AIR QUALITY Limit Outdoor Exertion Today Due to Smoke

TIMES-NEWS

TWIN FALLS • With multiple fires burning in and around the area, air quality is expected to be poor today.

Blaine County will see the worst of it. Today, air quality is expected to be at "unhealthy levels," according to a report from the Idaho Department of Environmental Quality.

This means there will be enough air particles to affect people sensitive to changes in air quality but everyone should limit outdoor exertion.

A mandatory burn ban is still in place in Blaine County but allowed in Twin Falls County, according to DEQ as of Tuesday.

In Twin Falls County, air quality remains at a moderate level. Sensitive groups, like children, the elderly and those with existing health conditions, should consider limiting prolonged outdoor activity.

temperatures outside, 4-H and FFA students weren't the only ones feeling the heat Tuesday at the Gooding County Fair.

Cooper Pavkov, 8, took wet towels out of an ice-filled cooler and placed them on his two lambs.

He said he wanted to make sure his animals stayed cool. And he was also cleaning them to get ready for the sheep quality show.

"I try to get the marks off them," he said.

He started cleaning the lambs about 30 minutes before the quality show. In addition to his two animals, he also showed a lamb for a friend in his Gooding 4-H club.

Pavkov is a newcomer to 4-H and it was his first time showing an animal. The goal, he said, is "to get better every year."

With the 100th anniversary of 4-H in Idaho this year, there are celebrations planned at many area fairs celebrating the organization's history.

ers – like Pavkov – it's just the beginning of their involvement.

Hagerman resident Cherokee Pawson, 15, was also getting ready for her first FFA show. About 10 minutes before the quality event began, she finished cleaning her lamb.

Although she has been to a lot of FFA shows, it's the first time Pawson has participated.

She admitted she did a lot of grumbling when she first started raising her lamb months ago. But now, she's excited about the shows.

"I can't wait to see how he turns out for market," she said.

Sharlene Taylor - a leader with the Spurs and Buckles FFA Club in Hagerman – was helping Pawson and other club members get their lambs ready.

Many students started raising their animals in May, she said. The animals are weighed during the months leading up to the fair Please see GOODING, A8

TWIN FALLS • A Twin Falls man was arrested Sunday after destroying property at the Shilo Inn and threatening a former girlfriend.

Hezel Thomas, 32, was charged with domestic battery, interfering with 911 and felony property damage.

Early Sunday morning, Twin Falls police responded to a call of a man breaking vehicle windows in the parking lot of the Shilo Inn on Blue Lakes Boulevard.

According to the affidavit, Thomas then entered the lobby, throwing rocks and breaking a glass door and a large, chandelier. He allegedly approached his ex-girlfriend, an employee at the hotel, and prevented her from calling 911 by shoving her in a corner. Thomas also allegedly threw a chair against a mirror and shoved items off a counter.

THE MARKET AT A GLANCE

US Stocks Close Mostly Lower as Market Loses Steam

NEW YORK (AP) • Stocks closed mostly lower Tuesday after trading slightly higher for much of the day.

Their actions inspired me to think more about what I do in a crisis. One thing I've started doing is saving emergency contact information in my cellphone. I strongly encourage you to do the same. Here are two basic contact numbers I would add:

Coaches Have Questions, too

It's not often the coaches have questions for the reporters, but in the run-up to the high school football season, everyone has questions. And that includes the coaches.

"Have you been out to Burley yet?" Canyon Ridge coach Al-Justin sterlund Sheltra asked as this writer was headed back to his car.

Times-News staffer Ryan Howe had been out there, I responded, adding that I didn't know much about the Bobcats.

Alsterlund's interest in Burley was primarily about new coach Jed Thomas, also in his first year, just like Alsterlund. See, when the two teams meet later this season, it won't be the first headto-head matchup for the two coaches. They met on the field as players during their collegiate careers -Thomas at Carroll (Mont.) College, Alsterlund at Eastern Oregon. Junior Golf Championships: No Walk in the Park

As I leisurely wove my way through the gallery of onlookers at the Junior Golf Championships Tuesday watched and Nash listened as players dealt with hecklers from the roadway. As one of the boys made his approach shot, a passing car revved up its engine in

These high-caliber gentlemen stayed focused and paid no attention, keeping to their game instead. Buhl Lifeguard Looking for Donations for Children's Slide

BY BLAIR KOCH For the Times-News

BUHL • The Buhl City Council on Monday tentatively backed a teen lifeguard's proposal for a new feature at the city swimming pool, pending a check of the building and safety code requirements.

For the past three summers, Jacob Klimes worked as a lifeguard and swimming instructor at the Buhl City Pool.

The 18-year-old, well aware of the $73,000 deficit the pool ran last year, came to Monday's City Council meeting with a small project proposal he hopes could boost usage and enjoyment at the pool next year.

The city pool's last day this season is Saturday.

Klimes said he would like to get donations to purchase a four-foot plastic slide. An account has already been set up at First Federal Bank to collect the $1,300 needed, he said.

Additional funds collected would help purchase new life vests, pool toys and "a few things the pool could use," Klimes said.

The slide would accommodate children up to 175 pounds.

"I think this is great," said Councilman Kyle Hauser, asking how much a slide accommodating an adult would cost.

Klimes said a larger slide would cost nearly $17,000.

Although the council unanimously voiced its support for Klimes' project, Mayor Tom McCauley said the city would have to check with various building and safety codes before the slide could be installed.

"I don't see a problem and I don't want to create a problem," McCauley said, clarifying that structural changes to the pool mean the facility would need to be brought up to a more current code.

The slide isn't likely to be considered a "structural" change to the pool, he said, and city staff was instructed to investigate the matter.

Klimes said he was fully prepared for the council's support and concerns.

Spilled Soybeans Raise a Stink

SANDPOINT • Soybeans spilled by a freight train in April are raising a stench in August.

The Bonner County Daily Bee reports the Panhandle Health District has been receiving complaints from residents near the site of the derailment northeast of Sandpoint, saying the smell from the rotting soybeans is seriously affecting their quality of life.

While most of the soybeans were cleaned up, what was left is decaying. One nearby household reported the smell was bad enough to keep them indoors.

Panhandle Health spokeswoman Cynthia Taggart says the original plan was to bury the rotting soybeans, but the Department of Environmental Quality still has to weigh in.

Boise Man Charged with Manslaughter in Car Crash

BOISE (AP) • A Boise man has been charged with vehicular manslaughter for his role in a March car crash that killed two teens, prosecutors said Tuesday.

Cody A. Olson, 20, was arrested late Monday and remained in custody at the Ada County Jail. He faces two felony manslaughter charges in connection with the March 3 car crash that killed Scott Hyde, 18, and Kelsey Belcher, 17. A police investigation is ongoing, prosecutors said.

Olson is also being charged with a count of felony injury to a child for injuries another teen suffered, along with one count of driving without privileges, Ada County deputy prosecutor Ben Harmer said in a statement.

Olson was scheduled to make an initial court appearance later Tuesday, when he will be arraigned on the four charges.

According to Boise police, Olson was intoxicated and driving between 80 and 100 miles per hour while racing a BMW when he crashed. Olson was under the influence of marijuana and had a 0.07 blood alcohol content when his Lexus sedan collided with a concrete wall, according to a police report.

Olson was among five people in his car.

A FAIR EYE

Homemade jams, preserves offer a challenge to open class judges at Cassia County Fair.

BY LAURIE WELCH

lwelch@magicvalley.com

BURLEY • Cassia County Fair judge Christine Baird spread a dab of jam on a chunk of bread before popping it in her mouth.

Several moments of quiet thought followed the sampling. A moment to confer with her fellow judges, and Baird moved on to the next entry.

Baird, of Twin Falls, was one of many experts brought in Tuesday to help judge the open class exhibits at the fair.

Many of the canned and dried product exhibits set before the judges for inspection like fruits, vegetables and salsas were not opened. Rather, they were judged on whether the correct process was used and if enough headspace was left in the jars for the particular type of preserve. "My favorites to judge are the jams and jellies because you get to taste them," Baird said. "But that can be hard too when you have two jams that are completely different. You pretty much have to decide which flavor you prefer that day and it's very subjective."

Most of the time, the judges have to set aside any preferences and judge items based on the written standards of quality.

"It's been a dream my whole life to get some of these recipes, but we only wish we could, we never get them."

Peggy Candy, canned and dried products judge

"Going strictly by the book eliminates prejudices," Baird said.

Pickles, for example, are not judged by the taste or crunch, but by how closely the correct process was followed and the color and uniformity of the cucumbers used.

Some of the more unusual canned food exhibits entered over the years have been glazed carrots and red peppers.

A blueberry-rhubarb jam entered this year made a big impression on the judges along with the assistants and superintendents - who all wanted a taste.

"It's been a dream my whole life to get some of these recipes, but we only wish we could, we never get them," said Peggy Candy, canned and dried products judge.

Grace Wittman, University of Idaho extension educator, said there are a lot of new people learning the art of canning.

"I think economic and health reasons play a part," Wittman said. "If you grow it or go to a farmer's market and can it yourself, you know more about the food. We're seeing a lot more of that and there's definitely a height ened level of interest."

Wittman said it's important to learn the right way to preserve foods for safety reasons.

"There are so many blogs out there that are really inaccurate. It's extremely scary," she said.

"It's great to pass on that tradition but food safety has really advanced since then," Wittman said.

UI Extension will be testing pressure cookers Wednesday from 1–4 p.m. for $4 per lid.

Anyone canning food may call the extension office at 878-9461 to get correct information on food preservation.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Bruce Nelson Will be Missed by All Who Knew Him

Bruce Nelson was a special friend to all that $\bar{k}new$ him

A good man that I am very proud to say that for 27 years was a true friend to me and my family. He was trusted by everyone that knew him and he always had a smile to share. He never asked anyone for help; instead, he'd say, "How can I help you?"

The kind of guy that was always there for you whenever you needed him, and he would always make you feel better about yourself. He loved life and nature and what it had to offer, always making the best out of any situation. He loved rock hounding, arrowhead hunting and searching for treasures with his metal detector. He also loved star gazing and kicking back with friends watching a good movie. He liked to go to Jackpot, Nev. to play the slots and was a master at the foosball table and was pretty good at bowling, too. He loved his job and co-workers and especially his customers.

A gentleman who always brought flowers to his favorite female friends just to put smiles on their faces and let them know he cared. Always full of surprises and loved by all that had the pleasure of being his friend. He is and will always be missed by more friends than can be counted. He has blessed so many of our lives just for having known him. He might be gone, but he will never be forgotten. Our time together will be cherished and the moments he shared with us will be remembered forever.

We love you, Bruce. I know God and everyone else knows what a good man you are. May you rest in peace.

TERRI WATSON DANNY LEWIS TIERA LEWIS Twin Falls

York and away from the specious strictures and ad hominem attacks often leveled at me in Burley, I feel safe writing this letter.

Because the most entrenched constitutional right in the United States is the absolute right to believe anything at all, and because certainty is often fantasy, to many of you this is not going to be a straightforward and coherent argument. Here goes:

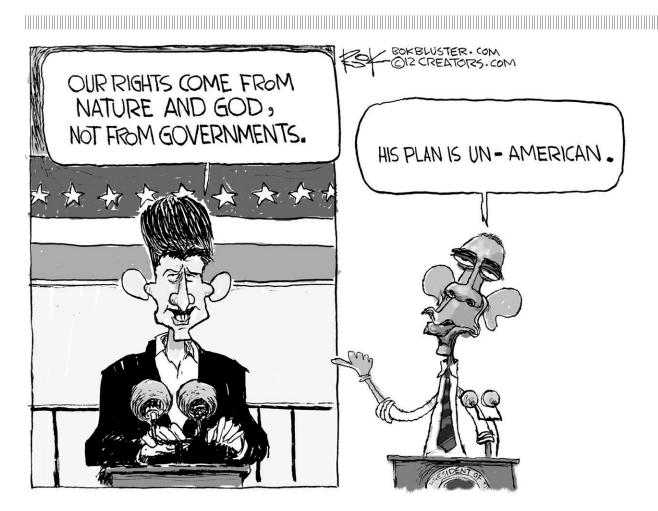

Even though there is no religious litmus test for elected office in the United States (and rightly so) because a person's beliefs define his worldview and affect his decisions, I believe that a candidate for a high office's supernaturalism ought to be examined and debated under the harsh glare of public scrutiny.

Whilst it is probably true that Mitt Romney's Bain Capital shipped thousands of jobs overseas, what is true is Romney's belief in an extraordinarily unorthodox and fantastical supernaturalism.

Doubtlessly, Romney would never publicly admit it, but his supernaturalism includes a belief that the god of this world (in his supernaturalism, there potentially are as many gods as there are occupied worlds) is a glorified man (originally from a world much like ours), now localized in a celestial kingdom somewhere; a being who fathers billions of ectoplasmic "spirit children" via empyrean couplings with his (thousands? millions?) of wives (polygamy is practiced by gods and the worthy in Romney's heaven).

Those spirit children mature and later, when called to action by their father, reduce themselves infinitesimally, travel from their father's kingdom to our world and instantly here, singly or in multiples, occupy every fertilized human egg.

Weird? To my mind, absolutely! Dangerous? Probably (especially if Romney surrounds himself with similar believers) because aul Ryan is not the progeny of Ronald Reagan, as starryeyed Republicans would have it. Yes, he has a winning smile and twinkling eyes. But he hasn't run anything bigger than an Oscar Mayer Wienermobile.

The closer parallel for Ryan is Dick Cheney, another Man with a Plan. George W. Bush needed a running mate who was older and wiser to fill in the blanks in his thinking. So he balanced his own vague compassionate conservatism with Cheney's bloodless neoconservative certainty.

On Sept. 11, 2001, as hand-wringers in the West Wing were wondering what to do, Cheney pulled his plan right off the shelf. It wasn't the right plan, but having something always feels so much better than having nothing. "Go to Baghdad, young man," Cheney told the president, and that's what Bush did. He deposed Saddam Hussein, occupied a country, turned a surplus into a deficit and left office with approval ratings in the 20s and 30s. Now we have Ryan, the Wisconsin representative who is Mitt Romney's running mate. He is another Man with a Plan. Like Cheney's foreign-policy wish list, Ryan's amalgam of neocon dreams doesn't have all that much to do with the immediate economic crisis that Romney says his campaign is all about. His plan is about the federal budget, debt and deficit. It's not about creat ing jobs.

Only in the short term is Ryan a plus for Romney. As a Man Without a Plan until last weekend, Romney was losing altitude. Rush Limbaugh, the Club for Growth and the Wall Street Journal editorial page didn't mind so much that he lacked core convictions on abortion or gay rights. This crowd was deeply disturbed, however, that the presumptive Republican presidential nominee didn't have a belief system akin to theirs on the economy. What's more, Romney was being defined not as a Steve Jobs kind of rich guy (that is, he built something valuable) but as a Gordon Gekko kind of rich guy (that is, he moved money and workers around a chess board and came out a winner no matter what). It didn't help that the proceeds of that maneuvering found their way to the Cayman Islands and other places outside the United States. In early July, the Journal's editorial board told Romney to get off the water scooter and down to business.

Romney needed to quiet those critics. When he looked at those on his V.P. shortlist, great guys all, each had something missing: Was there a Portman Plan? A Pawlenty Plan? A Christie Plan?

They had plans born of governing and experience. They did not have a Serious All-Encompassing Plan for the Future, complete with a slick website and catchy name

With Ryan, all Romney had to do was add water, stir and - voila! - he had a product line his brand lacked. Sure, Romney had a 59-point plan he threw out during the primaries, but it was such a plan, the vine dies. He will end it, not mend it.

As Ryan's plan is wrapped around Romney's neck (along with Ryan's behavior when he's not dreaming in his ivory tower: votes in favor of TARP, two wars and adding a prescription-drug program to Medicare), Romney may come to wish for the seasoned counsel of Rob Portman or Tim Pawlenty, or some of the earthiness and extra pounds of Chris Christie. In other words, Romney may find himself wishing for a running mate who spent a little less time in the House gym and a little more with the guy working a double shift. As Bush did with Cheney, Romney decided that it wasn't sufficient just to endorse the policies of Ryan - he needed Ryan himself on the ticket to placate his right wing. For the Republican Party, it has been a long march from Barry Goldwater to the present, with a few hiccups (Richard Nixon, George H.W. Bush) along the way. Conservatives have achieved dominance of their party. The country now gets to decide if it wants a full dose of trickledown economics, with the working and middle classes paying for tax cuts for the wealthy, who of course can be trusted to fix everything. At least it won't be a campaign about nothing. This will be one about something.

Romney Believes in an Extraordinarily Unorthodox, Fantastical Supernaturalism Now temporarily ensconced in upstate New such extraordinarily unorthodox supernaturalism shows a blind willingness to ditch common sense and the scientific method. JOHN WALSH Palmyra, N.Y. (Editor's note: John Walsh is a resident of Burley.)

Frat House Fall Lawsuit Dismissed

MOSCOW (AP) • A civil lawsuit against the University of Idaho filed by a former student who fell from a frat house window during an off-campus party and suffered debilitating injuries has been dismissed.

Second District Judge Michael Griffin tossed the suit brought by Amanda Andaverde of Caldwell and her parents in a written ruling issued Friday. The Moscow-based university, which recently rejected a $1 million settlement proposed by Andaverde and her family, issued a statement Monday saying it was pleased with the ruling.

"This was a tragic accident and our hearts continue to go out to Amanda and to her family and friends," the school said. "However, we believe the court is correct in its ruling that the university and our governing board were not proper parties to the damage claims brought by Amanda and her parents."

Andaverde was a 19year-old sophomore when she fell from an upper story window during a Sigma Alpha Epsilon frat house party. Andaverde fractured several bones and suffered a traumatic brain injury.

In court, an attorney for the family argued that the university was liable for Andaverde's injuries because it oversees the fraternity and sorority system on campus.

The federal government plans to announce the end of protections later this month.

CHEYENNE, Wyo. (AP) • The federal government plans to announce an end to protections for wolves in Wyoming later this month.

Rather than ending years of wrangling between state and federal officials, however, the move promises to spark legal challenges from environmental groups outraged that the state plans to classify wolves as predators that can be shot on sight in most areas.

Wyoming was chaffing under federal wolf protections for years.

Ranchers and hunters started complaining that wolves were taking an unacceptable toll on cattle and wildlife soon after the federal government reintroduced the species to Yellowstone National Park in the mid-1990s.

Wyoming Gov. Matt Mead last year reached an agreement with U.S. Interior Sec. Ken Salazar that calls for the state to take over wolf management. The deal followed a long series of lawsuits involving the state, the federal government and environmental groups.

The federal government's final delisting plan calls for Wyoming to maintain at least 10 breeding pairs of wolves and at least 100 individual animals outside of Yellowstone and the Wind River Indian Reservation in central Wyoming.

The state intends to classify wolves in the remaining 90 percent of Wyoming as predators, subject to being killed anytime by anyone.

Attack in Denver

DENVER (AP) • Free joints! Cheap weed! Come on down! Marijuana advertising in Denver can be shockingly aggressive, with psychedelic billboards and sign wavers promoting potent weed and an affordable high.

But in-your-face advertising messages in Colorado's largest city look like they're on their way out after the city council voted 13-0 to ban outdoor advertising for medical marijuana.

The Denver ordinance passed Monday night seeks to curb the city's vibrant and competitive industry. marijuana Council members said the city needs to crack down on the advertising.

"I don't appreciate folks that are out in front of a creepy old van slinging this dope, and they're making this industry look bad," said Councilman Paul Lopez, who voted for the measure. "I'm sick and tired of my neighborhood being overrun by folks who don't respect it."

The advertising ban would apply to billboard, bus-bench and sidewalk sign-twirler advertising. The ordinance doesn't affect print advertising or radio or television ads, but the ads would have to include the disclaimer that pot is "for registered Colorado medical marijuana patients only."

The marijuana industry in Denver was itself deeply divided on the advertising ban, which requires one more vote next week but appears certain to pass.

One Denver group, the Medical Marijuana Industry Group, actively pushed for the advertising ban, saying that unseemly ads give people a bad impression of the industry.

Fires Blaze across the West

CLE ELUM, Wash. (AP) • As firefighters across the West responded to blazes, efforts in Washington state were made especially difficult Tuesday as wind gusts pushed fast-moving flames through a small town, destroying dozens of houses.

The fire in central Washington burned about 70 homes, scorching roughly 40 square miles of grassland, timber and sagebrush, authorities said.

More than 400 people were evacuated, said Department of Natural Resources Fire Incident Commander Rex Reed. No injuries were reported, but authorities say that because of wind, heat and dry conditions, fire danger is extreme.

"We've had a long prolonged dry period – three weeks with no precipitation at all," Reed said.

The blaze sparked up at a construction site Monday near Cle Elum, a town about 75 miles east of Seattle.

Kittitas County Fire and Rescue Capt. Joe Seemiller said wind made it difficult to turn back the flames.

Joan Parr to Lead Fair Parade Today

BY LAURIE WELCH lwelch@magicvalley.com

BURLEY • Joan Parr was a staple in the cupboard at the University of Idaho Cassia County Extension Office for more than 30 years.

Nearly five decades after she was first introduced to 4-H, Joan has managed to preserve her enthusiasm for the program and continues to pass along her knowledge to others.

Joan and her husband, Wes Parr, will lead the Cassia County Fair & Rodeo Parade today as parade marshals.

She worked for the extension office for 34 years as an extension educator. After retiring in 2004, she was inducted into Idaho's 4-H Hall of Fame in 2008.

"She is a neat, neat lady and she has put in hours and hours of dedicated work," said Debi Barnes, a Cassia County extension administrative assistant.

The couple was chosen for the fair parade, in part, to celebrate the 100th birthday of 4-H in Idaho this year.

In 1957, Joan joined the San Mateo County Equestrian 4-H Club after receiving her Welsh pony, Joshua.

Joan's mother knew she would need help with the feisty pony and found the only 4-H club in the county. There were 70 members in the club; through the years she participated in projects on foods, clothing, sheep, home management, "She has the biggest heart and really deeply cares about everyone. She has such a good attitude and she doesn't know how to say no to anyone. She's probably busier now that she's retired than when she was working."

leadership, arts and training a guide dog for the blind projects, on top of her horse project. Later she became a teen leader, which gave her a chance to work with younger members and ignited a passion for helping others.

Joan and Wes met while attending California State Polytechnic University in San Luis Obispo. They married in 1969 and moved to Rupert the next year so Wes could farm with his family.

Joan went to work for the extension office in 1971 as a home economist. She loved the extension homemakers but her passion remained with the 4-H youth, adults and families. In the 1970s, Joan and Wes Parr will lead the Cassia County Fair & Rodeo Parade this year in honor of the 100th birthday of 4-H in Idaho.

she worked with Mary Hondo to establish an active, countywide 4-H teen leader association. The teens performed community service, attended state teen leader conferences and took charge of many fair floats and booths. They also assisted with all 4-H activities at the fair, achievement days, county awards programs and various contests.

Wes led a 4-H motorcycle club for a year or two and since then has become a behind-the-scenes supporter of 4-H. He provides awards each year and assists with a wide variety of displays, booth and equipment.

Joan left her mark on the extension office, including co-workers who are still there today. Barnes worked with Joan for about 29 years.

"She has the biggest heart and really deeply cares about everyone," Barnes said. "She has such a good attitude and she doesn't know how to say no to anyone. She's probably busier now that she's retired than when she was work-ing."

Taylor said it's an opportunity for students to learn about animal nutrition.

Once the sheep quality show started, the first class of competitors lined up with their lambs. Their parents gave them last-minute advice, such as to make eye contact with the judge.

Nearby in the swine barn, dairy superintendent Mary Ann Taylor helped students get their pigs ready for Tuesday evening's swine showmanship events.

For Taylor — who leads the West Wendell 4-H Club spending long hours at the fair isn't anything new.

She has been involved with FFA for 22 years between her time as a member and now, as a club leader. But Taylor said that's just a "drop in the hat" compared with many other people.

Although the swine barn was quiet around lunchtime, Taylor said it would get "really busy" later that afternoon as more students arrived with their animals.

Students had to wash and clean their pigs before the show. For some, that included rubbing lotion on their animals.

Taylor said raising animals teaches children responsibility and social skills.

And being involved with 4-H or FFA pays off for students years down the road, she said, since they have a tangible example of their work ethic to share with potential employers.

Water hauler Carl Marion of Athens, Ill., pumps water on Aug. 5 from his 2,000 gallon water tank on the back of his truck into a campground well in Petersburg, Ill.

NOT AT DROP TO DRINK

Wells run dry in droughtstricken states across the Midwest.

BY DAVID MERCER Associated Press

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. • After months of record-breaking heat and drought, many rural Americans who rely on wells for water are getting an unwelcome surprise when they turn on their faucets: The tap has run dry.

The lack of running water can range from a manageable nuisance to an expensive headache. Homeowners and businesses are being forced to buy thousands of gallons from private suppliers, to drill deeper or to dig entirely new wells.

Mary Lakin's family drained the last of its well water late last month in the small northern Indiana community of Parr. Since then, Lakin, her husband and two children have bathed and done laundry at relatives' homes and filled buckets from their backyard pool every time they need to flush a toilet.

Having water is "just something you take for granted," she said. "It's a big hassle, but we're surviving."

No one tracks the number of wells that go dry, but state and local governments and well diggers and water haulers report many more dead wells than in a typical summer across a wide swath of the Midwest, from Nebraska to Indiana and Wisconsin to Missouri.

It's not unusual for rural wells to stop producing toward the end of a hot summer. But this year is different. Some of the same wells that are known to run dry in August or September instead ran out in June.

Water suppliers and well drillers across the Midwest say they're working long hours to keep up with demand.

"It's seven days a week, man," said Carl Marion, a water hauler in Athens, Ill., north of Springfield. "I work until 12 or 1 o'clock every single night."

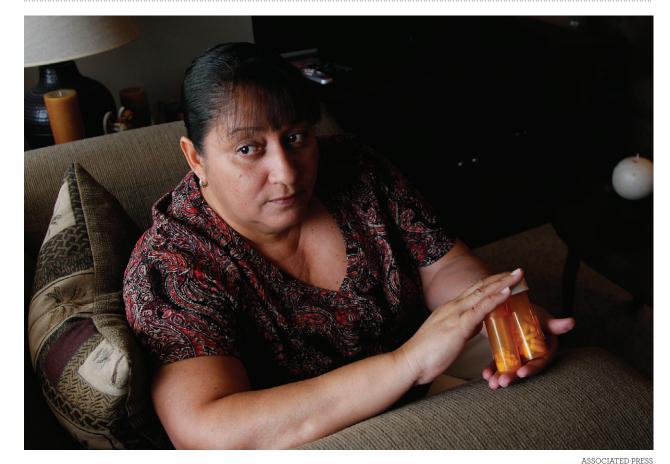

Wells are typically drilled 30 or 50 feet down. Some go hundreds of feet before hitting water. And the deeper the well, the more expensive it is, with costs starting at several thousand dollars and climbing in extreme cases into tens of thousands.

In the summer, when lawns, gardens, pools and livestock all drive up use, water levels can drop below a well's pump. If rain doesn't replenish the supply, sometimes the only option is to drill deeper or dig an entirely new well.

Older wells are particularly vulnerable because they may not hold water as efficiently or they may have been dug in places where most of the water is gone.

"It's sort of Darwinism," said George Roadcap, a hydro-geologist with the Illinois Water Survey. "The weak wells get shaken out at a time like this. Many people are using wells that are a hundred years old."

Very Drunk Drivers Cause 70 Percent of Crash Deaths

BLOOMBERG NEWS

WASHINGTON • Most drunk drivers causing fatal crashes in the United States have consumed about twice as much alcohol as laws allow, the top U.S. auto-safety regulator said. Requiring ignition-interlock devices, which are designed to prevent drunk drivers from starting their cars, for first-time offenders is the "best overall policy," David Strickland, head of the U.S. National High-

$15K a Year? Not Poor Enough

Threshold to qualify for Medicaid varies from state to state.

MIAMI (AP) • Sandra Pico is poor, but not poor enough.

She makes about $15,000 a year, supporting her daughter and unemployed husband. She thought she'd be able to get health insurance after the Supreme Court upheld President Barack Obama's health care law.

Then she heard that her own governor won't agree to the federal plan to extend Medicaid coverage to people like her in two years. So she expects to remain uninsured, struggling to pay for her blood pressure medicine.

"You fall through the cracks and there's nothing you can do about it," said the 52-year-old home health aide. "It makes me feel like garbage, like the American dream, my dream in my homeland is not being accomplished."

Steve Jobs' California Home Burglarized

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) • Several computers and personal items worth more than $60,000 were stolen from the Northern California home of the late Steve Jobs in what authorities insist was a run of the mill burglary.

"I've never gotten this many calls from people," supervising Santa Clara County deputy district attorney Scott Tsui said of the July 17 theft in Palo Alto. "Other than the fact it involves Mr. Jobs, it's a pretty standard burglary case."

Kariem McFarlin, 35, of Alameda, was arrested Aug. 2 and charged with residential burglary and selling stolen property. Authorities believe McFarlin was unaware that he had broken into the Jobs home.

"I'd imagine the suspect eventually realized whose house he was in, but outside, it was just another house in Palo Alto," Tsui said.

Palo Alto police reported a jump in residential burglaries in 2012, more than 100 in six months.

Jobs was known for a modest personal life and had lived in the residential neighborhood.

Authorities suspect his seven-bedroom house was targeted because it was undergoing renovation and may have appeared less secure. They believe the house was unoccupied at the time of the burglary.

"We're not aware of anything stolen that was anything special or different from any other burglary. The computers, I'd imagine since he's Mr. Jobs, are Apple products," Tsui said.

implement that requirement, he said.

More than 70 percent of deaths in crashes involving drunk drivers in 2010 involved a driver with bloodalcohol content of .15 or higher, NHTSA said Tuesday. The legal limit is .08.

"They are getting deeply intoxicated before getting behind the wheel," Strickland said.

Biggest Python on Record Sign of Growing Invasion

BLOOMBERG NEWS

A 17-foot, 7-inch Burmese python found in the Florida Everglades set a state record for both its size and the 87 eggs it was carrying.

The 164.5-pound snake was found, tagged and released in March as a part of a program to study invasive species in the Everglades. Scientists at the Florida Museum of Natural History on the University of Florida's Gainesville campus recaptured the python in April and discovered the eggs during an examination Friday, said Linda Friar, public information officer for Everglades National Park.

"One of the important facts about this animal is its reproductive capability," said Skip Snow, a park wildlife biologist. "There are not many records of how many eggs a large female snake carries in the wild. This shows they're a really reproductive animal, which aids in their invasiveness."

Jordan Squeezes as Syrian Conflict Rages Nearby

BY KARIN BRULLIARD AND JOBY WARRICK The Washington Post

MAFRAQ, Jordan • Hundreds of Syrian refugees slip across the border near here each night with little more than harrowing tales and occasionally grave wounds. For this landlocked and resource-poor kingdom, the newcomers are fueling new economic burdens and worries that the war next door might spread beyond its own frontiers.

Throughout much of the conflict in Syria, Jordan has hewed toward neutrality to avoid antagonizing a powerful neighbor that has long been an important trading partner and transit route for Jordanian goods. But the accelerating refugee flow and protracted war have complicated that stance, and the kingdom is raising alarm about the potential for regional instability and increasingly siding with the Syrian regime's opponents.

Jordan opened its first formal camp for Syrian refugees two weeks ago, after more than 140,000 Syrians fleeing the conflict had already entered. The kingdom is pleading for international aid as rows of tents mushroom on a sun-baked expanse of tawny sand near this northern city.

Not far away, at a site closed to reporters, a separate camp houses deserters from Syrian security forces. Fifty miles south in the capital of Amman, Jordan is sheltering the recently defected former Syrian prime minister — one of the starkest signs yet of Jordan's shifting stance toward a regime with which it has maintained diplomatic relations.

The defector, Riyad Hijab, told a news conference in Amman on Tuesday that the government of Syrian President Bashar al-Assad is "collapsing" and that rebels are gaining ground.

Jordan's public embrace of refugees and defectors is potentially risky for a nation that is a relative oasis of stability in a volatile region, a trait that has made it a magnet for waves of refugees from previous wars. Jordanian officials and analysts say there is rising concern about Syrian retaliation or pursuit of opposition activists inside Jordan. Officials here are also worried about internal tensions as Jordan seeks to appease a low-level protest movement calling for democratic reforms.

In recent months, Jordan's King Abdullah II has called publicly for Assad to step down, and his government has quietly increased nonlethal assistance to opposition forces. Jordanian officials say a major concern is the possibility that Syria could fracture into tribal or ethnic enclaves. That could tug on the allegiances of tribal groups straddling Syria's borders with Jordan, Turkey and Lebanon.

It could also create openings for al-Qaeda or other terrorist organizations to dominate certain areas, they say.

In an interview broadcast last week, Abdullah described such a fracturing as a "worst-case scenario" for Jordan, and he raised the specter of a spread of ethnic fighting across the region, a fear Obama administration officials share.

"That means that everyone starts land-grabbing," he told CBS News. "If Syria then implodes on itself, that would create problems that would take us decades for us to come back from."

qualify for Medicaid, a decades-old state-federal insurance program. That's especially true in states where conservative governors say they'll reject the Medicaid expansion under Obama's health law.

In South Carolina, a yearly income of $16,900 is too much for Medicaid for a family of three. In Florida, $11,000 a year is too much. In Mississippi, $8,200 a year is too much. In Louisiana and Texas, earning more than just $5,000 a year makes you ineligible for Medicaid.

Governors in those five states said they'll reject the Medicaid expansion underpinning Obama's health law after the Supreme Court's decision gave states that option. They favor small government and say they can't afford the added cost to their states even if it's delayed by several years. Some states estimate the expansion could ultimately cost them a billion dollars a year or more.

Many of the people affected by the decision are working parents who are poor – but not poor enough – to qualify for Medicaid.

Republican Mitt Romney's new running mate, conservative Wisconsin congressman Paul Ryan, has a budget plan that would turn Medicaid over to the states and sharply limit federal dollars. Romney hasn't specifically said where he stands on Ryan's idea, but expressed broad support for his vice presidential pick's proposals.

Medicaid now covers an estimated 70 million Americans and would cover an estimated 7 million more in 2014 under the Obama health law's expansion. In contrast, Ryan's plan could mean 14 million to 27 million Americans would ultimately lose coverage, even beyond the effect of a repeal of the health law, according to an analysis by the nonpartisan Kaiser Family Foundation of Ryan's 2011 budget plan.

For now, most states don't cover childless adults, but all states cover some low-income parents. The income cutoff, however, varies widely from state to state.

Most states cover children in low-income families. Manuel and Sandra Pico's 15-year-old daughter is covered by Medicaid. But the suburban Miami couple can't afford private insurance for themselves and they make too much for Florida's Medicaid.

Manuel Pico, a carpenter, used to make more than $20,000 a year, has struggled to find work in the last three years. He occasionally picks up day jobs or takes care of the neighbor's yard. Sandra Pico would like to work full time, but can't afford to pay someone to watch her 34-year-old sister, who has Down syndrome.

hurt themselves with careless water usage, said Richard Hubert, who owns Hubert Water Hauling Service in Smithville, Ill., about 20 miles southeast of St. Louis.

"We've had a lot of people who were silly enough to take their water out of their well and put it into their pool. Or they ran around watering stuff when we've been dry for 10 weeks," Hubert said. "I don't know what you're thinking when you've got a shallow well, and it hasn't rained."

In many places, the effects of heavy water use go beyond an individual well owner. A large water user such as a farmer irrigating fields or filling livestock ponds can accelerate the drawdown for nearby households.

That appears to have happened to the Lakins and their neighbors, according to the Indiana Department of Natural Resources, which recently reviewed about a dozen dry wells in the area.

"In each of them, it was pretty obvious they were being impacted by pumping," said Mark Basch, head of the agency's water rights and use section.

Under Indiana water law, the department will determine to what extent large users are responsible for nearby wells running dry and assess them a proportional share of the cost of the solution, Basch said.

In Missouri, state officials said last month they would help farmers pay to keep wells pumping using deeper drilling or other means. Through the first week of August, they had agreed to spend more than $18 million on 3,700 wells.

Many homeowners hire water haulers to deliver weekly shipments straight into their wells to temporarily restore the flow.

Since June, Pamela Lashley has been paying $130 to $150 a week to sustain the four wells at Country Estate Kennel in Shiloh, Ill., about 15 miles southeast of St. Louis. The kennel owner has to spend the money to hose down dog runs, launder bedding and fill water bowls.

"It certainly adds to our boarding costs," she said. "It's not something that I put on my clients. It's something that I absorb."

She once considered connecting to a nearby municipal water system, but the initial hookup cost – $28,000 – quickly changed her mind. In the short run, water hauling is far cheaper.

TWIN FALLS • Eugene Griff of Twin Falls, Idaho – a cherished husband, dad and grandfather – passed from life to everlasting life at the age of 90 to be with his Lord and Savior on Sunday, Aug. 12, 2012. He was born July 12, 1922, on the Salmon Tract south of Twin Falls to Herman and Carlotta Griff, immigrants from Italy. He graduated from Hollister High School in 1941. When Gene was 18 years of age, his father died, leaving him with the responsibility of running the family farm and caring for his widowed mother, brother and sister. He married Betty Sommer in 1945, and they invested their lives creating a loving and nurturing home for their five children.

Gene spent his life devoted to farming on the Salmon Tract. He had a passion for his work and continued farming well into his late 80s. This passion for farm life influenced every family member spanning four generations. Gene served on the Filer School Board, the PCA Board and the Salmon River Canal Company. He attended the Christian Center and, in later years, became a member of the Twin Falls Church of the Nazarene. In 1997, Gene was critically injured by two bulls on the family farm and was not expected to survive his extensive injuries. By the grace of God and the prayers of friends and strangers, he made a full recovery and was thereafter lovingly referred to as "The Bullfighter." The last years of his life gave him the opportunity to continue with his love of farming, but by far the greatest blessing was the remaining time he spent with his wife, Betty, and his family. He often commented that these were the best years of his life.

Eugene is survived by his loving wife, Betty Griff; and four children, Kathi Lecertua of

He considered some of his greatest treasures to be his 16 grandchildren and nine great-grandchildren, whom he fondly referred to as his "Raindrops" - the greatest compliment a Salmon Tract farmer could bestow. This summer has been a good year for cabbage - and pretty much all things in the Proost Family Farm and other gardens across the Magic Valley. In Proost's huge garden, watermelons were growing firm and round while an already prolific green bean crop was tilled to sleep by a tractor, to hibernate until next year. As the afternoon sky hung heavy with smoke from nearby fires, it masked the rain clouds that suddenly began to pockmark the soft soil with droplets. Proost said the last two summers were tougher growing seasons. "We are above normal. The quality is excellent, and we've haven't had any insects," Proost said. There was such an abundance this year that the farm will soon open a third stand on Pole Line Road to sell its vegetable and fruits, in addition to its stands on Addison Avenue and at the intersection of Falls Avenue and Blue Lakes Boulevard North. Sichuan Peppercorns: Big Flavor with a Jolt

BY J.M. HIRSCH Associated Press

Any food that can make your tongue tingle has got to be worth a taste.

I'm not talking a seltzerlike zippiness or even a searing chili-like heat. I mean literally tingling because your tongue is at once numb and buzzingly alive.

That is the power of the Sichuan pepper (also called Sichuan peppercorn). But why would you want to (albeit mildly) numb your mouth? Because aside from the basic coolness of a tingling tongue, that sensation also changes the way you taste food seasoned with the pepper, adding a wonderful vibrancy and punchy warmth unlike anything else.

First, the basics. Despite appearances, Sichuan pepper is not a true peppercorn. It is the dried rind of the berry-like fruit of the prickly ash tree. And chances are you've had it before. Sichuan pepper is a basic component of Chinese five-spice powder.

As its name suggests, the spice has left a serious thumbprint on the cuisine of China's Sichuan province. It also is used in Japan, where it is called sansho. The taste has been compared to lime zest combined with black pepper, cardamom and hot peppers. The tingling is likened to an electric charge. Chinese cooking, In Sichuan pepper is toasted before being crushed or ground. This mutes the spice's citrus flavors and heightens its woody notes, making for an excellent pairing with meats. To toast the spice, add it to a dry skillet over medium heat. Stir for about 1 minute, or until fragrant. Cool, then grind and use.

For ideas for using Sichuan pepper, check out the Off the Beaten Aisle column over on Food Network: http://bit.lv/07ZXuv

Sichuan Pepper Meatballs

Start to finish: 30 minutes. Makes 3 dozen meatballs.

For the meatballs:

- 2 teaspoons Sichuan pepper
- 1/2 star anise
- 1/2 teaspoon dry ground ginger
- 1 egg

4 scallions, whites and greens, finely chopped 2 teaspoons salt 1 pound lean ground beef 1 pound lean ground pork Sesame oil, for frying For the dipping sauce: 1 cup sour cream

2 tablespoons honey Pinch salt

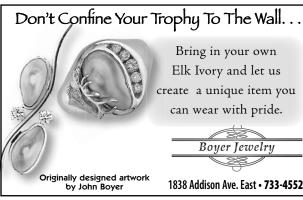

Heat the oven to 400 degrees. Line a rimmed baking sheet with foil and coat with cooking spray.

In a dry skillet over medium heat, toast the Sichuan pepper, star anise and ginger for 1 minute, stirring constantly. Transfer to a spice grinder and grind until reduced to a fine powder. Transfer to a large bowl

Add the egg to the seasoning blend, then whisk well. without crowding the pan, brown the meatballs on all sides, about 5 minutes. Transfer the meatballs to the prepared baking sheet. Repeat with remaining meatballs, adding oil to the skillet as needed.

When all of the meatballs have been browned, place them in the oven and roast for 8 minutes. Meanwhile, prepare the dipping sauce. In a small bowl, whisk together the sour cream, honey and salt. When the meatballs are finished, serve them with toothpicks and ramekins of the dipping sauce. There's a long list of items you won't be able to bring in with you: no pets, coolers, tents, outside food and drinks, or weapons. But Carpenter does suggest bringing lawn chairs. Don't worry about not carrying your own water Hagerman Water has donated plenty for festival-goers, Carpenter said.

What's on Tap?

The festival's website earlier this week listed more than 30 brewers contributing about 75 beers. Locals include Von Scheidt Brewing of Twin Falls, Sun Valley Brewing of Hailey and Sawtooth Brewery of Ketchum, but bigger craft brewers such as New Belgium and mainstream breweries like MillerCoors will also be available.

For those who need their alcohol to be glutenfree, Crispin Cider products will also be available, Carpenter said.

Enough about the Beer — What Else Is There?

Beer fans can listen to music including the Jason Lugo Band.

They can also participate in a number of raffles, as well as the first of three auctions for parking meters formerly used by the city of Twin Falls for downtown parking.

Food vendors will offer something more solid to accompany the brews.

Bring cash; while tickets can be bought at the gate using credit or debit cards, vendors inside won't be able to take them, Carpenter said. And you'll also need cash to buy additional drink tokens. The organizer, Blue Lakes Rotary Club, was not able to secure an ATM to place inside the gate, he said.

So What's All This Cost?

Tickets are $25 in advance, or $30 at the gate on Saturday. Designated drivers will be charged $10 and receive unlimited Coca-Cola products during the festival.

Each ticket includes a 14ounce mug and 20 drink tokens, each good for a 2-ounce sample.

Carpenter said tickets can be bought at O'Dunken's Draught House, Anchor Bistro and Bar, Barry Rental-Twin Falls, Brizee Heating and Air Conditioning or the Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce. They're available online at http://magicvalleybeerfest.com/. And they'll be sold at today's Twin Falls

Tonight outdoor concert on Main Avenue; each ticket will also be good for $1 off a beer at tonight's event.

Tickets are also available through any Blue Lakes Rotarian. Buy one soon from a Rotary member, and you'll also get free admission to Saturday's stock car races at the Magic Valley Speedway - if you act before the speedway tickets are gone.

What's the Money Support?

The event is primarily a fundraiser for Blue Lakes Rotary, which plans to use the money to finish off a park in southern Twin Falls. But the Twin Falls Senior Citizens Center will also benefit.

"It does well in 85 to 90 degrees, but anything over 90 degrees gets harder," Hines said.

Hines usually fields calls regarding large crops, but because the horticulture agent recently retired, Hines has been fielding a number of calls regarding gardens. One insect that Hines said is causing problems is mosquito, but otherwise this year is pretty quiet regarding insects.

"I did fairly well," said Don Friel, owner of D and L Produce and manager at the Gooding Farmers Market. "What I did grow, did well."

Friel said this summer it was all about beans. For the first time this year, Friel's bean plants grew to a height of 8.5 feet, and beans are still abundant as other crops start to fade.

"Most of our stuff is peaking out. Peas are gone, carrots are gone," Friel said.

Friel said the secret to this year's plentiful harvest was keeping his garden well-watered.

As his various tomatoes – Roma, Big Boys and Beefmasters – ripen, Friel keeps an eye on soil moisture and cutworms. Because Friel does not use pesticides or herbicides, he picks these critters from his plants by hand. Earlier in the season, cutworms were eating thing is to have it fresh," Ordaz said.

Ordaz credited the warm spring for early vegetable sales and the hot summer, with some bouts of cool, for keeping vegetables the most purchased plants at the store.

Crops are ripening slowly but steadily in Carl Hatfield's gar-den.

His tomatoes were battered by spring winds but are starting to ripen now. Also picking up pace are his peppers and eggplants. The cucumbers, however, were already racing, Hatfield said.

Aphids have been giving Hatfield's garden problems, but he said this is the case every year. What Hatfield hasn't seen is the squash bug, which gave him trouble in the past. "It's kind of been a different year, but I say that every year," Overton said.

Also ripening nicely in his garden are sweet corn, peppers, squash and pickling cucumbers. The sweet corn is a little late, by two weeks, and he credits that to the heat.

Earlier in the year, the wind beat up some of Overton's plants, but he said that weather is normal in Idaho. And soon his battered plants were back at it, producing fruits and veggies.

Last year, he said, the Colorado potato beetle destroyed his potato crop. This year bugs were not a problem.

"So far it's been pretty good," Overton said.

And Burnt Lemon Grill wasn't stingy with the chicken. I could easily split this meal and feel satisfied.

For $6.79, it comes with a 22-ounce soda and your choice of fries, tots or sweet potato fries. You can substitute a side salad for the same price if you ask, Taylor said, but the menu won't tell you about that option.

I chose the sweet potatoes and found a mountain of fries in my basket, seasoned with garlic salt and pepper, with a side of sweet, creamy sauce. (Unless you have a sweeter tooth than mine, the sauce is overkill. The fries can stand alone.)

Don't bother asking Taylor about that sweet sauce. It's an old family recipe. "It's something that people always ask about, and I never share," said Taylor, who also owns the Burnt Lemon Grill in Jerome. He reveals only the sauce's main ingredient: "A lot of people are shocked when I tell them it's actually buttermilk."

For 59 cents more, you can forego the soda and try the lemonade for which the grill is named. Taylor's staff prepares the lemonade daily, cutting lemons and charbroiling them on the grill so their sugars will condense as they cool. Then they extract the juice for "a sweeter, less tart lemonade with a unique flavor to it," Taylor said. "We don't have to use as much sugar as your typical homemade lemonade."

He offers 22 flavors of lemonade, and the most popular is huckleberry.

Other menu offerings include burgers, sandwiches, salads, fish and chips and finger steaks. The Twin Falls restaurant's dining room is small and simple: back-to-back booths, lots of windows, a decor of oversized street signs. But you won't wait there

In Leon Overton's garden, tomatoes are doing fantastic. He said his Celebrity tomatoes are 25 percent bigger than in past years.

Though he isn't quick to say this is his best growing season to date, he said his wife believes it is.

Tortellini as Croutons in a Robust Caesar Salad

BY J.M. HIRSCH Associated Press

My 7-year-old son has made me an expert at Caesar salad. Though to be fair, some credit goes to April Bloomfield, too.

After several years of "green is evil" behavior by my son, I recently – finally! - managed to persuade him to try Caesar salad. The kid loves savory, umami-rich foods, and I have the receipts from the butcher and cheese shops to prove it. So despite his reluctance to embrace romaine lettuce, I knew an anchovy, egg and Parmesan-rich Caesar dressing could win his heart.

I had tried any number of times, but the sight of the lettuce always had him running. Until a few weeks ago.

On a whim, I opened one of my new favorite cookbooks, "A Girl and Her Pig" by Bloomfield. If you don't know her, you should. She is the culinary force behind some of New York's top spots at the moment, including The Spotted Pig and The John Dory Oyster Bar. Her food smacks of big, bold, slap-you-silly flavor. And her unpretentious cookbook of totally accessi-

(if not all that original) choice. But rotisserie chicken is simply too easy to pass up for a summer salad-asmeal. I could have stopped there, but I wanted to play around with the starch. Traditionally, honking big croutons play that role. But I liked the idea of something that is both crunchy and cheesy-soft.

Pan-crisped cheese tortellini were the perfect choice. Most people don't realize it, but fresh pasta (the variety sold in the refrigerator case) can be cooked without water. Just give a spritz of cooking spray to a non-stick skillet, then add the pasta and saute until lightly browned and crisp.

I stuck with Bloomfield's basic Caesar dressing (slightly altered). And I have to agree with her – applying the dressing by hand really is best.

Cheese Tortellini Caesar Salad

No Champagne vinegar? I've used white balsamic vinegar as a fine substitute. If you have leftover cooked chicken, use that. I found that a 1 1/2-pound rotisserie chicken worked well. Start to finish: 15 minutes. Servmedium-high. Spritz with cooking spray, then add the tortellini. Saute the tortellini for 6 minutes, or until lightly browned and slightly crisped. Transfer to a plate to cool. Meanwhile, in a blender combine the anchovies, garlic, mustard, vinegar and egg. Puree until smooth. With the blender on low speed, drizzle in the oil. Add the cheese and puree until smooth. Season with pepper, then set aside.

In a large bowl, toss the chicken and romaine. Drizzle about half the dressing over the salad, then use your hands to toss until well coated. Add the tortellini and drizzle additional dressing, tossing again. You may not need all of the dressing. Serve immediately. Red Wine Blends Mix Things Up for Summer

BY MICHELLE LOCKE For The Associated Press

Red wine blends are having a red hot moment.

After years of being passed over for single-variety wines such as cabernet sauvignon and pinot noir, a new wave of blended red wines made in a crowd-pleaser style – and priced at a budget-friendly $9 to $12 a bottle – is winning favor with consumers.

"They're drinking the red blends," says Doug Bell, national wine and beer buyer for Whole Foods Market. The wines tend to be "kind of plush, very fruity, very smooth," and offer an alternative to consumers who want to try red wines but aren't looking for the tradigenerally are made from a blend of six grapes, with the predominant grapes being cabernet sauvignon, cabernet franc and merlot. And even single-variety wines aren't necessarily pure. By law, they can contain up to 25 percent of a grape different from what's listed on the label.

The blends making news in the U.S. often incorporate the New World grape zinfandel, as well as syrah, which hails from France but has become more associated with the New World, especially Australia.

Red blends started getting trendy about two years ago, with brands such as Menage a Trois, made from three red grapes. Some popular blends at Whole Foods include Frey Innovac!on Tempranillo-Malbec.

Roy Cecchetti, cofounder of Cecchetti Wine Co., also based in Sonoma County, expects the red blend wine category to continue to grow over the next 18 to 24 months. He's launched a blend called Exitus (Latin for departure) that retails for $25. The 2010 blend combines three grapes from California – Central Coast syrah, petite sirah from the Mendocino Coast and merlot from Lake County.

Cecchetti theorizes that red blends are attractive to consumers as a new option. "Most all red varietals have been overexposed," he says. "Red blends give the consumer the opportunity of trying something completely different based on the varying flavor profiles of the red blends that are currently available."

Grilling Greens – A New Way with Kale for Summer

BY J.M. HIRSCH Associated Press

When I created this recipe, I was aiming for something akin to a saute. What I got was so much better.

When you saute kale, it acts like spinach. That is, it wilts, releases a lot of moisture and becomes very tender. Prepared this way, it's delicious in stirfries, tossed with pasta or seasoned and used as a bed for roasted or grilled meats.

But on a recent waytoo-hot day, the idea of standing at the stove just didn't appeal. And since I already had the grill going, I figured I could get the same effect if I seasoned the kale, dumped it on a baking sheet and set it over the grill for a few minutes.

Except that the intense heat of the grill never gave the kale a chance to wilt. In just minutes, the greens went from fresh to toasted and lightly crisped. It also happened to be delicious and paired particularly well with the sausages I also was grilling that evening.

And you don't need to like the seasoning blend I created to use this technique. Flavor the kale however you see fit (some red pepper flakes would be a fine addition). But however you season the kale, watch it carefully. Every grill heats differently, and kale is so delicate it can go from perfect to perfectly burnt rather quickly.

One note about grilling with a baking sheet. The intense heat of the grill is likely to warp inexpensive baking sheets. If you don't have a heavy duty baking sheet, I suggest using a disposable foil one, which most grocers sell in a variety of sizes.

Garlicky Grilled Kale

Start to finish: 15 minutes. Servings: 4.

1 tablespoon garlic powder 1 tablespoon smoked paprika

1/2 tablespoon ground cumin

1/2 tablespoon kosher salt 1/2 teaspoon ground black pepper

1 large bunch kale 2 tablespoons olive oil

Heat a grill to mediumhigh. Line a heavy baking sheet with foil, or use a disposable foil baking sheet. Coat the foil or baking sheet with cooking spray. In a small bowl, mix together the garlic powder, smoked paprika, cumin, salt and pepper. Set aside. Trim off and discard the thick stems from the kale. Coarsely chop the kale leaves, aiming for pieces about 2 to 3 inches. Place the chopped kale in a large bowl, then drizzle it with the oil. Use your hands to toss the kale to coat evenly with the oil. Sprinkle half of the seasoning mixture over the kale, then toss again. Sprinkle the remaining seasoning and toss again.

Spread the kale in an even layer on the prepared baking sheet. Place the baking sheet directly on the grill and cook with the grill covered for 7 minutes, or until the kale is crisp and begins to brown. Serve immediately.

GRILL YOUR PEACHES, TOO

THE WASHINGTON POST

The flavor of the grill adds a dimension to a breakfast bowl of peaches and cream. Jim Shahin's contribution to this classic combination: smoked paprika.

If possible, avoid a reducedfat version of the cream. Use the real thing, and revel in the moment. You may combine the fruit and cream while the peaches are warm, at room temperature or cold, after at least an hour of refrigeration.

The peaches can be grilled a day in advance. Refrigerate in an airtight container.

Grilled Peaches and Cream

2 servings.

2 peaches, pitted, peeled if desired, and cut into wedges about 1/3 inch thick (about 1 cup); you will get 10 to 14 wedges per peach Olive oil (optional) 2/3 cup heavy whipping cream, or more to taste Smoked paprika (optional)

Prepare the grill for direct heat. If using a gas grill, preheat to medium-high (450 degrees). If using a charcoal grill, light the charcoal; when the coals are ready, distribute them evenly under the cooking area. For a mediumhot fire, you should be able to hold your hand about 6 inches above the coals for 4 or 5 seconds. Have ready a spray water bottle for taming any flames. If desired, lightly grease the cut sides of the peach wedges with a little oil. Place the peaches on the grate over direct heat, cut sides down; if you have a grill basket, place them in the basket. Cook uncovered for about 1 minute on each side. When the peaches turn brownish or achieve grill marks, they're ready. Divide the peach wedges between bowls. Serve warm or at room temperature, or cover and refrigerate until cool. When ready to serve, pour 1/3 cup of cream over each portion. Sprinkle the smoked paprika on top, if using.

CHICKEN SAUSAGE DINNER IN 30 MINUTES

BY BONNIE S. BENWICK

The Washington Post

Salty olives and capers and a goodquality chicken sausage make all the difference in this Paleo Diet-friendly main course. To reduce prep time further, shop at a salad bar for cut vegetables. Feel free to add red bell peppers, eggplant or tomatoes, and adjust the cooking time accordingly.

We used an organic apple chicken sausage made by Coleman Natural Foods.

Adapted from "The Kentucky Fresh Cookbook," by Maggie Green (University Press of Kentucky, 2011).

Chicken Sausage with Squash and Fresh Herbs

4 servings.

1 medium red onion 12 ounces cooked chicken sausage (in links), such as the Original Brat Hans organic apple chicken sausage 2 tablespoons olive oil, plus more as needed

- 1 1/2 pounds mixed summer squash and zucchini
- 1/2 cup mixed fresh flat-leaf parsley, basil and/or thyme leaves
- 1/2 cup pitted kalamata olives (about 25)
- 1/4 teaspoon salt, or more to taste 1/4 teaspoon freshly ground black
- pepper, or more to taste 1/4 cup capers, drained
- 1/2 lemon

Cut the onion into very thin slices. Cut the sausage crosswise into 2inch chunks.

Heat the oil in a large skillet over medium heat. Add the sausage chunks and onion; cook, stirring occasionally, for 10 to 12 minutes. The sausage should be browned and cooked through, and the onion should be softened and lightly browned; transfer them to a plate. Meanwhile, cut the squash and zucchini into 1-inch chunks. Coarsely chop the herbs. Cut each olive in half.

Add the squash and zucchini to the skillet; cook, stirring occasionally, for about 8 minutes or until just tender. Season with the salt and pepper, then return the sausage and onion to the skillet. Add the olives and capers, stirring to incorporate.

Squeeze the juice of the lemon half over the mixture in the skillet; cook until the mixture is evenly heated through. Taste and adjust seasoning as needed. Remove from the heat, then stir in the herbs. Divide groups individual plates

Pulled Pork Doesn't Have to Be an Occasional Treat

BY ALISON LADMAN For The Associated Press

Pulled pork is a treat often reserved as an occasional indulgence. Which probably is good, since it tends to be made with some of the fattier pieces of pork, which then are smothered with a sugary sauce and piled on a white roll. Trouble is, we love pulled pork and we wanted a version we could feel good about enjoying a little more often.

The first change we made was the cut of meat. We used pork tenderloin. It is a very lean cut of meat that we simply boiled until tender in a flavorful broth.

As for the sauce, we decided to do something a little out of the ordinary. We went with a tangy vinaigrette-style sauce. This allowed us to serve it warm or cold and mix in some crunchy raw vegetables to add some color and texture.

Finally ... the bun. We opted to skip that entirely. After all, the pork is the star. So we borrowed an Asian trick and serve it wrapped in bibb lettuce leaves.

In a medium bowl, whisk together the vinegar, olive oil, hot sauce, sour cream and orange zest. Stir in the bell pepper, celery, carrot and the shredded pork. Season with salt and pepper. Cast-iron Saute Dinner in 25 Minutes

BONNIE S. BENWICK The Washington Post

Cooked fried rice in your cast-iron skillet lately? A well-seasoned pan is a fine vehicle for this dish, which can be done in 15 minutes if you use leftover corn already off the cob and whatever grilled, leftover proteins you have on hand - although we like this with black beans tossed in as well. If you leave out the added proteins, this can be served as a side.

Look for cooked brown rice and wild rice in your grocer's freezer case.

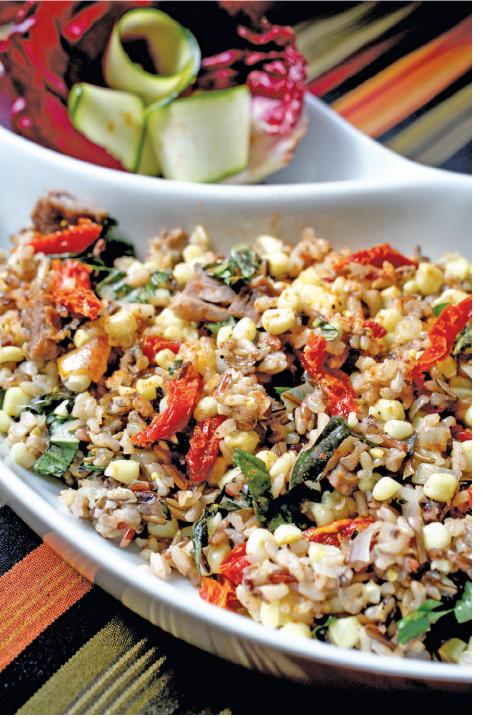

Serve on top of big pieces of butter lettuce, with slices of avocado and wedges of lime (for squeezing). Adapted from a recipe by cookbook author Beth Hensperger in "The Lodge Cast Iron Cookbook: A Treasury of Timeless, Delicious Recipes" (Oxmoor House, 2012).

4 servings.

- 4 or 5 ears fresh corn (may substitute 3 to 3 1/2 cups frozen/defrosted white shoepeg corn)
- 1 or 2 medium shallots
- 3 oil-packed sun-dried tomatoes
- 1/3 cup (5/8 ounce) packed basil leaves
- 1 to 2 cups cooked steak, chicken, pork, shrimp or no-salt-added black beans (about 12 ounces)
- 2 tablespoons unsalted butter
- 2 tablespoons olive oil 2 cups cooked combination of wild rice and longgrain brown rice Kosher salt
- Freshly ground black pepper

Cut the corn off the cobs to yield 3 to 3 1/2 cups. Mince the shallot(s) to yield 2 tablespoons. Drain the sun-dried tomatoes, then coarsely chop to yield a scant 1/3 cup. Stack the basil leaves, then roll them tightly and cut crosswise

Creamed Corn that Is Rich and Creamy without Cream

BY SARA MOULTON For The Associated Press

There are few foods as simple, delicious and complete as fresh seasonal corn on the cob. When it's really fresh, I'll even eat it raw. No boiling, no butter, no salt. It's perfectly sweet and tender right off the stalk.

Still, even perfection can get boring, and I recently began wondering what else I could do with fresh corn. I thought back to my days as the host of the Food Network's "Cooking Live," when one of my guest chefs whipped up some corn soup and thickened it with pureed corn.

Of course, I'd known that any pureed vegetable will thicken a stew or soup. But corn has a secret ingredient - Duh! - cornstarch. I was astonished by the creaminess and thickness of my guest's soup.

This recipe was inspired by that soup. Creamed corn is thus named because it usually depends on cream for its creaminess. That's a problem for me for a couple of reasons. The cream not only makes the dish too rich, it also tends to mask the flavor of the corn itself.

So I took a tip from my chef friend and used pureed corn to achieve a silky richness without any additional fat. Caramelized onions add great depth of flavor, while the chili's heat and lime juice's acidity balance the sweetness of the corn.

Don't hesitate to finish the dish with just about any herb in the garden these days. Corn plays nicely with almost all of them.

Spicy 'Creamed' Corn

Sara Moulton was executive chef at Gourmet magazine for nearly 25 years and spent a decade hosting several Food Network books, including "Sara Moulton's Everyday Family Dinners." Start to finish: 30 minutes. Servings: 6.

10 to 12 ears fresh corn, husked

- 3/4 cup chicken broth, vegetable broth or water, divided
- 2 tablespoons grapeseed oil or olive oil
- 1 medium yellow onion, finely chopped (about 1 cup) Salt
- 1 serrano chili, seeds and ribs discarded if desired, minced (about 1 tablespoon)
- 1 to 2 tablespoons fresh lime juice or lemon juice, to taste
- 1 tablespoon shredded fresh basil or chopped fresh cilantro
- Ground black pepper

Carefully cut the kernels off the ears of corn. To do this, one at a time stand each ear on its wide end and use a serrated knife to saw down the length of the cob. You should have about 6 cups of kernels. In a blender, combine 1 cup of the kernels and 1/2 cup of the broth. Puree until smooth. Set aside. In a large skillet over medium, heat the oil. Add the onion and a pinch of salt, reduce the heat to moderately low and cook, stirring occasionally, until golden, about 8 minutes. Add the remaining corn kernels and another pinch of salt. Saute for 3 minutes. Add the chili and pureed corn, then bring the mixture to a simmer and cook for 2 minutes.

Stir in the remaining 1/4 cup of chicken broth, the lime juice and basil. Season with salt and pepper, then simmer for another minute. Per serving: 220 calories; 80 calories from fat (36 percent of total calories); 9 g fat (0.5 g saturated; 0 g

Use Balsamic Chicken Recipe as Platform for Experimentation

STEPHANIE WITT SEDGWICK

Special to The Washington Post

Fresh tomato sauces are versatile. They cook quickly and preserve the fresh taste of the sun-ripened fruit. Toss them with pasta, serve over grilled meats or vegetables, add to a salad as a dressing or spread on toasted slices of French bread for crostini.

Try the recipe as is, or think of it as a platform for your own variations: Add chopped olives, mix in a little vinegar, play around with herbs or spice it up with crushed red pepper flakes.

The chicken can be broiled instead of grilled.

Work ahead: The chicken needs to marinate for at least 2 and up to 12 hours. The sauce can be made up to a day in advance. Reheat gently over low heat before serving. The chicken is best served right after it is cooked.

Balsamic Chicken with Fresh Tomato Sauce

4 servings.

For the chicken:

- 3 tablespoons balsamic vinegar 3 tablespoons mild olive oil, plus oil for the grill
- grates Salt
- Freshly ground black pepper
- Four 4-to-5-ounce boneless, skinless chicken breast halves, pounded slightly so each breast is of even thickness (about 1/2 inch)

For the sauce:

- 2 tablespoons mild olive oil
- 2 tablespoons finely chopped garlic
- 2 pounds ripe tomatoes, peeled, seeded and cut into 1/4-inch dice (see note), about 1 3/4 cups
- 2 tablespoons white wine

1/8 teaspoon sugar Salt Freshly ground black pepper 12 large basil leaves, rolled together tightly and cut into very thin strips (chiffonade)

For the chicken: Combine the vinegar, oil and salt and pepper to taste in a shallow dish or gallonsize resealable food storage bag. Add the chicken breast halves; turn to coat thoroughly. Cover the dish or seal the bag and refrigerate for at least 2 hours and up to 12 hours. The longer you marinate the chicken, the stronger the balsamic flavor will

When ready to cook, prepare the grill for direct heat. If using a gas grill, preheat to medium-high (450 degrees). If using a charcoal grill, light the charcoal or wood briquettes; when the briquettes are ready, distribute them evenly under the cooking area. For a medium-hot fire, you should be able to hold your hand about 6 inches above the coals for 4 to 5 seconds. Lightly coat the grill grates with oil. Drain the chicken pieces, discarding the marinade, and transfer them to the grill. Close the lid and cook for about 4 minutes, until the chicken has good grill marks and appears to be done on the first side. Turn the pieces over, cover the grill and cook for 3 to 5 minutes, until the chicken is cooked through. Set the chicken pieces aside to rest for 10 minutes before slicing.

While the chicken is cooking, prepare the tomato sauce: Combine the oil and garlic in a small saute pan or skillet over medium-low heat. When the oil just begins to sizzle, lower the heat and cook for 10 minutes, stirring occasionally and adjusting the heat so the garlic softens but does not brown.

Increase the heat to medium-high and add the tomatoes. Cook for 3 to 4 minutes, tossing the tomatoes a few times, then add the wine, sugar and salt and pepper to taste. Cook for 4 to 5 minutes, until the liquid in the pan has reduced by half. Taste, and adjust the seasoning as needed.

Cut each piece of chicken on the diagonal into 1/4inch-wide slices. Arrange the slices on individual serving plates and top each portion equally with the tomato sauce. Garnish with the basil. Serve warm or at room temperature. Note: To peel tomatoes, bring a medium saucepan of water to a boil. Have ready a bowl of ice water. Cut an "X" in the bottom of each tomato and remove the stem. Working with one at a time, place the tomato in the boiling water for 15 seconds. Use a slotted spoon to quickly transfer it to the ice water. The skin should simply slip off.

BURLEY • The dream ending to a special summer just wasn't meant to be.

The Burley Green Sox couldn't catch a break in their 6-2 loss to the Mission Valley (Mont.) Mariners in the American Legion Baseball Northwest Class A Regional tournament championship game Tuesday.

Right from the get-go it seemed fate was on the Mariners' side when their left fielder made a spectacular diving catch to take extra bases away from Burley's Jackson Kunz in the first inning.

Later, a big turning point could have come in the fifth inning after the Mariners loaded the bases on Burley pitcher Jake Mills with no outs. Mills struck out the next batter, and then got Cole McArthur to hit a grounder up the middle. The ball took a funny hop, and what should have been an easy double play to end the inning turned into an error and two runs scored.

Mission Valley pitcher Nicholas Crawford tossed a fine ballgame, but it seemed whenever Burley hit the ball, it was right at a Mariner.

"We couldn't get a hop, we couldn't buy a base hit. Just wasn't our day," said Burley third baseman Taylor Carson.

When asked if Burley could have done anything differently, Mills shrugged.

"Go back and move the rock that's sitting in front of second base to get rid of that hop. Go back and move the rock in front of third base, get rid of that hop. Move the (foul) line six inches in and get rid of (Mission Valley's) two doubles down the line."

In retrospect, maybe the only thing Burley could have improved was its nerves. All summer the club has played loosely and confidently. On Tuesday, even conditioning tensity drills.

The players divide into six teams for a relay race and select a teammate as their "baton." Carrying their teammate, they sprint 20 yards and back, then pass the "baton" off to the next runner. If the "baton" touches the ground, they have to do 50 pushups.

Seems a little silly at first, but veteran head coach Kelly Kidd says everything has a purpose.

"The game still has to be fun for kids," said Kidd. "We try to incorporate something that they enjoy

Over the past four years, Declo has won four Canyon Conference championships and posted a 9-4 state playoff record. Given its recent success, it's no wonder the Hornets' goals are lofty.

New Coach, Same Atmosphere at Raft River

MALTA • For the first time in 16 years, a new face is blowing the whistle at Raft River High football coaches.

Other than that, everything feels the same in Malta.

Usually when a team undergoes a coaching change, the atmosphere changes, too. But new coach Brian Poole seems to be cut from the same cloth as former coach Randy Spaeth, who resigned last spring to become Raft River's athletic director and was thus able to hand-select his own replacement.

hasn't changed "Tt much," said senior quarterback Tanner Anderson. "Everybody respects what (Poole) brings, and what he has a little different than what coach Spaeth did. I think it's good to have a change every now and again." Α three-year starter, Anderson says the participation in summer conditioning and weightlifting was the best he's seen.

"I like the intensity, the fire that everybody has," Anderson said. That excitement should translate well to the football field, where the Trojans hope to build upon its 4-5 season in 2011.

Scheme-wise, Poole is on the same page as the old coach.

"As far as X's and O's, we're not going to be a drastic change," Poole said. "The goal is, we want to be successful running the football, but we want to be competent throwing the Please see RAFT RIVER, S2

Clutch Luper Wins Juniors State Crown

BY DAVID BASHORE

dbashore@magicvalley.com

JEROME • At several stops along Tuesday's round in the Idaho Golf Association Juniors state championships, Braden Luper could have packed it in.

He three-putted on No. 18 when a par would have won the 15-year-old division. Nightmares of last year's second-round collapse - Luper led the 14-year-olds after one round but shot an 83 on the second day - danced in his head. It was all happening again, he thought.

"I thought I was going to lose by a shot and that was it," Luper said.

But then Keifer Higham bogeyed 18 as well, and Luper pounced on his second chance, beating Higham on the third hole of a thrilling playoff at Jerome Country Club.

Both players parred the opening playoff hole, No. 10. Higham hit his first shot on No. 11 into the left rough and blasted his second to the right, just short of the green but behind a tree.

Somehow he got up and down for birdie, including a clutch 20-foot bender to deny Luper, who'd played the hole far more cleanly, a win.

Instead Luper stared down a 10footer to force a third playoff hole, when it originally looked like it would be for the win, and buried it. He took control by curling a 6-iron to within five feet on the par-3 12th, when Higham sprayed his tee shot onto the back fringe and ran his putt attempt off the green the other way.

"I was going to hit 7-iron, but I would have had to kill it to get it there, so I went with the 6, swung easy and stuffed it," said Luper. "I wasn't thinking about trying to sink the putt, I just wanted to get it closer because I knew I had at least two putts to win. They say if you try to lag it, sometimes it goes in, and it did."

The 15-year-old boys provided the most drama, but younger kids stole the show. Three 14-year-olds sat atop the overall leaderboard after the first Please see GOLF, S2

POCATELLO • Fans and observers of Idaho State football will be able to tell pretty quickly if year two of the Mike Kramer era has made progress from the first season.

If two areas specifically get better the number of wins is going to increase, and those areas are fundamental to the game, namely the offensive and defensive lines.

Quarterback Kevin Yost is back after a season that found him throwing for almost 3,000 yards. All-America receiver Rodrick Rumble and his 112 catches, good for over 1,300 yards, are back along with a cadre of seasoned receivers in Josh Hill, Derek Graves and Luke Austin.

But Yost was sacked 55 times and was under siege on almost every snap after mid October. No quarterback, no matter how talented can function in that situation. So Kramer brought in a number of new offensive linemen in the offseason to try to solve that issue.

Every recruit we brought in is bigger than someone who is already here," he said. "A lot of those guys have the opportunity to play and play early. A lot of those guys have a chance to bring some quality to our offensive production because Kevin cannot be running for his life every time he drops back to pass."

Comic Con Tackles Fantasy Football

ASSOCIATED PRESS

Fantasy football has an estimated 30 million players nationwide, a TV sitcom built around it and, now, its own convention produced by the same people who run Comic Con.

The first Fantasy Football Fest will be held at the Convention Center in Atlantic City this weekend, a two-day event expected to attract 25,000 fans who will participate in fantasy drafts while they meet - and maybe pick up a few tips from - real NFL veterans, including Hall of Famers Joe Montana and Bruce Smith.

"Our whole world is focused on awesome fan experiences," says Greg Topalian, senior vice president of Reed-POP, whose company organizes not only major comic book conventions, but a penny arcade expo, "Star Wars" celebrations, and an Ultimate Fighting expo – all of which draw huge crowds. "We felt like this is a similar type of community, really passionate.

"There's been no physical way to do a draft and enjoy fantasy with friends and the rest of the football community."

Now, there will be, and Topalian sees the attraction of the festival on Saturday and Sunday as more about every aspect of football, but with fantasy at the core.

"We looked at what do fans value beyond fantasy?" he says. "They buy sports memorabilia, so we will have an exposition floor and Steiner Sports will be supplying memorabilia.

"Football is also a lifestyle thing, so we will have tailgat ing, beer-tasting, all part of being a fantasy player and a fan."

Those fantasy players will be able to get help from experts in the make believe, if you will, and can ask former players their opinions on who to draft and when. A separate area of the building has been set aside exclusively for leagues to conduct drafts.

The National Fantasy Football Championship, which began in 2004 as the industry's first multi-city, highstakes event and awarded more than $1.4 million in prizes last year, will hold its draft there this weekend.

SiriusXM satellite radio will broadcast 19 hours of live programming on its fantasy sports channel, including an experts' draft. As an added enticement, Stratmish, a fantasy football tournament format that launched this month, will offer a chance for a fantasy player to win $2 million in a season-long event.

"We want to be the name brand for fantasy sports as we roll out our programs for 20,000 to 30,000 people who will attend," Stratmish President Michael Shaldone says.

Big East Picks CBS VP Aresco as Commish

ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK • The Big East on Tuesday hired CBS executive vice president Mike Aresco to be commissioner of a conference now in rebuilding Aresco mode.

Aresco has been a vice president in charge of programming for CBS since 1996. He's handled the network's contract negotiations with the NCAA for the rights to the men's basketball tournament, and negotiated CBS's 15-year deal with the Southeastern Conference.

Aresco, a Connecticut native who resides in Southport, Conn., worked for ESPN before his long run at CBS. He has never worked for a conference or university, but his experience lies in the field where the Big East needs the most help.

"He has all of the characteristics that we need in a Commissioner," University of South Florida President Judy Genshaft said in a statement. "His career has been filled with achievement and success in intercollegiate sports. Mike Aresco Pittsburgh and Syracuse cost former Commissioner John Marinatto his job earlier this year. Joe Bailey has been interim com> missioner since May. Before Marinatto was forced out, he helped the conference add eight schools, including Boise State. Six are slated to join next year, but the long-term viability of the far-flung league is still in doubt.

"We did discuss it. There is some risk," CBS Sports Chairman Sean McManus said in a telephone interview. "Obviously the conference is serious about being aggressive and protecting its brand, protecting its makeup and protecting its participants."

McManus added: "Mike's got his work cut out for him."

The next commissioner will need to create stability to encourage current and future members to stick with the conference if and when leagues such as the Big 12 and Atlantic Coast Conference look to expand again.

The best way for the 62vear-old Aresco to do that means less competition. "It was disappointing, not just for me, but for any girls that might come along later and lose that competition," Harr said. "But I'll be there still trying to get better." Twin Falls' Zach Malina took third in the 13-year-old division, shooting a two-day 156.

In the nine-hole tournament at Twin Falls Golf Club, Kimberly's McKade Huft won the 10-year-old boys division with a two-day 82, and Twin Falls' Brinlee Stotts won the girls' 9-10 division with a 104.

Preston Meyerhoeffer of Twin Falls finished tied for second in the 12-year-old boys division with a 79.

Eagle's Josh Gliege shot a two-day 6-under 138 to win his division by four strokes and the overall title by two. Buhl's Hayden Eckert finished third in the 14 division at 148, but was promoted to second because Gliege was given the overall tournament championship.

Eckert shot a 2-under 70 on the opening day but fell back on Tuesday by shooting a 78.

"I just wasn't hitting the ball as well today and wasn't having as much fun," said Eckert, who will be a freshman at Buhl High School this fall. "Yesterday a lot went right, and today it didn't as much. But it was fun seeing the 14-year-olds do so well, and this will help me in the high school game." While Eckert hopes to springboard his Juniors success into a solid prep campaign in the spring, Buhl's Sierra Harr hopes to keep her game sharp through the fall so she doesn't get complacent when she plays for Castleford in 2013.

The conference is in the middle of a massive membership overhaul and will begin crucial negotiations on a new television contract in September. The defections of longtime members West Virginia, is to help the Big East land a billion television contract that is at least in the ballpark of the ACC's recently re-worked deal with ESPN, which will pay its members about $17 million per year starting next season and through the 2026-27 sports season.

gives the kids a reason to come out here and work hard," Kidd said. "Practice is useless if you're not working toward something."

With several key starters returning, Declo is sure to be ranked high in preseason media polls, but the Hornets aren't too concerned where pundits believe they stack up.

"Our football game does our talking, we're not worried about ranks, and if anybody else is ranked No. 1 then we're coming after them," said senior Jason Gillette. "We're right on track. I think we'll be a team to reckon with."

Kidd knows a state title contender when he sees one, having led two teams to the state championship game recently. He said this year's team has a long ways to go.

"We talked on Day 1 that we want to win a state championship, and these first few practices I've been disappointed because we haven't practiced with the intensity to get there," Kidd said. "If it's really a goal of theirs, then practices must get more intense. They have to get better."

With 17 years of coaching experience, Poole has a diverse background with different offenses. He's been successful running everything from the wing-T to a no-huddle shotgun spread. He won a state championship in Nevada 10 years ago with the veer option.

Trojan fans can expect to see their team run some veer option, as Raft River certainly has the quickness in the backfield with Anderson and Emmet Boden to execute it. Also, Poole plans to incorporate some shotgun spread.

As Poole settles in to the new gig, he says he appreciates the positive attitude of Raft River's kids.

"The kids are working hard and wanting to be successful," Poole said.

She recovered from a 76 on the opening day to card a 73 and finish third in the girls' 16-19 division.

"Yesterday I didn't play very well, and I was just trying to get back into the top two," said Harr, who missed her goal by one stroke. "I thought I played OK today, and I'm going to use the whole fall to work on staying focused for the school season."

Harr played with the Castleford boys team as a sophomore because the Wolves didn't have a full girls team, and helped them repeat as state champions. She won't get that chance this year, because the Idaho High School Activities Association changed the wording of the rule that allowed her to compete with the boys last season. Attendance Up as MLB Contender Count Rises

The extra playoff spot in Major League Baseball this season has thickened the races, with several teams well within October's reach despite taking mediocre records into the stretch run.

That's having an impact in the seats - as has some good weather, signs of life in the economy and other factors. MLB-wide attendance is up again, about 4 percent from 2011.

"There are more teams that have a shot, so it's given teams a lot of hope," said Lou DePaoli, chief market ing officer for the Pittsburgh Pirates.

MLB's eight best season attendance totals have all come in the last eight years, and this one is on pace to keep that run going.

The major league average of 31,516 through Monday was up 4.3 percent from 2011's final average of 30,229, according to STATS

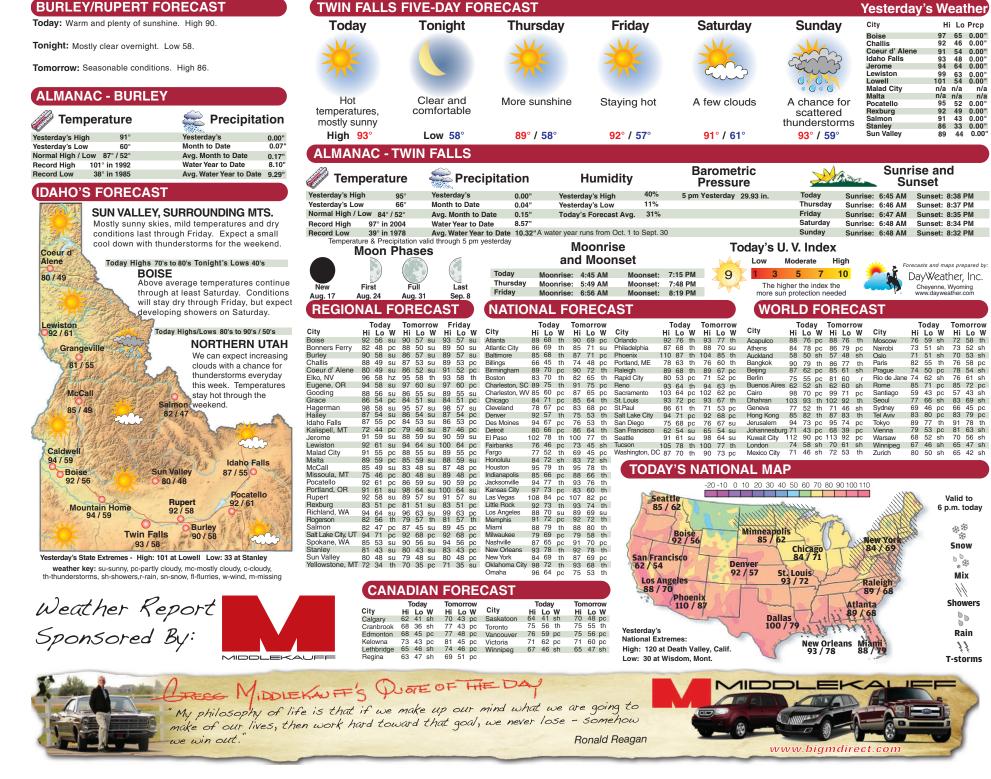

LLC, but remains below the pre-recession highs of 32,785 in 2007 and 32,528 the following year. The average usually declines in September, after schools are back in session.

The defending World Series champion St. Louis Cardinals have been selling an average of 3,383 more tickets per game from last year, even after losing megastar Albert Pujols. They're on track to hit the 3 million mark for the 14th time in the last 15 seasons.

The National Leagueleading Cincinnati Reds got a preseason bump from new contracts for stars Joey Votto, Brandon Phillips and Sean Marshall and the trade for Mat Latos, and they're up 1,296 per game. Their average of 29,192 tickets sold per game is on pace to beat the Great American Ball Park record from the stadium's opening in 2003.

game last year. They also had difficulty rushing the passer and in the Big Sky, a passing league, that's a recipe for disaster.

A key to rebuilding that area will be how soon Florida State transfer Terrance Carey is ruled eligible. Carey is 6-foot, 300 pounds and would give the Bengals a true nose tackle, something they haven't had in years. "We needed to get big up front and the arrival of Terrance will help with that," Kramer said.

Another secondary area that looks to be improved is safety. Because of injuries and other situations Kramer was forced to use anybody he could in those spots last year. Players were undersized and out of position. Recruiting and the return of all four cornerbacks including preseason All-Conference pick Donovan Henley will help.

ISU now has a full roster of 92 players and because all NCAA-imposed academic sanctions are over they have a full complement of practice and workout time, both should go a long way to reducing the crippling injuries that made the program look like a M*A*S*H unit the past few seasons.

The newly expanded Big Sky Conference brings changes in the schedule and new opponents, but four wins is reachable. That would double the number of wins Kramer had in his first season and show that real progress is being made under his watch.

A public hearing for consideration of the proposed budget for the Jerome County Urban Renewal Agency for the fiscal year that begins October 1, 2012, and ends September 30, 2013, will be held at the Jerome County Commissioner Chambers, 300 N. Lincoln, Room 300, Jerome, Idaho, on Thursday, August 23, 2012, at 12:00 noon, pursuant to Idaho Code 50-1002. Written or oral comments about the proposed budget are welcome. Written comment may be submitted prior to the meeting to: Jerome County Urban Renewal Agency, c/o Michael Mapes, Treasurer, County of Jerome, 300 North Lincoln, Room 300, Jerome, ID 83338.

The Agency budget funds the programs, services and capital projects that the Agency Board has determined to be important to meet the Agency's strategic goals as outlined in the Jerome County Crossroads Urban Renewal Project Urban Renewal Plan.

During 2008 and 2010 the Agency worked on the preparation of the original urban renewal plan and the subsequent plan amendment. The Agency expenses were limited to legal expenses, consultant expenses, and other planning expenses. Those activities were funded through an initial commitment from the County of Jerome not to exceed $30,000. Expenses through June 30, 2009, totaled approximately $17,000. Under Idaho Code §50-1002, the two prior fiscal years' information is required for publication of the tentative budget. The budget below shows the actual expenses for FY 2011 and budgeted and actual expenses through July 1, 2012. For FY 2012, the Agency's revenues were again limited to the County's advance and Minimal tax increment revenue. Activities during FY 2012 have been limited to discussions and negotiations with a developer within the Project Area concerning public improvement infrastructure and reimbursement.

This public hearing on the proposed budget is required for formal adoption of the FY 2013 budget. The proposed expenditures and revenues for FY 2013 have been tentatively approved by the cy Roard of Direc

TDAT® THE ACES ON BR

'Lo! I uncover the land Which I hid of old time in the West, As the sculptor uncovers the statue

When he has wrought his best..."

— Ralph Waldo Emerson

"Cover an honor with an honor" is a well-known bridge adage, but as with most such rules, there are plenty of exceptions. Today's declarer exploited East's knee-jerk reaction to cover. But perhaps you should start by concealing the East-West cards, and only then make your plan on the lead of the diamond ace followed by a shift to the club five. (Yes, a spade switch would have been the killer.)

In four hearts, declarer won with dummy's ace, drew the outstanding trumps with the ace and king, and astutely played the spade jack from the dummy. East played the king ... and the rest is history.

East could not attack clubs to advantage, so he continued with another diamond. Declarer ruffed in the dummy and played a spade to the queen and West's ace. West played another club, but declarer won the king, played a spade to his 10, crossed back to dummy with a trump, and cashed the spade nine, discarding his club loser.

When you think about it, it is hard to see how covering the spade jack could gain. Unfortunately for him, East did not think about it!

The "power of the closed hand" is worth remembering. All things being equal, it often works well to play toward the closed hand rather than toward the dummy. It generally makes it much harder for the defenders to decide whether to win or duck when they cannot see what third hand will play.

ANSWER: When your partner makes a one-no-trump overcall, play similar methods to what you would do if he opens the bidding with that call. So is it best to play for penalties here, or to make a takeout bid? I feel that when the opponents bid and raise a suit, double should be takeout. It still lets you catch the opponents speeding when partner has a penalty double of diamonds. Double of a new suit bid by your RHO can sensibly be played as penalty.

Times News

Today is Wednesday, Aug. 15, the 228th day of 2012. There are 138 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight:

On Aug. 15, 1483, the Sistine Chapel was consecrated by Pope Sixtus IV. On this date:

In 1057, Macbeth, King of Scots, was killed in battle by Malcolm, the eldest son of King Duncan, whom Macbeth had slain.

In 1769, Napoleon Bonaparte was born on the island of Corsica.

In 1812, the Battle of Fort Dearborn took place as Potawatomi warriors attacked a U.S. military garrison of about 100 people. (Most of the garrison was killed, while the remainder were taken prisoner.)

In 1914, the Panama Canal opened to traffic.

In 1935, humorist Will Rogers and aviator Wiley Post were killed when their airplane crashed near Point Barrow in the Alaska Territory.

In 1945, in a radio address, Japan's Emperor Hirohito announced that his country had accepted terms of surrender for ending World War II.

In 1947. India became independent after some 200 years of British rule.

In 1961, as workers began constructing a Berlin Wall made of concrete, East German soldier Conrad Schumann leapt to freedom over a tangle of barbed wire in a scene captured in a famous photograph.

In 1969, the Woodstock Music and Art Fair opened in upstate New York.

In 1971, President Richard Nixon announced a 90-day freeze on wages, prices and rents. Bahrain declared its independence from Britain.

In 1974, a gunman attempted to shoot South Korean President Park Chunghee during a speech; although Park was unhurt, his wife was struck and killed, along with a teenage girl. (The gunman was later executed.)

In 1998, 29 people were killed by a car bomb that tore apart the center of Omagh (OH'-mah), Northern Ireland; a splinter group calling itself the Real IRA claimed responsibility.

Ten years ago: President George W. Bush, using Mount Rushmore as a dramatic backdrop, pressed Congress to give him a flexible, fast-moving homeland security department. Five years ago: Former NBA referee Tim Donaghy (DAH'-nuh-hee) pleaded guilty to felony charges for taking cash payoffs from gamblers and betting on games he'd officiated in a scandal that rocked the league. (Donaghy spent 13 months in federal prison.) A magnitude-8 earthquake in Peru's southern desert killed some 540 people. Master jazz percussionist Max Roach died in New York at age 83. One year ago: A relentless barrage of bombings in Iraq killed 63 people, striking 17 cities from northern Sunni areas to the southern Shiite heartland. Jim Thome (TOH'-mee) hit his 600th home run an inning after he hit No. 599 to help the Minnesota Twins outslug the Detroit Tigers 9-6. (Thome became the eighth major league player to reach 600.)

NEW ENGINES and RE-MANUFAC-TURED ENGINES and TRANS-MISSIONS. USED ENGINES, TRANSMISSIONS, transfer cases,

DEAR ABBY: My grandfather recently went to jail for having child pornography on his laptop. The lawyers and everyone else say he molested me and my sister. I almost had to testify.

I'm only 13 and have talked with people, but they don't get it. I don't want to talk to a therapist or anything, but my mom and aunt think I should.

Should I? I feel really sad right now. I first learned about this two years ago, but it still hurts. I kind of feel uncomfortable talking about it to people other than my best friends. I write sad poetry to express my feelings and it helps some.

I don't know what to do. It's like I'm stuck in a rut. What should I be feeling? Do I need to talk to someone? Should I open up more?

> - UNSURE OF MY FEELINGS

DEAR UNSURE: If your grandfather is in jail, and "the lawyers and everyone else" say he molested you and your sister, then he probably did. The two of you may not have understood what was happening because he led you to believe what he was doing was normal behavior. (This is standard operating procedure for a molester.)

Part of the reason for your sadness may be that your trust was violated. Talking to a therapist is not a punishment. It's actually a privilege, and I hope that you and your sister will take advantage of it. A therapist can give you more insight than your friends can give you.

Your mom and your aunt have your best interests at heart, so please listen to them. A therapist can help you open up more, and your sadness will dissipate.

DEAR ABBY: I love my wife very much, but over the years we have drifted apart. At one time we considered separating, but we went to a marriage counselor and

My wife is the only woman in the world for me, but my feelings are at the bottom of her priorities. I give her nightly foot massages and tell her how much she means to me. She never returns any pleasures. She has told me that sex is not enjoyable for her and she does it only to please me. I love her dearly,

IF AUGUST 15 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Your dreams can come true when you use common sense. Right now, you're unlikely to obtain advice from people who have your best interests at heart. In late November, make key career or financial decisions or launch any new business plan with every indication of success. That might also be a good time for a vacation or romantic fling, since you are open to acting out your fantasies. You are wiser than usual next April, so that is a fabulous time to make informed choices and decisions or to ask for favors from worthy individuals.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): There is safety in numbers. Adventures in the outdoors, while surrounded by friends, would probably suit your mood. You are alert to any challenge and eager to flaunt your physical prowess at any opportunity.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Unruffled feathers feather your nest. Accept challenges as a mental exercise and competitions as a test of your skill. Be as objective as possible when engaged in a debate and remain cool under pressure.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Prepare and be poised for praise. A few pleasant surprises could brighten your day. When you embrace every change or upset with the attitude that it is an adventure, everything runs more smoothly.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Pop the popularity up a notch. You have special powers and talents lurking beneath the surface that you can use to charm others. The late afternoon and evening is perfect for romantic overtures.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Being a tower of strength is your special talent. Someone close to you might seek you out to sort out a problem. You may be sensitive to the mood of others and feel well equipped to referee any disputes.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): "A" is for "adventure." Drive your car with the top down. It might be a better day for mental pursuits than physical ones, but the object of your affection should be ready, able and willing this evening.

You are the bee's knees. Everyone wants to get closer when attracted by your magnetic charm. A bit of indecision about financial matters is a signal that you should wait to make changes or take action.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Your air of mystery could prove fascinating to a significant other. Changes in plans are entirely possible, but don't let this ruffle your feathers. Things will work out to your advantage in the long run.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You are an angel of mercy. You can protect the weak and sustain the strong. Rest your weary wings today and bask in the admiration of someone special. Late-day trysts should run smoothly.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Your significant other might be restless to "do" something. You might even be shocked by uninhibited behavior. Amorous antics and fiery entanglements could be filling up the pages of your datebook.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You are drawn to the unusual. New contacts may tantalize you with mysterious ways and pique your interest. You are somewhat gullible right now so check carefully before making a commitment.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Love and marriage go together like a horse and carriage, or even like butter and toast. Your ability to blend two pieces into a desirable whole is a trait that attracts others
