Deceased Man's Exotic Animals Bring Community Together

Jana Gould feeds her camel, Humphrey, at her home near Buhl on Friday. The animals used to belong to Harold Peterson, who died recently, but his legacy lives on. (BELOW) Jana Gould's camel, Humphrey, eats an afternoon snack.

FILER • When Hobie Peterson first learned that his father was a proud owner of a camel, he didn't even flinch. And when Harold Peterson acquired a zedonk, a buffalo, a kangaroo along with a few more exotic pets, Hobie just rolled with it.

"Nothing would surprise me with him," he said. "So when he first started taking on these animals, it wasn't that unusual."

On July 1, Harold Peterson died after fighting a long battle with multiple sclerosis. The Filer resident grew up ranching and farming in the community with his wife, Jeanette, and two sons, Hal and Hobie. However, it was his soft spot for animals that sparked an interest in taking care of something a little more flamboyant than a cow.

"He grew up on a farm and that's where he raised and ran horses," Hobie said. "When he couldn't do that anymore, he switched his race horses and rodeo stock to exotic animals."

The interest in the exotic quickly turned into entertaining collection that was impossible to hide. Soon, Harold was showing off his odd menagerie in local parades and county fairs. While out at events, he would use his collection

Fire Near Hollister Grows to 500 acres

TIMES-NEWS

TWIN FALLS • Multiple fires were burning in south-central Idaho on Sunday night, with the largest a 500-acre blaze east of Hollister.

Bureau of Land Management spokeswoman Kylie Gough said containment for the East Hollister fire was anticipated by 10 a.m. today. The BLM had six engines, two bulldozers, two aircraft and other equipment in use. Their crews were supported by firefighters from Filer, Salmon Tract and Rock Creek rural fire departments, according to a news release.

The East Hollister fire grew from 200 acres at 8 p.m. Sunday to an estimated 500 acres as of 9:30 p.m. A fire official watching straw bales burn in a field said, "It looks like a thousand campfires."

City Council to Consider Sanitation Rate Increase

TIMES-NEWS

TWIN FALLS • Today at the Twin Falls City Council meeting there will be a public hearing on whether to raise sanitation rates.

For the past two years, the city council has voted to subsidize sanitation rate increases with reserve money from the city's sanitation fund. With the use of reserves again next year, rates would go up 6.24 percent. The current monthly sanitation rate is $16.34 per month, per household, and the proposed increase would raise the rate to $18.27 per month, per household.

In another public hearing, the council will consider a proposal to increase the landing fees at Joslin Field,

Magic Valley Regional Airport by 19 percent, to match an increase in airport operating expenses. If the proposal passes, there would be an annual revenue increase of just more than $12,000. City staff recommends

This Small Fair Is Big in Carey

"The fair is just something that I feel is a good deal for the kids."

Kyle Green, who served as president of the fair board for 3 years.

BY KAREN BOSSICK
For the Times-News

CAREY • The Blaine County Fair is the biggest thing that happens in Carey each year.

But Kyle Green, a Carey native who grew up attending the fair every year, feared it was in danger of becoming a relic of the past only a few short years ago.

"In my younger days a lot of people came out to the fair — the barbecue on Friday night was especially well attended. But then it got to the point where all we had practically was a beef and pig showing. There were no rides, any of that stuff," said Green, a Blaine County Sheriff's Office deputy.

Green thought the fair was

A Face-full of Cat, and Other Outrages

Back in Idaho, Sophie and Callie were tough outdoor cats.

Steve Crump
Don't Ask Me

They lived in the garage, lurked on the hood of the Subaru, and spat in the eye of any stray tomcat foolish enough to encroach upon their not inconsiderable territory, which encompassed almost the whole of Red Spruce Drive.

But then I retired and we moved to California last winter, and my wife – fearing the animals would be eaten like so many Kitty Nuggets by the 150-pound Neapolitan mastiff across the street – confined the cats to our bedroom.

There's a dog door in the bedroom that leads outside, but Callie and Sophie have never ventured through it. Instead, they sleep all day. And at night they don't.

Cats are nocturnal; people are diurnal. I tried to explain that to Sophie the other day. Then she bit my finger. (To be fair, I'd woken her from her traditional 15-hour nap).

Fortunately, the cats are a whole lot fonder of Victoria than me. So when my wife goes to bed, they're drawn to her like furry magnets.

As soon as Victoria nods off, one or the other of the cats plops down on the corner of her pillow. Then the other sits on her head like a hat.

Mind you, I didn't say "next to her head." The cat sleeps on my wife's brow.

So along about 3 a.m., Victoria wakes up sputtering and choking.

"Dammit!" she'll exclaim. "Go out and play with the dog!"

Neither of the cats actually belong to us. Our daughters adopted them during waves of kitty enthusiasm when they were kids, and then swiftly forgot about them.

But cats live a long time, especially when they're expending about enough energy in a day to power a firefly. It's easy to imagine Callie, Sophie and me some day with matching Scooter Chairs.

By then, however, it's entirely possible that Victoria will have done in one or more of us. And no jury in the world would convict her.

All she'll need do is wear her cat hat to court.

Crash Closes Highway 93 Lane for Three Hours

TIMES-NEWS

JEROME • A Washington state woman was treated for minor injuries Saturday at St. Luke's in Jerome after the car she was driving collided with a semi-trailer at the intersection of I-84 and U.S. Highway 93. It closed one lane of Highway 93 for three hours.

Idaho State Police said Kathleen Hill, 65, of Hoquiam, Wash., was traveling north of Highway 93 in a 1996 Geo Prizm about 8:25 a.m. when she took the cloverleaf ramp toward

I-84 at exit 173, did a U-turn, and went the wrong way back to Highway 93.

Hill turned north to the inside lane of travel, police said. Hector Miramontes, 30, of Buhl, was also northbound in the right lane in a 2002 Kenworth truck. Police said Hill turned in front of Miramontes and was struck by his vehicle.

She was taken by ground ambulance to St. Luke's and was discharged the same day.

A police investigation is continuing, according to a news release from ISP.

Pole Line Road Bridge Work Begins

TIMES-NEWS

TWIN FALLS • Crews begin a project today to apply an epoxy overlay to the Perrine Coulee Bridge on U.S. 93/Pole Line Road. Traffic will be reduced to one lane in each direction between Canyon Crest Drive and Harrison Street for about three days, according to the Idaho Transportation Department.

Crews will begin by cleaning the surface of the road and sidewalk prior to applying the epoxy resin and gravel aggregate. The project will cover the bridge and protect against cracking and corrosion, restore the surface strength and skid resistance, and prolong the bridge deck's life.

About half of the Perrine Coulee Bridge will be closed at a time while crews apply the overlay.

Blaine

too big a deal to fail, even as tiny as it was.

So he and a handful of other volunteers jumped in, building the fair up with a dance, Family Fun Day and Kid's Bike Rodeo that proved so popular last year that organizers pushed back the time so the children involved in 4-H projects could participate.

"The fair is just something that I feel is a good deal for the kids," said Green, who has served as president of the fair board for three years. "Even though it's a lot of work and every year I say, 'This is my last year,' I'm there the next year."

The Blaine County Fair is no match for the larger Twin Falls and Boise fairs, which Green attends every year to get ideas for his own fair. While the Blaine Fair added some rides this year, a few years ago, its single ride consisted of an "airplane" that swung around on human power.

But Green says small fairs like Blaine's, which don't charge an admission fee, are accessible for families who don't have the means to attend or show animals at bigger fairs.

"It's still a place where people can meet up with friends they haven't seen for years," he said.

Noelle Clark, who runs the Golden Elk Café in Hailey, joined the fair board a few years ago, as well. Like Green and the others, she works tirelessly throughout the year, organizing sweet-heart dances to raise funds for improvements and tapping friends with architectural skills to draw up plans for new restrooms.

"It's all for the kids," she said. "Yes, our fair is a pretty small fair, and it's basically an agricultural fair.

KAREN BOSSICK • FOR THE TIMES-NEWS

Riley Clark will learn how to set up and run her own business when she sells Italian sodas made of carbonated water, flavoring, milk and, of course, whipped cream at this week's Blaine County Fair.

But we're trying to make it a little bigger and a little more fun."

Clark's 15-year-old daughter, Riley, will operate the teenager's version of a lemonade stand. She'll sell Italian sodas made in a variety of flavors, including huckleberry, orange, coconut and hazelnut.

Not only will it earn her gas money for the Jeep Cherokee she plans to drive once she gets her driver's license, but it will teach her about organizing and running a business.

"I've shown rabbits at the fair and I learned quite a bit about responsibility from that," she said. "I learned for instance, that you have to commit to doing certain things every day, like giving the rabbits clean water. Selling Italian sodas will be fun because people will come to the booth and I'll get to talk to them."

Clark's 12-year-old daughter, Connor Ann, is not only riding her horse but she is making a few bucks cleaning saddles at the fair approaches.

She spends a half-hour scrubbing English saddles and up to two hours cleaning Western saddles with toothbrushes and polishing them off with saddle soap and old socks.

"I've learned a lot from showing animals at the fair," she said. "I've learned that when I get angry, my horse gets angry too. I've learned to stay calm in bad situations - and I've been able to apply that to everyday life. I've learned about responsibility - how I need to be on time for my classes. And I like helping the younger kids because they don't know what to expect."

The fair board has tried a number of things, including running a free bus, to try to attract fairgoers from Sun Valley, Ketchum and Hailey.

This year Blaine County Board member Amy Fedenko started a Two Hearts North horsemanship program in Hailey to boost membership in Blaine County's 4-H program. She brought in horses from Mesa, Ariz., and rented them to 64 children ages 6 through 18 who learned to care for and ride the horses.

The children must keep a log outlining their goals and give a demonstration or talk about what they've learned.

Participants in the program will also run the fair's petting zoo and help decorate the 4-H building.

Clark is buoyed by the opportunity to get so many newcomers.

"These kids work all year getting their animals ready, and there's nobody there to watch them show them," Green said. "We have to support them. And you don't even have to have farm animals to be involved. There's sewing classes, photography, needle point, cake decorating, sandwich makin' ..."

Meanwhile, other fires burning Sunday included the Oakley Reservoir fire, at 12 acres, with a containment estimate of 11 p.m. Sunday. Also, the Hannah's Fork fire about five miles north of the Nevada-Idaho border and 16 miles east of U.S. Highway 93 was estimated at 50 acres. It, too, was anticipated to be contained by 11 p.m. Sunday and controlled by midnight.

The Hannah's Fork fire was on private land, but threatened state land.

A fire was reported at 9 p.m. just off I-84 east of Heyburn. Gough said resources were being dispatched but no other information was available.

to raise money for Filer High School and local nonprofits.

He also opened up his home for the public to visit his animal collection. It wasn't unusual for schools to stop by for a fieldtrip or for a Boy Scout troop to swing by to snap a photo with Humphrey the camel.

"People loved his exhibits at the fair," said Bonnie Seaman, office manager of the Twin Falls County Fair. "He was well loved by everyone."

But as Harold's health slowly deteriorated, taking care of the animals started to become too much of an arduous chore. So starting close to three years ago, Hobie began helping his parents find new homes for the animals.

They ended up butchering the buffalo but gave the goats to a hired hand, Hobie said. The deer and many of the other animals went to friends or professional animal caregivers.

Finding a new home for the animals wasn't difficult though, he said. Over the years, Harold had made friends and connections across the state and even across the country. This made it easy to find potential new homes for the exotic collection.

For example, close Peterson friend, Shari Hart, briefly took in a young wallaby for several months. The miniature kangaroo was immediately named Wally-B-Roo.

"I knew Harold for years," she said. "So when they asked me if I could take care of this little guy, of course I said yes."

Once Shari adopted Wally, she purchased and designed pouches for it to snuggle in. He would travel with her to community events and draw a small crowd from interested on-lookers wanting a peek of the adorable marsupial.

"I can certainly say he was one of the most interesting pets I've ever owned," Shari said. "I eventually had to give him up because he was getting too big for the house. I miss him but he's in a happy place right now!"

For others who adopted from Harold's collection, taking on just one animal wasn't an option.

Jana Gould of Buhl is now the proud owner of a camel and a zedonk - a cross between a donkey and a zebra.

"They're a little mean, the zedonk has an attitude and the camel is getting old," she said. "But they grew up together and they can't be separated. They're buddies, so they were a packaged deal."

Janna said she was interested in purchasing the animals but it was her friendship with Harold that sealed the deal.

Harold's Filer house is now sold and Hobie moved his mom, Jeanette, to live closer with him in Nampa. However, the memory of Harold's fun but eccentric animal assortment still lives on.

"My family knew him for years but it seems like everyone knew him one way or the other," Janna said. "He was a great guy. I'm blessed to have known him."

Komen Cancer Group Criticized for Mammogram Exam Stance

BY MICHELLE FAY CORTEZ
Bloomberg News

MINNEAPOLIS • Susan G. Komen for the Cure, the largest breast cancer advocacy group, was criticized by doctors for overstating the benefits of mammograms and failing to tell women about the risks in its last public advertising campaign. The most recent Komen ads urged regular mammograms and implied that skipping them was harmful, Steven Woloshin and Lisa Schwartz, directors of the Center for Medicine and the Media at Dartmouth Medical School in Hanover, N.H., wrote today in the British Medical Journal. The advantages are much less clear and woman should be told the positive and negative to make an informed decision, they said.

Cancer screening programs have been questioned in recent years as studies showed they can identify tumors that may never cause harm, though treating them has physical, emotional and financial implications. The U.S. Preventive Service Task Force spurred controversy starting in 2009 with its recommendations to limit mammograms at younger ages for women and eliminate a standard prostate cancer test for men. "We think Komen can do a lot better by giving women the information they need to weigh the benefits and the harms," Woloshin said in a telephone interview. "They aren't doing a good job. The ads are misleading and give false promises." The ads emphasize that five-year survival for breast cancer is 98 percent when caught early, and 23 percent when it's not.

Those percentages are apples and oranges, Woloshin said, and can't be directly compared. A tiny tumor, detectable only with advanced screening, may take more than five years to kill a woman, while one that can be felt by hand would be deadly faster, regardless of whether any treatment is used. If the tumor is relatively harmless and destined to never cause any symptoms for the woman, identifying it early would lead to emotional turmoil, physical pain and side effects from fighting it and wasted expense, he said. Breast cancer killed an estimated 40,000 women last year and is the second-leading cause of death among women, exceeded only by lung cancer, according to the Atlanta-based American Cancer Society.

Egyptian Official: 15 Sinai Border Guards Killed

ASHRAF SWEILAM
Associated Press

EL-ARISH, Egypt • Masked gunmen killed 15 Egyptian guards Sunday at a security checkpoint along the border with Gaza and Israel, attacking with automatic rifles and weapons mounted on their vehicles, security and health officials said.

Egypt blamed Islamist militants from Gaza and Egypt's troubled Sinai Desert.

The Israeli military said the attack was part of a plot to abduct an Israeli soldier, and two vehicles commandeered by the attackers crashed into Israel, where one blew up.

In a statement, Israel's Defense Minister Ehud Barak said Israel's military and the internal security agency "thwarted an attack that could have injured many. The militants' attack methods again raise the need for determined Egyptian action to enforce security and prevent terror in the Sinai."

The attack took place around sunset in the Egyptian border town Rafah, when the troops were having the traditional meal at the end of the daily fast during the holy month of Ramadan.

Egyptian state TV said the attack on the checkpoint was carried out by Islamist militants. It quoted a security official who said 13 troops were killed in the attack coordinated between Palestinians who entered Egypt from Gaza and Egyptians in Sinai.

Emergency services official Ahmed el-Ansari later told Egypt's news agency that 15 were killed in the attack. He said seven were wounded by gunfire.

State TV said Egypt's President Mohammed Morsi called for an emergency meeting with the military following the attack.

It was one of the bloodiest attacks in Sinai in years, underlining the growing lawlessness of the Egyptian territory, where security forces have become targets of militants, some loosely linked with al-Qaida.

Archaeologists look at ruins July 10, which scholars think may be from the legendary Arab Christian city of Hira, just a few hundred yards from the runway of the airport in the holy Shiite Muslim city of Najaf, about 100 miles south of Baghdad.

Ruins a Memento of Glorious Past

KAY JOHNSON
Associated Press

NAJAF, Iraq • A hundred yards or so from taxiing airliners, Iraqi archaeologist Ali al-Fatli is showing a visitor around the delicately carved remains of a church that may date back some 1,700 years to early Christianity.

The church, a monastery and other surrounding ruins have emerged from the sand over the past five years with the expansion of the airport serving the city of Najaf, and have excited scholars who think this may be Hira, a legendary Arab Christian center.

"This is the oldest sign of Christianity in Iraq," said al-Fatli, pointing to the ancient tablets with designs of grapes that litter the sand next to intricately carved monastery walls.

The site's discovery in 2007 and its subsequent neglect are symbolic of a Christianity that has long enriched this country, and is now in decline as hundreds of thousands have fled the violence that followed the U.S.-led invasion in 2003.

At the same time, the circumstances of the find reflect a renaissance for Najaf, a holy Shiite Muslim city. The airport expansion that revealed the ruins was needed because Najaf attracts multitudes of pilgrims.

The ruins left in the baking heat are within the airport perimeter and relatively safe from vandals and looters. The site's stone crosses and larger artifacts have been moved to the National Museum in Baghdad.

For al-Fatli, it's all very tantalizing. "I know if we were to work more, we will find more and similar churches," he said.

But there is no money to mount a proper dig, he laments. In a country where bombings constantly kill people and much of the populace lacks reliable electricity or clean water, archaeological preservation is a low priority.

Today, the Christian portion of Iraq's population of 31 million has fallen from 1.4 million to about 400,000, according to U.S. State Department data.

Caught in the sectarian violence of 2005 to 2008, massacred by Muslim militias as heretics, "We were in the worst of times," says Younam Kanna, a Christian member of Iraq's parliament. He says the exodus has slowed but the future for Christians remains uncertain.

Still, he says, for those who remain, the discoveries at Hira provide some hope.

"It shows we can live together in peace with Muslims — because we did for centuries before," he says. "When Islam first came to Iraq, the Christians here welcomed them."

Legend traces Christianity in Iraq to Thomas, one of the Twelve Apostles who fanned out to spread Christ's word after the Crucifixion.

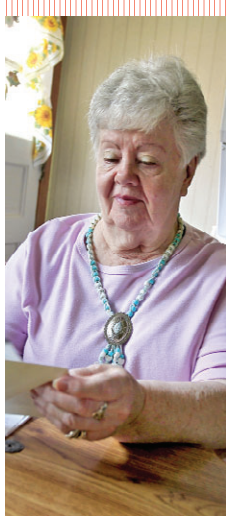

Historians believe Hira was founded around 270 A.D., grew into a major force in Mesopotamia centuries before the advent of Islam, and reputedly was a cradle of Arabic script.

Lying 160 kilometers (100 miles) south of Baghdad, it was lost to Iraq's southern desert for centuries after Christians were driven out of the area by Muslim rulers.

Erica Hunter, a professor of early Christianity at London's School of Oriental and African Studies, says historical evidence shows that by the early third century, the faith was well established in what is now southern Iraq by the Lakhmid dynasty, an Arab kingdom whose final ruler converted to Christianity.

Thousands of Fish Die as Midwest Streams Heat up

BY GRANT SCHULTE
Associated press

LINCOLN, Neb. • Thousands of fish are dying in the Midwest as the hot, dry summer dries up rivers and causes water temperatures to climb in some spots to nearly 100 degrees.

About 40,000 shovelnose sturgeon were killed in Iowa last week as water temperatures reached 97 degrees. Nebraska fishery officials said they've seen thousands of dead sturgeon, catfish, carp, and other species in the Lower Platte River, including the endangered pallid sturgeon. And biologists in Illinois said the hot weather has killed tens of thousands of large- and smallmouth bass and channel catfish and is threatening the population of the greater redhorse fish, a state-endangered species.

So many fish died in one Illinois lake that the carcasses clogged an intake screen near a power plant, lowering water levels to the point that the station had to shut down one of its generators.

"It's something I've never seen in my career, and I've been here for more than 17 years," said Mark Flammang, a fisheries biologist with the Iowa Department of Natural Resources. "I think what we're mainly dealing with here are the extremely low flows and this unparalleled heat."

The fish are victims of one of the driest and warmest summers in history.

New Idaho Wildfire Grows Despite Retardant Drops

BOISE (AP) • Firefighters on Sunday faced the possibility of a long battle against a wildfire burning in heavy timber 50 miles east of Boise after an intense effort a day earlier that included dropping more than 100,000 gallons of fire retardant failed to keep the blaze in check. Fire spokesman Dave Olson said the 1-square-mile Trinity Ridge Fire in the Boise National Forest expanded Saturday despite 46 runs by four military C-130 cargo planes based at the nearby Boise Air Terminal and more drops by three single-engine air tankers.

On Sunday afternoon, he said retardant drops continued but not at the same pace as Saturday. "We were really trying to catch this," he said. "Now it has the potential to burn for a longer period of time. We're just worried that there are going to be new starts with any kind of lightning events, and the fewer fires we have to deal with the better." Olson said the fire started Friday and is burning sub-alpine fir and lodgepole pine that are prone to torching and throwing embers, starting new fires. He said that's what happened Saturday afternoon and thwarted efforts to contain the fire before it got too big. "The trees will just totally torch out and become fully engaged," he said. "We know that it's an extremely dry forest in that area. We have a type of fuel that is very difficult to build a fire line around. It has a lot of country to burn in. So it will be a challenge." The fire is burning about 10 miles northwest of Featherville in Elmore County. Olson said no structures are threatened, but the area includes habitat for bull trout, a threatened species.

Idaho Schools Still Waiting on Education Waiver

BOISE (AP) • When a handful of states revolted against the No Child Left Behind education program last year, Idaho was helping lead the charge. So why is the state now among those last in line for a federal waiver to get out from under the law's toughest requirements? State education officials, who applied for a waiver in February, contend the new five-star rating system they've proposed as an alternative to No Child Left Behind is unique and relies on more student data than plans proposed in other states that have already won waiver approval. They've also been working with the federal government since April to address concerns about Idaho's new accountability plan. The U.S. Department of Education responded to Idaho's waiver application this spring, saying it was robust in teacher and administrator training opportunities while other areas needed more work. Among the agency's concerns: Idaho's plan didn't put enough emphasis on graduation rates and could potentially mask lower-performing students. Idaho has since tweaked the system to place greater weight on graduation rates and require school districts to adopt plans to help minority and economically disadvantaged students found significantly lagging behind their peers, said deputy superintendent Nick Smith. The state is also working to assure federal officials that Idaho's new system doesn't mask lower-performing students and that schools with significant achievement gaps wouldn't be able to land a five-star or four-star rating.

the council pass the resolution. The council will also hear input from the public on whether to increase ball field preparation fees for private youth organizations. Along with the public hearings, the council will also decide whether to adopt the tentative budget for next year with a public budget hearing scheduled for Aug. 20. Adoption of the budget is recommended by city staff. Also on the agenda: • A request to authorize the mayor to sign an agreement for bond counsel services from Stephanie Bonney of Moore, Smith, Buxton & Turcke, Chartered, for the refinancing and issuance of water revenue bonds and sewer revenue bonds. • Consideration to approve a bid award to Ricondo and Associates for the development of a required FAA Airport Wildlife Hazard Management Plan. • Consideration of a request to adopt a resolution declaring that the purchase of used bucket truck can be completed more economically by purchasing goods and services on the open market.

Elaine H. Gardner

Feb. 24, 1919–July 26, 2012

SARATOGA SPRINGS, Utah • Elaine H. Gardner, age 93, of Saratoga Springs, Utah, passed away Thursday, July 26, 2012, in Orem, Utah.

She was born Feb. 24, 1919, in Rupert, Idaho, to Joseph Hansen and Mary Ann Amanda Swensen.

Elaine grew up on a farm south of Rupert. Growing up on a farm, she milked cows, thinned beets, hauled hay, and picked potatoes. She graduated from Rupert High School in 1937, attended LDS Business College in 1937 – 1938. She worked for MH King Company the fall of 1938 to May 1939.

On May 26, 1939, she married Orrin M. Gardner in the Logan LDS Temple. Her husband taught school in the Star Valley School District in Star Valley, Wyo. In 1944 they moved to Hazelton, Idaho, where they farmed and raised their family. In 1960 she started working at A & P (a potato processing plant) at nights for three and a half years. She worked for Hazelton Bean Growers one winter and spring and went to business college at night after work. When she finished the course she worked for United Oil Company as a secretary for eight years. In 1977 Orrin and Elaine began helping with the care of their daughter's children. Before her husband's death in 1988, they became foster grandparents at the Eden Elementary School.

Elaine returned as a foster grandparent in 1989. After the grandchildren were raised she moved to Federal Way, Wash., and lived with her son, Gary, and his wife, Betty, and their family. When Gary died she and Betty, her daughter-in-law, moved to Saratoga Springs, Utah.

She is survived by her son, Robert (Linda) Gardner, of Bothell, Wash.; daughter, Cheryl O'Brien, of Twin Falls, Idaho; and daughter-in-law, Betty Gardner, of Saratoga Springs, Utah; 21 grandchildren, 60 great-grandchildren, and five great-great-grandchildren. She was preceded in death by her husband, Orrin M. Gardner; son, Gary O. Gardner; grandson, Shannon C. Mangum; great granddaughter, Tierra Ann Mangum; parents, Joseph and Amanda Hansen; all of her siblings (sisters; Mabel, Mary, Lillian, Lucille and VerLee and a brother, Rulon); and son-in-law Dan O'Brien.

Funeral services will be held at 11 a.m. Friday, Aug. 10, 2012, at the Hazelton 1st Ward Chapel of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. Burial will follow in the Hazelton Cemetery. A viewing will be held at the church at 10 a.m. for family and friends prior to the funeral.

Services are under the direction of Rosenau Funeral Home, Twin Falls. Family and friends may share their memories at www.rosenaufuneralhome.com.

Eagles Coach's Troubled Son Found Dead at 29

BY ROB MAADDI
Associated Press

BETHLEHEM, Pa. • Garrett Reid, the troubled 29-year-old son of Philadelphia Eagles coach Andy Reid, was found dead Sunday in a dorm room at the club's Lehigh University training camp, where he spends most of his summers with his father.

Police said the death was not suspicious, and the cause was under investigation. The coach's oldest son had a long history of drug problems, once admitting "I liked being a drug dealer" and went to prison for a heroin-fueled car crash.

Reid's death stunned the Eagles, who gathered for a team prayer before a morning walkthrough.

"This is a very difficult situation for us all," quarterback Michael Vick said following practice — their first without their head coach in five years.

Owner Jeffery Lurie met with the team Sunday and told reporters afterward he expected Reid back this week. The Eagles host Pittsburgh in their preseason opener on Thursday night.

"There's choices to be made when tragedy happens," Lurie said, pausing to hold back tears. "You can become stronger and even more focused and learn from it and treat life as a challenge, or you can bow down. And Andy is somebody — he said to me, 'I'm going to hit that curveball and hit it out of the park' — and on the field and off the field. And that's the message he wanted me to have."

The police chief at Lehigh, Edward Shupp, said a 911 call was made at 7:20 a.m. about Reid, and that the 29-year-old was dead when a policeman arrived at the campus dormitory. The police and Northampton County coroner were investigating.

Shupp said "there were no suspicious activities." Police didn't return later telephone calls for comment, and didn't say who found Garrett Reid or whether any clues to his death were found in his room.

Reid had been staying at the camp where he assisted the Eagles' strength coaches at camp in an unofficial capacity, a not-uncommon sort of role for NFL coaches' sons. He was frequently seen on the sideline at practices and in the locker room after games. Many of the coaches and staff stay in the Lehigh dorms.

He seemed to have rebounded from a years-long struggle with drug abuse that landed him in prison.

He was sentenced to nearly two years for a 2007 high-speed car crash while he was high on heroin that injured another driver. Police found heroin and more than 200 pills in his car. When he surrendered to begin his sentence, prison guards found Reid had tried to smuggle prescription pills into jail.

In the midst of his legal troubles, Reid said he "got a thrill" out of being a drug dealer in a lower-income neighborhood just a few miles from his parents' suburban Villanova mansion.

"I liked being the rich kid in that area and having my own high-status life," Reid told a probation officer, according to court testimony in November 2007. "I could go anywhere in the 'hood. They all knew who I was. I enjoyed it. I liked being a drug dealer."

At his sentencing hearing, Reid told the judge: "I don't want to die doing drugs. I don't want to be that kid who was the son of the head coach of the Eagles, who was spoiled and on drugs and OD'd and just faded into oblivion."

War Historian Keegan Chronicled Individual Toll of Battle

BY MATT SCHUDEL
The Washington Post

John Keegan, a British military historian whose groundbreaking book "The Face of Battle" cast a fresh look at warfare, capturing the fears, anxiety and heroism of the front-line soldier, died Aug. 2 at his home in Kilmington, England. He was 78.

The Telegraph newspaper in London, for which he had been an editor and writer, announced his death but did not disclose the cause.

Mr. Keegan was a writer of exceptional grace whose more than 20 books spanned the history of warfare from Alexander the Great to the 21st-century U.S. incursion in Iraq. In the New York Times Book Review in 2009, Civil War historian James M. McPherson called him "our generation's foremost military historian."

The work that established Mr. Keegan's reputation was "The Face of Battle" (1976), which examined warfare from the perspective of soldiers taking part in three historical European battles: Agincourt in 1415; Waterloo in 1815; and the 1916 Battle of the Somme, during World War I.

In the book, Mr. Keegan made it clear that his approach was a departure from conventional historical writing, "with its reduction of soldiers to pawns, its discontinuous rhythm, its conventional imagery, its selective incident and its high focus on leadership."

Instead, he described the conditions at the battlefield with a visceral realism, depicting the deafening noise, blinding smoke, slippery gore, confusion, stench and fear that accompanied soldiers in war.

All battles, regardless of their era, Mr. Keegan argued, were fought by soldiers "struggling to reconcile their instinct for self-preservation, their sense of honor and the achievement of some aim over which other men are ready to kill them."

He was particularly eloquent in writing about the brutality of the first day of the Battle of the Somme, on July 1, 1916: "In all, the British had lost about 60,000, of whom 21,000 had been killed, most in the first hour of the attack, perhaps the first minutes."

The conditions of the battle were so abhorrent, he wrote, with "long docile lines of young men, shoddily uniformed, heavily burdened, numbered about their necks, plodding forward across a featureless landscape to their own extermination," that they could be compared only to the Nazi concentration camps of World War II.

"Accounts of the Somme," Mr. Keegan wrote, "produce in readers and audiences much the same range of emotions as do descriptions of the running of Auschwitz — guilty fascination, incredulity, horror, disgust, pity and anger."

Historian Neal Ascherson, writing in the New York Review of Books, said that "The Face of Battle" had "no counterpart in the literature of war."

British historian J.H. Plumb, in the New York Times Book Review, pronounced it "a brilliant achievement" that was "as much about the nature of man as of battle."

Mr. Keegan went on to write other influential books exploring the nuances of warfare, including "Six Armies in Normandy" (1982), about the D-Day Invasion of France during World War II, and "The Mask of Command" (1987), which concluded that the best military commanders projected strength through a strong sense of theatricality that inspired their soldiers to follow them into battle.

In his 1996 book, "Fields of Battle: The Wars of North America," Mr. Keegan described the military and cultural significance of landscape and a continent-wide network of forts in battles throughout the United States and Canada.

More Marijuana Found in Idaho?

In remote mountains at about 7,000 feet, above the small southeast Idaho farm town Grace — there must have been some crooked smiles among purveyors of the illicit as they passed through — developed one of the largest and more sophisticated criminal enterprises Idaho has recently seen.

Randy Stapilus
Ridenbaugh.com

A mass coalition of law enforcement agencies, even including the state national guard, last week swept into the Caribou County backcountry and found an estimated 40,000 marijuana plants. Street value estimates in such cases often are inflated, but it had to have been large. There was law enforcement talk of possible connections to a Mexican cartel; the size of the operation would argue in favor of that theory.

That was not the only big pot bust recently. Southwest of Jerome, 1,100 marijuana plants were found (in an aerial recon), also last week. The week before, they found another 6,500 plants in a Gooding County field.

The fact of these big recent grow finds isn't proof of major recent growth of an Idaho marijuana industry. But it feels like evidence.

Could even be some cause and effect. Barring coincidence, if large organizations really are behind these big grow operations, what's happening in neighboring states may have something to do with it.

Eight states may have marijuana-related measures, all aimed at liberalizing pot law, on their ballots this fall. In Oregon and Washington measures to legalize, tax and regulate have hit the ballot, and have a fair chance of passing. Colorado voters will consider a similar option. In these states, if the measures pass, there'll be a big tussle with the federal government, whose anti-pot laws will not have changed at all. But there'll also be further growth, probably a balloon, in above-the-table grow operations. In Oregon, there already are a number of large farming businesses openly growing marijuana, under the state's medical marijuana law. Their formal status is pretty gray-area, even apart from the federal law, but passage of the state ballot issue almost certainly would mean an expansion.

Is it coincidence that more hidden grow operations are turning up in Idaho? Nationally, the Drug Enforcement Agency reports seizures overall fell 35 percent from 2010 to 2011. It may be that more of the pot traffic in Oregon and Washington, and some other states, is becoming internalized as it becomes available through near-conventional means. In Idaho, where even a modest proposal to legalize hemp (which has no psychotropic effect but does have many other marketable uses) has gone nowhere, the underground is, well, deeper underground. There may be less Oregon marketplace for traditional criminal lines of traffic, but these connections are relatively unchanged in Idaho.

State laws matter. When Washington liquor sales moved, some weeks ago, from state stores to private retail sales, prices bounced up.

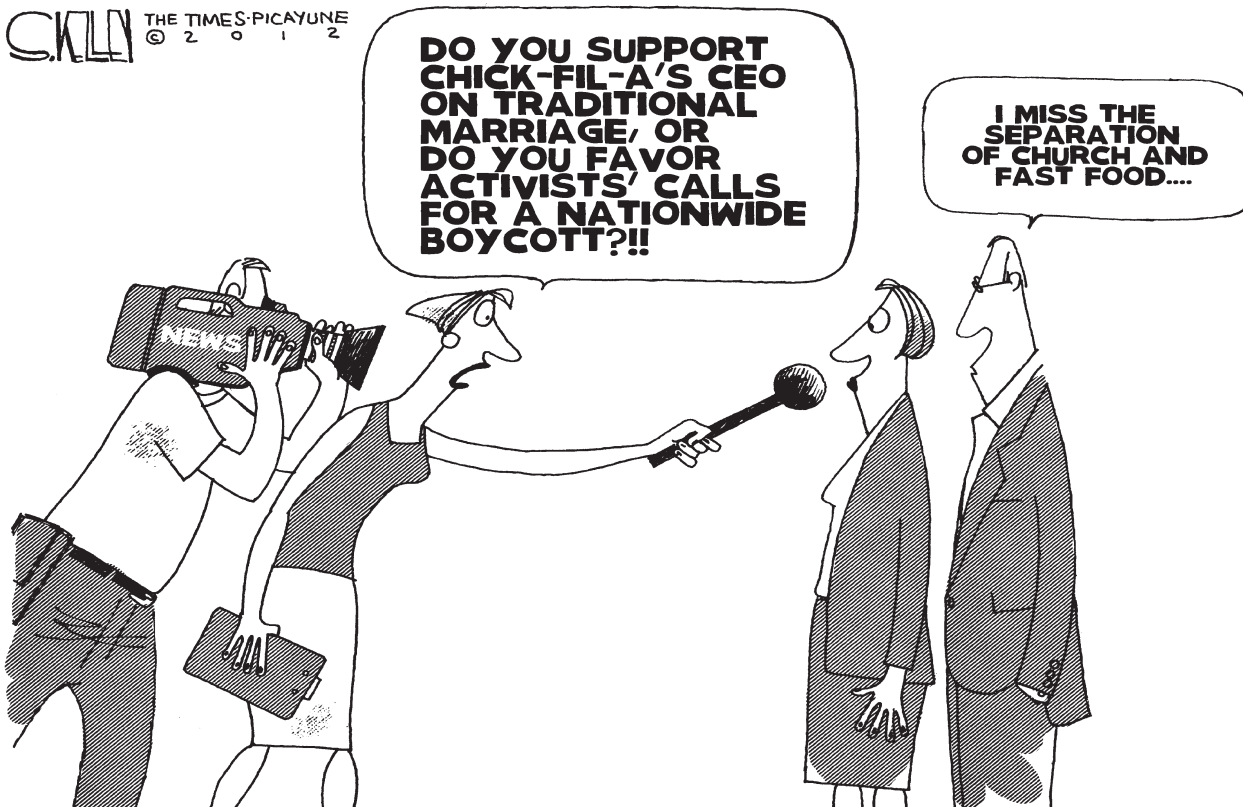

That's probably a short-term phenomenon, but for the moment at least it has led to heavy traffic in lower-priced Idaho state liquor stores, presumably from Washington residents. (The same thing has happened on the Washington-Oregon border.)

What sort of ongoing effects might Idaho see if there's a sorta-kind-a pot legalization, and marketplace, west of the Idaho line, and none to the east?

Does Mitt Romney Have a Problem with Being Wealthy?

Having money, on balance, is a net positive in life, but studies of happiness caution that great wealth doesn't necessarily improve well-being.

For Mitt Romney, it may actually be an impediment. In his campaign for president, Romney's personal fortune has proved to be a tender subject as well as the source material for many of his worst gaffes. If only his wealth could rest demurely in the Cayman Islands. Instead, it rears up at politically inopportune moments, prompting Romney to offer Texas Gov. Rick Perry a $10,000 bet at a debate; to announce his affinity for "Nascar owners" and his disdain for fans dressed in plastic ponchos; to declare his enjoyment of firing people and to make a joke about being unemployed himself.

His wife, Ann, he told us, has two Cadillacs, which helps to explain both the need for a car lift at the couple's oceanfront house and the conclusion, reached by 89 percent of respondents in a YouGov poll, that Romney "cares about the wealthy." Columnist Daniel Henninger of the Wall Street Journal, a newspaper that sympathetically chronicles the abuses heaped on the upper class by an ungrateful hoi polloi, warned that photos of the Romneys vacationing on New Hampshire's Lake Win-

Margaret Carlson

nipesaukee (with yet another mansion in the background) was a jet ski too far. In a nation where median family income has been losing ground for more than a decade, is it too much to ask Romney at least to pretend that he understands the ways of commoners? Apparently it is. Members of the Republican establishment, including New Jersey Gov. Chris Christie, former party Chairman Haley Barbour and talking heads of the class Bill Kristol and George Will, have urged Romney to fork over multiple years of tax returns, as countless candidates, including Romney's own father, have done before him.

After months of dithering accompanied by vague claims that tax data would be forthcoming, the candidate opted for secrecy, deciding that the political hit from not disclosing his taxes is preferable to showing voters what ever lurks inside. Even discussing his wealth musses Romney's chairman-of-the-board demeanor. Such conversation, he told the NBC "Today" show's Matt Lauer, should be reserved for "quiet rooms."

Trouble is, being a presidential candidate means dispensing with privacy, including revealing how much money you have, where it came from and whether, in the sort of hypothetical that seemed inconceivable until the 2012 campaign, it is residing not in a cookie jar but in the quiet rooms of Switzerland and Bermuda. What does it say about Romney's rigid embrace of his fortune that he won't move his money from nations synonymous with dodgy tax manipulation into a U.S. account? Not even to be president? How much does he want the job? Romney at least has acquired a bit of horse sense, distancing himself from Rafalca, Ann Romney's mare that will be dancing for gold at the Olympics in an obscure sport called dressage.

Romney now says he won't be paying attention to the competition, which Romney supporter Charles Krauthammer called "the most upper-class hoity-toity Olympic event ever invented."

Talking to NBC's Brian Williams, Romney would only cop to knowing that other "people that are associated with this are looking forward to it!"

Far from being an innocent bystander, dressage-wise, Romney has previously swooned over Austrian Warmbloods in an off-air exchange with Fox News host Sean Hannity. He has attended many competitions and in April helped choose the music for Rafalca's high-stepping performance at the Dressage World Cup.

It may be too late to put the horse back in the barn, but Romney might at least want to revisit the $77,000 business loss he took for Rafalca's care and feeding, which is sort of like the tax deduction families get for each child, only much, much better.

A presidential candidate who takes a huge tax deduction for such an elitist sport exhibits a cluelessness bordering on contempt. Romney has argued that dressage helps his wife's multiple sclerosis. That's all to the good, but dressage is to therapeutic horseback riding as caviar is to Spam.

Romney supporters know to dismiss as envious anyone who highlights the peculiarities of the candidate's wealth. Most of them undoubtedly understand that his success is not the issue. The source of resentment is that Romney plays by different rules. He says he pays the taxes he legally owes and "not a penny more!"

That's probably true. The investor class has shoehorned complicated loopholes into the tax code, keeping a flotilla of accountants busy sheltering their wealth from the U.S. Treasury. (Ordinary taxpayers, alas, cannot play along at home.)

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Thank You for Coverage of Minidoka Fair

Thank you so very, very much for your personal visits to the Magic Valley fairs! There is usually one picture from first day of the fair and schedule for rest of the week and that's it. So glad to see each day something about what's showing that day, a visit with people showing and comments from the judge about why some are awarded prizes, etc.

There is a different fair each week through the first of September, and I can tell you, this farm wife does enjoy what you are doing. I don't walk anymore and am unable to get to all the fairs, and you are bringing them right into my home. I do enjoy that, I don't know the kids interviewed, but their pictures and comments are so refreshing and I know if my grandmother was still alive she would enjoy it so very much.

I hope you encourage the paper to keep doing this through all the fairs, as I think you are supplying something that almost everyone can relate to and enjoy!

From the bottom of my heart — thank you!

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Open Letter to the Person Who Robbed My Home

This letter goes out to the person or persons responsible for breaking into my home and taking a gun, a small amount of change and my jewelry box.

I don't have a lot of stuff that's worth anything, but I do want you to know that some of the jewelry in the box had very sentimental value to me and can never be replaced. The dolphin earrings were from my mother who passed away less than a year ago. They couldn't possibly be worth anything to you, but to me they meant the world. They were a piece of my mother that I'll never have again, along with some of the other jewelry that you took. When my grandmother passed away, the only piece of her I got was some of her costume jewelry that she loved dearly, and that's what made it special to me.

So if you can find it in your heart, I would really appreciate it if you could find some way to return the jewelry to me, no questions asked. Just please don't toss it in a trash can somewhere. The gun can be replaced, the change wasn't even enough to worry about, but when you took my jewelry box and its contents, you took something that no person should ever take from another. So I'm begging you, please have a heart and return my memories.

Isn't It Time for a More Reasonable Approach to Marijuana?

Regarding the seizure of what was described as "$2 million worth" of plants recognized as legal medication in 17 states and the District of Columbia, I had to say "Thank goodness this dangerous plant was kept off our streets!"

Can you imagine what could have happened if it had made its way into the hands of consenting adults who wished to engage in the victimless act of consuming it especially if they had purchased it with their lawfully acquired money? Crisis averted!

Isn't it time we had a serious look at where we spend law enforcement dollars and focus on crimes where there is harm to people or property like domestic violence and vandalism or financial harm like fraud rather than peaceful, non-violent "offenders?"

Of course, we need to look out for unscrupulous people who would harm children by giving them things they simply aren't mature enough to handle and, as such, that would be a crime with not only a victim but a minor child victim and should be punishable by law and subject to civil legal action by the minor's family.

But when it comes to consenting adults, isn't it time for a more reasonable approach? Please consider supporting Gary Johnson for President if you think the "War on Drugs" is a waste of money (over a trillion dollars!) and a colossal failure.

AGING ISSUES

Social Security not Deal it Once Was

STEPHEN OHLEMACHER
Associated Press

WASHINGTON • People retiring today are part of the first generation of workers who have paid more in Social Security taxes during their careers than they will receive in benefits after they retire. It's a historic shift that will only get worse for future retirees, according to an analysis by The Associated Press.

Previous generations got a much better bargain, mainly because payroll taxes were very low when Social Security was enacted in the 1930s and remained so for decades.

"For the early generations, it was an incredibly good deal," said Andrew Biggs, a former deputy Social Security commissioner who is now a scholar at the American Enterprise Institute. "The government gave you free money and getting free money is popular."

If you retired in 1960, you could expect to get back seven times more in benefits than you paid in Social Security taxes, and more if you were a low-income worker, as long you made it to age 78 for men and 81 for women.

As recently as 1985, workers at every income level could retire and expect to get more in benefits than they paid in Social Security taxes, though they didn't do quite as well as their parents and grandparents.

Not anymore. A married couple retiring last year after both spouses earned average lifetime wages paid about $598,000 in Social Security taxes during their careers. They can expect to collect about $556,000 in benefits, if the man lives to 82 and the woman lives to 85, according to a 2011 study by the Urban Institute, a Washington think tank.

Social Security benefits are progressive, so most low-income workers retiring today still will get slightly more in benefits than they paid in taxes. Most high-income workers started getting less in benefits than they paid in taxes in the 1990s, according to data from the Social Security Administration.

Neta Homier looks over bills in her home in Toledo, Ohio, in July. Homier says she relies on Social Security to pay her bills and while she is confident the program will continue to help her she fears it will not be able to rely on it.

The shift among middle-income workers is happening just as millions of baby boomers are reaching retirement, leaving relatively fewer workers behind to pay into the system. It's coming at a critical time for Social Security, the federal government's largest program.

The trustees who oversee Social Security say its funds, which have been built up over the past 30 years with surplus payroll taxes, will run dry in 2033 unless Congress acts. At that point, payroll taxes would provide enough revenue each year to pay about 75 percent of benefits.

To cover the shortfall, future retirees probably will have to pay higher taxes while they are working, accept lower benefits after they retire, or some combination of both.

"Future generations are going to do worse because either they are going to get fewer benefits or they are going to pay higher taxes," said Eugene Steuerle, a former Treasury official who has studied the issue as a fellow at the Urban Institute.

How can you get a better return on your Social Security taxes?

Live longer. Benefit estimates are based on life expectancy. For those turning 65 this year, Social Security expects women to live 20 more years and men to live 17.8 more.

But returns alone don't fully explain the value of Social Security, which has features that aren't available in typical private-sector retirement plans, said David Certner, legislative policy director for AARP.

Spouses can get benefits even if they never earned wages. Children can get benefits if they have a working parent who dies. People who are too disabled to work can get benefits for life.

Because of spousal benefits, most married couples with only one wage earner will continue to get more in benefits than they pay in taxes for the foreseeable future.

"You are buying this lifetime inflation-protected benefit that you can never run out of and that will always be there for you," Certner said. "It protects your spouse, protects your family and protects you from disability."

Certner noted that private pensions, retirement savings and home values took a big hit when the economy collapsed, putting a dent in the retirement plans of many Americans.

"When you have that combination of factors, Social Security becomes more and more important," Certner said. Social Security is financed by a 12.4 percent tax on wages. Workers pay half and their employers pay the other half. Self-employed workers pay the full 12.4 percent.

The tax is applied to the first $110,100 of a worker's wages, a level that increases each year with inflation. For 2011 and 2012, the tax rate for employees was reduced to 4.2 percent, but is scheduled to return to 6.2 percent in January.

The payroll tax rate was only 2 percent in 1937, the first year Social Security taxes were levied. It did not surpass 6 percent until 1962.

Even with low tax rates, Social Security could afford to pay benefits in the early years because there were more workers paying the tax for each person receiving benefits than there are today. In 1960, there were 4.9 workers paying Social Security taxes for each person getting benefits. Today, there are about 2.8 workers for each beneficiary, a ratio that will drop to 1.9 workers by 2035, according to projections by the Congressional Budget Office.

About 56 million people now collect Social Security benefits, and that number is projected to grow to 91 million in 2035. Monthly benefits average $1,235 for retired workers and $1,111 for disabled workers. Social Security provides most older Americans a majority of their income. About one-quarter of married couples and just under half of single retirees rely on Social Security for 90 percent or more of their income, according to the Social Security Administration.

Social Security: Who gets it?

About 56 million people receive monthly Social Security benefits. Who they are, and how much they get:

- 36 million retired workers. Average monthly benefit: $1,235.
- 8.7 million disabled workers. Average benefit: $1,111.
- 2.5 million spouses. Average benefit: $590.
- 4.3 million children. Average benefit: $564.
- 4.4 million widows and widowers. Average benefit: $1,152.

Social Security: How much I pay, how much I get Lifetime Social Security taxes and benefits vary for people turning 65 in different decades. The lifetime value of taxes is based on the value of accumulated taxes paid, as if those taxes were put into an account that earned an annual 2 percent interest rate, plus inflation. The examples are for a married couple in which both spouses earned average wages ($43,500 in 2011). Projected benefits assume that both spouses have average life spans after turning 65. Want more benefits? Live longer.

If you turned 65 in 1960: Lifetime Social Security benefits: $259,000.

Lifetime Social Security taxes: $36,000.

If you turned 65 in 1980: Lifetime benefits: $452,000.

Lifetime taxes: $192,000.

If you turned 65 in 2010: Lifetime benefits: $555,000.

Lifetime taxes: $588,000.

If you turn 65 in 2030: Lifetime benefits: $699,000.

Lifetime taxes: $796,000.

Social Security: You can't get these returns today

The first person to get a monthly retirement check from Social Security certainly got her money's worth. Ida May Fuller, a retired legal secretary from Ludlow, Vt., received her first monthly check in January 1940. She was 65 years old and lived to be 100. She had paid Social Security taxes for three years.

Social Security taxes paid by Fuller during her career:

Fuller's first monthly benefit check: $22.54.

Fuller's lifetime benefits: $22,888.92.

Aging Baby Boomers Face Home Health Care Challenge

JOHN SEEWER
Associated Press

CLEVELAND • For the past three years, Taura Tate's mornings have revolved around caring for a woman who suffers from the effects of a stroke and diabetes. She cooks her oatmeal for breakfast, helps with showers and makes sure she takes the right medicine.

Without the help of a home health aide, the woman, who's in her 70s, would be in a nursing home instead of living on her own.

But Tate has her own struggles. Until a recent promotion, her pay amounted to what she could make at McDonald's. She doesn't get health or retirement benefits and has worked at five agencies in the Cleveland area, some simultaneously, to guarantee she'll have enough clients.

"If they go into the hospital or go on vacation, you don't get paid," she said.

Demand for home health care workers is soaring as baby boomers — the 78 million Americans born between 1946 and 1964 — get older and states try to save money by moving people out of more costly nursing homes. But filling more than 1 million new home care positions over the next decade will be a challenge.

Most home health aides are paid about the same as maids and manicurists and don't get sick days or health insurance themselves. Many who are self-employed must pay for their own gas for driving to appointments and cover their own medical bills if they're hurt on the job.

The U.S. Labor Department projects that home health and personal care aides will be among the fastest-growing jobs over the next decade, adding 1.3 million positions and increasing at a rate higher than any other occupation. If those jobs can't be filled, many older Americans are likely to face living with relatives or in nursing homes, which will only cost families and taxpayers more money.

Some aides say they have no choice but to say no when people call looking for help because they can't afford to take on someone else.

"It's hard because I love helping people, but at the same time I've got three kids," said Kimberly Ingram, a home health aide in Lancaster, S.C. "When you add up your miles, your gas money, you don't make nothing."

Her part-time job delivering newspapers pays better when you factor in the time and travel some home care jobs need, she said.

Nearly half of all home care workers live at or below the poverty level, and many receive government benefits such as food stamps, unions and advocacy groups say. The median pay a year ago was $9.70 per hour — 4 cents less than fast-food workers and short-order cooks, according to the most recent statistics from the Labor Department.

Agencies that supply home health workers blame states and the federal government for failing to increase reimbursement rates for Medicaid and Medicare patients at a time when costs are going up.

Home health services are an easy target for cuts because they're not required by federal law, and legislators in states with big deficits say they have no choice but to cut Medicaid spending, the second-costliest item for states behind education.

At the same time, some states, including Ohio, are changing how they coordinate medical care and trying to move some of the most expensive and hard-to-treat patients into home and community-based settings instead of nursing homes.

The result, home care agencies say, is that there's little room for them to make a profit. And that means they can go only so far to attract new workers.

"We compete with McDonald's, Wendy's and the discount stores," said Jennifer Witten, owner of Imani Home Health Co. in Cleveland. "You can't afford to raise your salaries, yet you want to hire the best people."

Home care agencies say trying to fill jobs will become even more difficult in a few years if the economy improves and job options increase.

"The real staffing challenge is 10 years away," said David Tramontana, president of Home Care by Black Stone in Cincinnati. "If we can't pay them more than they get at McDonald's, we're in big trouble."

The qualifications and training for home care aides varies. A high school diploma isn't usually a requirement, and some states call for only on-the-job training, while others insist on more formal instruction about basic nutrition and personal hygiene at community colleges or elder care programs. Home care agencies that are reimbursed by Medicare or Medicaid must hire aides who have passed a competency test or received state certification.

Despite the relatively low pay, many aides say they like the flexible hours and find the work rewarding.

Tate, a home care aide since 1999, doubts she could get by if it weren't for her husband, a truck driver who also has health insurance. She could make more money at a nursing home or hospital but relishes the connections she makes in home care.

"I get attached to the people," said Tate, who made $8.50 an hour until she received a promotion and a $2 raise earlier this summer. "How could you not if you're with them every day? Sometimes you're the only person they see."

Hungary: Mummies Aid Medical Research

BY PABLO GORONDI
Associated Press

BUDAPEST, Hungary • One wears a prim white bonnet. Another sticks out its tongue, hands resting over abdomen. A third clutches at its chest, mouth seemingly frozen in a scream. They are faces from the past, trapped in the appearance they bore when laid to rest nearly 300 years ago.

And disturbed from their eternal sleep, these mummies may help unlock the secrets of the immune system.

Resting in cardboard boxes in long rows of cabinets on the top floor of the Hungarian Natural History Museum in Budapest, the 265 mummies are helping scientists find new ways to treat tuberculosis.

Buried between 1731 and 1838 in the crypt of a Dominican church in the northern Hungarian town of Vac, the naturally preserved mummies were forgotten for decades and discovered in 1994 during the church's renovation. They had lain in gracefully painted pinewood coffins, some decorated with pictures of skulls.

The mummification process happened thanks to the favorable microclimate inside the crypt, including low temperatures and relatively constant humidity and air pressure. Wood chips placed under the bodies in the coffins absorbed fluids, so instead of decomposing, the bodies gradually dried out — preserving them in an astonishingly lifelike state.

Reflecting a wide sample of Vac residents, the mummies include three nuns, 30 priests, the wife and child of the local postmaster, surgeons, the founder of the Vac hospital and first director of the town's school for the deaf. "What was probably the most exciting and most comprehensive study was the one about tuberculosis," said Ildiko Pap, head of the Department of Anthropology of the Hungarian Natural History Museum. "In some of the individuals, the traces of the mutations on the bones caused by tuberculosis are evident to the naked eye."

"We can say that 89 percent of these people were infected by tuberculosis or its pathogen during their lifetime."

Ildiko Pap, head of the Department of Anthropology of the Hungarian Natural History Museum.

One of 265 mummies that is resting in cardboard boxes in the Hungarian Natural History Museum in Budapest, Hungary, is seen in July. The naturally preserved mummies were forgotten for hundreds of years and were discovered in 1994 during a church's renovation in the northern Hungarian town of Vac.

According to the World Health Organization, nearly 1.5 million people died of tuberculosis in 2010, when 8.8 million new cases were reported. Around one-third of the world's population, over 2 billion people, has latent tuberculosis, which means they have been infected by the bacteria but do not show symptoms of the illness and cannot transmit the disease.

Pap said that all but 99 of the mummies have been identified and a large trove of information has been gathered about most of them, thanks to birth and death registers in the church, the names and dates on the coffins and other research done since their discovery.

The tuberculosis studies are being carried out in collaboration with experts from University College London and The Hebrew University of Jerusalem.

Eighty-nine percent of the mummies, ranging in age from newborns to over 65, had at one point been infected with tuberculosis and around 35 percent were suffering from the disease at the time of death. The strains of tuberculosis found in the people buried in Vac offer a unique chance to study the pathogens from a time before the development of antibiotics and prior to the spread of the Industrial Revolution.

The discovery of penicillin and subsequent development of other antibiotics in the 20th century virtually wiped out diseases such as tuberculosis that were once major killers in developed countries.

But the overuse and misuse of drugs have allowed old bugs to fight back and eventually overpower antibiotics, rendering some useless.

"We can say that 89 percent of these people were infected by tuberculosis or its pathogen during their lifetime," Pap said. "Their immune system was likely better than ours. If we could locate some gene sections and discover why they were more resistant to tuberculosis than us, then that could be of great assistance to modern medical science."

She said that the study of the mummies could lead to the development of new tuberculosis medication or the discovery of genetic changes that have affected our reaction to the disease.

Dr. Ruth McNerney, senior lecturer in Pathogen Biology and Diagnostics at the London School of Hygiene and Tropical Medicine, said that the research on the Hungarian mummies could provide a historical reference for the development of the disease.

Syrian Forces Vow 'Decisive' Showdown

BY BRIAN MURPHY
Associated Press

BEIRUT • Syrian forces threatened Sunday to mount a "decisive battle" for Aleppo even as rebels clawed toward the city's ancient center under intense bombardment and strafing from warplanes. In the capital Damascus, militiamen appeared to step up guerrilla-like forays in central districts that were once firmly in the regime's hands.

The twin fronts reflected the rising stakes for both sides and a possible significant evolution in rebel strategies. Opposition forces appear to be shifting toward more hit-and-run strikes in Damascus and elsewhere to tie up Bashar Assad's forces and blur the lines between rebel and government-held territory.

The biggest prize of the ambush brigades so far — 48 abducted Iranians branded as spies by rebels — was put on display in a video that carried a warning that all Iranians in Syria would be "captured or killed" because of Tehran's strong backing for Assad. Iran said those captured when their bus was commandeered on Saturday were pilgrims visiting an important Shiite shrine on the outskirts of Damascus.

The abductions threaten to suck Iran deeper into Syria's civil war and the wider political brinkmanship around the region. Iran claims it has no fighting forces aiding Assad, but it has sharply amplified its criticism of countries supporting the rebels such as neighboring Turkey and Gulf states led by Qatar and Saudi Arabia.

In further signs of the growing proxy nature of Syria's conflict, Iran was forced to reach out to Turkey and Qatar with appeals to help return the captives.

The daylight hijacking on the main airport road in Damascus also raises questions about the regime's ability to control key parts of the capital and protect the symbols of Assad's power such as ministries and government offices — already breached once by a bombing last month that killed four members of Assad's inner circle including his brother-in-law and the defense minister.

The pro-government Al Watan newspaper said the Syrian army is bracing itself for a "decisive battle" to clear Aleppo, Syria's largest city, from rebels. It gave no possible timetable and for more than a week, activists have claimed the government is gearing up for an all-out offensive on the northern commercial center — another critical battleground for Assad's regime to survive.

Government gunners pounded rebel-held areas to keep militiamen from expanding their hold on the city center, dominated by a medieval castle whose loss would be a deep symbolic blow for Assad. Local activist Mohammad Saeed said government warplanes joined in the attack by strafing rebel positions.

NIAGARA FALLS TAKES BROAD APPROACH TO DRAW PEOPLE

BY CAROLYN THOMPSON
Associated Press

NIAGARA FALLS, N.Y. • In recent years, Niagara Falls has thrown open its doors to casino gambling, gay weddings and a tightrope walk that, until laws were relaxed, would have meant arrest.

It even briefly considered taking in toxic wastewater from hydraulic fracturing.

On the drawing board now is a plan to entice young people to move in by paying down their student loans.

After the city's old strategy of industry over tourism flopped amid the decline of Rust Belt manufacturing and the disastrous Love Canal, a new economic plan appears to have emerged: Try anything.

"If you piece together a series of wins, then I think it becomes transformative," Mayor Paul Dyster said, reflecting on efforts to reverse fortunes in a city where one in five people live in poverty and the population of 50,193 is less than half what it was in the 1960s.

More than $2 million in yearly block grants from the federal government could be in jeopardy if the number dips below 50,000.

"Less people means less attention in the government's eyes. ... You need people in your neighborhoods," said Community Development Director Seth Piccirillo.

The latest idea is to cover two years' worth of student loan payments for recent college graduates who agree to live in a targeted neighborhood. Piccirillo said the tuition program will start small, with about 20 people in the first round, but it has attracted interest from around the country.

And that's really the point, Dyster said, of using Niagara Falls as an incubator for new ideas.

"Anything you do at Niagara Falls, because it's a famous place, you get this exponential increase in the level of interest and the level of publicity that's generated," he said. "When you do it in Niagara Falls, it's the difference between speaking in a conversational voice and talking through a megaphone."

The overarching goal is to get people to set up shop here, or at least stick around long enough to spend money.

So, last July when it became legal for same-sex couples to wed in New York state, Niagara Falls organized an attention-grabbing group wedding with hopes of reviving its onetime reputation as "the honeymoon capital" for same-sex and opposite-sex couples alike.

A year later, wedding-related vendors say business is up 20 to 25 percent.

"The general mission is to obtain business. Whether it's new residents or new visitors, we're all on the same goal to better Niagara Falls in general," said John Percy, president of the Niagara Tourism & Convention Corp.

The Kickoff of Football Season

By the time most of you read this, the annual 15-week-long mad dash for football glory will already have started.

In most cases there's less than a month before students, parents and teachers stop thinking about school resuming and once again endure the grind. Today, though, hundreds of teenage athletes will strap on the helmets and cleats and get after chasing dreams of state championships. It's like the opening day of Major League spring training, where even Royals fans can dream that this might be their year. Everyone's on equal footing, and it'll take until mid-October for things to start shaking out.

The season begins at 5 a.m. today in Castleford, then 6:30 in Wendell, and 8 in Jerome. By the time the clock rolls over into Tuesday, more than a dozen schools will have formally embarked upon their 2012 football season.

The media? We've been licking our chops since mid-June. Though it may not have the fishbowl effect like Texas, Florida or Ohio, football is just as much king in Idaho, and I for one can't be more excited about the upcoming campaign.

That's because stories abound this season, even more than most. Wednesday marks the start of my sixth year covering local sports for the Times-News, and I know I approach this season with more questions than in any year before.

- Just to name a few:
- How will Oakley fare at the 11-man game?
 - Can Kimberly give Kirby Bright one last magical run?
 - Will Hagerman withstand newcomer Butte

County's on-paper challenge to its conference and state championships?

- Can Lighthouse Christian repeat its magical run to the title and establish a new IA Division II dynasty?
 - How will Carey rebound from last season's disappointment?
 - Can anyone supplant Minico for Great Basin Conference supremacy?
 - Is this the year Declo finally gets its championship moment?
- Together we'll find out, and we'll bring you all those stories and more over the next four months.
- Here's to another exciting football season.

Hannah Newhouse greets the fans in the stands at Magic Valley Speedway after her Super Stocks main event win Saturday night.

Burley Forces Decisive Title Game

TIMES-NEWS

POCATELLO • The fifth inning was nothing short of magic for the Burley Green Sox on Sunday.

Between their two games, the Green Sox scored 12 runs in the fifth inning, paving the way for a decisive championship game in the Class A American Legion state tournament.

Burley eliminated the Idaho Falls Bees 6-1 before beating Rocky Mountain 13-8 to force the if-necessary game at noon today.

"We just hit the heck out of the ball. We fell behind there and just hit the ball hard," said Burley coach Devin Kunz. "That kind of broke their back and we're counting on that tomorrow. We're going to keep hitting the ball."

Jake Mills allowed just one run against Idaho Falls, a first-inning home run. Then in the game against Rocky Mountain, Taylor Carson tripled twice and drove in five. He also picked up the win.

Burley relied on the same pitchers it has the entire tournament: Mills and Joe Ferrin, along with Carson. Burley has one more game to get through.

For today's final state game, Burley is just hoping to give Mills and Ferrin an inning each, which means getting to the fifth inning with the lead.

If they can do that, the Green Sox feel confident that they can bring a state championship home to a city that's long been short on success in the baseball department.

"I'm just so proud of these guys. Please see BURLEY, S2

Newhouse Rules with Main Event Win

BY LINDA BRITTSAN
For the Times-News

After the fuel from the No. 61 car passed the test, Hannah Newhouse set out to prove a point Saturday night at Magic Valley Speedway.

Prove it she did. Newhouse began the main event race seventh in a field of 11. With Daniel Shirley in the lead at Lap 10, Kris McKean, who had worked his way up to third, slowed in the front stretch bringing out the first caution of the race. McKean then exited to the pits with mechanical issues and would not return.

After three more cautions Shirley lost the lead to Casey Pehrson, but soon, after seeing her opening, Newhouse skillfully finessed her way out front. Although there was some confusion from the tower as to the number of laps remaining in the race, the drivers were given the five to go signal and from there Newhouse could not be caught. It was her fifth main event win of the season in the series.

After fuel controversy during the week, Newhouse said, "We made the decision to come out here and run for wins. Tonight we knew we had the car, it was just a matter of getting it in position to use it. I think it was one of the hardest races I've ran, though."

Although coming up short for the win, it was a good points night for Pehrson.

"I'm a little bummed out because it was a lot of work to get up there and then get beat," he said. "I raced (Newhouse) as hard as I could but I just couldn't hang in there. I think we used it all up getting around Shirley?"

The Street Stocks drivers faced two main event races for the night. In the first main husband and wife Dale and Billi Miles battled for the lead before Ernie Hall broke them up at Lap 23. Hall did his best to make the low-side pass, but Dale Miles kept Hall at bay to take the win. Jason Todd finished third behind Hall.

In the second main Paul Browne held a big lead for the majority of the race but going into Turn 4 toward the checked flag, Browne sent the car of Jay McDonald for a spin to the infield. Although Browne crossed the finish line first he was penalized for the move and Hall, who had worked his way up to second after starting deep in the field, was awarded the win.

"We had some really bad luck at the beginning of the year but hopefully we've gotten that out of the way and it can only get better," Hall said. "I'm a big believer in karma and it's proven to be that way."

Casey Tillman led the Idaho Legends main event race from Lap 2 but it was no easy task staying there with a pack of competitors following closely behind. After the checkered flag flew at Lap 35, the margin of difference to the line between the winner, Tillman, and sixth place finisher Phyllip Zubizareta was less than one second.

Jr. Stingers driver Hailey Douglas took over the lead from Devri Browne at Lap 8 and then added to her lead in the points standings with another main event win. "The Tank" muscled his way to victory in the Thunderdogs main.

Gordon Wins Rain-shortened Race at Pocono

ASSOCIATED PRESS

LONG POND, Pa. • In a race marred by the death of a fan hit by lightning, Jeff Gordon earned his first victory of the season on Sunday, taking advantage of an accident sparked by teammate Jimmie Johnson and going on to win when the race was called because of a downpour preceding the fatal storm.

After the race, Pocono officials said one person died and nine others were injured after a lightning strike in the parking lot behind the grandstand.

"You hate to hear something like that," Gordon said. "Certainly our thoughts are with them."

Gordon earned his 86th career victory, winning for the first time since September 2011 at Atlanta Motor Speedway to thrust himself into wild-card contention in the Chase for the Sprint Cup championship.

This win meant more than about all the others for Gordon. This was the first time his wife and both of his two young children joined him celebration.

"That experience to me today means so much more than anything else," he said.

Britain's Andy Murray celebrates after defeating Switzerland's Roger Federer to win the men's singles gold medal match at the All England Lawn Tennis Club at Wimbledon, in London, at the 2012 Summer Olympics, Sunday.

Murray Drubs Federer for Gold at Olympics

ASSOCIATED PRESS

WIMBLEDON, England • Andy Murray stood with the Union Jack draped over his shoulders, an Olympic gold medal around his neck, flanked by the man he had just beaten, Roger Federer, and basking in the roar of the Centre Court crowd.

No wonder the often dour Scotsman was grinning.

Murray won one for the home team Sunday, beating Federer 6-2, 6-1, 6-4 in the tennis final at Wimbledon.

The victory marked a career breakthrough for Murray. He has lost all four of his Grand Slam finals, three against Federer, including Wimbledon a month ago.

"It has been the best week of my tennis career by a mile," Murray said. "I've had a lot of tough losses. This is the best way to come back from the Wimbledon final. I'll never forget it."

For Federer, the drubbing marked another Olympic disappointment. Playing in the games for the fourth time, he sought a victory to complete a career Golden Slam but settled for silver — his first singles medal.

"Don't feel too bad for me," Federer said. "I felt like I won my silver, I didn't lose it. So I feel really happy."

Murray swept nine consecutive games to take control, breaking Federer's serve four times in a row, his inspired play a reflection of raucous crowd support. He erased all nine breakpoints he faced.

"He never looked back," Federer said. "His credit for getting in the lead and using the crowd to come through. He did an unbelievable job."

The match capped the most memorable Olympics for tennis since it returned to the games in 1988 after a 64-year absence. The event transformed staid Wimbledon into a more festive place.

Murray became the first British man to win the gold in singles since Josiah Ritchie in 1908. Those games took place at Wimbledon, too.

In the day's first match on Centre Court, women's singles champion Serena Williams teamed with sister Venus to win their third career doubles gold medal. They defeated Andrea Hlavackova and Lucie Hradecka of the Czech Republic 6-4, 6-4 under the retractable roof.

Murray settled for a silver in mixed doubles with teammate Laura Robson. They lost to Victoria Azarenka and Max Mirnyi of Belarus 2-6, 6-3, 1-0 (8).

Mike Bryan won his second medal of the weekend when he and U.S. teammate Lisa Raymond took the bronze in mixed doubles, which was back in the Olympics for the first time since 1924. Bryan and his brother Bob won the gold in men's doubles Saturday.

Maria Kirilenko and Nadia Petrova of Russia took the bronze in women's doubles, while Juan Martin del Potro of Argentina won the bronze in men's singles.

Rafael Nadal, the 2008 gold medalist in singles, tweeted his congratulations to this year's medalists.

"Especially to Andy," said Nadal, sidelined with a recurring knee injury. "I can imagine the joy of doing it at home."

Murray had the crowd's support even playing against the beloved Federer. The roof opened shortly before the match, and Federer — winner of seven Wimbledon titles — walked onto the sun-splashed grass to a standing ovation.

Then Murray entered, and an ovation became a roar.

At the far end of the All England Club, thousands of fans with grounds passes enjoyed a carnival atmosphere on the picnic hill known as Murray Mount while watching the match on a huge video screen.

Brees Sharp, Saints Beat Cardinals 17-10

ASSOCIATED PRESS

CANTON, Ohio • Drew Brees didn't need much time to finish off a good weekend for the New Orleans Saints.

Brees smoothly led a touchdown drive on his only series Sunday night, and the Saints beat the Arizona Cardinals 17-10 in the Hall of Fame game, officiated by a crew with college experience.

The game was canceled last year for the first time in 45 years, a casualty of the NFL's lockout of players. Labor issues also came into play in Sunday night's game — the seven officials were replacements.

The referee announced the result of the coin flip incorrectly — Craig Ochoa said the Saints won the toss and deferred, then caught his mistake and said the Cardinals had won the toss. There were some other communication problems as well on the first-time crew.

The win completed a good visit for the Saints (No. 9 in the AP Pro32), who needed a few smiles after their rough offseason.

Suspended coach Sean Payton got the league's permission to attend a dinner for former Saints tackle Willie Roaf and the other five Hall of Fame inductees on Friday night. Payton isn't allowed to have any contact with the team this season as punishment for the team's bounty program.

Players got to tour the hall and sit in the back three rows of the stadium for Roaf's induction on Saturday, wearing black t-shirts with his No. 77. It was a proud moment for a franchise that's been overshadowed by the bounty scandal all offseason.

Brees was sharp on the opening 10-play drive, completing 4 of 5 passes for 41 yards with one off-target throw. Brees skipped offseason workouts and minicamp because he was unhappy getting the team's franchise tag. He later agreed to a five-year, $100 million deal.

The Cardinals (No. 23) are using the preseason to pick a quarterback, with Kevin Kolb and John Skelton competing for the starting job. Kolb got to start the game but had a tough time, throwing an interception on his first pass and leaving after bruising his ribs on the third series.

"You never want to have an injury in the preseason, especially an early game like this, having to play that fifth preseason game," said Skelton, who was 4 of 6 passes for 32 yards. "But he will be OK."

Bradley Wins in a Stunning Turnaround

ASSOCIATED PRESS

AKRON, Ohio • Keegan Bradley only wanted a chance to get into a playoff Sunday at Firestone. All it took was a clutch par, along with a stunning collapse by Jim Furyk, for Bradley to win the Bridgestone Invitational and wrap up a spot on the Ryder Cup team.

Bradley closed with a 6-under 64, and the final stroke was the most important — a 15-foot putt to save par from a plugged lie in the bunker.

Furyk, who led for 71 holes and looked solid throughout the final round, chopped up the 18th hole for a double bogey to throw away a chance at his first win since the 2010 Tour Championship. He missed the green from the fairway. His chip with one foot in the sand barely cleared the bunker and stayed in the thick collar. He hit a weak chip to 5 feet, and his bogey putt never had a chance.

RENO-TAHOE OPEN

RENO, Nev. • J.J. Henry won the Reno-Tahoe Open for his second PGA Tour title, beating Brazil's Alexandre Rocha by a point in the modified Stableford event.

3M CHAMPIONSHIP

BLAINE, Minn. • Bernhard Langer rallied to win the 3M Championship for the second time in four years, shooting a 10-under 62 to overcome a six-stroke deficit.

COX CLASSIC

OMAHA, Neb. • Ben Kohles won his second straight Web.com Tour title since turning professional, closing with an 8-under 62 for a three-stroke victory in the Cox Classic.

Bolt

"Means a lot, because a lot of people were doubting me. A lot of people were saying I wasn't going to win, I didn't look good. There was a lot of talk," Bolt said. "It's an even greater feeling to come out here and defend my title and show the world I'm still No. 1, I'm still the best."

Ever the showman, the Jamaican kept right on running for a victory lap that included high-fives for front-row fans, a pause to crouch down and kiss the track and even a somersault. Thousands in the crowd chanted the champion's name: "Usain! Usain! Usain!"

"I've said it over the years, that when it comes to the championships, this is what I do," Bolt said. "It's all about business for me."

Bolt's training partner and Jamaican teammate, world champion Yohan Blake, won the silver in 9.75, and 2004 Olympic champion Justin Gatlin of the U.S. took the bronze in 9.79.

"It just feels good to be back," said Gatlin, who served a four-year ban after testing positive for excessive testosterone.

"To be honest, I went out there to challenge a mountain. I went out there to challenge the odds. Not just myself and everything I've been through, but the legacy of Usain Bolt," Gatlin said. "I had to go out there and be fearless."

Everyone in the final broke 10 seconds except former world-record holder Asafa Powell of Jamaica, who pulled up with a groin injury.

At Beijing four years ago, the 6-foot-5 Bolt electrified track and field, winning gold medals in world-record times in the 100, 200 and 4x100 relay — something no man had ever done at an Olympics. His 100 mark of 9.69 set there, the one that came despite some slowing down for celebratory chest-slapping, only lasted until the next year's world championships, when he lowered the record to 9.58.

NASCAR

Johnson inadvertently gave his Hendrick Motorsports teammate the help he needed. Johnson's No. 48 had a flat tire off a restart and slammed Matt Kenseth into the wall. Kenseth slid down the track and took out Denny Hamlin and three other cars.

With an unexpected opening triggered by the accident, Gordon zagged and zipped the No. 24 through holes like an All-Pro running back, splashing his way to victory.

"When I saw the opening to get inside, I was taking it," Gordon said.

It couldn't have come at a better time. The skies opened and cars were ordered off the track. The race was called moments later with 98 of the 160 scheduled laps completed. Gordon, who started 27th, had a drive to remember.

Gordon, who turned 41 on Saturday, had a string of bad breaks this season and knew he needed wins over the final six races before the Chase cutoff to have any shot at running for a fifth championship during the 10-race playoffs. The win moved him into the second wild-card spot that would guarantee a berth in the field.

Gordon, who also won a rain-shortened race at Pocono in 2007, passed Bill Elliott for most career wins at Pocono with six.

IN THE DISTRICT COURT OF THE FIFTH JUDICIAL DISTRICT OF THE STATE OF IDAHO, IN AND FOR THE COUNTY OF GOODING, MAGISTRATE DIVISION

IN THE INTEREST OF: Dustin Dakota Barron, CASE NO. CV-2012-383

THE STATE OF IDAHO SENDS GREETING TO: Reynaldo Barron Briceno

YOU ARE HEREBY NOTIFIED THAT:

A petition has been filed in the above-entitled matter in the Magistrate Division of District Court of Gooding County, Idaho, by the Prosecuting Attorney, alleging that the above-named child comes within the purview of the Child Protection Act, and You, Reynaldo Barron Briceno, the biological father of Dustin Dakota Barron, are hereby directed to appear personally before the court for a(n) Adjudicatory Hearing at the Gooding County Courthouse, 624 Main, Gooding, Idaho on the 15th day of August, 2012, at 10:00 a.m.

You are hereby notified that service of such summons upon you, as the parent(s), guardian(s), or custodian(s) of the respective child, does confer the personal jurisdiction of the court upon you and does subject you to the provisions of the Child Protective Act.

You, Reynaldo Barron Briceno, are notified that the parent(s), guardian(s), or custodian(s) may be financially liable for the support and/or treatment of the child.

You, Reynaldo Barron Briceno, are further notified that the child and the parent(s), guardian(s), or custodian(s) have the right to be represented by and attorney of your choosing, or if financially unable to pay, have the right to have an attorney appointed by the court to represent the child or the parent(s), guardian(s), or custodian(s) at county expense.

You, Reynaldo Barron Briceno, are further notified that there shall be a rebuttable presumption that if a child is placed in the custody of the department and was also placed in out the home care for a period not less than fifteen (15) out of the last twenty-two (22) months from the date of adjudication, the department shall initiate a petition for termination of parental rights. This presumption may be rebutted by a finding of the court that the filing of a petition for termination of parental rights would not be in the best interest of the child or reasonable efforts have not been provided to reunite the child with his/her family, or the child is placed permanently with a relative.

NOTICE OF TRUSTEE'S SALE

On the 27th day of November, 2012, at the hour of 10:00 a.m. of this day (recognized local time), in the office of Land Title and Escrow, Inc., 237 N. Lincoln, Jerome, ID 83338, in the County of Jerome County, State of Idaho, TitleOne Corporation, an Idaho corporation, as successor trustee, will sell at public auction to the highest bidder, for cash or cashier's check (cash equivalent), in lawful money of the United States, all payable at the time of sale in compliance with Section 45-1506(9) Idaho Code, the following described real property, situated in Jerome County, State of Idaho, and described as follows to wit:

Lot 8 in Block 2 of Homestead Acres Subdivision, Jerome County, Idaho as the same is platted in the official plat thereof, recorded May 20, 2004 as Instrument No. 2042757, records of Jerome County, Idaho.

The Trustee has no knowledge of a more particular description of the above referenced real property, but for purposes of compliance with Section 60-113, Idaho Code, the Trustee has been informed that according to the County Assessors office, the address of 186 Homestead Loop, Jerome, ID, 83338, is sometimes associated with said real property.

Said sale will be made without covenant or warranty regarding title, possession, or encumbrances to satisfy the obligation secured by and pursuant to the power of sale conferred in the Deed of Trust executed by James J. Fowler and Amanda C. Fowler, husband and wife, as Grantor(s), to TitleOne Corporation, an Idaho corporation, as successor trustee, and Mortgage Electronic Registration Systems, Inc., solely as nominee for Lender, as Beneficiary, recorded October 9, 2009, as Instrument No. 2095010, and assigned to MetLife Home Loans, a division of MetLife Bank, N.A. by assignment recorded December 13, 2011, as Instrument No. 2115712, in the records of Jerome County, Idaho.

THE ABOVE GRANTORS ARE NAMED TO COMPLY WITH SECTION (45-1506)(4)(A), IDAHO CODE. NO REPRESENTATION IS MADE THAT THEY ARE, OR ARE NOT, PRESENTLY RESPONSIBLE FOR THIS OBLIGATION.

The default for which this sale is to be made is the failure to pay when due, under Deed of Trust Note, the monthly payments of $1,487.58, due per month for the month of March 1, 2011 and all subsequent monthly payments of principal, interest, late charges and any miscellaneous fees thereafter. The Principal balance is $224,633.85, the current interest rate is 5.375% per annum, as of July 27, 2011. All amounts are now due, together with unpaid and accruing taxes, assessments, trustee's fees, attorney's fees, costs and advances made to protect the security associated with this foreclosure and that the beneficiary elects to sell or cause the trust property to be sold to satisfy said obligation.

DEAR ABBY: I need some advice about my girlfriend "Vivian's" son. "Kirk" is 22 and very immature. I love Vivian with all my heart, and I get upset when Kirk verbally abuses her. I try not to say anything because I feel it's not my place because he's not MY son.

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

Kirk hasn't worked in two years. He walks into his mother's house and takes whatever he wants — food, toothpaste, rolls of toilet paper, etc. He won't help her around the house, mow the lawn or wash a dirty dish he has used. And he lives rent-free in one of the duplexes his mother bought for additional income.

Vivian is a wonderful woman who is hard-working and self-supporting. She's also tired of her son's lack of motivation and how he takes her for granted.

I know a mother doesn't want to see her child go hungry, but where do you draw the line?

— FED UP IN TEXAS

DEAR FED UP: Vivian should draw the line at the front door. By tolerating her son's disrespectful behavior she is doing him no favors. Unless he actively looks for a job, stops helping himself to her property and does something to repay her generosity (mowing the lawn and washing the dishes he uses would be a good start), she should stop "helping" him. What she's doing is crippling her son, who may be in need of counseling.

DEAR ABBY: Please inform your readers not to invite people to bridal showers if they're not invited to the wedding.

I was invited to a shower and accidentally found out I wasn't being invited to the wedding. At first I was upset, but imagine how mortified I felt when I was told that if some of the invited guests sent back a refusal, THEN I would be invited to the wedding. I would have preferred to have been told, "I'd love to have you, but we just can't afford to invite all of the lovely people we would like."

I know this isn't the first time you've mentioned something like this in your column, but it amazes me how insensitive people can be.

— SECOND STRING, BRADFORD, MASS.

DEAR SECOND STRING: Being told we are at the top of the "B" list makes us feel really wanted, doesn't it? If people would take just a moment to consider how their words and deeds affect others, what a kinder, gentler world this would be.

P.S. For the record: People who will not be invited to the wedding should not be asked to attend a bridal shower.

DEAR ABBY: My divorced daughter stretched her food budget to "surprise" me with my favorite double cheese pizza with black olive topping. After everyone had eaten, I eyed the leftovers and decided to help out by gorging on the extra slices.

My subsequent gallstone attack did not hurt as much as my oldest granddaughter's query: "Grandpa, why did you force yourself to finish the pizza? Mommy promised us it would be our snack tomorrow."

Gluttonous guests — and that includes me — should not assume that "leftovers" are fair game. The hostess may have plans for them. — S.G. IN LAGUNA WOODS

DEAR S.G.: How true. Wisdom — and good manners — dictate that nothing should be taken from the host's kitchen without permission. I have received more than one letter over the years describing a refrigerator raid in which the guest wound up with a sandwich loaded with what turned out to be pet food.

IF AUGUST 6 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: October is a fine month for business and financial decisions. That is when your business instincts are in top form. Relationships can seem heavenly in November and new friends pop out from nowhere. That is a great time for a vacation, but if you are single and meet a new prospective partner, get advice from your friends, as you may tend to romanticize anyone you meet. Life takes a turn for the better in late December and early January when very important plans can be launched successfully and many things fall into place in a way that is definitely to your advantage.

HOROSCOPE

Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Wait for the right opportunity. Concentrate on finding common ground with others, so that you can share in the rewards and participate in prosperous trends. It isn't always about being businesslike in business.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): There is a similarity lurking behind perceptible differences. You may be challenged in your professional capacity or at work. You can overcome opposition and adversity by being more understanding.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): The gem cannot be polished without friction, nor man perfected without trials. Every little step backward leads to an extra step forward, so don't become discouraged. Every challenge makes you stronger.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): All work, no play. You may need to move and shake to become a mover and shaker that achieves positive results. It is tempting to take it easy but best to put socializing around the water cooler on hold.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A network can spread, grow and thrive. This might be an excellent time to meet new people and reach out a hand in friendship. Leave the safety of familiar places and ideas to explore some unfamiliar territory.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): The key to accomplishment is to work amiably and productively with others. You may not receive glowing reviews today, but you can earn respect through hard work. Keep on plugging away at it.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Time it like fine wine. You may begin to realize that maturity has more to do with the experiences you have had and what you have learned, than with the number of birthdays you have celebrated.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You and an adversary may actually have a common cause or commitment. Focus on shared aims, goals and values. Reduce potential friction by concentrating on any underlying unity of purpose.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): The best lessons are the ones you learn by trial and error. Focus on gathering facts while being sensitive to the needs of others. You can lay the groundwork for future negotiations if you are observant.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): "Great Expectations" is more than a book by Dickens. Sometimes, the people you expect to kick you when you are down will be the ones that help you get back on your feet when you trip yourself up.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Make room for more than just daddy. Find room in your life and in your heart for those outside the family who hold different viewpoints. You can respect dissimilar opinions even if you don't agree.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Your network of friends is like a fishnet; you might only get caught up with the biggest ones. To stay friends or win someone's heart, you must often let little details slip through and fixate on the big things.

Today is Monday, Aug. 6, the 219th day of 2012. There are 147 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight:
On August 6, 1962, Jamaica, formerly ruled by Britain, became an independent dominion within the Commonwealth of Nations.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:
In 1825, Upper Peru became the autonomous republic of Bolivia.

In 1862, the Confederate ironclad CSS Arkansas was scuttled by its crew on the Mississippi River near Baton Rouge, La., to prevent capture by the Union.

In 1926, Gertrude Ederle became the first woman to swim the English Channel, arriving in Kingsdown, England, from France in 14 1/2 hours.

In 1930, New York State Supreme Court Justice Joseph Force Crater went missing after leaving a Manhattan restaurant; his disappearance remains a mystery to this day.

In 1932, the first Venice Film Festival opened with a screening of "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde" starring Fredric March.

In 1942, Queen Wilhemina of the Netherlands became the first reigning queen to address a joint session of Congress, telling lawmakers that despite Nazi occupation, her people's motto remained, "No surrender!"

In 1945, during World War II, the United States dropped an atomic bomb on Hiroshima, Japan, resulting in an estimated 140,000 deaths.

In 1956, the DuMont television network went off the air after a decade of operations.

In 1961, Soviet cosmonaut Gherman Titov became the second man to orbit Earth as he flew aboard Vostok 2.

In 1965, President Lyndon B. Johnson signed the Voting Rights Act.

In 1978, Pope Paul VI died at Castel Gandolfo at age 80.

In 1997, Korean Air Flight 801 crashed into a hillside a short distance from Guam International Airport, killing 228 of the 254 aboard the Boeing 747.

Ten years ago: Maria de Jesus and Maria Teresa Quiej-Alvarez, one-year-old Guatemalan twins born joined at the head, were separated at the University of California, Los Angeles Medical Center. President George W. Bush signed legislation restoring to U.S. presidents broad authority in negotiating trade pacts.

Five years ago: The Crandall Canyon Mine in central Utah collapsed, trapping six coal miners. (All six miners died, along with three would-be rescuers.) President George W. Bush wrapped up two days of talks with Afghan President Hamid Karzai at Camp David. Baron Elie Robert de Rothschild, who helped France's Rothschild wine-making and banking dynasty recover from the ravages of World War II, died near Scharnitz, Austria, at age 90.

One year ago: Insurgents shot down a U.S. military helicopter during fighting in eastern Afghanistan, killing 30 Americans, most of them belonging to the same elite Navy commando unit that had slain Osama bin Laden; seven Afghan commandos also died. Violence erupted in the north London district of Tottenham amid anger over the fatal police shooting of a 29-year-old father of four; rioting and looting spread to other parts of the city and other English cities over the next several days, leaving five dead. Deion Sanders, Marshall Faulk, Shannon Sharpe, Richard Dent, Chris Hanburger, Les Richter and Ed Sabol were inducted into the Pro Football Hall of Fame.
