

Halstead Fire Near Stanley Grows to Nearly 10,000 Acres

BY CYNTHIA SEWELL
Idaho Statesman

The U.S. Forest Service will hold a community meeting to discuss the Halstead fire at 7 p.m. Friday at the Stanley Community Center.

The lightning-caused fire, which broke out July 27 about 18 miles northwest of Stanley in the Cape Horn area has grown to 9,626 acres with zero percent containment.

Fire crews on Thursday battled increased winds of 15 to 20 mph with gusts to 45 mph. Winds will decrease today, according to forecasters.

On Wednesday afternoon, the fire made about a five-mile run to the east. The fire burned actively into the night. On Thursday, fire-fighters concentrated on holding the southwest perimeter of the fire. Additional crews will scout and locate contingency lines to protect the Boy Scout Camp and private property along the Idaho 21 corridor.

Idaho 21 from Stanley to Boise currently is not affected by the fire.

About 200 personnel, including seven hand crews, five engines and three helicopters, are battling the fire according to the latest update from the U.S. Forest Service.

On Tuesday, fire officials instigated an emergency area closure for all access points, roads and trails to the Cape Horn area, all access to the Seafoam Bubble, all access to the Frank Church River of No Return Wilderness that is east of the Middle Fork corridor, east of Bluebunch Ridge, and north of Lola Creek, the area northwest of the Knapp-Loon Trail and west of the Pinyon-Feltham Road.

Health Care Exchange Prompts Guarded Optimism from Area Business Owners

BY KIMBERLEE KRUESI
kkruesi@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter's newly appointed working group isn't the only group weighing the pros and cons of setting up a state-run health insurance exchange.

Come this November, all states must submit a plan on how to proceed in setting up an online marketplace. The so-called insurance exchange would be designed to allow consumers to shop online for health insurance policies, and in theory, encourage more individuals to purchase insurance.

Idaho is still waiting to decide how it will move forward. It can either choose to set up a state-run exchange, decide to use the model set up by the federal government or partner with the feds until Idaho finalizes creating its own exchange.

For now, Otter's health insurance exchange working group will spend the upcoming weeks mulling over its options.

The process won't be easy, said John Watts, legislature advisor for the Idaho Chamber of Alliance and member of the working group.

"My guess is that we're going to do a lot of work and I think it probably gets a lot of groundwork laid," he said. "I can't see us not responding by the 16th; we have to say something but we don't know what that's going to be yet."

No matter what state lawmakers decide, everyone from business owners and insurance companies to consumers will see a change in how they will purchase health insurance. However, what that change will look like remains unclear.

"On the surface, (the exchange) sounds like a good idea," said Jerry Marcantonio, Everton Mattress controller. "We'll just have to see how it works out."

The Twin Falls business employs close to 40 employees. The company currently provides health insurance as part of its benefits package, but Marcantonio is uncertain how the Obama

Medical Simulator Provides Training for the Real Thing

BY KIMBERLEE KRUESI

TWIN FALLS • Located in the bottom level of the St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center is a patient who hasn't left its hospital room for more than eight years.

It's regularly treated by staff and it can't help but set multiple Code Blues in a single day. However, unlike the rest of the patients who reside above ground, this patient isn't alive.

In order to better train its staff, St. Luke's Magic Valley utilizes the help of simulators, or manikins, to replicate real life medical situations.

"They're able to practice real life scenarios in a safe environment," said Shelly McFarland, manager of learning services for the hospital.

The hospital sets aside four rooms, each with its own manikin, as part of its simulation lab. Education leaders enlist both new and experienced staff to participate in different simulations designed to better equip staff.

Some of the manikins receive names. For example, the room along the simulation lab holds a patient called Hazel. She has a wig full of messy, grey curls and talks to the nurses when they first walk into the room.

Further down the hall is Noel, an eternally pregnant simulator.

"She's delivered a lot of babies, that's why she looks a little tired," said Karen Anderson, registered nurse and clinical instructor. "She's been with us for more than eight years but she's great. We can position the baby to do a breech birth or one where the umbilical cord is wrapped around the baby's head."

On Wednesday, four nurses stood around a manikin with grim expressions. A Code Blue – a situation where the patient needs resuscitation – had just been issued and the room remained quiet except with the calm but firm orders being given by McFarland.

The simulation was over in less than seven minutes but the value of the experience will last much longer, said Jenny Hopkins, a registered nurse and team leader of the intensive care unit.

"A lot of times, when you get in high pressure situations, it's the staff with the experience and the confidence that respond to the real life situation and the people that don't have the experience have to watch from afar," she said. "This allows nurses to train for that experience and to give them the confidence to jump in when they need to."

Phone Scams: Too Good to Be True

BY ALISON GENE SMITH
alismith@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • Year after year, law enforcement agencies see people taken for thousands of dollars by scammers who claim something too good to be true.

Scammers once targeted the elderly, said Sgt. Rick Cowen at the Jerome County Sheriff's Office. Now they're going after a wide range of people from the very young to the very old, and everyone in between.

Each year, Officer Dan Heil at the Twin Falls Police Department said police see an increase in the number of phone scams.

Once the money is sent, it's virtually impossible to get it back, especially if – like the majority of scams – it is sent overseas, Cowen said.

"It doesn't matter who you are," Heil said. "We're all very susceptible when we don't take time to think things through or do research on this event or offer."

Several types of scams appear time and time again, Heil and Cowen said.

• Rent fraud: The scammers put an ad in classifieds or Craigslist for a rental, Cowen said. The ad says they're going to be out of the country and want to rent their property out while they're gone. Once someone contacts them, the scammer sends a rental agreement, tells the prospective tenant to wire the first month's rent and to expect the house keys in the mail soon. The problem, Cowen said, is the keys never arrive.

• Grandchild in jail: A common scam that is still targeted toward the elderly involves the scammer calling to say their grandchild is in jail, often abroad, and needs money for bail wired to them. Scammers will look for notices of student or church groups going to other counties or obituaries to get a list of family members, Cowen said.

• Cross Country Vehicle Purchase: One man Cowen spoke to was trying to purchase a tractor. He found one that was supposedly in California and wired $5,000 to the scammers, expecting his new tractor to be shipped soon. Cowen said once the transfer went through, the money was picked up in London, England, and the scammer was never heard from again.

Bud Wilson, of Buhl said a scammer tried a similar trick on him.

THE MARKET AT A GLANCE

With no concrete action in Europe, stocks slump

NEW YORK (AP) • European leaders on Thursday gamely promised to keep tackling the continent's debt crisis. But the markets wanted much more.

The Dow Jones industrial average fell 92.18 points to 12,878.88. The Dow had been down as much as 192 shortly after noon.

The Standard & Poor's 500 index fell 10.32 to 1,365. The Nasdaq composite index lost 10.44 to 2,909.77.

Stocks sank across the U.S. and Europe, the euro fell against the dollar and investors dumped bonds issued by the governments of Spain and Italy. Investors had been expecting more immediate action from the European Central Bank and were disappointed by the plan's lack of details, especially considering the ECB president's pledge last week to do "whatever it takes" to keep the euro intact.

Pole Line Road Bridge Work Beginning Next Week

TWIN FALLS • Crews will begin a project to apply an epoxy overlay to the Perrine Coulee Bridge on U.S. 93/Pole Line Road early next week, the Idaho Transportation Department announced. Traffic will be reduced to one lane in each direction between Canyon Crest Drive and Harrison Street for about three days.

Beginning Monday, Aug. 6, crews will clean the surface of the roadway and sidewalk prior to applying the epoxy resin and gravel aggregate. The maintenance project will cover the bridge and protect against cracking and corrosion, restore the surface strength and skid resistance, and improve lifespan of the bridge deck.

About half of the Perrine Coulee Bridge will be closed at a time while crews apply the overlay. Drivers are urged to use caution through the work zone and follow the reduced speed limit.

The Perrine Coulee Bridge is one of three structures included in this contract along with River Interchange on I-86 and Juniper Interchange on I-84 where work is expected to begin later this month. Idaho Construction Company, of Kimberly, is the contractor for the $565,172 project.

Seal-coat Project on U.S. 93 West of T.F. Begins Monday

pected to begin Monday, Aug. 6 to seal coat U.S. 93 west from north Twin Falls to its junction with U.S. 30, the Idaho Transportation Department announced.

Traffic will be reduced to one lane in each direction as crews work to apply the seal coat to the new section of roadway beginning just north of the U.S. 93/U.S. 30 junction west of Twin Falls to the end of the asphalt section near Grandview Drive in Twin Falls.

Drivers should be prepared for minor delays and loose gravel throughout the 5.5-mile section. A 45-mph speed limit will be posted throughout the work zone. Observing posted speed limits and increasing following distance will reduce the risk of windshield damage caused by the loose gravel.

Seal coating and brooming the excess gravel is expected to be complete by Saturday, Aug. 11, with striping to follow.

A seal coat will also be applied to the frontage roads constructed as part of the $26.6 million project. Drivers should watch for flaggers and be prepared for delays in those sections of roadway.

The seal coat has been added to the Twin Falls Alternate Route Stage II project under funding from the American Recovery and Reinvestment Act (ARRA) in 2009. The roadway was opened to traffic in December 2010.

Court Clears North Idaho Man's Three Felony Convictions

BOISE (AP) • The Idaho Court of Appeals has cleared a Post Falls man of burglary, aggravated assault and unlawful firearm charges that stem from a 2010 confrontation with his ex-girlfriend's cousin and her fiancé.

The court ruled Wednesday there wasn't enough evidence to show David L. Curry, 36, was in possession of a gun when he confronted Marlisa Gordon and her fiancé, Travis Escudero, in the garage of Gordon's home on Feb. 20, 2010.

Curry's ex-girlfriend, Melissa Ferra, had been staying at the home after reporting that her car had been vandalized. She told police she suspected Curry and then went to stay at her cousin's house, where they awoke to find the word "snitch" scrawled on the front door, according to court documents.

The cousin's car was also damaged, with a black oily substance poured on the hood, and Gordon called police. Two days later, court records show Curry called Gordon's phone and when the fiancé, Escudero, picked up, Curry said: "I'm coming for you, buddy," according to court documents.

Ferra left the home and was not there when Curry approached the garage, where Gordon and Escudero were smoking. Curry was carrying his ex-girlfriend's clothes in one hand and had his other hand tucked into his pant pocket, court documents said.

Escudero told police he had seen something "black and metal" in Curry's pocket and that led him to assume that Curry was carrying a handgun. But according to court records, that allegation was never proven, as Curry did not brandish the object in his pocket.

The confrontation ended when Curry "made an obscene gesture with his middle finger" and walked away, court documents said.

Curry later pleaded guilty to malicious injury to property for vandalizing Gordon's car and the front door of her house, but he contested charges related to his role in the confrontation with Gordon and her fiancé.

A jury in Idaho's 1st District Court convicted Curry of burglary and aggravated assault, while a judge later found him guilty of unlawful possession of a firearm because of his past felony convictions. Curry requested a new trial, saying there wasn't enough evidence and that the jury heard hearsay evidence, resulting in an unfair trial.

But the motion was denied and he appealed.

The appellate court agreed with Curry on one of his arguments, and ruled that jurors lacked sufficient evidence to find him guilty of burglary and aggravated assault, which means his ensuing conviction on an unlawful firearm possession charge also lacked standing.

Groups Petition Montana to End Wolverine Trapping

BY MATT VOLZ
Associated Press

HELENA, Mont. • Eight conservation and sportsmen groups are petitioning Montana to ban the trapping of wolverines, citing a government finding that climate change may threaten the survival of the fierce, bear-like creatures.

Montana wildlife regulators on Thursday unanimously approved the upcoming trapping season anyway, saying the climate change models span decades and the trapping quota of five wolverines for the 2012 season is not likely to hurt the overall population.

"There's not an immediate threat," Montana Fish, Wildlife and Parks wildlife chief Ken McDonald said. "We don't see any kind of significant red flags to have us change our existing season."

Agency attorneys are still analyzing state law to determine how they'll respond to the petition.

Montana is the only state in the contiguous U.S. that allows the trapping of wolverines, the largest member of the weasel family. Wolverines keep to high elevations with deep snow and can fight off a grizzly bear when cornered.

The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service estimates there are 250 to 300 wolverines in the Lower 48, with most in Montana and Idaho, but a few animals with ranges that include Washington, Oregon, California, Wyoming and Colorado. There are larger populations in Alaska, where trapping also is permitted, and as many as 20,000 wolverines in Canada.

The Fish and Wildlife Service added wolverines to the candidates of species that warrant protection under the Endangered Species Act in 2010 after concluding climate change in the coming decades will reduce the animals' habitat and increase their isolation from each other.

The warming trend is expected to reduce the snowpack that the wolverines depend on for habitat and denning. Their habitat in the contiguous U.S. is expected to decrease by 23 percent by 2045 and 63 percent by 2099, according to the government agency.

The Fish and Wildlife Service concluded the effects of climate warming are serious, "but so far have not resulted in any detectable population effects to the species."

But that threat, coupled with the wolverine already having one of the lowest successful reproductive rates among mammals, is reason enough to end all trapping of the animal in Montana, according to the 52-page petition filed Wednesday.

The petition was submitted by Friends of the Wild Swan, Helena Hunters and Anglers Association, Montana Ecosystem Defense, Native Ecosystems Council, Alliance for the Wild Rockies, Swan View Coalition, WildEarth Guardians, Footloose Montana and one individual, George Wuerthner.

The attorney representing those groups, Matthew Bishop of the Western Environmental Law Center in Helena, said the petition asks Montana to end trapping until the species is no longer protected or a candidate for protection under the Endangered Species Act.

Bishop called wolverines the "polar bear of the Lower 48" in need of all the help they can get. Instead, Montana is "kicking them when they're down," Bishop said.

Montana Fish, Wildlife and Parks attorneys are considering their next steps regarding the petition. Montana statutes require an agency to take action within 60 days on a petition proposing a rule change, but FWP attorney Becky Jakes Dockter said the agency is discussing whether seasonal rules involving hunting and trapping are exempt from that requirement.

“We think it’s cowardly, quite frankly, to have a man hiding out of sight, exhorting his armed forces to continue to slaughter the civilians of his own country.”

U.S. State Department spokesman Patrick Ventrell in a statement as Syrian President Bashar Assad’s low profile has raised questions about whether he fears for his personal safety as the civil war escalates dramatically.

OUR VIEW

No Money, More Problems

Wastewater plants, pay increases, development moratoriums.

Oh my. The city and county of Jerome have a budget process about as murky as their wastewater. Both government entities are on record saying they want pay increases for employees. Both are also on record stating their budgets for the next fiscal year will be extremely tight. In the city’s case, leaders will have to cut $2 million from their proposed budget just to keep expenditures balanced with income.

Let’s be clear: Increasing salaries to keep them competitive is a noble goal. At a recent council meeting, Mayor John Shine said the city’s salary grid hasn’t been updated in six years. On the county side, Sheriff Doug McFall reports he struggles to keep deputies, who often leave after the department pays their training costs. Obviously, wage increases need to be considered.

But when budget discussions focus on increasing expenses without increasing income, we become concerned. Where will the money come from to grant 3 percent raises to employees? Our elected leaders haven’t made that clear.

What we do know is Jerome has a massive, unavoidable expense on the horizon. This November, the city will ask voters to approve up to $35 million in bonds for upgrades to its wastewater treatment plant. The plant leaked sewage last year, and capacity issues mean Jerome will struggle to attract new businesses — and property taxes — to the area.

“If we don’t do the expansion, we have to essentially close the doors to economic development,” Shine said in a recent interview with the Times-News. He was commendably blunt about what the upgrades would mean to the people of Jerome: higher sewage rate.

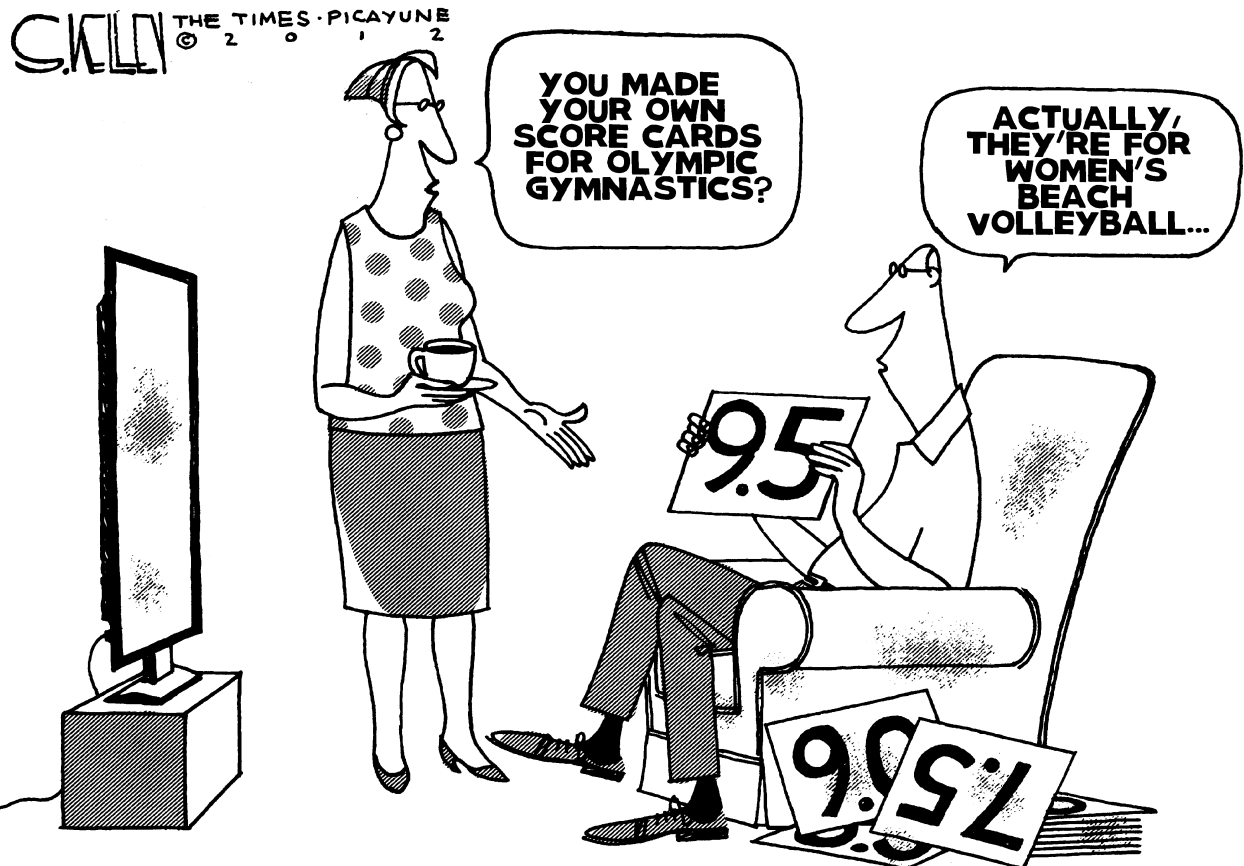

“It will be a major increase for everybody,” he said.

What happens if voters reject $35 million in bonds? Will the city, with its projected budget of $14 million (40 percent of the project’s cost), be able to foot the bill? Or will new development simply cease? More questions leaders have yet to answer.

The county commissioners may have given us a preview, however, when they slapped an emergency 182-day moratorium on confined animal feed lots and subdivisions larger than an acre in certain areas. Wastewater wasn’t the given as the reason, but it’s another way the city and county are hindering any potential increase in tax revenue.

We think Jerome officials need to be honest with their taxpayers about next year’s fiscal budget. It may be great political theater to endorse pay raises for public employees, but it’s much more responsible to show a budget that accounts for limited economic growth and increased spending on public projects. We’d like to know how they plan on doing both.

We think Jerome officials need to be honest with their taxpayers about next year’s fiscal budget.

Make Rural Americans Pay More for Mail

Wednesday was a banner day in American postal history, but not in a good way. The United States Postal Service is defaulting on a scheduled $5.5 billion payment to cover future retiree health costs. The USPS has already said it will also default on a similar payment scheduled for September. There is no immediate crisis here:

The accounting obligation to pre-pay for future health care costs in this way is unusual, and not making the payments in no way prevents normal mail operations. But the short term isn’t the real issue. The Postal Service’s underlying financial model is broken, and it probably can’t be fixed without radical measures. The model is pretty simple, albeit a little old-fashioned as a way of providing public services. Rather than having taxpayers directly finance mail delivery, Congress has chartered a freestanding entity, the USPS, charged with the legal obligation to provide low-cost daily mail service six days a week to all Americans at a flat rate — regardless of whether it’s cost-effective to do so. In exchange, that entity has a monopoly on ordinary mail delivery.

The idea is that the lucrative monopoly over delivery to metropolitan areas will generate enough revenue to cover money-losing rural services without the need for direct taxpayer sub-dies. The problem is that the monopoly isn’t nearly as lucrative as it used to be — and barring some wild technological shift, it’s going to keep getting less and less lucrative.

That means that administrative fixes related to Saturday delivery or various schemes to more aggressively lay off workers or cut their pay will only kick the can down the road. Sooner or later the basic model will need a more thorough rethink.

The simplest idea would be to relax or end the universal service obligation, acknowledging the USPS’s permanently diminished revenue stream. In other words, let the Postal Service close down unprofitable post offices and charge hard-to-reach customers money for their mail delivery. The problem with that is politics. A very modest USPS move to shut down rural post offices led to massive congressional backlash earlier this year. And, indeed, since guaranteeing subsidized rural mail delivery is the whole point, it doesn’t make much sense to back away from the commitment. If we’re committed to universal service, then we need to get the Postal Service extra money. If we’re not committed to universal service, then we may as well just privatize the whole operation. There are two main ways USPS could get enough extra revenue to sustain its regular operations. One would be to directly allocate taxpayer money to the USPS. The other would be to try to let the agency enter new businesses. In many countries, postal systems offer basic banking services. That, obviously, is not an idea the banking industry would embrace. The smaller local banks and credit unions that have been valorized in the post-TARP era would be particularly hard hit by postal banking. These, after all, are precisely the institutions that don’t offer a sophisticated menu of financial services or run lucrative investment arms. Instead they rely on the routine business of small depositors to fund their operation — exactly the market a successful postal bank would soak up. This makes postal banking a political long shot.

Privatization — also practiced successfully in many European countries — could make a lot of sense. If it happened, rural communities would need to pay more for mail or accept diminished service or subsidize postal services out of their own budget.

But why shouldn’t rural America face this tradeoff? Just like small towns, big cities have unique public service needs — large police departments, for example — that they’re expected to pay for on their own. Why should rural Americans be insured against their choice to live in distant and hard-to-reach places?

The other losers in privatization would be the Postal Service’s own workers. Postal privatization in the Netherlands hasn’t led to any catastrophic collapse in Dutch society, but it has transformed postal work into a much lower-paid occupation with grimmer working conditions.

But absent open-ended taxpayer subsidies, postal workers are going to suffer. A monopoly on daily mail delivery is an intrinsically much less valuable thing to have in 2012 than it was in 1992, and nothing can change that. A humane approach to privatization would note that the USPS currently owns a lot of valuable assets — not only a good brand, but a massive portfolio of real estate — and that the federal government has no real need for the one-time infusion of cash that would come from selling it. That means the privatized company could be turned over to its workforce as an employee-owned firm. Workers could have a say in how to manage the transition and the ability to benefit as owners from more efficient business even as they lost as workers from the same dynamic.

ONLINE COMMENTS

The conversation continues 24/7 on Magicvalley.com. With so many drug busts in the headlines, the discussion inevitably turns to the War on Drugs.

Online readers had different takes in response to the story, “$2.2M of Pot Found in Jerome:”

tbearhtown: “It’s funny that people actually believe this drug war is the best approach to ‘Drugs.’ Marijuana is not even a drug. A drug is man-made. A plant is natural. Why are people scared of a plant. All of the propaganda against marijuana has brain-washed people into believing marijuana is a “gate-way drug” that you can go crazy just by smoking it or become a lazy jobless person. This is false. Test trials have shown that marijuana actually has a positive effect on people. It can help sick people in many different ways. Marijuana can expand the mind and stimulate the brain. This is a miracle plant not a drug.”

idwindstar: “Well done, Jerome! Does this mean there will be no more weed on the street, that Jerome County is safe from this fearsome plant, and that we’ve finally won the drug war? Or will drugs continue to be readily available at inflated prices, despite the sheriff’s chest-thumping and money-spending? Yes, well done. In a bucket with hundreds of leaks, we’ve succeeded in plugging one small leak.”

An online reader commented on the story on last week’s spice raid, “Read the motion to detain Stephanie Nagel without bail!”

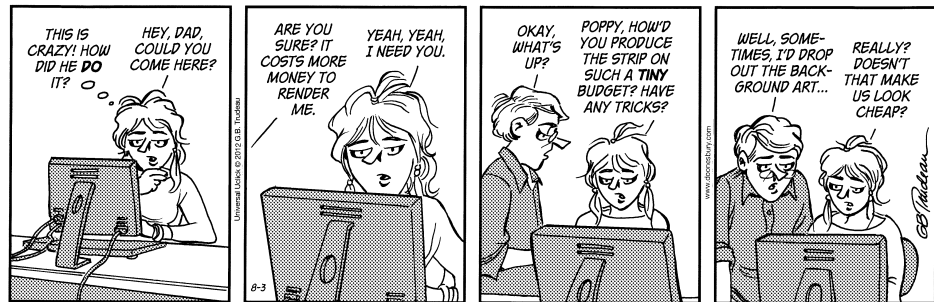

Mikle01: “I hope they all get convicted and get the maximum sentence. Several people lost their lives over spice, and they did not care. I bet they would not let their own kids do it knowing what’s in it and what it does to people. They have been busted for selling it when it had been banned that should be instant prison time, no fine, because they have made so much money off the spice that they have been selling they have enough money to pay the fine. I would like to see them go right to prison.”

Health care

administration's health care reform law will affect how much it will have to pay in order to pay for coverage.

"Health insurance costs have always been a real challenge for us," he said. "Coverage keeps changing, so anything that could help alleviate the cost would be great."

The hope for Wendy Somerset, chief executive officer of Furniture and Appliance Outlet in Twin Falls, is to be able to afford health insurance for her seven employees.

"I'm hoping they come up with a solution that's good for small businesses," she said. "I provide a dollar amount each month for insurance and if the exchange raises that amount, it's going to cause a strain."

Insurance agents are also raising questions about the challenges of setting up an exchange.

While the insurance policy may be posted on the exchange's website, it's doubtful that many people will take the time to read through the entire document, said Chris Stevenson, owner of Westport Insurance Advisors in Twin Falls.

"I have concerns over people going through the exchange and looking for certain coverage that may not be appropriate for them," Stevenson said. "They may be cutting out the role of an expert."

Despite the unknowns, Stevenson and many others would rather see Idaho manage its own exchange than rely on the federal government to provide one.

"If the exchange is state-run, it gives the opportunity for providers and payers to come up with innovative new plans that are specific to Idaho," said Dr. David Pate, chief executive officer of the St. Luke's Health System.

Before the Affordable Care Act passed in 2010, he opposed the idea of Idaho setting up an exchange. However, now that the federal government has offered to foot the bill, he sees the importance of the online marketplace could provide for consumers.

Pate praised Gov. Otter's decision to not dismiss setting up an exchange like six other governors across the nation have already announced. But at the same time, he criticized Idaho lawmakers who let politics – and not practicality – determine where they stood on health care reform.

"There are things we may not like about it but it's the law of the land now," Pate said.

"It's certainly fine for senators and representatives to hope the law will be repealed but don't put all your eggs in one basket in just hope."

Scams

"I got a call from a man that said I had won a new car, and to send the processing fee to him and he would arrange to have the car sent to me," Wilson said. "I figured him out the first minute he was talking."

• Taxes on lottery winnings: Another common scam Cowen sees involves a person being mailed a check for several thousand dollars. The scammer tells the person they've won a prize or lottery and instructs the person to put the check in their bank account. Then the person is to send some of the money back, with the scammer claiming it's for taxes or some sort of fee. Once the money is gone, the check bounces, Cowen said.

"I like to tell people if it seems too good to be true it probably is," Heil said.

Scammers practice their pitch and push victims to send money immediately, without giving the victim time to think about what's really happening, he said.

One tip Cowen had was to do an online search like Google or Yahoo! of the number that calls. Usually, it will be from a foreign country or you'll find a warning that the number is for a scam, he said.

"If somebody calls and asks for personal information never give it," he said.

If a grandchild calls and says they're in jail and need bail money wired to them, hang up and call them at home yourself, he said.

"They're probably watching TV and eating Cheetos," he said.

Cowen said scammers can be persistent, rude and mean on the phone, but the best thing to do it just hang up.

"Tell them to go away," he said. "If you hang up, they know you're not a victim. They'll keep searching until they find one."

Judge Dismisses Lawsuit over Wyoming Coal Leases

BY BEN NEARY
Associated Press

CHEYENNE, Wyo. • A federal judge has dismissed a legal challenge from environmental groups that sought to block federal coal leases in Wyoming's Powder River Basin on the grounds that burning the coal would contribute to global warming.

The Sierra Club and WildEarth Guardians challenged the federal government's sale of leases on 2 billion tons of coal. The leases are on U.S. Bureau of Land Management lands near Arch Coal's Black Thunder mine and Peabody Energy's North Antelope Rochelle mine – two of the world's largest coal mines.

U.S. District Judge Colleen Kollar-Kotelly of Washington, D.C., on Monday dismissed two merged lawsuits, saying the groups lacked standing to sue because they failed to show leasing the tracts would cause climate change that would specifically harm their membership. The groups claimed global warming from burning the coal would damage their recreational, aesthetic and economic interests.

Kollar-Kotelly wrote there was evidence that even if the disputed tracts lay fallow, "domestic and international consumers' consumption behavior would not be materially affected and the national energy portfolio would remain unchanged."

Beverly Gorny, spokeswoman for the BLM in Cheyenne, said Thursday the leases were sold this year but haven't been mined yet. She said they're adjacent to current mining sites.

John Horning, executive director of WildEarth Guardians in Santa Fe, N.M., said his group is disappointed with Kollar-Kotelly's ruling and plans to appeal.

"We're especially disappointed given that this ruling never gets to the real merits. We've been bounced on standing," Horning said. "And it's, I think, a pretty cynical view of the impacts of climate change to dismiss one's standing because the impacts are so diffuse. We're all affected by climate change."

Horning said his group has focused on the Powder River Basin because of the scale of mining and coal production there. Wyoming is the nation's leading coal-producing state and most of its production comes from that area.

Marion Loomis, executive director of the Wyoming Mining Association, said Thursday he's thankful the judge dismissed the suits. His group is a member of the National Mining Association, which intervened as a defendant.

"The Department of Interior has to follow their rules and laws that are on the books," Loomis said. "I don't think there's anything on the department's laws, rules or regulations that says they have to take into account any climate change. Until that happens, they shouldn't be taking that into consideration in their environmental reviews."

Loomis said his group has no position on the issue of how coal mining may affect global warming.

"Obviously burning coal does release CO₂," Loomis said. But he said the world is going to use coal and his organization hopes Wyoming will be one of its sources for affordable, reliable electricity.

Wyoming's coal industry generates about $1.2 billion in taxes, royalties and fees each year for Wyoming's state and local governments, Loomis said. And its $700 million payroll is a huge economic driver for the state, he said.

Utilities, Renewable Developers Set for Fight

BOISE (AP) • State electricity regulators aiming to set the course for Idaho's renewables industry for years to come will hold hearings next week on long-running and bitter disputes between utilities like Idaho Power Co. and independent wind, solar and biogas developers.

The Idaho Public Utilities Commission scheduled three days of hearings starting Tuesday.

Regulators hope to settle differences, including how to set the price utilities must pay renewables developers for their power and whether utilities can refuse to buy power from alternative projects when relatively few people are using electricity. There's also the vexing issue of whether lucrative environmental credits that accompany renewables energy projects should be the property of the utilities — or renewables developers.

"These issues have been going on since 2005," said Gene Fadness, the PUC spokesman. Commissioners "are more than ready to have all the parties come to some sort of agreement."

Disputes between alternative power producers like have turned the state's renewables landscape into a mine field of contention.

The utilities argue that wind producers have abused a 1978 law to secure attractive contracts for their energy, driving up costs for ratepayers and making the energy supply less predictable.

One Fifth of US Suffers Drought

BY ALYSSA A. BOTELHO
The Washington Post

The drought has intensified in the most parched areas of the country, with more than a fifth of the contiguous United States experiencing "extreme" or "exceptional" drought, according to numbers released Thursday by the National Drought Mitigation Center.

As lawmakers scrambled Thursday to put together a bill giving disaster relief to ranchers, much of the Great Plains continued to fry under cloudless skies. Nebraska, Kansas, Missouri, Oklahoma and Arkansas are experiencing intensifying drought.

"It's hard to believe that it's getting worse, but it is, even with some rain in the region," said climatologist

Brian Fuchs in a statement released by the drought center, which is based at the University of Nebraska at Lincoln.

Just three weeks ago, the portion of the lower 48 states receiving those two most serious drought designations stood at 11.6 percent. That area has now doubled, to 22.3 percent. The jump in the past week from 20.6 percent represents an increase of about 32 million acres.

The geographical expanse of the drought has shrunk slightly, but it remains historically high, with more than three-fifths of the lower 48 experiencing moderate drought or worse. That's an area that comes close to matching the sprawling drought of 1934 at the worst of the Dust Bowl era.

The new statistics show the areas that need rain the most aren't getting it, and there is little moisture on the horizon as the country sizzles through the hottest year on record.

"Any time you have that much heat together with drought, you impact crops worse than if it was just drought," said Roger Pulwarty, who monitors drought for the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration.

The Big Drought of 2012 has been tough on farmers, who are watching their crops wither in 100-degree heat. But it has been even more brutal on ranchers. Most crop farmers have insurance to cushion the blow of a bad harvest and the rise in prices is a windfall for those with something to harvest and sell.

The ranchers have hungry cows and a quandary. As grass on rangelands is dying across the country, the price of corn and hay is soaring.

With the 2008 farm bill due to expire Sept. 30, congressional leaders are feeling the pressure to pass a new, five-year farm bill before the summer recess begins. After a proposal to provide a one-year extension on current programs met push back from both parties, House GOP leaders decided this week to begin revamping crop insurance and programs to aid the livestock sector.

The House on Thursday raced to pass $383 million in relief that could provide up to $100,000 each for the hardest-hit livestock producers. That bill would still have to pass the Senate and might not become law until some time this fall.

Smart landscaping: 3 spots to skip grass

by Dawn West, All About Lawns Columnist

You may want grass as far as the eye can see, but if you employ a few smart tricks from tried-and-true landscaping designs, your lawn maintenance will be a lot easier. Here are three small spots where skipping the grass can make a world of difference.

1. Don't plant grass all the way to the fence or wall. If you leave a small strip of mulch right next to the wall or fence instead, you'll be able to trim the grass with your mower alone--no extra time with the edger required.

2. Plant ground cover instead of grass on steep slopes. Steep slopes are trouble for grass. Planting grass seed on a slope is tough (seed may slide down the hill). Ditto for fertilizing lawns on a steep hill (again, fertilizer slides down the hill). And pushing a mower up and down a steep hill? That's both hard and potentially dangerous. Planting a ground cover on those inclines, instead, saves you all that trouble and can be more visually-interesting.

3. Mulch around objects. Instead of planting grass all the way up to the base of the tree or all the way around the mailbox or flagpole, leave a circle of mulch or ground cover instead. It's easier for mowing, and for fertilizing lawns or weed control it's nice to have a buffer between the lawn and trees.

Landscaping designs like these can be both attractive and practical. From minutes saved fertilizing lawns to minutes saved mowing, a little less grass can translate into a lot more time for you.

CSI Volleyball Tabbed with No. 1 Ranking

BY DAVID BASHORE
dbashore@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • The College of Southern Idaho is used to having the No. 1 next to its name at the end of the volleyball season. This season the Golden Eagles may have to go wire-to-wire to see that happen.

CSI has already been pegged as the team to beat in 2012, topping the NJCAA Division I preseason poll released Thursday.

CSI finished sixth at the 2011 NJCAA Division I Tournament, but the Golden Eagles returned nine players from that Region 18 Tournament-winning squad, including five starters.

“To be honest, I was a little surprised. I was hoping we’d be in the top five, but I didn’t think we’d be in the top spot,” seventh-year CSI coach Heidi Cartisser said. “But as the day went on, I told myself we were returning a lot of starters, finished sixth, have a lot of incoming impact players, and if they’re going off all that then maybe I can understand it a little bit.”

The preseason NJCAA poll is usually based largely off the previous season, but 2011 champ Blinn College isn’t even in the poll. Former CSI assistant coach

Burley Rallies to Advance at Class A State

TIMES-NEWS

POCATELLO • Burley made far more difficult work for itself than it felt was necessary, but the Green Sox survived and advanced.

Burley chased down a three-run deficit with three innings to play Thursday, rallying for a 5-4 win over the Boise Gems to move on in the winners’ bracket at the American Legion Class A state tournament at Halliwell Park.

The Green Sox scored three in the fifth to tie the game, then Taylor Carson singled to get things started in the second. Joe Ferrin bunted him to second base, and then he stole third. Jack Darrington grounded out and, as the ball left the fielder’s hand headed to first base, Carson bolted for home, sliding in and jarring the ball loose to score the winning run.

Boise chased starting pitcher Ferrin after four innings, tagging him for all four runs, two earned. But when the chips were down, the Green Sox generated the offense they sorely needed, capped by Carson’s dash home.

“For some reason we struggle against off-speed pitchers. We did make some adjustments late – better late than never – but for an older team playing a younger team we should have scored more runs,” Burley coach Devin Kunz said. “We had runners on base but we didn’t come up with some clutch hits (early). We popped up to the infield five outs, which is ridiculous. But in the end we got the W and that’s all that counts this time of year.”

Jake Mills relieved Ferrin and tossed three scoreless innings, setting the stage for Burley’s heroics, which advanced the Green Sox to a 4 p.m. game today against Rocky Mountain.

“They’re not going to make any mistakes and they won’t give it to us, just like these guys didn’t,” Kunz said of today’s opponent. “But if we hit the ball like we can, which we haven’t been doing lately, we’ll be OK.”

The first was in 2007 during his second tour of duty in Iraq. A roadside bomb caused nerve damage, muscle loss and third-degree burns over 45 percent of his body.

Fortunately, the second life-changing experience helped alleviate the burden of the first. After Sibbett, a 2002 Minico graduate, returned home to Idaho, he got in contact with Monte Bruhm, co-founder and president of Idaho “N” Heroes Outdoors, a Buhl-based non-profit organization that takes injured veterans on outdoor activities such as hunting or fishing.

Sibbett’s excursion included a scenic airplane flight to the Frank Church-River of No Return Wilderness.

“They showed me a part of Idaho that I’d never seen before,” Sibbett said. “It was a cool experience and I thought it was awesome what they were doing for wounded veterans.”

The picturesque view made Sibbett look at his own life differently.

“They inspired me to think about what other things I haven’t done in life yet that I still want to do,” Sibbett said. “Being in an airplane like that inspired me to want to learn how to fly, get my pilots license and have my own plane one day. That little nugget of inspiration gave me the kick-start to go back to school and find a job that would support a hobby like that. It really inspired me to get out and get going again.”

It also inspired Sibbett to help raise funds for Idaho “N” Heroes Outdoors. He organized the Freedom Isn’t Free golf scramble, and the second-annual event will be held Saturday at Burley Golf Course.

Phelps Still Rules the Pool

ASSOCIATED PRESS

LONDON • Michael Phelps spent the day thinking about all the things he’s doing for the final time at the pool. It turns out that included one last win over Ryan Lochte.

Phelps finally got a gold all his own at his final Olympics.

Adding to an already unprecedented medal collection, he claimed his first individual victory of the London Games and handed Lochte a double disappointment on his rival’s final night in the pool Thursday.

Phelps set the tone right from the start with a dominating butterfly leg to become the first male swimmer to win the same individual event at three straight Olympics in the 200-meter individual medley. He claimed his 20th career medal – and 16th gold – in 1 minute, 54.27 seconds, just off his winning time in Beijing but still good enough for gold, ahead of Lochte.

When it was done, there wasn’t that water-pounding celebration we’ve seen so many times from Phelps – just a slight smile as he hung on the lane rope, gazing up at the stands and soaking it all in.

“Going into every call room, I said it’s my last semifinals or my last prelim,” Phelps said, reflecting on a busy day that included a morning swim, then two more races in the evening. “We’re kind of chalking up all the lasts of certain things.”

As he powered to the wall, his mom Debbie screamed, “Go! Go! Go!” When Phelps touched first, she dropped her head, kissed her two Gabby Is Golden Girl for U.S.

LONDON • Just 14, Gabby Douglas pleaded with her mother to let her move cross country, certain a new coach could help her get to the Olympics.

Not two years after setting out on her own, Douglas beat Russia’s Viktoria Komova for the all-around title Thursday night, becoming the third straight U.S. athlete to win gymnastics’ biggest prize and the first African-American to do so. It was her second gold medal of the London Games, coming two nights after she and her “Fierce Five” teammates gave the United States its first Olympic title since 1996.

“It feels amazing to be the Olympic champion,” Douglas said.

Puts her in a special category, too. Mary Lou Retton, Carly Patterson and Nastia Liukin are the only other Americans to win the Olympic all-around gold.

Gabrielle Douglas waves to the audience after her final and deciding performance on the floor, followed by coach Liang Chow, during the women’s gymnastics individual all-around competition.

The Americans have been looking for their “next Mary Lou” since she won in 1984, and now they’ve got her in the 16-year-old Douglas. Throw in her adorable “Flying Squirrel” nickname and sweet backstory, and Douglas’ two gold medals certainly won’t be her only riches.

A. Romney 'Thrilled to Death' by Rafalca's Test

ASSOCIATED PRESS

The owners of the horse Rafalca, from left, Ann Romney, the wife of U.S. Republican presidential candidate Mitt Romney, and Elisabeth Meyer, along with Amy Eberling, wife of rider Jan Ebeling, applaud Thursday after their horse's performance in the equestrian dressage competition.

LONDON • The horse with the weight of a U.S. presidential campaign riding on her back didn't disappoint.

Ann Romney said Thursday that Rafalca "thrilled me to death" with a solid performance at her Olympic debut in dressage — an ancient equestrian sport now seen as the province of the wealthy 1 percent that has been thrust into the political spotlight thanks to Romney's partial ownership in the horse.

Romney's wife Ann was in the VIP section of the equestrian stadium at Greenwich Park for Rafalca's competition, watching literally from the edge of her seat as the mare completed the 7-minute Grand Prix test.

She and Rafalca's other two owners gave horse and rider Jan Ebeling a rousing standing ovation and a wave as they left the arena. Their score of 70.243 percent put them in 13th place with half the 50 competitors still to go. "She was consistent and elegant," Romney told The Associated Press. "She did not disappoint. She thrilled me to death."

Ebeling, too, was pleased with the performance.

"She felt really strong and is peaking at the right time," he said. "She was amped up, a little stronger than usual. She had more oomph. The trick is to manage that."

He said he hadn't spoken to Romney before the competition — he never does — but said her final words of advice to him were to "Do what you know (how) to do, and do what you do best."

"It was a good score. Overall it was great," he said. "Knowing my three ladies, they're probably in tears right now," he said of Romney and co-owners Beth Meyer and Amy Ebeling, his wife.

At the halfway point in the first phase of the team dressage competition, Britain and Germany were vying for gold and the Netherlands and Sweden for bronze. Britain's Carl Hester on Uthopia scored 77.72 percent in the early going, followed by teammate Laura Bechtolsheimer on Mistral Hojris with 76.839 percent and Germany's Dorothee Schneider on Diva Royal with 76.277.

Ketchum's Adrienne Lyle competes Friday in the event's second phase.

Anky van Grunsven of The Netherlands, who won the individual gold in the past three Olympic games, trailed in fifth with 73.343 on Salinero, her partner in 2004 and 2008 and now considered somewhat past his prime but still a solid team horse.

"The only thing I want now is a good team score," said van Grunsven. "I'm not here for myself but for the team."

All 50 riders perform the Grand Prix dressage test — half each on Thursday and Friday. They return to perform the harder Grand Prix Special test on Aug. 7 to determine team medals. The highest scoring riders will then move forward to the freestyle competition Aug. 9 to decide individual medals.

The sport is the equine equivalent of ballet. A rider, clad in top hat and tails, takes the horse through a series of steps that look like the horse is dancing: twirling pirouettes, prancing trots and the crowd-pleasing "flying change," which looks like the horse is skipping.

Broncos Ranked No. 22 by Coaches

BOISE • The streak lives on for Boise State.

The Broncos opened the college football voting season by entering the USA Today coaches' poll at No. 22, making it the 62nd consecutive week the Broncos have been ranked in the poll.

It also marks the 11th consecutive season in which the Broncos have been ranked in the poll.

The only team with a longer streak is Alabama, at 65 weeks. The Tide were part of a three-team logjam at the top of the poll.

Despite its lopsided loss to Alabama in last January's BCS national title game, LSU will open the season ranked No. 1. The Tigers sit atop the poll, with the Crimson Tide second and Southern California third.

LSU received 18 first-place votes, slightly fewer than the 20 first-place votes for the Crimson Tide and 19 first-place votes for the Trojans. Still, the Tigers narrowly had the most overall points in the poll, which awards 25 points for a No. 1 vote down to one point for 25th.

Oklahoma and Oregon round out the top five, followed by Georgia, Florida State, Michigan, South Carolina and Arkansas. LSU and Alabama, rivals in the Southeastern Conference, meet Nov. 3 in Baton Rouge. The complete poll can be found on Page S2.

Idaho's Veltung Named to Hornung List

MOSCOW • Idaho senior receiver Justin Veltung was named Thursday to the Paul Hornung Award Watch List.

Veltung was one of 49 receivers named to the preseason watch list for the award, which honors the nation's most versatile player.

He serves as well as receiver for the Vandals.

"I'm very happy and excited for Justin to be recognized in this fashion," Idaho head coach Robb Akey said in a statement. "I think it says a lot for him and his abilities and for this team. I'm anxious for him to have a great senior season and I think if he does do the things he's capable of, he's a guy who could be a finalist for that award."

Veltung was also on the 2011 preseason watch list.

Erin Mellinger took over the Blinn program in the spring, following David Rehr's departure.

CSI led three Scenic West Athletic Conference schools in the preseason top 20. Salt Lake Community College was seventh and North Idaho College 12th.

The Golden Eagles report Monday for fall practice, which formally begins Thursday evening.

Intensity of those early practices won't change based on the preseason polls, but the message might be slightly altered.

"Everybody wants to take their chances at beating CSI. It's nothing new, but it is an honor to be No. 1 again and get that respect," Cartisser said. "The biggest thing with these girls is that if we have the respect of being No. 1, you'd better show up every day and act like it. Mentally, they have this in their head and hopefully, talking with a lot of our players, they're so excited and determined that the national tournament is going to end differently than how it did last year."

U.S. Women's Eight Wins Another Rowing Gold

ASSOCIATED PRESS

WINDSOR, England • Moments before "The Star-Spangled Banner" resounded across a sun-kissed Dorney Lake, Taylor Ritzel looked at the gold medal hanging around her neck. She shook her head and took a deep breath.

Ritzel was part of the U.S. women's eight that won a second straight Olympic gold, maintaining a six-year dominance in the event. But her journey to the top of the podium was far more difficult than the victory against rival Canada on Thursday at the London Games.

In November 2010, soon after Ritzel had joined the eight, her mother, Lana, died of breast cancer. The loss could have devastated her. Thanks to her crewmates, it didn't.

"For me ... the sport of rowing has been a huge way to sort of get through the grieving process," Ritzel said, her bottom lip quivering.

"I think the sport and the eight other women in this boat, and the rest of Team USA, have made what seemed to be an impossible thing to get through possible."

The camaraderie in the women's eight was in full view as they threw up their intertwined arms when the announcer read out: "Gold-medalists — the United States!"

Esther Lofgren was in tears.

Susan Francia looked close to joining her.

Coxswain Mary Whipple received the biggest cheer as the medals were handed out under clearing skies on the pontoon. She would later be tossed into the lake by the jubilant crew.

"That is an American dynasty, baby!" Francia said. "It's just so special."

The dynasty began at Dorney Lake in 2006, when the U.S. won the world championship, and it was never in doubt in Thursday's final.

Racing in a fierce crosswind, the U.S. led from start to finish to win in 6 minutes, 10.59 seconds, a half-length ahead of a fast-finishing Canadian crew who have come close this year to breaking the American stranglehold on the event.

In Lucerne in May, the Canadians lost out by only three hundredths of a second and they qualified for the Olympic final with a faster time in the heats. However, they left their charge for gold too late.

"Coming off the line, I felt so much," Whipple said. "And then when we took our stride, that was beautiful."

"We were a little high and I just told them to breathe and enjoy the moment. Feel each stroke. Be present. And we LONDON • The last group in England with this many records was The Beatles.

The U.S. men's Olympic basketball team beat Nigeria 156-73 Thursday night, an epic blowout that answered the Americans' detractors and sent a clear message to let them be.

After two opening routs that provoked criticism of their slow starts and outside shooting, the Americans rewrote the record books.

They led by 26 in the first quarter, had an Olympic-record 78 points in the first half and Carmelo Anthony scored 37 points, including 10 of 12 3-pointers, to break the U.S. single-game scoring record in less than three quarters.

"Our guys just couldn't miss," said coach Mike Krzyzewski.

that," Douglas said. "I just wanted to seize the moment. You have to learn how to enjoy the moment!"

Her smile alone is enough to dazzle Madison Avenue, and her personality is bigger than she is.

She's even managed to make Oprah Winfrey cry. Douglas had barely gotten off the medals stand when the talk show maven said on Twitter that she was "so THRILLED for Gabby. Flowing happy tears!!"

Coach Liang Chow told Douglas the gold was hers after an electrifying floor routine, but she had to wait another five minutes until it was official. That's because Komova, runner-up at last year's world championships, was still to come.

Komova's floor routine was impressive, as well. Finished, she stood at the center of the arena staring intently at the scoreboard, fingertips pressed to her lips, teammate Aliya Mustafina rubbing her shoulder. When the final standings flashed, Komova dropped her head and headed to the sidelines, tears falling.

Mustafina and Aly Raisman finished with identical scores of 59.566, but the Russian got the bronze on a tiebreak. The lowest scores for both gymnasts were dropped, and the remaining three were totaled. That gave Mustafina a total of 45.933 and Raisman 45.366.

"I'm still upset because I could have been gold and I didn't get it," said Komova, her silver medal buried in the pocket of her warm-up jacket.

Douglas, meanwhile, was grinning ear to ear. Up in the stands, her mother, Natalie Hawkins, embraced her children and then shared a long hug with Missy Parton, whose family took Douglas in after she moved to West Des Moines, Iowa, and now counts her as one of their own.

"She inspires me," Hawkins said, referring to her champion. "To keep it together in that moment when it meant so much says a lot about her" daughters — both former swimmers — and let the tears flow.

When Phelps stepped on the medal podium — yep, that familiar top rung — his eyes were glassy and he whispered a joke to Lochte, trying to keep the moment light. Then, staring up at the U.S. flag while the national anthem played, Phelps bit his lip and seemed to be struggling to hold back his own tears.

"Once it's all over, it's going to really hit me emotionally," he said. "I know for my mom it's very emotional.

I'm the last Phelps to come through. She's watched my sisters go through the sport and retire."

So a farewell games that started as a bit of a disappointment is definitely looking up. He's now won two golds and two silvers in five races — not the eight golds in China, but a more-than-fitting caper to a brilliant career that still has two more races to go: the 100 butterfly Friday and the 4x100 medley relay Saturday.

Lochte settled for silver in 1:54.90, having split with Phelps in their two head-to-head races in London. Hungary's Laszlo Cseh took the bronze, well behind the Americans in 1:56.22.

Jim Furyk reacts after making a birdie putt on the eighth hole during the first round of the Bridgestone Invitational at Firestone Country Club on Thursday.

Furyk Races to Bridgestone Lead

ASSOCIATED PRESS

AKRON, Ohio • Jim Furyk made a detour to Florida to sit on his back porch and hang out with his kids as he tried to figure out why decent golf was producing ordinary scores. The short break appeared to do him a world of good Thursday in the Bridgestone Invitational.

With seven birdies and a 30-foot eagle putt, Furyk had a 7-under 63 for his best score ever at Firestone and a two-shot lead over Lee Slattery of England.

The conditions could not have been more ideal with sunshine, heat and very little wind, along with carpet for fairways and smooth greens. It showed in some of the tee shots on the South Course — 58 drives of at least 350 yards, and a 427-yarder by Branden Grace of South Africa — and mostly in the scoring.

Luke Donald, the world's No. 1 player, and Masters champion Bubba Watson were among those at 66. Thirty players in the 78-man field at this World Golf Championship managed to break par.

Tiger Woods was not among them. He was 3 under after back-to-back birdies to start the back nine, but had to lay up with his third shot on the par-5 16th after driving into the trees and ended his round with a three-putt bogey from 25 feet for a 70. It was his second-worst start at Firestone, a course where he has won seven times. The other was a 74 in 2010, his last week without a swing coach.

"I think I averaged about four putts per hole, so it was a great day on the greens," said Woods, who lost his touch on the greens but at least kept his sarcasm.

Since missing out on a chance to win the U.S. Open, Furyk has tied for 34th in two tournaments and missed two cuts, including last week in Canada. For a guy who is 15th in the Ryder Cup standings — even a win this week would not make him eligible for the U.S. team — this was no time to be stuck in neutral.

Reds Continue Hot Streak, Top Padres

ASSOCIATED PRESS

CINCINNATI • Todd Frazier hit a two-run homer and Johnny Cueto overcame a pair of rare long balls to pitch into the eighth inning Thursday and lead the surging Cincinnati Reds to their 13th win in 14 games, 9-4 over the San Diego Padres.

Scott Rolen had three hits, Frazier had three RBIs and Jay Bruce drove in two runs, helping push the Reds to 23 games over .500 (64-41) for the first time since Sept. 4, 2010.

Cueto (14-5), who gave up home runs for the first time in more than two months, allowed eight hits and four runs with one walk and nine strikeouts in 7 1/3 innings.

The Reds chased Padres starter Ross Ohlendorf (3-2) while sending 12 batters to the plate during a six-hit, six-run second inning. Ohlendorf also was called for a run-scoring balk before leaving after just 1 2/3 innings, the shortest outing by a San Diego starter this season.

METS 9, GIANTS 1

SAN FRANCISCO • Ronny Cedeno drove in five runs to match his career high, Jason Bay had only his second multi-RBI game this year and the Mets beat San Francisco to take three of four from the Giants and win their first series in a month.

Bay had two RBIs as Mets won for the fourth time in five games following a 2-14 slide. His only other multi-RBI game was April 13, when he hit a two-run homer against Philadelphia.

Chris Young (3-5) allowed one run and four hits in seven innings.

Hunter Pence had a fourth-inning sacrifice fly for San Francisco.

Barry Zito (8-8) gave up seven runs, six hits and three walks in 4 1/3 innings.

NATIONALS 3, PHILLIES 0

WASHINGTON • Ross Detwiler pitched three-hit ball for seven innings and Adam LaRoche homered in Washington's victory over Philadelphia.

LaRoche had three hits and two RBIs. Jayson Werth also drove in a run for the NL East leaders in his first game back from a broken wrist.

second time in his last 11 starts. He gave up three singles and retired his final 14 batters.

Sean Burnett tossed a perfect eighth and Tyler Clippard worked a hitless ninth game for his 21st save in 23 chances. He walked two but struck out pinch-hitter Ryan Howard for the third out.

BRAVES 6, MARLINS 1

ATLANTA • Chipper Jones and Freddie Freeman each hit a two-run double, and Atlanta scored six runs in the first two innings to beat Miami.

Jason Heyward had three hits and drove in a run for the Braves, 6-1 on their 10-game homestand. They won three times in the four-game series and remained 2 1/2 games behind first-place Washington.

Cristhian Martinez (5-2) took over for starter Mike Minor in the fourth following a 42-minute rain delay. Martinez allowed one run in three innings.

ROCKIES 8, CARDINALS 2

DENVER • Tyler Colvin hit a tiebreaking double and rookie Josh Rutledge homered in his fourth straight game.

Wilin Rosario hit his first career pinch-hit homer, a two-run shot off reliever Brian Fuentes in the eighth inning, and Jordan Pacheco went 3 for 3 with two doubles and two RBIs to help the Rockies snap a five-game losing streak. It was their first win in their last eight games at Coors Field. With the score deadlocked at 2, DJ LeMahieu singled off reliever Fernando Salas (1-4) to start the seventh inning and was sacrificed to second. Colvin then doubled to left to put the Rockies back on top.

American League TWINS 5, RED SOX 0

BOSTON • Samuel Deduno allowed two hits in six innings in his third straight strong performance and the Minnesota Twins spoiled a rare solid outing by Jon Lester.

Brian Dozier had three hits for Minnesota, including a two-run homer in the ninth.

Deduno, making his sixth major league start, has given up just two earned runs and 10 hits in 19 1/3 innings.

ROYALS 7, INDIANS 6, 11 INNINGS

KANSAS CITY, Mo. • Alcides Escobar's RBI single with two outs in the 11th inning gave the Kansas City Royals the victory.

Escobar's two-strike hit scored Eric Hosmer, who led off the inning with a single.

The Indians rallied from a six-run first-inning deficit, but lost their sixth straight, their longest losing streak since dropping seven in a row from June 19-26, 2010.

ARLINGTON, Texas • A four-run seventh and a three-run eighth helped Texas snap a 8-8 tie and deal the Angels late misery in the second straight night.

Vikings Lean on Allen to Maintain Winning Spirit

ASSOCIATED PRESS

MANKATO, Minn. • Jared Allen is happy to help out the younger Minnesota Vikings, answering questions, giving advice or critiquing their performance.

But be clear about this, young fellas: You're getting paid to play, so the expectations are just as high as they are for the veterans.

"This isn't high school or college," said Allen, who is beginning his ninth season in the NFL and fifth with the Vikings since finishing his collegiate career at Idaho State. "I can show them how to be a pro or show them the standards we expect, but at the end of the day, you have to do your job. If you can't, we'll find out pretty quick out here."

The Vikings are a case study of how fast the NFL landscape can change. In less than two years, they went from an experienced team with deep playoff hopes to a young squad that looked lost during most of 2011.

"I still feel like I'm playing at a high level, but every year is a concern of if I'm going to win a championship," Allen said. "That's where I just put my trust in the front office that they're going to bring the players in, and our goals match up. I'm not in this to rebuild. I'm in this every year to compete for a championship, and they are too. And I truly believe that, and that's why I love being a Minnesota Viking."

On a team given a good chance to win a Super Bowl, there is obvious built-in motivation. But when an older player's career window is closing faster than the team's plan for championship contention is developing, the void could potentially be difficult to fill with other driving forces.

Minnesota defensive end Jared Allen (69) gets around a block by rookie offensive tackle Matt Kalil during a training camp practice last month.

Kofi Annan Quits as UN Envoy to Syria

BEIRUT (AP) • Kofi Annan announced his resignation Thursday as Syria's peace envoy and issued a blistering critique of world powers, bringing to a dramatic end a frustrating six-month effort that failed to achieve even a temporary cease-fire as the country plunged into civil war.

In a reflection of that escalation, rebels used a captured tank to shell a military air base near Aleppo — one of the first known uses of heavy weapons by the insurgents.

Speaking to reporters in Geneva, Annan blamed the Syrian government's intransigence, the growing militancy of Syrian rebels and a divided Security Council that failed to forcefully back his effort. Since he took the job, Russia and China have twice used their veto power to block strong Western- and Arab-backed action against President Bashar Assad's regime.

The White House said Annan's

people "disgusting"

"It is impossible for me or anyone to compel the Syrian government and also the opposition to take the steps to bring about the political process," said Annan, a Nobel Peace Prize laureate and former U.N. secretary general.

"You have to understand: As an envoy, I can't want peace more than the protagonists, more than the Security Council or the international community for that matter."

Annan singled out the regime for blame for the violence. But he also said the opposition's increasing militarization had contributed to dooming his six-point peace plan.

"The bloodshed continues, most of all because of the Syrian government's intransigence, and continuing refusal to implement the six-point plan, and also because of the escalating military campaign of the opposition — all of which is compounded by the disunity of the international community," he said.

Vacant Detroit Becomes Dumping Ground for the Dead

DETROIT (AP) • From the street, the two decomposing bodies were nearly invisible, concealed in an overgrown lot alongside worn-out car tires and a moldy sofa. The teenagers had been shot, stripped to their underwear and left on a deserted block.

They were just the latest victims of foul play whose remains went undiscovered for days after being hidden deep inside Detroit's vast urban wilderness — a crumbling wasteland rarely visited by outsiders and infrequently patrolled by police.

Abandoned and neglected parts of the city are quickly becoming dumping grounds for the dead — at least a dozen bodies in 12 months' time. And authorities acknowledge there's little they can do.

"You can shoot a person, dump a body and it may just go unsolved" because of the time it may take for the corpse to be found, officer John Garner said.

The bodies have been purposely hidden or discarded in alleys, fields, vacant houses, abandoned garages and even a canal. Seven of the victims are believed to have been slain outside Detroit and then dumped within the city.

It's a pattern made possible by more than four decades of urban decay and suburban flight. White residents started moving to burgeoning suburbs in the 1950s, then stepped up their exodus after a deadly 1967 race riot. Detroit's black middle class followed over the next two decades, leaving block after block of empty homes.

Over time, tens of thousands of houses deteriorated. Some collapsed, others were demolished. Empty lots gave way to block-long fields.

Jacob Kudla and Jourdan Bobbish were found July 27 in a field off Lyford Street, a lonely road that borders an industrial area and a small municipal airport.

The teens from suburban Westland, 18 and 17, respectively, had been visiting Kudla's uncle in Detroit when they disappeared July 22.

Their corpses were found by someone walking along the desolate block. The closest house, about 100 yards away, belongs to 74-year-old Ella Dunn.

Regwida Neayish, 19, right, surfs the Internet with a friend Monday at the Sahar Gul Internet cafe in Kabul, Afghanistan. Donor nations have pledged to keep bankrolling the Afghan security forces and send more development money.

What Happens after the Troops Leave?

Promises of support from foreign nations have done little to buoy the hopes of Afghans in despair about the future of their nation.

KABUL, Afghanistan (AP) • Asadullah Ramin lost all hope in his homeland — he's so worried about what will happen when U.S. and international troops leave that he's ready to pay a smuggler to whisk his family out of Afghanistan.

It would cost the 50-year-old, self-employed electronics engineer tens of thousands of dollars to leave his middle-class life in the Afghan capital and start a new chapter with his wife and their three daughters. He has done OK in recent years, even getting contracts from the foreign forces, and he has warm memories of Kabul from his teens — before Soviet forces invaded the nation.

But he wouldn't hesitate for a moment. He already paid to have his two sons smuggled to a European country he won't disclose.

"If I could go in the next hour, I would leave everything — the house, my shop," Ramin said, tears welling in his eyes as he spoke in his dusty workshop.

"I have no hope, no hope," he said, opening his palms as if pleading to be understood.

The United States and its allies have tried to reassure Afghans that they are not abandoning the country when international combat troops leave by the end of 2014.

Donor nations have pledged billions to bankroll Afghan security forces and billions more in development aid. Country after country has signed a long-term partnership pact with Kabul.

But the promises have done little to buoy the hopes of Afghans who are in despair about the future of their nation.

Among Afghans around the country interviewed by The Associated Press, the worry is pervasive. Many are deeply skeptical that Afghan police and security forces, which the U.S.-led coalition has spent years trying to build, will be able to fight insurgents and militants without American and NATO fighting alongside. Worse-case scenarios that some fear: The Afghan forces could splinter along ethnic line and prompt civil war, the nation could plunge into a deep recession, or the Kabul government — plagued with corruption and still fragile despite efforts to establish its authority — would remain too weak to hold off a Taliban takeover.

Just a 45-minute drive south of Kabul, residents of Wardak province directly feel the tenuousness. The province is a battleground for Afghan and coalition forces trying to squash hotbeds of the Taliban. Residents quickly warn visitors that it's dangerous just to go past a checkpoint less than half-mile outside the provincial capital, Maidan Shahr.

"We don't know if the government has been successful or not," 17-year-old Mohammad Ashaq said, chatting inside a tiny pharmacy in the city. "Most people think that after 2014, the government will not exist."

Hanging over the fears is a sense history could repeat itself. Afghans felt abandoned by the U.S. after 1989, when the Soviet army withdrew from Afghanistan. U.S. support to mujahedeen fighters and battling the Soviets dried up quickly and Afghanistan sank into civil war as militias and warlords battled for power, devastating Kabul. That was followed by the rise of the Taliban and years of rule under its repressive regime.

Violet 'Irene' Ford

Aug. 19, 1921-July 31, 2012

BUHL • Violet "Irene" Ford went to be with her Savior Jesus Christ on Tuesday, July 31, 2012.

She was born Aug. 19, 1921, to Elmer and Lucy (Hendrix) Ellis in Washburn, Mo. She was the eldest of six children, Irene, Wayne, Christine and Paul (two brothers, "little" Glen and "little" Willis died at infancy). Her mother became ill and was bedridden, so Irene quit school during the sixth grade to care for her siblings.

As a teenager, she met and later married Elmo Ford, and the couple had three daughters, Darlene (Chuck) Stults, Rozelle (and the late Glen) Clark and LaVone (Denny) Jones. She was a hard-working woman. She helped Elmo in the spud and hay fields, sometimes driving the truck, working on the harvester or bringing food and water to the workers.

She was an excellent cook and very proud to have been the winner of the best cook competition with her famous enchiladas. She later worked for Iverson Fish Hatchery. She loved working in her yard, and it was always beautiful. We loved hearing her stories of growing up and some of the interesting places like Measel Prairie and Buzzard Glory. Irene was a member of Buhl First Assembly of God Church. God and family were most important to her, and her desire was that everyone know Jesus and be ready for heaven.

She was preceded in death by her parents; her husband; brother, Wayne Ellis; sister, Christine Berry; brothers, little Glen and little Willis; son-in-law, Glen Clark; brother-in-law, George Clark; nephews, Danny Ellis and Fred Clark; and niece, Elaine. She is survived by her daughters, Darlene (Chuck) Stults, Rozelle (the late Glen) Clark, LaVone (Denny) Jones; Darlene's children, David (Jodie) Slagel, Dianne Dyer and Angela (Shon) Watkins; Rozelle's children, Brenda (Jeff) Hanson, Glenda (Greg) Bostock, Kerry (Serena) Clark and "baby" daughter; LaVone's children, Jennifer and niece, Angela (Shon) Watkins, whom they helped raise; brother, Paul (Joyce) Ellis; sisters-in-law, Evelyn Ellis and Beulah Clark; a "considered" granddaughter, Lori Allen; adopted kids, Carl and Sherrie Johnson; 16 great-grandchildren; and seven great-great-grandchildren.

A special thank you to all the staff at Woodstone Assisted Living for making Mom's last year a loving home away from home. Thanks to Visions Home Health and Hospice for the extra care they provided.

Mom loved and appreciated her neighbors, the Clements, Schneiders, Goukers and Grindstaffs. They truly looked out for her and showed many kindnesses.

The funeral will be at 10 a.m. Saturday, Aug. 4, at Farmer Funeral Chapel in Buhl. A viewing will be from 9 to 10 a.m. prior to the service Saturday at the funeral home.

George Raymond Lewis

Dec. 31, 1925-Aug. 1, 2012

AMMON • George Raymond Lewis, 86, of Ammon, passed away at his home Wednesday, Aug. 1, 2012. He was under the care of Aspen Home Health and Hospice.

George was born Dec. 31, 1925, in Worland, Mo., the twin son of James Monroe Lewis and Tina Alice Montgomery Lewis. His twin brother died prior to their birth. George proudly served his country during World War II by serving in the Merchant Marines. He often talked of his many adventures and the places he had seen. A traveling harvest crew brought George to Jerome, Idaho, where he met and married the love of his life, Clara Dean Swainston on Aug. 6, 1948.

George and Clara Dean moved to Portland, Ore., where he worked in the furniture manufacturing business. Their next home was in Jerome, where he worked in a seed plant and also bucked potatoes in the fields. Butte, Mont., was their next home and George tried his hand at hard rock mining with Clara Dean's brother, Morris, until spring when they returned to Jerome and farmed with Clara Dean's father for a year. The next move found them in Gooding and then once again in Butte for 30 years, where George perfected his trade as a hard rock miner. George retired from the Anaconda Company in 1982 and used his FREE time to work in his beautiful yard, which was enjoyed by all who passed by. Declining health and wanting to be close to family brought George and Clara Dean in September 2007 to their present home in Ammon.

George loved to garden, feel the sun on his face, play with his grandchildren and watch Westerns such as "Gunsmoke," "The Rifleman" and "Bonanza." He was a member of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

He is survived by his dear wife, Clara Dean Lewis of Ammon; a daughter, Cheryl Bergen; a son, Walter Raymond (Kym) Lewis of Ammon; two granddaughters, Melissa (Dan) Thornley and Cynthia (Brian) Beal; a grandson, Andrew (Rani) Bergen; four great-grandsons; two great-granddaughters; two brothers; and three sisters. George was preceded in death by his parents, three sisters and four brothers.

The funeral will be at 2 p.m. Saturday, Aug. 4, at Coltrin Mortuary, 2100 First St. in Idaho Falls, with Bishop Rodney Roberts of the Ammon 26th Ward officiating. The family will visit with friends from 6 to 7:30 p.m. Friday, Aug. 3, and one hour prior to the service Saturday at the mortuary. Interment will be at 2 p.m. Tuesday, Aug. 7, in the Jerome Cemetery in Jerome.

William F. Milliken Jr.,
Renowned Aeronautical
Engineer and Pilot, Dies at 101

T. REES SHAPIRO

The Washington Post

William F. Milliken Jr., a renowned aeronautical engineer, pilot and road racer who helped dream up a car-flying James Bond movie stunt, died July 28 at his home in Williamsville, N.Y. He was 101. He had complications from an enlarged prostate, said his son, Doug Milliken.

As an engineer for Boeing during World War II, Milliken conducted perilous high-altitude flight tests aboard the B-17 bomber and also helped develop the B-29, later used to drop the atomic bombs over Hiroshima and Nagasaki. Later, he became one of the world's foremost researchers on vehicle dynamics, the study of improving how a car handles on the road by using advanced mathematical calculations.

He wrote a book on vehicle dynamics that is considered the "bible" of Formula 1 race car design, and he was a consulting engineer to General Motors, Rolls-Royce, Ford, Bridgestone and Goodyear.

His work as an engineer was taken all the more seriously by clients because of his extensive experience as a race-car driver and pilot.

That Milliken lived past 100 was remarkable considering the number of plane and car crashes he had survived in the name of science and his own thirst for adrenaline.

As a teenager, he designed and built out of canoe wood an airplane powered by a 27-horsepower motorcycle engine. During flight testing, he crashed the unstable plane on a beach in Maine, flipping the aircraft on its back in the sand.

Despite the accident, Milliken said he was compelled to pursue a career in the dynamics of flight as an aeronautical engineer.

Although he was an accomplished race-car driver, Milliken's best-known feat behind the wheel of his Bugatti Type 35 was rolling the vehicle in a 1948 road race in Watkins Glen, N.Y.

He was speeding at 100 mph when he saw a supercharged MG in front of him. Milliken decided to overtake the other driver around a turn known as "thrill corner."

"I managed to pass him, but it was so close to that corner and the brakes on the Bug are not the world's greatest," Milliken told the Elmira, N.Y., Star-Gazette in 2001. "I lost it on the corner and spun out and hit the hay."

Milliken emerged from his flipped car unscathed. The turn has been known as "Milliken's Corner" ever since.

One of Milliken's successes in high-speed car driving was his role helping to design a stunt for the 1974 James Bond film starring Roger Moore, "The Man With the Golden Gun."

For many years, Milliken worked as a senior engineer at the Cornell Aeronautical Laboratory, a research facility in Buffalo, N.Y., associated with Cornell University.

In the late 1960s, some of the more imaginative scientists under Milliken's purview began running computer experiments on how to flip a car in midair using ramps. The researchers, using complex mathematical calculations, proved it was possible and invited a test driver to try it out.

The resulting barrel-roll move was employed by Moore's 007 secret agent during a car chase scene filmed in Thailand in a single take.

William Franklin Milliken Jr., was born April 18, 1911, in Old Town, Maine, once known as the canoe-manufacturing capital of the world.

In the early 1930s, he used canoe wood to build his plane. Today, the Milliken M-1 aircraft is in the collection of the Owls Head, Maine, Transportation Museum.

He was a 1934 mathematics graduate of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. After working at Boeing during World War II, Milliken joined what became the Cornell Aeronautical Lab. He retired in 1976 as chief of the transportation research division and started a consulting business. He worked up until his death.

In his spare time, Milliken participated in more than 100 car races. He placed sixth in the 1947 Pikes Peak hill climb in Colorado, and in 2002 and 2007 drove his own radically designed MX-1 race car at the Goodwood Festival of Speed in England.

An early marriage ended in divorce.

Survivors include his wife of 58 years, Barbara Roesch Milliken, of Williamsville, N.Y., and two children from his second marriage, Doug Milliken of Clarence, N.Y., and Ann Milliken of Williamsville, N.Y. A son from his second marriage, Peter Milliken, died in 2001.

SENIOR

Q. What kinds of things should I keep in my safety deposit box?
A. This is an excellent question! A safety deposit box at your local financial institution is an extremely secure location to keep many important documents. However, there are others that you want to keep handy; often these are ones that you can easily replace, and you may choose to keep them at home. While the final decision is yours, consider the following suggestions. In your safety deposit box: Deeds and titles, marriage licenses and divorce decrees, birth certificates, home inventory, Social Security cards, stock certificates, and list of bank accounts, brokerage accounts, certificates of deposit, and credit cards (with account numbers and branch locations). In your home desk or bedroom drawer: Insurance policies, passport, tax returns, wills and trusts, power of attorney, medical directives, funeral and burial instructions, and a copy of your list of bank accounts, brokerage accounts, certificates of deposit and credit cards. Congratulations on tackling an important part of minding your financial affairs!

Palin's Power Put to the Test

Former Alaska Gov. Sarah Palin — though derided on the left and recently dismissed by former Vice President Dick Cheney as a poor pick in 2008 — is nevertheless proving her enduring power within the Republican Party in the most concrete of ways: She keeps picking winners.

As a kingmaker, she heads Friday to Missouri to stump for former state treasurer Sarah Steelman in a close three-way race to take on Democratic Sen. Claire McCaskill in November.

For candidates, Palin's endorsement process is as mysterious as it is desirable. She conducts no formal interviews, distributes no candidate surveys. Often she keeps her nods secret even from their recipients until just before they become public.

She has endorsed just nine Republicans this year — five of them women, according to the Web site of SarahPAC, her political committee. In an interview on Fox News on Wednesday, Palin said that she is making down-ticket races, not the presidential campaign, a focus of her efforts this year.

MASON, Ohio (AP) • One of the biggest drug dealers in the Cincinnati area was led into court this week. He looked more like the president of the math club — skinny, pale, bespectacled, dressed in a blue buttoned-down shirt and khakis, and just 17 years old.

AT THE BLAINE FAIR:

Wild Cow Milking, ATV Rodeo and Expanded Horse Shows

BY JAMI WHITED
For the Times-News

CAREY • Expect the traditional combo of food, family and fun at the 2012 Blaine County Fair, Aug. 8-11 at the county fairgrounds in Carey.

Aside from 4-H shows like swine, rabbit, poultry, sheep and dogs, students of various ages will host their annual benefit luncheon at noon on Aug. 8 to auction their animals. The main course will feature cuts of beef, lamb and pork spun on a rotisserie.

Fair Schedule

Find the Blaine fair's 2012 schedule, ticket prices and event descriptions at blainecountyfair.com.

Look for exhibits from 4-H participants in the merchant buildings at the fairgrounds. One event in particular has expanded in a surprising way.

Since last year, the 4-H horse shows have nearly doubled in size. Fair organizers expect 60-70 entries and added a day to accommodate the increase.

"We've also changed it so the shows are held before the fair," said fair president Kyle Green; the 4-H horse shows are at 9 a.m. Aug. 7. "That way the kids can present their projects to people besides just their family."

Another fair event that has steadily drawn a growing audience in the past five years is the scarecrow contest.

"We haven't really promoted it, but we've had a few more people every year," Green said. "We have cash prizes for winners."

7 THINGS YOU NEED TO DO AT THE JEROME COUNTY FAIR

Abriana Hurtado, 9, a member of the team The Prince and The Princesses, picks up a pig as her teammates stand by during pig wrestling at the Jerome County Fair.

It's all about blue ribbons and bright lights in Jerome Aug. 7-11 at the Jerome County Fair. Here are seven things that make this fair a don't-miss event.

BY TETONA DUNLAP
tdunlap@magicvalley.com

1 Love the sound of metal on metal? Then you'll love the demolition derby at 8 p.m. Aug. 11.

The demo derby is basically a race to the dented-up end with the winner receiving $1,000.

"They will wreck them up and tear them apart," said organizer Steve Deuel. "There's a lot of carnage."

Tickets are $6 for children 6-12 and $8 for adults. Children under 5 get in free.

Between heats will be stock truck tug-of-wars that let crowd members face off in their own vehicles.

You will also have the chance to vote for the best looking and ugliest cars before the show begins, so cheer loudly for your favorite. The winner will be determined by crowd applause and drive away $50 richer.

2 You are getting very sleepy. On the count of three you will be laughing. Three. Two. One.

Hypnotist Richard Barker from the United Kingdom will be on the free stage at 2 p.m., 6 p.m. and 9 p.m. Tuesday-Saturday Barker website (incrediblehypnotist.com) describes him as a hypnotist who commands the stage but is friendly and approachable.

"It is not about embarrassing people or making them do things they do not want to do ... my aim is to ensure when you leave my show you will remember it for the rest of your life," he said on the site.

3 The tunes of the Jason Lugo Band, one of southern Idaho's premier modern country rock bands, will entice you to the dance floor starting at 9:30 p.m. Aug. 10-11 behind the grandstand following the arena events. You won't be able to stop your cowboy boots from tapping at this free show.

"People follow them from all over the area here," fair manager Kathleen Diederich said.

4 Dance the night away at the Latino Fiesta, from 7 p.m. to midnight Aug 7. Live bands will include Scorpio Musical and Edgar Guerro, which play cumbia and norteno music. This is the event's second year, and organizer Joe Trevino hopes it will continue to grow.

5 If you want to see the fair's theme of "Blue Ribbons and Bright Lights" in motion, grab a spot and watch the parade at 5 p.m. Aug. 7. Floats such as horse-and-wagon combinations and antique cars will be decorated with the hope of best capturing the spirit of this year's Jerome County Fair. Winners for first, second and third place will be announced at the fair's popular pig wrestling.

6 Here piggy, piggy. Pig wrestling pits hog against human in this timed event that requires four-person teams to capture a pig and place it in a barrel Aug 7 starting at 7 p.m. To enter fill out a form at the fair office or download it from the fair website, www.jeromecountyfair.com. There are four divisions: pee wee (3-10), junior (11-15), women (16 and older) and men (16 and older). Sound easy? Pigs will be well greased, so expect things to get hog wild.

7 The Rodeo Girls will make their first appearance at the Jerome County Fair during the Professional Rodeo Cowboys Association Performance. Rae-Lynn Armstrong, 23, and Madison MacDonald, 18, are horse trick-riders from Canada who have performed at venues across Canada and the U.S. With 27 years of combined experience, these two women will dazzle the crowd with daring stunts performed on the back of a galloping horse Aug. 8, 9 and 10 during the rodeo that starts at 7:30 p.m.

Fair Schedule

The Jerome County Fair schedule is at <http://www.jeromecountyfair.com/schedule.htm>. Tickets can be purchased at the fair office 200 North Fir in Jerome. For more information call 324-7209.

Library Tour of Homes

An 8,000-square-foot rambler is just one of five homes to see on Ketchum tour.

BY KAREN BOSSICK
For the Times-News

KETCHUM • You don't need to point your car 70 miles north of Twin Falls to Ketchum to see Barry and Candice Peterson's home.

You can go to Google Earth and zero in on the big orange spot the site displays.

But why leave it there when you can set foot in Petersons' 8,000-square-foot "Rambler" with its handsomely mottled ceramic tiles from Spain, 18-foot glass doors that open to Baldy, cozy home theater, gym, wine room and onyx bar and rectangular 4-foot-deep salt water pool.

The home, which is meant to be reminiscent of historical mining town buildings with a roof of rusted steel, is one of five homes that will be part of Saturday's Community Library Tour of Homes.

The tour, which benefits the library, runs from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. and will include a box lunch picnic prepared by Ketchum's new Tranquility Tea House.

Peterson, a jeweler, used his jewelry designing talents to design the home, which overlooks the bike path that runs from Bellevue to Ketchum's northern outskirts. His wife Candice,

FOLK FESTIVAL KICKS OFF TODAY IN HAILEY

BY KAREN BOSSICK
For the Times-News

HAILEY • Izzy Taylor can't remember a year she hasn't attended the Northern Rockies Folk Festival.

Last year the 20-year-old student at Portland Community College attended as a performer. And she'll return for an encore this year, playing her original songs about romantic and personal growth experiences in the two-day festival, which runs Friday and Saturday, Aug. 3 and 4, in Hailey's

Hop Porter Park.

"It's such an honor to be on stage with such other famous and talented musicians," she said. "I've never been disappointed in the bands they find for the festival. It's always the best wonderful weekend of the year!"

The bands Taylor will find herself playing among this year include Louisiana's Rosie Ledet & the Zydeco Playboys on Friday night and Austin, Texas, performer Carrie Rodriguez and Jason Isbell and the 400 Unit on Saturday night.

who does a lot of interior decorating, designed furniture specifically for the house.

"Some of the rooms were designed around some of her pieces," Barry Peterson said.

This year's homes are new homes in the heart of Ketchum, said Colleen Crain, interim director for the library.

"They're not spec houses. They were built for the owners by the owners so they have all these eclectic personal touches," she added. "One has almost nothing in it; another has a swimming pool."

In addition to the Peterson home, this year's selection includes a home on Knob Hill with a European motor courtyard, an attached boathouse and a massive custom-designed chandelier selected specifically for the home by celebrity interior designer Barclay Butera.

The home, owned by David Pyle, also features a curved marble travertine staircase sporting handrails that were crafted using steel tubes welded together by farm welders from Gooding. Once their talent was discovered they went from laboring on tractors to creating artistic metal work for a variety of projects.

Michelle and Beat Zugg's penthouse, a few short steps away from Zugg's Scott USA headquarters, is a striking example of minimalist architecture.

The home of Trish and David Wilson, who once presided over the National Association of Home Builders, features a French limestone fireplace brought here from Brussels, along with antique oak beams brought from Europe and a variety of balcony patios that offer gorgeous views of the mountains surrounding Ketchum.

And the home of Rhea Schwartz and Paul Wolff will make visitors feel as if they stepped into an art gallery of eclectic tastes, with its antique child's kimono, whimsical collection of antique wind-up toys, African artifacts and sculptures created by Wolff.

"All the homes on this year's tour are very contemporary, very modern," said Dana Marino, the library's development and volunteer coordinator.

Take the Tour

The Community Library Tour of Homes runs from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. in Ketchum.

Free bus transportation will leave the library every 20 minutes starting at 9:55 a.m. Buses will circulate along the route, allowing people to get off and back on as they wish. The homes are within easy biking of one another, as well.

A box lunch provided by Tranquility Tea House will be served up at the Picket Fence courtyard and Little City Park of Ketchum near the library.

Tax-deductible tickets are $75 and include the Garden Party. Funds raised go to the library.

Tickets are available at the library the day of the tour or at www.thecommunitylibrary.org

In addition, colorist and artist Donald Kaufman will speak at the Community Library Tour of Homes opening Party at 5:30 p.m. Friday, Aug. 3, at the home of Martine and Dan Drackett in Greenhorn Gulch, four miles south of Ketchum.

Tickets are $250 per person, $225 of which is tax deductible. They include a VIP tour of the homes. They're available by calling 726-3493.

"Rosie is all over the place in Europe and the United States," said Pete Kramer, the festival's co-director. "Everybody loves zydeco music so Friday will be a great party night. Jason Isbell is tearing things up across the country. And, in a stroke of luck we got Carrie Rodriguez to open for him and she's a big deal in herself."

"Throw the Random Canyon Growlers, a bluegrass group from Jackson, Wyo., into the mix and Saturday night is a killer show."

The 35th annual Northern Rockies Folk Festival will open from 5 to 10 p.m. Friday. It kicks off with Hailey troubadour Steph Sloan & the Elephant Parade, Olin & the Moon from Los Angeles and Rosie Ledet & the Zydeco Playboys, who have released nine albums featuring sultry and suggestive lyrics.

Saturday's music starts at noon with The Penny Hens from Sonoma, Calif., followed by Izzy Taylor, the bluegrass - folk group Dewey, Pickett & Howe of the Wood River Valley and the Gypsy River Haunts from Los Angeles. The Random Canyon Growlers of Jackson, Wyo., will kick off the evening, followed by Carrie Rodriguez and Jason Isbell and the 400 unit a Muscle Shoals, Ala.

Isbell, who plays rootsy rock music, is a former member of the Drive-By-Truckers group.

Tickets are $35 for a two-day pass, $15 for Friday only and $25 for Saturday only, available at www.northernrockiesfolkfestival.com, Albertsons in Hailey, Chapter One Bookstore in Ketchum and at the gate.

Augmenting the festival is the Kiwanis Club's Auto Show and the Northern Rockies Arts and Crafts Show put on by the Hailey Chamber of Commerce.

Izzy's mother Salome Taylor says she can't wait to see her daughter, who's studying women's studies and music. "She's so composed-she knows how to read a crowd," she said.

"She's so good she's better than she realizes," added Kramer. "She has a strong voice-she's one of number of local talent who are on their way."

Blaine

And what's a fair without a little rodeo? The Blaine County Fair takes that to a new level with multiple cowboy-style events.

The first, the ATV & Motorcycle Rodeo, at 8 p.m. Aug. 8, includes barrel racing but also a wheelie contest, pick-up race and balloon pop. Working as a team, one person drives while a passenger takes a plastic bat and tries to knock off or pop an inflated balloon taped to the back of a helmet on a competing team.

"The balloon pop is pretty fun to watch," organizer Kodi Farnworth said. "It's pretty tough."

Next is the Kid's Bike Rodeo, at 10:30 a.m. Aug. 9. Held off fairgrounds at the Carey School parking lot, this event will include hula hoop calf roping, barrel racing and a How Slow Can U Go race.

The Little Kid's Rodeo, at 7 p.m. Aug. 10, is sure to be a highlight for ages 13 and younger. With sheep riding for those 8 and younger and calf riding for older children, comedy is sure to ensue.

"There's also goat tail tying, regular goat tying, barrel racing and pole bending," said Peggy Hill, rodeo secretary.

And finally, the traditional Fall Rodeo is slated for the final day of events, at 8 p.m. Aug. 11 - but with a few non-traditional contests such as the wild cow race and ribbon roping.

Fair organizers keep the down-home spirit alive by keeping things family-oriented.

Traditionally, family day has been the biggest highlight of the Blaine County Fair, which will be held 11 a.m. to 7 p.m. Aug. 9.

Green said they put as much effort as they can into ensuring families have a great time.

"We have a live DJ, line dancing, bounce houses and more," Green said. "We really work hard on that day to make sure we're reaching out to everyone in the area."

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

"It's true hard work never killed anybody, but I figure, why take the chance?"

— Ronald Reagan

In today's six-spade contract, when the dummy comes down, you could justifiably echo the words of Ronald Reagan's screen character when he wakes up in bed and can't find his legs: "Where's the rest of me?"

How will you justify partner's trust in you when the heart king is led?

Five tricks in each black suit and the two red aces will bring the total to 12. The club suit is blocked, though, so the question is how to untangle your tricks.

One possibility is to win the heart lead, draw two rounds of trumps with the king and queen, then try to cash the three top clubs. If the last trump is in the hand with three or more clubs, you can cross to the spade ace and score two more club tricks for the contract. This will not work today; East will ruff the third club, and you will be one trick short.

The answer is a spectacular one — and once you've seen the theme, you will not forget it. All you have to do is to lead the heart two at trick two, discarding your club ace! (If you don't have a flair for the dramatic, you can throw the club queen instead.) On any return you will be able to play the king and queen of trumps, followed by your two remaining winners in the club suit. You can then cross to the trump ace and score three more club tricks, throwing all your losing diamonds.

ANSWER: In this sequence, your partner's double is pure takeout. Your partner suggests five or six clubs and three or four hearts with, at minimum, a sound opening bid. It is unusual to pass low-level takeout doubles, but with three trump tricks and no guaranteed fit, it looks like a sporting gamble to try to penalize the opponents. Even if two diamonds doubled makes, at least it is not game!

DEAR ABBY: My husband died recently in a fire he started in a drunken rampage. In the aftermath I am left with feelings of extreme sadness and rage.

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

Last night I was going through a box of his belongings and found some old letters he had written to a woman he'd left me for 20 years ago. (We patched things up and then were married later.) I didn't want to read them, but in the first letter I caught the sentence, "You are the only woman I've ever met who truly changed me." I immediately tore it to shreds. There were others, but I tossed everything in the box into the trash. I couldn't put myself through the pain.

For months, I have tried to dwell only on the happy times we had together and the love that, in spite of his alcoholism, we had for each other. Perhaps I could have dealt with these letters while my husband was still alive, but now I can only stew in my own anger.

I don't want to do this to myself. I have been in therapy and at Al-Anon, but I feel as though I need other tools at this point to get me through this awfulness.

— WIDOW IN ST. LOUIS

DEAR WIDOW: Please accept my condolences for the loss of your husband. I'm sure you have many reasons to be angry, and those letters are among the least of them.

Try to think rationally about what the letter said. That they were in his possession probably means they were never mailed, and it's likely they were written while he was drunk. As to the woman having "changed" him, from the way he died it doesn't appear he changed a lot.

You have your life ahead of you. If you choose to waste your precious time looking back over your shoulder and cursing a dead man, of course that's your choice. But if you want to break this cycle of destructive thinking, the quickest way to do it would be to contact your therapist for a "reality check."

DEAR ABBY: My boyfriend and I have lived together for five years. We have decided that we want to get married. He took me to pick out a beautiful ring and put money down to hold the specific ring.

Sounds great, right? Well, it's not. Unfortunately, my boyfriend doesn't have the money for it, which is completely understandable, because it's quite an expensive ring.

Here is my issue: He recently took a significant amount of money out of his 401(k) to pay off a gambling debt. I also received a very large bonus, of which a major portion went to pay the gambling debt. Why would my boyfriend take me to pick out a ring if he knows he can't afford it? Why would he prioritize his gambling debt over a ring for me? For us? For our future?

— NOT HIS FIRST PRIORITY

DEAR NOT HIS FIRST PRIORITY: Candidly, your boyfriend probably made the gambling debt his top priority because he was afraid if he didn't someone would beat him to a pulp or worse. Surely by now you have realized that he has a gambling problem and is not good with money. Thank your lucky stars you realized it BEFORE marriage.

You are living with someone who appears to have trouble recognizing there are consequences for his actions. If you want a husband who is mature and responsible, stop enabling him and recognize that this man isn't Mr. Right.

IF AUGUST 3 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: You can sit back and relax during the month ahead. Your life revs up in October and November when new friends, perhaps a romance or even a new job or business success puts you firmly at the top of the heap. October is a particularly good month to become financially secure because that is when your business sense is strong. Plan ahead so that you can launch or initiate anything of great importance in early December when Lady Luck turns her head in your direction. Not only will you be wiser, you will have added support from all the right people.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Keep promises and stick to the prearranged routine. You have good ideas where finances are concerned, but others might find you pushy. You can head off many problems by acting conscientiously.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): No one in the wide world can do a better job of being you than you. You may experience some challenges during a one-on-one negotiation, but just remember not to take it too personally.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): If you approach everyone with open arms, you are more likely to receive hugs. Even when business, career or finances are the subject, you can remain friendly. Accept whatever comes your way.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): No artificial sweeteners are needed at your dinner table. You never need to apologize for being yourself. In the same manner, the greatest gift you can give to others is to allow them to be themselves.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Find your proper place in the grand scheme of things. You don't need to ride in the back seat — but you don't need to drive the car every time, either. Be sure to give others their fair chance to take charge.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Moths are drawn to a flame. You could be in demand in social situations and at your best in a crowd. Don't enter into new commitments; keep in touch with someone you know is tried and true.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Some rules are good, but more are not necessarily better. Before long, too many restrictions, guidelines and directions become stifling and stultifying. Accept instructions without being micromanagered.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Remain determined, but don't make waves. Approaching business matters with a spirit of compromise is your best bet. If things do not go your way, just be patient and wait for better timing.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Not everything that is sensible is a matter of common sense. You may receive a whimsical gift or a pat on the back because you refuse to follow the herd; only follow the dictates of your heart.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You speak, they listen. Communications could become complicated as activity levels step up. Keep your cellphone battery charged and expect to be at the beck and call of several people.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): This week's full moon may have brought a relationship into sharp focus. Because you have a desire to please someone else, you are motivated to excel and can make improvements in all areas.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): There are many things you have always thought about saying, but were either too shy or too inarticulate to voice. You might get an opportunity to reveal your real opinions to a sensitive soul mate.
