GOODING • The cowboys were nervous a good hour before bronc riding began Thursday at the Gooding Pro Rodeo.

They gathered away from the crowd, under the announcer's stand, and stretched their legs like hurdlers

"All the big names are here," said Cody Kiser of Carson City, Nev.

He has seven years as a pro bareback rider and wasn't letting the topflight entries scare him. "We came here to win, right?" he said.

Kaycee Feild, 25, of Spanish Fork, Utah, was getting his game face on, too. South Hills Fire Contained, but New Starts Worry Crews

BY ALISON GENE SMITH AND NATE POPPINO

alismith@magicvalley.com npoppino@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • Fires in the Minidoka Complex continue to smolder but are close to being completely contained.

Meanwhile, new starts Thursday near Shoshone and Ketchum kept fire crews busy.

A 350-acre fire was growing west of Ketchum Thursday evening, in the same area as the memorable Castle Rock Fire of 2007.

The Enclosure Creek Fire featured torching and spotting behavior, said Julie Thomas, spokeswoman for the Sawtooth National Forest. No homes were directly threatened yet.

A BLM and a Forest Service helicopter were among resources responding to the fire, with further resources ordered - including a Type 1 hand crew and a MAFFS aerial firefighting system, Thomas said. But smoke in the air caused problems for

Convicted Sex Offender Gets 25 to Life

BY ALISON GENE SMITH alismith@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • Aaron Frandsen allegedly had strong words when asked his feelings about the crimes of which he was convicted - sexual abuse of a minor.

"If somebody does that, they should be taken into the alley and be shot," he reportedly said during a pre-sentence evaluation. "It's reprehensible."

Twin Falls County 5th District Judge Randy Stoker said that statement was the most significant thing Frandsen said affecting Stoker's decision to sentence him to 25 years to life in prison for 10 counts of lewd and lascivious conduct with a minor under 16.

"The only question on my mind is whether or not you should see the light of day again," Stoker said after reading Frandsen's statement at an Aug. 10 sentencing hearing.

A jury convicted Frandsen, 34, of raping a female relative starting in 2006, when the girl was 7 or 8 years

Frandsen was indicted by a separate grand jury on Dec. 19. He has appealed his sentence in a filing

S&P 500 Creeps Near Four-year High; Cisco Surges

NEW YORK (AP) • Encouraging earnings from Cisco and hopeful signs in a housing report lifted the stock market Thursday. The gains nudged the Standard & Poor's 500 index near the four-year high it reached earlier this year.

Cisco Systems, the world's largest maker of computer networking equipment, led the 30 stocks in the Dow Jones industrial average, surging 10 percent. Cisco beat profit expectations late Wednesday and raised its quarterly dividend to 14 cents per share from 8 cents. Cisco gained $1.67 to $19.02.

CSI Wraps Up Refugee Summer School Session

BY JULIE WOOTTON

TWIN FALLS • Hasti Abdolazimfard took the backing off a foam flower sticker, then smiled as she stuck it on a picture frame. The elementary school student from Iran chatted with another refugee student sitting next to her in a room at Lighthouse Christian Fellowship in Twin Falls.

The art project - decorating a picture frame to display a group photo was one activity Wednesday during the College of Southern Idaho Refugee Center's summer school program.

Across town, middle and high school students watched a planetarium show at CSI's Herrett Center for Arts and Science.

Then, they explored the museum. Umesh Khanal, 14, and a few other students watched a coin spin in circles inside a spiral funnel.

"It's fun," Khanal said about the day's activities. He arrived in Twin Falls about three years ago.

Peter Darji, 16, who has been in the United States for nearly a year, said he liked the planetarium show and it was "cool to see the stars?

It's the fourth year for the refugee summer program. But over the years, the focus has evolved.

Michelle Pospichal, match grant coordinator for the CSI Refugee Center, said the program shifted to include more social and cultural activities.

"It's a great opportunity for the kids," she said.

Academics are incorporated into the program, but Pospichal said it's beneficial for students to have more field trips and guest speakers.

Students can generally pick up English language and academic skills fairly quickly once they get to school, she said.

But it can be challenging to adapt to a new school environment. Pospichal said finding common ground with American students before school starts is helpful.

"It makes life so much easier," she said.

The four-week summer school session comes to a close today.

Most students in the program arrived in Twin Falls within the past year - and some, just weeks ago. Pospichal said students can only participate in the summer program one time.

In addition to CSI's program, some also go to summer school through the Twin Falls School District. Enrollment in CSI's summer program fluctuates from year to year.

"It started out small and it's grown since then," Pospichal said.

Numbers this year are down a little from previous summers. That's because there have been more single refugees arriving this year

This summer, about 15 incoming kindergarten through fifth-grade students are in the summer school, as well as about 25 middle- and high-school-

During the summer session, younger children are learning basic English vocabulary through methods such as singing songs.

Pospichal said they also learn some school skills they'll need, such as raising their hands.

Children also get a chance to try new foods.

"We did tortilla chips and salsa, which is completely new to them," Pospichal

With donated snacks and supplies, she said the cost of running the summer program is low. Lighthouse Christian Fellowship provides use of its space — as well as busing - for no charge.

This summer, there are 41 volunteers – about enough for one per child. Many come back to help out with summer school year after year.

Volunteers range from elementary school students to adults.

Having younger volunteers means refugee students can connect with a few of their peers, Pospichal said.

T.F. Co. Responds to Gambrel Lawsuit

BY ALISON GENE SMITH alismith@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • Five Twin Falls County Jail deputies have denied accusations by a former inmate alleging several deputies attacked him, causing serious, permanent injuries while he was serving a 185-day sentence for driving under the influence.

The response to a federal lawsuit filed by Kody Gambrel, 25, was filed Tuesday in U.S. District Court.

In the response, the defendants, including the county and the five deputies accused in the Jan. 29 incident, deny using more force than they thought was necessary against Gambrel. They also deny Gambrel suffered more than minor injuries and say that not only was Gambrel not denied medical treatment, but that Gambrel refused to allow medical assessment or treatment for his injuries. The defendants also deny allegations that Gambrel's medical treatment was offered on the condition that he lie about how he was injured.

Twin Falls County Sheriff's Office spokeswoman Lori Stewart said the sheriff's office will not comment on an ongoing lawsuit.

Gambrel, 25, was charged with three counts of battery on deputies in the same incident. He was acquitted on two of the counts in a jury trial. The jury was hung on the third charge, which prosecutors then dropped. A special prosecutor handled that trial, due to the Twin Falls County Prosecutor's Office's past relationship with Gambrel's father, former Twin Falls police detective Curtis Gam-

In the suit, filed in late July, Gambrel named deputies Andrew Heikkila, Bradley Terry, Stacey Thomas, John Hubbard and Jimmy Adams. According to the suit, Gambrel said he was forced to undergo a strip search during which Thomas told Gambrel he had a "nice body" and should consider a career in homosexual pornography. According to the suit, Gambrel felt threatened and reported the comments to jail

In the county's response, the deputies deny any sexual advances were made and said the strip search was part of Twin Falls County Sheriff's Office policy.

Later, Gambrel asked to speak to Heikkila alone, stating he felt threatened by other inmates in the annex he lived in who said they were going to sexually assault him, the suit states.

According to an affidavit given by Heikkila in 2011 relating to the original battery case against Gambrel, Heikkila stated Gambrel told him other inmates found out he was Mormon and were threatening to sexually assault him. Gambrel told Heikkila he couldn't live in conditions like that, and Heikkila decided it would be best for Gambrel not to return to the annex, the affidavit states.

In the response to the suit, the defendants admit Gambrel contacted Heikkila to speak privately, but deny it was about the alleged threats.

"Plaintiff did not tell Defendant Heikkila that the reason he wished to speak with him was a result of being threatened with sexual assault, rather he informed Defendant Heikkila that because he was not of the same religion as other inmates of Annex One, he wished to be transferred," the response states.

In the response, the defendants also deny they destroyed or failed to preserve any relevant audio or video recordings of the incident.

The county and deputies state they are not liable for any of the injuries and also state if any damages were sustained by Gambrel, it was because of his own negligence, acts or omissions.

Gambrel is demanding a jury trial and payment for his injuries and the alleged violation of his constitutional pilots, and fire resources in the region were already stretched thin due to the high amount of activity in recent weeks.

Also, the U.S. Bureau of Land Management reported a new fire starting south of Shoshone at Notch Butte. The 100-acre fire was reported just before 5 p.m., and an investigator was on scene to determine its cause.

The Shoshone Rural Fire Department joined five BLM engines, one water tender, one dozer, one air attack unit and two single engine air tankers responding to the flames.

The Cave Canyon Fire in the South Hills was contained Thursday at 4 p.m. at 88,909 acres, said K.J. Pollock with the Great Basin Team 1 interagency fire squad, while the Deer Hollow Fire was 95 percent contained at 5,440 acres Thursday evening. The estimated control time for both fires is still Aug. 22, Pollock said.

While crews work to get the fires under control, Rock Creek Canyon will remain closed through the weekend, but could open early next week, according to an update from the U.S. Forest Service.

According to the update, neither fire grew and crews are holding lines. Low moisture levels and hot, dry weather means the threat of increased fire behavior is still there.

Burning pockets of vegetation within the perimeter of the fires are still producing smoke columns, the update

Command of both fires will be handed over to the Sawtooth National Forest at 6 a.m. today, and the command of the contained Hot Well Fire will return to the Twin Falls District Bureau of Land Management.

A Burned Area Emergency Response team, known as BAER, has arrived on scene.

"They're doing some assessments to see what type of rehab work will need to be done within the burn area," Pollock said.

Large Forest Fires Roll On

Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter and Lori Otter attended a community meeting in Featherville regarding the Trinity Ridge Fire Thursday, and those affected will be able to attend a community meeting in Idaho City today at 6 p.m. at the Idaho City Community Hall. Fire managers will be present to give an overview of the fire in northern Elmore County.

The Elmore County Sheriff's Office re-evaluated mandatory road closures near the fire Thursday and allowed residents to access their property from 9 a.m. - 9 p.m.

All roads to Atlanta are still closed except for fire support personnel.

Crews continued to focus on structure protection in Featherville and Pine.

The Federal Emergency Management Agency authorized the use of federal funds to help with the costs of fighting the Trinity Ridge Fire, according to an announcement from the Idaho Bureau of Homeland Security.

Road and area closures throughout the region continue. Here are the details:

MINIDOKA COMPLEX FIRES

Cave Canyon: At 88,909 acres in the South Hills west of Oakley, this fire is fully contained. It is expected to be completely out by Aug. 22.

Deer Hollow: At 5,440 acres near the Utah border, it was 95 percent contained Thursday.

OTHER FIRES

Halstead: At 77,251 acres and 3 percent contained, 18 miles northwest of Stanley. A 48-hour evacuation notice has been given to residents and campers along the Highway 75 corridor from Sunbeam to Lower Stanley. The line around the Camp Bradley Boy Scout camp is holding. Full containment is still estimated for Oct. 16.

Trinity Ridge: Though no evacuations have yet been ordered for Pine or Featherville, the road through both towns has been large ly closed off, except for residents gathering belongings. The fire was measured at 69,216 acres and 5 percent contained. Full containment is estimated for Oct. 1.

CLOSURES:

Minidoka Complex: Rock Creek Canyon remains closed at the Sawtooth National Forest boundary. Other area closures are also in effect: View maps at www.fs.usda.gov/sawtooth or call the Minidoka Ranger District office at 208-678-0430.

Trinity Ridge: Area campgrounds have already been evacuated. Residents of Atlanta with respiratory health concerns have been advised to evacuate. Many area roads are closed, including the route through Pine and Featherville. Halstead: A wide range of closures are in effect, including for all access points to the Cape Horn

Area, the Seafoam Bubble and the full length of the Pinyon Peak Road. State highways 21 and 75 remain open. For a full list of closures, visit 75 percent of "eligible" fire suppression costs, especially targeting costs of protecting structures in Pine and Featherville that Elmore County would have had to absorb.

North of Stanley, fire officials issued a 48-hour evacuation notice to residents and campers along the Highway 75 corridor from Sunbeam to Lower Stanley, not including Stanley or Lower Stanley, according to updates provided online.

The fire measured more than 77,000 acres Thursday and has grown at about 10,000 acres a day, according to fire officials. Crews are hoping it will lose some energy as it meets the edge of the area burned in 2006 by the Potato Fire.

One of Lowe's competitors, a rangy bronc rider from Utah, likened the Gooding rodeo to the NBA, saying, "This is the big time."

At age 29, Lowe is older than many of the other cowboys, but has been lucky to suffer just a few knocks over the years. He hopes to stay in the sport a few more years "if I can stay healthy?

Fans were streaming in and filling the stands 45 minutes before things got rolling. Fathers carried young sons on their shoulders and moms held their little girls' hands. Most wore cowboys hats of one kind or another, and boots. Boots were everywhere.

The entrants were invited to chow down on hamburgers and several tasty desserts being served in a picnic area. Those not entered in a Thursday event could afford to relax and talk with friends they see frequently on the summer circuit as they move from town to town across the West.

Among the fans waiting patiently for the first event to start were Kim Hickman and her 79-year-old mother, Wilma, both of Wendell. They each carried a small American flag and Kim nursed a beer on the warm evening.

"We just like cowboys,

Kaycee Feild's gear sits out at the Gooding Pro Rodeo Thursday in Gooding, dirt, horses and bulls," said Kim, who has attended a half-dozen rodeos.

Her mother was about to see her first rodeo, but had no trouble agreeing about the lure of horses and cowboys. She added one attraction to the list, though.

"We also like the tight jeans," Wilma said with a laugh.

His charges included "virtually every type of lewd and lascivious conduct that an adult could commit upon a minor child," Stoker said at the sentencing, adding he'd seen nothing close to remorse from Frandsen after the jury's verdict on April 5.

"This man molested this child in multiple ways for multiple years. She couldn't get away from him," Suzanne Craig, Twin Falls County chief criminal deputy prosecutor, said at the hearing.

This case "screams for a fixed life sentence," Craig

Stoker disagreed on that point, suggesting there is still a chance Frandsen could be rehabilitated. But the judge said he believed Frandsen should be monitored by law enforcement for the rest of his life.

Defense attorney Sam Beus spoke to the court about Frandsen's military service, solid employment history and his cooperation with court compliance.

"I'm asking the court not to write him off," Beus said. Beus asked Stoker to consider a shorter sentence to allow Frandsen to be assessed for possible treatment later.

At the hearing, Frandsen

"I need to rectify it the best I can," Frandsen said. "I ask for the chance, eventually, to get something going again."

Frandsen's young victim, now 13, also read a statement at the hearing.

"When I was seven, my life changed in a way that will always affect me until the day I die," she said.

CSI Board

"CSI is really dear to me,"

Nelsen has served on the Jerome Planning and Zoning Commission for 14 years. He's also a member of the Mid-Snake Water Resource Commission.

When it comes to the CSI board, Nelsen said the college needs someone who represents the north side of the Magic Valley - in particular, Jerome County, which with Twin Falls County forms the college's district.

He said he's also concerned about the cost of going to college, even though CSI's tuition rates are low compared with other schools.

Nelsen is the second candidate this week who has announced his intent to run for the board.

Former CSI professor Jan Mittleider filed her petition Wednesday for Donna Brizee's seat. Brizee also isn't seeking re-election.

Frost confirmed Thursday that he won't run for another term. He served for six years.

"I just think it's time for someone else to be on the board," he said, noting he has enjoyed the position.

Frost said he'd like to see someone from Jerome County fill his vacated posi-

"This is my country. It's where my roots are. It feels great to know that the country that I call home is finally accepting me."

Illegal immigrant Nathaly Uribe in a statement as thousands of young illegal immigrants lined up Wednesday hoping for the right to work legally in America without being deported under the Obama administration's new program known as Deferred Action for Childhood Arrivals.

OUR VIEW

Voters -They Exist for a Reason

espite the quirky, combative nature of politics today, the basics of government remain simple: Elected representatives meet to carry out the will of the people.

The residents of Buhl, for instance, made it very clear where they stand on school levies. Every year for the past three years, the school board proposes one. Every of those three years, residents voted it down.

This year on Aug. 28, the school district will ask for yet another levy, requesting the smallest amount yet — $400,000 over two years — in hopes that voters will find it more palatable.

We certainly hope they will. The editorial board has a history of supporting education funding, and we think the amount is reasonable for a school district currently without a levv.

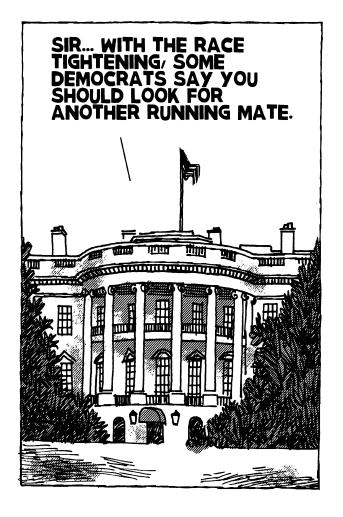

But we also think elected officials and public servants need to listen to voters. In this case, the residents of Buhl have made plain their desires: cut spending and stay within your budget. So far, the school district hasn't listened.

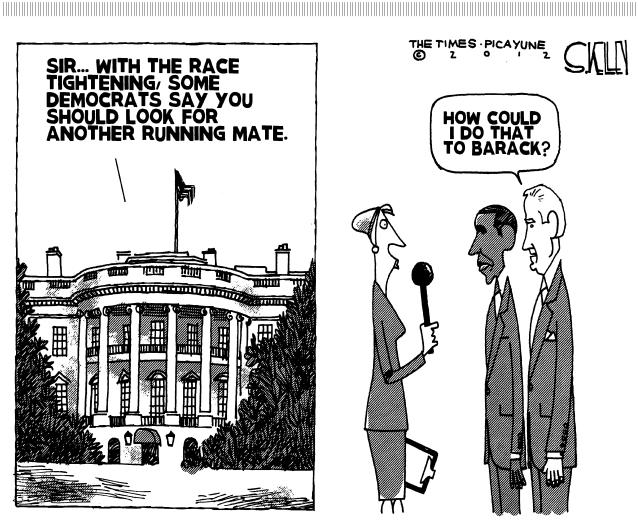

"We need to have more money to balance the budget," Superintendent Byron Stutzman said in a recent Times-News article. He reported the district currently spends about $300,000 to $400,000 over revenues. So far that extra money has been coming from their reserves, but that well is nearly tapped with only $700,000 remaining.

What happens if the levy doesn't pass this time? Stutzman plans to deficit spend for another year.

Stop the madness. There's no sense in a district going broke simply because it won't listen to voters. Stutzman and the school board need to realize a levy may never be approved and come up with a more long-term solution. Yes, Buhl students will suffer through fewer teachers and activities, but should the levy fail again, it's time to make those tough choices. Who knows? When the theater doors close forever, the Friday night lights wink out and young families move to Filer because a quality education becomes untenable, maybe then Buhl residents will be willing to support a levy.

In the meantime, the residents have made it clear they want the district to live within its current means. And voters are the ones thinking longterm. Superintendents can seek employment elsewhere and school board members can step down or decide not to run for re-election. If the district goes broke due to overspending, the people of Buhl won't be able to walk away.

Thank You for Donating Wheelchairs to Veterans

I would like to give thanks to the good people who have donated wheelchairs, walkers, canes, shower benches, raised toilet seats, etc.

I go to yard sales and tell people that if they don't sell their used hospital equipment to call me and I will come back, get the equipment and give it to a Purple Heart Veteran team. Many people often say take the equipment now.

Robert Wagner of Jerome, a life member of the Military Order of the Purple Heart, Veterans of Foreign Wars and Disabled American Veterans, cleans them up and even repairs the equipment and takes them to Cheryl Ringenberg at the Department of Motor Vehicles. Any veteran or spouse of a veteran who needs equipment should contact Cheryl.

One of the donated wheelchairs was given to the wife of an Iraq veteran who went across the stage in the wheelchair when she graduated from the College of Southern Idaho!

Again, I thank people who help veterans and their families who are often financially strapped.

Beloved Form of Literature Seems to Be Slipping Away

Do you enjoy reading or writing short stories, flash stories? If so, join with the rest of us who enjoy and share that form of storytelling.

The problem is that a four-leaf clover is easier to find than a good book of short stories. Sure, I'm prejudiced because I write both short and flash stories, but when I considered selling through Barnes and Noble, I ran into a wall. It has no short story section. It has an essay section and space for memoirs and poetry, but no designated place for short stories.

In the early part of the last century, it was a popular form, due in large part to writers such as Twain, Kipling, O. Henry, Stevenson. But today, the style is bigger than ever. Mostly in magazines, both mixed in with non-fiction pieces or as anthologies.

And with our society moving at a much faster pace than it did just a few years ago, few people have the time, inclination or interest to read a contemporary novel cover to cover, so they read a little, place a bookmark and try to pick up the thread of the plot when next they try once again to read for pleasure.

Don't ask me how one keeps their place when on Nook or Kindle. If one has to keep a score pad marked with advancing page numbers, it kind of refutes the concept of electronic viewing. I'm sure I will eventually succumb to the ethereal concept, but not until I'm forced, just as I was forced to try anchovies; and yes, I hated that, too.

ONLINE COMMENTS

The conversation continues 24/7 on Magicvalley.com:

Online readers often take the time to post kind words in response to obituaries. A reader posted on the obituary for Rose Pope:

Barbara Freeman: "I worked for a spa in Twin Falls, and met Rose when her daughter brought her in for a massage. She was dressed in flannel and jeans...hairpinned back, and was such a delight to meet. When I discovered that she had grown up in Montana, was interested to know if she knew Ivan Doig, who was a favorite author...and she had grown up with him. She had so many delightful stories about this man...and herchildhood town. This inspired me to connect her with another friend, who also liked Doig, He would go to visit her in Idaho. I had relocated to California.

SHe also emailed me and kept in touch until a couple of years

I only met her once, but remember her so well. She informed me on the table that day about the Yellow Rose of Texas and how it was written for a lovely black woman IN MONTANA ... not Texas, and proceeded to sing it to me while I was massaging

She was such a delight, and although only meeting her once...I will never forget her. She was the type of woman you would want to know in your life ... interesting, filled with integrity, full of life, and just a wonderful woman! I loved reading the obit about her, and found myself laughing ... what a woman! I know she will be missed..."

Why Isn't Anyone Talking About Afghanistan?

emember the war in Afghanistan? You know: It was the "good war," fought in response to al-Qaida's attack on 9/11 and the Taliban's refusal to turn them in, and subsequently justified by 1) the need to prevent future terrorist "safe havens," 2) the desire to liberate Afghan women, 3) the imperative to bring democracy and modern governance to an underdeveloped tribal society, and 4) as always, the need to preserve American "credibility."

Writing on the New Yorker's website, reporter Dexter Filkins warns that our long and costly effort there is likely to be a failure. We're getting out, he says, but there is little sign that we will leave behind a properly functioning Afghan state. He notes that neither Barack Obama nor Mitt Romney are saying much about the war in this campaign (in part because there is about an angstrom's worth of difference in their respective positions). But he says "You can bet that, whoever the president is, he'll be talking about it [after we're gone]."

Three points. First, it is not really news to hear that our Afghan project is failing, because the effort to impose a centralized state from the outside was probably doomed from the start. It's possible that a focused international effort from 2002 onward would have succeeded (and especially if the geniuses in the Bush administration hadn't taken their eye off the ball in order to invade Iraq), but the odds are against it. Plenty of people have been warning for years now that this war was going to end up a failure, which is why some of us opposed Obama's decision to escalate the war in 2009 and called for disengagement instead.

Stephen M. Walt

Second, even if Filkins' pessimism is right, it is not clear why the next president will want or will have to spend a lot of time worrying about Afghanistan. If Afghanistan were truly a vital strategic interest, it wouldn't be all that hard to convince Americans to pony up the resources to stay. But the fact is that Afghanistan isn't a vital interest: It's a land-locked and impoverished country thousands of miles from our shores. The only reason that we went there in the first place is because a handful of misguided crackpots decided to hide out there, and subsequently got very lucky in staging a dramatic attack on U.S. soil. Once they were scattered and/or killed, Afghanistan reverted to being the strategic backwater it has always been. The American people understand this, yet Obama had to concoct a face-saving strategy of escalating first in order to withdraw later. If the next president whoever it is - is smart, he'll spend as much time worrying about Afghanistan as Carter and Reagan spent worrying about Vietnam. Which is to say: hardly Third, this whole sad episode should really be seen as a colossal failure of the American national security establishment. The futility of the Afghan campaign was apparent years ago, and we've heard plenty of testimony from returning soldiers, diplomats, and aid workers that the ISAF effort wasn't likely to work. Even those who continued to defend the effort usually had to admit that success was going to require a decade or more of additional commitment and hundreds of billions of dollars in additional aid. Yet our national security apparatus couldn't reach the conclusion to withdraw without first escalating the war, and without wasting more soldiers' lives and a few hundred billion more dollars.

I've offered my own thoughts on why it's hard to end costly wars here; today I'll simply say it's even harder when the culture of the national security establishment rewards hawkish postures, and tends to view anyone who counsels moderation or prudence as some sort of weak-willed idealist. Nothing does more than hard-headed and realistic assessments of the costs and benefits of alternative course of action, even when the writing was on the wall a long time ago.

Residents Worry, Wait as Fires Burn

BY SHANNON DININNY Associated Press

YAKIMA, Wash. (AP) • Some residents forced to flee a large central Washington fire were allowed to return to their homes Thursday, while firefighters in rural Idaho protected two threatened towns and thousands of crew members worked wildfires across California. The Taylor Bridge Fire about 75 miles east of Seattle has burned across an estimated 22,000 acres, roughly 35 square miles, of diverse terrain, ranging from dry grasses to sagebrush and thick timber.

The fire was 25 percent contained. Fire commanders said one firefighter was recovering at home for a few days after suffering minor facial burns Wednesday.

The fire started Monday at a bridge construction site. Officials have said at least 70 homes have burned. About 840 firefighters have been assigned to the fire.

Evacuation levels at the fire's southeast corner were lowered Thursday afternoon, allowing some residents to return home. But exactly how many people were allowed back in was unclear, and the area affected by the new advisory comprises just a small part of the burned area.

Laurie Plut said she doesn't feel out of danger yet. The fire has been right at the timber line for two days, just beyond the wood cabin she and her husband have been building over the past 12 years in a collection of 40 lots, all but five of them vacation cabins.

"We're still worried. It's extremely frustrating, but the firefighters have been working hard," she said by telephone. "And we have to love them."

In California, firefighters across the state were monitoring whether potential thunderstorms and strong winds Thursday could make their work more difficult as they gain ground on several wildfires.

In Northern California, crews made progress along the northern edge of the Chips Fire in the Plumas National Forest. The blaze has threatened more than 900 homes and prompted voluntary evacuations. It has burned 67 square miles and was about 20 percent contained.

It's among the largest of nearly a dozen major wildfires burning across California that more than 9,000 firefighters are battling.

More than 100 homes remained under evacuation orders in the San Diego County communities of Ranchita and San Felipe, where two wildfires caused by lightning were creeping through rugged brush lands.

Time to Count Students MOSCOW (AP) • State edinstitutions nationwide. Idaho schools have ucation officials on Thursday agreed to give Idaho's universities and colleges more time to submit student enrollment counts, which have been calculated on the 10th day of each new semester for more than two decades.

At a meeting in Pocatello, the state Board of Education approved a plan allowing schools to delay the counting until mid-October, while spring enrollment won't be calculated until mid-March.

The numbers are used in various reports to state and federal government, and they affect how scholarships are distributed and schools are funded.

Colleges and universities typically use the 10th day of class as a measuring stick because it cancels out students who enroll on the first day and quickly drop off, but the board's staff found that deadlines vary at higher education worked under the 10-day benchmark for more than 20 years, the Lewiston Tribune reported.

Trustees looked at delaying the count after some institutions complained that by submitting their numbers on the 10th day, they were excluding a significant number of high school students who are earning college credits through the state's dual-enrollment program.

EPA Hopes Big Sky Country Gets Less Hazy

BILLINGS, Mont. (AP) • Federal regulators have approved a new measure meant to help turn Montana's Big Sky Country into Clear Sky Country by forcing industrial plants to cut pollutants that make hazy skies over national parks and wilderness areas.

The Environmental Protection Agency rule has been criticized by industry as too costly and by conservationists and other federal agencies as not tough enough.

The goal is to restore visibility to natural conditions in national parks and wilderness areas from Idaho to North Dakota, including Craters of the Moon national monument northeast of Twin Falls. The official target date is 2064, but EPA officials acknowledge it would take several centuries for some parks and wildernesses under the new rule.

"This is the first step basically," EPA regional air program director Carl Daly said Thursday.

To get there, the agency detailed $85 million in upgrades needed within five years at the Colstrip coal power plant in southeastern Montana, the Ash Grove cement plant near Montana City and the Holcim cement plant near Three Forks.

Including operating expenses over the next 20 years, the total costs to the three plants would top $270 million, EPA officials said Thursday. An alternative proposal that was favored by conservation groups but rejected by the EPA would have cost Colstrip an additional more than $120 million.

The upgrades would reduce industrial emissions of sulfur dioxide and nitrogen oxides. The two pollutants react with the atmosphere and cause the air to appear hazy above some of the nation's prized public lands, including Yellowstone, Glacier and Theodore Roosevelt national parks.

In the western U.S., haze is blamed for reducing visibility by half versus natural conditions.

But conservationists complain the upgrades being required in Montana don't do nearly enough. They point out that it would take hundreds of years for some sites to reach the EPA goal.

"EPA is forfeiting an enormous opportunity here," said Jeremy Nichols with WildEarth Guardians. "The real benchmark is, are we doing everything reasonable to achieve clean air? EPA didn't achieve that goal."

The National Park Service said EPA regulators overestimated the potential costs of more advanced pollution controls that could have further cut emissions. The U.S. Forest Service said the rules jeopardized Montana's chances of meeting the 2064 goal.

But the EPA said more expensive pollution control upgrades were not justified.

"You have incremental levels of improvement but you also have incremental costs associated with that," said Daly.

The EPA said its plan was reasonable in that it will take between 135 years and 427 years to restore visibility to its natural conditions in the parks and wilderness areas analyzed.

Northeast Montana's Medicine Lake Wilderness would take the longest — 437 years.

Among other notable natural areas, Yellowstone National Park would take 161 years and Glacier National Park 268 years.

WWII Dispatch Fetches $20K

MILLVILLE, Pa. (AP) • A rare military cable heralding the end of World War II has fetched more than $20,000 at auction.

The naval dispatch announced the end of hostilities with Japan. It was received aboard the USS Holland on Aug. 15, 1945, days after the atomic bombing of Hiroshima and Nagasaki, and was kept in a crewman's shoebox for more than 60 years.

Northeastern Pennsylvania auctioneer Kirk Williams sold the historic 8-inch-by-6.5-inch dispatch to a buyer from Nevada on Wednesday — the 67th anniversary of V-J Day. The lot included other World War II-era documents and photographs taken by Navy veteran Bob York, who died in February at age 91.

Williams said the unidentified buyer purchased the dispatch as an investment and gift for his 31-year-old daughter. The new owner may also lend it to museums.

Those items are all part of the preseason checklist athletes need to fill out leading up to the start of the high school sports season.

This year, another item was added to the checklist: Knowing the Lystedt Law, which is increasingly becoming the standard by which high schools across the country are dealing with concussions and the athletes who suffer them. Already, 38 states have passed legislation identical to the Lystedt Law, with legislation pending in five more. Five states have no concussion legislation, passed or pending. Two states passed a variation of the Lystedt Law (Wyoming, Illinois).

The law, which originated in Washington state and has been endorsed by the National Football League, consists of three major items. Parents

UNIVERSITY OF IDAHO

2 Directions for Vandal Athletics

While football seeks shelter in the independent ranks, Idaho's other sports look for home in Big Sky, pending state BOE approval.

BY JOSH WRIGHTFor the Times-News

MOSCOW • The University of Idaho is ready to jettison the crumbling Western Athletic Conference and venture into new territory as a football independent.

The Vandals' other athletic programs, however, look to be headed to a familiar spot.

UI will seek approval from the Idaho State Board of Education today to explore becoming a Football Bowl Subdivision independent and rejoin the Big Sky Conference in all nonfootball sports.

According to the Idaho Statesman, UI made a presentation to the board Wednesday in an executive session. Friday's meeting will be public, and UI's conference move is the only agenda item.

As an independent, Idaho would have to find five home opponents per year, four of which must be FBS schools. The Vandals' lone home game locked down for next year is a date with Northern Illinois.

Only four schools currently operate as FBS independents —BYU, Notre Dame, Army and Navy. And if the Vandals' leadership has its way, going independent would only be a stopgap move for UI.

Idaho expects further reshuffling among major conferences, and it has stated that it's hoping for an FBS conference invite down the road. In the meantime, Idaho estimates it will generate approximately $1.5 million more annually with game payouts by staying in the FBS rather than moving down to the Football Championship Subdivision (formerly Division 1-AA).

Asked about the conference reshuffling after the Vandals' preseason scrimmage Thursday afternoon, coach Robb Akey said, "I'm looking forward to hearing what that answer is gonna be."

Idaho has been weighing its options for more than three months. After being rebuffed by the Mountain West Conference, Idaho set its tights on FBS independence for football

SOUTH BEND, Ind. • Manti Te'o's lighter, quicker and, best of all for Notre Dame, he's back for a senior season and ready to leave his mark as one of the school's greatest linebackers.

"Since it's my senior I want to do this. I want to win to make sure Notre Dame is back up there," Te'o said Thursday during the school's football media day.

"This is my only time to actually have control over that. Once I leave, I don't have. While I'm in that locker room and on that field, I have good control of what is going on."

Te'o enters the season as the No. 8 tackler in school history with 324. He made 128 last season and 133 as a sophomore, combining speed, instinct and a determined approach to keep improvand athletes must sign a consent form acknowledging they are aware of the new law. In turn, athletes must be removed from play upon any suspicion that a concussion has been suffered, and they cannot return to play without clearance from a health care professional.

That last part may sound like a tough balancing act for coaches handling game responsibilities, but that clearance can come as quickly as mid-game from someone trained to identify the symptoms of a concussion. Ideally, that person is on the team's side-

"That new concussion law has kicked us in gear," Canyon Ridge athletic director Kim Wray said.

"I think it's drastically changing what is done in high school as far as parents, coaches and athletes are concerned," Riverhawks athletic trainer Brooke Rey said.

Prior to passage of the law in April, the only protection in place came from the Idaho High School Activities Association, which had to develop concussion guidelines and make them publicly available to par-

Rey is a teacher at the school but, like the coaches with whom she works, also receives a stipend for her athletic trainer duties. Canyon Ridge, as well as district rival Twin Falls, has a stipend available for an assistant athletic trainer, but the money involved makes it difficult to attract a trainer with certification.

Smaller schools are nowhere near as fortunate.

"That's a luxury we could not afford," Hagerman athletic director Kevin Cato said when asked where having a certified athletic trainer fit within his budget.

Schools almost always have a medical presence at football games. At larger schools, the ambulance behind an end zone is as much a presence at football games as cheerleaders and waterboys, and at Canyon Ridge junior varsity and varsity games, the game is not allowed to start until it has arrived. The school must pay for that service. Schools in smaller towns usually don't have such a service available, but it is commonplace to have some kind of medical presence inside the stadi-

The IHSAA has yet to mandate that teams carry a certified athletic trainer on the sidelines, but it would be problematic if they became necessary. Even finding a dual threat like Rey is a tough task for smaller schools.

"We struggle to get teachers as it is, then to ask for them to have a medical background? I don't think a lot of schools could find someone like that," Cato

At Canyon Ridge, Rey conducts baseline concussion tests for all athletes in a contact or collision sport. In the fall, that's football and boys and girls soccer. In the winter, it's boys and girls basketball, and wrestling. The cost averages out to anywhere from $5 to $10 per athlete.

Without an athletic trainer, Hagerman coaches will have to adopt a similar attitude to what Kimberly which will have a certified trainer on the sidelines for games this season had in years past.

"I think our coaches do a good job of staying caught up on how to recognize concussions," Bulldogs football coach Kirby Bright said. "We do a good job of sitting kids out when we do suspect a concussion."

Part of coaches staying caught up is a mandatory yearly test administered online by the IHSAA.

Not even all bigger schools have an athletic trainer available during games. At Burley, for example, a physical therapist from Cassia Regional Medical Center donates his time to be on the sidelines during just home games.

And the bigger the school, the less responsibility a coach has for identifying concussions or clearing players who have suffered them to return to play. According to a 2006 study of Idaho high school football coaches conducted by two Idaho State University professors, not a single coach at the Class 5A level was involved with identifying concussions in players or clearing them to play in practice or in games; an athletic trainer filled that responsibility.

In Class 4A, where the largest schools within the Times-News coverage area Twin Falls, Canyon Ridge, Jerome, Burley, Minico and Wood River – are classified, it did not exclusively use athletic trainers to handle concussion matters for games or practices, but trainers were used in about 80 percent of concussions that game in games; about 65 percent for practice-induced con-

The smaller the classification, the more involved the coach or another person became. Steady Weeden Leads Browns Past Pack

GREEN BAY, Wis. • Rookie quarterback Brandon Weeden showed improvement in his second preseason game, avoiding major mistakes as the Cleveland Browns beat the Green Bay Packers 35-10 at Lambeau Field on Thursday night.

Aaron Rodgers looked sharp in limited action, but backup quarterback Graham Harrell was shaky for the Packers.

Weeden, a first-round pick out of Oklahoma State who already has been chosen the Browns' starter, played the first half and was 12 of 20 for 118 yards.

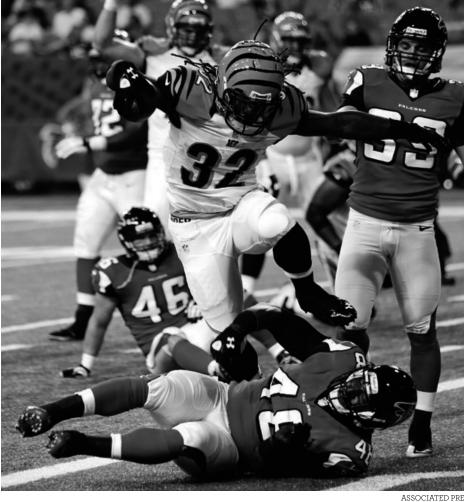

Browns kicker Phil Dawson hit three field goals, including a pair from 50-plus yards. Dawson missed a 56-yarder just before halftime for Cleveland (No. 30 in the AP Rodgers threw a 20-yard touchdown to Jordy Nelson on his first series for the Packers (No. 1).

"Just taking a shot in a one-on-one matchup," Rodgers said, in comments distributed by the team at halftime. "Jordy consistently wins those. A good corner, the throw was a little bit lower than I wanted, but Jordy made an incredible catch."

The reigning NFL MVP stayed in for two more series, completing 6 of 11 passes for 59 yards. He also had a 21-yard scramble and took a hard hit on another rushing attempt.

Harrell took over early in the second quarter and struggled, completing 12 of 24 passes for 100 yards with two interceptions. Harrell, the Packers' No. 3 quarterback last year, is trying to prove he can become Rodgers' primary backup after Matt Flynn signed with Seat-

He threw an interception that was returned for a touchdown by safety David Sims in the third quarter, although a receiver fell down on the play as Harrell threw the ball under pressure. With touchdown, the Browns led 23-7. Harrell's other interception was on a desperation attempt at the end of the first half.

NFL, Refs Debate Full-time Officials and More Crews

ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK • Less than three weeks before the season kicks off, the NFL and the NFL Referees Association are no closer to an agreement to end the lockout of the

As replacement officials work preseason games — and generally get criticized for their performances - the league and officials Thursday disputed such issues as full-time employees and adding officiating crews.

On Sept. 5, the Cowboys visit the Giants to open the season. Not since 2001 has the NFL played games that count in the standings with replacement officials, and that was for one week. This lockout began June 3.

The NFL is offering to add three full officiating crews, increasing the total number of officials to 140. League spokesman Greg Aiello said "this would reduce stress on the officials by allowing each official to work fewer games, would reduce travel, would allow us to do more intensive training, integrate younger officials more effectively, increase diversity, and improve quality of officiating."

"The union flatly opposes this proposal ..." Aiello added.

But the NFLRA insists the compensation being offered with such an increase would reduce their pay.

"The increase in the number of officials was first proposed by the NFL to the NFLRA by letter dated July 19, 2012 and had never been mentioned in the preceding 10 months of negotiations," the NFLRA said in a statement. "It is clear that this proposal is a negotiating tactic to attempt to divert attention from the real issues."

Another key issue, one Aiello noted will improve the quality of officiating long term, is hiring full-time officials. The league is proposing having seven officials — one per position of referee, umpire, line judge, side judge, back judge, field judge, head linesman - who would train, scout, handle communications, safety issues and rules interpretations year-round. Now, all NFL game officials are part-time employees, with outside jobs ranging from lawyer to teacher to business owner.

"The NFLRA is not opposed to full time officials if they are fairly compensated," the union said Thursday. "While the NFL has never made any compensation proposal, comparable positions in other professional sports at the 20-year level earn approximately $350,000 to $400,000 and are provided health insurance, a pension, time off with pay and numerous other benefits."

The union also disputes the value of the league's current salary offer, which it says would not be a 5 percent to 11 percent increase.

Instead, the officials said the proposal "includes aggregate game fee compensation increases of 2.82 percent per year, not the rates publicly claimed by the league. In fact, the NFL's proposal does not contain any salary schedule. Rather it contains aggregate game fees for all officials to be paid per a schedule to be developed by the NFLRA."

Aiello countered that officials would receive continuing increases in every category of pay, from game fees to travel and meeting fees, and, depending on how the NFLRA decided to allocate the salary pool, individual officials could expect annual increases of between 5 and 11 percent.

Athletic director Rob Spear told the Statesman previously he didn't see Idaho's independence "going beyond two years."

Spear made a brief appearance at the Vandals' scrimmage inside the Kibbie Dome, but would not comment. UI president Duane Nellis was not made available to the media.

Idaho instead released a statement in advance of today's board meeting.

"We appreciate the State Board of Education's consideration of our proposal for President M. Duane Nellis and Director of Athletics Rob Spear to explore what is best for the future of Vandal athletics, our student-athletes and our fans," it read. "Our priority continues to be to provide the best experience for our students, alumni and fans within a collegiate sports environment."

Idaho was a charter member of the Big Sky in 1963 and played there until 1996. In the state board's report, UI touted the "re-establishment of historic rivalries" with Idaho State, Montana, and Montana State as a way to increase fan interest in Olympic sports, reduce travel costs, and lower the time away from the classroom for athletes.

For the time being, the Idaho football staff and players say their only focus is ending their time in the WAC with a flourish.

"It's frustrating," defensive coordinator Mark Criner said of the conference uncertainty. "It is. But right now we've got to look at what's in front of us. We've got to look at season and go straight ahead. And right now, we've got an opportunity to win the WAC, and that's what we've got to go fight for."

early-season schedule.

The Spartans' first game is Aug. 24 vs. Kuna. Head coach Tim Perrigot says it will be the first time during his 17-year tenure that Minico has played before school starts.

The following week, Minico had to cancel its Rocky Mountain Rumble game scheduled for Aug. 31. It couldn't find an opponent.

Then, the Spartans travel to Sacramento, Calif., on Sept. 8 to play Mc-Clymonds High out of Oakland.

So essentially, Minico starts with two non-conference games sandwiched around a bye week. Perrigot saw no need to ramp up two-a-day practices this early in the season. No need to peak this early, especially considering this team hopes to still be playing football in November.

Plus, the Spartans don't have to worry about installing a new offense, like they did last year with the

"We're farther along now than we were at this time last year," said senior quarterback Shay Chandler. "Most of our skill players are seniors, so we don't have to go back and learn all the plays."

There's experience at the skill positions, but the offensive line is a different story. The Spartans graduated everyone up front except for all-state lineman Brett Thompson.

"They're still trying to learn a lot, but for the most part they're doing pretty good," Chandler said of the offensive line.

Defensively Minico returns five starters from the crew that allowed 18.2 points per game last season. Defensive coordinator Steve Haugeberg's crew looks solid again, led by all-conference middle linebacker Stallings, along with middle linebacker Skye Dansie, outlinebacker Jake Beamer, safety Taylor Seaton and defensive end Jonathan Valero.

season against Wake Forest, whether I come out in pads or on crutches, it will be worth it," he said earlier.

It was the second time he'd chosen to remain with the Irish. After his freshman year, he decided to forgo a Mormon mission and return to school.

"It was very difficult in totally different ways," he said. "Going on my mission was an experience like no other. It was something to help me grow as a person. Leaving for the NFL would help my family financially, so there were different situations, but I used the same tools to make those decisions — I prayed about it and talked to my family about it and weighed the pros and cons of each.

"I think I've made the right decision for me and my fam-

Notre Dame linebacker Manti Te'o, right, tackles Stanford running back Stepfan Taylor during second half of a 2010 game in South Bend, Ind.

Te'o, who is listed at 6-2, 255, certainly wants to play in the NFL next year and part of the reason for losing 15 pounds was to keep himself stronger and injury free. He did it by not overeating and spacing out his meals.

"I think it naturally happened when I watched what I ate," he said. "I made the sacrifices I needed to make to be on the top of my game. People talk about injuries and the possibility of injuries, but a lot of those injuries occur when you are tired or out of shape, muscle pulls, stuff like that. If I'm in the best shape of my life, I shouldn't have to worry about that stuff."

Count fellow inside linebacker Dan Fox as one of those overjoyed to hear that Te'o was coming back.

"The opportunity you can go play in the NFL, and for him to come back, that meant a lot to us and the defense," said Fox, who became a starter last season.

"He helps me out a lot. One thing I noticed is he's starting to trust me more not that he didn't before. You can rely on somebody a little more the more they play."

Te'o's teammates rely him as a leader who will not hesitate to speak up when someone's not doing something the right way. With a coach's knowledge of the Irish defense, he expects accountability from himself and those around him.

"He's hard on himself, and the moments where he may lose focus, or he may not give it his all, even those moments are decreasing," said Diaco, a former college linebacker at

"Not only is he going to be one of the very best linebackers that ever played here, if not the best, (but) one of the very best linebackers to ever play college football."

Te'o's place in Notre Dame history is not something he's given a lot of thought. A native of Laie, Hawaii, he's come a long way to make his mark on a program. He wants more than anything to go out a big winner.

"I hope I stand out as one of the best, but I don't get too caught up in all that stuff. Hopefully at the end of the day I'm one of the best," he said.

Green, also called sustainable gardening, helps preserve natural resources. By using "green" gardening practices and products, you can protect the environment while growing healthy plants, trees, and produce crops.

Keep Your Garden Green: Conserving Water Water conservation is increasingly important as demand for water escalates. Here are some ideas for conserving water:

1. Collect rainwater: Rainwater is a green method of reducing your water bill while providing your plants with water relatively free of minerals and

2. Mulching saves water and protects plants: Mulch, or chipped bark and garden waste, provides a layer of insulation that helps prevent evaporation of moisture and deters weeds. It also protects your plants from extreme in temperature. You can buy mulch from sustainable sources; check package labeling.

3. Xeriscaping: Landscaping with drought tolerant plants helps conserve water. Contact your local university extension service for recommendations on plants suitable for xeriscaping in your area.

4. Replace non-native plants with native plants: Naturally occurring plants can help maintain a habitat for insects and birds that act as pollinators. Indigenous plants are typically more resistant to disease and predation by pests than non-native species. 5. Install sprinklers and a drip system: Automatic sprinklers and a drip system can keep your plants healthy without wasting time or water. These systems operate on timers and can be adjusted as necessary. Drip systems allow for slow but deep saturation without runoff or erosion.

6. Start Composting: Lawn clippings, leaves, and other organic plant material can easily be converted to compost. Compost provides organic nutrition in place of highly concentrated fertilizers that can pollute water and Earth.

Green Gardening: Rethinking Your Garden 1. Replace chemical pesticides: In the 1960s, biologist Rachel Carson's book Silent Spring detailed the devastating effects of the chemical pesticide DDT on wildlife and the environment. Today, safe alternatives including insecticidal soaps and natural pest control products are widely available. Reduce pollution and keep your garden green and safe.

2. Buy and Use Green Products: Use gardening supplies and tools made from recycled materials and sustainable sources. Limit purchases to items you need; Careful planning can help you get the most out of

3. Recycle: Composting and mulching recycles garden waste. It's also important to recycle plant and product containers, and to buy gardening supplies made from recycled materials.

4. Share the Bounty of your Garden: Neighborhood gardens and co-ops are a great way to share and trade what you've grown with your neighbors. You might even pick up more hints for successful green gardening.

Carol Peterson

Aug. 7, 1930-Aug. 15, 2012

OREM, Utah • Our loving wife, mother, grandmother, $great\hbox{-} grand mother$ and sister, Gladys Carol Peterson, passed away Wednesday, Aug. 15, 2012, from natural causes. She was born in Heber City, Utah, on Aug. 7, 1930, to Thomas Henry Moulton and Maybell McMullin Moulton. She had four living brothers and was raised in a happy home. She loved living in Heber, but when she was in high school, her family moved to Salt Lake and she finished high school at East High. She remained close to her friends and family from Heber all her life.

She worked at the LDS Church Office building in Salt Lake City, Utah. In 1958, she married Jack Olin Peterson on Nov. 26 in the Salt Lake Temple. She was a stay-at-home mom, raising her two children, Loriann and Kyle. They lived in Idaho, Arizona and Oregon, retiring in Burley, Idaho. She loved to quilt, sew, visit

The family would like to thank those who cared for her in her last vears. Parke View Care Center, Horizon Hospice in Burley, and Orem Nursing Care and Symbii Hospice in Orem. They were invaluable to her care and wellbeing.

We loved her dearly and miss her.

She is survived by her husband, Jack Peterson; children, Loriann (Tim) Merritt and Kyle Peterson; eight grandchildren; six great-grandchildren; and brother, Tom (Jeanne) Moulton.

A graveside service will be held at 12:30 p.m. Monday, Aug. 20, at the Heber City Cemetery. Family and friends may attend a viewing from 10:30 to 11:30 a.m. Monday at the Suncrest LDS 1st and 4th Ward Church, 190 N. 800 W. in Orem, Utah.

David John Johnson Aug. 8, 1947-Aug. 14, 2012

TWIN FALLS • David John Johnson, 65, our loving husband and father Twin Falls, passed away Tuesday, Aug. 14, 2012, at his home.

David was born in Altadena, Calif., on Aug. 8, 1947. He was the most loving husband and father anyone could ask for. His greatest love in life was his family. He lived a very adventurous life by jumping freight trains at the age of 14; he rode motorcycles hard and raced cars, as well as traveling all over the United States as a long-haul truck driver. After he retired in 2009, loved watching NASCAR races with his wife and spending time with his grandchildren. His greatest joy in life was spent in the kitchen cooking for his family and making sure his wife was treated like a queen. In 1993 he met the love of his life, Jolene Cox of St. George, Utah, and a year later, they were married and moved to Twin Falls, Idaho. Jolene had three children and David had two children, and we all came together as the perfect family.

He is survived by his wife, Jolene Johnson; children, Lea (Sean) Vasquez, David (Amber) Johnson Jr., Kimberly Chadwick, Brandon Averett and Chelsi (Frank) Lira; sister, Debbie (Randy) Morgan; and half siblings, Ellen, Bobby and Linda; as well as his 12 grandchildren. Benjamin Andru McCarron

April 15, 1985-Aug. 13, 2012

TWIN FALLS • Benjamin Andru McCarron ended his own life just before midnight the night of Monday, Aug. 13, 2012.

His last two years were extremely difficult with several severe injuries that put him out of work and had him in constant pain. He pursued every solution he could think of toward recovery and, in the end, was only getting worse and was facing the very real possibility of never seeing any significant recovery. He made sure that his wife and kids would be taken care of and concluded that the best thing he could do for them was to check out of this world for good. Ben left behind a multitude of devastated friends and family who love him deeply and disagree strongly with his choice.

Ben was incredibly intelligent, inventive, optimistic, ambitious and compassionate. He was always hatching creative schemes to make small fortunes. He loved life and, even after his injuries, was always out trying to make the most of his time. He was always willing to go well out of his way to help out a friend in Ben left behind his wife, Andrea; his 2-year-old son, Jace; a baby on the way; his three brothers, Weston (Rachel), Tim (Jenna) and Chris; his dad, Sean (Debbie); mom, Debra; grandfather, Carl; and loads of extended family and close friends.

A viewing will be held from 5to7p.m. Sunday, Aug. 19, and a service at 6 p.m. Monday, Aug. 20, both at Parke's Magic Valley Funeral Home, 2551 Kimberly Road in Twin Falls.

Cash gifts will be accepted toward a trust fund for Ben's kids.

We will always miss you, Ben, and your kind heart, sense of adventure and sarcastic sense of humor. Have fun being worm food.

Christian Buhler Jr. and Mabel Kunz. He spent most of his youth on his family ranch, where he learned the importance of hard work. He graduated from Montpelier High School and attended Idaho State University for two years.

Jay married Frances Ormond on Sept. 24, 1941, after a brief courtship. They were later sealed in the Salt Lake City Temple on Nov. 24, 1941. They moved to Bern, Idaho, and purchased a farm while Jay worked as a brakeman for Union Pacific. Jay relocated to Bennington, Idaho, where he taught school and then began his long insurance career in Portland, Ore. Jay gave up everything and started over in his insurance career when he moved to Twin Falls, Idaho, in 1960 to start Buhler Insurance Agency, which he owned for 50 years until he fully retired in 2010.

Jay loved fishing, hunting and professional sports. He was a huge fan of the Utah Jazz and followed them closely. He loved to tell stories and make everyone smile. Jay did not know what a stranger was and could carry on a conversation with anyone and leave knowing he had made another friend. Jay was a member of The Church of sisters, Barbara and Sandra; and two daughters, Ellen Fischer (Jim) of Phoenix, Ariz., and Linda Dorgan of Twin Falls. He also is survived by many wonderful grandchildren, greatgrandchildren and greatgreat-grandchildren. Jay was preceded in death by six brothers, Harold, Weldon, Howard, Russell, Ellis and Dale. Joan Roberts, Original 'Oklahoma!' Actress, Dies

BY DENNIS MCLELLAN Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES • Joan Roberts, who originated the female lead role of Laurey in the 1943 Broadway production of Rodgers & Hammerstein's long-running hit musical "Oklahoma!" and made a final return to Broadway after a more than fivedecade absence in a 2001 revival of Stephen Sondheim's "Follies," has died. She was Roberts died Monday of congestive heart failure at her home in Stamford, Conn., said her son, John Donlon.

A New York native with a strong, distinctive soprano voice, Roberts was 25 when Richard Rodgers and Oscar Hammerstein II cast her as Laurey, the high-spirited young farm girl in "Oklahoma!" It was the pair's first professional collaboration.

During out-of-town tryouts of the musical in New Haven, Conn., and Boston, Roberts told the Hartford Courant in 1993, "I don't know if everyone knew it was great-great, but everyone in the cast knew they were involved in something wonderful."

"Oklahoma!" opened on Broadway in March 1943, with a cast that included Alfred Drake as the cowboy male lead, Curly; Howard Da Silva as Curly's bitter rival, Jud Fry; and Celeste Holm as Ado Annie, the girl who "cain't" say no. With the death of Holm in July, Roberts was the last living major principal in the original Broadway cast. "She had a very clear, strong, classic musicaltheater voice that never needed microphones," Miles Kreuger, president of the Los Angeles-based Institute of the American Musical, told the Los Angeles Times on Wednesday. Kreuger, who saw the original Broadway production, said the character of Laurey "is rather self-centered, not the sweetest girl in the world. She's playing two boys against each other, and the reward is which one will have the opportunity to take her to a box social. That's the essence of the plot of 'Oklahoma!'"

Describing "Oklahoma!" as a historic show, Kreuger said it "was a turning point in the development of the modern American musical in that songs always grew out of character and situation."

Although the show didn't close until 1948, after 2,212 performances, Roberts left the production after two years and signed a film contract with David O. Selznick.

Burl Osborne, Former Editor and Publisher, Dies at 75

BY JOE SIMNACHER The Dallas Morning News

DALLAS • Burl Osborne, who led The Dallas Morning News to a come-from-behind victory in one of the last great newspaper wars, died late Wednesday at University of Texas Southwestern University Hospital-St. Paul. He was 75.

Osborne woke up not feeling well Wednesday. His death was not related to his kidney transplants, his family said.

During 21 years under his guidance, The News gained national prominence, collected a string of Pulitzer Prizes and set a benchmark for profitability in the newspaper industry.

He devoted his adult life to journalism in positions from reporter to managing editor at the Associated Press and from executive editor to publisher at The News. He was chairman of the AP board after leaving The News in 2001. In 1966 — when he was 29 - Osborne made news by being the third recipient anywhere of an experimental anti-rejection technique for a kidney transplant. "Burl Osborne was one of the finest journalists of his generation, in this country and worldwide," said Robert W. Decherd, chairman, president and chief executive officer of A. H. Belo Corp. Colo. Shooting Prompts Gun Bills

BY DON THOMPSON

Associated Press

SACRAMENTO, (AP) • Democratic leaders in three big states have used this summer's mass shooting in Colorado to push bills that would crack down on assault weapons and ammunition sales, rekindling a debate that has not gained much traction in Congress or on the presidential cam-

In Illinois, Gov. Pat Quinn proposed that his state enact a strict ban on assault weapons, similar to California's. New York lawmakers have proposed wide-ranging legislation that would limit weapons purchases.

California Attornev General Kamala Harris and the Democratic state Senate leader back a bill that would make it more difficult and time-consuming to reload assault weapons. The chairmen of public safety committees in California's Assembly and Senate co-authored a bill that would require dealers to report purchases of large quantities of ammunition to law enforcement authorities.

The suspect in the July 20 Colorado shooting, James Holmes, legally bought 6,000 rounds of ammunition online without raising authorities' attention. He had four weapons, including an assault rifle, on him after the rampage that killed 12 people and injured 58 at a

Blackhawk Crash Kills 11 People

The crash is considered one the of deadliest air disasters of the war.

KABUL, Afghanistan (AP)

• A U.S. military helicopter crashed during a firefight with insurgents in a remote area of southern Afghanistan on Thursday, killing seven Americans and four Afghans in one of the deadliest air disasters of a war now into its second decade. The Taliban claimed they gunned down the Black Hawk.

American service personnel in Afghanistan are dying at a rate of about one per day so far this year despite a drawdown of troops. That death rate has risen recently with the summer fighting season in full gear and a rash of attacks by Afghan security forces on their foreign trainers and partners.

NATO forces said they could not confirm what caused Thursday's crash and stressed that it was still being investigated. The Blackhawk was operating in support of an ongoing assault on the ground but initial indications were that it was not shot down, according to U.S. officials who spoke anonymously because the investigation was continuing.

Taliban spokesman Qari Yousef Ahmadi said insurgent fighters struck the hel-Kandahar icopter in province on Thursday morning. He declined to give further details in a phone call with The Associated Press.

The Kandahar provincial government backed the Taliban claim. It said the helicopter was shot down in Shah Wali Kot district, a rural area north of Kandahar city where insurgents move freely and regularly launch attacks. Provincial spokesman Ahmad Jawed Faisal did not provide details or say how the province had confirmed the information.

Kandahar is a traditional Taliban stronghold and the spiritual birthplace of the hardline Islamist movement, which ruled Afghanistan before being ousted in 2001 by the U.S.led alliance for sheltering al-

Qaida's leaders. Thursday's crash came less than a week after six American service members were gunned down, apparently by two members of the Afghan security forces they were training to take over the fight against the insurgency. White House spokesman Jay Carney said Thursday that the U.S. is prioritizing efforts to prevent more of these types of attacks. NATO says that 34 international service members have been killed in attacks by Afghan security forces or militants wearing their uniforms so far this year.

The international force "is continually assessing and refining procedures in force protection so that we can both meet mission requirements and ensure the safety of our forces," Carney said.

SUSPECT CHARGED IN FAMILY RESEARCH COUNCIL SHOOTING

LOS ANGELES TIMES

LOS ANGELES • The Virginia man accused of shooting a security guard at the headquarters of a conservative lobbying group after saying, "I don't like your policies" carried a backpack that contained extra bullets and 15 Chickfil-A sandwiches, authorities said Thursday.

Floyd Lee Corkins, 28, was charged in federal court a day after police said he walked into the lobby of the Family Research Council building in Washington, D.C., and shot the guard in the arm. Corkins was charged with transporting firearms and ammunition across state lines and assault with the intent to kill while armed. The transportation charge carries a maximum penalty of 10 years; the assault charge, 30 years.

Corkins appeared in court Thursday afternoon. U.S. Magistrate Judge Alan Kay assigned him a public defender and ordered that he be held without bond until a detention hearing scheduled for Aug. 24. Prosecutors requested a mental evaluation.

The Family Research Council is a Christian lobbying organization that condemns abortion and gay marriage and considers homosexuality a sin.

Corkins volunteered at a gay community center in Washington, officials said.

Corkins parked his car at the East Falls Church Metro station in Virginia on Wednesday morning and took the Metro to Chinatown in Washington, D.C., an FBI affidavit filed in court Thursday said. Investigators said they saw what looked like a gun box on the front seat of his 2004 Dodge Neon.

A supporter of WikiLeaks founder Julian Assange holds up a placard Thursday outside the Ecuadorian Embassy in central London.

Ecuador Grants Asylum to Wikileaks' Assange

LONDON (AP) • He's won asylum in Ecuador, but Julian Assange is no closer to getting there. The decision by the South American nation to identify the WikiLeaks founder as a refugee is a symbolic boost for the embattled ex-hacker. But legal experts say that does little to help him avoid extradition to Sweden on sexual assault allegations. Instead, with British officials asserting they won't grant Assange safe passage out of the country, the case has done much to drag the two nations into an international faceoff.

"We're at something of an impasse," lawyer Rebecca Niblock said. "It's not a question of law anymore. It's a question of politics and diplomacy."

The Australian shot to international fame in 2010 after he began publishing a huge trove of American diplomatic and military secrets - including a quarter million U.S. Embassy cables that shed a harsh light on the backroom dealings of U.S. diplomats. Amid the ferment, two Swedish women accused him of sexual assault.

Gun bills

states," said state Sen. Leland Yee, a San Francisco Democrat who authored the legislation that would slow down the process of reloading an assault weapon with a new magazine.

With strong support from Democratic Gov. Andrew Cuomo, New York lawmakers have offered a similar rationale for proposing a series of bills that together would give their state the nation's toughest gun control laws.

"I think there is appetite for reform," Cuomo told reporters this week. "I think that's a good thing, and I think that's one of the issues I'm going to have at the top of the list next January."

The prospects for the proposals are uncertain, but Democratic political strength in each state provides momentum that would be largely absent in Republican-dominated states. California, for example, has some of the toughest gun laws in the country and last year enacted a ban on the open carry of unloaded handguns.

Democrats control the statehouse and governor's office in California and Illinois, and all but the state Senate in New York. Even with half the legislature in Republican hands, Cuomo said he believes Republican lawmakers will work with him on gun-control legislation.

In California, Yee and Assemblywoman Nancy Skinner, who authored the bulk ammunition bill, said they are optimistic because they already have the support of influential lawmakers - and, in Yee's case, the state attorney general.

The proposals are not likely to be addressed in earnest until lawmakers return next year, since most of this year's legislative sessions are finished and California has just a few weeks left.

The push in some of the nation's most populous and liberal-leaning states illustrates a national divide, often along party lines, over whether the public should have unfettered access to military-style weaponry and ammunition.

"It's time for the people to band together in our state ... and do something about these weapons. We should remember those who lost their lives," Quinn said last month after he added his gun control proposal onto a bill that had dealt with ammunition sales.

New York state Sen. Michael Gianaris has proposed legislation limiting firearms purchases to one a month, requiring background checks for all gun sales, a firearms safety course for gun buyers and a cooling-off period before a gun could be picked up after purchase. It also would require that sales of firearms and ammunition be reported within 24 hours.

Fellow Democratic Sen. Jose Peralta also introduced a bill that would prohibit the sale or purchase of more than 500 rounds of ammunition during any 30-day period.

"The recent rash of gun violence makes clear that enough is enough," Gianaris said in a statement.

The leaders hope the legislation will go further than gun control bills have in Congress, where Republicans are generally opposed to further restrictions and Democrats are reluctant to engage on the issue during a presidential election year.

After the Colorado shooting, two Democrats introduced a bill that would prohibit the general public from buying thousands of rounds of ammunition by mail or online.

Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid, a Democrat, said the Senate's schedule is too crowded to allow a debate on gun control this year and has been noncommittal about whether Congress would consider the issue next year. The White House has said President Barack Obama will not push for stricter gun laws this year.

U.S. Sen. Dianne Feinstein, a Democrat from California, complained after the Colorado shooting that Congress has failed since 2004 to renew the federal assault weapons ban she authored a year after a gunman killed eight people in a San Francisco high-rise in 1993.

Nor will Congress take up the bill introduced after the Colorado shootings by U.S. Sen. Frank R. Lautenberg of New Jersey and Rep. Carolyn McCarthy of New York.

"The reality is that these tragic shootings will continue if we can't break the gun lobby's stranglehold on Congress," Lautenberg said in a statement

CO2 Emissions Drop to 20-year Low

PITTSBURGH (AP) • In a surprising turnaround, the amount of carbon dioxide being released into the atmosphere in the U.S. has fallen dramatically to its lowest level in 20 years, and government officials say the biggest reason is that cheap and plentiful natural gas has led many power plant operators to switch from dirtierburning coal.

Many of the world's leading climate scientists didn't see the drop coming, in large part because it happened as a result of market forces rather than direct government action against carbon dioxide, a greenhouse gas that traps heat in the atmosphere.

Michael Mann, director of the Earth System Science Center at Penn State University, said the shift away from coal is reason for "cautious optimism" about potential ways to deal with climate change.

He said it demonstrates that "ultimately people follow their wallets" on global warming.

"There's a very clear lesson here. What it shows is that if you make a cleaner energy source cheaper, you will displace dirtier sources," said Roger Pielke Jr., a climate expert at the University of Colorado.

In a little-noticed technical report, the U.S. Energy Information Agency, a part of the Energy Department, said this month that energy related U.S. CO2 emissions for the first four months of this year fell to about 1992 levels.

Energy emissions make up about 98 percent of the total. While conservation efforts, the lagging economy and greater use of renewable energy are factors in the CO2 decline, the drop-off is due mainly to low-priced natural gas, the agency said.

A frenzy of shale gas drilling in the Northeast's Marcellus Shale and in Texas, Arkansas and Louisiana has caused the wholesale price of natural gas to plummet from over the past four years, making it cheaper to burn than coal for a given amount of energy produced. As a result, utilities are relying more than ever on gas-fired generating plants. Both government and industry experts said the biggest surprise is how quickly the electric industry turned away from coal. In 2005, coal was used to produce about half of all the electricity generated in the U.S. The Energy Information Agency said that fell to 34 percent in March, the lowest level since it began keeping records nearly 40 vears ago.

Activists Report Mass Grave in Syrian Landfil

LOS ANGELES TIMES

BEIRUT • At least 60 charred bodies were found Thursday in a suburb of the Syrian capital of Damascus in what activists described as another massacre committed by government forces.

The bodies, all with their hands tied behind their backs, were found in a landfill in Qatna. Online video showed twisted corpses, some of them still burning. Hours after the discovery, opposition activists were still trying to find out who the victims were and what happened.

Those slain in Qatna were among an estimated 200 people killed across Syria on Thursday as the daily death toll in the ongoing conflict between opposition fighters and President Bashar Assad's forces continues to rise.

In the northern city of Aleppo, 70 were reported killed, including 40 people waiting for bread when a rocket fired by a warplane hit a bakery in the rebel-held Qadi Askar neighborhood.

A citywide flour shortage has resulted in bakeries being inundated with customers trying to buy a few loaves of bread, a staple of the Syrian diet. Grisly video said to be from the aftermath of the attack showed a line of bodies crumpled on the blood-soaked ground.

"Their goal is terrorizing the people," Abu Hashim, an activist in Aleppo, said of the government's tactics.

Forces loyal to Assad continued to pound many districts of the city. In another neighborhood, Shiar, eight people were killed as they tried to flee intensifying air attacks, Abu Hashim said.

Jerome Car Show Cruises with Thunder, Enthusiasm

BY JAMI WHITED

For the Times-News

JEROME • It was natural for Paul Ziebarth to get into the auto body business.

His father was a mechanic, and as a youngster he had a flair for art. As a young man at the College of Southern Idaho he learned to fix his own automobiles.

"I didn't really have an interest in the business," he said. "But when I needed a job I got one for an auto body shop and never got out of it."

For the past 25 years it has served the Kimberly business owner well as his creations have been featured in multiple car shows. And this weekend a 1972 Chevelle he restored will be on display at the 14th annual Joe Mama's Car Show at Jerome's North Park.

The show, hosted by the Magic Valley Early Iron Car

Club, will begin with a barbecue from 6 to 9 p.m. today. Festivities feature a bounce house and train rides for children, a dunk tank, a cruise at 7:15 p.m. and a rib-eating contest at 8 p.m. Doubleback will play 1950s-style music with a modern mix. The barbecue will run throughout the evening and costs $5 per person or $20 for a family.

Fun is definitely in store. Food booths and roaring engines aside, a water slide and free ice cream from Schwan's and Idaho Dairymen's Association will on throughout the day.

"It's going to be a good, relaxed day for the entire family," Orlan said.

spectful to that," he said.

Last year, Ziebarth saw 10 of his restorations entered in the show, and while he's glad to see his name on the show cards, he wouldn't mind seeing his own car on display eventually.

"I have a couple of builders, but we're so busy doing others; after you get a couple thousand hours in them you run out of time to work on your own," he laughed.

While many cars he's worked on out of town and even out of state will appear at the show, this year he has one new car entering:

"I'd like to see the Chevelle win any of the awards," Ziebarth said.

Spending so much time on a project — whether it's the 1972 Chevelle debuting Saturday or a 1937 Chevy that a customer who's owned a similar model for 20 years mistakes for a Ford – he acquires a particular fondness.

"Every one of them, even if it's something you don't want yourself, by the time they're out of here, you love them," he said. "It's funny how that works."

Over more than 30 years, acoustic musician Claire Lynch has become one of modern bluegrass's top vocalists and songwriters.

In the '70s Lynch led the Front Porch String Band, which evolved in the '80s and '90s into a post-modern bluegrass band. She formed her own Claire Lynch Band in 2005. Its musicians' accolades include International Bluegrass Music Association's Female Vocalist of the Year and two Grammy nominations for Best Bluegrass Album (Lynch); Canadian Open Mandolin Championship and Florida State Championship on both fiddle and mandolin (Jason Thomas); the MerleFest Doc Watson Guitar Champion (Matt Wingate); and two IBMA Bass Player of the Year awards (Mark Schatz).

Lynch's voice and songs can be found on records by Emmylou Harris, Dolly Parton, Linda Ronstat, Patty Loveless, Kathy Mattea and Ralph Stanley. Learn more: clairelynch.com.

help support Kiwanis efforts to eliminate maternal and neonatal tetanus from the world, and the community foundation's downtown projects.

MagicFest in its first year brought in $8,000, said the event's chairman, Lance Clow. It raised $13,000 the second year and $10,000 last year. This year Clow hopes MagicFest and MagicFeast together raise

Four years ago, Clow envisioned MagicFest as an event in downtown Twin Falls. Clow, who said he has always been fascinated by magic, goes by the stage name Professor Clowdini and levitates balls and cards.

"Magic is a good, clean, family form of entertainment," he said. "I've always dabbled in that stuff but I am not professional."

Clow is a member of Kiwanis and the Magic Valley Magicians, a group of professional and amateur magicians.

Clow's initial idea was to have roving magicians performing downtown. Though the venue has changed, today's MagicFest is still contributing to downtown Twin Falls and promoting magic in the Magic Valley.

Joining Clow are fellow Magic Valley Magicians members Al Herrin and Ken Vaughn.

During MagicFeast, Vaughn and Herrin will roam the audience performing and showing their various talents.

Vaughn, the master of card manipulation, grew up in Jackpot, Nev., and learned card tricks and card dealing at a young age. His mother was a card dealer, and he said he "just had a gift with his hands."

By day Vaughn spends the majority of his day sitting in front of a computer as an IT director, but at night he performs what he calls "close-up magic." He likes seeing the look of surprise in people's faces.

"It's hard to keep a secret, but it's worth it," Vaughn said.

Herrin is Simply Al, a working clown for more than 30 years. Herrin said his talents are more comedic than magical.

"I do more comedy than magic. I hide behind the tricks," Herrin said.

Herrin said he couldn't resist volunteering his time to help entertain diners at MagicFeast.

"It's a great event and it helps Kiwanis and it's fun," Herrin said.

Burley Concert Series Brings Subway Diva, A Capella Quintet, Legacy Acts

TIMES-NEWS

BURLEY • Five touring acts will come to Burley's King Fine Arts Center for the 2012-13 season of Mini-Cassia Community Concerts.

Organizers hope music lovers will buy season tickets this summer, before the mid-September opening of the 66th season.

Here's the lineup:

42Five, Sept. 18

It's an instrumental band with no instruments - just the voices of five men.

They sing songs from the '60s to today, including Journey's "Don't Stop Believing," Queen's "Don't Stop Me Now" and Three Dog Night's "Joy to the World." The a capella quintet mimics sounds from the trumpet to the drums.

Expect impressive harmonies and a charming sense of humor.

Collin Raye, Oct. 20

A hitmaker of the '90s, Collin Raye has five platinum alburns, 16 No. 1 hits, and 24 top 10s and was nominated five times as country music Male Vocalist of the Year. At the 2001 Country Radio Seminar, Clint Black presented Raye with the organization's Humanitarian of the Year award.

His first No. 1 hit was "Love, Me," and other chart-toppers include "One Boy, One Girl," "On the Verge," "What the Heart Wants," "Every Second," and "That Was a River."

Legacy of Floyd Cramer, featuring Jason Coleman, Jan. 5

With the vintage appeal of keyboardist Floyd Cramer, who performed at such Nashville institutions as the Grand Ole Opry and Music City Tonight, Cramer's grandson Jason Coleman is continuing in his grandfather's tradi-

When his age was in the single digits, Coleman appeared with Cramer in several performances, and he made his own Opry debut at 17.

Getting Tickets

Mini-Cassia Community Concerts promoters encourage concertgoers to purchase season passes in advance. Order passes now by calling 208-678-1798 or 208-436-0933, or make checks payable to "Community Concerts" and mail to 991 Sandy Glen Lane, Burley, ID 83318.

Season passes cost $45 per adult, $20 for a student or $120 for a family. Mini-Cassia season passes are transferrable and are also good at community concerts in Boise; a list of those concerts will be included when passes are mailed to purchasers in September.

All concerts start at 7:30 p.m. at the King Fine Arts Center in Burley, and doors open at 7 p.m. Because seating is not reserved, organizers recommend arriving early for better choice of seats. Single-concert tickets are priced from $25 to $30, available at the door.

lection of Cramer's best-known songs, such as "Last Date," and other country standards.

Ricky Nelson Remembered. Feb. 27

Rock artist Ricky Nelson was America's original teen idol in the '50s and '60s. His sons, Mathew and Gunnar, had double-platinum success in the early 1990s with three Top 10 singles, four No. 1 MTV videos and five Top 40 Billboard Hits, and they have sold more than 6.5 million albums. In "Ricky Nelson RememNelson breathe new life into their father's hit songs "Hello Mary Lou," "Travelin' Man" and "Garden Party." Their sibling harmonies are accompanied by video footage of the Nelson family with interviews from celebrities influenced by their father.

Alice Tan Ridley, March 14

Chances are you've heard Alice Tan Ridley's name - and not because she's the mother "Precious" of actress Gabourey Sidibe.

Known as the New York City Subway Idol, she sang "Amazing Grace" in the film "Rize" and "America the Beautiful" in the film "Heights," and in 2007 she won an Emmy for her role in the documentary "Military Families."

After nearly a decade of performing in the subways of New York City - covering songs such as "I Will Survive," "My Heart Will Go On" and "Billy Jean" — Ridley auditioned for TV's "America's Got Talent." Alice was dubbed Best Unsigned Artist 2011 by the NY Music Awards.

Logically, it had to be a loud suit-preference signal for the higher-ranked of the other two suits — in this case, diamonds.

On winning with the heart queen, Winter underled his diamond honors. Godfrey won with the king and returned a spade. Winter's ruff with his last trump was the third defensive trick, and the club king eventually set the ARIES (March 21-April 19): Structure could become scripture. You can't expect to do the same things over and over again and get different results. Examine and analyze areas in which you have repeatedly failed so you can eliminate stress.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Head for the finish line. Partners may be poised at the starting gate, anxious to take off. Ideas are bubbling up, but discussions may be filled with emotions rather than logic. Abrupt changes cause dissension.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Having the will to succeed is half the battle. Gather all the facts before you act. Your wit and wisdom can bring perspective when others are agitated. Insights or an interest in technology is the key to success.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Today's new moon realigns your interests into financial matters and possessions. You may become more ambitious during the next several weeks and see the value of being organized.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A new moon in your sign reminds you to be conscientious and practical. You tend to trust everyone and are faithful and loval. Under the influence of this lunar cycle, you may be more results oriented.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Scoot the schedule along. Organizing and putting things in order may fill you with a sense of contentment. You might take pride in your ability to be an efficient manager. Friends might surprise you.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Perfectionists want everything in apple pie order. You are determined to have a big weekend and are willing to work furiously to get it under way. Abide by rules and regulations that must be obeyed.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Clearheadedness can be an asset. A rational and practical approach works best. Be patient; wait for better timing to launch new ventures, but reap the harvest of activities that are already in the works.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Keep your own counsel and mind your own business. Take advice with a grain of salt. Sit tight for a few days where finances are concerned; it is never wise to switch horses in midstream.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Happy hour might arrive very late today, as you are concerned with getting everything finished on time. Your friends might drag you away from your desk or insist that you shake off serious thoughts.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): It is possible that "Out with the old and in with the new" is your motto. Others may dig in their heels and cling to the tried and true. Rebellious desires could stir up controversy. Honor your promises.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Inspiration and thoughts of romance will brighten your day. Gather inspirations and write them down for future use. Your intuition is at its best - so if you choose to delay decisions, it might be for the best.
