What about other kinds of pipes?

Miles of pipes run under city streets, and different kinds offer different challenges. Dave Weeks, superintendent for the city of Hansen, said they often inspect sewer pipes with robotic cameras, looking at the pipe's structure. But city water pipes are too small to send a robot through and are harder to inspect. Gooding mayor Duke Morton said the city doesn't have a regular inspection schedule. Part of that, he said, is the sheer amount of pipe that runs under the street. Pipe inspection can be a big time commitment, depending on the type and length, Weeks said. "You could sit there all day on half a mile," he said.

Aging Canal Pipes Cause Trouble for City Roads

BY MELISSA DAVLIN
mdavlin@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • Last week, Twin Falls street crews noticed part of Bracken Street North was sinking. Upon inspection, workers found the cause: A crumbling corrugated metal pipe. As the pipe deteriorated, the road began to sag.

That crumbling pipe, used to carry canal water under the road, is far from rare. As Magic Valley cities struggle to balance budgets, some aging pipes are weakening under the streets, fixed only after they become potential safety hazards.

Dean Littler, street manager for the city of Twin Falls, said the pipe under Bracken Street was "probably beyond its life span." Corrugated metal pipes like it last 20 to 30 years. Littler didn't know the exact age of the Bracken Street pipe, but estimated it was 40 to 50 years old.

There are plenty of other aging pipes under Twin Falls streets, Littler said. Crews make sure to inspect them when they're exposed during roadwork.

Wildfires Continue to Burn Across the State

TIMES-NEWS

TWIN FALLS • With smoke hovering over most of southern Idaho, health officials continue to issue an unhealthy air alert for most of Blaine County.

The decreased air quality alert recommends that everyone should limit outdoor exposure, according to the Idaho Department of Environmental Quality.

The cause of the unhealthy air alert is from two forest fires, DEQ officials said in a news release.

The Halstead forest fire is currently burning just north of Stanley. The fire first started on July 27 and has since burned close to 97,700 acres. State highways 21 and 75 remain open within the closure area. Boundary Creek Road, also known as FS 579, to the Middle Fork also remains open.

Fire crews expect the lightning-caused fire will be contained by Oct. 16.

On Aug. 3, the human-caused Trinity Ridge forest fire began burning near Featherville. The Elmore County sheriff issued an evacuation order from Featherville to the Paradise area due to thick smoke and reduced visibility. The Pine to Featherville Road is closed except for fire and emergency personnel traffic.

Road 227 at the county line, east of Baumgartner Campground and the Intersection of Highway 20 and FH 61, remains closed. Fire crews estimate the fire will be contained by Oct. 1.

Inmates Cause Mess in Twin Falls Jail

BY MELISSA DAVLIN

TWIN FALLS • Inmates had a mess to clean up at the Twin Falls County Jail Tuesday night, but authorities and inmates disagree about the cause and extent.

Lori Stewart, spokeswoman for the Twin Falls County Sheriffs Office, said inmates intentionally blocked up toilets by

"If they were going to be part of the problem, they would be part of the solution."

Lori Stewart, spokeswoman for the T. F. County Sheriffs Office flushing a blanket, underwear and a laundry bag, then exacerbated the flooding by turning on the showers.

The inmates were then asked to clean up the flooded area. According to Stewart, the water was clean.

But Awanda Cross, mother of inmate Daniel Thomas, told the Times-News her son said they had to clean up sewage while wearing flip flops and no gloves. Shiann Allhouse said Thomas told her the same thing.

Twin Falls Man Charged With Rape, Attempted Strangulation

BY ALISON GENE SMITH
alismith@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • A 36-year-old man has been charged with rape and attempted strangulation after being accused of a brutal attack early Thursday morning.

Twin Falls police responded to the emergency room at St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center at about 12:30 p.m. Thursday after hospital staff alerted them about a possible sexual assault.

According to a police affidavit, the alleged victim told officers a man she knew as Yousef forced her to have sex early that morning. According to the affidavit, the woman said she tried to get away from the man, later identified as Yousef Sadeghi, of Twin Falls, and told him she did not want to have sex. The affidavit states Sadeghi allegedly choked the woman with both his hands around her throat and raped her as she faded in and out of consciousness.

According to the affidavit, the woman said she punched Sadeghi but was unable to fight him off. The woman told police she remembered Sadeghi hitting, punching and biting her during the attack, the affidavit states.

At the hospital, officers reported seeing severe bruising on the woman's neck, legs and arms along with swelling on her cheeks, and nursing staff informed them of large bruises throughout her body, the affidavit states.

After police attempted to locate Sadeghi throughout the day, he voluntarily came to the Twin Falls Police Department at about 11:50 p.m. Thursday, heavily intoxicated and biting her during the attack, the affidavit states.

Sadeghi was arrested on charges of rape and attempted strangulation and transported to the Twin Falls County Jail where he was held on $25,000 bond. A preliminary hearing is scheduled for Aug. 31.

Alleged Home Invaders Arrested

BY ALISON GENE SMITH
alismith@magicvalley.com

BUHL • Two individuals accused of robbing the home of the owners of Fish Processors of Idaho have been charged with kidnapping and robbery.

Dylan Edward Contreras, 20, of Shoshone, and a 16-year-old Filer male were both arrested and are being held at the Twin Falls County Jail.

According to a report by Twin Falls County Sheriff's deputies, on Aug. 7 at about 6 a.m., Leo Ray answered the door at his home in the 4600 block of River Road in Buhl when someone knocked loudly. When he answered the door, three men, all pointing handguns at him, entered his home and demanded money, the report stated. According to the report, Ray said the men all wore bandanas over their faces and spoke Spanish to each other, but fluent English to Ray and his wife. Ray told deputies he had at least one gun barrel in contact with his head at all times and he and his wife, Judy Ray, were threatened numerous times with being shot.

After allegedly stealing the cash from Leo Ray's wallet, the men ordered him to join his wife in the bedroom and tied each of their hands with rope, laid them on the bed and covered their faces with clothing.

"The males ransacked the bedroom and other parts of the home taking cash, six guns, a custom-made hunting knife, two laptop computers, wristwatches, a cellphone belonging to Mr. Ray and a fire safe containing important documents," the report states.

After the three men left the home, Leo Ray freed himself and called for help, the report states.

On Aug. 8 at about 1:13 a.m., Jerome police responded to a disturbance call at a motel in the 400 block of Main Street in Jerome. During the investigation, officers found three guns, a wristwatch and a custom knife matching the description of those reported stolen from the Ray's home, the Twin Falls County Sheriff's Office report states.

Though the room's occupants fled before police arrived, a motel manager was able to identify two males who rented the room as Dylan Contreras and the 16-year-old male, as well as a woman who paid for the room, the report states.

Police spoke to the woman who allegedly paid for the room, who said Contreras gave her a $100 bill to pay for the room since he didn't have identification, the report states. The woman allegedly told law enforcement she saw the two males carry guns up to the room and the two bragged about robbing two homes - one in Twin Falls County, one in Jerome County.

On Aug. 9, Contreras was arrested and charged with aggravated assault, robbery and battery stemming from a July 3 incident when he allegedly entered a home at 200 block of Second Avenue North, broke a man's jaw and took small electronics. He has been identified to police in the past by a tattoo that reads "Contreras" on his arm.

Both Contreras and the 16-year-old are being held on $250,000 bonds.

Wendell School, Fire, City Property Swap Moves Forward

BY BLAIR KOCH
For the Times-News

WENDELL • Mayor Brad Christopherson knows the project will probably last longer than his time in office but said he's committed to making sure Wendell gets a new library.

Christopherson, who was elected in 2009, told the Times-News he has been working on the library project for nearly 18 months.

The Sherburn Smith Memorial Library, a double-wide manufactured building just east of city hall, is about 2,250 square feet, Christopherson said, not big enough to meet the city's needs.

Christopherson's quest for something bigger didn't take him far, just to the opposite side of city hall. On its western flank sits an old maintenance shed owned by the school district.

"It's a solid building and with vision you can see it has a lot of potential. Give it a new, metal roof; take out every other window, new stucco."

Meanwhile, the Wendell school district planned to build a new maintenance facility with part of a $9.8 million bond passed for its new elementary school opening this fall but the school's construction didn't leave enough in the budget, said District Superintendent Greg Lowe.

Which is why the district is moving forward to obtain a building owned

BLAIR KOCH • FOR THE TIMES-NEWS

Wendell Mayor Brad Christopherson is pictured at the former school district maintenance building that city officials are optimistic could one day be used as the city library. The city, school and rural fire districts are close to completing a three-way deal that would put the city in ownership of the building and the school district a much larger maintenance building.

jointly by the city and Rural Fire District on Main Street. The district plans to buy out Rural Fire's 50 percent stake in the property for $50,000 and trade the city's remaining half for the maintenance building next to city hall.

"It's really a win-win because if we had to go out and build a $300,000 facility we just couldn't do it. This building is a lot larger than the one we have, it's really what we need anyway and this serves the taxpayers of Wendell," Lowe said.

If the deal goes through, the city will own the entire 300 block on First Avenue East.

Fire District Chief Bob

Bailey said the money made would be spent on constructing a training facility at its newly purchased headquarters.

"With three different legal agencies involved, there were quite a few stipulations outlined in Idaho Code that had to be met," Bailey said. "The city and school district are still working on a few but as far as the fire district is concerned, we're just waiting for the deal to come together. It was neat that this was able to come together."

On July 26, the school district unanimously agreed to the purchase and property swap and must now complete a series of property appraisals to be placed on the record. The city is optimistic that it will hold title to the building within a couple months.

Christopherson plans to form a committee to explore what shape the library will take.

"At one point, there was discussion of making a library/senior center and now the seniors are asking again if they are going to be a part of this.

"That's great, we want to have these conversations and find out how to proceed," he said. "The seniors in Wendell need a center and if that's the case we probably need to look at putting on an addition."

Christopherson said the committee, to be formed once the city takes ownership of the building, will look into funding and possibly design.

"There are grants available for libraries and senior centers," Christopherson said, adding that a bond election could even be an option.

"At this point, I don't know what direction this will take. It's safe to say this is a multi-year project. It's taken us 18 months to get to this point and we're still a little bit out to getting the building but we're making progress. And little by little we'll get a new library, because that's what the city needs," he said.

TWIN FALLS • With a new school year comes an increase in pedestrian, bicycle and vehicle traffic near schools.

The Idaho Transportation Department encourages motorists to be careful when driving through school zones, encountering school buses on the highway or while dropping off and picking up children.

Flashing yellow lights and fluorescent signs identify most school zones.

Drivers who fail to slow down to school zone speeds — generally posted at 20 miles per hour or slower — pay larger fines as a result of legislation passed in 2008.

State laws require a minimum fine of $75, plus $41.50 in court costs for school-zone violations.

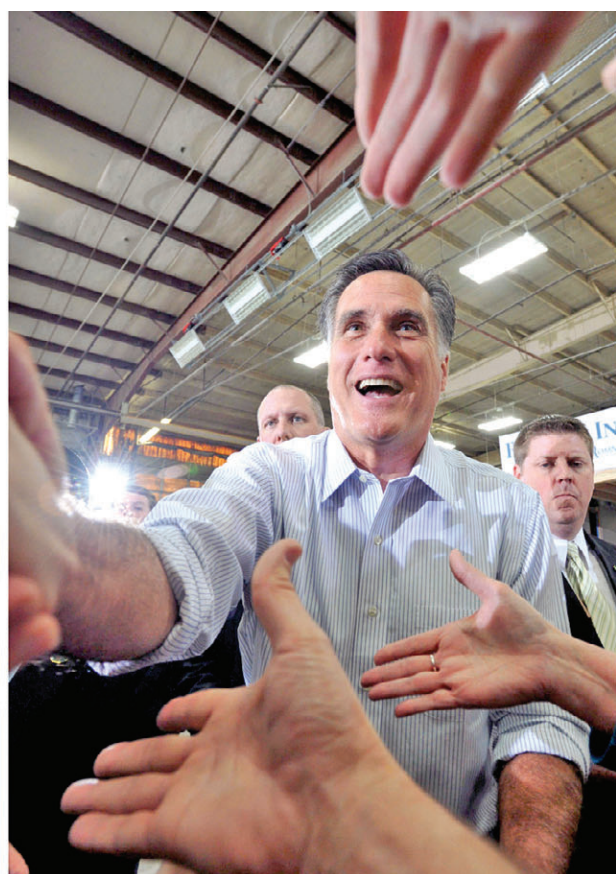

Local jurisdictions have the authority to establish higher fees.

Unless otherwise posted, school-zone speed limits don't apply on non-school days.

Some schools use crossing guards at intersections. Motorists are required to slow or stop as the guards dictate.

Parents and teachers should encourage children to watch for distracted drivers.

Easing Back-to-School Worries

BY LAURIE WELCH
lwelch@magicvalley.com

BURLEY • Five-year-old Jazlynn Thomas rode her scooter down the sidewalk Friday in a new pair of Skechers she'll wear on her first day of school at Dworshak Elementary School.

"I'm ready for kindergarten," she said.

On Monday, students in both Minidoka and Cassia counties will start school.

Grandmother Denise Tolness said Jazlynn attended back-to-school night, has visited her classroom and met her teacher — all activities that come highly recommended to help ease the worries of elementary-age students.

"She is totally excited and not scared at all," Tolness said.

But, not all children make the transition back to the classroom so easily, said Debbie Pierce, who teaches first grade at Dworshak.

"You can usually tell the children who are really anxious. They are the ones who don't want to come in the morning or they are crying," Pierce said.

Other children may experience tummy aches or become unusually quiet.

Pierce said one of the best tips she can offer parents is to make sure the child gets enough sleep.

Parents should also make sure everything is laid out the night before, such as backpacks and clothing.

"That can produce a calmer atmosphere," Pierce said.

Pierce said parents should communicate with children about how they will be getting home from school, which is a top worry for young children.

And, Pierce said, parents should not hesitate to inform teachers about any special issues a child has like bladder-control problems or food allergies.

"There's nothing worse than telling a child they have to wait five minutes to use the restroom when they really can't," Pierce said.

Pierce said extra parental efforts to reassure an anxious child can make things smoother for everyone.

"Kids in middle school worry about everything," said Tim Perrigot, principal at West Minico Middle School. "They worry about who to sit by, what shoes to put on and what T-shirt to wear. Being a kid is very difficult at this age."

Perrigot said the school encourages parents to come in with their student for a few minutes and introduce them to a couple of their teachers.

An advisory period will be held in the morning to answer common student questions about schedules and lockers.

Perrigot said students who are worried at this age often become quiet.

"Even the big toughies tend to clam up," Perrigot said.

Other symptoms may include stomach aches, headaches, complaining or procrastination.

"Everything at this age is magnified and they really worry about how they look and who their friends will be," Perrigot said.

Students in middle school don't always want to talk about their problems with their parents and they may feel more comfortable turning to a school counselor, Perrigot said.

Minico High School Counselor John Kontos said if a parent is concerned about their child, they can call the school and ask the child's assigned counselor to pull the child in and speak with them.

"During the ninth grade orientation, we told the students to just breathe, everything is going to be OK," Kontos said.

Much of the anxiety high school students experience stems from graduation concerns and social and peer issues.

Symptoms that show a teen may be anxious include not sleeping well and restlessness, as well as extremes in eating patterns like barely eating or overeating.

"If a parent is concerned about their child's anxiety, they should sit them down and talk to them about it," Kontos said. "And watch their grades from the get-go. Bad grades are always a tell-tale sign that something is wrong."

Pipes

Otherwise, "a problem shows up and you kind of address it as it happens," Littler said.

Before the economic downturn, Jerome replaced sections of aging pipe regularly, said Walt Appell, public works director.

That's all changed. Now, like Twin Falls, Jerome can't commit the resources to replace canal water pipes on a set schedule.

Instead, they're often forced to wait until a section of pipe becomes a problem, Appell said. "When you got a system as old as Jerome has, trouble areas are pretty prevalent."

But waiting until streets start to fall apart is potentially hazardous.

For now, repairs to Bracken Street North will have to wait.

Because the pipe carries canal water — crucial to farmers irrigating their crops — workers couldn't turn off the water. Currently, a sheet of metal covers the sunken-in part of Bracken Street, and crews will fix it later.

"If you had unlimited money ... you try and replace that stuff at the end of its life span, and you never have something like that happened over on Bracken the other day," Littler said.

For now, area cities rely on citizens to call when they notice a problem in the streets.

"I'd really like to have enough people and equipment to go out and inspect every one of them every year, but it's just not realistic," he said.

Mess

According to Allshouse, Thomas told her, "The guards would not give them anything other than a broom and a mop bucket" for the clean up the sewage. Thomas also told Allshouse and Cross that the flood was caused by a broken pipe, not by an in-tionally clogged toilet.

Thomas was arrested earlier this month for aggravated battery with a deadly weapon and possession of a controlled substance after allegedly shooting a man in the neck.

Stewart confirmed that the inmates weren't given gloves, but maintained the water was clean.

"It was never sewage," Stewart said, adding that normally, inmates wouldn't be asked to clean up a plumbing-related problem.

"If they were going to be part of the problem, they would be part of the solution," Stewart said.

Bystanders and a police officer stand on Fifth Avenue to view the scene after a multiple shooting Friday outside the Empire State Building in New York.

Police Kill Gunman near Empire State Building

Jeffrey Johnson targeted the man he believed responsible for costing him his job.

NEW YORK (AP) • Jeffrey Johnson hid behind a car in his business suit and tie near the Empire State Building, waiting for the man he blamed for costing him his job. He put a gun to the executive's head and fired five times, then walked off with his briefcase into the morning rush of Manhattan.

Minutes later, Johnson was dead in front of the landmark skyscraper, killed by police Friday in a chaotic confrontation that wounded nine other people, sent bullets ricochet-

The bystanders were likely hit by police officers' stray gunfire, some of them bullets that rebounded off of planters in front of the skyscraper and grazed pedestrians. The two officers fired 16 shots, but police believe Johnson only pointed the gun at them and didn't fire, investigators said.

Startled New Yorkers looked up from their morning routines in the crowded business district to see people sprawled in the streets bleeding and a tarp covering the body in front of the tourist landmark.

"I was on the bus and people were yelling 'get down, get down,'" said accountant Marc Engel. "I was thinking, 'you people are crazy, no one is shooting in the middle of midtown Manhattan at 9 o'clock in the morning'"

It was over in seconds he said — "a lot of pop, pop, pop, pop, one shot after the other." Afterwards he saw sidewalks littered with the wounded, including one man "dripping enough blood to leave a stream."

Johnson, 58, who neighbors saw leave his apartment in a suit every day since he was laid off a year ago — often returning with breakfast from McDonald's — had worked for six years for Hazan Imports and was let go when the company downsized, Police Commissioner Ray Kelly said.

Police were looking into his relationship with the victim, Steven Ercolino, the company's vice president of sales, who had traded accusations of harassment with Johnson when he worked there. Johnson also blamed Ercolino for his layoff, saying that he hadn't aggressively marketed Johnson's new T-shirt line, police spokesman Paul Browne said.

After waiting for Ercolino, 41, to come to work, Johnson walked up to him, pulled out a .45-caliber pistol and fired at his head, Kelly said. After he fell to the ground, Johnson stood over him and shot four more times, a witness told investigators.

"Jeffrey just came from behind two cars, pulled out his gun, put it up to Steve's head and shot him," said Carol Timan, whose daughter, Irene, was walking to Hazan Imports at the time with Ercolino.

A construction worker who saw the shooting followed Johnson and alerted two police officers, a detail regularly assigned to patrol city landmarks like the 1,454-foot skyscraper since the 9/11 terror attacks, officials said.

Confessed mass killer Anders Behring Breivik leaves the courtroom after the trial while judge Wenche Elisabeth Arntzen passes in background Friday in Oslo, Norway.

Breivik Declared Sane, Sent to Prison

OSLO, Norway (AP) • It was during breaks between marathon video game sessions in his mother's apartment in Oslo that Anders Behring Breivik drafted his complicated and chilling plan.

He would kill indiscriminately with explosives and guns, surrender to authorities if he survived, then prove himself sane in court — all to publicize a manifesto accusing Muslims of destroying European society.

By any account, the attack went exactly as he intended. A court ruled Friday that Breivik was sane when he killed 77 people, most of them teenagers, in attacks that shook Norway to its core.

"His goal was to be declared sane, so on that point he is satisfied," said Breivik's defense lawyer, Geir Lippestad.

rorism and premeditated murder for the twin attacks on July 22 last year. Breivik first bombed government headquarters, killing eight people, before going on a shooting massacre on Utoya island that left 69 dead at a summer camp for young members of the governing Labor Party.

Prosecutors asked for an insanity ruling, which Breivik rejected as an attempt to deflate his radical anti-Muslim views. He smiled with apparent satisfaction when the five-judge panel declared him sane and sentenced him to a 21-year prison sentence that can be extended as long as he's considered dangerous to society. Legal experts say that likely means he will be locked up for life.

"He has killed 77 people, most of them youth, who were shot without mercy, face to face. The cruelty is unparalleled in Norwegian history," Judge Arne Lyng said. "This means that the defendant even after serving 21 years in prison would be a very dangerous man."

In his final words, Breivik regretted not killing more people, apologizing to other "militant nationalists" for not achieving an even higher death toll. He said he wouldn't appeal the ruling because that would "legitimize" a court he said got its mandate from a political system that supports multiculturalism.

Prosecutors also said they would not appeal, bringing the legal process for Norway's worst peacetime massacre to an end and providing closure for victims' families and survivors, who have had to endure weeks of testimony from Breivik describing the victims as traitors for embracing immigration.

"I am very relieved and happy about the outcome," said Tore Sinding Bekkedal, who survived the Utoya shooting. "I believe he is mad, but it is political madness and not psychiatric madness. He is a pathetic and sad little person."

From Europe's far right, the reaction was mixed. Some argued that Friday's verdict played into their core beliefs, though they have spoken out against his violent rampage.

"It was obviously wrong what he did, but there was logic to all of it," said Stephen Lennon, the 29-year-old leader of the English Defense League, an anti-Muslim group. "By saying that he was sane, it gives a certain credibility to what he had been saying. And that is, that Islam is a threat to Europe and to the world."

"We consider his deeds to be those of a murderer. It's as simple as that," Franz said. "For us, it had nothing to do with politics."

Laid-off Workers Struggle to Find Jobs

WASHINGTON (AP) • The U.S. economic recovery hasn't felt much like one even for people who managed to find new jobs after being laid off. Most of them have had to settle for less pay.

Only 56 percent of Americans laid off from January 2009 through December 2011 had found jobs by the start of this year, the Labor Department said Friday. More than half of them took jobs with lower pay. One-third took pay cuts of 20 percent or more. The figures would be even lower if people who could find only part-time jobs were included in the total.

The report provides an illustration of the job market's persistent weakness well after the Great Recession officially ended in June 2009. It also documents that while the economy added nearly 3 million jobs since the recovery began, many pay less than those that were lost.

South Africa Mourns as Efforts to Save Hippo Fail

JOHANNESBURG (AP) • It was supposed to be one of those feel-good stories that make a nation smile after a couple of weeks of pretty rotten news here in South Africa.

But the oddball tale of a young hippo who got trapped in a swimming pool turned into a tragedy — broadcast live on television Friday.

The young male hippo, who had become a South African celebrity and even inspired someone to start a Twitter account in his name, died just as a vet arrived and a crane was brought in to rescue him.

He was forced out of his pod by dominant male hippos in a game reserve and wandered into a swimming pool.

With no way to get out of the pool, the hippo, nicknamed Solly, was trapped.

The idea was to sedate the hippo and winch it out of the pool, but the animal became distressed and died before he could be rescued.

CHEERS AND JEERS

CHEERS to entering this year’s football season with the new concussion law in place. In April, Idaho passed a revision of the state’s youth-concussion law.

Under the new law parents must sign concussion information forms and coaches must go through concussion training. Also, athletes cannot return to play without a medical clearance.

The new law ensures coaches and trainers are on the sidelines watching for signs of concussion in the collision sports like football and boys and girls soccer in the fall and boys and girls basketball and wrestling in the winter. Cheers to a safer season.

JEERS to making farmers and the nation’s food supply a political football this legislative session. Earlier this year, lawmakers had an ill-informed discussion about dropping farm subsidies and replacing them with crop insurance. But as the summer progressed and much of the nation faced drought, lawmakers have been reminded why farm subsidies were put in place — not to create a welfare state for farmers but to stabilize the nation’s food supply.

CHEERS to the beginning of high school football season. There’s something so cathartic about Friday nights on the sidelines cheering on the home team.

LETTERS OF THANKS

Thank You for Helping During Recent Grocery Store Accident

A special thanks to our Twin Falls Police Department, fire department and all other quick response units who rushed to the scene of my accident at the entrance to Smith’s grocery store on July 18.

To the officer from Kimberly who was first on the scene, he opened my door and, seeing my arm was bleeding, put pressure on it to help stop the bleeding.

The people from Smith’s service station that ran over with paper towels to help staunch the bleeding, the two construction workers that helped, one of which went to my home to tell my husband as he was outside and would never have heard the phone; this was so special of him.

And of course many, many thanks to Brandi Matthews, who was there for me as well as the other driver. She was so helpful to me, she will never be forgotten. Also to the officer that helped me to my husband’s pickup and made sure I got in OK and to the ones I know were helping also that I may have left out.

Idaho State Adopts Smoke-free Campus

POCATELLO (AP) • Officials at Idaho State University decided this week to ban smoking on the Pocatello campus, following a recommendation from student leaders, who passed a resolution nearly a year ago supporting the move to a smoke-free institution.

The ban will take effect in September, the university said Wednesday, and with it, two of Idaho's three public universities will have made their campuses smoke-free zones. Boise State University was first, adopting its policy in 2009.

The University of Idaho in Moscow has policies placing restrictions on smokers but is not a smoke-free campus. Elsewhere in the state, the College of Southern Idaho, in Twin Falls, and North Idaho College, in Coeur d'Alene, have adopted bans, the Idaho State Journal reported.

At Idaho State University, the previous policy required smokers to be at least 20 feet from buildings. School administrators sought feedback in 2010 on their smoking policy and wondered if they should leave it unchanged, ban smoking or designate a few areas where smoking is allowed.

The new smoking ban will not extend to the university's satellite campus in Idaho Falls because that campus is shared with the University of Idaho, Dean Lyle Castle said. He told the Post Register that a smoke-free policy is possible at the branch, but it would have to be a joint effort by both universities.

This file photo shows a male sage grouse fighting for the attention of female sage grouse southwest of Rawlins, Wyo. Federal officials released a general plan for conservation of sage grouse, saying people should avoid activities that harm lands where the birds live.

Report Tries to Avoid Sage Grouse Listing

CHEYENNE, Wyo. (AP) • Conservation groups are welcoming a federal report spelling out how sage grouse should be managed in 11 Western states to avoid new federal protections.

The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service's draft report issued Thursday advises states and federal land management agencies to act immediately to "stop the bleeding of continuing habitat and population losses."

The report is certain to command attention in Western states where listing sage grouse as endangered could result in federal restrictions on energy development and other activities.

Sage grouse are found in California, Colorado, Idaho, Montana, Nevada, North Dakota, Oregon, South Dakota, Utah, Washington and Wyoming. They also inhabit Canada.

Federal and state sage grouse experts, collectively called a conservation objectives team, wrote the report. A final version should be out this fall after other scientists review it.

Brian Rutledge, with the Rocky Mountain region of the Audubon Society, said Friday the report underscores the importance of avoiding federal protections for the bird.

"We all know that this is about fragmentation of habitat, and that stopping the fragmentation is how we stop the problem," Rutledge said. He said new technologies, particularly in energy development and mining, can help limit development's disturbance in sage grouse areas.

"There's no one way that's going to work everywhere," Rutledge said. "But the common theme has to be to limit the disturbance and reclaim the areas that we've already damaged and haven't reclaimed."

The report follows a meeting that Wyoming Gov. Matt Mead held with Interior Secretary Ken Salazar and representatives from other Western states in Cheyenne in December.

Salazar has said sage grouse have experienced a 90 percent decline in their numbers and a 50 percent decline in their habitat over the last century.

The Fish and Wildlife Service announced in 2010 that sage grouse deserved protection under the Endangered Species Act but that other species demanded more immediate attention. The agency has committed to make a final listing decision for sage grouse by late 2015.

Wyoming, perhaps more than any other Western state, has much riding on the sage grouse listing decision. It's the nation's largest coal-producing state and a leader in natural gas production. It's also home to more than 30 million acres of sage brush and the largest surviving sage grouse population.

Wyoming state government years ago steered a pioneering course, established a regulatory system that limits its energy development and other disturbances in sage grouse "core areas."

A Mountain Lion in a Casino? Don't Roulette Out

RENO, Nev. (AP) • An underage mountain lion was caught Friday after trying to slip into a casino in downtown Reno ahead of the breakfast rush.

Nevada Department of Wildlife spokesman Chris Healy says the young male cat's behavior was "almost the equivalent of being a stupid teenager."

Healy says coming-of-age cougars often end up where they shouldn't after being chased out of a territory by adults.

"It fits the classic definition of a dispersal-age male looking for a place to be," Healy said, adding the drought also could have prompted the cat to enter the downtown.

Still, he acknowledged, this wasn't exactly a typical case.

"I've been here 27 1/2 years and this one is new to me," Healy said. "We've seen mountain lions on the fringes of Reno before, but not in downtown Reno."

Guests at Harrah's reported seeing the 100-pound cat trying to walk into the casino around dawn Friday morning. When the animal couldn't negotiate the revolving door, it hid under an outdoor stage in a nearby plaza.

State wildlife officials tranquilized the roughly 2-year-old cat and plan to release it into the wild after tagging it for participation in a University of Nevada, Reno study.

No injuries were reported. "We're lucky this turned out as positive for the mountain lion and people at the scene," Healy said. "It would have been a different story for the cat had it succeeded in getting inside Harrah's."

Fire Threat Abates in California

MINERAL, Calif. (AP) • Residents of a tiny mountain town breathed easier Friday after air tankers and helicopters blunted the run of a massive wildfire in Northern California just outside Lassen Volcanic National Park.

"After hearing the news, I think I feel a whole lot better today," said Bob Einck, a contractor. He added that he didn't expect to have to continue to remove belongings from his vacation home in Mineral to protect them from fire danger.

Fire crews working by air Thursday repeatedly doused the spearhead of the Ponderosa Fire with water and flame retardant as it crept up the deep Battle Creek Canyon threatening the national park and the town of about 190 homes.

CalFire spokesman Don Camp said firefighters made significant progress against the blaze, stopping its stubborn run only miles from Mineral.

"We didn't sustain any significant growth for the first time in four days," Camp said.

Residents, meanwhile, gathered at the Lassen Mountain Lodge, which serves as a gateway to the park and has become a makeshift fire command center, and studied the latest fire map, which shows the blaze more than two-thirds contained at nearly 30,000 acres, or 44 square miles.

"Today is going to be a critical day," Camp said, noting that winds were expected to slow Friday. Full containment is expected early next week.

Sixty-four homes and 20 other buildings have been destroyed, mostly in the Manton area, since lightning ignited the blaze Saturday, Camp said. It was still threatening 900 other homes scattered through the rugged countryside as it burned a new front to the south.

About 2,500 firefighters were battling the blaze scorching piney hills about 30 miles southeast of Redding.

Efforts to protect Mineral have had a noticeable effect, according to Wade Glenn, who manages the lodge. He said that when the fire started smoke was heavy in the air, causing tension among area residents. Glenn said Friday that the skies were a hazy blue and people were feeling much better.

Gale Gilbert, a retired California Highway Patrol traffic officer, said the fire in the canyon looked like a mass of little campfires after the heavy dousing from the air.

"You get concerned, but there's not much you can do but wait, and make sure your insurance is paid up," he said.

"I feel pretty comfortable coming down and looking at the maps and hearing people talk."

Elsewhere in the state, firefighters battling a large blaze in Plumas National Forest braced for gusty winds this weekend. The fire, about 120 miles north of Sacramento, has consumed 99 square miles since it started at the end of July. It threatens about 900 homes and was a little more than half contained on Friday.

The California fires were among several stubborn blazes scorching the West.

In Washington state, crews have nearly contained a nearly two-week-old wildfire that has destroyed 61 homes and 35 outbuildings and damaged at least seven other properties, officials said.

N. Idaho Driver Sentenced in Fatal 2011 Collision

MOSCOW (AP) • A northern Idaho driver who struck and killed a developmentally delayed woman near a Moscow intersection last April has been sentenced to probation under a deal with prosecutors who called the death a terrible, tragic accident.

Ranger Adams, 20, pleaded guilty Wednesday to vehicular manslaughter as part of an agreement with prosecutors.

Under the agreement, Adams was sentenced to 18 months of probation and granted a withheld judgment, which means the charge won't show up as a conviction on his record and could be dismissed should he complete his probation without any problems.

Adams hit Carrie Lokteff, 37, as she was crossing the street around 11 p.m. on April 28, 2011, police said. Lokteff, who had worked as a custodian at the Latah County courthouse, was hospitalized in Moscow and died from her injuries the following day.

An investigation found Adams was traveling under the speed limit and not driving recklessly, said authorities, who also ruled out influence from drugs or alcohol.

"This was truly just a terrible, tragic accident where it was at night and he simply did not see her where she was crossing. That's not to excuse his conduct," Latah County Prosecutor Bill Thompson told the Moscow-Pullman Daily News.

Adams continues to express guilt and regret about the accident, Thompson said.

The plea agreement requires that his driving privileges be suspended for one day and that he also do community service and pay restitution to Lokteff's family.

$77M Fund Created for Nev. Air Race Victims

RENO, Nev. (AP) • Organizers of the Reno National Championship Air Races have established a $77 million fund to be distributed to those who suffered injuries or lost family members in last year's mass-casualty crash in Nevada.

Kenneth Feinberg, who oversaw a federal compensation fund for victims of the 9/11 terror attacks, will be the new fund's administrator.

According to the Reno Air Racing Association Accident Compensation Fund's website, the program is designed to provide claimants prompt compensation while avoiding the costs and delays associated with lawsuits.

Compensation will be based on categories of injuries, including $15,000 for bruises and cuts, $45,000 for moderate injuries such as broken bones and torn tendons and $75,000 for major injuries that involved surgery or third-degree burns, the Reno Gazette-Journal reported.

Feinberg said the compensation system was based on the one used for 9/11 victims.

"I am confident that the overwhelming number of eligible death or injury claims will participate in the program," he said.

A modified World War II P-51 Mustang crashed in front of VIP boxes last September at the air races, killing 11 people and injuring about 70 others.

The air racing association admits no liability with its creation of the fund, according to a statement on the website. Claimants who receive compensation money give up all rights to sue the association.

Mike Houghton, president of the air racing association, said there has not been an "overwhelming desire to litigate" by victims and the fund is a good resolution to the need for compensation.

"There is a desire to resolve the issues of compensation — that's the core desire," he told the Gazette-Journal. "I believe everyone has been moving ahead to reach an equitable position so they can avoid litigation."

Linda Elvin, of Overland Park, Kan., who was seriously injured along with her husband, Brian, in the crash, told The Associated Press that she had not heard of the new fund and would not comment on it.

All four lawsuits filed against the air racing association to date have been put on hold while the parties discuss a settlement. Lawyers have said that hundreds of other victims were considering claims but have not yet filed.

Attorneys Tony Buzbee of Houston and David Casey of San Diego, both of whom represent victims in lawsuits, did not respond to requests for comment Friday.

Reno lawyer Bill Bradley, who represents a number of victims who have not yet filed claims, said the fund was a unique way to resolve claims.

"The fund is the product of a joint effort by lawyers representing victims and the Reno Air Racing Association to create an efficient and prompt resolution of their claims," he said. "This fund was created through a lot of cooperation."

Authorities Identify Body Found in Canal

BOISE (AP) • The Ada County coroner's office says a man whose body was found in an irrigation canal near Kuna likely drowned.

Officials say there were no obvious signs of injuries on 45-year-old Darren

Carl Glover, whose partially decomposed body was found in the New York Canal on Monday.

Officials say Glover has no known address and officials have been unable to find family members.

Teen Gets Life in Prison in Classmate's Killing

ELKO, Nev. (AP) • A teen who pleaded guilty to first-degree murder in the 2011 killing of a West Wendover High School classmate — a girl his mother described as his best friend — has been ordered to spend life in prison without the possibility of parole.

Judge Dan Papez handed down the sentence for Kody Cree Patten during an emotional hearing Friday in Elko. The Elko Daily Free Press reports the judge added an additional 20 years to the sentence for use of a deadly weapon, and ordered the 19-year-old to pay $5,000 restitution.

"Your blood runs cold, Mr. Patten," Papez said at the hearing, according to KSL.

Patten and Toni Fratto, his girlfriend at the time, were accused in the death of 16-year-old Micaela "Mickey" Costanzo, who was taken to a remote area near the Utah-Nevada border after track practice at the school on March 3, 2011.

Authorities said she was struck in the head with a shovel and her throat was slit before she was buried in a shallow grave.

Patten and Fratto were also accused of burning some of the girl's personal items in another location.

On Friday, Costanzo's father angrily asked Patten to explain the crime, telling the boy he "had no right to do that."

"There's no reason, there's no why or justification for it," Patten said. "I wish I could ask for forgiveness, but I feel I don't deserve it. ... Sorry is not enough."

Fratto hadn't been a suspect until she offered a confession to Patten's defense attorney. In the recording, she told lawyers that Micaela wanted to date Patten, but he didn't want anything to do with her.

Fratto pleaded guilty to second-degree murder with a deadly weapon and was sentenced in April to up to life in prison. She will be eligible for parole after serving 18 years.

Patten had previously pleaded not guilty and was set to go to trial in July, but he changed that plea in May in a bargain that took the death penalty off the table. As part of her plea agreement, Fratto had agreed to testify against him.

Idaho Lt. Gov. Brad Little Ticketed for Speeding

BOISE (AP) • The state's lieutenant governor was ticketed for speeding on U.S. Highway 95 in northern Idaho.

The Moscow-Pullman Daily News reports state police ticketed Lt. Gov. Brad Little early Wednesday for speeding between Lewiston and Moscow. Latah County court records show Little was found driving 76 mph when the speed limit was 65 mph.

He is among a list of Idaho elected officials who've been busted for driving too fast.

Republican U.S. Rep. Mike Simpson was ticketed in 2006 for speeding in Blaine County, while records show former Democratic Rep. Walt Minnick was caught driving too fast in an Ada County school zone while running for office in 2008.

BSU Joining Big West for Non-football Sports

TIMES-NEWS

BOISE • Come July, Boise State will be in the Big East and the Big West at the same time.

Boise State President Bob Kustra announced Friday the school has accepted an invitation to return most of its non-football sports to the Big West Conference starting July 1, 2013.

The university has been searching for a new league since the football team agreed to join the Big East next season, a move that also brought an end to the school's membership in the Mountain West Conference.

"Boise State's membership in the Big West Conference complements our Big East Conference football presence and reflects our emerging coast-to-coast profile," Boise State President Bob Kustra said in a school statement. "We are truly excited by the prospects of competition and collaboration with all these new partners both athletically and academically. The Big West will be an outstanding home for the majority of our intercollegiate sports and will provide great opportunities for our student-athletes."

Boise State's entry fee of $2.5 million will be paid over five years. The Broncos also will pay a travel subsidy to the conference, estimated at $750,000 per year.

The Broncos were slated to join the Western Athletic Conference for Olympic sports, but long-term uncertainty there prompted them to reach out to the Big West.

Next season, Boise State men's and women's basketball, men's and women's cross country, men's and women's golf, women's soccer, softball,

BY MIKE CHRISTENSEN
For the Times-News

Tears in his eyes and blood dripping from a gash in his nose, Canyon Ridge senior quarterback Eddie Marin softly shook his head and said, "That was our game. It should've been our game."

He was right. The host Riverhawks largely outplayed Columbia, the No. 5-ranked team in Class 4A, before falling 12-9 in overtime on Friday.

"Heartbreaker," said first-year CRHS coach Justin Alsterlund.

The Riverhawks took a 9-6 lead in overtime when Cade Summers connected on a 21-yard field goal, his third successful attempt of the night. But on its overtime possession, Columbia ended things when senior running back Mario Jenkins took the ball left, cut back inside and dove into the end zone for an 8-yard touchdown.

Canyon Ridge matched Columbia's superior size and strength with sheer toughness and grit. The Riverhawks' double wing offense bled the clock while rolling up nearly 240 rushing yards.

"We just grinded it out - ground game all the way," said Marin, who led the way with 139 rushing yards on 24 carries. "Our game plan was just to stick it to them and that's what we did the whole game. We just came out on the short end."

Columbia beat Canyon Ridge 35-0 when the teams met in the 2011 season-opener, but the Wildcats got all they could handle this time around.

"They're a good football team, well coached," Columbia head coach Derek Metz said of the Riverhawks. "With their new coach they've got lots of discipline, lots of heart."

Led by West Texas move-in Tyler Turner, the CRHS defense stifled Columbia's vaunted offense for most of the game. Canyon Ridge led 3-0 until Columbia quarterback Austin Schaffer kept the ball on a QB read and wove his way 60 yards to give the Wildcats a 6-3 halftime lead. Schaffer finished 5-for-12 through the air for 32 yards and had a team-high 94 yards on the ground.

Canyon Ridge drove inside the 20-yard line on three occasions in regulation, but each time an untimely penalty hindered the drive and the Riverhawks had to settle for a field-goal try, with Summers going 2-for-3, his last make tying the game at 6-6 with 7:31 remaining.

That came after Marin got into the end zone on fourth-and-goal from inside the 1, only to have the score mixed by an aiding the runner penalty.

"We just shot ourselves in the foot," said Alsterlund. "But I don't want to knock our kids' effort, they played their guts out."

That fact has Alsterlund confident his team will bounce back and have a successful 2012 campaign.

"We're a good football team," he said. "We're going to be there at the end of the year and we're going to be competing for a state berth and I've said that from Day 1."

"We just went to the last play with the No. 5 team in the state and we should've won."

Gooding Gives Oakley Rude Welcome to 11-man Football

BY DAVID BASHORE

GOODING • Oakley began its 11-man football journey with a thud.

Things got better, but Gooding wasn't in the giving mood, routing the Hornets 34-0 on Friday, led by a strong running game that Oakley couldn't answer.

Torin Brunson and Josh Finley both scored twice for the Senators, who lost all-state candidate Kyle Rison to a leg injury in the second quarter.

"I thought our linemen did a great job blocking. I had fumbled a couple times before, so I just thought to keep the ball high and tight," said Finley, who scored on runs of 58 and 11 yards while rushing for 153 yards.

The game wasn't without its hiccups, even for Gooding. The Senators fumbled the ball away twice, recovered a handful of others, committed eight penalties and left possibly three more touchdowns on the field. In fact, it was a busted play that got everything in motion.

Brunson scored after a mixup on the handoff with Josh Faulkner, scampering 19 yards the opposite way to the end zone.

Minico Breaks Away for Dominant Win

BY JOHN DERR
For the Times-News

RUPERT • What looked easy early, suddenly became a bit of a challenge.

Minico started off dominant, scoring the first 20 points of the game only to see an upstart Kuna team rally through the air.

The Spartans would regain control, pounding out over 400 yards on the ground and defeating the Kavemen 47-27 in the opening game of the high school football season.

Jordan Browning, despite suffering from cramps much of the game, scored three touchdowns.

"I didn't want to let my team down," said Browning, who missed much of the first half and only played sparingly after the break but still tallied 113 yards. "Every game is a roller coaster, we want to end up at the very top."

Minico lost two two-way starters before the game even started. Jake Beamer and Garrett Buttram were involved in an automobile accident Thursday evening and held out of the game.

The Spartans made a statement early, shutting down the Kavemen by dominating at the point of attack. Unfortunately a turnover in the red zone ended the first drive of the year.

Burley Earns 'Special' Win Over Filer

BURLEY • Special teams set the tone and the defense delivered Burley a season-opening in head coach Jed Thomas' debut Friday.

The Bobcats' special teams scored two touchdowns and set up two others while Burley's defense shut out Filer 33-0.

"I've stressed the importance that we never take a play off, and I think they found out how important special teams really are," said Thomas.

Burley's defense held Filer to 93 total yards. Tanner Sprenger had two interceptions and Jackson Kunz had another pick. The Wildcats converted only two first downs in the first half as Burley led 27-0 at the break.

"We were like, let's make it short, let's make it sweet and let's just hit 'em. And we did, and it's the first blowout we've had in years and it's awesome to feel that," said defensive end Brayden McCracken.

North Valley Scraps Its Football Season

BY DAVID BASHORE
dbashore@magicvalley.com

GOODING • The North Valley Academy football season is over before it even started.

Head coach Ed Simons Jr. confirmed to the Times-News on Friday that the team is sitting out the 2012 season due to insufficient numbers.

"From Day 1 we knew we were in trouble with numbers. We talked to some kids that signed up but never showed up," Simons said. "We kept plugging along and we finally got 10 kids, six varsity kids and four freshmen."

That was as good as it got for the Patriots, however. They explored teaming up with Camas County for the season, Simons said, along with dropping next week's game at Sho-Ban and continuing on.

North Valley already dropped a game with Murtaugh that was to be played Friday, and eventually the players and parents threw in the towel.

"We went through all the options, talked about forfeiting the game to Sho-Ban next week and that would give us four weeks of practice before we'd have a game with Jackpot, but there was no guarantee we'd have it because we're already nicked up," Simons said. "It was primarily the kids' choice, with the parents. I think they made the right choice, as much as I hate to say it. I certainly didn't want to pack it in and nobody else did. It just wasn't meant to be this year."

Simons said North Valley plans to have a full junior high schedule and continue improving the football facilities with an eye on playing in some form in 2013.

Idaho High School Activities Association Assistant Director Julie Hammons said since North Valley is a charter school, Patriot players who want to pursue playing this fall are free to dual-enroll at the public school in their home district.

Super Stocks, Street Stocks, Hornets, Jr. Stingers and the only opportunity this season to see the Idaho Late Models compete at the one-third mile track is just part of tonight's lineup at Magic Valley Speedway.

Only a handful of race nights remain in the 2012 season and the drivers in each division realize their chances are fading to gain positions in the Whelen All-American Weekly Racing Series point standings. Casey Pehrson, who has motored to some outstanding finishes lately, has three more opportunities to gain ground and pass Kris McKean for the Super Stocks title. Meanwhile, McKean will continue to battle for his fourth championship in a row in the series.

After winning his first main event race of the season last week, Allen Williams is also hoping to move up in the ranks. Kendel Woll, Willie Dalton and Dan Pehrson are among the drivers who are still looking forward to their first trip to Victory Lane this year.

Ernie Hall has been on fire lately winning five of the past six Street Stocks main event races. At this point in the season Paul Browne, his closest rival, Several drivers in both the Hornets and Jr. Stingers divisions had their night end abruptly last Saturday after wicked collisions during their event. It remains to be seen who all will return, but Hornets driver Jeff Peck has been working feverishly to get to No. 14 car race ready.

Gooding

"I just saw open space and told myself I had to get there," said Brunson, who rushed for 121 yards on 17 carries. "That really settled the nerves down and got us going."

Gooding coach Cameron Andersen wasn't thrilled with the way his team played despite the win, saying it needed to be better when the Senators host Valley next week.

Oakley, on the other hand, was pleased enough despite the loss. The Hornets gained net negative yardage in the first half but found some success in a no-huddle wishbone attack.

They twice got in the Gooding red zone but one trip ended with an interception and the other saw a pass fall incomplete on the game's final play.

"We didn't execute some things, but a good physical team like Gooding will make you not execute," Oakley coach Tim Behunin said. "We know there are critics and some apprehension (about moving to 11-man football), and it's a hard challenge, but that's part of life. We'll be competitive here."

Oakley plays Aberdeen next week.

men's and women's tennis, men's and women's outdoor track and field and women's volleyball will compete in the new league. Boise State's wrestling program will remain the Pac-12.

Other prominent Big West members include Hawaii and San Diego State. The conference is primarily comprised of California schools and does not currently compete in football.

Boise State was Big West member for all sports, including football, from 1996 to 2001 when it made the jump from NCAA Division I-AA (now FCS) football status to I-1A (FBS).

USADA Erases Armstrong's Career

ASSOCIATED PRESS

The champagne toasts on the Champs-Élysées and the two-fingered "V" for victory signs he flashed while pedaling to the finish line.

The excruciating mountain climbs and the explosions of power that pushed him past other heaving cyclists on narrow Alpine roads.

The legions of fans wearing yellow Livestrong bracelets cheering on the cancer survivor whose grit and determination gave them hope.

Faded images are all that remain of the unprecedented cycling career of Lance Armstrong.

The U.S. Anti-Doping Agency erased the rest of it on Friday.

It wiped out 14 years of Armstrong's career — including his record seven Tour de France titles — and barred him for life from the sport after concluding he used banned substances.

USADA said it expected cycling's governing body to take similar action, but the International Cycling Union was measured in its response, saying it first wanted a full explanation of why Armstrong should relinquish Tour titles he won from 1999 through 2005.

The Amaury Sport Organization, which runs the world's most prestigious cycling race, said it would not comment until hearing from the UCI and USADA. The U.S. agency contends the cycling body is bound by the World Anti-Doping Code to strip Armstrong of one of the most incredible achievements in sports.

Armstrong, who retired a year ago and turns 41 next month, said Thursday he would no longer challenge USADA and declined to exercise his last option by entering arbitration. He denied again that he ever took banned substances in his career, calling USADA's investigation a "witch hunt" without any physical evidence.

He is now officially a drug cheat in the eyes of his nation's doping agency.

USADA chief executive Travis Tygart described the investigation as a battle against a "win-at-all-cost culture," adding that the UCI was "bound to recognize our decision and impose it."

"They have no choice but to strip the titles under the code," he said.

That would leave Greg LeMond as the only American to win the Tour de France, Lance Armstrong, pictured celebrating his seventh Tour de France victory in 2005, had his entire career erased by the U.S. Anti-Doping Agency Friday, after Armstrong gave up his fight Thursday against USADA's charges that he used performance-enhancing substances.

having done so in 1986, 1989 and 1990.

Armstrong on Friday sent a tweet that he's still planning to ride in a mountain bike race in Aspen, Colo., on Saturday and follow it up with running a marathon on Sunday, but he did not comment directly on the sanctions.

The UCI and USADA have engaged in a turf war over who should prosecute allegations against Armstrong. The UCI event backed Armstrong's failed legal challenge to USADA's authority, and it cited the same World Anti-Doping Code in saying that it wanted to hear more from the U.S. agency.

"As USADA has claimed jurisdiction in the case, the UCI expects that it will issue a reasoned decision" explaining the action taken, the Switzerland-based organization said in a statement. It said legal procedures obliged USADA to fulfill this demand in cases "where no hearing occurs."

If Tour de France officials follow USADA's lead and announcements that Armstrong has been stripped of his titles, Jan Ullrich could be promoted to champion in three of those years. Ullrich was stripped of his third-place finish in the 2005 Tour and retired from racing two years later after being implicated in another doping scandal.

The retired German racer expressed no desire to rewrite the record book of cycling's greatest event, even though he would be the biggest beneficiary.

"I know how the order was on the finishing line at the time," Ullrich said. "I've finished with my professional career and have always said that I was proud of my second-place finishes."

The International Olympic Committee said Friday it will await decisions by USADA and UCI before taking any steps against Armstrong, who won a bronze medal at the 2000 Sydney Games. Besides the disqualifications, Armstrong will forfeit any medals, winnings, points and prizes, USADA said, but it is the lost titles that now dominate his legacy.

If Armstrong Loses Tour Titles, Who Gets Them?

ASSOCIATED PRESS

PARIS • The cyclists Lance Armstrong beat to win his seven Tour de France victories may soon get a chance at his titles. But their ranks include men who have faced a tangle of doping bans and accusations, possibly presenting a headache for Tour leadership.

Here's a look at who else was on the podium in the seven Tours that Armstrong won from 1999-2005:

No. 2: Alex Zulle, Switzerland. His 1998 team, Festina, was ousted from the Tour that year in connection with the widespread use of the performance-enhancing drug EPO. Zulle later admitted to using the blood-booster over the four previous years. The Festina affair nearly derailed the 1998 Tour, and is widely seen as the first big doping scandal to jolt cycling.

2000

No. 2: Jan Ullrich, Germany. The 1997 Tour winner, a five-time Tour runner-up and longtime Armstrong rival. He was the top-name cyclist among at least 50 implicated in the "Operation Puerto" police investigation in Spain in May 2006. Ullrich was stripped of his third-place finish from the 2005 Tour and retired from racing two years later. Earlier this year, he confirmed that he had had contact with Eufemiano Fuentes, a Spanish doctor at the center of that scandal, calling it a "big mistake" — but did not admit to doping.

No. 3: Joseba Beloki, Spain. Implicated in Operation Puerto, he retired in 2007. He was reportedly was cleared by a Spanish court of any involvement in the case.

No. 2: Ullrich.

No. 3: Beloki.

No. 2: Beloki.

No. 3: Raimondas Rumšas, Lithuania. On the last day of the 2002 Tour, police stopped his wife, Edita, at the Italian border and searched her car, turning up suspected doping products. A French court later handed them four-month prison sentences on doping-related charges. The cyclist denied taking banned substances at that event, and all his tests came back negative. He said the products in his wife's car were for his mother-in-law. The next year, he was given a one-year ban after testing positive for EPO in the 2003 Giro d'Italia.

2003

No. 2: Ullrich.

No. 3: Alexandre Vinokourov, Kazakhstan. He later served a two-year doping suspension after twice testing positive for banned blood transfusions during the 2007 race. He won the Olympic road race in London last month and has announced plans to retire.

2004

No. 2: Andreas Kloeber, Germany.

No. 3: Ivan Basso, Italy. Excluded from the 2006 Tour because of his involvement in Operation Puerto. He claimed that he gave his blood to Fuentes — the Spanish doctor at the center of that scandal — but never used it. Later that year, Basso received a two-year doping ban; he later returned, and won his second Giro d'Italia in 2010.

Church of the Brethren to Host Old Time Carnival • S6

Back to Church

It's "Back to School" month. That means there are school supplies to purchase, new school clothing to try on, and, for the less fortunate, college tuition payments to make.

Brian Vriesman
Pastor's Corner

Remember the days when with the expectation of a new school year came the anticipation of reuniting with friends, new subject matter, even anticipation of that new teacher (or not)?

Admittedly, as we grew older, the excitement of beginning another school year waned, but at least we knew we'd be reuniting with our buddies during lunch.

As we approach another fall ministry season in our local churches, I would hope our level of anticipation to dive back into our local church ministries and programs would match our children's enthusiasm for those first days of the new school year. Wherever your church of choice, your pastor and leaders would LOVE your enthusiasm and commitment to help create an environment of dynamic spiritual learning and growth.

Wherever your church of choice, your pastor and leaders would LOVE your enthusiasm and commitment to help create an environment of dynamic spiritual learning and growth.

For many long-tenured Christians, it's tempting to assume we've studied enough, learned enough, and listened enough about the Christian faith through the years. We think we've probably heard it all from Sunday school teachers, Christian schooling, Veggie Tales, or other forms of spiritual osmosis.

It's that "been there, done that" learning mentality that derails our spiritual growth curve. Even more damaging, it ultimately prevents churches from truly fulfilling their potential impact for the kingdom.

Here's your "Back to Church" verse for the fall ministry season, Proverbs 1:5: "let the wise listen and add to their learning, and let the discerning get guidance."

Long before "lifelong learning" became a buzzword in educational circles, the author of Proverbs suggested it was the only way to live.

This fall, your church needs you and your family to be as enthusiastic for your new spiritual learning opportunities as a kindergarten student is for their first day of school. See yourself as a contributor, not a consumer. A participant, not a spectator.

If it helps you, go ahead, buy some new clothes, an iPad to take notes with, and the latest greatest version of a study Bible.

My prayer is that you'll become part of building a community of faith that will consistently "add to their learning." You may never become teacher's pet, but you AND the church you attend might just accomplish some amazing things for the cause of Christ.

Challenged in Charity

A Magic Valley service group faces tough times but hopes the community will step up.

TWIN FALLS • As Mary Eaton sat in her recliner Thursday afternoon, she reached for a bag of nearby dog treats. Tonya, a German shepherd, perked its ears and walked over to pop itself at Eaton's swollen feet.

Eaton tossed a couple of the goodies at the dog. Tonya was a little late on the receiving end and didn't catch them, but that was OK. She's a smart, gentle dog, Eaton said, and one of her few friends.

Most of her friends now are from Interfaith Volunteer Caregivers of the Magic Valley, a nonprofit service group that helps the area's needy elderly. Tonya is owned by one of the group's volunteers, Marcia Donner, and comes with her master whenever Donner visits Eaton.

Donner

Interfaith Volunteer Caregivers — or IVC as it's known among its volunteers — has been around for 16 years, but the past three have been fiscally challenging, Donner said.

The nonprofit is funded entirely by community grants and donations, but a tough economy has tightened the grant money, said executive director Karen WhiteHawk, and local donations have slackened.

The group scheduled an emergency fundraiser for Sept. 22 — a golf ball drop — but even those ticket sales aren't where they need to be.

"So far we've sold around 40 tickets," WhiteHawk said. "But we need to sell 5,000 to make it through the year."

If things don't improve, IVC could close its doors.

Eaton doesn't want to lose her visit from the volunteers.

Mary Eaton, 90, left, greets Tonya, a German shepherd owned by Marcia Donner, while Inez Reams looks on.

"Without IVC these people have nothing, they have nowhere else to turn."

Karen WhiteHawk, executive director

If that happened, who would help her out?

Tonya and her owner come to Eaton's Twin Falls apartment at least once a week to do light chores and keep company with the homebound 90-year-old, who has a number of health problems.

Bad knees and hips make it difficult for her to be mobile, so the small apartment she lives in, where the living room doubles as her bedroom, suits her fine.

The room is filled with a small pile of books, a reading light, TV and various religious emblems — a sculpture of praying hands, statues of heavenly angels and pictures of Jesus.

She tries to keep the faith, and it helps when Donner and other folks from IVC stop by to check in on her. Any help they provide is a welcome blessing.

After Tonya ate her treats, she walked back to Eaton's bed and lay down beside it while Eaton, Donner and another volunteer, Inez Reams, chatted about books, aging and the volunteer group.

Several of the volunteers, such as Donner and Reams, are seniors themselves.

"I'm the baby of the three of us," said Donner, who's been with the group for 14 years. She is 80, Reams is 88.

But volunteers run the age gamut, starting with high schoolers, male and female. The group could always use more, especially in places outside of Twin Falls such as Gooding, Donner said.

It's rewarding work, she said.

IVC started in 1996 as a group that WhiteHawk describes as helping seniors who "fall through the cracks" — or those who don't qualify for help with other agencies because of Medicare or Medicaid restrictions.

One woman couldn't get help from another agency, WhiteHawk said, because

Ball Drop

Interfaith Volunteer Caregivers of the Magic Valley will host a golf ball drop at 11 a.m. Sept. 22 at the College of Southern Idaho. Cost is $5 for one ball; $10 for three balls; the balls will be dropped above a flagpole to see which land closest to the pole. Several prizes are available, and the event includes a yard sale and barbecue. Tickets are available at Kurt's Pharmacy, Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce and Canyon Springs Golf Course. Or call IVC at 733-6333.

she made $14 a month too much.

The biggest service IVC provides is transportation — taking seniors to medical or life-essential appointments such as dialysis treatments. The group also builds wheelchair ramps at homes and installs safety rails. Many of its volunteers visit with seniors or the disabled in their homes and often do light housekeeping or yard work.

Our congregation has about 300 people.

Who is your church leadership?
Calvary Chapel Buhl is governed by a board of elders and a senior pastor, the Rev. Jackie Roberts, a graduate of Calvary Chapel Bible College. Our elders include Jeff Masters, Corey Beam, Fritz Redmer and David Plew.

What is the church's core beliefs?
Calvary Chapel has been formed as a fellowship of believers in the Lordship of Jesus Christ. Our supreme desire is to know Christ and be conformed to His image by the power of the Holy Spirit. We are not a denominational church, nor are we opposed to denominations as such, only to their over-emphasis of the doctrinal differences that have led to the division of the Body of Christ.

true basis of Christian fellowship is Christ's Agape love, which is greater than any differences we possess and without which we have no right to claim ourselves Christians. We believe worship of God should be spiritual. Therefore, we remain flexible and yielded to the leading of the Holy Spirit to direct our worship. We believe worship of God should be inspirational. Therefore, we give great place to music in our worship. We believe worship of God should be intelligent. Therefore, our services are designed with great emphasis upon the teaching of the Word of God that He might instruct us how He should be worshipped. We believe worship of God should be fruitful. Therefore, we look for His love in our lives as the supreme manifestation that we have truly been worshipping Him. We believe in all the basic doctrines of historic Christianity. We believe in the inerrancy of Scripture, that the Bible, Old and New Testaments are the inspired, infallible word of God. We believe that God is eternally existent in three distinct persons: Father, Son and Holy Spirit. We believe that God is the personal, transcendent, and sovereign Creator of all things. We believe that Jesus Christ is fully God and fully human, that He was born of a said, area churches were to be the main funding mechanism, but it never caught on the way it was meant to. Few churches today support the group, she said — not necessarily because they don't want to, but because they also have been hit with financial burdens. She didn't name the supporting churches.

The group grew strong in its early years, she said — but now the future is difficult to see. Even so, the group's 25 volunteers in the first seven months of this year served 969 people, clocked 1,602 hours and traveled 12,917 miles.

"That's as of the end of July," WhiteHawk said. "For some seniors, we're their only hope."

Hope is a good thing, she said, and it is something WhiteHawk and her volunteers haven't given up.

"Without IVC these people have nothing, they have nowhere else to turn," she said. "These are seniors who are often forgotten. I would really like to see the community step up and help the seniors."

Eaton also is hopeful that funding will pick up, helping the group to stay open.

"I couldn't do without them," she said.

Do you offer childcare? Childcare is available for all services.

Do you have a children's ministry?

After worship, they divide into age-appropriate groups for Bible story time, crafts, snacks and games.

Describe your youth ministry:

Junior high youth ministry at Calvary Chapel Buhl is called R.O.J.O.S., which stands for "Relying on Jesus our Savior." They meet 7 p.m. Wednesdays for Bible study led by Dan and Krystal Lineberry in a relaxed atmosphere while studying the Bible verse by verse and chapter by chapter.

High school youth ministry at Calvary Chapel Buhl is called "The Branch." The Branch's mission is to teach the high school youth group of Calvary Chapel Buhl that they need a personal relationship with Jesus Christ, by remaining connected to "the Vine" while allowing themselves to branch out and change this world as Christ did. The Branch, led by Jason and Danielle Richardson, meets Wednesday at 7 p.m. in the fellowship hall.

Jerry Nelson, Count of 'Sesame Street,' Dies

BY LYNN ELBER
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES • Jerry Nelson, the puppeteer behind a delightful menagerie of characters including Count von Count on "Sesame Street" and Gobo Fraggles on "Fraggle Rock," has died. He was 78.

Nelson, who suffered from emphysema, died Thursday night in his Massachusetts home on Cape Cod, the Sesame Workshop said Friday.

"Every description of his characters describes Jerry as well," said "Sesame Street" executive producer Carol-Lynn Parente. "Silly, funny, vulnerable, passionate and musical, for sure. That voice of his was superb."

Although he'd been in declining health for some time "his attitude was never bad," Parente said Friday. "He was always so grateful for what he had in his life."

"We're having a rough day on the Street," she said.

In a tribute posted online by the nonprofit Sesame

Workshop, Nelson was lauded for his artistry and the "laughter he brought to children worldwide" with the Count and other Muppet puppets including Sherlock Hemlock, Herry Monster and the Amazing Mumford.

Nelson was part of other projects featuring Jim Henson's Muppets, including the 1984 movie "The Muppets Take Manhattan" and TV series including the 1980s "Fraggle Rock" and 1990s "Muppets Tonight!"

In recent years, Nelson gave up the physically demanding job of operating the Count and other puppets on "Sesame Street" but still voiced the characters, the workshop said. The show's new season launches in September and Nelson's voice will be heard.

In 2010, he released the album "Truro Daydreams," the title that referred to the Massachusetts town.

Survivors include Nelson's wife, Jan, Parente said. Funeral plans were not immediately available.

'Drugstore Cowboy' Author Dies in Wash. Prison

SEATTLE (AP) • James Fogle, who wrote "Drugstore Cowboy," an autobiographical crime novel that led to an acclaimed 1989 film starring Matt Dillon, has died. He was 75.

Fogle died Thursday at a prison in Monroe, Wash., about 30 miles from Seattle, said Selena Davis, a state corrections spokeswoman. A judge had sentenced him to almost 16 years in prison for holding up a pharmacy in a Seattle suburb in 2010, the last in a string of crimes that put him behind bars for most of his adult life.

Fogle died of probable malignant mesothelioma, the Snohomish County Medical Examiner's office said Friday.

The ailing Fogle was emaciated and connected to several medical machines in the last week of his life, close friend Daniel Yost told the Seattle Times in a phone interview from Los Angeles.

He was terminally ill and barely able to breathe, but his sharp wit and creative drive were ever-present as he pushed Yost, one of his final visitors, to get another of his novels, the autobiographical "Doing It All," on to the big screen, the Times reported.

"It's amazing he was still writing," Yost, who met Fogle while working as a journalist in Portland in the 1970s, told the Times. "He said he never killed anybody, and I don't think he really hurt anybody. He was a person with a huge heart."

Fogle had already spent much of his life in prison when he wrote "Drugstore Cowboy," based on his experiences in a band of addicts who roamed the Pacific Northwest robbing pharmacies to feed their addictions. Filmmaker Gus Van Sant turned the novel into the acclaimed 1989 film.

Fogle only had a sixth-grade education but started writing his stories more than 40 years ago, the Times reported. Yost said Fogle occupied his time during lengthy prison lockups by writing unpublished novels and screenplays.

He wrote his only published novel, "Drugstore Cowboy," in six weeks while serving a 20-year prison term for a pharmacy robbery in southwest Washington. Van Sant and Yost wrote the screenplay.

Indianapolis 500 Driver Jerry Grant Dies at 77

ORANGE, Calif. (AP) • Jerry Grant, a race driver who made history by breaking 200 mph in an Indianapolis 500-style car, has died.

Indianapolis Motor Speedway says in a statement that Grant died Aug. 12 at age 77. Family friend Gary Bryson tells the Los Angeles Times that Grant died from liver failure and diabetes at a hospital in Orange, Calif.

Grant was in 10 Indy

500s in the 1960s and '70s. His best finish was seventh place.

His second-place finish behind Mark Donohue in 1972 was thrown out because he used gas from another driver's supply after pulling into Bobby Unser's pit. Grant's final 12 laps weren't counted and he fell to 12th place. Three months later Grant set a record when his Indy-style car topped 200 mph at Ontario Motor Speedway.

Terry 'Tubesteak' Tracy, Model for Big Kahuna in 'Gidget,' Dies at 77

BY ELAINE WOO
Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES • In 1956, Terry "Tubesteak" Tracy, freshly fired from his job at a downtown Los Angeles insurance company, bid goodbye to the 9-to-5 life and headed for the Malibu shore, where he built himself a shack out of wood scraps and palm fronds and sailed into surfing history.

He was, according to surfing historian Matt Warshaw, a decent surfer, but his ticket to glory wasn't what he did on a board: It was the aesthetic he embraced. Tracy, better known by the nickname "Tubesteak," was the personification of the rebellious surf subculture that emerged in California in the late 1950s. He was an anti-authoritarian sage in Wayfarer shades and Madras shorts who made bumming on the beach the essence of cool and an irresistible draw for a girl he called Gidget.

An impresario of Malibu beach when it became the most famous surf break in the world, Tracy died Wednesday at his home in San Clemente, Calif., of complications of diabetes, said his wife, Phyllis. He was 77.

Although he hadn't ridden the waves in decades, he was revered as an elder statesman of the surfing world, known in later years for the articles he wrote about the crazy parties and beach pranks that became, Surfer's Journal publisher Steve Pezman wrote this week in a tribute, "an-thems to true surfer style."

The burly bohemian was holding court outside his Malibu shack in the summer of '56 when a petite teenager named Kathy Kohner wandered by to borrow a surfboard. Five feet tall and 95 pounds, she reminded Tracy of a teensy girl he once met who had been dubbed Gidget, a mash up of "girl" and "midget." Inspired by the memory, Tracy later said, he called Kohner that — and the name stuck.

When she told her screenwriter father, Frederick Kohner, about the characters she met on the beach, he turned her stories into a novel, "Gidget, the Little Girl with Big Ideas," published in 1957.

Brazil Goalkeeper at 1970 World Cup Dies at Age 74

SAO PAULO (AP) • The Brazilian soccer federation says Felix, its starting goalkeeper when it won the 1970 World Cup, has died of complications from emphysema. He was 74.

The federation says Felix died Friday morning at a hospital in Sao Paulo.

The goalkeeper made key saves during the tournament in Mexico to help

Brazil win its third title with a team led by Pele. He played all six matches.

His main club was Rio de Janeiro's Fluminense. He also played for Portuguesa and Juventus. The Brazilian federation says there will be a minute of silence in Felix's honor before every Brazilian league match this weekend.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

"There is nothing stable in the world; uproar's your only music."

— John Keats

At last year's Lederer Invitational Teams, held in London, two Souths reached the pushy four hearts doubled. Each defending pair had a chance to defeat the game, but both fell at a late hurdle.

Against John Salisbury, West led the diamond king. Declarer won and exited with the club queen, won by East, who naturally enough led the diamond jack. Salisbury covered, and West had to discard to beat the contract. When he ruffed and exited with a club, Salisbury could ruff and run the heart queen, covered with the king and ace. Now South had just enough entries to establish the long club and play to ruff a diamond to dummy. Then he could cash the winning clubs to dispose of his losing spades for a score of 590.

At another table, after the same first two tricks, East, David Burn, did extremely well, after winning his club ace and shifting to the spade five instead of leading the diamond jack. Now declarer, Zia Mahmood, knew that the spade finesse was hopeless, so he put in the eight. West won with the nine and now exited with a spade, fatally, giving declarer 10 tricks. A club would have been equally unsuccessful here — West gets endplayed, forced to lead a spade or allow the long club to be developed. However, West did have an escape, albeit one that is very hard to find at the table. He could have exited with a small heart, playing his partner for the trump nine, after which declarer has no way home.

ANSWER: Your partner has shown a powerful hand with his cue-bid. Since you virtually denied a four-card major with your first bid, you can bid two hearts now to show your values and your three-card suit. This will let your partner know where you live, and he can tell you whether he has one major, both majors, or club support.

DEAR ABBY: My sister sent me an email asking what I was getting our mom for her birthday because she had very few ideas. I told her I was planning to get Mom a gift card so she could buy a book for her e-reader.

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

Two days later, my sister emailed me back telling me she liked my idea so much she used it and mailed Mom the same gift card herself. She said it's "no big deal" if we got Mom the same thing.

It's a big deal to me. I think it was rude and inconsiderate. She says I'm being "ridiculous" because "it's only a gift card" and it doesn't matter if Mom got two of them. To me, if you ask what I'm getting someone as a gift, it's rude to run out and buy that item yourself. Who do you agree with?

— LEARNED A LESSON IN LEWISBURG, PA.
DEAR LEARNED A LESSON: I agree with you. But rather than hold a grudge, take the lesson to heart. The next time your sister asks you for gift suggestions for a relative, tell her, "Gee, I haven't decided yet."

DEAR ABBY: I am an 11-year-old boy who lives in San Francisco. I read your column in the San Francisco Chronicle every day. I love your thinking and wish I could be as sensible as you. I just wanted to ask: How old do you think someone should be to read your column? I know your column can be possibly inappropriate, but love reading it anyway.

— T.P. IN S.F.
DEAR T.P.: You are not the only young person who reads my column. (I printed a letter from a 7-year-old earlier this week.) I have been told that my column has been used for many years to start important conversations between people of all ages.

When I was growing up, no literature in our house was off limits — and any question I asked my parents was given a straight answer. I hope it's the same in your family because if it is, you will grow up to be at LEAST as "sensible" as me.

DEAR ABBY: My daughter has given me permission to resume communication with my grandson, "Justin." She has kept us apart since he was 3. Justin is now 17.

I have been told by the other grandparents that Justin holds no animosity toward me. He knows I have never given up hope that one day we could reunite. Because of my daughter's unpredictable temperament and her use of my grandson as a way to control me, I'm leery and don't trust her to keep the door open between us. I'm afraid she'll slam it shut again.

What steps should I take? Justin turns 18 next year and his mom plans to "move without him, once he's 18." Should I contact him now or wait until he reaches 18? I am tired and all cried out, but I want to do the right thing for my grandson's mental health, given the craziness his mother has created.

— LOVING, LONGING GRANDMA

DEAR GRANDMA: Write your grandson a sweet note and inform him that his mother has given "permission" for you to make contact with him. Ask him to call you, so he can begin getting to know you. Find out what his plans are, and invite him to visit. However, do this SLOWLY — because you still don't know how much damage your daughter's "unpredictable temperament" has done in the formation of his personality and character. Proceed with your eyes wide open.

Because it appears your daughter wants to abandon her son as soon as she legally is able to, he will need all of the caring and supportive relatives he can find.

IF AUGUST 25 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Drive and determination will take you far, but during the next several weeks, you could be perhaps a wee bit too optimistic. Even if you make some mistakes, it seems there is a guardian angel there to keep you from harm. Your cosmic sailboat could encounter rough waters in late September, making it a time to avoid new romantic or business commitments. Glide effortlessly forward, as you realize your ambitions in December and January and when improved street smarts help you make shrewd financial or business moves. An opportunity to form new and valuable friendships can drop in your lap in February, so that is a good time to relax, take extra care of your health and enjoy the fruits of your labors.

HOROSCOPE
Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Head for the local watering holes and crowds of people to satisfy your yen for variety and entertainment. Scintillating conversations or being engrossed in a new hobby may keep you wide awake tonight.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Let your most generous instincts prevail. You might rub shoulders with people who have just as much ambition as you do, but who are more ruthless. It isn't necessary to take sides or agree with them.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Tall tales receive short shrift. People may find justifications and excuses unbelievable and are unimpressed by exaggerations. Truthfulness is the most important virtue to embrace this weekend.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Constructive criticism may help you be more perfect, but don't let it eat away at your self-confidence. The mood is perfect for outdoor activities or working side by side with friends for a good cause.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You probably had a few occasions this past week when someone took offense at the most innocent remarks. Your special someone may be in an amorous mood and willing to massage away the tensions.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Win at whatever you do by being at the right place at the right time. A competition can be used to your advantage. Make the most of your ability to charm others and grease the right wheels.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Work alongside a helpmate. This could be a great day to follow through on your whims and take a short trip or visit with friends. You have the sensitivity and sensibility to sidestep the most obvious pitfalls.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): With a can-do attitude you can do anything. Small obstructions in your path can briefly make you doubt your abilities or worry that dreams are unattainable. When life hands you lemons, make lemonade.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Put some muscle behind your imagination. Imagine that everything will turn out just fine. What seems like trouble will not become a stumbling block unless you blow it out of proportion.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Careful organization can be the key to happiness. Your happiness might depend upon not being taken by surprise. Ask for a through rundown of the details when you make plans with someone else.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Spend quality time on artistic or creative work. You can use a finely tuned eye for detail to create a pleasant effect in your surroundings. Stick to your plans and glide effortlessly towards your destination.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Inspiration is a magic spinning wheel that changes ideas into gold. Creative juices are flowing over the next several days. Don't worry if the world isn't ready to give you the recognition you deserve.

The object is to place the numbers 1 to 9 in the empty squares so that each row, each column and each 3x3 box contains the same number only once. The difficulty level of the Conceptis Sudoku increases from Monday to Sunday.
