Watching the Water

New USGS well improves monitoring of nuclear waste in water supply.

ARCO • Idaho National Laboratory employees may no longer inject nuclear waste into the ground, but the waste is still finding a way to creep into a critical water source.

Small amounts of waste from under INL are slowly seeping through pathways in the basalt to the Lake Erie-sized Eastern Snake Plain Aquifer, a source of water for southern Idaho.

"Once it's in there, it's hard to get it out," said Brian Twining, supervisory hydrologist for the U.S. Geological Survey, at the desert well site Tuesday. "Thankfully, the aquifer is so big, it often dilutes contaminants to a point where it isn't a huge concern."

But even with the help of dilution, scientists are keeping an eye on how much is leaked into the underground aquifer. So for the next week, USGS workers will set out to drill and case a new monitoring well just south of INL.

The well is one of 10 monitoring sites used to track contaminant concentrations — like tritium — within the aquifer.

Beginning in the 1950s, INL employees injected contaminated nuclear waste into the ground to dispose of it. The injection sites weren't drilled directly over the aquifer but underground pressures from the basalt sediments moved the contaminants in its direction.

Today, INL no longer injects waste into the ground. However, the

CSI Looks at Bachelor's Degree Options

BY JULIE WOOTTON
jwootton@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • College of Southern Idaho administrators are keeping an eye on possible bachelor's degree offerings, but haven't made any decisions.

Instructional Dean Mark Sugden said a secondary education degree program may be a need, especially in science, technology, engineering and math fields.

"There seems to be possibilities out there," he told college trustees during a Monday night meeting.

To offer upper division classes in the science, technology, engineering and math subject areas would require more faculty members with doctorate degrees.

CSI currently offers certificates and associate degrees. That's the same situation as other Idaho community colleges.

Students have a number of bachelor's degree options through four-year universities, such as Idaho State University and Boise State University, that offer classes from CSI's campus.

Road Reopens as Fires Cool

BY MELISSA DAVLIN

TWIN FALLS • Rock Creek Road is open after the Minidoka Complex fires forced its closure.

Julie Thomas, spokeswoman for the U.S. Forest Service, said Rock Creek Canyon is still closed, but officials hope that will change by this weekend. Local fire crews are now working on fully extinguishing the four fires that made up the Minidoka Complex.

"We are letting (other fire crews) go so they can go help on the two big fires in Idaho," Thomas said.

Local fire crews have also taken over extinguishing the Enclosure Fire, west of Ketchum.

Other fires burning Tuesday:

Halstead: The fire northeast of Stanley has grown to 93,720 acres. Officials lifted evacuation orders for Yankee Fork residents, though campgrounds remained closed. Crews are working to keep state highways 21 and 75 open.

Trinity Ridge: The fire has claimed 90,664 acres, of which 890 are private, 88,550 are federal and 1,224 are state-owned. The road to Pine and Featherville is still closed to all but fire and emergency personnel. A community meeting is scheduled for 6 p.m. today at the Idaho City Community Hall.

Driver Killed in Fatal Crash Was from Buhl

TIMES-NEWS

FILER • Investigators have released the names of the drivers involved in Monday's fatal crash west of Filer.

Ismael Arciga Garnica, 28, of Buhl, died in the collision, said Twin Falls County Sheriff's Office spokeswoman Lori Stewart. Jadie Johnson, 33, of Buhl, was injured but has been released from St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center.

According to Stewart, Garnica was westbound on 4200 North in a Chevrolet Cavalier when he failed to yield to Johnson, driving a pickup truck southbound on 1900 East.

Garnica was not wearing a seatbelt and had to be extricated from the Cavalier. He was pronounced dead at the scene.

Johnson was wearing a seatbelt and also required extrication, Stewart said.

A third party called the crash in to emergency dispatchers at about 5:30 p.m., Stewart said.

The sheriff's office, the Filer Fire Department, Magic Valley Paramedics, the Filer Quick Response Unit and Buhl police all responded to the crash.

The incident remains under investigation and alcohol may have been a factor, said Stewart.

Second Parking Meter Auction is Tonight

BY MELISSA DAVLIN

Dennis Bowyer, director of the Twin Falls Parks and Recreation Department, displays a parking meter at an auction on Saturday.

TWIN FALLS • Residents have another chance to buy parking meters at 8 p.m. today at Twin Falls Tonight. The auction will take place at the Main Avenue Fountain in downtown Twin Falls.

After the Twin Falls City Council voted to do away with parking meters downtown earlier this summer, they decided to auction the meters. The money will go for a yet-to-be-determined project in downtown.

Four types of meters are available: Single-head mechanical parking meters, double-head mechanical meters, single-head digital meters and double-head digital meters.

At the first auction at the Blue Lakes Rotary's Magic Valley Beer Festival on Saturday, the meters sold in a range of $200 for the single-head digital meter to $325 for the double-head mechanical meter.

Others will be able to buy the meters at the winning auction price at the Parks and Recreation Department.

The third and final auction will be at 6:15 p.m. Thursday at the Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce Business After Hours, at Locust Grove on the northwest corner of Falls Avenue East and Locust Street North.

Music Downtown: 6-9 p.m. Featuring Jason Lugo Band at the fountain on Main Avenue, Twin Falls. Free.

THE MARKET AT A GLANCE

S&P touches highest level since 2008, then falls

NEW YORK (AP) • The Standard & Poor's 500 index touched its highest point in more than four years Tuesday, helped by more talk that the European Central Bank may buy struggling countries' bonds. But a morning rally faded, and stocks ended lower.

The S&P 500 lost 4.96 points to close at 1,413.17, with bank stocks the only group to record a gain. Earlier in the day, the S&P climbed to 1,426, its highest since May 19, 2008.

Clark Yingst, chief market analyst at the securities firm Joseph Gunnar, said he thought traders were swayed by reports that the ECB may buy bonds to bring down the borrowing costs of Spain, Italy and other countries.

Man Arrested after Short Jerome Chase

TIMES-NEWS

JEROME • A 28-year-old Jerome man received several charges early Monday after allegedly fleeing from police.

Just before 1 a.m., a Jerome police officer was patrolling in the 500 block of South Lincoln Avenue when he clocked a southbound vehicle going 62 mph in a 35 mph zone, said Jerome Police Chief Dan Hall.

The officer attempted to stop the vehicle, but it accelerated faster and continued south on Lincoln, Hall said. The vehicle attempted to turn west onto Avenue I when it failed to negotiate the turn and ran into a power pole instead, Hall said. The driver allegedly attempted to flee on foot but was apprehended and arrested, Hall said.

Estanislao Gonzalez-Flores was charged with driving under the influence, resisting and obstructing officers, felony eluding a police officer, failure to purchase a driver's license, failure to provide proof of insurance and malicious injury to property.

Hall said the crash caused about $8,000 of damage to the power pole and resulted in a power outage.

4-H Centennial Celebration Continues

As a journalist I've covered the Cassia County Fair for 15 years and every year I find things that surprise and entertain me. This year was no different.

The Idaho 4-H program is celebrating its 100th birthday this year. As part of the celebration Century Families were identified throughout the state. In order to qualify as a Century Family, the family's members had to have at least 100 accumulative years of service in 4-H. Cassia County 4-H Program Coordinator Rosie Davids identified 12 Cassia County Century Families. At the top of the Cassia County list and coming in at No. 2 in the state for the most number of years — was the Carolyn Heaton family with 401 years of 4-H!

While talking with Kathleen Bean last week about the grass-fed lamb operation she and her husband Brian run 17 miles east of Carey, she explained that moving from the big city to ranch country takes more than skill with animals. There are human considerations, too.

For example, what are longtime cowboys to think about a former investment banker (Brian) and a fundraiser for The Nature Conservancy (Kathleen) who suddenly show up from San Francisco? Judging by the reaction Kathleen reported, the locals offered traditional Western hospitality.

While working on an Entertainment story about Magic Valley history museums, I learned something more than historical tidbits about the area. Museums, I was told, can be good places to make friends — at least for the people who work in them.

Making new best friends, she said, is almost as satisfying as preserving history.

Ex-state Sen. McGee Gets Up to 88 Days in Jail

BY JESSIE L. BONNER
Associated Press

BOISE • Former Republican state Sen. John McGee was led Tuesday from a Boise courtroom in handcuffs after being sentenced to 44 days in jail for disturbing the peace — a charge linked to allegations that he sexually harassed a 25-year-old woman working for him during the 2012 Legislature.

McGee, 39, was also ordered to serve an additional 44 days for violating terms of probation stemming from a 2011 drunken driving conviction, though the judge suggested McGee could fulfill that sentence by taking part in inmate labor detail or community service.

Once a rising star in the state's Republican Party, McGee served four terms and rose to the ranks of Majority Caucus Chairman in the Idaho Senate. But he resigned in February after a legislative aide accused him of inappropriate sexual conduct in his Capitol office and patience among GOP leaders waned.

The hearing Tuesday, which started with McGee pleading guilty to disturbing the peace and violating his DUI probation, brought some finality to a political free fall that began last summer, when police say a drunk McGee took an SUV for a spin without the owner's permission.

McGee has since lost his position as marketing director at West Valley Medical Center in Caldwell and is now unemployed, said his attorney, Scott McKay.

The sentence imposed by Fourth District Magistrate James Cawthon may not have been what McGee or McKay had in mind Tuesday.

Cawthon rejected a jail sentence of five days recommended jointly by prosecutors and the defense in exchange for McGee's guilty pleas, saying it didn't reflect the serious nature of the crime.

Ada County prosecutors claim that early in the 2012 session, McGee subjected his female aide to a barrage of sexual innuendo. And in one specific instance on Feb. 7, Ada County Deputy Prosecutor Jean Fisher said McGee and the aide were alone in his office, with the door closed, when he used graphic language to demand inappropriate sexual conduct.

Fischer said the aide became upset and was able to leave the office, but before exiting was told by McGee to say the encounter never happened. That episode was followed by others, Fisher told the judge, citing police interviews with the woman.

McGee took responsibility for disturbing the peace and his behavior on Feb. 7, but McKay denied any inappropriate conduct after that.

"On Feb. 7th I acted inappropriately. I used language that I should have not have used," McGee told the judge. "I conducted myself in a way, your honor, that was offensive."

Fisher said the woman was satisfied with the proposed plea and sentence agreement that would have required McGee to pay $500 in court costs and $960 in restitution.

In addition to the jail time,

McGee must under counseling and attend classes about having healthy relationships and setting appropriate boundaries.

"She is so ready to move on and be done with this process, which has been a horrible disruption in her life," Fisher said.

Cawthon credited McGee for taking responsibility for his actions. But he tossed aside the sentencing recommendations, saying the proposed punishment didn't reflect the nature of the crime or impact on the victim.

"You weren't just playing music too loud," said Cawthon, who presided over McGee's drunken driving case last year. "Whatever this is, it's sexual in nature."

Last May, McGee, was arrested after police said he took an SUV attached to a cargo trailer from the home of a stranger, got it stuck in a yard just down the street, and caused several thousand dollars in damage before falling asleep inside the vehicle.

Cawthon recalled how contrite McGee had been during his July 2011 sentencing in that case, and how he told the court his actions had been inconsistent with his beliefs. At the time, Cawthon recounted how McGee choked back tears when detailing how he was going to take responsibility for his actions and do better.

"You talked about what lessons you were going to teach your children because of what happened,"

Cawthon said Tuesday, adding that he was "floored" to see McGee back in court. "And then seven months later, I get this. I've got you committing another crime."

Jerome to Hold Off on Bond Election

BY JULIE WOOTTON
jwootton@magicvalley.com

JEROME • The city of Jerome is holding off on taking a bond request to voters for an expansion of the wastewater treatment plant.

Mayor John Shine said the original timetable was to pursue a bond during the November election.

But the city is waiting in order to have more time to develop a plan for the improvements and come up with more options.

City council members voted 3-0 during a Tuesday night meeting to table a second reading of the bond ordinance.

ber wasn't present. A bond amount still hasn't been set. But $43 million is the maximum under the city's tentative budget.

Shine said there's a strong need for the city to bundle the wastewater expansion project with collection system upgrades.

The city continues to work with the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency.

Shine wrote a letter to the EPA about one week ago asking the agency to relax its deadline for collection system improvements.

And the deadline was approved.

The city is looking to expand the wastewater treat-

Other Meeting Actions

During their Tuesday night meeting, the Jerome City Council also:

- Heard a presentation by Debbie Dane, executive director of Southern Idaho Tourism. She updated City Council members about an effort to reformat community pages on the organization's website. They'll include information about the city, an event calendar and pictures, as well as nearby lodging and attractions. Dane said she expects Jerome's page to go live by mid-September.
- Heard the introduction of an ordinance to close out the Jerome Urban Renewal Agency's area 1 taxing district. A public hearing was also held, but there weren't any comments.

ment plan to add capacity.

It's needed in order to attract new businesses, Shine told the Times-News last month.

Improving wastewater capacity is also closely linked to sewage overflow issues that occurred in winter 2011.

T.F. County to Test New Ballot Counter

TIMES-NEWS

TWIN FALLS • In preparation for the Buhl School District's levy election, the Twin Falls County Clerk's Office will test a new ballot counting machine.

A public test and demonstration is scheduled for 2 p.m. Monday at the Twin Falls County Courthouse.

The M100 is an optical scan precinct counting machine. It will be used to count ballots during the Aug. 28 election.

Area residents are invited to attend, watch and ask questions about the counting procedure.

Absentee voting for the Buhl School District's election continues through 5 p.m. Friday on the second floor of the Twin Falls County Courthouse.

The district is seeking a new two-year, $400,000 annual supplemental levy.

To find your election day polling place, call the county clerk's office at 736-4004 or visit www.idahovotes.gov.

New Rupert Police Chief James Wardle demonstrates how a light bar is operated by a control on the steering wheel Tuesday on one of the department's new police cars.

Rupert Native Settles into Police Chief's Chair

BY LAURIE WELCH
lwelch@magicvalley.com

RUPERT • Rupert law enforcement will be guided by a familiar face as James R. Wardle settles in as the city's new police chief.

Wardle has served as interim police chief since March when former chief Randy White retired. Wardle was appointed the city's 14th police chief on Aug. 14 by the Rupert City Council.

"Rupert is a great community," said Wardle, who was born in the old Rupert Hospital where the PMT building now stands. "You see it in people's patriotism and the types of things they support. Maybe there are other cities like that, too. But I like this one, it's my town."

Rupert Mayor Mike Brown said Wardle was hired in the middle of the salary range for the job. The city's tentative FY 2013 budget, if approved by the council, will raise his salary to $45,800 in October. The department has 13 officers including the chief, two secretaries and 10 reserve officers.

Brown said there were two applicants for the job with fairly equal qualifications.

"We tend to try to hire from within the city, if the applicants meet the criteria," he said.

Brown said the City Council likes the idea of community-based policing. Wardle is working to implement a loss prevention program for business owners to keep them informed about crime trends that may affect them. He is also working to put in place a prescription medication disposal box in the police station and institute a citizens' academy.

"Everything that he's promoted kind of fell into what the City Council wants," said Brown.

City Administrator Kelly Anthon said the city has a fair hiring policy but has had good luck hiring from within city departments.

"Our experience with that has been positive," Anthon said. "We find they are familiar with the community, care about it and have boots on the ground the first day."

Wardle worked at the Minidoka County Sheriff's Office for 18 years and for 23 years as a firefighter for the East End Fire Department. Wardle was one of the first reserve officers in the sheriff's office. He also spent five years as an emergency medical technician with the ambulance service before it merged with Minidoka Memorial Hospital.

"I've had my hand in a little bit of everything," Wardle said. "Although I can't say I've seen it all nor have I done it all because each day in law enforcement brings a little something different."

In the coming year, Wardle said the department will update the exterior of its building if a pending grant award comes through. One case he'd like to see solved as chief is the Norine Boyd missing person cold case. Boyd, of Rupert, was 29 years old when she went missing shortly before Christmas in 1988. She hasn't been seen since.

Wardle is also active with the Rupert POW Monument Committee, which he spearheaded, and the "Summer in the Park" celebration.

"I believe in giving back to the community," he said.

Churchman's Owner Charged with DUI

TIMES-NEWS

TWIN FALLS • Twin Falls business owner Daniel Churchman has been charged with driving under the influence while he separately fights a misdemeanor charge connected to a July drug raid.

According to police reports, Churchman, 54, was pulled over on Aug. 19 for speeding on Blue Lakes Boulevard. After admitting he consumed alcohol before driving, Churchman failed field sobriety tests. He then refused to perform a breath sample and was given a blood test.

Blood test results are still pending. Churchman has not yet been arraigned.

Churchman also faces an unrelated charge of misdemeanor drug possession, after police raided his business in late July as part of a national crackdown on alleged dealers and manufacturers of synthetic marijuana. Three felony charges, including theft and possessing a controlled substance with intent to manufacture or deliver, were dismissed earlier this month.

Churchman had a pretrial hearing on Tuesday for the misdemeanor, the same day he was fined $10 for being in contempt of court in the case, according to online court records.

A meal will also be provided during the event at no cost.

"The program is just another way the church tries to reach out to everyone," Main said.

Organizer of Pioneer Memories Continues His Work

BY VALERIE DAVIS

For the Times-News

DECLO • Dale Whipple won't let a little heart surgery slow him down.

For years, the 83-year-old Declo resident has been a public face in Mini-Cassia, well-known for his involvement in the National Pioneer Hall of Fame and in charity organizations like Project Rudolph.

Age and health have slowed him a little. He's due Thursday in Twin Falls for the surgery, he said.

But Whipple says he has no plans of retiring anytime soon. And he continues to live life by the motto he learned as a young Boy Scout: Do a good turn every day.

Raised in Declo, Whipple moved away to California for a military career, where he was a military lawyer, a colonel and then worked for NASA. He was an adviser to two US senators, the national manager of Toyota Motors, a journalist, the original founder of the Oregon Trail Foundation back when it was the Oregon Trail Botanical Garden, and amid it all raised sons to become famous actors. He describes his life as too full to adequately even begin to document it.

But there was more to come. After 30 years away, Whipple couldn't wait to return to Idaho, and in 1979 moved back to the area he was raised in — seeking a morally cleaner, quieter life for his family.

He soon found himself just as busy as before. He assisted the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints to organize and stage performances of the BYU International Folk Dancers, the BYU Ballroom Dancers, and many other performers, mostly to benefit his charities. Project Rudolph and TLC is a Christmas cheer and year-round comfort service to deployed military. On top of those, he found himself volunteering in local parks, national parks, with the BLM and for numerous beautification projects, sometimes enlisting the help of troubled youth and adults.

Among the hours and years of his time given to the community, Whipple established one of his crowning achievements: the National Pioneer Hall of Fame, known as NAPH, with the Grand Alliance Program, authorized under the National Partnership Act. With the alliance, it is an approximately $25 million nonprofit foundation. Lee Jorgensen is vice president.

The NAPH, said Whipple, "is dedicated to preserving our pioneer history, heritage and humanity through our volunteer work, exhibits, educational and recreational activities. ... We have wonderful volunteers in this area and a lot more people want to help but just don't know how."

The organization is an all-volunteer alliance, in which every small museum in this country is eligible to be a member. At present, the alliance has several family pioneer camps in Declo. An annual pioneer farm day

More than 500 pioneer vehicles are in the alliance program. Inductees include historic places like Union Station in Ogden, Utah, great people who were nominated for Nobel prizes but did not receive them, and collectors and restorers of pioneer antiques.

The national headquarters for NAPH — including a performing and exhibit hall, commercial and industrial complex and pioneer farm — will soon be built in Declo on the north side of Interstate 84 off of Idaho Highway 77. Part of it will be on the riverbank. It will host pioneer days, festivals, dance and music programs, and pioneer Dutch oven cooking contests.

Former Idaho Gov. Dirk Kempthorne stated it eloquently in his congratulatory letter to Whipple upon receiving the Cassia County 2005 Businessman of the Year Award: "When fully realized, this wonderful facility will be the envy of the nation — providing a centralized location, bringing together information, histories and artifacts, and honoring the individuals and groups that have contributed to America's pioneer heritage. The National Pioneer Hall of Fame will be a crown jewel of Idaho tourism."

Then-President George

W. Bush wrote to Whipple when he formed the charter group, saying "thank you with your help we can make America stronger, safer and more prosperous."

And the local community has recognized Whipple's work as well.

"Dale has had a lot of vision and energy to help this National Pioneer Hall of Fame get going. He has served the community wonderfully," said Burley City Administrator Mark Mitton.

Whipple said he gives credit to everyone else, because he could not have done it alone.

And it's those whom he helped him that he notes would keep the projects going in the improbable event of his retirement. The NAPH has a very active officers'

“The good people of Missouri nominated me, and I’m not a quitter. To quote my old friend John Paul Jones, I have not yet begun to fight.”

Rep. Todd Akin fighting to salvage his Senate campaign even as members of his own party turned against him over his comments that women are able to prevent pregnancies in cases of “legitimate rape.”

I’m Right, You’re Wrong and Other Political Truths

“The period which immediately precedes an election, and that during which the election is taking place, must always be considered as a national crisis. ... As the election draws near, the activity of intrigue and the agitation of the populace increase; the citizens are divided into hostile camps, each of which assumes the name of its favorite candidate; the whole nation glows with feverish excitement.”

Ramesh Ponnuru

Bloomberg News

— Alexis de Tocqueville, “Democracy in America,” 1835

I can’t stand the people on your side. Not you, particularly. You’re fine. It’s your side that’s ruining everything great about this country.

Your side lies shamelessly. Your leaders just make things up. And you just follow them blindly, like sheep — like blind sheep. You hang out with people who think just like you, and listen only to shows where you’ll hear your own views repeated. It’s an echo chamber of lies!

That’s how your side wins elections. It whips gullible people into a frenzy about supposed threats to their freedoms and livelihoods, and it deceives everyone else into thinking it’s more moderate than it really is. Once the election is over, though, your side starts pushing its extreme agenda behind the scenes.

When your side wins an election, you make out the president to be some sort of messenger from God. Nothing he does can be wrong. It doesn’t matter how big a hypocrite he is. He can campaign on bringing us together and then do nothing but divide us when he gets in — but you don’t mind. When our side wins, on the other hand, the president has to be personally trashed and accused of the most monstrous crimes.

Your side stirs up hate against the people on my side. The horrible signs your people hold up at their protests, the venom your spokesmen spew on television: It’s scary. I wonder how you can go through life with all that anger inside you.

Your side is simplistic. You never stop and think things through. That’s how you end up with your ridiculously inconsistent positions on abortion and the death penalty. You even fight against legislation that would make your own life better! How crazy is that?

Honestly, I don’t know whether to be sorry for you or mad. Sometimes I wish we could just free you from these awful leaders and their dumb ideas. Sometimes I wish all the people on your side would just secede and form your own country.

I don’t know if your side even believes in democracy. Your people are willing to do whatever it takes to win. That’s all they care about. They don’t care about how much damage their incivility does to the tone of our national life. It makes me sad.

Your side is willing to exploit tragedies for political gain. When your side’s rhetoric leads to political violence, on the other hand, you start saying how we shouldn’t politicize senseless crimes. Awfully convenient, isn’t it?

Your side’s extremism just grows and grows. Back in the day, people on your side had some sensible views and were willing to work with people on my side. Now your side purges anyone who would dare to do that.

The people on your side constantly whine about how unfairly they are treated. You’re always stoking phony outrage against the political leaders you hate. They are shameless liars, you say. But why should we take demands for honesty seriously when they come from your side? Frankly, anything your side gets is justified pay-back for all the things you’ve done.

I’m not saying that my side is perfect. Not at all. I complain about the people on my side all the time. They’re wimps. They’re too polite. They let your side get away with murder. And the press lets it happen, too. The people on my side always bring knives to the gunfight.

Maybe the most infuriating thing your side does is pretend that we’re morally equivalent. That’s not true: Your side is full of much worse people. I can’t even stand seeing them on television. No way could I ever watch that supposed news network of yours.

It’s nothing personal. I just hate people like you.

Robert in Moscow: “When one lives by a large internment camp like Minidoka, it is easy to be overwhelmed by the events of that camp and not be aware of the bigger picture. 11,000 German immigrants and their American born children were interned for the duration of the war. Another 49,000 were interned for part of the war. Some Latinas were interned because they were married to German immigrants to South America who were in-

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Teachers Need to be Paid What They Were Promised

Regarding the 21st Century grant:

Thanks to the Times-News editorial board for its recent editorial regarding “Pay for Performance” promised to teachers.

During the last legislative session, our lawmakers challenged public school teachers to step up and develop plans for student improvement. If goals were met or exceeded, teachers would be rewarded with additional pay. Plans were created and either deemed acceptable or required amendment. Teachers complied and the result was improved student scores and growth. Teachers are now waiting to see which schools and teachers will receive the promised pay.

Currently, there is talk that the promised pay will be held from distribution dependent on the November referendum passage or failure. The money was appropriated and the work was satisfactorily completed. Teachers need to be paid what they were promised. It is dishonorable to change the rules in the middle of the game. This is a request for our elected officials, step up and do what is right and fair for our teachers.

Learn More About Obama’s Anti-American Agenda

Attend the movie, “Obama 2016” which is now playing, to learn why Obama hates America and is destroying our economy and jobs with his anti-capitalist, anti-energy, anti-private property socialist/Marxist agenda. Learn that his mentor was Frank Marshall Davis, who was a card-carrying communist. In addition, he had close association with radical revolutionary William Ayres and anti-American Reverend Wright. Socialism throughout history leads to extreme poverty like Kenya and the loss of individual freedom.

The United Nation’s Agenda 21 (Sustainable Development) is a plan for world government to redistribute our wealth by controlling every human activity on the planet. The goal is power and control and not real concern for the environment. The global warming hoax (www.petitionproject.org) is being used to scare us into accepting government controls at all levels with all power going to the communist-controlled United Nations.

To learn more about Agenda 21, please hear William Jasper, who attended both United Nations Agenda 21 conferences in Rio de Janeiro in 1992 and 2012. He will be speaking on “Agenda 21 Regulation Overload” Thursday, Sept. 27, at 7 p.m. at the Red Lion Canyon Springs Hotel in Twin Falls.

George Mason, the father of the Bill of Rights, understood that God judged nations for their public stands. At the Constitutional Convention in 1787, he stated: “As nations cannot be rewarded or punished in the next world, so they must be in this one. By an inevitable chain of causes and effects, Providence punishes national sins by national calamities.” God’s judgments are here. In 2011, we had 12 natural disasters of more than $1 billion with total damage more than $54 billion. The judgments will continue until we stop mocking God, repent and keep his commandments.

We will be blessed as a nation again when we worship God and follow his inspired Constitution.

The Answer to Our Nation’s Problems is in the Bible

Our country is in a great terrible state. The answer for this is in the following scripture. This scripture is only asking for those who believe: 2 Chronicles 7:14 — “If my people who are called by my name will humble themselves, and pray and seek my face, and turn from their wicked ways, then I will hear from heaven, and will forgive their sin and will heal their land.”

Huge Fire Threatens Towns

The fire in California now covers more than 30 square miles and is threatening 3,500 homes.

MANTON, Calif. (AP) • As a lightning-sparked wildfire raged near Lynn Rodgers' home of less than a year, the evacuated resident said Tuesday she remained optimistic — in spite of her growing frustration and fear. "Yeah, but what can you do? Everything is in God's hands — and the firefighters," said Rodgers, who lives in Shingletown.

Aided by a shift in winds, firefighters were making a stand against the fire, which has destroyed seven homes and prompted fearful residents to take shelter at a sports complex in nearby Redding.

Since igniting Saturday, the fire grew to more than 30 square miles. Nearly 1,900 firefighters were battling the blaze in rugged, densely forested terrain as it threatened 3,500 homes in the remote towns of Shingletown, Manton and Viola, about 170 miles north of Sacramento.

The fast-moving fire is one of many burning across the West, where dry lightning has sparked up grass, brush and timber, bringing an early start to the fire season.

Like Rodgers, many other evacuees were anxious to hear the latest information from officials. Dozens of people, as well as about a dozen dogs, were waiting at the Redding gym.

"The evacuation part? It's hard because I don't know what's happening to the house up there," said Jimmy Hall, a Shingletown resident whose family spent another night sleeping on cots.

"It's my dad's house ... There's a lot of things in there," Hall added. "I've heard that my friend is still up there protecting his house. It's just hard. Look at how we're sleeping."

Eric Kiltz, an emergency services coordinator for the American Red Cross, said "there's more frustration than anxiety, and people, for the most part are grateful they have a safe and secure place to stay, even though their home may be lost."

Gov. Jerry Brown announced Tuesday that National Guard troops will be assisting with the firefighting efforts.

Remnants of the fire spotted in some homes included melted satellite dishes, burned furniture and charred refrigerators.

Conservation Group Buys Mont. Ranch

MALTA, Mont. (AP) • A conservation group said Tuesday it bought a 150,000-acre Montana ranch in a major step toward its vision of a national park-caliber prairie wildlife preserve that has stoked fears of change in the heart of cattle country.

Steve Page with Page Whitham Land and Cattle confirmed that the family-owned South Ranch near Glasgow was sold for an undisclosed sum to the American Prairie Reserve. The Bozeman-based group aims to create a multi-million-acre grasslands wildlife complex around northeast Montana's C.M. Russell National Wildlife Refuge.

Scientists familiar with the reserve describe it as an unprecedented initiative to restore an often-overlooked ecosystem that supports hundreds of species of birds, mammals, plants and insects. The South Ranch purchase more than doubles the amount of land under the reserve's control. It includes both private land and public land with long-term leases.

Yet some local ranchers see the group's plans as an assault on their way of life as families that stuck with the cattle business through generations of blizzard and drought are bought out.

Those critics lump the reserve's goals with a contentious federal proposal to convert a vast swath of eastern Montana into a new national monument — an idea that continues to reverberate more than two years after U.S. Interior Sec. Ken Salazar repudiated it.

ASSOCIATED PRESS

American Prairie Reserve senior foreman Damien Austin talks about an ancient buffalo jump where American Indians once hunted the animals on April 25 on a site that now overlooks central Montana's C.M. Russell National Wildlife Refuge.

The sprawling South Ranch traces its history to a pair of Civil War veterans and professional bison hunters who moved into ranching after bison were wiped out from the area. But Page said restrictions on public grazing and higher government fees — combined with the prospects of a national monument — made ranching on the land no longer viable.

"We have concluded that traditional ranching operations in south Valley and south Phillips counties are in jeopardy of becoming history in the not so distant future," Page said. "We are not suggesting this to be the correct decision for others, but consider it to be right for us."

Page said little will change immediately on the ranch. The terms of the deal give Page Whitham a 12-year lease to continue running cattle on the property.

Yet the ranch is now on path for dramatic alterations over the long term.

American Prairie envisions a herd of up to 10,000 bison roaming its holdings and adjacent federal and state lands. It already has started pulling fences on other properties it has acquired in the area.

CALIFORNIA SQUEEZE PUSHES POT GROWS TO OTHER STATES

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) • Law enforcement crackdowns on illegal marijuana groves on California's public lands appear to be pushing some growers into other states, federal authorities said Tuesday, prompting a multi-agency effort across the West this summer.

There has been a decrease in the number of marijuana plants seized in California in recent years, though the state still accounts for the bulk of the illegal pot harvest. There has been an increase in some neighboring states, officials said, so they are responding with what they're calling Operation Mountain Sweep in seven states west of the Rockies.

"Marijuana grown in this state supplies the nation," Benjamin Wagner, the U.S. attorney in Sacramento, said at a news conference. "Huge amounts of marijuana growing here are flowing to the East, to other states in the East."

Yet years of arrests and prosecutions in California are having an effect, he said, reducing the number of plants found on public lands each year in the state. More than 5 million plants were seized on public land in 2010 in California, but that was down by 3 million plants from 2009. Fewer than 2.5 million plants were destroyed last year, and this year is likely to see another reduction, Wagner said.

"Because of the pressure that we're putting on these organizations here in California, there may be an uptick in some other states," Wagner said. Results are mixed, he said, but Nevada is among states seeing more illicit grows there.

California still accounted for 83 percent of the marijuana seized in the western region, however.

Since the operation began July 1, local, state and federal agents have seized 734,000 marijuana plants in California — six times more than all of the other western states combined.

They destroyed nearly 48,000 plants in Idaho, 25,000 in Arizona, 19,000 in Washington, 18,000 in Nevada, nearly 10,000 in Utah, but just 300 in Washington, as of last week. The operation will continue through the end of the month.

The federal Drug Enforcement Administration said the value of the nearly 500,000 plants seized on public land exceeds $1 billion, not counting the additional plants found on privately owned property.

The illicit plantations can devastate public land and endanger those who are hiking, hunting or fishing on public land, officials said.

Land Board Delays Vote on Salmon River Dredger

BY JOHN MILLER
Associated Press

BOISE • Gov. C.L. “Butch” Otter and other Idaho Land Board members delayed voting on a proposed mineral lease Tuesday, opting to first pay a personal visit to the Salmon River where anglers and a miner are battling over underwater booty: Fishermen say a suction dredger’s search for gold and garnets will hurt their prized steelhead.

The board — Otter, Attorney General Lawrence Wasden, Secretary of State Ben Yursa and Controller Brandon Woolf — agreed to travel to the site 13 miles downstream from Riggins where small-time miner Mike Conklin hopes to strike it rich.

Conklin, of Grangeville, already has a $10 permit from the Idaho Department of Water Resources allowing him to use a gasoline-powered suction dredge to suck up the bottom of the Salmon River in his search for gems and gold. He’s been doing small-scale exploration for two years, and he now wants a five-year lease from the Idaho Department of Lands giving him exclusive rights to mine in a roughly half-mile stretch of water.

After their reconnaissance mission, Land Board members plan to vote on Conklin’s lease in September.

“I actually would like to look at this site,” Wasden said. “Then, I think I could make a better judgment with regard to this.”

For several years, the Idaho Conservation League has sought stricter limits for Idaho’s suction dredge miners, including demanding in 2011 that the federal Environmental Protection Agency

“Miners who are disturbing the beds of Idaho’s rivers have a responsibility to re-contour the beds of Idaho’s rivers and streams, so that they protect resources like public access and fishing and aquatic habitat and other beneficial uses of the stream.”

ICL activist Jonathan Oppenheimer

enforce federal water pollution laws that would shut down many such operations.

On Tuesday, a Boise fisherman, John Gordon, joined the group in arguing that Conklin’s plan to suck up the Salmon’s rocky bed with a 5-inch hose attached to a powerful vacuum on floats will ruin some of the river’s best fishing spots.

Gordon contends Conklin should be required to fill in the holes his suction dredger leaves behind relatively flat, rather than simply wait for high water come the following spring to wash rocks back in on their own.

“To me, it’s almost environmental vandalism,” Gordon told the board, contending that dredged holes not only damage fisheries, they exacerbate dangers for unsuspecting anglers who might fall in and drown.

Meanwhile, ICL activist

Members of the Idaho Land Board meet Tuesday in Boise. The board heard testimony and then delayed a vote on a mineral lease application sought by a man who wants to use a suction dredge to mine gold and garnets from a section of the Salmon River.

ASSOCIATED PRESS

Jonathan Oppenheimer argued that Idaho laws starting with a 1954 citizen’s initiative, passed to regulate riverbed mining that dramatically altered miles of the state’s streambeds since the mid-1800s, require all suction dredgers to restore areas they disturb close to their original condition.

The state has for years ignored these reclamation requirements, to Idaho’s rivers’ peril, Oppenheimer said.

“Miners who are disturbing the beds of Idaho’s rivers have a responsibility to re-contour the beds of Idaho’s rivers and streams, so that they protect resources like public access and fishing and aquatic habitat and other beneficial uses of the stream,” he said.

Conklin didn’t return a phone call seeking comment.

But the Idaho Department of Lands, which oversees mineral leases whose proceeds and royalties benefit public schools, are backing his lease proposal.

Agency staff said more than 280 letters, many organized by the environmental group, as well as objections from the Nez Perce Indian Tribe, failed to raise substantive issues and shouldn’t be used as a basis to block the lease.

Eric Wilson, the minerals program manager, also contends that Oppenheimer is misinterpreting Idaho’s rules and laws governing recreational suction dredge mining and its reclamation requirements.

Wilson told the board that regulation of Conklin’s recreational suction dredge operations falls under the Idaho Department of Water Resources, while the Idaho Department of Lands has jurisdiction only over the lease. As such, the Department of Lands has no jurisdiction to require a reclamation plan.

“We’re careful that we know where our boundaries are, and we’re careful that we don’t duplicate regulatory efforts,” Wilson said. “From a regulatory perspective, we really have no involvement.”

The wells take groundwater samples from four to six different levels within the aquifer. The sample locations allow scientists to monitor specific fracture points which can be as deep as 1,100 feet.

CSI

Sugden said CSI would have a hard time making a case for offering a bachelor’s degree in nursing.

That’s because several schools already have online programs that allow registered nurses to earn a bachelor’s degree.

If CSI officials decide to offer bachelor’s degree programs, Sugden said it could affect the college’s relationship with its sister schools.

Why Did the Conversation Come Up?

As an instructional dean, Sugden said he tracks trends in higher education. One of those trends is community colleges offering a limited number of bachelor’s degrees in order to meet industry needs.

The trend isn’t anything new, Sugden said, and has been going on for 15 to 20 years.

Sugden said President Jerry Beck asked him to look into potential for bachelor’s degree programs at CSI, and the college formed a committee on the topic.

If community colleges want to pursue a bachelor’s degree program, a notice of intent must be submitted to the Idaho State Board of Education.

There may be political obstacles, Sugden said, but not legal ones.

When it comes to CSI’s mission statement and values, he said a bachelor’s degree program “seems like it would fit nicely.”

Sugden said a deeper look at the process reveals some large obstacles to offering more advanced degrees.

The college is currently accredited through the Northwest Commission on Colleges and Universities to offer associate degrees.

Becoming accredited to offer bachelor’s degrees would mean a lengthy application process, as well as new requirements and costs.

Other Meeting Actions

During their Monday night meeting, CSI trustees:

- Approved the budget for fiscal year 2013.

CSI will receive $11.54 million in state funding — a 12.7 percent increase over the previous fiscal year.

The college’s budget includes a 2 percent salary increase for employees. There will also be nine new job positions, including full-time music, dance and chemistry instructors.

The budget projects about $11.4 million in revenue from student tuition and fees.

Vice president of administration Mike Mason said there’s an estimated 4 percent decline in full-time student enrollment this fall. The decline in tuition revenue is an area of concern, he said.

- Voted to pay a $68,863 fine to the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare.

The college operates Trans IV buses as a community service, Mason said.

CSI appealed a penalty that resulted from not conducting health and welfare background checks on bus drivers several years ago. The college’s appeal was denied.

Mason said the college conducted criminal background checks, but not the health and welfare checks. After being notified of the problem, the college corrected the issue within 30 days.

The college has been in full compliance since December 2010.

Maryland Train Derails, Killing 2 Students

ELlicott City, Md. (AP) • A CSX train hauling coal derailed and fell from a bridge near Baltimore, killing two college students who were on the tracks and crushing vehicles in a parking lot, authorities said.

Twenty-one of the train's 80 cars flipped over around midnight Monday, Howard County officials said. Cranes were brought in Tuesday morning to remove train cars from the vehicles at a county-owned lot so they could be searched for other potential victims.

"Many of those train cars fell onto automobiles, literally fell onto automobiles with the coal," Howard County Executive Ken Ulman said. "So you have massive piles of coal and heavy train cars on top of automobiles."

The victims were Elizabeth Conway Nass, a student at James Madison University in Virginia, and Rose Louese Mayr, who attended the University of Delaware, Howard County police spokeswoman Sherry Llewellyn said. They were both 19 years old.

Police did not immediately say what the women were doing on the tracks. The railroad is easily accessible from the picturesque downtown of Ellicott City, where there are several bars and gift and antique shops in converted old buildings. Ellicott City is about 12 miles west of Baltimore.

Two train operators were not harmed, officials said. Authorities planned a news conference later Tuesday morning as residents surveyed the damage and checked to see if their cars, or their friends' cars, were damaged. Several gray train cars were still on the bridge while others could be seen derailed farther down the rail line. A number of cars were in a wooded area of the train track that runs along the Patapsco River.

Benjamin Noppenberger lives downtown and said he was getting ready for bed when he heard the derailment. He said he and his wife thought it sounded like gunshots and waited about 10 minutes to go outside. "We could see all the cars that fell over. I just saw catastrophe," he said.

Jill Farrell, a 35-year-old assistant professor who lives across the street from the tracks, said she heard what sounded like squealing brakes and then a huge crash.

"It actually sounded like trains went off the tracks, and then silence," she said.

Mad Cow Concerns Shut Down Slaughterhouse

WASHINGTON (AP) • U.S. inspectors say they are trying to determine whether Central Valley Meat Co., a slaughterhouse in California that supplies beef to the nation's school lunch program, used lame "downer" cattle against federal rules.

The Agriculture Department said it's investigating whether cattle that were too sick to stand or walk were slaughtered, a practice that is banned because of the risks for mad cow disease. The facility in Hanford, Calif., was shut down Sunday after regulators received video of slaughter practices and confirmed "inhumane handling violations," the agency said late Monday. No meat has been recalled.

The animal-welfare group Compassion Over Killing said it shot the video footage.

The group's methods are similar to how the Humane Society of the United States obtained undercover video that led to the 2008 recall of 143 million pounds of meat from Westland/Hallmark Meat Co., also a supplier to the U.S. school lunch program. That recall occurred partly because of concern that downed cattle had been slaughtered.

Liberal Cities Raise Cash for Romney

WASHINGTON (AP) • Republican presidential candidate Mitt Romney, who is out-fundraising President Barack Obama by impressive margins, is attracting thousands of donors this summer from traditionally Democratic areas of the United States, collecting millions of dollars in even progressive communities from New York to Los Angeles, ac-ording to an analysis by The Associated Press of new campaign data.

Donors from neighborhoods of Manhattan to even the famously liberal Castro neighborhood in San Francisco helped Romney and the GOP outraise Obama by more than $25 million in July, beating him and the Democrat Party in contributions for a third consecutive month, the AP analysis showed.

Romney collected at least $630,000 by mid-summer from New York City, the home to major Romney fundraiser and New York Jets owner Woody Johnson. More than $100,000 of that came from investment bankers, who have cooled to Obama since he supported tougher regulations for Wall Street following the financial meltdown and housing crisis in recent years.

More than 2,000 miles away on the West Coast, Romney collected at least $350,000 since June in the San Francisco Bay Area alone, with average contributions of $400 apiece. The Bay Area is also the home of Dick Boyce, a former partner of Romney's at Bain Capital and a GOP super PAC donor.

Appeals Court Strikes Down Obama's Air Rule

THE WASHINGTON POST

WASHINGTON • The U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit overturned one of the Obama administration's hallmark air quality rules Tuesday, ruling that the Environmental Protection Agency overstepped its authority in curbing pollution from Midwest power plants too sharply.

The 2-1 ruling by the appeals court represents a major victory for utilities and business groups, who fought the Cross-State Air Pollution Rule on the grounds that it was costly, burdensome and arbitrary.

For years federal regulators struggled with how best to cut harmful sulfur dioxide and nitrogen oxide emissions from Midwest power plants. The EPA issued a rule which would have required utilities in 28 states to install new pollution controls.

ALASKA SUES OVER VOTING RIGHTS ACT

JUNEAU, Alaska (AP) • The state of Alaska on Tuesday sued to block enforcement of provisions of the federal Voting Rights Act.

Alaska is among the states required to submit redistricting plans or proposed election changes to the U.S. Justice Department for review to ensure the plans aren't discriminatory. But the state, in its lawsuit, argues this is unwarranted.

The state argues two sections of the act are unconstitutional.

The lawsuit, filed Tuesday in federal court in Washington, D.C., names U.S. Attorney General Eric Holder as the defendant.

DEATH OF ETHIOPIA'S RULER LEAVES VACUUM

MCCLATCHY NEWSPAPERS

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia • Ethiopian leader Meles Zenawi, who during 21 years of repressive rule transformed his nation into a regional powerhouse, has died of an unspecified illness, depriving the United States of a key ally in the battle against al-Qaida-affiliated rebels in Somalia.

News of Meles' death in Brussels late Monday broke here early Tuesday after weeks of rumors surrounding the 57-year-old prime minister's prolonged absence, including persistent conspiracy theories that he had already died. His ruling party moved quickly to quash speculation of an internal power struggle over who would succeed him, and the capital remained calm, if subdued. Government spokesman Bereket Simon said Meles' deputy prime minister, Hailemariam Desalegn, would serve as the country's leader until 2015 elections.

Meles' Tigray rebel movement took power in 1991 from what had been a Soviet-backed regime. Over the next two decades, Meles aligned his country with the United States and became a major influence in the volatile Horn of Africa and the wider African continent as well. The African Union is headquartered in Addis Ababa, and the capital under Meles became a hub for conferences and events made possible by a Chinese-fueled, state-led construction boom.

Americans Tune Out Afghan War

Politicians stay quiet while fighting rages on.

BY DEB RIECHMANN

Associated Press

KABUL, Afghanistan • It was once President Barack Obama's "war of necessity." Now, it's America's forgotten war.

The Afghan conflict generates barely a whisper on the U.S. presidential campaign trail. It's not a hot topic at the office water cooler or in the halls of Congress — even though more than 80,000 American troops are still fighting here and dying at a rate of one a day.

Americans show more interest in the economy and taxes than the latest suicide bombings in a different, distant land. They're more tuned in to the political ad war playing out on television than the deadly fight still raging against the Taliban. Earlier this month, protesters at the Iowa State Fair chanted "Stop the war!" They were referring to one purportedly being waged against the middle class.

By the time voters go to the polls Nov. 6 to choose between Obama and presumptive Republican nominee Mitt Romney, the war will be in its 12th year. For most Americans, that's long enough.

Public opinion remains largely negative toward the war, with 66 percent opposed to it and just 27 percent in favor in a May AP-GfK poll. More recently, a Quinnipiac University poll found that 60 percent of registered voters felt the U.S. should no longer be involved in Afghanistan.

Just 31 percent said the U.S. is doing the right thing by fighting there now.

Not since the Korean War of the early 1950s — a much shorter but more intense fight — has an armed conflict involving America's sons and daughters captured so little public attention.

"We're bored with it," said Matthew Farwell, who served in the U.S. Army for five years including 16 months in eastern Afghanistan, where he sometimes received letters from grade school students addressed to the brave Marines in Iraq — the wrong war.

"We all laugh about how no one really cares," he said. "All the 'support the troops' stuff is bumper sticker deep."

Farwell, 29, who is now studying at the University of Virginia, said the war is rarely a topic of conversation on campus — and he isn't surprised that it's not discussed much on the campaign trail.

"No one understands how to extricate ourselves from the mess we have made there," he said. "So from a purely political point of view, I wouldn't be talking about it if I were Barack Obama or Mitt Romney either."

Ignoring the Afghan war, though, doesn't make it go away.

More than 1,950 Americans have died in Afghanistan and thousands more have been wounded since President George W. Bush launched attacks on Oct. 7, 2001 to rout al-Qaida after it used Afghanistan to train recruits and plot the Sept. 11 attacks that killed nearly 3,000 Americans.

AAA: 33M Plan to Travel over Labor Day

NEW YORK (AP) • Americans plan to hit the road this Labor Day weekend despite rising gas prices.

Thirty three million people will travel 50 miles or more, a 2.9 percent increase from last year, according to AAA, a federation of auto clubs which sell vacations, insurance and lobby on behalf of car owners. That's the highest level of travel for Labor Day since the start of the recession in late 2007.

A gallon of gas now costs an average of $3.72. That's up about 40 cents from July 1, although still down 22 cents from the peak reached in early April. Experts say gas could rise to around $3.75 per gallon by the holiday weekend.

The overwhelming majority of travelers — 85 percent — plan to drive to their destination. Once there, they will find hotel rooms costing 4 to 6 percent higher than last year.

Families planning to get away plan to spend $749, according to an economic model done for AAA. That's up from $702 last year.

"In the absence of strong economic growth that might fuel a significant boost in travel volume, it is an encouraging sign that Americans continue to prioritize travel," Bill Sutherland, vice president of AAA Travel Services said in a statement.

Of those who plan to travel, 66 percent said their financial situation would not negatively affect their Labor Day holiday weekend travel plans.

immigration resulted in the smallest gain in population since World War II, which may hurt spending on everything from diapers to pregnancy kits, child care and education.

"Consumption bumps up when families have children," said Dean Maki, chief U.S. economist at Barclays Plc in New York. "The fact we are seeing fewer births is something of a drag on consumer spending. To the extent this turns out to be a persistent trend, it is something to be worried about."

The population increased by 0.92 percent, or 2.8 million people, to 311.6 million from the end of the decennial population count on April 1, 2010, to July 1, 2011, the slowest rate over a similar period since the mid-1940s, the Census Bureau said.

The number of births fell to 3.96 million in 2011, and it may fall again this year to 3.94 million, forecaster Demographic Intelligence predicted in July. "A culture of risk aversion among young adults" is behind the drop, the Charlottesville, Va.-based firm said.

"Population is a very strong motivation for consumer spending," said Chris Christopher, director of U.S. and global consumer economics research at IHS Global Insight in Lexington, Mass. "Weak population growth due to fewer children will play itself out in years to come."

A middle-income family having a baby in 2011 will spend about $234,900 over 17 years for things such as food, shelter, transportation and child care, the Department of Agriculture said in June.

IRAN REBUKED FOR BARRING WOMEN FROM COLLEGE CLASSES

VIENNA (AP) • Iran's decision to forbid women from studying dozens of subjects including nuclear physics and oil engineering threatens to wipe out one of the last vestiges of gender equality in the country, an exiled Nobel Peace laureate said.

The Islamic Republic's Ministry of Science, Research and Technology has barred women in 36 universities from 77 fields of study, according to state-run media including the Mehr news agency. Female students learned of the curbs when they received their registration letters in recent weeks. The new rules "demonstrate that the Iranian authorities cannot tolerate women's presence in the public arena," Nobel Peace laureate Shirin Eba-di wrote in an open letter to the United Nations dated Friday. "They are trying to push women back to the private sphere of their homes so they may abandon their opposition and legitimate demands."

The restrictions follow gender-segregation guidelines that Science Minister Kamran Daneshjou tried unsuccessfully to impose last year.

While the government requires women to cover their hair and bodies in line with religious values, they had been eligible to study on equal terms with their male counterparts. Improved female literacy and gender equality were key elements in human development gains after the 1979 Iranian Revolution.

Barges and their towboats accumulate Tuesday alongside the Mississippi banks of the Mississippi River near Greenville, Miss.

Low Miss. River Could Persist through Fall

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) • Low water levels that are restricting shipping traffic, forcing harbor closures and causing barges to run aground on the economically vital Mississippi River are expected to continue into October, U.S. Army Corps of Engineers officials said Tuesday.

Meanwhile, more than 100 tow boats and barges remain backed up near Greenville, Miss. due to the low river. The U.S. Coast Guard opened an 11-mile stretch of river that had been closed near Greenville, replacing it with a 5-mile zone where only lighter vessels can pass.

Speaking at a meeting of Corps officials, water control managers and business people in Memphis, Major Gen. John W. Peabody said that five harbors — in Tennessee, Missouri, Arkansas and Mississippi — are closed, and several others have limited access due to low water levels along the nation's most important inland waterway.

Peabody, commander of the Corps' Mississippi Valley

Division, said the Corps plans to dredge those harbors as soon as it can to allow tow boats and barges to enter and get close enough to docks to unload their materials.

Farms and other businesses rely on materials such as grain, feed and fuel that usually arrive by barge to smaller harbors.

Congressman Defies GOP Leaders to Stay in Senate Race

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) • Rep. Todd Akin defied the nation's top Republicans Tuesday to forge ahead with his besieged Senate campaign, declaring that GOP leaders were overreacting by abandoning him because of comments that women's bodies can prevent pregnancies in cases of "legitimate rape."

Akin pledged to carry on with his quest to unseat Democrat Claire McCaskill. But his bid faced tall obstacles: a lack of money, a lack of party support and no assurance that his apologies would be enough to heal a self-inflicted political wound.

"I misspoke one word in one sentence on one day, and all of a sudden, overnight, everybody decides, 'Well, Akin can't possibly win,'" he said on a national radio show hosted by former Republican presidential candidate Mike Huckabee. "Well, I don't agree with that."

Akin predicted he would bounce back from the political crisis threatening his campaign and capture a seat that is pivotal to Republican hopes of regaining control of the Senate.

"I'm in this race for the long haul, and we're going to win it," he told radio host Dana Loesch in St. Louis.

OBITUARIES

Etta Mauldin

June 9, 1916-Aug. 20, 2012

JEROME • Etta Mauldin, longtime resident of Jerome, Idaho, passed away Monday, Aug. 20, 2012, at the age of 96, while residing at the River Ridge Care and Rehabilitation Center in Twin Falls, Idaho.

Etta was born June 9, 1916, in Walsh, Colo., and migrated with her husband, Oren C. Mauldin, to Jerome, Idaho, in 1934. She and Oren resided at several locations before buying a home on East Avenue B, which they made their permanent residence over the past 60 years. During their first years in Jerome, Etta and Oren farmed at three locations in Jerome and Gooding counties, the final one in the Canyonside farming area south of Jerome. In 1951, they sold their farm and moved to Jerome and, during the following years, owned and operated three different gas service stations. Their final venture was a used furniture and book store on East Main, which they owned and operated for several years. Etta ran the store while Oren manufactured a small line of desks, book cases, gun cabinets and miscellaneous items in the basement of the store. One daughter, Juanita, also ran a dancing studio in the store and today, a granddaughter from Twin Falls still operates a studio there.

Etta will be well remembered for several activities and achievements, including her long membership and service in the Rebekah Lodge, famous gourmet candy making, costume seamstress and tap installer on dance shoes for the Mauldin Dance Studio. She was a self-taught bookkeeper and kept accounting records for her farming and service station enterprises, as well as for the Mauldin Dance Studio. Many will remember her as a formidable card player (Pinochle, Kings on the Corner). She also turned her hand to writing poetry, compiling a 437-page collection of her poems titled "Little Things," written between 1985 and 1994 — poems reflecting her observations on the day-to-day life of a wife, mother, grandmother, great-grandmother, great-great-grandmother and business woman. She was often called upon to write poems for special occasions, which she also read with great dignity and style, much to the enjoyment of her listening audience.

Eight children were born into the Mauldin family and all attended schools in Jerome and Gooding counties. Both Etta and Oren were dedicated to their children and worked in difficult times to provide a good home for them.

Etta is preceded in death by her husband, Oren; one daughter, Beverly Humbach; and three sons, Glen, Bon and Gary. Surviving Etta are two daughters, Estel Moss of Emmett, Idaho, and Juanita Golay of Henderson, Nev.; and two sons, Beryl Owen of Darrington, Wash., and Orval of Meridian, Idaho; 23 grandchildren; 54 great-grandchildren; and 19 great-great-grandchildren.

The funeral will be conducted at 11 a.m., Saturday, Aug. 25, at Farnsworth Mortuary Chapel, 1343 S. Lincoln in Jerome, with a visitation beginning at 10 a.m. Interment will follow in the Jerome Cemetery.

Etta's family suggests that in lieu of flowers, memorials be made in her name to Hospice Visions, 209 Shoup Ave. W., Twin Falls, ID 83301.

P.S. Etta's favorite comment: "Don't tell ME what kind of a day to have!"

Leo Paul Thompson

Dec. 4, 1921-Aug. 19, 2012

BURLEY • Leo Paul Thompson, a 90-year-old resident of Burley, passed away peacefully Sunday, Aug. 19, 2012, at Highland Estates Assisted Living in Burley.

Leo was born Dec. 4, 1921, in Cambridge, Neb., to Albert and Leona Thompson. They later moved to Clearfield, Utah, where he met Shirley Keyes. They were married Aug. 2, 1944, at her parents' home in Willard, Utah. In 1954, he moved his family to Burley, where he drove trucks for Westcott Oil and later for Conoco until he retired in 1983 and was able to pursue his real passion — fishing and camping along the rivers of Idaho in the summer, hunting pheasants and ducks in the fall, and watching his Green Bay Packers and New York Yankees.

Leo is survived by his wife, Shirley Thompson of Burley; children, Brent Thompson of Rupert, Julie (Larry) Newman of Parker, Colo., and Cindy (George) Wilcox of Burley; two sisters, Alberta Frongner of Morgan, Utah, and Bessie Williams of Phoenix, Ariz.; seven grandchildren; six great-grandchildren; and two great-great-grandchildren. He is preceded in death by his parents; and a brother, George Thompson.

A graveside service will be held at 2 p.m. Friday, Aug. 24, at the Pleasant View Cemetery, 1645 E. 16th St. in Burley. Friends may call from 6 until 8 p.m. Thursday, Aug. 23, and from noon until 1:30 p.m. Friday at the Rasmussen Funeral Home, 1350 E. 16th St. in Burley.

Tina Legarreta

Aug. 2, 1939-Aug. 19, 2012

GOODING • Our beloved "Nana," Tina Legarreta, passed away to be with her Lord on Sunday, Aug. 19, 2012, at her home in Gooding.

She was born Aug. 2, 1939, in Fairfield, Idaho, to William and Birdie Stevens. Tina married Julian Legarreta on Jan. 9, 1970, in Gooding, Idaho. She was very proud of her family, especially her grandchildren and great-grandchildren.

"Throw a rock," Nana, you will forever be missed and always be remembered for your quick wit and personality.

Tina was preceded in death by her parents; one son, Bret Legarreta; one brother, Ernie Stevens; and one sister, Dolores Madsen. She is survived by her husband, Julian Legarreta; and one daughter, Carla Retherford, both of Gooding; her grandchildren, Chance Retherford, and Dustin and Amber Vincent, all of Gooding, and Tessa Legarreta of Boise, Idaho; her great-grandchildren, Malana, Dane and Coy Vincent of Gooding; and one brother, Boyd Stevens of Gooding.

The family wishes to thank Dr. Gies and the staff of Associates in Family Practice, as well as the entire staff of North Canyon Medical Center.

Anyone wishing to make a memorial contribution in Tina's name may do so through the University of Utah University Hospital Foundation, 540 Arapen Drive, Salt Lake City, UT 84108.

Recitation of the rosary will be held at 7 p.m. Thursday, Aug. 23, at St. Elizabeth's Catholic Church in Gooding. A memorial service will be held at 11 a.m. Friday, Aug. 24, at St. Elizabeth's Catholic Church in Gooding.

Arrangements are under the care and direction of Demaray Funeral Service, Gooding Chapel. Condolences may be sent to the family by visiting the obituary link at www.demarayfuneralservice.com.

Vera B. Nelson

Dec. 2, 1926-Aug. 20, 2012

BURLEY • Vera B. Nelson, age 85, of Burley, passed away Monday, Aug. 20, 2012, at Parke View Rehabilitation and Care Center in Burley. She is now dancing with her sweetheart and our dad, Vern.

She was born Dec. 2, 1926, in Burley, Idaho, the daughter of Francis Russell and Ora Josephine Brower Gibson. She received and completed her education in Burley. She married the love of her life, Grant L. "Vern" Nelson on Jan. 22, 1946. Together, they had four children.

Vera had a wonderful sense of humor. She was an avid bowler, a good card player, enjoyed watching game shows on television, doing word searches, putting puzzles together and especially liked going for rides to check out the countryside. She was an outstanding homemaker and used her talents in sewing and crocheting to beautify their home. She also instilled in her children the love of reading. We will miss her with all our hearts.

She is survived by her children, Grant L. "Pete" (Linda) Nelson of American Falls, Cindy (Mike) Hotchkiss of Heyburn and Steven K. "Skip" (Cheri Johnston) Nelson of Oak Grove, Ore.; her sister, Betty Redlin of Oxnard, Calif.; 11 grandchildren; 16 great-grandchildren; and three great-great-grandchildren. Vera was preceded in death by her parents; her husband; her daughter, Becky Louise Nelson who died in 1952 at the age of 4; and her brothers, Russell, Harold and Jay Gibson.

Vera requested cremation, and a private family service will be held.

Arrangements have been entrusted to the care of Rasmussen Funeral Home and Crematory Service of Burley.

Pete Gutierrez

June 28, 1938-Aug. 19, 2012

BURLEY • Pete Gutierrez, age 74, of Salt Lake City, Utah, was born June 28, 1938, in Oakley, Idaho. He passed away Sunday, Aug. 19, 2012, at Cassia Regional Medical Center in Burley, Idaho.

He married Juanita Davis on May 29, 1958, and they were later sealed in the Salt Lake LDS Temple. He has three daughters, Cindy (Kelly) Peterson, Kim (Ryan) Hunt and Carla (Scott) Couch; seven grandchildren, Tiffany, Jeremy, Ashley, Hailey, Lehi, Morgan and Stevie; and two great-grandchildren, Isabella and Emiliana.

He was preceded in death by his parents, Santos Jose Gutierrez and Isabel Udave Gutierrez. In addition to his wife, daughters and grandchildren, Pete is survived by his siblings, Margaret Moe, Manuel Gutierrez, Dolly Dotterweich, Florence Gunderson and Isabel Gepner.

Every once in a while a man is born whose love outshines the sun. Pete's love was shown throughout his life. He was always patient and kind, quick to forgive and willing to sacrifice anything for those he loved.

The funeral will be held at 11 a.m. Friday, Aug. 24, at the Paul LDS Stake Center, 424 W. Ellis St. in Paul. Burial will be in Gem Memorial Gardens in Burley. Friends may call from 6 until 8 p.m. Thursday, Aug. 23, at the Rasmussen Funeral Home, 1350 E. 16th St. in Burley, and from 10 until 10:45 a.m. Friday at the church.

Lindsey Lee Walker

ISLAND PARK •

Lindsey Lee Walker passed away unexpectedly Thursday, Aug. 16, 2012, at his home in Island Park, Idaho. He was 67 years of age. His wife VeAnn was at his side.

Since their marriage, Lindsey and VeAnn have spent their winters in Parhump, Nev. He'd definitely tired of "moving" snow.

Thank you, VeAnn, for making such a difference in Lindsey's life. During our recent visit, he was the happiest I remember him being.

Lindsey was born May 21, 1945, at the family farm southeast of Declo, Idaho, to Lloyd Lee and Marie (Butler) Walker. He was raised in Declo and graduated from Declo with the Class of 1963. In high school, he enjoyed music and was half of a vocal duet with schoolmate, Margaret Hauser. They enjoyed entertaining at various functions. Following high school, Lindsey went to voc-tech at ISU and studied auto body repair. He then studied sociology at ISU and received his bachelor's degree. He spent most of his working career (1977 to 2002) at the Simplot fertilizer plant in Pocatello. He was also on a Hazmat team in Pocatello. When he retired from Simplot, he moved to Island Park and has resided there since.

Lindsey married Sharon Easton of Burley, and they had two sons, Paul and Brad. Lindsey and Sharon's marriage ended in divorce. His third son, Jesse Lee, was also from a previous marriage. Lindsey married VeAnn Zollinger Merrill in Island Park. It was to be their "fun" marriage, and it was just that. They spent the summers managing the Elk Creek Ranch in Island Park, which had been in VeAnn's family for many years. Lindsey was the groundskeeper and general handyman; an excellent handyman as he had many skills and enjoyed the work.

I am certain Mama met and guided Lindsey at the time of his passing to his next experience. There was a happy reunion no doubt! Lindsey, our parents and siblings; sister, Dawn Osterhout; brother, George Butler; and especially Lindsey's twin brother, Lloyd Lee; as well as extended family members.

He is survived by his wife, VeAnn (and their happy family of critters); his three sons, Paul, Brad (Brad's daughters, Rylee and Kinzie) and Jesse; two sisters, Jane Walker Harper (Walt) of Fort Collins, Colo., and JoDee Walker Twiss of Twin Falls, Idaho; sister-in-law, Sherry Walker (George); nieces, Lisa Espinosa Carter and Teresa Twiss Knopp; nephews, Rod, Randy, Todd and Tyrell Osterhout, Joe Walker, Tracy Twiss and Lloyd Walker.

There will be a celebration of his life at 11 a.m. Saturday, Sept. 1, at the Little Chapel in the Pines in Island Park. Lunch will be provided by the church with the assistance of ladies from the LDS Church. There was no interment. Lindsey's body was cremated.

Until we meet again my sweet, gentle, loving brother, there will be a void in my human experience. I love you always.

BELTONE TRUE STORY

"I'VE ACCOMPLISHED SO MUCH MORE THAN I EVER WOULD HAVE, THANKS TO BELTONE TRUE™."

"My hearing loss made me a shy little girl, and later, an accountant who worked mostly alone. Then I got an exciting new job which involved working closely with people. To be successful, I needed help hearing.

I went to Beltone. The people there were so wonderful. They set me up with their newest technology - the Beltone True™.

The difference was phenomenal! I could hear sounds I never even knew existed. And at work, instead of being a follower, I became leader."

Former AP Photographer Bruce Cooter Dies at 88

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) • Bruce Cooter, who photographed news, sports and features for The Associated Press, has died. He was 88.

Cooter died Friday at the Episcopal Church Home in Louisville, according to Ratterman and Sons Funeral Home.

After serving with the Army in Europe in World War II, Cooter was an AP photographer in the Nashville, Tenn., and Portland, Ore., bureaus.

Among his assignments was covering an April 1967 Nashville riot on the campuses of two historically black colleges after a speech by Black Power activist Stokely Carmichael. One person was shot and Cooter himself was injured by flying glass after a rock was hurled through the window of a fellow AP journalist's car, according to AP reports.

Cooter said his favorite assignment was covering the Grand Ole Opry in Nashville, but he found feature material as close as his own home. One that got wide distribution was a black-and-white photo that showed his striped cat, named The Cat, perched on the back of his best friend, the family's dog named Mayday.

Robert Bruce Cooter Sr. was a native of Omaha, Neb. After leaving AP, Cooter started a second career in real estate managing apartment complexes in Nashville.

A memorial service will be Saturday in Brentwood, Tenn. Survivors include his wife, Toni, and two sons.

Guy Spitaels, Belgian Socialist Leader, Dead at 80

BRUSSELS (AP) • Guy Spitaels, a Belgian socialist leader who was convicted in 1998 of corruption along with ex-NATO Secretary General Willy Claes, has died of a brain tumor, his party said Tuesday. He was 80.

Spitaels held pivotal political jobs in national politics and in Wallonia, Belgium's French-speaking south, where the Socialist Party reigned supreme under his leadership but was never far from fraud and corruption allegations. He died late Monday or early Tuesday, local media reported.

Spitaels was party leader and premier of Wallonia in the 1980s when his party became embroiled in a bribery scandal linked to the purchase of Italian helicopters for the air force. He always denied any wrongdoing.

Details of the scandal first surfaced during the investigation into the July 1991 murder of a socialist power broker in Liege by two hired killers.

Bribe-taking charges also extended to socialist leaders in the Dutch-speaking part of Belgium, including Claes, then Belgium's economics minister. Claes received a three-year suspended prison sentence in 1998. Three years earlier, as the scandal was growing, he had quit in disgrace as NATO secretary general, the military alliance's top civilian job.

Spitaels received a two-year suspended sentence.

Three Sweet Treats for Nostalgic Indulgence

BY TETONA DUNLAP
tdunlap@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • Feel like a child the next time you are at the Twin Falls Farmers Market. Though there are plenty of stands offering locally grown vegetables and fruits, take note of the homemade, delectable treats that are also abundant. Pick up a treat for yourself and — if you feel like sharing — the children, who will love these sweets as well.

The open-air market operates from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Saturdays through Oct. 27, across from the College of Southern Idaho's Expo building on North College Road. Here are three of my favorite treats that will satisfy any sweet tooth and leave you craving more.

Caramel Apple Butterfinger

The name alone makes your mouth water. This treat is exactly what it sounds like: a Granny Smith apple coated with gooey caramel and rolled in a crushed Butterfinger candy bar. With fair season in full swing, this tasty snack on a stick is the perfect indulgence. The Caramel Apple Butterfinger is made by Simplicity Sweets, owned by sisters Erica Urie and Holly Grimm of Twin Falls. Caramel apples are $3 and come in various flavors like Caramel Apple Snickers, Caramel Apple Cinnamon and Sugar and traditional Caramel Apple. This is the first year Simplicity Sweets has had a booth at the farmers market, and it also sells a variety of brownies, cake bars, cake pops and caramel corn.

Idaho Dirt

Remember making mud pies as child in your mother's garden? Just think how delicious those would taste if you had some of Tim and Cathy Voss' multicolored Idaho Dirt instead. Idaho Dirt is like Pixy Stix but better. It comes in flavors like root beer, grape, cherry and cola that can be mixed together in a clear plastic tube. One tube is $1.50; if you buy a $15 kit you get six tubes with enough powdery candy to fill 12 tubes. Tim said he plans to add sand art bottles and necklaces as containers. Also look for new flavors like vanilla, banana and possibly blue raspberry in addition to seasonal flavors like peppermint. Can't wait for those? Experiment with the ones available. Cherry and cola mixed together taste like, yes, cherry cola. Mix all the flavors together and you have bubble gum.

Bubble Gum and Banana Suckers

Sandra Wagstaff of Twin Falls remembers her mother making homemade suckers when she was growing up. Now she carries on that tradition by making them for Indigo Sweets. Her daughter Sharon Jabin specializes in gourmet caramels and is owner of Jerome-based Indigo Sweets. The suckers caught my eye because of their playful shapes and colors. I choose two suckers in the shape of butterflies. At 50 cents each, they come in flavors such as cotton candy, licorice peach, lemon-lime and peach. Wagstaff finds that young children favor bubble gum and cotton candy flavors while adults like banana (it tasted just like banana cream pie on a stick). The banana flavoring wasn't artificial tasting, and I got a lot of candy for just two quarters.

Their Creativity Satisfies that Sweet Craving

BY TETONA DUNLAP
tdunlap@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • The sun is rising slowly this morning — like many people in town, who pull back the warmth of white sheets, heavy heads leaving soft pillows, to shuffle to showers.

Every so often a car rolls down Shoshone Street but doesn't turn to park in front of the row of downtown businesses with closed signs hanging in dark windows.

At first glance the windows at The Cookie Basket appear dark, too, but kitchen lights in the back of the store indicate work here has already begun. Owner Jayne Fischer and new employee Keyene Wood were at work by 6 a.m. Aug. 16.

Here the smell of raw chocolate chip cookie dough marks morning as it is rolled into tube shapes on parchment paper to be refrigerated and later baked.

Wood's job is to replenish the cookies in a glass case in the front. When the door opens, a plentiful array will tempt downtown shoppers and workers. On an average day almost 200 cookies of 25 varieties — such as peanut butter, java chip and oatmeal butterscotch — are sold here.

Before Wood can make the dough for those, she is restocking the refrigerator with ready-to-bake cookies. A number of people throughout the day will frost cakes, decorate cookies, prepare gift baskets and ring up customers.

Wood will work the early shift and be gone by the afternoon when others arrive to frost cakes with buttercream flowers.

"It's a constant rotation,"

Fischer said.

The only person who is a fixture in the store is Fischer. She often is at the store as early as 6 a.m. and leaves at 7 p.m., an hour after the store closes.

This morning, Fischer is teaching Wood the art of baking from scratch, as the specialty bakery does to make its variety of cakes, cookies and treats. Wood places glob after glob of light brown dough dotted with chips onto a scale, then parchment paper, as Fischer helps her roll.

Then Fischer leaves Wood to prepare a gift basket. Clear cellophane crackles as Fischer wraps it around a basket of cookies. She needs to get this delivered to Idaho Falls this afternoon, which means she needs it picked up by 10 a.m. She calls a delivery service to schedule a pickup.

Soon the doors will be unlocked and the sign switched to open. The wind chime hangs ready above the door to greet customers.

Fischer purchased the business almost 10 years ago. The Cookie Basket will celebrate

Chefs, Winemakers and Foodies Will Gather in Sun Valley for 3-Day Festival

TIMES-NEWS

SUN VALLEY • Now in its third year, the Sun Valley Harvest Festival brings together agricultural products of Idaho and the Northwest, so local foodies and food-loving travelers can eat, savor wines and learn culinary secrets from chefs.

Set for Sept. 21-23 in Sun Valley, the festival has four ticketed and two free events.

It includes cooking demonstrations, wine tastings, a restaurant walk, a specialty marketplace, the Idaho River Guide cooking demonstration, the Martini & Caviar Party and a finale, the Grand Tasting. Purchase an all-events pass for $270, or choose from these events:

Restaurant walk: Spend the evening strolling downtown Ketchum with an Idaho adventure company and Frenchman's Gulch Winery. This moveable feast allows guests to sample eclectic fare from participating restaurants. The walk is 5-7 p.m. Sept. 21, starting from Ketchum Town Square; $35.

Demonstrations: Learn how to properly taste, select and pair wines from the festival's guest sommelier. Each demonstration is one hour long followed by a sampling of the chef's presentation paired with a wine from one of the sponsoring wineries and an opportunity to meet the chef and have a cookbook signed. Demonstrations are 9:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. Sept. 22 under the tent at Carol's Dollar Lodge; $40 each.

The lineup includes:
• 9:30 a.m.: Author and chef Jesus Gonzales, formerly of Rancho La Puerta and now culinary director at Cups in La Jolla, Calif.

• 11 a.m.: TV personalities, authors and James Beard Lifestyle nominees Brent Ridge and Josh Kilmer-Purcell of Fabulous Beekman Boys.

• 12:30 p.m.: La Varenne Ecole de Cuisine graduate John Tesar, executive

The Indian spice blend garam masala, sometimes written garham masala, adds warmth but no real heat to these delicious smashed and roasted potatoes.

Garam Masala: What It Is and How to Use It

BY J.M. HIRSCH
Associated Press

First lesson of Indian cooking: Not all brown powders are curry powder.

Second lesson: Don't confuse heat and warmth. Especially in Indian cuisine, they are wildly different concepts.

Third lesson: Indian cooking is a deliciously inexact science. Embrace its freewheeling approach and all of your cooking, Indian and otherwise, will be better.

And all of that is why I want to introduce you to garam masala, a widely available, yet little used (in the U.S.) seasoning blend from northern India. Like so many Indian spice blends, there is no set recipe for garam masala. The ingredients can vary tremendously by region and cook. But in general, it usually contains a mix of spices that are at once sweet and warming — coriander, cardamom, cinnamon, cloves, cumin and black pepper.

By warming, I mean the flavor has a fullness without acidity or sharp flavors. Think spice cookies and gingerbread minus the sugar. This is different than the spicy heat we associate with chili peppers.

That's a flavor profile not common to American cooking, but the wonders it works on roasted meats and vegetables make it worth changing that.

Garam masala differs from many spice blends in that the whole spices are toasted before being ground together. Why do you care? Most spice blends, especially from India, are intended to be heated before use to draw out their flavor. This means they need to be added at the start of a recipe.

But because garam masala already is toasted, it can be used as a condiment on meats, cooked grains, even breads and yogurt dips. For ideas for using garam masala, check out the Off the Beaten Aisle column over on Food Network: <http://bit.ly/Nfg4dj>

Smashed and Roasted Garam Masala Potatoes

Start to finish: 45 minutes. Servings: 6.

- 3 pounds red or yellow new potatoes
- 1/4 cup olive oil
- 1 tablespoon garam masala
- Kosher salt and ground black pepper
- 1 cup grated manchego cheese

Heat the oven to 400 degrees. Coat 2 baking sheets with oil or cooking spray.

Place the potatoes in a large saucepan and add enough cool water to cover by 1 inch. Bring to a boil and cook until tender, about 15 to 20 minutes. Drain well.

Return the potatoes to the pot and set over medium heat. Heat, shaking the pan frequently to keep the potatoes moving, for 1 minute, or until dry.

Transfer the potatoes to the prepared baking sheets, leaving 2 inches around each. One at a time, set a sturdy mug over each and push down to lightly crush. They should be lightly cracked and slightly flattened, but not falling apart. You also can use a potato masher (but press only gently).

In a small liquid measuring cup, whisk together the olive oil and garam masala. Drizzle the oil over the potatoes, coating each one well. Season the potatoes with salt and pepper, then roast for 15 minutes, or until lightly browned. Sprinkle the manchego over each, then return to the oven for 5 to 7 minutes, or until the cheese begins to brown.

Harvest marketplace: Shop Idaho's organic, sustainable and hand-crafted foods; coffee, tea, cheese, dairy, meat, produce, baked goods and specialties, plus kitchen gadgets and cookbooks. The marketplace will be open 10 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Sept. 22 at Carol's Dollar Lodge; free admission.

Martini & Caviar Party: On Boca's roof-top bar in downtown Ketchum, enjoy the night sky and artisan cocktails featuring one of Square One Organic Spirits' three vodka varieties, Botanical, Cucumber and Basil, created by mixologist Ryan Sullivan. Boca executive chef Jim Roberts will make Idaho sturgeon caviar hors d'oeuvres. The party is 5:30-7:30 p.m. Sept. 22 at Boca, 131 Washington Ave. S.; $75; space is limited to 100.

River guide cooking demo: Outdoor cooks seeking adventure can travel into the world of gourmet outdoor cooking by watching local river guides create dishes over an open grill or in a Dutch oven. It's 10 a.m. to noon Sept. 23 on the lawn at Carol's Dollar Lodge; free admission.

Grand Tasting: This tasting benefits the newly formed Sun Valley Culinary Institute. Guests taste savory main dishes, side dishes, artisan pizza, desserts, hors d'oeuvres and more. The tasting also includes Chateau Ste. Michelle, an 80-year-old Washington winery; the Col Solare partnership; Erath Winery, a producer of Oregon pinot noir; Northstar, a Walla Walla winery known for merlots; Spring Valley Vineyard, a Washington estate winery; and the Stag's Leap Wine Cellars that at the 1976 Paris Wine Tasting changed the world's view of California wines. The tasting is noon to 3 p.m. Sept. 23 at Carol's Dollar Lodge; $75.

Don't Do Raw Seafood? You Can Still Enjoy Ceviche

BY ELIZABETH KARMEL
For The Associated Press

Light, chilled and refreshing with a toothsome texture, ceviche is summer in a bowl. Add tortilla chips and it becomes a cross between a meal and a snack.

Most people I know eat ceviche at restaurants or on tropical vacations. But it is one of those dishes that, like sushi, folks shy away from making at home. I think that is because it generally is made with raw seafood, which necessitates having really, really fresh fish.

Fear the raw no more! With my cooked version of ceviche — using shellfish you buy already cooked — you can make ceviche anywhere, anytime. Feeling more adventurous? You also could add or substitute baby squid, scallops, rock shrimp, or even lobster.

While the shellfish marinates, I mince fresh habanero and serrano chilies to add the traditional "bite" to the dish. I also chop ripe red grape tomatoes and creamy avocado. I also like adding chunks of mango or even fresh passion fruit to add a sweet-tart fruitiness to the tangy tomatillo-lime mixture. These ingredients are best tossed into the seafood just before serving.

If you are planning to save some leftovers for the next day, reserve the seafood and add the flavoring ingredients just before serving the second time. The tomatoes, avocados and any fruit will get mushy otherwise.

When you serve this dish, make the presentation count! I like to serve it in stem-less martini glasses or a footed glass bowl. If you use a bowl, make sure that it is short or you risk having your ceviche tip over. Add a few tortilla chips around the foot of the bowl and place a wedge of lime on the rim, like a cocktail. Sprinkle the ceviche with a pinch of fleur de sel and dig in. You'll feel like you are on vacation!

While you can use frozen cooked shrimp for this recipe, freshly steamed are best. The easy way to do this is to buy the shrimp raw, then ask the staff at the grocer's seafood counter to steam them for you. Most grocers offer this service for free.

Summer Ceviche with Shrimp and Crab

Start to finish: 45 minutes. Servings: 6.

- 1/2 cup lime juice
- 3 to 4 large fresh tomatillos, husks removed, washed

- 1 loosely packed cup fresh cilantro leaves
- 1/2 teaspoon kosher salt, plus more to taste
- 1 1/2 pounds cooked large shrimp, shells and tails removed
- 1/2 pound of lump crabmeat, picked over for any shells
- 1 to 2 teaspoons minced serrano pepper
- 1 to 2 teaspoons minced habanero pepper
- 1 cup grape tomatoes, quartered
- 1 large avocado, peeled, pitted and diced
- Fleur de sel
- Lime wedges, to serve
- Tortilla chips, to serve

its 10th anniversary in January. Fischer, who has more than 25 years of experience inside a kitchen, started working in the bakery at Albertson's when she was 19.

"I was the night person who cleaned doughnut cases," Fischer said.

Over the years, she moved her way up to doughnut fryer and icer. Then she assisted with baking French bread. Finally she garnered enough expertise to become a cake decorator and eventually head cake decorator.

Fischer was the bakery manager at Albertson's stores in Twin Falls, Boise and Jackson Hole, Wyo., for five years.

When she first bought The Cookie Basket, she often worked 12 to 15 hours a day for six days. But she quickly learned that finding a balance between life and work is important.

She now employs five people to help her in the kitchen, make local deliveries and just fill in. Her three daughters help in running the business by updating the website or taking photos of products.

"Make sure you don't burn out," Fischer said. "Instead of loving the job you love, you begin to hate your dream and your job."

This is one of the reasons there are so many hands in The Cookie Basket today.

At midday on Aug. 17, the lunch crowd eats outdoors at a nearby pub's tables with umbrellas, their vehicles lining Main Avenue. Many of downtown's diners and shoppers, apparently, crave a little dessert too.

The hollow metal cylinders ring an inviting tune as The Cookie Basket door swings open again and again. Employee Shana Cheyney leaves her task of making brown ribbon into bows for baskets to greet customers.

At another counter in the back, Yvonne Marvin counts dollars, fives and tens. Marvin does not work for The Cookie Basket, but she buys goodies from the business and sells them to people in offices sitting behind desks. The self-employed Marvin rides her bright pink bicycle around town for three hours, delivering to businesses.

"I love it," Marvin said.

In the kitchen, Mollie Weighall holds a flower-shaped cookie in her palm as she squeezes pink frosting onto its petal with her right hand.

white. It takes about 24 hours for the frosting on a faux cake to dry and about two hours to decorate.

"It gets a crust on it right away," Fischer said, spinning the cake on the pedestal to evaluate all sides.

Then she scoops a glob of frosting into a pastry bag, her face inches away from the cake, adding piping to the sides.

Fischer said people order faux cakes for decoration rather than dessert, to give an event the grandeur without the price. Fischer said many times brides and grooms order a sheet cake to eat but display a faux cake on the table.

This works especially well for outdoor weddings when insects are attracted to the sweet smell. People also order faux cakes with only the top layers being edible if they are serving only a few people.

After adding color to a sheet of flower cookies, Weighall starts to decorate a birthday cake for a 3-year-old with fondant pink and purple butterflies and pink-tipped white frosting flowers.

"A lot of the old school piping like Jayne is doing isn't being done," Weighall said.

Weighall got her start inside the same Twin Falls Albertson's bakery where Fischer was manager.

Now the two work side by side once again, frosting cookies and cakes for brides, birthdays and those downtown shoppers lured in by the glass case. And tomorrow morning, by another display of beautiful desserts.

Crisp rice treats take the shape of watermelon slices at The Cookie Basket.

Buckwheat Gives Corn Bread some Nuttiness

THE WASHINGTON POST

Buckwheat flour imbues this corn bread with nutty undertones, and its brown specks lend visual appeal. Make an effort to use the turkey fat called for in this recipe (you get plenty of it when you save the pan drippings from roasting a turkey); it adds an extra dimension of richness that sets this corn bread apart from others. Bacon fat adds a smoky quality.

Pouring the batter into a hot skillet before baking ensures that you will have crunchy edges: the best part of a warm piece of corn bread.

The corn bread can be made a day ahead and warmed in the oven, but it is at its best served fresh from the oven. From columnist David Hagedorn.

Buckwheat Corn Bread

12 servings.

- 1 1/2 cups stone-ground yellow cornmeal
- 1/2 cup stone-ground buckwheat flour
- 2 teaspoons baking powder
- 1/2 teaspoon baking soda
- 1 teaspoon kosher salt
- 1 small yellow onion, finely chopped (1/2 cup)
- 1 small jalapeno or serrano pepper, stemmed, seeded then finely chopped (2 tablespoons)
- 1 cup fresh sweet corn kernels (from 2 large ears; may use defrosted frozen corn)
- 2 large eggs, beaten
- 1 3/4 cups low-fat buttermilk
- 2 tablespoons rendered turkey fat (may substitute chicken or duck fat or unsalted butter)
- 2 tablespoons rendered

bacon fat (may substitute turkey, chicken or duck fat or unsalted butter)

Preheat the oven to 450 degrees.

Stir together the cornmeal, buckwheat flour, baking powder, baking soda, salt, onion, jalapeno and corn in a large mixing bowl until thoroughly combined.

Combine the eggs and buttermilk in a medium mixing bowl. Melt a tablespoon each of turkey fat and bacon fat together and stir into the milk mixture.

Heat the remaining tablespoons of turkey fat and bacon fat in a 10-inch cast-iron skillet over high heat until the oil just begins to smoke.

While the pan is heating, add the buttermilk mixture to the cornmeal mixture, stirring just until combined. Pour into the hot skillet; a crust should form immediately. Cook for a minute on the stove top, then transfer to the oven and bake for 25 to 30 minutes, until a toothpick inserted into the center comes out clean. Allow the corn bread to rest for 10 minutes before serving.

Chipotle Shrimp Makes Use of Summer Veggies

THE WASHINGTON POST

Barbara Brynson invented this recipe after coming home from the Rockville, Md., farmers market with tomatoes, corn, onions and chili peppers. She also had a bottle of chipotle powder she had been wanting to use. A winner was born.

Because she's usually pressed for time, Brynson says, she uses frozen (uncooked) shrimp that have been peeled and deveined; if you prefer, you can buy 24 ounces of shell-on shrimp to peel and clean yourself. She also doesn't peel or seed the tomatoes but wouldn't object if you choose to.

If you like your food spicy, go with the jalapeno pepper; if not, you can use a poblano instead. And if you don't like cilantro, she gives you the option of not adding it.

Chipotle Shrimp With Tomato Corn Salsa

4 servings.

4 tablespoons (1/2 stick) unsalted butter
1/2 medium sweet onion, sliced lengthwise into strips (not rings; 1/2 cup)
Kernels from 1 or 2 ears of fresh corn (1 cup)
1/2 jalapeno or poblano pepper, stemmed, seeded and chopped
3 large Roma tomatoes, chopped (peeled and seeded if desired)

Finely grated zest and freshly squeezed juice from 1 lime (1 teaspoon zest and 2 teaspoons juice)
2 large cloves garlic, minced or crushed
1 1/2 cups peeled and deveined raw shrimp (12 ounces, 31 to 40 count), fresh or frozen, defrosted if frozen
1/8 to 1/4 teaspoon chipotle powder, preferably Penzeys brand
1/4 cup chopped cilantro leaves (optional)

Melt 2 tablespoons of the butter in a large saute pan or skillet over medium-high heat. Add the onion and cook for 2 to 3 minutes, then add the corn, jalapeno or poblano pepper, the tomatoes and lime juice. Once the mixture starts to bubble, reduce the heat to medium and cook for 4 or 5 minutes, until the tomato has softened. Transfer the mixture to a bowl.

Melt the remaining 2 tablespoons of butter in the same saute pan or skillet over medium-high heat. Add the garlic and cook, stirring, for 30 seconds, then add the shrimp, lime zest and chipotle powder (to taste). Cook for 3 minutes, stirring frequently, until the shrimp are just turning pink and opaque. Return the tomato-corn mixture to the pan or skillet and cook for a few minutes, until the shrimp are cooked through. Stir in the cilantro, if using, and serve. Per serving: 240 calories, 19 g protein, 12 g carbohydrates, 14 g fat, 8 g saturated fat, 160 mg cholesterol, 135 mg sodium, 2 g dietary fiber, 3 g sugar.

For The Associated Press

If ever there was an old-school comestible with a fat chance at trendiness, lard would seem to be it. The name alone is enough to conjure up a frisson of dismay. Nonetheless, lard appears poised to make a comeback.

Chefs have been championing lard for some time — and some home cooks never gave it up — and high-quality versions of the fat have become available from artisan producers. Meanwhile, the people behind Grit magazine have written the book on lard, to wit: "Lard: The Lost Art of Cooking with Your Grandmother's Secret Ingredient."

The book, "really came out of one of those crazy, fun, brainstorming sessions," says Hank Will, editor-in-chief of Grit, which is based in Topeka, Kan., and focuses on American rural life.

Editors were looking for a way to utilize their huge recipe database and got to talking about how animal fats, particularly those that aren't highly processed, are making a comeback as research has switched the focus to trans fats as the bane of healthy eating.

The result is 150 recipes gathered from more than 100 years of the magazine, including biscuits, fried chicken, pie crust and flour tortillas.

For San Francisco chef Chris Cosentino, executive chef at Incanto restaurant and known for his nose-to-tail cooking, lard is a natural byproduct of his whole-animal approach. "When we're getting a very beautiful hog, we try to use every bit of it," he says. "I think to do so is just the right thing."

As a further refinement, he likes to keep dishes animal-specific, cooking chicken in chicken fat, pork in pig fat, etc.

Neither Cosentino nor Will advocates eating huge amounts of lard; it is, after all, fat. But Will notes that it has less saturated fat than butter and is unequaled for things like flaky pastry. "It's like any fat, you don't want it to be a huge proportion of your diet, but there's nothing wrong in getting at least part of your fat dose in lard?"

Not all lard is created equal, says Will, who recommends reading the fine print on the package to make sure you're getting lard that hasn't been heavily processed, i.e. bleached, deodorized and hydrogenated. Cosentino, of course, makes his own lard and Will says home cooks can buy pork fat from a butcher and render it (melt it to strain out any solids) in the oven without too much difficulty.

The best lard comes from old-fashioned breeds of pigs prized for their fat — as opposed to the modern, leaner animals — and part of the lard resurgence has stemmed from small producers raising heritage breeds.

In the kitchen, lard has "hundreds of applications," says Cosentino. "It's great for breakfast cooking. Lard's good in pastries, in dessert." And he has some surprising uses for it, too, including a lard ice cream, and popcorn. "Cooking popcorn in pork fat is amazing," he says.

In Boston, chef Ken Oringer uses lard in all six of his restaurants, which include Clio and the tapas bar Toro. He adds it to dough for extra flakiness, including Jamaican patties served at Toro as a bar snack. Leaf lard

(the highest grade of lard) is added to the dough along with some turmeric and the dough is then stuffed with oxtails.

Rocky Mountain Green Beans

Recipe from "Lard: The Lost Art of Cooking with Your Grandmother's Secret Ingredient" by the editors of GRIT Magazine, Andrews McMeel Publishing, 2012. Start to finish: 20 minutes. Servings: 6.

2 cups fresh green beans
3 tablespoons lard
2 tablespoons minced onion
1 tablespoon minced green bell pepper
3 tablespoons all-purpose flour
1 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon ground black pepper
1/2 teaspoon paprika
1 cup milk
1 pimiento, chopped
1/4 cup grated Monterey Jack cheese

Bring a large saucepan of water to a simmer. Add the green beans and cook for 4 minutes, or until tender. Reserve 1/2 cup of the cooking water, then drain the beans and set aside.

Meanwhile, in a large skillet over medium-high, heat the lard. Add the onion and bell pepper and saute for 2 minutes. Add the flour, salt, black pepper and paprika. Stir well and cook for 3 minutes.

Gradually whisk in the milk and the reserved cooking water from the beans. Cook over low heat, whisking constantly, until thick. Remove from the heat. Add the pimiento and cheese, then stir until the cheese melts. Place the cooked beans in a serving dish and pour the sauce over the top. Serve immediately.

CLEANING

Question:

I have vaulted ceilings in my great-room with ceiling fans 20' high. The blades are covered with dust, but I can't reach that high to clean them. I'm afraid of heights anyway, so climbing up a ladder is out of the question. Do you have a 20' friend you can send my way?

Lori Chandler
Cleaning Center owner

Answer:

Actually I do have an awesome dusting buddy who will soon become your Best Friend Forever! It's the CEILING FAN BRUSH, perfectly shaped to slip over each blade and clean both sides at once. Attach it to an extension pole and you can reach as far as 30' high. Now how's that for a tall BFF?!

Part Paella, Part Panzanella, All Good for Summer

BY J.M. HIRSCH
Associated Press

My idea was simple — combine the best attributes of bread panzanella salad with the briny goodness of seafood paella. And I wanted it all done on the grill.

It turned out to be easier, faster and far more delicious than I expected.

The two main ingredients — sourdough bread and peeled extra-large shrimp — were simple. I gave each a quick toss in flavorful (and complementary) marinades, then popped them on the grill for a few minutes. I wanted the bread just lightly toasted and the shrimp just barely cooked.

After that, it was just a matter of combining them with some chopped tomatoes, a garlicky vinaigrette and — because I felt we hadn't yet mixed enough cultures into the pot — a couple of diced avocados. The result was out of this world.

One caution: this dish is meant to be cooked and eaten in short order. You certainly could prep the bread and shrimp ahead of time, as well as make the vinaigrette and chop the tomatoes. But don't grill or assemble until just before you are ready to serve. Otherwise the avocado will brown and the bread will get soggy.

Don't be intimidated by the length of the ingredient list. There's nothing unusual here and the recipe comes together quickly.

Shrimp and Avocado Panzanella

Start to finish: 25 minutes.
Servings: 10.

For the vinaigrette:

- 2/3 cup olive oil
- 1/3 cup lemon juice
- 4 cloves garlic, minced
- Salt and ground black pepper

For the bread:

- 1/3 cup olive oil
- 1 teaspoon garlic powder

- 1 teaspoon dried oregano
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 20-ounce loaf sourdough bread

For the shrimp:

- 1/3 cup olive oil
- 1/3 cup lemon juice
- 1 tablespoon coarsely ground black pepper

For the salad:

- 2 large tomatoes, cored and diced
- 2 avocados, peeled, pitted and diced
- 1 small red onion, diced

Heat the grill to medium-high.

To prepare the vinaigrette, in a small bowl whisk together the olive oil, lemon juice and garlic. Season with salt and pepper, tasting as you go. Set aside.

To prepare the bread, in a small bowl whisk together the olive oil, garlic powder, oregano and salt. Cut the sourdough into thick slices. Use a pastry brush to coat both sides of each slice with the oil mixture. Set aside.

To prepare the shrimp, in a large bowl whisk together the olive oil, lemon juice and black pepper. Add the shrimp and toss to coat evenly.

Head out to the grill. Add the bread and toast for about 2 minutes per side. Meanwhile, use tongs to arrange the shrimp on the other side of the grill. Cook the shrimp until just pink and firm, about 2 minutes per side.

Remove the bread to a cutting board and cut into bite-size cubes. Transfer the bread and cooked shrimp to a large serving bowl. Add the tomatoes, avocados and onion, then gently toss. Drizzle the salad with the vinaigrette, then toss again to coat well. Serve immediately.

Chill Out with Homemade Slushies

BY J.M. HIRSCH
Associated Press

Slushies have taken on a surprisingly critical role in my family's summer. And it's my 7-year-old's fault.

The summer camp he attended sold them at the camp store. I resisted at first, telling him he didn't need the sugar and neon chemicals used to concoct the icy blends. But like all spineless parents, enough nagging and I eventually relented, giving him permission to cool off with one small slushie once a day.

Then a 100-degree day hit. And while my son was off slurping his slushie at camp, I sat sweating in my home office. Suddenly, things seemed most unfair.

So I decided two could play at the slushie game. Not only could I whip up my own chilly drinks, I could do a better job, creating more interesting flavors and using far better ingredients. Sugar was certainly going to have to be part of the equation, but no neon chemicals were needed.

The results were delicious and refreshing. And while I love the three flavor blends I came up with, it's easy to create your own. Just keep a few guidelines in mind.

- You will need a blender. With most models, you'll need to stop it once or twice while blending to mix up the ice so that it doesn't jam. The weaker your blender, the more times you'll need to stop and mix.

- Aim for a ratio of 3 cups of ice to 2 to 3 cups of liquid/other ingredients. This ensures you will get an icy, but smooth consistency. It also helps keep the mixture from jamming in the blender.

- Don't be afraid to really let the blender go for a couple minutes. You want the mixture to be very smooth. There should be no discernible hunks of ice.

- Sugar is important for consistency. While you could use stevia or another alternative sweetener to cut calories, the result will be watery. I liked using agave or honey, which have a pleasantly mild sweetness that won't compete with the other flavors. Simple syrup (2-to-1 mixture of granulated sugar and water) also works.

- Don't forget the pinch of salt. It heightens the other flavors.

- Skip the seeds. Slushies are all about being chilly and smooth. That's why I used seedless strawberry jam rather than fresh or frozen berries in the recipe below. You also could use juice concentrates, such as cherry or pomegranate.

Coconut-Lemonade Slushies

Servings: 2.

3 cups lightly crushed ice
1 cup water
1/2 cup lemon juice
1/2 cup sweetened cream of coconut
1/4 cup agave syrup or honey
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
Pinch salt

Combine all ingredients in a blender. Puree until smooth. You may need to stop the blender once or twice and stir the ingredients in order to keep them moving in the blender. Serve immediately.

Strawberry-Ginger-Limeade Slushies

Servings: 2.

3 cups lightly crushed ice
1 cup water
1 cup seedless strawberry jam
1/4 cup lime juice
1 tablespoon grated fresh ginger
Pinch salt

Combine all ingredients in a blender. Puree until smooth. You may need to stop the blender once or twice and stir the ingredients in order to keep them moving in the blender.

Serve immediately.

Orange-Banana-Cinnamon Slushie

Servings: 2.

3 cups lightly crushed ice
1 cup no-pulp orange juice
2 bananas
1/2 cup agave syrup or honey
1/2 teaspoon cinnamon
Pinch salt

Combine all ingredients in a blender. Puree until smooth. You may need to stop the blender once or twice and stir the ingredients in order to keep them moving in the blender. Serve immediately.

Brewing Up Love: Weddings Tap Craft Beer Craze

BY MICHAEL HILL
Associated Press

ALBANY, N.Y. • You may now chug with the bride.

Toasting the bride and groom with Champagne is de rigueur. But recently, couples hip (or is that hops?) to craft beers are shaking up the wedding reception scene by insisting on serving the brews they love on their big day, everything from local ales to home brews concocted by the bride and groom.

It's not unusual for stouts and pilsners to flow at receptions or for rehearsal dinners to feature "beer flight" tastings of different craft brews. The high-end Baltimore caterer Chef's Expressions offers hors d'oeuvres consisting of a shot glass of beer and a burger slider.

One couple even set up tasting stations with beers from around the world, said Anja Winikka, site editor of TheKnot.com. Another couple who met in the Yukon served beer from Yukon Brewing in an ice-packed canoe.

When Julie Ho and Ben Rinn of New York City wed in April, they chose craft beers representing their Texas roots (Shiner Bock) and their college years at Johns Hopkins University (from local brewer Brewer's Art).

"A lot of weddings with beer you have your Coors Lights and your Bud Lights out," said Ho, who hired Chef's Expressions for the wedding at Johns Hopkins' stately Peabody Library. "We definitely wanted to have good beers out because we do enjoy drinking good beer. And then we also wanted to make sure we included what we like."

Bride Robin Lehr and groom Chris Lehr drink beer at their wedding reception in Austin, Texas. The Lehrs made four beers for their wedding.

There's little danger Champagne will get knocked off its bridal throne, but the craft brew buzz running through the wedding scene is yet another sign that beer — once a workingman's beverage sold in pop-top cans — has successfully transformed into a respectable artisanal beverage suitable for nuptial toasts.

Americans have warmed up to hoppier, tangier brews, and the volume of craft beer produced nationwide has jumped 83 percent since 2005, according to the Brewers Association, a trade group. Crucially, craft beers also have proven more female friendly. Unlike mainstream beer makers — who spend millions on commercials featuring man-children and their improbably hot girlfriends — the small-batch brews offer artisanal overtones and endless flavors.

But while craft beer has been making inroads for years, wedding industry people have really noticed its presence increasing in the last year or two. Winikka explained that the tradition-bound wedding industry tends to be slow to latch on to trends. She also noted that more couples are paying for their own weddings, and thus are less bound to expectations of what others want.

Plus, beer is really fun. "What you're seeing is that instead of the signature cocktail — like the fruity, weird martini thing that a lot of people were doing five, 10 years ago — couples are saying, 'That's not really our style, so were going to do a beer flight at our cocktail hour,'" Winikka said.

The brides and grooms demanding local brews are no different from the growing number of Americans scouting farmers market for local corn and grass-fed beef. And just as it has become easier to source food locally, it has become easier to find a local brewery.

Can't find the perfect beer to have and to hold on your wedding day? You can always brew your own.

Chris Lehr and his fiancée Robin made five different beers for their wedding in Austin, Texas, last year. This required a marathon 16-hour brewing day and for Lehr to truck in his kegerator (a small refrigerator built to hold a beer keg and fitted with a tap on top) to the reception.

Guests toasted the couple with Champagne while the wedding party toasted with a brown ale from northern California. But otherwise the alcohol choices were all barley-based: pale ale, India pale ale, German-style kolsch and honey hibiscus wit. They also gave away bottles of homemade porter.

"Everyone loved it. We had a few early evening casualties of people peeling off quickly because they over-enjoyed it," Lehr said. "But all in all, we had no complaints."

And the couple saved a growler of the porter to drink on their first anniversary.

A Lighter Way to Combine Corn, Smoke Flavor

STEPHANIE WITT
SEDGWICK

Special to The Washington Post

Smoky flavors and corn are a great mix, which is probably why corn so often accompanies classic smoked barbecue, but there's a lighter way to combine them. Smoked turkey or chicken mixed with grilled corn makes a delicious summery salad for lunch or a light supper.

When choosing smoked chicken or turkey, look for products labeled low-sodium where available. You can also brine boneless, skinless turkey or chicken for 30 minutes, then smoke it on the grill using wood chips.

This salad can be made a day in advance.

Smoked Turkey and Grilled Corn Salad

Makes 4 1/2 to 5 cups (6 servings).

3 ears corn, husks removed
8 ounces smoked boneless, skinless turkey or chicken breast, cut into 3/4-inch-long, 1/4-inch-thick matchsticks
1/3 cup raisins, coarsely chopped
1 medium carrot, grated (2 ounces, 1/2 cup grated)
4 or 5 large scallions, white and light-green parts, finely chopped (about 1/2 cup)
3 tablespoons finely chopped parsley
2 tablespoons apple cider

vinegar
1 tablespoon honey
1 teaspoon Dijon-style mustard
2 tablespoons olive oil
Salt
Freshly ground black pepper

Prepare the grill for direct heat. If using a gas grill, preheat to medium-high (450 degrees). If using a charcoal grill, light the charcoal or wood briquettes; when the briquettes are ready, distribute them evenly under the cooking area. For a medium-hot fire, you should be able to hold your hand about 6 inches above the coals for 4 to 5 seconds. Rinse the ears of corn and wrap them individually, still damp, in aluminum foil. Transfer to the grill, cover and cook for 20 to 25 minutes, rotating the packets every 5 to 7 minutes, until each ear is tender and lightly browned in some areas. Allow the corn to cool in the foil for 10 minutes, then unwrap it. When the ears are cool enough to handle, cut the kernels from the cobs. Discard the cobs and transfer the kernels to a large bowl. Add the turkey, raisins, carrot, scallions and parsley.

Whisk together the vinegar, honey, mustard and oil in a bowl to form an emulsified dressing. Season with salt and pepper to taste. Pour over the turkey mixture and toss to combine. Taste, and adjust the seasoning as needed. Let the salad sit for at least 15 minutes before serving, or refrigerate until ready to serve.

BLACK AND GOLD SCRIMMAGE NETS FEW ANSWERS

BY DAVID BASHORE

TWIN FALLS • College of Southern Idaho volleyball coach Heidi Cartisser hoped Tuesday's "Black and Gold" intrasquad scrimmage would yield a few answers for her lineup in this weekend's season-opening tournament. No such luck.

The middle blockers for both sides, who've been in a day-by-day race to establish themselves above the others, didn't generate much separation in the practice match, which the Gold team won, two sets to one.

My high school team's Tennessee Left was a game-changer, reserved only for the biggest of situations.

The thing that made this particular play so devastating was that there was literally no indicator as to when it would happen. We lined up in the same formation on every play, single back with a flanker and wide receiver to each side, and would seldom send a guy in motion.

At the snap, the left-side flanker would pivot to face the quarterback and essentially take a couple steps backward, waiting for the pass. At the same time, the outside receiver would execute a crackback block on the inside guy's defender. His own defender would follow just enough to let the inside guy gain the outside edge. The pulling lineman, in an

Declo Foes Have Little to Guard Against

BY RYAN HOWE
rhowe@magicvalley.com

DECLO • When Declo reached back-to-back Class 2A state championship games in 2008 and 2009, the Times-News looked to the small Cassia County school to select its 11-man Football MVP.

Typically in the sport of football, such an honor is bestowed upon a quarterback or running back who has flashy statistics. The yards and touchdowns were easy to measure those years for Hornet heroes like Tanner Field, Larsen Webb, Tyler Briggs and Jeremy Jenkins.

But who received the MVP instead? Declo's right guard, Sage Warner.

"He's everything to our running game," Declo head coach Kelly Kidd said of Warner, who is now a redshirt sophomore playing at Idaho State. "He's big and athletic and he runs as well as the running backs do!"

Kidd hopes to say the same about his right guard every year. For Declo's wing-T offense to work, "the right guard is the guy I have to trust the most on the football field. He is very valuable," Kidd said.

Declo's right guard acts as a fullback on the line of scrimmage, pulling as a lead blocker on most running plays.

"You have to be able to get off the line quick, get your hands where you need to, and get your feet moving," said senior Kage Osterhout, who will be a two-year starter at the position. "You have to be pretty fast to beat the running backs to the hole."

Osterhout fits the mold of a Declo right guard. He's 6-foot-3, 215 pounds and a state champion wrestler.

"If we don't do our job, the running backs can't get anywhere," Osterhout said. "We have to block as hard as we can and work our hardest to get those blocks right!"

In his 17 years as head coach, Kidd hasn't changed much. Opposing coaches worth their weight in athletic tape already

Declo's Zip 441 Beta Trap

This play has been a Declo staple for almost two decades. All opponents have it in their scouting reports, but that doesn't make it any less effective. It all comes down to execution. All Declo's plays work in a series, and this is just one in the Hornets' trap series. Six other options can stem from this play.

1. Before the snap, this player goes in motion.
2. The most valuable player in Declo's offense is the right guard, who has to be smart, strong and quick. On this play, he pulls and kicks out the defensive tackle, A.
3. This running back is key to opening the center of the field. His fake must freeze the defensive end and linebacker, B and C.
4. The quarterback boots the opposite direction, occupying the attention of the defensive end and outside linebacker, D.
5. Wide receiver gets downfield to the safety, creating a cutback block for the ball carrier.

Cutthroat Girls Aiming High in 2012

BY DAVID BASHORE
dbashore@magicvalley.com

SUN VALLEY • It always seems to be a different team that eventually figures the Community School out.

In 2011, it was eventual Class 3A girls soccer champion McCall-Donnelly that took a hard-fought 1-0 semifinal decision, relegating the Cutthroats to playing for third place.

But they got a trophy by winning that game, and with nine starters returning, the Community School is hoping for a much happier ending to the 2012 campaign.

"That's definitely the goal. I don't see any reason we can't do that," head coach Kelly Feldman said. "We've been coming so close and to lose 1-0 in a game ... I think we could have done some different things, I think we have the opportunity to do something special this season."

The Community School returns nine starters, including leading scorer Hannah Dies and team MVP Jordan Fitzgerald, a winger by trade who moved to defense last season to help the team. Both are part of a large junior class Feldman hopes will continue its growth and play a key role in getting the Cutthroats over the top.

"As has kind of been the case the last two years, the (current) junior class is really the backbone and strength of the team, and now they're looking at

Burley Girls Beat Declo, 2-1

rhowe@magicvalley.com

BURLEY • Considering the two teams combined for only five wins last year, neither Burley nor Declo was going to overlook the importance of this early-season cross-county nonconference girls soccer match on Tuesday at Skaggs Events Center.

After enduring a lightning delay and a drenching rainstorm, Burley emerged 2-1 with its first victory of the season.

And Declo left with some confidence, having gone toe-to-toe with its Class 4A counterpart, the difference being a Hornet own-goal.

"They were the better side, there's no question," Declo coach Tim Henrickson said. "What a great experience, to play in a place like this... Everybody played and there was no pressure, you're a 2A stepping up to a 4A. It was probably better for us than it was for them because it was a challenge for us. They had more speed and more ball skill, but we knew what our game plan was."

Sarah Henrickson scored Declo's goal and the game was tied 1-1 in the waning moments until Burley's Aubrie Vale netted the deciding goal.

"I chewed on them too much today, and I shouldn't have," said Burley coach Ray Sansom. "I felt like I was going to leave it to them to do their stuff, but my mouth's open again because I'm not seeing what I want. They tell me what they need to do, they're telling me they're not going to bunch up, they're going to pass more, they're going to talk to each other. Did it happen? No. It's kids trying to learn."

Declo (0-2) hosts the Community School today. Burley (1-1) travels to American Falls Saturday.

Clemens Hopes to Have Fun in His Return to Baseball

ASSOCIATED PRESS

SUGAR LAND, Texas • Hours after Roger Clemens agreed to join the Sugar Land Skeeters, he was back on the field playing in an over-50 softball league.

And the ultra-competitive Clemens, now a half-century old, was quick to point out just how well he did against that group of geezers.

"I hit two homers, by the way," he said.

Things will be a bit tougher on Saturday when he is scheduled to start for the independent Atlantic League team at home against Bridgeport. The right-hander agreed to play for the team on Monday and was introduced on Tuesday.

Whether this all leads to Clemens pitching in the major leagues — the seven-time Cy Young Award winner played that down, conceding he's nowhere near big league pitching shape.

"I'm 50 years old. We're just going to go out and have fun with this and make it fun for the fans," said Clemens, who has a touch of gray stubble on his chin but still sports a shock of blond highlights in his hair.

Clemens didn't understand all the rules of his old-man softball league at first. When he hit his first home run and dashed to first base, his teammates told him to stop. He thought it was because home runs weren't allowed. It turned out that the over-50 set doesn't see the need to run all of the bases on a homer.

"I really play in that league for the exercise and the fun," he said.

He laughed off questions about playing professionally at an age when he qualifies for an AARP card.

"I hope nothing breaks and I hope I don't pull anything," a still fit-looking Clemens said.

Some believe his return to the minor leagues is the first step to another comeback in the major leagues, where he last pitched for the New York Yankees in 2007 at age 45. Clemens is set to appear on the Hall of Fame ballot going to voters late this year. If he plays in a major league game this year, his Hall consideration would be pushed back five years.

He isn't sure how he'll be perceived by voters when his name appears on the ballot.

"Sure, the Hall of Fame is great, I've told people that. But it's not going to change my life either way," he said. "But if there's something there that somebody feels like they have a grudge or want to hold something against you, I can't control that one bit."

Clemens said thinking about a big league comeback is premature.

He dismissed the theory that the minor league appearance was a step on the path to a big league return.

"I've been to the major leagues and back a couple of times," he said. "I've retired and unretired, so I wouldn't consider thinking that far ahead. I'm just going to try to get through Saturday. I think I can compete a little bit."

A return at his age wouldn't be all that outlandish, considering that Jamie Moyer returned from elbow ligament replacement surgery to start for the Colorado Rockies this season. Clemens chuckled when asked about Moyer.

"People are trying to ingrain that in my mind that 50 is now the new 40," he said. "But I'm not buying it because I'm still having to pack myself in a lot of ice."

He says he talks to new Houston Astros owner Jim Crane often but that he has not talked about pitching for the Astros and that he doesn't see that happening.

He isn't committing to playing more than one game for the Skeeters, who play in a Houston suburb, saying he wants to see how Saturday goes first.

tacking positions, while Ashia Joseph did little to soften her grip on the setter position.

The play was dazzling at times, sloppy at others. Players noted that as something to improve ahead of the Buffalo Wild Wings Tournament, during which the NJCAA's top-ranked Golden Eagles will take on four opponents over two days.

"I thought we could have done better and brought more energy for the fans that came," Passi said.

It's partially understandable: This team has been grinding against itself for the best part of three weeks, which gets tiresome after a while. They looked toward Friday's matches with anticipation.

"We're just ready to go out and play someone else," Brandsma said.

and that's a good thing," Cartisser said. "That means that we have two units and we can keep changing them as needed until someone establishes herself."

In any given five-point stretch, Kristen Brandsma, Brooke Jensen or Kaylee Holmstead could have been the best middle on the team. CSI moved outside Eseta Maka into the middle for some work as well, along with freshman Alyssa Povey.

The outsiders and right sides seem to have some level of clarity, Cartisser said. She wouldn't disclose names, but Tineke Bierma, Keani Passi and Emily Ottinger appeared to be the frontrunners for the at-

Seahawks to Start Wilson vs. Kansas City

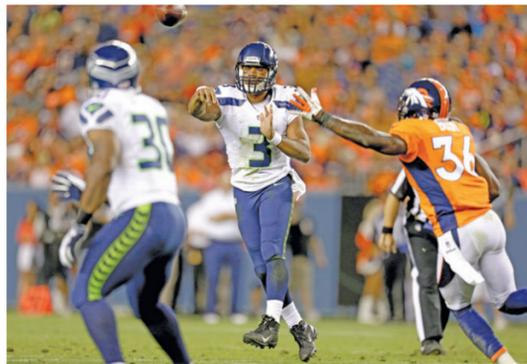

ASSOCIATED PRESS

RENTON, Wash. • After two dynamic second-half performances, rookie Russell Wilson is going to get his opportunity with the Seattle Seahawks' starting offense.

And by starting Wilson, finding a winner in one of the last remaining quarterback competitions in the NFL will drag on another week closer to the start of the regular season.

Seattle coach Pete Carroll, who announced on Tuesday that Wilson will start against Kansas City on Friday, doesn't care what the conventional beliefs are. Carroll said the decision on his starting quarterback could be made as late as the week of the regular-season opener.

"We told you we were going to need preseason to figure this thing out and I think we're moving along positively and I have no concern about the timing of this other than we need information and we need to figure it out," Carroll said. "This is about competition. This is what we've always been about and if somebody doesn't see it that way then they don't understand us and I can't do anything about that. This is a great competitive opportunity to watch and for me to oversee as a coach and it's exciting and it's been fun to see it through and we're going to finish it up the next couple of weeks."

If nothing else, the two performances from Wilson at least piqued interest in what he could do with the starting offense for the Seahawks (No. 22, APro32). He's completed 22 of 33 passes for 279 yards, three touchdowns and one interception. Wilson has also run for 92 yards and a touchdown. His passer rating of 110.5 ranks third among all qualifying QBs in the preseason behind Philadelphia rookie Nick Foles and Atlanta starter Matt Ryan.

Van Garderen Leads at USA Pro Challenge

ASSOCIATED PRESS

MT. CRESTED BUTTE, Colo. • Tejay van Garderen of Tacoma, Wash., moved to the front in the final 500 uphill yards and claimed the second stage and the race lead Tuesday at the USA Pro Challenge.

Van Garderen, who rides for BMC, completed the 99.2-mile from Montrose to Mt. Crested Butte road race in 3 hours, 52 minutes and 24 seconds.

Christian Vande Velde (Garmin-Sharp) of Lemont, Ill., finished second in the same time. Ivan Rovny (Rusvelo) of Russia was third, trailing the stage winner by six seconds.

Van Garderen, who was fifth and was the highest American finisher last month in the Tour de France, has the same overall time as Vande Velde. But van Garderen is the race leader based on his higher Stage 2 finish. Defending race titlist Levi Leipheimer (Omega Pharma-QuickStep) of Santa Rosa, Calif., finished fourth in the stage and is fourth overall, trailing by eight seconds.

have all Declo's base plays in their scouting reports. Warner said the players are aware that they're running the same old offense, but why fix something if it's not broken?

"We knew we could trust our coaches because they had so much success. We knew it would work, so we had full faith in it," Warner said. "It doesn't matter if the defense knows the plays you're running. If you execute them well, it doesn't matter. We worked a ton on (execution), because if you can't get the little things right, you're not going to get the big things right."

Knowing that the position is vital to the offense, Declo's right guard has to be a guy who thrives under pressure — a guy like Warner, who instead viewed the responsibility this way: "It's not a pressure spot; it's more like a spot where you have a lot of opportunities to make big plays."

ideal world, would beat the ball carrier to the safety. If he did, the play would almost certainly result in a touchdown. If not, it was still a 15- to 20-yard gain.

It was pretty far down in the play repertoire, and we only used it a handful of times all season, but Tennessee netted a big gain virtually every time it was called upon.

Every coach has that go-to play, the one he knows he can count on when things are at their worst. Zip 441 Beta Trap is detailed in today's sports section, and five other schools were equally gracious in supplying us with one of the plays integral to their success. Atlanta Braves second baseman Dan Uggla makes the tag on Washington Nationals third baseman Ryan Zimmerman (11) during the fourth inning of Tuesday's game in Washington.

Strasburg Dazzles, Wins 15th Game

ASSOCIATED PRESS

Stephan Strasburg struck out 10 and allowed one run in six innings for his 15th win, helping the Washington Nationals beat the Atlanta Braves 4-1 on Tuesday night.

For weeks, the impending shutdown of Strasburg (15-5) has been the talk of baseball and though the Nationals haven't said exactly what their limit for the star right-hander is, it's thought to be between 160 and 180 innings. After this start, his fourth straight win, when he allowed four hits and walked one, he has thrown 145 1-3 innings.

Talk of his innings limit overshadowed discussion of the NL East race. Washington's win gave the Nationals a seven-game lead over second-place Atlanta, their largest of the season.

Ian Desmond and Jesus Flores homered for Washington. Tyler Clippard pitched the ninth for the first time in almost a year.

Estrada (1-5) started for the 16th time this season and made 14 relief appearances over this season and last since his 11-4 win at Pittsburgh on Aug. 23, 2011.

BREWERS 5, CUBS 2 MILWAUKEE

WHITE SOX 7, YANKEES 3

Kevin Youkilis hit a grand slam, Paul Konerko homered and DeWayne Wise had four hits Tuesday night as the Chicago White Sox rallied for the second straight game.

Chicago, which fell behind 3-0 in Monday night's opener before winning 9-6, trailed 2-0 after one inning Tuesday in the matchup of division leaders.

ROYALS 1, RAYS 0, 10 INNINGS

Eric Hosmer's two-out single in the 10th inning drove in the only run in a classic pitchers' duel between the Royals' Luke Hochevar and the Rays' David Price.

ORIOLES 5, RANGERS 3 ARLINGTON, Texas

Nate McLouth's two-run home run keyed Baltimore's four-run fifth inning.

ROCKIES 6, METS 2 NEW YORK

Jhoulys Chacin made an impressive return from an extended absence and the Rockies backed him with a pair of sharp defensive plays.

ANGELS 5, RED SOX 3 BOSTON

Mark Trumbo hit his career-high 30th homer, Ervin Santana pitched 6 1-3 solid innings and the Los Angeles Angels snapped a four-game losing streak.

TIGERS 5, BLUE JAYS 3 DETROIT

Max Scherzer struck out eight in seven impressive innings, and the Detroit Tigers took advantage of Ricky Romero's wildness.

ROMERO 8 (-11) lost his 10th straight decision, allowing five runs, seven hits and eight walks in 5 1-3 innings. He didn't strike out a batter.

More at Stake Than $10 Million in FedEx Cup

BY DOUG FERGUSON
Associated Press

FARMINGDALE, N.Y. • The FedEx Cup was all about the $10 million bonus when it began in 2007 because there was nothing left to decide.

Tiger Woods was the best player in golf, and everyone knew it.

He already had won five times that year, including the PGA Championship at Southern Hills. He already had earned $7.8 million on the PGA Tour, making it impossible for anyone to catch him without winning all four play-off events, which was bordering on impossible. There was no debate on player of the year.

Golf is more unpredictable these days.

And that's what makes the FedEx Cup playoffs, which start this week at Bethpage Black, more compelling than $10 million to the winner.

Thanks to changes that former U.S. captain Paul Azinger brought to the Ryder Cup — specifically waiting three weeks to decide the captain's picks — the next two tournaments will serve as an audition for a half-dozen players trying to get on the team.

Rickie Fowler and Dustin Johnson are two of them, and they played together Tuesday during a practice round at The Barclays. Not only were they linked as possible picks, they were partners in a game against Phil Mickelson and Keegan Bradley.

"You guys playing a match?" one of the fans called out to Mickelson from behind the ropes.

"Just for funnies," Mickelson said, with a laugh that made it clear that more was at stake.

The prevailing thought is that Davis Love III has a good idea on three of his four picks. Hunter Mahan barely missed out qualifying and finished ninth, which shows the quality of American play this year because he won two times, including his thorough win over Rory McIlroy at the Match Play Championship. Steve Stricker and Jim Furyk also appear to be logical picks, leaving Love with one more choice.

Fowler? Johnson? Brandt Snedeker?

Winning at Bethpage Black this week, or at the TPC Boston next week in the second playoff event, could make it tough for Love to leave any of them out.

"If I play well the next two weeks, I would hope that I'd definitely be in consideration," said Johnson, who has won every year since his rookie season in 2008. "But I think I've had a good year, other than I didn't play for three months. But hopefully, the captain knows that, and he'll make the right decision."

There are four picks. But there might only be one, two at the most.

"He probably already has the guys he's going to pick," Johnson said. "And these next couple weeks probably could change his mind. But most of the guys have played well all week, and I've played pretty solid all year long and I think I'd be a great asset to the team. And hopefully, I'll get picked."

PGA Tour members vote on player of the year. The ballots aren't due until after the final event at Disney in November, and it was so close last year that Luke Donald and Webb Simpson played deep into the Fall Series. Simpson and Donald finished Nos. 1-2 in the FedEx Cup. Neither won a major. Donald finished the season with a 64 to win Disney and capture the money title. Only then was it an easy vote.

That probably won't be the case this time.

For three players, their only win was a major — Simpson (U.S. Open), Bubba Watson (Masters) and Ernie Els (British Open). The leading candidate for player of the year going into the FedEx Cup playoffs is McIlroy, who won the Honda Classic and the PGA Championship, setting a record with his eight-shot margin.

Not to be forgotten is Woods, who has won three times this year. No one else has more than two.

Els, Simpson and Watson could make it a five-man race if they were to win the FedEx Cup, which means they would have to win another tournament. Keep in mind that the next four weeks — particularly the next two with a full field — feature some of the strongest fields of the year.

Woods (No. 1 in the standings) and McIlroy (No. 3) are in the same group the opening two rounds at Bethpage, which is fitting. How they perform over the next month could decide who wins player of the year.

Woods is a 10-time winner of the award, including two of those years when he failed to win a major.

The closest vote was in 2003, when he had one more win than Vijay Singh (5 to 4), and won the Vardon Trophy for the lowest scoring average while Singh won the money title. Neither won a major. Three years ago, Woods won despite not having a major because he won six times, including the FedEx Cup. McIlroy has a major, and the degree of dominance will not be overlooked. He joined Woods as the only players to win majors by at least eight shots since 1976.

Woods probably has to win a playoff event to capture player of the year. And if McIlroy were to win a playoff event, that should be enough for him to win unless Woods were to win twice, including the FedEx Cup.

Beyond the Ryder Cup and the tour's biggest award, the FedEx Cup offers something for each of the 125 players who qualified — hope.

Heath Slocum was the only player who moved into the top 125 last week, moving up to No. 124. He is a long shot, though history is on his side. Three years ago, Slocum narrowly got into playoffs at No. 124 and made a 10-foot putt on the last hole at The Barclays to beat Woods, Els, Stricker and Padraig Harrington. That assured him a spot in the Tour Championship and in all four majors.

The goal for Slocum is keep playing as long as he can — the top 100 go to the second round in Boston, the top 70 to the third event in Indianapolis. He is in the playoffs, though there is no guarantee that Slocum will have his PGA Tour card locked up when the playoffs are over. That might be more important for him than who gets picked for the Ryder Cup or voted PGA Tour player of the year.

Tiger Woods, pictured during the final round of the PGA Championship Aug. 12, used to dominate so heavily that the PGA Tour invented the FedEx Cup to create compelling late-season play. Now he's 'just' one of the guys trying to win the Cup and player of the year honors.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

"They must conquer or die who've no retreat."

— John Gay

A first look at West's hand might suggest that South is in deep trouble in his four-spade contract. However, as long as declarer is careful, he can overcome even this terrible trump break!

West leads the heart 10, overtaken by East with the jack to play the heart king.

If declarer discards a diamond, the defenders can take only one more trick, a trump.

On a diamond shift, declarer wins the ace, draws one round of trumps, then plays on clubs. West can ruff the third round, but dummy's trump six will take care of a heart exit. If at trick three East plays a third round of hearts instead of shifting, South discards a second diamond and ruffs in dummy. Next, he draws five rounds of trumps, then plays on clubs. As West no longer has a heart left, he makes his long trump, but then has to return a diamond. Declarer makes five trumps in hand, a heart ruff in dummy, the diamond ace and three clubs. Note that if declarer ruffs the second heart, the contract fails, as it allows the defense to make a heart and either three trumps, or two trumps and a diamond.

The only risk of discarding a diamond is a club ruff, but that is a highly unlikely risk, particularly since East did not follow with his lowest heart on the opening lead — which he would have done had he wanted the ruff.

ANSWER: It is all too easy to raise or jump in diamonds and end up defending against a spade contract on a diamond lead. Your partner doesn't know about your source of tricks, but you can tell him right now. As a passed hand, your jump to four clubs should show a diamond fit and a source of tricks in clubs. That may help your partner decide whether to bid on, or what to lead if he ends up on defense.

DEAR ABBY: My friend was at a local event, a child's graduation. There was a woman whose rear end was exposed sitting in the row ahead. Several people took pictures and posted them on Facebook.

My concern is for the woman's family. My friend couldn't think of an easy way to tell her. My question is, how do you tactfully tell someone about her (or his) exposed buttocks without offending the person?

— JUST ASKING IN ILLINOIS

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

DEAR JUST ASKING: The person who designed low-rise pants for women, frankly, should be taken to the stocks for public punishment. They flatter no one, particularly when the wearer bends or sits. If it's not the flesh drooping over the waistband, it's the Great Rift Valley visible from the rear.

Robert Burns, a Scottish poet, wrote in 1786 (I am paraphrasing) that if some power would give us the gift to see ourselves as others see us, it would free us from "many a blunder"! How right he was.

Had your friend informed the woman in the row ahead that her pants had slipped so low that people were photographing the view, she probably would have been less offended than embarrassed. The message should have been conveyed QUIETLY by another woman if one felt enough compassion to do it.

DEAR ABBY: I was married for 22 years. My husband was verbally, mentally and emotionally abusive to me. I took it for my kids' sake.

My daughter recently had a son, and my ex wants nothing to do with him. He says if we don't name the baby after him, the baby doesn't need him in his life. My heart hurts for my grandson. My daughter is not with the baby's daddy. All the baby has is my daughter, my son and me. I don't know how a grandparent can't want to be a part of an innocent baby's life.

My ex is 45 and living with a 23-year-old. I just want him to at least give the baby a chance to know who his grandfather is. If there is no love there when they meet, we won't pursue a relationship. He is upset with me. I don't know why, because he's the one who asked for the divorce. What do you think about this?

— CONFUSED IN PHOENIX

DEAR CONFUSED: Your ex-husband may be upset with you because he feels some guilt about the divorce, and rather than accept it, he is blaming you for it.

If you think this baby might somehow smooth over the years of abuse you experienced from him, please forget it. It is perfectly logical that your daughter wouldn't want to name her child for him after witnessing what he put you through for so many years — so please don't let her be coerced into it.

Because your ex is the kind of person he is, it would be better for all of you if the little boy DOESN'T get to know him. You married a self-centered, selfish, controlling individual. Consider yourself lucky that he's not pushing for involvement, because if that happens he will continue to treat all of you exactly the way he used to.

IF AUGUST 22 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: This week, you might be in a rush to start something just for the sake of getting it done. Sit back, relax and enjoy birthday cake because the only person you are competing with is yourself. You will be better off applying your executive skills in December when your financial skills and business knowledge give you the upper hand. That is an excellent time to make new friends, pursue a new romantic relationship and to make crucial decisions. People who are good for you will actually become closer next June, while those who do not have your best interests at heart won't get a foothold, making that an ideal time to launch crucial plans.

HOROSCOPE
Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Cheer for change. You are dynamic, electric and inspiring when given a chance to lead others through lightning-fast alterations or when faced by emergency situations. The games you play receive publicity.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Fools rush in where angels fear to tread. Your sympathetic side may want to bring a stray dog home or give money to the homeless guy on the corner, but don't meddle where you shouldn't.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Inside information helps you succeed in the outer world. You might do better in the long run by reviewing past decisions and adhering to them then by making new policies. A gamble is risky business.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Someone or something might float your boat. However, you might be wise to remain safely in dry dock. Acting out a romantic fantasy might put you at a disadvantage during the next few days.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You know what happens if you hold your breath. You cannot stop progress or changes. Interfere with the natural functions of life and you will suffer the consequences. Pursue progress with aplomb.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Resist the irresistible. Keep your wallet buttoned up in your pocket. Someone may be sensitive to criticism, so keep your attention directed fully on your own actions. It is a poor time to make waves.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A few errors are bound to creep in since you are only human. When you are all thumbs, other people might thumb their nose at you. Get more organized and accept your limitations gracefully.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Get moving. You can suck your thumb for comfort like a baby or use it to hitchhike where you want to go. Those who are feeling insecure are more likely to retreat from the world or act defensively.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Be an action figure. Your heroic acts can keep things on track. You can take steps to make a change for the better. You will be held back if you lend your shoulder for someone to cry on.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Don't spend too much to feed a passion for success. Hold off on launching a new and important new venture. You might be in too much of a hurry to get started; a re-examination of facts is in order.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): The cosmic weather takes a turn for the better soon. You can move forward on important projects if you have complete support from a partner or loved one. Do not rely on vague assurances or promises.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Your judgment will be far better tomorrow; sleep on major decisions before acting. In some instances, your tendency to be gentle and to concentrate on being sympathetic could rub others the wrong way.

A Play by Any Other Name ...

Minico's brand of immortality can come in having a play named for you; one that's still used even after the player has graduated.

BY RYAN HOWE

rhowe@magicvalley.com

RUPERT • What's in a name?

Ace Right Zebra 53 Jet X 951.

Huh?

Once a player learns his playbook, the terminology is actually quite simple.

For example, "Poke Screen Left" is named after Skylar "Poke" Morgan, who graduated in 2009, owning all the school's major rushing records.

The play has two options: a bubble screen to the receiver lined up wide to the right, or a slip screen to the running back off the left end.

The play worked so well in the 2008 season, partly because of all-state wide receiver Landon Barnes. As Minico's career leader in receiving yards, defenses had to respect Barnes with double coverage, leaving the running back screen option wide open.

"Defenses had to pick one of us to guard, because they couldn't guard both of us," said Barnes, who is now attending Boise State. "It worked 90 percent of the time running it to Poke. I think we only ran it to me a couple times."

Morgan, who is serving a church mission, was unavailable for comment.

Barnes has part of the Minico playbook named after him, too, called "Lando Motion." Basically, Barnes used to line up anywhere on the field, then motion or shift anywhere he wanted — as long as he was in the right spot when the ball was snapped.

"Motion really messes up the linebackers and safeties. We wanted to always have the defense moving around and thinking," Barnes said. "(Quarterback) Chris (Joyce) was like, 'I have no idea where you're going, I'm just going to lift my leg up and snap the ball.'"

It's still in the playbook, but Minico doesn't use "Lando Motion" as much as it used to, mostly for two reasons. First, the Spartans have transitioned to an up-tempo Wing-T offense that doesn't lend itself to that type of motion. Second, not many kids have that level of football IQ. As a coach's kid — Minico offensive coordinator Steve Barnes is his dad — Landon

What made this play a staple for Minico in 2007 and 2008 was the Spartans had a pair of special players in running back Skylar "Poke" Morgan and wide receiver Landon Barnes, the school's all-time leaders in rushing and receiving yards, respectively. Although Minico has recently gone to a Wing-T offense, the Spartans still run Poke Screen today, and it's still named after the player who made it famous.

1. There are two options, and the quarterback's read is easy - he simply counts defenders covering the twin receivers to the right. If there are two or fewer defenders, the quarterback takes a one-step drop and hits the inside receiver on a bubble screen.

2. If the defense sends a second defender to cover the twin receivers with the free safety over the top (as shown in this example), then the quarterback takes a five-step drop and looks to the running back, who blocks the left defensive end for one count, then slips underneath for the screen pass.

3. Both the tight end and receiver split to the left release to pull defenders downfield with them.

4. Regardless of where the quarterback throws the ball, the blocking remains the same for the linemen, who pass set, and then get downfield to block the linebackers.

Minico

"He was smart enough to know, if I line up in a trips set, they're going to pull more defenders this way, then I will motion across and we might get a matchup that we need," said Minico head coach Tim Perrigot. "Boise State is good at doing that."

A handful of other Minico plays are also named after former players.

"Over Right 80 Coatsy Special" is a pass play that made Andy Coats an all-state wide receiver in 2000.

In 2005, Minico had a tight end named Andy Carlisle who would line up on the wrong side of the Spartans' twin receiver formation.

"We used to get so ticked at him for lining up wrong, but then we noticed defenses weren't adjusting to the unbalanced set and it created great blocking angles," said Perrigot.

So they added it to the playbook and now the formation is known as "X Right Andy."

Head coach: Tim Perrigot, 17th season

2011 Recap: Minico went undefeated (9-0) in the regular season for the second time in program history. However, the Spartans' playoff demons arose and frustrated them again in a heart-wrenching, down-to-the-wire 27-20 Great 8 upset to Hillcrest.

Senior Spotlight: Tanner Stallings, linebacker

He was averaging 11.8 tackles per game before his junior season was cut short due to a knee injury. Despite missing games, the 6-foot-3, 210-pound senior was still named first team all-Great Basin Conference. He's worked hard in the off-season to rehab the knee and the Spartans expect him to be back in top form.

Dream Season: After winning its seventh Great Basin Conference title in eight years, the Spartans get the postseason monkey of their back and reach the first state championship game in school history.

Nightmare Scenario: Long road trips to California, Idaho Falls, Wood River and Preston drain the Spartans, who are already short on depth. Banged up and worn out, Minico has nothing left for the final three weeks of the season against GBC foes Jerome, Canyon Ridge and Twin Falls and consequently lose its stronghold on the conference championship.

Flashback • Minico

| Oct. 26  | Jerome*         | 7 p.m. |

Head coach: Jed Thomas, first season

2011 Recap: A 16-6 win at Twin Falls in Week 3 appeared to be the spark Burley needed to turn the corner. However, the Bobcats went on to lose four of its next five games to finish 2-6. Then during the offseason, head coach Jeff Green resigned after two seasons at the helm and a 2-14 record.

Senior Spotlight: Bernardo Solis, center/defensive line Solis not only gets the job done on the field, he's also an excellent student in the classroom. He showed up every day to summer weights and conditioning, pushing himself to be his best. "He's done everything I've asked and he's a class act," Thomas said.

Dream Season: Starting the season against two Class 3A opponents, Burley builds momentum, setting up the hype for the Burley-Minico rivalry game Sept 14, with both teams going in undefeated. Burley isn't ready to topple the Spartans yet, but led by Thomas, Burley finishes the season 5-4, marking its first winning season since Thomas himself was a senior in 2002.

Nightmare Scenario: Breaking in their third new head coach in four years, the Bobcats stumble out of the gates against Filer and Buhl. Another demoralizing loss to rival Minico - for the eighth straight year - is the straw that breaks the Bobcats' back, they finish 1-8 and then dust off their tired battle cry, "Wait 'til next year."

Jerome Tigers

Head coach: Sid Gambles, first season
2011 Recap: The win total wasn't as high as Tiger fans are accustomed to, but few teams progressed as nicely as Jerome did in 2011, and with a little luck, its 2-6 record could have been 4-4 or even better. The offense put up 22 or more points against every GBC opponent, the only team in the league to do so. If the defense can do its part, the Tigers could be a surprise team in 2012.

Senior Spotlight: Zac Hammer, linebacker Appropriately named for a linebacker, the Jerome senior has (perhaps predictably) been asked to "bring the hammer" this fall. Gambles views Hammer as an integral part of a young Tiger squad, anchoring the team's run defense and serving as an elder statesman to the up-and-comers. If he can live up to his name and bring some of those younger kids along, Jerome might finally have a defense to match its rapid-fire offensive attack.

Dream Season: Jerome's high-powered offense is as good as advertised, but the defense is opportunistic, if not indomitable, and creates several timely turnovers. Outside of Shelley, no one on Jerome's schedule has the defense to stop the Tigers until they reach the state semifinals, where the offense runs into a superior stop unit and has its first truly high turnover game of the year.

Nightmare Scenario: The offense moves the ball easily between the 20s, but scoring points is another matter. Although the Tigers are good for 25-30 points per game, it's not enough for a defense that frequently surrenders a touchdown or more per game. It gets out of the GBC basement it shared last year with Burley, but it's obvious the Tigers leave even more wins on the field.

Head coach: Justin Alsterlund, first season

2011 Recap: For the second straight year, the Riverhawks doubled their win total - they've won one, two and four games in their first three seasons. It was also in contention for a playoff spot until losing its final two games of the season. But the biggest news came in the offseason when coach Dave Slotten resigned in March after being charged with driving under the influence, although the charges were later dropped.

Senior Spotlight: Payton Rojas, linebacker/fullback

Who? Rojas, who has never played a down of varsity football, is emblematic of the rise in participation seen under Alsterlund, who describes the 6-2, 225-pounder as "very athletic, but very raw." Rojas is not guaranteed to be an every-down player, but if he is - and there are a few more uncovered gems on the roster - the Riverhawks could be better than projected.

Dream Season: The rise in wins continues, although not at the rate of the last two years. Canyon Ridge wins six games, finishes second in the GBC and makes the playoffs but all of that takes a backseat to a 28-27 victory against Twin Falls and police having to break up the post-game revelry that spills over into the neighboring Walmart parking lot.

Nightmare Scenario: Alsterlund's efforts to incorporate new wrinkles in the Riverhawks' double-wing offense yields more growing pains than victories. There's a bounce-back win against Wood River to end the season after blowouts to Twin Falls and Minico, but a 2-7 campaign stalls the progress made in each of the last two seasons.

Head coach: Kevin Stilling, fourth season

2011 Recap: It was a dream season for Wood River, as the Wolverines were relevant in the Great Basin Conference title chase until the penultimate game of the season. Leaning heavily on workhorse back Greg Lindbloom, who shattered multiple school rushing and scoring records, Wood River finished 6-4 and lost to eventual 4A champ Blackfoot in the playoffs.

Senior Spotlight: Drew Barsch, linebacker

Barsch has garnered almost no attention outside of the Wood River camp, despite leading the team in tackles in each of the last two seasons. Undersized for a linebacker, he makes up for it with a tireless work ethic and a display of leadership that makes other players rally around him. "He leads by example. Doesn't say much - you've really got to make him mad to get anything out of him, but when he talks people listen," Stilling said.

Dream Season: An even better version of Lindbloom steps up, the defense remains rock solid and close games go the Wolverines' way. They split a tough conference opening stretch with Twin Falls and Minico, but win out and tie for the GBC title en route to a seven-win regular season, one more than last year.

Nightmare Scenario: The offense takes a step backward and with no momentum gained in the nonconference season, blowout losses against Twin Falls and Minico set the tone for regression. Although Wood River wins two league games and escapes the GBC basement, 2011's success becomes a fleeting memory.

| Oct. 26  | Minico*         | 7 p.m. |

Head coach: Allyn Reynolds, sixth season

2011 Recap: Did any team provide as much drama as last year's Bruins? From the home loss to Burley, which snapped a 13-game overall losing skid for the Bobcats, to taking Minico down to the final play in what amounted to the GBC title game, no team played as many meaningful fourth-quarter minutes than the Bruins, who had six games decided by seven points or less and were involved in only one true blowout, a 41-10 Week 2 loss to Nampa.

Senior Spotlight: Jason Byce, linebacker

The Bruins' offense sputtered at times (15.6 PPG), but its defense was usually there to pick up the slack. Byce was in the middle of that, recording more than 100 tackles and earning all-conference honors. With almost all of the starters back on both sides of the ball, there should be less pressure to deliver, which could free up Byce and Co. for a big year defensively.

Dream Season: A season-opening loss to Hillcrest is followed by eight straight wins, the last three being particularly sweet for the Bruins as they come against their crosstown rival and teams that deal them their most embarrassing and painful losses from last year. There is no falling short in the final seconds this time against Minico, and there is plenty of representing as the Bruins make it all the way to the Class 4A title game.

Nightmare Scenario: If the Bruins' 1-3 start in non-league games doesn't give cause for concern, getting shredded by Jerome in the GBC opener sounds the alarm loud and clear. But it's a Week 7 loss to Canyon Ridge that signifies rock bottom for the Bruins' 2012 season.

dbashore@magicvalley.com

GOODING • Cole McGinnis has been through the fire enough with Gooding to know when things are at a pivotal point.

When that happens, he calls out for a particular play. Then the Senators relax, because they know they're in familiar territory.

"Especially if we have a negative yardage play or they're playing really tough defense, we just have to get back to our bread and butter," McGinnis said.

"Stretch Left," as it's called, is a fairly basic play. But it's also one of the most effective in Gooding's playbook.

In an ideal world, the play is more or less as follows:

McGinnis, Gooding's left tackle, seals the defensive end opposite him, while the two linemen next to him double-team the tackle and one moves on to pick up the linebacker to that side. The right guard battles the other tackle and the right tackle chip-blocks his end before moving to the other linebacker. Everyone else blocks the man across from him, running back Kyle Rison looks for a lane to cut back, and then he only has to beat the free safety for a touchdown.

ing scheme — but the overall play remains essentially the same.

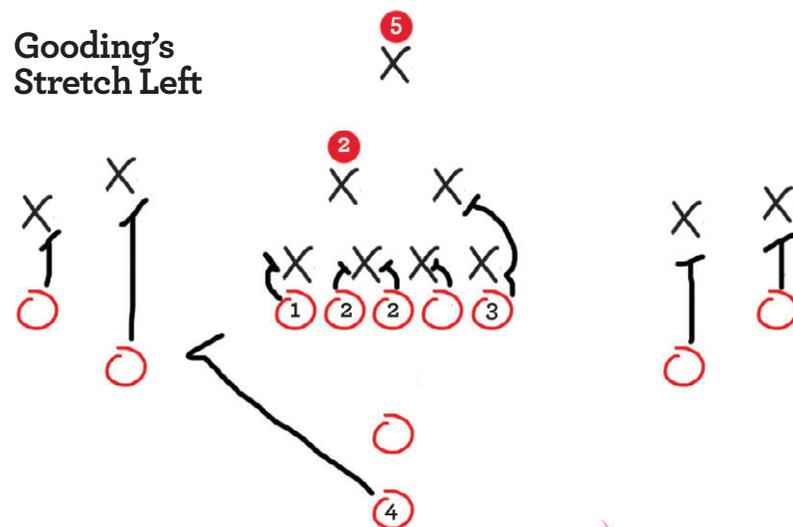

"It's Denver Broncos 101. The goal of the whole play is for Cole to win the first step," Gooding coach Cameron Andersen said. "The reason it's a go-to play is one, Cole is a good lineman, two (Rison) is a good running back, and three we build it into our kids' minds that on Stretch we need yards."

The formation doesn't tip when Stretch Left is coming. Gooding can run it under center, in the pistol, in shotgun, and with one or two backs in any kind of backfield alignment.

The idea is simple: get traffic flowing to Gooding's

Please see GOODING, Page 8

1. The left tackle (Cole McGinnis) "hook" blocks the defensive end to create a running lane.

2. The left guard and center double-team the defensive tackle while watching the linebacker. Which way the linebacker goes will dictate which lineman vacates the tackle to block the linebacker. 3. The right tackle "chip" blocks the defensive end before going upfield to block the other linebacker.

4. The running back, after getting outside the left tackle, has to look for a cutback lane. 5. If all goes to plan, the running back will be 1-on-1 with the free safety, guaranteeing at least a big gain or — if he beats the safety — possibly a touchdown.

left, trick the defense into overpursuit, and let Rison do the rest.

"I like the play because it's my style. If the tackle comes across Cole's face he can push him out and I'll go under, but usually people overpursue and it leaves a big cutback lane," Rison said. "You have to be able to be patient, because if you hit it 100 percent that's good, but it's the kind of play where it takes time to open up."

It runs to devastating success when correctly executed. So much so, in fact, that Gooding will call upon it in a number of different down-and-distance scenarios.

Andersen said he's seen success on third-and-1, and third-and-9, both for first downs. McGinnis mentioned times it went 50 or more yards for touchdowns.

"Usually if we break a play loose, it's off of that play," McGinnis said.

2011 Recap: A case of a team being better than its record. The Senators went 5-5, but weren't losing games they should have won, what with a brutal non-conference schedule (Butte County, Salmon, Wood River) and Canyon Conference bully Declo handing them their only regular season losses. A last-second victory against Marsing in the playoffs was followed by a blowout loss to eventual 2A champ Grangeville.

Senior Spotlight: Kevin Arkoosh, defensive back
 Arkoosh proved he can do a little bit of everything at Gooding's team camp this summer at New Plymouth. He's expected to be an anchor in Gooding's secondary, but with the team out of running backs he gave offense a try - and averaged almost 20 yards per carry. "He might be our most valuable player and nobody's talking about him," Andersen said.

Dream Season: A loss to Kimberly keeps Gooding from claiming the SCIC title in its first season back in Class 3A, but the transition is smooth otherwise. The Senators go 6-2 in the regular season, and like last year - but in a higher class - win a playoff game before bowing out.

Nightmare Scenario: Losing to Oakley - Gooding's Canyon Conference replacement and making the jump to 11-man football - gets the season off to a poor start. A three-game road losing streak in midseason only makes things worse, and the Senators finish with but one win in their new league, three overall.

| Oct. 19  | @ Kimberly*      | 7 p.m. |

Head coach: Bill Reynolds, second season
2011 Recap: On the surface, one to forget as evidenced by the 0-8 record. Further examination shows a team with some capability on offense (19.5 PPG) and an ability to keep games respectable (four losses by 10 points or less).

Senior Spotlight: Kyle Ackerman, tight end
 Ackerman was more of the blocker to Ryan Karel's pass-catcher at the tight end position last season. But with Karel graduated, Ackerman anticipates more chances in the passing game during his senior season. With a young team that's long on experience but short on success, it's essential that Ackerman and guys like him show up in both the run and pass game.

Dream Season: Road losses to Gooding and Kimberly keep the Wildcats out of the postseason. American Falls is just better. Everywhere else, especially at home, where the Wildcats go 4-0, there is nothing but wins as the Wildcats turn in a regular season to be proud of with a 5-3 record.

Nightmare Scenario: Just like last year, winnable games fall by the wayside and Gooding and Kimberly hand the Wildcats their worst losses of the season. For the second straight year, Filer is at the bottom of the SCIC and the hole seems deeper than ever before.

Buhl Indians

| Date     | Opponent       | Time   |

| Oct. 19  | @ Wendell      | 7 p.m. |

Head coach: Stacy Wilson, 11th season
2011 Recap: The Indians' 3-6 record doesn't jump out at anyone, but consider for a moment that it included three games against Class 4A teams and one of its wins came against a playoff team (Payette).

Senior Spotlight: Hunter Crown, defensive tackle
 At 6-foot-1, 230 pounds, Crown figures to be one of the biggest players in the conference. His size should bode well in the Indians' defensive game plan to stuff the run and make opposing offenses deviate from their plan.

Dream Season: A Week 6 loss at Canyon Ridge is the only blemish on the Indians' record heading into the SCIC showdown against Kimberly. But that matchup goes Buhl's way as well, en route to two more wins in the postseason, a trip to the Class 3A semifinals and a 9-win season.

Nightmare Scenario: The early games against Class 4A teams leave the Indians more battered and bruised than expected, leading to a winless season at home. While Buhl breaks through a couple of wins, they are against non-league teams, and a loss to Filer prevents it from reaching the playoffs.

THE 'T' STANDS FOR TWIST

At Kimberly, Bright's Wing-T is well known, but there are enough wrinkles involved to throw teams for a loop if they are not prepared.

BY PATRICK SHELTRA

psheltra@magicvalley.com

KIMBERLY • When compared to the countless hours of college and pro football television broadcasts available to football fans, to turn around and watch a high school game, in some ways, is like watching a completely different game.

For years, commentators have noted that teams run to set up the pass. But with the evolution of the passing game, its increased sophistication and rules

Please see KIMBERLY, Page 11

Kimberly's 3-18-G-Boot

1A + 1B: With most passing plays by run-oriented teams, its success lies first with a good fake by the quarterback, first to the fullback, then to the halfback.

2 and 2A: As the quarterback rolls out to his right, the first look is toward the free safety. If he bites aggressively on the run fake or covers another receiver running a shorter route, it becomes the receiver's job to get behind him. An accurate throw and catch will almost always result in a touchdown.

ond option. How the linebackers react to his route across the middle of the field will determine if the ball comes to him. And once the fullback fills the hole created by the pulling right guard (done to block any blitzing linebackers), he too will run his route to the quarterback's side of the field and become the third option.

4: If none of the three options are open, this is why high school teams often field their best athlete at quarterback, because even with no passing options, the quarterback will often have enough space (and athletic ability) to turn a well-defended play into a positive gain.

Kimberly Bulldogs

| Oct. 12  | @ Buhl*        | 7 p.m. |
| Oct. 19  | Filer*         | 7 p.m. |

Head coach: Kirby Bright, 19th season

2011 Recap: Down, then up. The Bulldogs were 2-3 at midseason before reeling off four straight wins, including the necessary ones against Filer and Buhl for the SCIC crown. They beat Payette before losing to Marsh Valley in the Class 3A quarterfinals. All in all, a typical, solid season for Kimberly.

Senior Spotlight: Holt Bright and Palmer Champlin

Both have bloodlines within the program - Bright is the coach's son and Palmer is a cousin of Seth Champlin, last year's starting quarterback. Both play defensive back; Holt doubles as a running back, Palmer as a wide receiver. "Those are two guys that have flown under the radar their whole life, but yet you count on them," Kirby Bright said. "They don't get the accolades ... but those are kids you've got to have on your football team."

Dream Season: The Bulldogs lose to American Falls in their opener but keep winning ... and winning ... and winning all the way to the Class 3A title game. The mission of sending Bright out as a champion in what is believed to be his last year as head coach falls short, just like it did for diamond leader Tom Myers, with a loss to Fruitland. The glossy 10-2 record and some state hardware help soothe the sting of a title-game loss.

Nightmare Scenario: The Bulldogs surrender their SCIC crown - does it really matter to whom? - and while they win their share of games, they do so in underwhelming fashion. A quick exit follows in the playoffs, marking a clear step backward from the previous year.

Kimberly

designed to favor throwing the ball, that adage has been flipped on its head. Now, teams spread the field and use the pass to set up the run.

In the high school game, where finding the stud quarterback with a cannon arm isn't always possible, the old method still largely applies. At Kimberly, where head coach Kirby Bright in entering his 19th year as head coach, making him the longest-tenured coach at one school, Bright's old-school ways are well known to fans and foes alike.

"I've been doing this a long time and I've been a Wing-T guy and it just evolved from there with what we do now," Bright said from his office earlier this month. "It's a play we've ran forever, it's a play that you'll hear coaches yell across the sideline to watch for, you know what's coming. They know we run it. It's not really a secret anymore."

The Wing-T gains its effectiveness by the multiple options it presents. Kimberly might run the fullback dive four times in a row, but on the fifth time — using the exact same formation — Bright can call for his quarterback to roll out and throw a strike vacated by a run-anticipating free safety to a wide open receiver downfield for a touchdown.

"In the Wing-T, everything is a series of plays," Bright said. "They all look like the same play, but it's a different play."

One thing is a constant — the right guard. In fact, in most spread or option attacks, it can be said the right guard is the most important player on offense.

"That guard will take you to the play, but you still gotta beat us," Bright said.

However, predictability can come with a price if the defense has the Jimmies and Joes to trump your coach's Xs and Os.

"This was in the Mini-Dome," Bright recalled. "Our all-state tight end was wide open but we tried to force it to the fullback and it got picked off.

"It's a play you say, 'Shoot, you shouldn't have called it. You knew it was coming,'" said Bright, who has served as his team's offensive coordinator in every season but his first with the Bulldogs. "But you continue to go to it because something (big) can happen every time you run it. When it doesn't work, you kick yourself. When it does work, then it's the best play in America."

Head coach: Kelly Kidd, 17th season
2011 Recap: Despite playing a large number of underclassmen, Declo won the Canyon Conference for the fourth consecutive year. The Hornets finished the season 8-2, but by Declo standards fell short of expectations, losing its first home playoff game since 2004, 18-15 to Firth. It broke Declo's three-year streak of Class 2A state semifinal appearances.

Senior Spotlight: Kage Osterhout

foot-4), speed and strength, Declo could use Osterhout anywhere on the field - lineman, full-back, defensive end, linebacker. His upside is limitless.

Dream Season: As most expect, Declo wins its fifth straight Canyon title. Its biggest regular season tests are nonconference matchups against Buhl and Kimberly in back-to-back weeks, but the Hornets handle their 3A rivals and finish the regular season undefeated. But the dream season isn't complete until the Hornets finally win the school's elusive first state championship.

Nightmare Scenario:

Ranked high in preseason polls, the hype goes to the Hornets' heads and they lose focus. Like last year, they barely squeak by some games until wake-up-call conference losses to Wendell and Valley. Declo rebounds in time to make the playoffs, but this talented senior class never realizes its potential and bows out in the first round.

Head coach: Tim Behunin, fourth season
2011 Recap: After a one-year state playoff hiatus, perennial contender Oakley went 8-3 and returned to the postseason, losing to eventual state champ Hagerman 39-22 in the Class 1A Division I semifinals. Then in the spring, Oakley petitioned the IH-SAA to move up to Class 2A and the Hornets began preparing for 11-man football.

Senior Spotlight: Donny Clearwater, offensive and defensive lineman

prepare for boot camp. An undersized lineman at 5-foot-6 and 155 pounds, Clearwater makes the most out of his opportunities. He's a gritty, hard-working kid who will run through a brick wall for you. He'll be Oakley's go-to guy when it needs a big play on offense, defense and special teams.

Dream Season: With an "us-against-the-world" mentality, the Hornets prove all their doubters wrong and show they can compete at the 11-man level. Although Oakley doesn't win as many games as it's used to, a 3-4 record is good enough for sec-

Head coach: Brian Ayers, seventh season
2011 Recap: One of the have-nots in the Canyon Conference, Valley was one of three teams that just had two wins. Sometimes, it's not a matter of how many wins, but who your wins come against. Had Valley been able to trade its win against Filer for one against league foe Glenns Ferry in the finale, the Vikings would have made the playoffs.

Senior Spotlight: Aaron Rife, center

When healthy, Valley's offensive line is a solid, dependable unit, and no one personifies this unit like the 5-10, 230-pounder. "He's a guy who takes care of business on the field ... he's kind of a coach on the field," Ayers said. "As a center, he's not going to get any notoriety anywhere, but he's invaluable to what we're trying to get done."

Dream Season: The Vikings show well in a season-opening loss to Gooding before winning three of their next four. A loss to Declo knocks the Vikings out of the title hunt, but after beating Filer, Valley gets into the playoffs in style by turning the tables on Glenns Ferry. The first-round playoff loss is overlooked by the Vikings first non-losing season since 2009 and first playoff berth since 2006.

Nightmare Scenario:

Sometimes, the margin between fantastic and dreary is thin. For Valley, it would apply like this - the above scenario up until it turns the ball over five times to Glenns Ferry and loses to the Pilots by less than a touchdown in a game it had otherwise dominated.

Head coach: Jon Helmandollar, second season
2011 Recap: The 2-1 start looked good, but it came against teams (North Fremont, Filer) that didn't win a single game in 2011. When the Trojans stepped up in class against Wood River (4A) and Buhl (3A), the results were painfully predictable. In between, i.e., Canyon Conference games, the Trojans were below average but by no means horrible.

Senior Spotlight: Abdel Arreola, tight end Arreola should figure prominently in both the run and pass game for the Trojans, providing a large target for quarterback Alex Swainston. Where he could be even more important is as an anchor defensive back, which has him play essentially like a safety "in the box." His versatility gives Helmandollar a number of options to choose from, while his leadership has the eye of younger teammates.

Dream Season: First goal is to escape the Canyon Conference basement. Next goal should be to win out against their peers at home. If the Trojans do that, they will double last year's two-win season and make the playoffs. But while we are dreaming, add road wins against Filer and Glenns Ferry for a winning season no matter what happens in the playoffs.

Nightmare Scenario: A Week 1 loss to Filer for the Wildcats' first win since 2010 makes for a long bus ride back to Wendell. While the Trojans' bus ride from league foe and chief rival Glenns Ferry in Week 6 is one to enjoy, it marks the team's lone win in 2012.

Head coach: Rob Spriggs, 10th season
2011 Recap: What to make of these Pilots? By margin of defeat, they played Declo tougher than any Canyon Conference foe. They also made the playoffs by getting the two wins seemingly needed to claim the league's third playoff berth. It was only truly outclassed in one game last year, yet went 2-7. Put blame on an offense that scored 20 or more points just twice all season; given that, the Pilots' defense (24 PPG) was one of the more underrated stop units in the region.
Senior Spotlight: Edy Mesillas, center and defensive tackle

Size. Experience. Success. The 6-foot, 280-pounder clearly has the former. He's one of five returning starters on defense and is the bedrock of both interior lines. And in last year's Class 2A state wrestling meet, he took third.

Dream Season: The Power of One. While the Pilots never go on a winning streak, they don't endure back-to-back losses and go 4-4 in making the playoffs. And instead of being a sacrificial lamb in the opening round, Glenns Ferry notches its first postseason win since 2009.

Nightmare Scenario:

Two-win playoff teams are always living on the edge from one season to the next. While the dropoff in wins cannot be too precipitous, there's a huge difference in being a playoff team and not being one. For Glenns Ferry, it's a home loss to rival Wendell that puts the Pilots in a hole too deep to climb out of as far as a playoff spot is concerned.

| Oct. 12  | @ Butte County* | 7 p.m. |
| Oct. 19  | @ Hansen*       | 7 p.m. |

Head coach: Mark Kress, first season

2011 Recap: Player for player, the best team in the area. The Pirates went 12-0 en route to the Class 1A Division I state title, and after a Week 1 scare against Castleford, in which the Pirates made a goal-line stand in the closing seconds to win by four, were never severely tested. Only Kendrick in the title game (31-20) stayed within two touchdowns of Hagerman. Also, in Week 2, Hagerman mercy-ruled eventual 1A-II champ Lighthouse Christian, setting a season-high for points in a 74-24 win.

Senior Spotlight: Justin Arriaga, defensive lineman

Arriaga and Ty Martin formed a menacing 1-2 punch on the defensive line. Martin, he of the five sacks in the state title game, is gone, leaving Arriaga to go it alone this season. It may not make life on opposing offensive lines any easier, though. "Justin and Ty battled each other every day last season," Kress said, hinting that the payoff for Arriaga and Hagerman might be even greater this season.

Dream Season: What do the Pirates do for an encore? Defending their state crown is obviously a part of that plan, but in the Pirates' case, the dominance is even more evident as it mercy rules all but Butte County in the regular season, thrashes Butte County again in the state title game and carries a single-digit national ranking in whatever mythical 8-man polls that are out there.

Nightmare Scenario: When you have the best player at the game's most important position coming back off a state title team, as Hagerman does in Kade Kress, it should take a huge, unforeseen jump by another team to knock Hagerman from its perch. While Kress does his thing, the holes created by graduation - especially at defensive line and at running back - make the Pirates vulnerable and watching the title game from home after a semifinals loss.

| Oct. 12  | Challis*      | 7 p.m. |
| Oct. 19  | @ Shoshone*   | 7 p.m. |

Head coach: Brian Poole, first season

2011 Recap: In head coach Randy Spaeth's 15th and final season, the Trojans finished third place in the Snake River Conference with a 4-5 record and barely missed out on the playoffs for the second straight year.

Senior Spotlight: Emmet Boden, Tanner Anderson

Each a three-year starter - Boden at running back/linebacker and Anderson at quarterback/defensive back - these two are indisputably Raft River's leaders this season.

Dream Season: They were 1-8 as sophomores and 4-5 as juniors. This senior group keeps moving in a positive direction, thriving in the veer option offense installed by new coach Poole. Raft River finishes the season 6-2 and returns to the playoffs for the first time since 2009.

Nightmare Scenario: Playing arguably the toughest schedule in the state - first four weeks are road games at Castleford, Carey, Hagerman and Grace - Raft River struggles to gain early momentum. They managed to salvage a couple token victories down the stretch, but the 2-6 Trojans break out the basket-balls in mid-October.

| Oct. 12  | @ Hansen*     | 7 p.m. |
| Oct. 19  | Raft River*   | 7 p.m. |

Head coach: Mark Sant, 14th season

2011 Recap: The Indians were one of the area's best in the first month of the season, going 4-0. But injuries destroyed continuity, momentum and rhythm, leading to a 1-4 finish and out of the playoffs.

Senior Spotlight: Joe Bench, tight end

After transferring from Teton, Bench tore his ACL at the beginning of last season. With the Indians needing a replacement for Gage Roberts' big-play ability out of the tight end spot, however, Bench hopes to come for the fore in his only full season in Shoshone's red and silver.

Dream Season: The schedule, while not soft and cushy, is manageable and the Indians take full advantage, going 4-0 to start the year. Shoshone splits the Butte County-Hagerman stretch and finishes in a tie for second and makes the playoffs.

Nightmare Scenario: The injury bug that derailed last year's hopes persists and the Indians are without quarterback Garrett Sant for any length of time. The Indians have an edge against several opponents with the senior signal caller, but without him there become a few more toss-up games on the schedule.

1. This is the spot where Cody Hansen lined up en route to catching seven two-point conversions against Rockland. Based on how the defensive back (1A) is playing him, Hansen can run a curl route just inside the end zone, or cut toward the middle of the field.

If the defense sends another defender (5) toward Hansen's position, it will almost certainly result in single-coverage on the outside receiver (2).

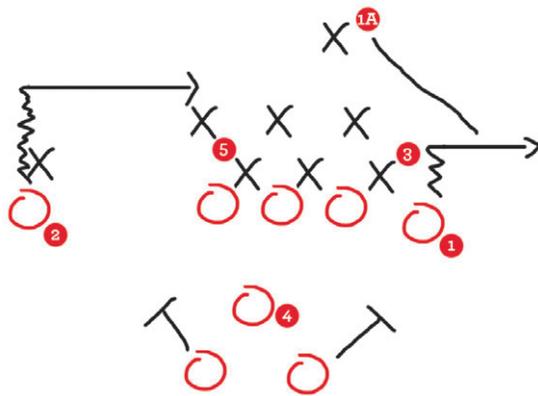

As with most spread-based offenses, what the defensive end (3) does here will determine what the quarterback does with the ball. He must contain the outside, meaning he is responsible for any offensive player that breaks toward the line of scrimmage out of the backfield.

The quarterback (4) can line up under center or in the shotgun, but perhaps his biggest responsibility – short of throwing an accurate pass – is to read and call out the blocking schemes.

This is not a play that would go for a big gain under normal situations from scrimmage, but since the reward comes entirely in gaining 3 yards while having 13 yards with which to operate, all it needs for it to be successful is linemen that can get in the way of defenders, an accurate quarterback and a receiver with good hands.

Routine Play Isn't Overlooked by Wolves

psheltra@magicvalley.com

CASTLEFORD • Pity the point-after attempt.

As the rules of football have evolved over the years, the PAT has remained an untimed down. Outside of a penalty on the defense at the end of a quarter, half or game, it's the only time in which a play can be run in the prep, college or pro levels with no time elapsing off the clock.

It brings up the old adage of a tree falling in the forest. If something happens on the field while the clock isn't running, does it still count?

The answer is of course. And in the eight-man game, where teams rarely have the luxury of a kicker, the two-point conversion is vital.

And on one night last season for Castleford, specifically quarterback Mitch Howard and receiver Cody Hansen, the two-point conversion worked like never before.

The National Federation of State High School Associations, in its football record book, does not have an entry for 2-point conversions for 8-man football. But in an 86-46 victory against Rockland, Castleford successfully made 10 of 11 conversions. Seven of those came on passes from Howard to Hansen, with Howard throwing for nine total — the other two went to Tanner Allred — and running for a 10th.

If there is a record to be claimed, Castleford can print out a form NFSHSA website, fill it out and see where it goes from there.

“What was fun about last year’s deal is that you had such a good athlete at both receiver and quarterback,” Castleford coach Tracy Vulgamore said. “Cody was a big target and Mitch was a tremendous quarterback who knew where to put the ball where no one else could get it.

“I don’t think he ever threw an interception on a conversion,” Vulgamore said.

And if he did, the statistics would never tell anyone, since nothing other than a conversion success or fail are tabulated in the official statistics.

“Cody was always my go-to guy,” said Howard, who will live the life of a regular student at Boise State this fall. “He had good hands and he was big. Simple stuff, I guess.”

“He was pretty young, probably pretty inexperienced,” the incoming CSI student said. “Their team wasn’t very deep. I think he was a sophomore and they never switched to anyone else.”

Vulgamore drills his team at least twice per week on situational plays — fourth-down plays, two-minute drills and the like. Included in there is work on his two-point conversion plays.

As an assistant coach, a game against Lighthouse Christian shined the light in Vulgamore’s mind as to the play’s importance. The Wolves matched the Warriors touchdown for touchdown, but lost the game because LCS was better on the two-point play.

“That was a bitter pill,” Vulgamore said of the 36-32 loss in 2006. “To score touchdown for touchdown with someone and not get those conversions (and lose the game).”

Head coach: Ed Simons Jr., first season

2011 Recap: Predictably, the Patriots took their lumps in their first season, going winless in a seven-game season. The Patriots did show well in spurts in losses to Jackpot, Richfield and Clark County.

Senior Spotlight: John Carter, running back, linebacker

As this special section was being written, Simons was still getting a feel for his players. But one who stood out was Carter, who Simons called "a good looking, very aggressive player. He has the look in his eye that you like."

Dream Season: The wins don't come quickly for the Patriots, but the progress is evident in a 1-3 start. Carey reminds NVA that it has a long way to go to reach the elite in 1A-II, but a victory against Clark County is followed up by a massive and (for Simons, an ex-Dietrich superintendent) satisfying upset of Dietrich. The Patriots win just three games, but the future clearly favors better days.

Nightmare Scenario: It would be difficult for NVA to have a season as bad as last year, when it went 0-7 and was outscored 297-86. But beating just one out of the three aforementioned teams from last season that NVA competed against, while continuing to lose just as ugly as it did in 2011, would represent very slight progress.

Head coach: Garr Ward, 16th season

2011 Recap: Hampered by low numbers all season long, an opening-week loss to Jackpot was an ominous sign. That Richfield managed to win two games, even if they were against lesser competition, was still a nice feat given it entered nearly every game wondering if it would have enough players to finish.

Senior Spotlight: Ricky Godin, running back, defensive back; Martin Bacali, receiver, defensive end Teams need senior leadership to thrive, and while Richfield doesn't have a lot of players with multiple years of experience, these are two of the Tigers' better ones. While there are more potent offensive threats, "they'll play a role," Ward said.

Dream Season: There are three things teams the caliber of Richfield in 2011 can do the following season to show significant improvement - fiercely defend their home turf, double the win total or make the playoffs. The Tigers do well on the first two by getting off to a 4-1 start en route to a 5-4 regular season, going 3-1 at home and making Carey work for three quarters for a victory.

Nightmare Scenario: The Tigers are passed in the Sawtooth North standings by both Clark County and North Valley Academy, and only a victory against Camas County in midseason prevents a winless season as the Tigers have their win total cut in half in a one-win season.

Head coach: Tracy Vulgamore, sixth season

Senior Spotlight: Samoa Etelu.

A guard on last season's team, Etelu will get carries behind returning starter Ty Zimmers, especially in goal-line situations, where the 235-pounder simply cannot be brought down by a single defender. If high school football offered fantasy leagues, Etelu would be a strong No. 2 running back.

Dream Season: Again, the Wolves lose narrowly to Hagerman in Week 2. But that's followed by six straight wins to close out the season - including a thriller at Lighthouse that essentially wraps up the Sawtooth South title. The run continues through the playoffs and results in a spot in the 1A-II title game. Win or lose, what team wouldn't take such a scenario?

Nightmare Scenario: Hagerman exposes Castleford's shortcomings in a blowout loss, as does Lighthouse Christian. Another team on the Wolves' schedule is better than expected and delivers an unforeseen loss. The Wolves limp into the playoffs at 5-3, but are easily dispatched in the opening round.

| Oct. 12  | Castleford*  | 7 p.m. |
| Oct. 19  | Butte County | 7 p.m. |

Head coach: John van Vliet, fifth season

2011 Recap: At midseason, LCS was a scoreboard-exploding machine - on both sides of the ball, unfortunately. Some tweaks made defensively in midseason were obviously for the better, as the Lions went from 4-3 and a middle-of-the-pack team in the Sawtooth South to a season-ending five-game winning streak and Class 1A Division II state championship.

Senior Spotlight: Philip DeMello, defensive back

Injuries and positional shuffling helped DeMello develop into one of the best DBs in the South last season. With speed rusher Dylan van Esch gone, pressure could increase on the back three in Lighthouse Christian's three-man DB setup. Steady and unassuming, DeMello figures to have a bigger role in the secondary this season.

Dream Season: There are no defensive adjustments that need to be made in midseason, and the presence of Garrett Lee, a Carey transfer, and sophomore Adam Taylor for an entire season makes the Lions unbeatable. Instead of three losses, Lighthouse runs the table and serves notice to the rest of the field by routing eventual 1A-I champion Butte County in the regular season finale. With a second consecutive state championship, LCS has the look of a new state dynasty.

Nightmare Scenario: Short of a huge rash of injuries, it's hard to imagine Lighthouse not opening up 7-0. But being the targeted begins to take a toll and Lighthouse loses to Castleford and Butte County to close the season. The Lions still make it to the state semifinals, but fall well short of defending their title and finish with three losses, just as they did the year before.

Head coach: Lane Kirkland, 12th season

2011 Recap: No team was as dominant through 11 games as the Panthers, who reeled off eight straight mercy-rule victories starting in Week 3 and going through the playoffs. The average score of a Carey game to that point was 51-5. But when quarterback Jordan Dilworth was knocked out of the Class 1A Division II title game against Lighthouse Christian, Carey's invincibility evaporated in a 34-22 loss.

Senior Spotlight: Gunner Thompson, center

Seniors Glen Andrews and Francisco Gamino are fixtures at the guard positions. But Thompson is continuing to improve and may be the key to Carey's ability to provide running lanes for the backs, as well as keep Dilworth upright. "Gunner really showed us some great things in camp. I expect him to rise," Kirkland said.

Dream Season: No injuries, no letdowns, no excuses. Plus it's an even-numbered year. The Panthers do what they've done in 2006, 2008 and 2010 and win a state championship. And this year's edition gets back at Lighthouse Christian in a rematch of last year's championship game.

Nightmare Scenario: Groundhog Day isn't just the name of the movie, it is also the title of the Panthers' 2012 season. Carey again looks unstoppable in the regular season, as was the case last season, but falls again in the title game to Lighthouse Christian. It's a season most teams would take without giving a second thought, but the bar has been set too high at Carey to celebrate state runner-up finishes.

Head coach: Mike Nunnelee, second season

2011 Recap: A by-the-book season if there ever was one. Murtaugh decisively beat the teams it was supposed to, while losing likewise to teams against which it was an underdog. The Red Devils played in one game decided by fewer than 20 points - a 44-28 loss to North Gem. All of it added up to a 4-4 record, a tie for fourth in the Sawtooth South and no playoff berth.

Senior Spotlight: Keelan Spencer, tight end, defensive end

There will be Red Devils who earn greater individual glory, but the 5-6, 170-pounder is one of those glue guys that keep everyone focused. "He's a guy that plays much bigger than his size," Nunnelee said. "He will not be mentioned much but he is a huge asset to us."

Dream Season: Nunnelee's system takes hold in his sophomore campaign, the Red Devils win back the Wagon Wheel from Hansen and although Murtaugh is a clear step behind Lighthouse Christian and Castleford, it is easily the No. 3 team in the Sawtooth South.

Nightmare Scenario: No one steps up to fill the shoes of do-everything running back Humberto Pacheco, and a season-opening win against North Valley Academy is followed by six straight losses before a win against hapless Sho-Ban. Two wins and a fifth-place finish in the six-team Sawtooth South.

Head coach: Doug Astle, fourth season

2011 Recap: Good, but not great. The Blue Devils finished 5-4, made the playoffs and nearly pulled off the upset at Castleford, as well as destroying Mackay on the road for the first time that anyone could remember. But the gap between its runner-up spot in the Sawtooth North and champion Carey was pretty wide, as a 60-14 loss demonstrated.

Senior Spotlight: Eddie Alvarado, center/linebacker

The first-team all-division honoree at center also doubles as Dietrich's middle linebacker and a key leader. When asked about an impact senior, Astle mentioned Alvarado without hesitation, even though he doesn't play a glamour position. With a big junior class for Blue Devils this season, it'll be important for Alvarado to continue his strong play and keep improving as a field general as well.

Dream Season: The Blue Devils are still no match for Sawtooth North rival Carey. And losing a talent like quarterback Brody Astle to graduation is probably good for another loss somewhere. But everywhere else, Dietrich puts a notch in the column marked 'W' - a schedule tilted heavy with home dates can have such an effect - and gets a couple more wins in the playoffs to boot for a 9-win season.

Nightmare Scenario: The pressure of living up to big brother's career filters down from Cooper Astle to the entire offense. Dietrich can't take advantage of five consecutive home games in midseason and goes 2-3 during that stretch en route to a 4-5 season. The Week 6 loss to Mackay is especially bitter as it's the difference between making the playoffs and getting a jump-start on basketball season.

Head coach: Tee Jay Berry, fourth season

2011 Recap: If success is defined by how you do against your rival, then Hansen had a season worth celebrating by capturing the Wagon Wheel against Murtaugh. The Huskies' 0-7 mark in all other games suggests otherwise.

Senior Spotlight: Cecil Peters, guard

The 6-3, 315-pounder has interest from Idaho State and a strong senior season can't help but put him on the radar of more college teams. "This year he's really coming into his own," Berry said. Safe to say, an overwhelming majority of Hansen's running plays will follow Peters' block-out-the-sun shadow.

Dream Season: Doubling the win total, even for a one-win team, is no small accomplishment. Instead, the Huskies make a huge leap and emerge as a borderline playoff team with a defense of the Wagon Wheel in their opener while adding wins against Challis, Shoshone and Raft River.

Nightmare Scenario: Things cannot get worse that last year, what with the talent and experience returning. But how's this for a twist - the Huskies still win four games, but show much better than expected against Grace, Lighthouse Christian, Butte County and Hagerman, yet lose each game in agonizingly close fashion and blow golden opportunities for statement victories.

Head coach: Jason Ellingson, second season

Senior Spotlight: Jordan Robles, center, nose tackle, kicker

The eight sacks on defense is one thing. But where the 6-2, 210-pounder stands out is he might be the only place-kicker used on a regular basis among area 8-man teams. He already has the leg, as evidenced by several punts last year of more than 60 yards, and a season average of 48.5 yards per punt.

Dream Season: One could argue that a dream has already been fulfilled merely by playing a full varsity schedule. But where's the fun in speculation? The Mushers' record is modest, but regular season wins are cherished like they are playoff wins and they are more plentiful than imagined. Camas wins five games and is in the playoff hunt up until the final week of the season.

Nightmare Scenario: There are wins available with this schedule as four of the Mushers' opponents went 4-29 last year. But instead of being a clear step above Richfield, Sho-Ban, North Valley Academy and Clark County, the Mushers are only able to win half of those games and finish with two wins on the season.

How This Writer Ate Lighthouse Crow

The rest of this football section details plays integral to a team's success.

This one details how John van Vliet evolved Lighthouse Christian's defense to championship caliber.

Or, alternatively, how he made me look like a proper idiot.

I report, you decide. The following was the lead — newspaper-speak for first paragraph — for Lighthouse's game against North Gem:

The book on Lighthouse Christian is getting pretty simple: deny big plays and play power football, and the Lions can be beaten.

After getting gashed on the ground by Hagerman and North Gem in quick succession last season, van Vliet knew he had to iron out the wrinkles if the Lions ever stood a chance of keeping pace with the other state title contenders.

Suffice it to say he got it sorted out, and the football acumen of this writer took a hit.

Van Vliet changed the lighter outside linebackers for bigger defensive ends, opting for a "big-on-big" variety of what Lighthouse Christian calls its Bengal

Please see LIONS, Page 23

1. The strong side defensive end pinches around the offensive end, trying to get pressure on the quarterback. The weak defensive end slants toward the gap between end and guard. Players do not switch sides based on the offense's strong/weak side lineup, so each defensive end's duties will shift accordingly.

2. The strong side defensive tackle slants to occupy the 'B' gap, getting outside the guard's face. This allows the defensive end to beat the tight end one-on-one if he stays in to block, or gives him a seemingly free run to the quarterback if the tight end releases downfield.

and guard on that side.

4. The strong side linebacker is responsible for filling gaps in the line, essentially accounting for the blocking back or tight end, while the weak side linebacker is left with a free role and reads the running back. As with the defensive ends, these two don't switch sides based on the offense's formation and their duties will switch accordingly.

5. The cornerbacks are responsible for both maintaining the edge and pass coverage, essentially one-on-one. Pressure on the quarterback should force quicker releases and thus less chance of being beaten over the top.

Lighthouse Christian goes in and out of this defensive set, in which the defensive line averages 225-230 pounds per man. While not its 100% base set, the team can use any number of wrinkles out of this formation to compensate for teams that throw the ball more frequently than a conventional 8-man squad.

defense. The extra size, van Vliet reasoned, would prevent his guys from getting blown off the ball. It also resulted in moving the free safety — normally positioned 20 yards off the ball in the Bengal scheme — to a linebacker position so the Lions weren't in effect playing 7-on-8.

It ended up only being the first of many changes, though — Castleford didn't make much headway on the ground in the very next game but threw the ball almost at will. It was that change, however, that spurred all the wrinkles that gave the defense a championship grade.

Switching one of the burly ends for a speed rusher was part of the evolution, as it put more pressure on the quarterback to throw the ball sooner without losing too much of the run-stuffing emphasis. From there, three-man and four-man sets switched and swapped depending on the opponent.

To wit, every button van Vliet pushed after the Castleford loss worked, both to make Lighthouse

Christian look great and to make yours truly look a bit foolish. (You're welcome, Lions!)

Van Vliet wouldn't go into all the variations with me, only saying that Lighthouse Christian doesn't use the four-man front all the time, but the Lions go into a number of different coverage schemes from that new base.

For now, at the very least, the champs are one step ahead of the offenses they'll face. Whether they can stay there will go a long way to determining whether they'll be on the top of the pile again in November.
