cancel their memberships. That's why the person who should address the voice volume issue is YOU. The women may be unaware that you can hear every word they say. If asking the magpies to pipe down doesn't work, then you'll have to swim at a time when they are not around.

DEAR ABBY: I was cleaning out my closets and I'm wondering if there is any advice you can give on donating household items to charity. Is there a right way or wrong way to pack them up?

Gail in Oshkosh, Wis.

DEAR GAIL: Any items you decide to donate should be clean and in good working order. If you are getting rid of china or glassware, toss anything that is chipped and wrap the rest individually in newspaper so it arrives at its destination without breaking. Clothing should be clean, neatly folded and free of stains. Before giving your things away, ask yourself if you were on the receiving end, would you want it?

IF JULY 31 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: It may have been an exciting year in which you have changed direction or shifted focus in important ways, but you have some breathing space ahead with few surprises or tensions. Relax and take it easy, as your judgment is exquisite during September for career, financial or business related matters. October and early November is a god time to finalize major initiatives or take the crucial steps to improve your life. Be prepared to grab opportunities or make it a priority to set important plans in motion then, as whatever you begin at that time will receive a helping hand.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Make technology work for you. This is prime time to plug in a new computer, install new software or deal with intricate mental work. You might even receive your allotted 15 minutes of fame.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Hot stuff. You possess the good grace to charm your companions and the diligence to take care of necessities. Others will appreciate your tactfulness and attention to crucial minor details.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): The best use of your energy is to focus on detailed work. Tact and diplomacy are your best allies when serious matters need attention, but you can let your hair down when fun is the subject.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Gather information today and tomorrow; contact helpful people who can provide wise counsel. An intriguing viewpoint can put a favorable spin on handling banking on the internet or cellphone.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Unique friendships can be forged. Get out and about in the public eye where your talents are better appreciated. You will find ingenious ways to overcome the objections of an opposing party.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Fatten your piggy bank. A boost in your energies gives you the needed impetus to tackle money matters. This may be a fine time to set plans in motion at the workplace.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): If it's good, you can make it better. Your knack for perfectionism makes you the perfect person to dot the i's and cross the t's for someone else. You can offer your services an editor or proofreader.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A Prince or Princess Charming may be waiting in the wings. If you have a romantic getaway with a loved one on your schedule, all your dreams and impassioned fantasies may come true.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Success arrives through succinct thinking. It might take time to find a solution or to come to a conclusion, but when you do, it will be the very best. The deepest wells have the clearest water.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Possession is nine-tenths of the law. You are passionate about getting what you want, but don't keep it all for yourself. You realize that you and a partner are in harmony about handling joint resources.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Rest assured that those who enter your life now are people-persons who simply love humanity. Excess enthusiasm could brim over; get plenty of exercise and find appropriate outlets for your energy.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Charge forward and chase rainbows. Once in awhile, you need to pursue an impossible dream just to see how far you can go. Be brave; experiment with something entirely new or set different goals.

ASIA MAGIC MASSAGE
Open 7 days a week 9:00am-10:30pm 208-948-0178 440 Blue Lakes Blvd. N. Twin Falls, ID 83301

Today is Tuesday, July 31, the 213th day of 2012. There are 153 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight:

On July 31, 1942, Oxfam International had its beginnings as the Oxford Committee for Famine Relief was founded in England.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:

In 1777, the Marquis de Lafayette, a 19-year-old French nobleman, was made a major-general in the American Continental Army.

In 1875, the 17th president of the United States, Andrew Johnson, died in Carter County, Tenn., at age 66.

In 1912, Nobel Prize-winning American economist Milton Friedman was born in Brooklyn, N.Y.

In 1919, Germany's Weimar Constitution was adopted by the republic's National Assembly.

In 1930, the radio character "The Shadow" made his debut as narrator of the "Detective Story Hour" on CBS Radio.

In 1957, the Distant Early Warning Line, a system of radar stations designed to detect Soviet bombers approaching North America, went into operation.

In 1964, the American space probe Ranger 7 reached the moon, transmitting pictures back to Earth before crashing onto the lunar surface.

In 1971, Apollo 15 crew members David Scott and James Irwin became the first astronauts to use a lunar rover on the surface of the moon.

In 1972, Democratic vice-presidential candidate Thomas Eagleton withdrew from the ticket with George McGovern following disclosures that Eagleton had once undergone psychiatric treatment.

In 1989, a pro-Iranian group in Lebanon released a grisly videotape showing the body of American hostage William R. Higgins, a Marine lieutenant-colonel, dangling from a rope.

In 1991, President George H.W. Bush and Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev signed the Strategic Arms Reduction Treaty in Moscow.

In 1992, the former Soviet republic of Georgia was admitted to the United Nations as its 179th member. Thai Airways Flight 311, an Airbus A310, crashed while approaching Tribhuvan International Airport in Nepal; all 113 people aboard died.

Ten years ago: A bomb exploded inside a cafeteria at the Hebrew University of Jerusalem, killing nine people, including five Americans. Pope John Paul II canonized Juan Diego, the first Indian saint in the Americas, in a Mexico City ceremony.

Five years ago: The Army censured retired three-star Lt. Gen. Philip Kensing for a "perfect storm of mistakes, misjudgments and a failure of leadership" after the 2004 friendly-fire death in Afghanistan of Army Ranger Pat Tillman. The U.N. Security Council unanimously approved a 26,000-strong peacekeeping force for Sudan's Darfur region.

One year ago: Ending a perilous stalemate, President Barack Obama and congressional leaders announced a historic agreement on emergency legislation to avert the nation's first-ever financial default. Syrian security forces launched a ferocious assault on defiant cities and towns, killing at least 70 people and possibly many more. Yani Tseng won the Women's British Open for the second straight year, beating Brittany Lang by four strokes. Florida handed the Atlanta Braves their 10,000th loss in franchise history; with the 3-1 loss, the Braves became the second team in big league history with 10,000 losses (the Phillies reached that mark in 2007).
