GOODING • Two motorists were transported to North Canyon Medical Center in Gooding after their vehicles collided early Sunday, Idaho State Police reported. The crash, reported to ISP at 1:42 a.m., closed the northbound lanes of state Highway 46 for two hours.

Tarin Mendoza, 18, of Wendell, was treated and released from the hospital, ISP said in a news release. David King, 32, of Lake Tapps, Wash., also was transported to North Canyon Medical Center and was later transferred to another medical facility, which a North Canyon spokesman declined to

Police said Mendoza was traveling east on 2100 South in a 1997 Plymouth Neon and King was driving a 2011 Toyota Camry on state Highway 46. Mendoza failed to yield to King and the vehicles collided in the intersection, police Alcohol was a factor in the crash, according to ISP, and the crash remains under investigation.

Although the burned acreage is large, Pollock said the fire didn't consume everything in its path.

"It's not one big black landscape up there," she said. "We call it mosaic. There are a great number of green patches."

The Rock Creek area is open only to residents at this time.

Pollock said some of those who evacuated their homes late last week took trailers or motor homes. Several transported horses or other animals from the danger zone.

Lori Stewart of the Twin Falls County Sheriff's Office said the local Red Cross gave vouchers for motel rooms to evacuees who had no other place to go.

"Lots of them stayed with friends or family," she added.

Meanwhile, state fire agencies have implemented Stage One fire restrictions across southcentral Idaho.

The prohibitions include a ban on fires, campfires or stoves except in a designated recreation site. Smoking on public land also is prohibited except in an enclosed vehicle, building or on a designated recreation site.

taxing districts with board member elections.

In recent years, there has been more interest in CSI board positions. But before that, many board members stayed on for decades.

"We had the same board members for a lot of years," Vice President of Administration Mike Mason said.

Trustees Karl Kleinkopf and Bob Keegan were both elected in 2010. Their terms aren't up until 2014.

Mason said the board positions don't have term limits. They're also "at large" positions not divided up by particular geographic areas, so candidates can choose which seat they're seeking.

Each candidate must be at least 18 years old, a registered voter and a resident of either Twin Falls or Jerome counties.

Mason said being a board member is a good opportunity for those interested in community service and being part of "guiding the community college."

Positions are unpaid, though, and "seem to take a fair amount of time," he said.

increased operations costs for PSI Environmental Systems, said City Manager Travis Rothweiler.

At the Aug. 6 meeting of the Twin Falls City Council, city staff presented information on proposed rate increase. Some council members, wary of those increases, wondered if eliminating Recyclebank would alleviate the burden on city utility users.

Initially, city residents didn't notice the $1 monthly cost for Recyclebank. When the city first adopted the recycling program in 2011, it subsidized all recycling-related costs with part of a sizable $450,000 sanitation reserve fund.

Since then, the city has slowly decreased that subsidy while gradually raising rates for residents.

Last Monday, council members asked how easy it would be to eliminate Recyclebank from the city's recycling program, citing low participation among residents. In the last year, the majority of Twin Falls residents recycled regularly, but only 975 residents cashed in Recyclebank points, said Councilwoman Rebecca Mills Sojka.

"If people are recycling and they're not participating in this program, that's actually not an incentive," Mills Sojka said.

Not everyone supported ditching Recyclebank. Councilman Shawn Barigar said he worried that getting rid of Recyclebank without fully examining the effects would erode the city's recycling program, and Councilwoman Suzanne Hawkins pointed out that while she doesn't currently use Recyclebank actively, she hoped to save up her points for a larger prize.

There's also the benefit for the local economy, Barigar said. Some of Recyclebank's rewards are for local companies, like Reruns for Little Ones, La Fiesta Mexican Restaurant or Kiwi Loco. Barigar said some of those business owners told him they've seen more customers come in because of incentives.

"The Recyclebank program provides something more than just free stuff," he said.

Josh Brown, manager for PSI, agreed, adding that PSI has a great relationship with Recycle-

"They have done quite a bit of public outreach," he said. "They're somewhat of a vehicle for advertising as far as recycling goes."

But Vice Mayor Don Hall still isn't convinced the rewards are worth keeping. Most people he has spoken to said they don't use the incentives, and those who do subscribe would recycle without the incentives.

"I don't care for these programs that we put out that everyone has to sign up for and only a certain amount of people are using," Hall said.

Q&A

What's Recyclebank?

An incentive program that rewards curbside recyclers with coupons, subscriptions and gift certificates. Points are calculated by weight recycled within a neighborhood.

How much do Twin Falls residents pay for sanitation?

$16.35 per month.

How much might it go up?

It depends. With a subsidy from the city, it would go up about $1. Without that subsidy, it will go up by about $1.92.

Why is it going up?

Increased operations costs, as well as a decreased contribution from the city's reserve fund to pay for the new recycling program.

How much does recycling and trash pick-up cost?

If you're a Twin Falls resident, $10.31 of your monthly sanitation fee currently goes to PSI Environmental Systems.

The rest of your sanitation bill goes for street cleaning and other city services.

What does that $10.31 pay for?

Weekly trash pick-up, single bin recycling picked up once every two weeks, and the Recyclebank incentive program.

How much do those incentives cost? Of the $10.31 that goes to PSI, $1 is Recyclebank-related.

From that, 83 cents goes directly to Recyclebank, and the remaining 17 cents is for improvements to PSI equipment that allow the company to record weights of recycled material for the reward program.

Who uses the program?

43 percent of eligible residents are enrolled in Recyclebank.

Of those, just 17 percent have used their points for rewards in the last 12 months.

But just because they're not subscribed doesn't mean they don't recycle. In a community survey, more than 80 percent of residents reported recycling in the past month.

Residents Describe Terror of Iran Quake

BY ALI AKBAR DAREINI
Associated Press

TEHRAN, Iran • Residents of the zone in northwestern Iran hit by powerful twin earthquakes described moments of terror and panic with birds crowing loudly in warning seconds before the ground shook. As the death toll rose Sunday to more than 250 with entire villages leveled, rescuers called off searches for survivors and turned their attention to caring for the 16,000 people left homeless.

At least 20 villages were totally destroyed in the quakes on Saturday that were followed by some 36 aftershocks, state television reported. Ahmad Reza Shajiei, a senior government official in charge of rescue operations, said more than 5,000 tents have been set up to shelter the thousands of displaced who spent the night outdoors.

"The moment the earthquake hit, it was like a snake biting from underground. It was the worst experience of my life," said resident Morteza Javid, 47, from Ahar.

"The walls were shaking and moving from side to side. It took about a minute before I could run out of the house," he said. "Seconds before the earthquake, crows were making a lot of noise, but I didn't understand why. It was only after the quake that I learned the crows were warning us." Javid said he drove more than a dozen injured people to hospitals during the night hospitals during the night. State television said at least 250 died. The semiofficial Mehr news agency quoted a local official who put the toll at 277. State TV said 44,000 food packages and thousands of blankets have been distributed in the stricken area.

In Washington, the White House press secretary sent a message of sympathy for the victims.

"Our thoughts are with the families of those who were lost, and we wish the wounded a speedy recovery," it said. "We stand ready to offer assistance in this difficult time."

The U.S. and Iran are locked in a bitter fight over Tehran's disputed nuclear program, which the West suspect is aimed at producing weapons. Iran denies the allegation. The U.N. also issued a message of sympathy and offered aid. The U.S. Geological Survey reported that Saturday's first quake was magnitude 6.4 and struck 60 kilometers (35 miles) northeast of the city of Tabriz at a depth of 9.9 kilometers (6.2 miles). State TV quoted local Crisis Committee chief Khalil Saei as saying the epicenter was a region between the towns of Ahar and Haris, about 600 kilometers (350 miles) northwest of the capital Tehran.

The second quake was a magnitude 6.3 and struck 11 minutes later, the USGS reported. Its epicenter was 50 kilometers (30 miles) northeast of Tabriz at a depth of 9.8 kilometers (6.1 miles).

The quakes hit the towns of Ahar, Haris and Varzaqan in East Azerbaijan province, state television reported. In addition to 20 villages destroyed, more than 130 others sustained heavy damage, state TV said.

The aftershocks were felt in a wide region near the Caspian Sea, causing panic among the people.

Iran is located on seismic fault lines and is prone to earthquakes. It experiences at least one earthquake every day on average, although most are so small they go unnoticed. In 2003, some 26,000 people were killed by a magnitude 6.6 quake that flattened the historic southeastern city of Bam.

Television showed images of people being evacuated on stretchers, while others were treated for broken limbs and concussions. Dozens of families were sleeping on blankets laid out on the ground in parks.

Romney Seeks Distance from Ryan's Budget Plans

BY KASIE HUNT AND KEN THOMAS Associated Press

HIGH POINT, N.C. • In Paul Ryan's high-energy debut as Republican vice presidential candidate, Mitt Romney's campaign made one thing clear: Romney's ideas rule, not his running mate's.

Romney put gentle but unmistakable distance between his agenda and Ryan's hot-potato budget proposals on Sunday as the new team soaked up excitement from partisans in North Carolina and Ryan's home state of Wisconsin. But Democrats weren't about to let them off that hook.

President Barack Obama's senior campaign adviser David Axelrod deemed Ryan's budget "the Ryan-Romney plan" and cast the new addition to the Republican ticket as a "right wing ideologue."

"It is a pick that is meant to thrill the

"It is a pick that is meant to thrill the most strident voices in the Republican Party, but it's one that should trouble everybody else — the middle class, seniors, students," Axelrod said Sunday on CNN.

Romney walked a careful line as he campaigned with Ryan by his side in North Carolina. Romney singled out Ryan's work "to make sure we can save Medicare." But the presidential candidate never said whether he embraced that plan himself. During the Republican primary, Romney had called Ryan's budget a "bold and exciting effort" that was "very much needed."

Ryan proposed to reshape the long-standing entitlement by setting up a voucher-like system to let future retirees shop for private health coverage or choose the traditional program — a plan that independent budget analysts say would probably mean smaller increases in benefits than current law would provide.

Romney aides, echoing talking points they circulated to party leaders and operatives, praised Ryan's budget work, but sought to draw a distinction between his ideas and Romney's.

Syrian Opposition Leader Calls for No-fly Zone

BY BASSEM MROUE
Associated Press

BEIRUT • The head of Syria's main opposition group in exile called Sunday for international powers to impose a no-fly zone in border areas to protect civilians who are coming under increasingly intense attacks by regime warplanes and helicopters.

The president of the Syrian National Council, Abdelbaset Sieda, told The Associated Press that such a move by the international community would show President Bashar Assad's regime that his opponents around the world are serious.

The Syrian opposition has been calling for a no-fly zone over Syria for months. But Sieda renewed the plea a day after U.S. Secretary of State Hillary Rodham Clinton said Washington and Turkey were discussing a range of steps including a no-fly zone over some parts of Syria as the regime increasingly uses its air force to attack rebels.

"There must be special protection," Sieda said by telephone. "The numbers of martyrs are increasing and destruction too. If the country keeps going this way, then we are heading to a catastrophe?'

Asked who will impose the nofly zone, Sieda said: "We leave it to the international community."

Russia and China have vetoed attempts to pass tough U.N. Security Council resolutions aimed at Assad's regime. Last week, the U.N. and Arab League envoy to Syria, Kofi Annan, announced his resignation, following a frustrating six-month effort that failed to achieve even a temporary cease-fire.

Sieda said the no-fly zone should be along borders with Jordan and Turkey, adding that the opposition had called for such a move during last month's Friends of Syria meeting in Paris attended by world powers.

"Now that Syria's air force is taking part in bombing cities and towns, there must be protection for the Syrian people. There must be a no-fly zone so that there will be safe havens to refugees," he said

Syria's civil war has spread to almost every province in the country and the death toll has increased over the past weeks. Activists say more than 20,000 people have been killed since the revolt against Assad's authoritarian rule began in March 2011.

Study: Junk Food Laws May Help Curb Kids' Obesity

BY LINDSEY TANNER

associated press

CHICAGO • Laws strictly curbing school sales of junk food and sweetened drinks may play a role in slowing childhood obesity, according to a study that seems to offer the first evidence such efforts could pay off.

The results come from the first large national look at the effectiveness of the state laws over time. They are not a slam-dunk, and even obesity experts who praised the study acknowledge the measures are a political hot potato, smacking of a "nanny state" and opposed by industry and cash-strapped schools relying on food processors' money.

But if the laws have even a tiny effect, "what are the downsides of improving the food environment for children today?" asked Dr. David Ludwig, an obesity specialist at Harvard Medical School and Boston Children's Hospital. "You can't get much worse than it already is?"

Children in the study gained less weight from fifth through eighth grades if they lived in states with strong, consistent laws versus no laws governing snacks available in schools. For example, kids who were 5 feet tall and 100 pounds the gained on average 2.2 fewer pounds if they lived in states with strong laws in the three years studied.

Also, children who were overweight or obese in fifth grade were more likely to reach a healthy weight by eighth grade if they lived in states with the strongest laws.

The effects weren't huge, and the study isn't proof that the laws influenced kids' weight. But the results raised optimism among obesity researchers and public health experts who generally applaud strong laws to get junk food out of schools.

"This is the first real evidence that the laws are likely to have an impact," said Dr. Virginia Stallings, director of the nutrition center at Children's Hospital of Philadelphia. Stallings chaired an Institute of Medicine panel that urged standards for making snack foods and drinks sold in schools more healthful but was not involved in the new research.

The authors of the study, released online Monday in the journal Pediatrics, analyzed data on 6,300 students in 40 states. Their heights and weights were measured in spring 2004, when they were finishing fifth grade and soon to enter middle school, and in 2007, during the spring of eighth grade. SENIOR CALENDAR

Water Treatment Plant Starts Operating in N. Idaho

SANDPOINT (AP) • A new, $13 million water treatment facility has started operating in the northern Idaho city of Sandpoint.

"It's still not completely done," Public Works Director Kody Van Dyk said."Right now, we're in the process of a 14-day stress test to make sure everything is working correctly."

The plant, paid for with a $17 million water bond Sandpoint voters passed in 2009, started delivering water Thursday. Officials said it has a 0.1 micron membrane that's far superior at removing impurities from Lake Pend Oreille waters than the sand filter used the last 30 years.

Officials also said the new plant increases capacity from 3 million gallons a day to 10 million gallons a day, water needed to meet potential growth.

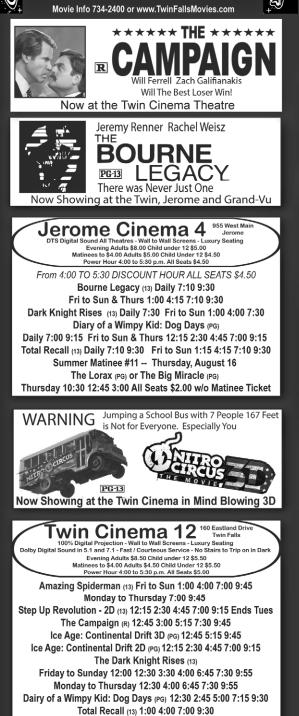

"We expanded our boundaries to Ponderay and Kootenai pretty significantly last year with the anticipation of this day happening," Van Dyk Utility rates have increased to pay for the project, but Van Dyk said increased revenue from an increased number of customers could help keep future increases down. He also said costs are being kept lower by the low interest rate city officials negotiated for the water plant construction project.

"The expectation is to keep rate increases to a minimum; Van Dyk said. "For example, we have no increases planned this year?

Sandpoint recently saw another big urban project finished when the $106 million Sand Creek Byway that routes U.S. Highway 95 out of downtown Sandpoint opened on July 28.

Karl Fleming, Newsweek Reporter Who Chronicled Civil Rights Struggle, Dies at Age 84

BY ELAINE WOO

Los Angeles Times (MCT)

LOS ANGELES • Karl Fleming, a former Newsweek reporter who helped draw national attention to the civil rights movement in the 1960s – and risked his life covering it with perceptive stories about its major figures and the inequalities that fueled it — died Saturday at his home in Los Angeles. He was

The cause was related to a number of respiratory ailments, said his son Charles Fleming. Born and bred in the Jim Crow South, Fleming worked his way through small North Carolina newspapers to become chief of Newsweek's Atlanta bureau in 1961. In the next few years, he covered some of the most dramatic clashes that churned the South as the fight over racial injustice escalated.

He was nearly shot in 1962 during riots at the University of Mississippi after James Meredith's admission as the first African-American student. He portrayed the "fast-moving phantasmagoria of grief, terror and hysteria" that enveloped Birmingham after church bombing that killed four African-American girls in 1963. He was one of the first two reporters on the scene in 1964 when three civil rights workers taking part in the mobilization known as Freedom Summer disappeared near Philadelphia, Miss.; they were later found murdered.

Fleming also covered the assassination of civil rights leader Medgar Evers and Gov. George Wallace's symbolic stand in the schoolhouse door to block the desegregation of the University of Alabama. The reporter brazenly took notes at Ku Klux Klan rallies, had his phones tapped and was tailed by segrega-

He managed to escape serious harm in the South but was far less lucky when Newsweek assigned him to Los Angeles in 1965. At a tense rally after the Watts riots, he found himself the only white person in the room with Black Power leader Stokely Carmichael and a crowd of angry blacks. When Fleming fled to his car, he was attacked and severely beaten by a mob. A photograph of him lying in his own blood, his jaw broken and skull fractured, ran in newspapers across the country the next day.

"Karl was one of these reporters who would go anywhere, any time, no matter what the danger, if the story was good enough," said Gene Roberts, a former top editor at The Philadelphia Inquirer and The New York Times, whose book "The Race Beat," co-written with Hank Klibanoff, examined the role of the press in the civil rights movement. "He was one of the great 20th-century reporters — in the right place at the right time."

Fleming came to his profession from a background of dire poverty and upheaval. He was born Aug. 30, 1927, in Newport News, Va., the son of a traveling insurance salesman. Karl was only 6 months old when his father died of a heart attack.

Unable to support herself and her baby, his mother married her late husband's best friend, but the Great Depression dried up any hopes of better times. When Karl was 6, his stepfather grew sick and died. When he was 8, his mother sent him to an orphanage in Raleigh, N.C. He lived there until he was 17, when he was allowed to join the Navy as World War II was ending.

Life in the orphanage was dismal, and Karl, a quiet and serious boy, was an easy target for bullies. But he learned to fend for himself and developed a tough manner that proved useful later in life, when the bullies he met wielded clubs and burned

He attended North Carolina's Appalachian State University on the GI Bill, leaving after two years for a $30-aweek job at the Wilson Daily Times in Wilson, N.C. He worked at papers in Durham and Asheville before landing a job at the Atlanta Constitution's Sunday magazine in the late 1950s. He freelanced for Newsweek, which made him its Atlanta correspondent in 1961.

By then he was raising a family with his wife, Sandra Sisk, whom he had married in 1952.

In 1962, when the U.S. Supreme Court ordered the University of Mississippi to admit Meredith, Fleming headed to the campus in Oxford and watched white mobs overrun the school. As he surveyed the violence from behind a column, bullets whizzed inches from his head. When the riot - the first he had ever covered was over, a French journalist was among the dead.

"I was ashamed as well as angry," he recalled in "Son of the Rough South," his 2005 memoir. "These were my fellow Southerners. We came from the same gene pool, and most of us from the same impoverished past. But I had identified not with them, but with Meredith, the black interloper."

As more flash points developed, Fleming teamed up with New York Times reporter Claude Sitton, who later became the paper's national editor. Since one wrote for a daily paper and the other for a weekly news magazine, they did not consider themselves competitors and found it useful and safer to work together. They developed some methods to protect themselves, including obscuring their stock-intrade — their reporter's notebooks – by cutting them down to fit in their pockets.

The perilous conditions took a toll on Fleming. "I drank a lot of Jack Daniels, I smoked three packs of Camels a day and I drank a lot of Maalox," he recalled in a Syracuse University oral history interview in 2006.

So, with some relief, he moved to Newsweek's Los Angeles bureau as chief in 1965. He was astonished at the degree of segregation he observed in his new outpost. "Watts, when I was there first in 1965 and 1966, might have been some foreign African country for all the rest of L.A. knew about it," he told National Public Radio several years ago.

His beating not only left him with a permanent limp but "jolted something loose in my heart," he said. His first marriage collapsed. In 1972, he married an aspiring journalist, Anne Taylor, who was 22 to his 44. In addition to his wife and son Charles, an editor at the Los Angeles Times, he is survived by sons David, Russell and Mark; a sister, Ethel Gray; and eight grandchildren.

As the psychedelic era wound down, Fleming began to drink excessively and smoke marijuana. Newsweek removed him as bureau chief, and he quit the magazine in 1972.

His first major post-Newsweek venture was an alternative weekly newspaper named LA that he founded with the backing of Los Angeles philanthropist Max Palevsky. The publication ran aground when Fleming was duped into paying $30,000 to an impostor claiming to be the mysterious hijacker D.B. Cooper.

After treatment for depression, he found his way back to journalism as managing editor and political editor of CBS News in Los Angeles from 1978 to 1985. He later established a public relations consulting firm.

In his well-reviewed memoir, he did not shrink from chronicling his humiliations as well as his triumphs.

"He was a very honest and direct guy," said civil rights leader Vernon Jordan, who was a field director for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People in Georgia in 1961 when he and Fleming began a close friendship. "He was in the South at the right time, and he was by his coverage an agent of change, although that was not his assignment. He just told the story."

Former Philly Inquirer Editor Naughton Dies

PHILADELPHIA (AP) • James M. Naughton, a former reporter for The New York Times and executive editor at The Philadelphia Inquirer, has died after a battle with cancer, his wife said. He was 73.

Diana Naughton said from St. Petersburg, Fla., on Sunday that her husband died peacefully surrounded by family members Saturday.

James Naughton began working for a local newspaper while in high school in Ohio. From 1962 to 1969, he worked for The Plain Dealer in Cleveland and was a police reporter for WGAR radio during a fourmonth newspaper strike, according to a biography from The Poynter Institute for Media Studies, where Naughton was president until he retired in 2003.

From 1969 to 1977, Naughton was a Washington correspondent for The New York Times, covering the Nixon administration and the Watergate hearings.

Naughton then worked almost two decades at The Philadelphia Inquirer, stepping down as executive editor in 1996. He spent seven years as president of The Poynter Institute in St. Petersburg,

The Philadelphia Inquirer on Sunday called him "irrepressibly mischievous," recounting such pranks as donning a chicken costume for a presidential news conference and "springing all manner of livestock on unsuspecting leagues."

"I love being in the company of people who care about the written word, the oral word," Naughton said upon his retirement from Poynter, according to the Tampa Bay Times. "I love the dark humor and a mix of skepticism and a self-effacing understanding of the role?"

Naughton is survived by his wife, four children and five grandchildren. Diana Naughton said a small family ceremony is planned for Wednesday in Painesville, Ohio.

Q. I don't need any special care or help right now, but I know this could all change in the blink of an eye.

A. You are wise to be thinking ahead. It is important really need them. You might want to actively support senior services in your community by serving as a volunteer. As you help others you will learn more about the different services that are available. When the time comes, you will be a smarter consumer because you will know first-hand about agencies and programs for older adults! Most seniors treasure their independence and are reluctant to ask for assistance. Remaining independent is a laudable goal. However, remember that accepting help, if and when you need it, may allow you to keep your own home or apartment, or at least stay at home for as long as possible.

Tracking the Money

daho isn't ground zero for congressional campaign money. Its media markets are relatively small - political advertisers get more for the dollar in the Gem State - and its races aren't ordinarily high-spending. When they are, spending levels aren't always indicative of much. In 2010, Democratic 1st District incumbent Walt Minnick outspent Republican challenger Raul Labrador by about three and a half to one, and lost by a large margin. Money isn't all. Often, though, people place their bets on prospective winners.

This year's two Idaho U.S. House races offer an occasionally surprising overview of the landscape.

The Federal Elections Commission has a muchimproved website (at fec.gov) listing campaign finance disclosures, but most of what follows comes from the Center for Responsive Politics, at www.opensecrets.org. It is clear and well-organized, and easy to follow.

In Idaho's first district, Labrador still hasn't raised as much as he did in his (in the context) modestly funded campaign two years ago; he has (as of June 30, the date reflected in all these amounts) raised $551,568, and spent about two-thirds of it. Democratic challenger Jim Farris has raised $37,388, and has spent about two-thirds of that.

In the second district, Republican incumbent Mike Simpson has raised $955,983 and spent the bulk of it. Democrat Nicole Lefavour has raised $156,016 and disbursed less than a quarter.

Where did the money come from? The pairs of candidates from party rather than from district look most alike. None of the Idaho candidates is "self-financing," or running the campaign out of personal funds; both are raising what they spend. Close to half of Labrador's money comes from political action committees - PACs. Nearly all the rest ($271,274), all but a sliver, comes from what OpenSecrets calls "large contributions." Simpson's picture is similar — nearly two-thirds ($593,352) coming from PACs, and the bulk of the remainder ($302,128) from "large contributions." Less than a tenth of donations for either candidate come from "small contributions."

But the big contributors are different. In Labrador's case, four gave $10,000 each. One of those is nationally well-known Koch Industries the well-known Koch brothers Charles and David. (They were not among the top contributors to Simpson, though.) The others were Auld Investments of Boise, the Every Republican is Crucial PAC and LCF Enterprises. Simpson's $10K-and-up top contributors were different: The increasingly controversial Monsanto Company (his top contributor, at $13,750), the Associated General Contractors, California Dairies, Lockheed Martin, the Potlatch Corporation and – get a load of this – the National Education Association. An eclectic group.

And the Democrats? They're more reliant on small contributors, but not entirely. Farris got about a fifth of his money from PACs (the International Association of Fire Fighters gave $3,000), and about half of his money overall from "large contributions" (the New England Patriots was among them); the rest were small. LeFavour actually got even less from PACs, only $2,900. Of her funds, 55 percent was from large contributions (Microsoft Corporate was the largest, at $5,000, and Wells Fargo second at $2,500), and nearly all the rest from small givers.

What does all this tell you? It should give you some insight about who's friendly with, and has strong relations with, who. And that tells you something about what these people do, or would do, in office.

Americans Suffer from the 'Disease of Uniformity'

"People are often stronger than they realize," by Herman Neumann. An excellent piece; I encourage him further, but more needs to be said.

Certainly when children exit the womb - many would say before that - they are an empty sponge ready to soak up any and all internal and external signals. And from this, the child, as they grow, forms the database from which he or she will be making decisions for the rest of their lives.

To simplify, if a child is born healthy and receives a healthy upbringing, their chances of receiving healthy internal and external signals is greater than the reverse.

What if the child receives gay DNA, internal signals, and then is shoved out into the world? Since about A.D. 600 till about now, this was unacceptable.

Externally, what if the state takes a young man, trains him to slaughter other young men, he goes, does just that and comes home? Was he conditioned in a healthy environment and solely responsible for his actions? Or was his healthy conditioning derailed for the benefit of the state.

Ah, the benefit of the state! Keep in mind, if we took the law-making machinery and its law making back to 1960, or 1950, and got rid of all unconstitutional law, we wouldn't be the No. 1 hypocrite in the world today. No, you say. Then why with 5 percent of the world's population do we have 25 percent of the world's prisoners? Are we that bad? I think not.

Americans suffer from what I call the Disease of Uniformity. Jefferson wrote: "Is uniformity attainable? Millions of innocent men, women and children, since the introduction of Christianity, have been burnt, tortured, fined, imprisoned; what has been the effect of this coercion? To make one-half of the world fools and the other half hypocrites."

Represent the USA as a Foreign Exchange Student Host

With all the stuff going on with the Olympics and all of us cheering on Team USA, I'm proud to say I'm a American. I would love to be part of the USA team in the Olympics and take home a gold myself, but I don't have the talent the Olympians have. So I thought about it and, come to find out,

My family and I have been hosting since 2010 and have had four exchange students in our home. The reason I feel I'm an Olympian is because I represent my country every day by being part of a special group of gold medal holders.

We as gold medal holders are representing the USA by being a part of a program that the Department of State has formed with many foreign countries to allow the young adults of their homelands to come to this great country to go to school and let everyday Americans like me be part of this great team to bring home the gold.

I not only am a gold medal holder but silver also because I have the pleasure to be part of a great team called Team ISE (International Student Exchange) and spend many countless hours looking for my next gold medal families and schools.

I know times are hard and room is lacking, but if we all pull together, we can all be gold medal holders, even if you don't host but take part in just telling somebody about this great lifechanging experience.

Thank you and hope to be adding to the gold medal team.

Rwandan Tells of Training to Fight Congo

BY MICHELLE FAUL

Associated Press

GOMA, Congo • Ibrahim Nsanzimana says he can no longer return to his home in Rwanda for fear of death. The 28-year-old recounted the tortured history of his Rwandan family's entanglement with neighboring Congo, and his latest recruitment by Rwanda to fight in eastern Congo.

When the bitter memories and bleak prospects for his future confronted him, his eyes glazed and a tear ran down his cheek.

"They'll kill me," he said bluntly, referring to Rwandan officials and their vigorous denials that he is among many men trained in Rwanda and brought to Congo to fight alongside the M23 rebel movement. Out of work and desperate to make a living, he said he agreed to join the Rwandan army in early July.

"Our area chief called a youth meeting, I think it was July 1, and there were about 300 of us young men at Amahoro Stadium in Kigali (Rwanda's capital). Military police in red berets told us we were all going to become soldiers, and they promised us a salary' equivalent to $60 a month,

They were crowded into Rwandan Defense Forces trucks and driven at night to Gaviro military camp, home to Rwanda's School of Infantry near the border with Uganda, where they spent a week learning how to shoot with AK-47 assault rifles.

"Only then did they tell us that we had come here to fight to take North Kivu province (of eastern Congo) and to make it part of Rwanda," Nsanzimana said. He said the announcement came from Rwandan army Capt. Francois Mugabo.

"When I woke up the next morning, we were in the volcano area in Congo," he said, brought to fight a war led by the Tutsi tribe that he considers a mortal enemy of his Hutu people.

Terrified that he was going to be killed, Nsanzimana fled into the forest and wandered for days before he was captured three weeks ago by Congolese soldiers. He is being held in an overcrowded holding cell of the military intelligence agency in Goma, Congo's eastern provincial capital. There, he gave The Associated Press details of Rwanda's alleged complicity in the latest re-

Similar stories have been told to officials in the U.N. peacekeeping mission in Congo by fighters who have been captured or turned themselves in to Congolese troops. Some said they were trained at Kanombe military barracks just outside Kigali; others said they received training only once in Congo, near its borders with Uganda and Rwanda.

Eleven Rwandans who surrendered in May said they were recruited as early as February — three months before the rebellion started, according to Patrick Garba, head of the U.N. demobilization office in Goma.

That testimony helped form the backbone of a controversial July report by a U.N. Group of Experts that accuses high-ranking Rwandan officials, including the minister of defense, of helping to create, arm and support the M23 rebellion and some Congolese militias. Their fighting over the past three months has brought some of the worst violence in years to eastern Congo, forcing some 280,000 people to abandon Garba said his office now has 45 Rwandan fighters, and the AP interviewed some of a group of 30 being held by Congo's military intelligence.

A military intelligence colonel who spoke on condition of anonymity said they have sent proof to authorities in Kinshasa, Congo's capital, including the identity card of a Rwandan Defense Force captain, other Rwandan ID cards, uniforms and guns and mortar shells that make up part of the Rwandan army arsenal and are not part of Congo's. He said captured Rwandans are using AK-47 rifles with folding butts, while the Congolese army issue has fixed butts.

The U.N. report has led several Western countries to suspend some aid to Rwanda, a country they consider a critical ally in helping to bring stability to this Central African region plagued by foreign rebels and local militias. Kagame has a history of intervention in eastern Congo. Rwanda first invaded its neighbor to the west in 1996, pursuing Rwandan Hutus who fled after committing the 1994 Rwandan genocide of some 800,000 Tutsis and moderate Hutus. It took Kagame a year to admit that his troops had invaded eastern Congo. They deployed after U.N. and Western powers failed to act as the "genocidaires" used the cover of massive refugee camps to arm themselves and make incursions into Rwanda.

CHIMP ESCAPES LAS VEGAS BACKYARD — AGAIN

BY MICHELLE RINDELS

AND PAUL FOY Associated Press

LAS VEGAS • A chimpanzee who rampaged through a Las Vegas neighborhood last month made a second escape from her backyard enclosure this weekend, but her caretaker thinks she had human help this time.

Timmi De Rosa says the 13-year-old chimp, CJ, didn't get loose Saturday by bending steel bars without help. She thinks someone let CJ out of her cage. De Rosa says the 180-pound animal was captured quickly and was never a threat to neighbors.

The chimp was turned over to an animal entertainer for safekeeping before going to a sanctuary in Ore-

On July 12, CJ and her mate Buddy broke free and roamed the neighborhood, pounding on vehicles and climbing in an unoccupied car. An officer shot and killed Buddy when the animal frightened bystanders.

Buddy was the more aggressive male companion and "worked 24/7 trying to break out" of his enclosure — he finally busted through a pair of double gates, De

Rosa said. A U.S. Department of Agriculture inspector that visited the chimps' enclosure after the first escape cited a number of "noncompliance" issues, according to a July 17 report obtained by The Associated Inspectors said the joint between a block wall and a metal gate had been damaged, and that a secondary gate around the main enclosure wasn't locked at the time of the escape.

The chimps escaped just hours before a welder was scheduled to fix gate hinges, De Rosa said.

De Rosa said CJ was never motivated to break out of the enclosure, and she doesn't think she did it without help.

However, her fianc0x233 and the chimps' other caretaker, Lee Watkinson, said CJ was capable of bending and breaking steel bars if she wanted.

"You have no idea how strong a chimpanzee is," he

The Human Society says the incident underscores Nevada's lack of rules on keeping exotic pets.

"The same chimpanzee escaping twice in less than a month underscores that large, powerful exotic animals should not be kept as pets. Nevada is one of just six states with no rules on the private ownership of dangerous wild animals, and it's a free-for-all that puts people and animals at risk," said Holly Haley, the Humane Society's Nevada state director.

De Rosa and Watkinson are not the chimps' owners. They said they were caring for the chimps at the nearby home of the owner. The chimps were housed in a yard-sized enclosure in the neighbor's backyard.

"We don't think people should own chimps. We found these chimps in a horrible condition" six years ago, De Rosa said. They built what they thought was a more secure and larger enclosure.

"We changed our lives to take care of these chimpanzees," De Rosa said. "I guess we should have had 24-hour security."

The caretakers were given a mid-August deadline to address the issues noted in the USDA inspection, which included cleaning up areas around the cage. US-DA spokesman David Sacks said Friday that his agency was still deciding whether to launch an investigation. If investigators determined Animal Welfare Act rules had been broken, the owner could face fines of up to $10,000 per violation. CJ's caretakers had been planning to take her by the end of August to Chimps Inc. of Bend, Ore., a sanctuary where she would interact with other chimps. The day before the second escape, CJ's caretakers said she'd been enjoying the human attention and camera crew visits that came with her fame and seemed unfazed by her companion's absence. However, she was showing signs of unhappi-

"She was like a sad dog who just sat there," De Rosa said.

During her escape Saturday, CJ rollicked in the neighborhood, played with garden hoses, and even appeared to enjoy her roundup. She became agitated when an animal-control officer showed up with a tranquilizer gun - the same officer who responded to the earlier breakout.

"She screamed. I think she recognized the guy," Watkinson said.

Drought Puts Federal Crop Insurance Under Scrutiny

BY ALYSSA A. BOTELHO

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON • This year's historic drought is turning the spotlight on an obscure form of aid for America's farmers: federal crop insurance.

With crop losses soaring, farmers are headed toward some $18 billion in losses, and taxpayers might foot up to $10 billion of that, according to Vincent Smith, an economist at Montana State University who has studied crop insurance for nearly two decades.

That's on top of the $9 billion this year that the federal government provided farmers to help them afford crop insurance premiums.

Partly because of the costs involved, the insurance program has come under scrutiny from both sides of the political aisle. Budget hawks and environmentalists alike are calling for tougher limits that they say would discourage farmers from taking risks with their finances and the

But Congress seems to be interested in expanding, not curbing, the crop-insurance program, and farmers say the insurance program is a "I don't want to under-emphasize that crop farmers will face problems. But the crop sector has a lot of compensation potential right now that the livestock sector just never sees."
Purdue agricultural economist Christopher Hurt critical lifeline, especially this year.

In large part due to the hottest July on record in 118 years, the U.S. Department of Agriculture on Friday lowered its expected yield for corn and soybean harvests for the second time in two months—with corn predicted to be at its lowest yield in more than 15 years.

Under the insurance program, which dates back to the Great Depression and the Dust Bowl of the 1930s, the government pays 60 percent of the premium for coverage. The farmer pays the rest. Though policies are offered by private insurers, the government reinsures them against their losses and helps fund their annual operating Environmental groups complain that the government-subsidized insurance has encouraged corn farmers to take risks and till lands they otherwise wouldn't. They say that, in turn, destroys areas critical for both wildlife and livestock struggling to find grazing places that aren't parched.

More than 23 million acres of American grass and wetlands were plowed under for cash crops such as corn and soybean from 2008 to 2011, according to a report released last Monday by the Environmental Working Group. Land losses were greatest in counties that received the largest amount of crop insurance subsidies, the study said.

"That's equivalent to plowing the entire state of Indiana or 31 Yosemites," said Scott Faber, the group's vice president of government affairs. "It's a huge impact to take an area the size of Indiana and cover it from one end to the other in fertil-

Most of the newly tilled acres are in the Great Plains and the Upper Midwest, which have been hit hard by the drought. In many cases, livestock producers, with no government-subsidized insurance like crop farmers, are shelling out for expensive corn and hay to feed their more expensive for taxpayers animals because they can't find new pastures for graz-

"I don't want to underemphasize that crop farmers will face problems," said Purdue agricultural economist Christopher Hurt. "But the crop sector has a lot of compensation potential right now that the livestock sector just never sees."

Other critics say the crop insurance subsidies are simply too expensive at a time when the federal budget is awash in red ink. Nevertheless, House and Senate versions of the 2012 farm bill would offer more generous insurance coverage in place of a controversial "direct payment" program that gave lump sums of money to farmers whether they grew crops or not.

Smith, also a visiting scholar at the American Enterprise Institute, a freemarket think tank, recently concluded that the expanded crop insurance program could potentially be even than the lump sum pay-

"If the government takes on much of the risk in farming, paradoxically, farmers adopt riskier production practices and stop using cheaper tools to manage business," he said.

Those riskier practices, he added, include using fewer chemicals against pests, failing to rotate the kinds of crops planted, and expanding into marginal, less fertile lands which EWG members say could be conserved or used as graze land.

But defenders of the crop insurance program say it's a vital part of the government safety net for farmers. "I know the program has critics, but in farm country, it's the most valuable tool we have to survive," said Anthony Bush, an Ohio corn farmer. "That's why 80 percent of us buy it."

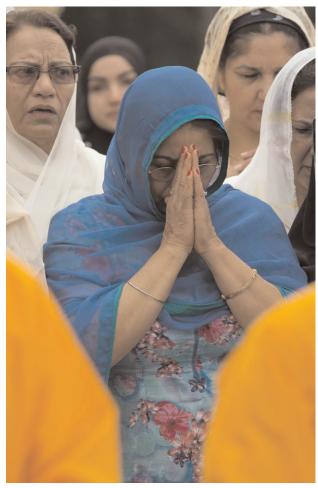

And David Redman, an adviser in Lawrence County, Ind., who helps both farmers and ranchers respond to natural disaster, says that while big farm corporations might see profits this year because of high crop prices and insurance claims, the 100-200 acre family-sized farms

"Most of the farmers I know buy bare minimum coverage to cover out-ofpocket expenses - just enough to keep going next year," he said, adding that a quarter of the 700 farmers he assists in his area don't buy any insurance at all. Those farmers say they still can't afford the premiums, even with the government subsidy, Redman said.

Bush has paid into the program for over a decade and has never qualified to collect a claim on his losses, though he expects to this year. He says his share of the annual premium is roughly $30,000. He has lost over $140,000 to drought on his corn harvest.

A member of the National Corn Growers Association, Bush says that while some highly insured crop farmers might be inclined to expand their operations, the trend can be discouraged by expanding conservation programs rather than reducing

SIKH TEMPLE HOLDS 1ST SUNDAY SERVICE SINCE ATTACK

People attend a prayer service being held outside the Sikh Temple of Wisconsin in Oak Creek, Wis., Sunday. More than 100 people gathered for the first Sunday prayer service since a white supremacist shot and killed six people there before fatally shooting himself.

BY DINESH RAMDE Associated Press

OAK CREEK, Wis. • Hundreds of people who gathered at a Sikh temple in suburban Milwaukee spoke of unity, strength and rebirth during the first Sunday service there since a gunman killed six people before fatally shooting himself.

The service capped a weekend of events meant to honor the victims and restore the temple as a place of worship. While there were still tears and red eyes, many participants said healing was under way.

Visitors removed their shoes outside and filed past portraits of the victims, shuffling down a flower-lined aisle into the main prayer room. They dropped dollar bills in front of a shrine where their holy book sits and bowed for two to three seconds. Then they sat on the floor —women on the left, men on the right - their heads covered with scarves, and listened as a priest recited religious hymns in the Hindi dialect of Punjabi.

Those at Sunday's service included Sikhs from as far away as California and about 50 from Cleveland, who chartered a bus to make the eight-hour drive to support their community. "It's an emotional day but it's getting better;" said Justice Khalsa, 41, of Milwaukee, who visits the temple three or four days a week. "I'm smiling and laughing now, but once this group goes away and we're back to our regular schedule, it will be haunting, I'm sure?"

The proceedings began in the parking lot with a "nishan sahib," or a ceremony in which participants clean a Sikh flagpole to symbolize the temple's rebirth.

The closing ceremony offered a sensory blast including rock 'n' roll rickshaws, dustbin percussionists, an exploding yellow car and a marching band in red tunics and bearskin hats.

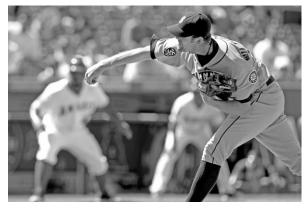

The Spice Girls staged a show-stopping reunion, and Monty Python's Eric Idle sauntered through "Always Look on the Bright Side of Life" - accompanied by Roman centurions, Scottish bagpipers and a human cannonball.

It all made for a psychedelic mashup that had 80,000 fans at Olympic Stadium stomping, cheering and singing along. Organizers estimated 300 million or more were watching around the world.

What a way to end a games far more successful than many Londoners expected. Security woes were overcome, and traffic nightmares never materialized. The weather held up, more or less, and British athletes overachieved.

It all came with a price tag of $14 billion — three times the original estimate. But nobody wanted to spoil the fun

KIAWAH ISLAND, S.C. • Rory McIlroy dressed the part as golf's next star and played like it, too.

Saving his bright red shirt for Sunday in the PGA Championship, McIlroy never gave anyone much of a chance. Two exquisite shots with the wedge set up back-to-back birdies to seize control of the final round. He never made a bogey over the final 23 holes of his marathon day.

WATKINS GLEN, N.Y. •

Slipping and sliding around oil-spattered Watkins Glen International on the last lap and fighting for the lead, Marcos Ambrose and Brad Keselowski didn't know what lay around the next

"It was absolutely chaos at the end," Ambrose said. "I had really burned off the brakes. I couldn't figure out where it (the oil) was coming from. It was just absolutely crazy at the end."

Ambrose finally passed Keselowski heading to the final turn in a stunning fender-banging duel to win the Sprint Cup race at Watkins Glen International for the second straight time.

The oil had been spewing from the No. 47 of Bobby Labonte and ruined the day for Kyle Busch, who seemingly held a commanding lead heading to the white flag of the Finger Lakes 355.

"In the end, nobody knew what was going on," said Richard Petty, owner of Ambrose's No. 9 Ford. "They were slipping and sliding off the race track. Marcos might have known a little bit about it, but the rest of us didn't. Marcos stayed with it all day. Everything fell our way:"

It didn't for Busch, who led 43 laps.

"Kyle hit the oil," said Dave Rogers, crew chief of Busch's No. 18 Toyota. "The 47 broke. You can see him, he just went by smoking. He left oil down all over the track. Kyle hit the oil and it allowed the 2 (Keselowski) to get to us."

Desperate for a win to move back into contention for the Chase for the Sprint Cup championship, Busch skidded sideways coming out of the first turn of the final lap. Keselowski's No. 2 Dodge caromed off the side of Busch heading uphill through the high-speed esses and Ambrose followed Keselowski through as Busch spun to the side.

recover in time to finish second, just ahead of Casev Pehrson.

"All those cautions were both bad and good for me," McKean said. "It just depends what side of it you're on. I just happened to end up on the lucky side a couple of times tonight and came out with two wins."

With the wins, he and Newhouse are now tied for the lead in the Super Stocks point standings.

Two Rocky Mountain Challenge Series drivers had a rough start to the night when the cars of Dylan Caldwell and Travis Monett crashed hard in the turn one wall just after the green flag dropped on the first segment of the 200-lap main event race. Jeff Hillock took over as front runner of the race at lap 45 and would maintain the position to take the first segment win at lap 75. He was followed to the line by Chris Fenton and TJ Woodhall.

Bruce Quale finished third in the second segment behind John Nesmith and Woodhall and received valuable bonus points for his efforts. Steve Jones, who was second in the RMCS point standings to leader Quale, suffered mechanical issues and would not get back into the race until 10 laps had flown by in the segment.

Woodhall continued his solid run on the night leading the final segment until Jason Jefferson managed to take over with 25 laps remaining in the race. At lap 200 Jefferson sailed across the finish line for the win while Woodhall held on for second followed by Nesmith.

While not completely satisfied with his sixth place finish in the race Quale will stay in the lead for the championship title race with two events remaining in the season including the finale at MVS September

"I wish we would have finished in the top five," he said. "But the first set we were really loose, and then in the second segment we started off good but then we got tight. The last set we were just way tight. But I gained a few more points on Jones and that is good."

Street Stocks driver Ernie Hall added to his lead in the points standings with two main event wins for the night. Jeff Peck crossed the finish line first in the Hornets main event race but the win was awarded to Lane Walker after Peck tagged Walker's bumper sending him of course in the race to the checkered.

A negative double normally shows both majors after your partner opens one club and the next hand bids one diamond. Conversely, the negative double of a one-heart overcall shows precisely four spades. However, South in this deal decided that since he was happy to play in a 4-3 spade fit, it was more descriptive to bid one spade himself, suggesting five. That got him to a delicate spot, but at least it was a game that had play. Five diamonds would have been nearly hopeless. The defenders led the heart queen and played a second heart, ruffed by declarer. Now what to do? Declarer needed trumps to be 3-3 of course, but he also had to establish a second club trick while he still had trumps in both hands, to avoid being forced. So he played the club ace and a low club, East winning the club queen.

If East returned a heart, that would provide the 10th trick via a ruff and sluff, whereas if he played anything else, declarer would win and play a third round of clubs to set up his 10th trick. When he chose to lead a diamond, declarer won in dummy and played a third club. West could discard a diamond, but still had one left when East played a second diamond himself. Declarer could now win and turn his attention to trumps. When they split 3-3, he claimed the balance.

ANSWER: A heart lead looks like a very long shot, so you really have to choose one of the other three suits. A diamond looks far too dangerous; thus the choice is a club or a spade. Since no one has bid clubs, maybe this should be the default lead rather than spades. I would lead a low club, of course, but you might tempt me to lead the spade nine if I were to attack that suit.

DEAR ABBY: "Jane," the daughter of a life-long friend, attended my son's wedding with her husband. My son and Jane have known each other since childhood, and always flirted and acted as if they had a crush on each

To make a long story short, after seeing each other during the weekend, my son left his wife of only one month and started a long-distance relationship with Jane. Jane continues to live with her husband. My son and Jane have been open about their relationship with everyone in our families except her father and her husband. Needless to say, those of us who know about this deceptive relationship are sick at heart and skeptical about who Jane's true love is her husband or my son.

Jane's sister is being married soon. If Jane is still keeping my son in a closet, I don't want to see her at the upcoming wedding. There's a chance Jane's husband may not be going because there's evidence he might have an idea that his marriage is not healthy.

Should we attend the wedding to support my lifelong friend, or stay away to avoid the pain of seeing the woman who has kept my son on a roller-coaster ride for years? -TOGOOR

NOTTO GO? DEART.G. ORNOTT.G.:

Let me get this straight. Your son dumped his wife of only one month for a married woman, and you're worried about HIS pain? Stop involving yourself in this melodrama and let him work this out for himself. If Jane dumps her husband for him, he may have the girl of his childhood dreams. If she doesn't he will learn an important life lesson.

As to whether you should attend Jane's sister's wedding, take a Dramamine and go. It's going to be a thrill ride I wouldn't miss if I could get a ticket.

DEAR ABBY: I am a frequent international traveler with a problem. I always pack food for myself to take onboard. My trips are often 20 hours or longer and involve several planes. I find many people neglect to pack any food and they wind up asking or begging — me to give them some of mine. It's very awkward for me.

On one flight, I overheard a woman tell her son, "Go ask that man for some cookies," and the kid did come over. How do I handle this? There are times I have to spend five or seven hours in an airport after midnight waiting for the next flight, and that food is my reserve.

- NOT STINGY IN FLORIDA

DEAR NOT STINGY: I'm glad you have given me the chance to remind travelers that the food on airplanes isn't what it was years ago particularly for passengers flying coach. That's why it's important to plan ahead and bring something onboard fruit, candy, a sandwich particularly when traveling with children.

Of course it's hard to refuse someone in a situation like the one you described. I suppose you could have told the child, "Didn't your mother warn you not to take food from strangers?" But then you'd have to live with the image of a hungry child sitting two rows back.

Sometimes you do have to "just say no." Explain that you have a long layover and need the emergency provisions for yourself. It may not win you many friends, but then, you are not running for office.

IF AUGUST 13 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Friends, groups and local events may take up to much of your time during the next six to eight weeks. Wait until November, when you are inspired to do great things, to make business, career or financial changes. That is an excellent time for cool and sensible reappraisals of your investments, but a new romance is also possible. A weekend in an exotic location might satisfy your fantasies. Any new friendships formed in December might become a lifelong source of comfort. Next March might bring the answer to your prayers or a sterling opportunity to improve your life.

HOROSCOPE Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): The price is right, but you could choose the wrong item for your needs. Hold off on major purchases and save your pennies. A significant other can organize your closet or help you set priori-

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Cheerful cheerleading is needed when you champion changes. Motivated partners may be totally immersed in a plan of action. Your assistance on the sidelines may be necessary. Share work as well as pleasure.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): New friends are silver, old ones are gold. If you have a tough time getting to sleep, count your blessings instead of sheep. Hold off on key decisions about major investments; more info may arrive.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You are curious to know what is behind curtain No. 1. If life were a game show you could pick any of the choices and still have a chance of walking away with a big prize. Don't play games if big purchases are involved.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): This is reality. You can't click your heels three times and get your wish. Like Dorothy in "The Wizard of Oz," you might wake up to the fact that things aren't exactly what they seem to be.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Neatness counts. Stacks of unread magazines, unwashed clothes, unpaid bills or unanswered emails weigh on your mind and can cause stress. Take a few minutes to straighten out the desk and home.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): An extreme love of independence can trigger unpredictable behavior. An innocent question could be perceived as opposition to your plan. Once a compromise is reached you must follow through on promises.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Connect the dots and you might get the picture. Be sure to read the fine print if you are in a hurry. Tenderness may fly out the window in the hustle, as important initiatives are implemented.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Having a loyal friend by your side makes life more pleasant. Friends can provide a sounding board. Join with others who help you make wise decisions that give you a leg up on the ladder of success.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Passionate ideas might give way to a reappraisal as the day unfolds. Deal with necessities but look for value rather than price. People could be somewhat changeable or capricious; don't take it seriously.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You feel like you are riding the merry go round, reaching for an elusive brass ring. Rest assured that you have the stamina to hang on long enough to attain it. Hard work and persistence is rewarded.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Think about your goals and write them down. Much can be accomplished by letting the subconscious work on your behalf behind the scenes. A new goal might be relegated to the back burner for a while.
