A New Semester at CSI

Enrollment: CSI spokesman Doug Maughan said total student numbers are down a little compared to the same time last year.

The total student headcount was 6,960 as of Aug. 20. That's down about 6.45 percent from the same day last year. Registrations for high schoolers taking dual-credit classes aren't processed until the end of September or early October.

About 1,800 high school students around the state took dual-credit classes through CSI last semester.

Maughan said some of the college's technical programs — such as drafting and heating/ventilation/air conditioning — still have slots available, which is unusual.

But enrollment numbers at off-campus centers in Gooding, Burley and Hailey are looking good, he said.

Numbers are also a little stronger this year for degree-seeking students who plan to transfer to a four-year university.

THE DORM LIFE

CSI Students Begin New Semester

Hannah Bruno and her father, Mark, of Mountain Home, unpack a refrigerator Friday as her mother, Nancy, hangs clothes in her Eagle Hall dorm room at the College of Southern Idaho.

The vast majority of the students living in the on-campus dorm aren't from south-central Idaho.

TWIN FALLS • Francisca Arechiga leaned up against the back of her car Friday as she waited for her son Oscar to take a load of items into his dorm room.

It was move-in day at the College of Southern Idaho's Eagle Hall.

It's Oscar's first year of college. For his mother, it will be a transition as she watches her son live on his own for the first time.

"It's a little bit scary to see how he's going to respond to the responsibility," Arechiga said.

ties," Arechiga said.

CSI is a good fit for her son, she said, because it's not too far from home in Caldwell and it's less expensive than other Idaho colleges.

On Friday morning, the parking lot outside Eagle Hall was full of cars. Students and their parents wheeled in items using hand trucks.

TWIN FALLS • A new school year will bring more students to Twin Falls classrooms.

The Twin Falls School District's enrollment is projected to climb to about 8,100 students this year — a new record for the district.

Superintendent Wiley Dobbs said that's about 200 more students than last year.

Although some schools will be a "little larger than what we deem perfect," he said the growth is manageable.

"We're in good shape right now," he said.

Wildlife Summit Concludes

BY STEVE KADEL
skadel@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • A three-day Idaho Wildlife Summit concluded Sunday with a member of a hunting organization defending the need for diversity, including species such as wolves and mountain lions that have been controversial in some states.

"We are gradually building back the entire pyramid of wildlife," said Jim Posewitz. "It gets sticky because we don't all agree on the proper density of these things."

Posewitz represented Orion: The Hunters' Institute, which encourages fair chase and ethical hunting.

He was among four panel members who spoke in Boise, answering questions submitted by citizens throughout Idaho. About 55 people attended the session via satellite at the Canyon Crest Event Center in Twin Falls.

Posewitz believes that as state and federal wildlife agencies' budgets and staff levels are reduced, citizen volunteers will play an increasing role in determining wildlife management policy.

'We are gradually building back the entire pyramid of wildlife'

Idaho Fish and Game Director Virgil Moore was asked why a "vocal minority" dominates Idaho Fish and Game Commission meetings.

"We have extensive public input opportunity," he replied. "Yes, those who come and participate do get heard. But the written and other comments get heard, too."

Laughter Prescription for Mental Health

One of the biggest pick-me-ups is sharing a good laugh with someone I love. Karl Barth said, "Laughter is the closest thing to the grace of God." It's about acceptance and belonging. It's the natural result of hanging out with friends. When my friends and I come together, we have very little inhibition and a good deal of laughter.

It happens all the time in my coffee gang. Here's some good advice I picked up one morning:

"My physical health is not determined by how well I can imitate a dog's barking, so I don't need to get all puffed with self-importance."

"It's better to forget to zip up my pants than it is to forget to zip them down. It could be embarrassing either way you look at it."

"You don't need a pimp to solicit funds to purchase new flags for the VFW veterans' memorials. Stay within the legal limits and do it without prostitution."

I called the police the other day to report a robbery in progress outside my bedroom window. A couple of guys were trying to open the combination lock on my bully barn. All patrol units were busy. The police dispatcher suggested that I lock the doors of our house and wait until an officer became available.

Here's what I did: I hung up the phone and waited about 30 seconds before I called back. I told them they wouldn't have to worry anymore about my burglars because I just shot them. I hung up the second time. Within five minutes three police cars, a fire truck, and two paramedics in an ambulance arrived just in time to catch the burglars red-handed. I offered to buy donuts and coffee. They just laughed.

Ernie, one of the old-timers, told us that he had Old Age Syndrome, known as OAS. He admitted that it's actually a state of mind. He had two choices: have knee surgery and get back to normal or continue limping to save his public image. His war injury had become a fact of history that he couldn't possibly give up. He elected to please his fans.

Friends help us slow down and breathe a little easier. They listen to us unwind and sometimes give an extra set of eyes to consider the bigger picture. Ah sure, they might give us a hard time, and it's only because they love us, but you can always count on them being there when you need them.

Their laughter echoes in my ears as I begin the day after our coffee time together. I can handle whatever comes my way because I know we'll be back together again soon, and I can call someone if something important comes up before that.

Carry a word of encouragement with you today. I am.

Here are some other highlights of what's coming for the Twin Falls School District this year.

- New employees: The school district hired 49 new certified employees — such as teachers — to fill job positions vacated through retirements or resignations.

And some new positions were added to help with the higher student numbers.

There are also 60 new classified employees — mostly to replace those who left.

- More blended learning: More classes will be taught through a "blended learning" approach this year.

Blended learning combines in-person instruction with online tools.

More than 40 high school teachers are taking a blended approach in their classrooms this year, Dobbs said. And several middle school teachers will also use the format.

- Social media in the classroom: The Twin Falls School District will pilot the Edmodo program in some classrooms this year.

Through the Idaho Leads Project, Dobbs said 20 teachers will work with the program. He described it as "a safe avenue for social media in the classroom."

The online program allows teachers to post grades and assignments. And students can submit their homework through the system.

What About Road Construction?

Construction at the intersection of Addison Avenue and Eastland Drive likely won't be done before school starts.

"We know that's going to cause some issues related to transportation to school," Twin Falls School District superintendent Wiley Dobbs said.

There are several schools in the area, including Vera C. O'Leary Middle School and Bridge Academy.

Parents: You can expect an automated phone call from your child's school if transportation in the area is affected by construction.

Dobbs said the city of Twin Falls is keeping the school district updated on construction progress.

- Planning for future buildings: The district will resurrect its facilities planning committee this year to explore future building needs.

There will be an opportunity for community members, employees, parents and students to get involved.

- Supplemental levy: The district's budget advisory committee will continue to meet to consider whether to pursue another supplemental levy.

Voters approved a two-year, $7.5 million ballot measure in spring 2011. The measure is set to expire this spring.

Wildlife

Moore said department staff and commission members read emails and letters from citizens, and consider all viewpoints.

Responding to a question about federal control over Idaho wildlife, the director said, "There are legitimate roles for federal management of wildlife in this state. Without federal oversight we would not have the waterfowl and migratory birds this nation enjoys."

"The idea of getting the feds off our back is a cliché," Posewitz added.

Toni Hardesty of The Nature Conservancy of Idaho said her organization is working with groups such as the Rocky Mountain Elk Foundation and Trout Unlimited to find collaborative ways to improve habitat and species health. She noted that The Nature Conservancy does allow hunting on properties it owns, except parcels that are very small.

Shane Mahoney of the Conservation Force, which approves of responsible hunting, said it's a worthy goal to educate children about the need for conservation and he acknowledged that curricula is available. However, he said the first step is finding "adult gatekeepers" in the schools who support teaching conservation.

"We have failed to develop a strategy for conservation education," he said.

In response to a question about threats to hunting and fishing from opposition groups, Mahoney called the concern "irrational."

"We need to get over this fear," he said. "We (sportsmen) have nothing to be afraid of. We have a remarkable record of achievement."

Moore of Fish and Game said the summit provided valuable discussions that could help shape wildlife management in Idaho.

"I would like to carry some of this message to the Legislature next year," he said.

pass it to the company.

If the council approves the pass-through funding request, the company will have a greater chance of qualifying for low-income housing tax credits.

The council will also consider a request to update the city code regarding pawn shops. If passed, the new code would require all pawn shop owners and employees to pass minimum qualifications, including not having a felony or theft conviction in the last five years. It would also require all pawn shops to report new merchandise on LeadsOnline.com, which checks for stolen property.

Also on the agenda: A request to approve a $500,000 Department of Transportation Small Community Air Service Grant Offer for the Twin Falls airport. The money would go to increase SkyWest seating on flights to and from Salt Lake City.

Semester

windows overlooking CSI's campus, students lined up to check in and get the key to their dorm room.

CSI Housing Coordinator Christy Bowman said the vast majority of the students living in the on-campus dorm aren't from south-central Idaho.

Many are from the Boise area, surrounding states such as Nevada or another country.

"We have a really big international student population," Bowman said.

Eagle Hall houses 118 men and 128 women. The dorm is always full during the fall semesters, she said.

It's one of CSI's housing options, as well as North View Apartments at the intersection of Washington Street North and North College Avenue.

At Eagle Hall, seven resident assistants answered questions and gave a building tour to each student and their family members. They also went over dorm rules.

RAs went through a week of training — including leadership and team-building activities — to get ready for their new job.

Second-year CSI student William Goss said being an RA is a chance to be involved at CSI.

Even though RAs have the reputation of being "rule enforcers," he said their job is also to help students feel comfortable.

During the first week of classes, RAs have activities planned for dorm residents such as an opening night social and movie night.

Bowman said living in a dorm provides a "sense of community" for students.

It allows them to meet other students and have friends to go through the college experience with, she said.

Bowman said living in a dorm also helps students have contacts on campus — such as RAs — who can help with questions about topics such as financial aid.

Registration

All new registrations — as well as changes such as adding or dropping a class — must be processed by 5 p.m. Aug. 31. Most CSI offices will be open 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. through Aug. 31. Those hours apply to the bookstore, as well as business, advising, financial aid, information and records offices.

said Friday that it's been busy at the complex with students moving in.

And some students are still looking for places to live.

"We still have people calling," he said, and now there's a waiting list.

The apartment complex — located on Washington Street north across from CSI — isn't owned by the college.

Manker said about 90 percent of students living in the complex had moved in by Friday.

There are six-bedroom dorm-style apartments that are popular with CSI students, he said. Units are furnished and utilities are included in the rent.

And there are rules beyond normal background checks and regulations when it comes to renting an apartment. Alcohol isn't allowed in the dorm-style apartments — even if students are 21 or older.

Manker said the apartment setup is a good transitional step for teenagers who are living on their own for the first time.

"We know this is a first step for people moving away from home," he said.

Thunderstorms Ignite Brush Fires

TIMES-NEWS

TWIN FALLS • A half-dozen small brush fires ignited Sunday evening in Twin Falls and Jerome counties as thunderstorms moved through the area.

A spokeswoman at the Southern Idaho Regional Communication Center said no property damage or road closures had resulted as of 8 p.m. She said the fires were being extinguished by rainfall soon after starting.

Meanwhile, the National Weather Service had south-central Idaho under a red-flag warning for scattered thunderstorms with abundant lightning through midnight. The NWS forecast "copious moisture" and winds gusting to 50 miles an hour.

A red flag warning means that critical fire weather conditions are either occurring or will shortly. A combination of strong winds, low relative humidity and warm temperatures creates "explosive fire growth potential," according to the NWS.

IDAHO POLICE STANDOFF ENDS WITH MAN FOUND DEAD

NAMPA (AP) • Authorities in the southwest Idaho city of Nampa say an exchange of gunfire between police and a man who barricaded himself in an apartment ended after about six hours when police used explosives to enter the apartment and found the man dead inside.

Police say they were called to the Brookside Apartments about 2 p.m. Saturday on a report a man had fired shots into an adjacent apartment. No one was injured.

Police say when they arrived the man fired at police, who returned fire. No officers were injured.

Police fired tear gas into the apartment and when there was no response used explosives to get inside where they found the man dead on a bed. He was the only person in the apartment.

Police didn't release details on how the man died.

Group Files Petition to Use Weevils on Milfoil

SANDPOINT (AP) • A northern Idaho water quality watchdog group has filed a petition for judicial review seeking to force the Idaho State Department of Agriculture to include biological elements in efforts to eradicate Eurasian milfoil.

The Bonner County Daily Bee reports that Lake Pend Oreille Waterkeeper filed the petition Tuesday in 1st District Court, naming the state agency and its director, Celia Gould, as defendants.

The group wants to revise Idaho's noxious weed rules that prohibit biological control so weevils can be used to control milfoil that has invaded the Pend Oreille watershed. The state agency prefers using herbicides, diver dredging and bottom barriers.

"We can't afford to sit back any longer and wait passively for the changes that need to occur to emerge on their own," Shannon Williamson, executive director of the nonprofit, said in a statement. "We need to be proactive, advocate for what we know is a viable solution to aquatic weed management and make biological control a reality for Lake Pend Oreille."

Milfoil usually grows in water less than 20 feet deep and can eventually reach the surface, forming a dense layer that can entangle swimmers and hinder boats. Idaho and other states have spent millions trying to eradicate it.

The State Agriculture Department last year rejected a Waterkeeper research project that involved collecting weevils on native milfoil, growing them in aquariums, and then releasing them into the water to expand the weevils population. However, that plan was blocked because state law prohibits transporting viable plant fragments unless they are going to be destroyed.

Waterkeeper officials said they filed the petition after repeated requests to the state to revise the rule.

"These statements inherently preclude the development of any effective biological control mechanisms for aquatic invasive weeds, despite ISDA's stated objectives of integrating biological control into all appropriate weed management programs across the state," Williamson said.

State Agriculture Department officials could not be reached for comment on Sunday.

Boise Police Deal with More Mental Health Calls

Officers do more social interventions than crime-fighting

BOISE (AP) • Boise Police Chief Mike Masterson says Idaho's lack of help for people needing mental health care has resulted in police being called more often.

The Idaho Statesman reports that over the past two years, police in Boise have responded to 13,000 mental health-related calls, ranging from welfare checks to attempted suicides and overdoses.

Boise Bench Patrol Officer Gary Wiggins, a 20-year veteran, says responding to mental health-related calls is a daily occurrence.

He says police spend so much time helping people find services that officers do more social interventions than crime-fighting.

Masterson says a network of services needs to be set up to help people and follow up after a crisis.

The Speedy Foundation ranks Idaho 47th in spending on mental health care.

Rolling Log Injures Utah Firefighter in Idaho

BOISE (AP) • A member of an elite Utah-based hotshot crew has been hospitalized in Boise after a large log rolled over him while he worked to build a fire line on a central Idaho wildfire.

Officials say two other members of the 20-member Bonneville Hotshots based in West Valley City, Utah, received minor injuries in the same incident on Saturday.

Trinity Ridge Fire spokesman Michael

Williams says the hospitalized firefighter received chest, elbow and wrist injuries. He was expected to be released from the hospital Sunday but not return to firefighting for three weeks.

Williams says the crew was taken off the fire Saturday but returned to firefighting Sunday. A review of the incident is planned.

Earlier this month a 20-year-old Idaho firefighter was killed in northern Idaho by a falling tree.

SW Idaho Judge Arrested on Suspicion of DUI

MERIDIAN (AP) • A southwest Idaho district court judge has been arrested on suspicion of misdemeanor driving under the influence.

The Idaho Press-Tribune reports that 3rd District Court Judge Renae Hoff was taken into custody early Saturday morning in Meridian.

Meridian Deputy Police Chief Tracy Basterrechea says an officer pulled the 61-year-old Hoff over after she failed to "maintain the lane of travel."

After a field sobriety test Hoff was arrested and taken to the Meridian Police Department where she took a breath alcohol test and blew over the legal limit of .08. Police declined to say how much over.

Hoff later on Saturday morning was released from the Ada County Jail.

Afghanistan Says Badruddin Haqqani is Dead

BY HEIDI VOGT AND RAHIM FAJEZ
Associated Press

KABUL, Afghanistan • The son of the founder of the powerful Haqqani network was killed in an airstrike in Pakistan, Afghanistan's intelligence agency said Sunday, providing the first public confirmation of rumors that have been swirling for days about the key member of a militant group the U.S. considers one of the most dangerous in the region.

The Taliban rejected reports of Badruddin Haqqani's death, however, saying that he was alive and well in Afghanistan.

Haqqani's death would be a serious blow to the organization founded by his father, Jalaluddin Haqqani. The group, which has ties to both the Taliban and al-Qaida, has been blamed for a series of high-profile attacks and kidnappings in Afghanistan, particularly in and around the capital city of Kabul, and poses perhaps the biggest threat to stability in the country.

Shafiqullah Tahiri, the spokesman for Afghanistan's National Directorate of Security intelligence agency, said Haqqani was killed last week in an airstrike in Pakistan. He did not provide any further details, and would not say what information the agency's operatives were basing their conclusion on.

U.S. officials have declined comment on the reports.

But Tahiri's account is similar to one provided Saturday by a senior Taliban leader who said Haqqani was killed in a drone strike. It also hews closely to a version provided by Pakistani officials who said Saturday that they were 90 percent sure the militant commander was killed in a missile attack Tuesday in Pakistan's North Waziristan tribal region.

The Taliban, who are closely allied with the Haqqani network, rejected all reports of Haqqani's death.

Zabiullah Mujahid, a Taliban spokesman, said Haqqani is alive and in good health in Afghanistan.

"A number of media have reported that Badruddin Haqqani has been killed. We would like to inform all media that this rumor is not correct," Mujahid said in the email to reporters late Saturday. "Badruddin Haqqani is in the country and is occupied with his operational responsibilities. He is alive and healthy. The rumor about him being killed is more propaganda of the enemy."

In a telephone call with The Associated Press on Sunday Mujahid again maintained that Haqqani was alive.

The territory where the American drone strikes generally occur are in Pakistan's remote and dangerous tribal regions, making it difficult for reporters or others to verify a particular person's death. And the U.S. does not comment publicly on its drone program, which is widely reviled by the Pakistani public and has been a source of tension with Islamabad.

The al-Qaida-allied Haqqani tribe runs a mafia-like smuggling operation and occasionally turns to terrorism with the aim of controlling its territory in eastern Afghanistan. The Haqqanis use Pakistani towns to plan, train and arm themselves with guns and explosives, cross into Afghanistan to attack NATO and Afghan forces, then retreat back across the border to safety.

Badruddin is considered a vital part of the Haqqani structure and is believed to have played an active role in kidnappings, extortion and high-profile operations in Afghanistan. Tahiri said that Haqqani's responsibilities included arranging foreign suicide bombers, maintaining relations with other insurgent groups, recruiting Pakistani Taliban fighters for the Haqqani group and overseeing operations in southeastern Afghanistan and in Kabul.

"He was the mastermind of the organized suicide attacks in Kabul," Tahiri said, referring to a number of high-profile strikes in the Afghan capital targeting everything from hotels to Western embassies. Every time there has been a highly complex attack in Kabul involving coordination between multiple insurgents, American officials have pointed the finger at the Haqqanis.

In the latest such attack in June, gunmen stormed a lake-side hotel outside of Kabul and opened fire on Afghans having dinner, killing 18 people. The commander of NATO forces in Afghanistan quickly attributed the attack to the Haqqani network, which has long operated as a sort of arm of the Taliban in the eastern part of the country.

Still, there are likely people waiting in the wings to replace Badruddin, said former Afghan intelligence chief Amrullah Saleh, now an opposition leader.

"They are going to find another person to replace him. What I know is that his elder brother, Sirajuddin Haqqani, is playing a larger role in the Haqqani network," Saleh said in an interview on Afghanistan's Tolo television. He said until the group's ability to operate across Afghanistan and Pakistan is limited, "killing their commanders or leaders will have its effect, but not that large of an effect."

In Syria, Islamic Militants May Complicate Uprising

Los Angeles Times

ALEPPO, Syria • Justice was swift and brutal when fighters of the Al Nusra Front militia caught a man accused of raping and killing a young girl in front of her father. They beheaded the man and left his body in the street.

The presence of women and children didn't deter them. Neither did the appeals of other rebels at the checkpoint in the beleaguered neighborhood of Salahuddin.

Members of the Free Syrian Army, the main rebel force, said that the man was a member of a pro-government militia and that they had no doubt he was guilty. They also had no objection to killing him — but they did object to a public beheading. “They don't even shoot them, they slaughter them with a knife,” said Hassan, a rebel fighter nicknamed the “Barber of the Revolution” because of his previous occupation. “These aren't Islamic manners.”

The appearance of Al Nusra Front, which is made up mostly of Syrians and some say has ties to al-Qaida, and the presence of a small contingent of foreign fighters threatens to complicate the uprising against President Bashar Assad, a conflict that already has taken on sectarian overtones.

For months as Assad's forces increasingly unleashed tanks, helicopters and fighter jets on towns and cities, the international community kept the rebels at arm's length, encouraging diplomacy and a small amount of military and other aid. But that appeared to make it more likely that al-Qaida or a similar group would move into the vacuum.

A NATO air campaign helped Libyans topple Moammar Gadhafi last year, but as the prospect for similar intervention in Syria dimmed, some openly said they would welcome a group like al-Qaida to help them get rid of Assad. Fighters who witnessed the beheading and later described it made clear that they welcome help from any quarter, but added that they were uneasy with some of Al Nusra Front's methods.

Togo Women Push Sex Strike to Unseat President

LOME, Togo (AP) • The female wing of a civil rights group is urging women in Togo to stage a weeklong sex strike to demand the resignation of the country's president.

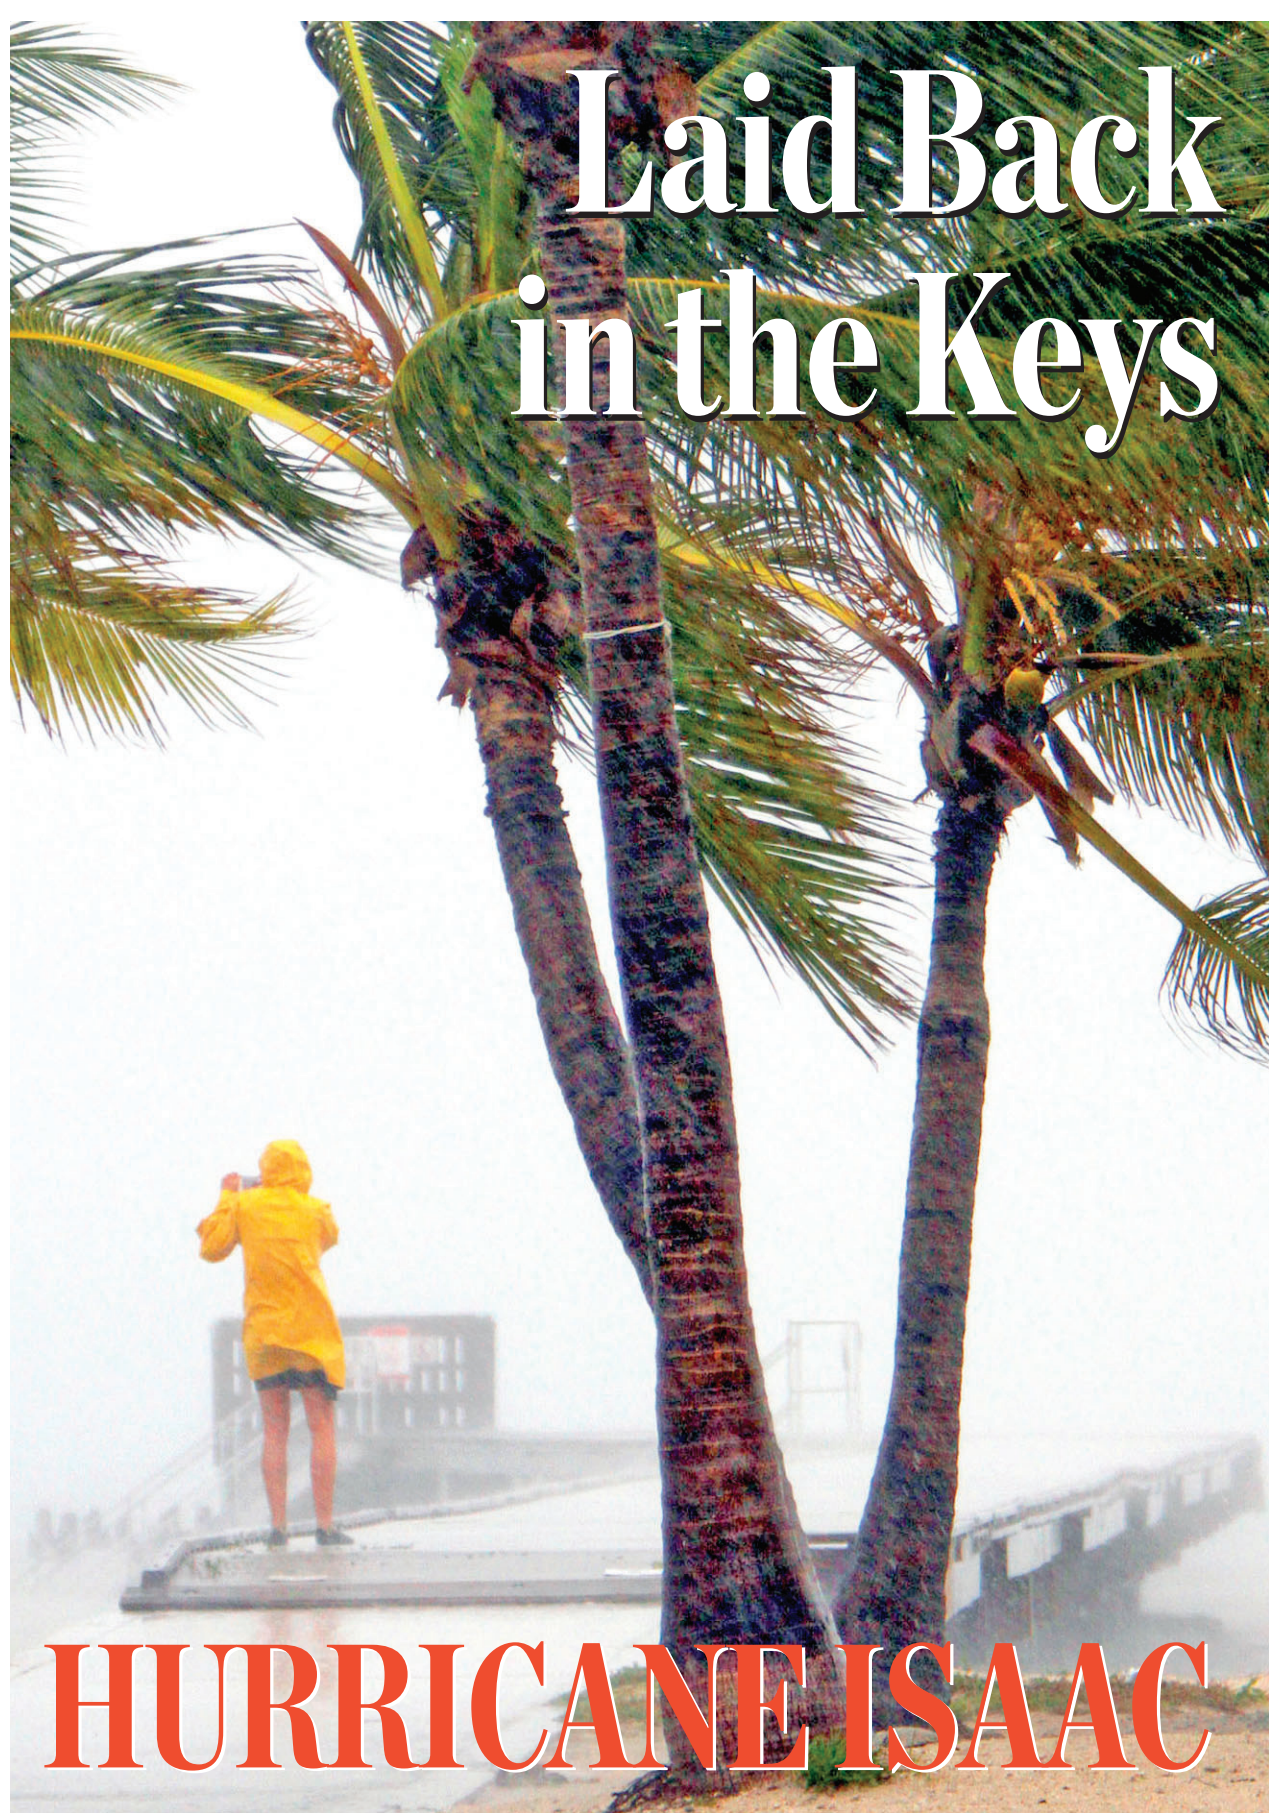

Women are being asked to start withholding sex from their husbands or partners as of today, said Isabelle Ameganvi, leader of the women's wing of the group Let's Save Togo. She said the strike will put pressure on Togo's men to take action against President Faure Gnassingbe.

Ameganvi, a lawyer, told The Associated Press that her group is following the example of Liberia's women, who used a sex strike in 2003 to campaign for peace. “We have many means to oblige men to understand what women want in Togo,” Ameganvi said.

The sex strike was announced at a rally Saturday of several thousand in the capital city, Lome. The demonstration was organized by a coalition that is protesting recent electoral reforms which they say will make it easier for Gnassingbe to win re-election in the polls set for October.

Gnassingbe came to power in 2005, following the death of his father, Gnassingbe Eyadema, who ruled the West African country for 38 years. Gnassingbe has not commented on the sex strike, nor has his wife. Earlier this month, two anti-Gnassingbe protests were dispersed by police using tear gas and more than 100 people were arrested.

Laid Back in the Keys

FLORIDA KEYS RESIDENTS NONCHALANT ABOUT ISAAC

BY MATT SEDENSKY
Associated Press

KEY WEST, Fla. • Tropical Storm Isaac barely stirred Florida Keys residents from their fabled nonchalance Sunday, while the Gulf Coast braced for the possibility that the sprawling storm will strengthen into a dangerous hurricane by the time it makes landfall there.

Isaac was expected to cross the Keys by late Sunday, then turn northwest and strike as a Category 2 hurricane somewhere between New Orleans and the Florida Panhandle on Wednesday, the seventh anniversary of Hurricane Katrina.

The National Hurricane Center issued a hurricane warning for a large swath of the northern Gulf Coast from east of Morgan City, La. — which includes the New Orleans area — to Destin, Fla. A Category 2 hurricane has sustained winds of between 96 and 110 mph.

Louisiana Gov. Bobby Jindal called a state of emergency and suggested that people begin leaving low-lying parts of the state. He also said he may skip a speaking engagement later this week at the Republican National Convention in Tampa if the storm is threatening his state.

The storm was on a course to pass west of Tampa, but it had already disrupted the Republicans' schedule there because of the likelihood of heavy rain and strong winds that extended more than 200 miles from its center.

Even before reaching hurricane strength, Isaac caused considerable inconvenience, with more than 550 flights canceled at Miami International Airport and about 150 from Fort Lauderdale's airport. There were scattered power outages from Key West to Fort Lauderdale affecting more than 8,000 customers, and flooding occurred in low-lying areas. No serious damage was reported.

Wind gusts of 60 mph were reported as far north as Pompano Beach, north of Fort Lauderdale. But while officials urged residents in southeast Florida to stay home, that recommendation was ignored by surfers and joggers on Miami Beach and shoppers at area malls.

In Key West, Emalyn Mercer rode her bike while decked out with a snorkel and mask, inflatable arm bands and a paddle, just for a laugh. She rode with Kelly Friend, who wore a wet suit, dive cap and lobster gloves.

“We're just going for a drink!” Mercer said.

Flames rise after an explosion in the Amuay refinery near Punto Fijo, Venezuela, Sunday. Venezuelans who live next to the country's biggest oil refinery said they smelled a strong odor of sulfur hours before a gas leak ignited in an explosion on Saturday that killed at least 39 people and injured more than 80.

Survivors: Strong Gas Odor Before Blast

BY JORGE RUEDA
Associated Press

PUNTO FIJO, Venezuela • After nightfall on Friday, as red lights began glowing atop the massive Amuay refinery in western Venezuela, the odor of sulfur made its way through the surrounding neighborhood of working-class homes and small shops.

Francisco Gonzalez, a stocky accountant with dark hair, noticed the smell after 7 p.m. as he climbed the stairs to his second-story apartment across the street from the refinery. He had smelled the fumes from gas leaks many times before, so he didn't think much about it as he shut the door.

Six hours later, disaster struck. A powerful explosion ripped through the neighborhood and engulfed part of the refinery in flames, killing at least 39 people and injuring more than 80 in Venezuela's deadliest refinery blast ever.

“The first thing I saw was that the apartment didn't have windows or doors or walls, just a floor and a roof,” Gonzalez said. “I don't know how we survived!”

In the dark, the 31-year-old man made his way downstairs to the street, where he, his brother and sister-in-law joined terrified neighbors. Some were wounded. Others were shouting.

When Gonzalez looked at the back of his right hand, it was bleeding from gashes.

Oil Minister Rafael Ramirez said the country has enough fuel in storage, “10 days of inventories,” to keep the Venezuelan market fully supplied. He said fires were still burning in two fuel storage tanks but that other “process areas” of the refinery were otherwise unaffected.

Once the flames are completely extinguished, Ramirez said, “we have the ability to restart our refinery in two days.”

Restarting will be a challenge for Gonzalez, who picked through what remained of his family's apartment, sweeping away debris with a broom. Broken glass littered the floor along with fragments of the shattered walls.

The shop on the first floor was also destroyed, but Gonzalez and his brother and sister-in-law all survived with only minor injuries.

Farmers' Almanac publisher Peter Geiger, left, and editor Sondra Duncan pose Thursday in Lewiston, Maine, with a map showing the predicted weather forecast for the United States.

Almanac Forecast: Wintry Weather — and Mystery

DAVID SHARP

Associated Press

LEWISTON, Maine • The weather world is full of high-profile meteorologists like NBC's Al Roker and the Weather Channel's Jim Cantore. But the guy making the forecasts for the Farmers' Almanac is more like the man behind the curtain.

He's cloaked in mystery. The publisher of the 196-year-old almanac, which goes on sale this week, takes great pains to protect the identity of its reclusive weather soothsayer, who operates under the pseudonym Caleb Weatherbee. Caleb's real name and hometown are a secret. And so is his age-old formula used for making long-term weather forecasts.

The mystery man's forecast for the coming winter suggests that people from the Great Lakes to northern New England should get out their long johns and dust off their snow shovels because it's going to be cold and snowy. It's also supposed to be wet and chilly in the Southeast, and milder for much of the rest of the nation.

Even just to speak to the forecaster, the almanac would agree only to an unrecorded phone call with the man from an undisclosed location.

"It's part of the mystique, the almanac, the history," said Editor Peter Geiger of the current prognosticator, the almanac's seventh, who has been underground since starting the job in the 1980s.

The weather formula created by almanac founder David Young in 1818 was based on planetary positions, sunspots and lunar cycles. Since then, historical patterns, weather data and a computer have been added to the mix.

In an election season, the almanac dubbed its forecast "a nation divided" because there's a dividing line where winter returns for much of the east, with milder weather west of the Great Lakes.

Scientists generally don't think too much of the almanac's formula.

Ed O'Lenic, operations chief for NOAA's Climate Prediction Center, declined to knock the almanac's methodology but said sun spots and moon phases aren't used by modern-day meteorologists.

"I'm sure these people have good intentions but I would say that the current state of the science is light years beyond what it was 200 years ago," O'Lenic said from Maryland.

In this year's edition, the almanac's editors are contrite about failing to forecast record warmth last winter but they suggested readers should go easy on the publication — and on Caleb — because nobody forecast 80-degree weather in March that brought the ski season a rapid end in northern New England.

"Let's face it — the weather was so wacky last year. It was so bizarre," said Sandi Duncan, managing editor, pointing out that NOAA and Accuweather also missed the mark.

Indeed, NOAA and Accuweather didn't project the extent of the warm winter.

"We missed it too, to put it bluntly," said Tom Kines, a meteorologist at Accuweather in State College, Pa. "It was a weird winter last year."

The Maine-based Farmers' Almanac is not to be confused with the New Hampshire-based Old Farmer's Almanac. Both issue annual forecasts, with the Old Farmer's Almanac scheduled for next month.

Geiger, who keeps a copy of Weatherbee's secret weather formula in a secure location, is quick to point out that there's more to the almanac than just weather forecasts. Harkening to its old traditions, the folksy almanac features recipes, gardening tips, jokes, facts and trivia, and a guide to a simpler life.

For example, who knew that you could clean your toilet by pouring in Coca-Cola instead of harsh chemicals, or that putting a spoonful of vinegar in a pet's water dish keeps fleas at bay?

As for the weather, almanac readers say it's all good, clean fun.

"It's a fun publication to get and to read, to watch and see how accurate it is," said Wanda Monthey of Alexandria, Va. "It's a lot like a game."

Former Chase Head Willard Butcher Dies at Age 85

NEW YORK (AP) • Former Chase Manhattan Bank chairman and CEO Willard Butcher has died at 85.

Fraser Seitel, a family friend and former Chase spokesman, says Butcher died Saturday of cancer in Hobe Sound, Fla.

Born in Westchester County outside New York City, the Brown University graduate and World War II Navy veteran joined the bank in 1947. He headed its retail and corporate business, then operations in Europe and sub-Saharan Africa.

Butcher was named Chase president and chief operating officer in 1972. He succeeded David Rockefeller as chairman and CEO in 1980 and retired in 1991.

Under the two men, Chase expanded to more than 50 countries. In 2000, the bank merged with J.P. Morgan & Co. to become JP-Morgan Chase.

Rockefeller says Butcher "worked tirelessly to enhance the bank's position around the world."

Veteran Indian Actor A.K. Hangal Dies at 95

NEW DELHI (AP) • Veteran Indian actor A. K. Hangal, whose Bollywood career spanned nearly five decades, has died. He was 95.

Avtaar Kishan Hangal had suffered from lung and kidney problems and other ailments over the past few years. His son Vijay says the actor died Sunday of complications following a fall 10 days earlier.

As a young man, Hangal was involved in India's freedom movement against British rule and spent three years in prison. He was active in Mumbai's theater circles in the early 1950s before he moved to the film industry.

He specialized in character parts playing the uncle, doting grandfather or humble servant in films including the Bollywood hit "Sholay."

Zimbabwe Conservationists: Wildlife Threatened

BY ANGUS SHAW

Associated Press

HARARE, Zimbabwe • Tens of thousands of wild animals face annihilation in a wave of land takeovers in southeastern Zimbabwe by politicians of President Robert Mugabe's party, a consortium of wildlife ranchers charged Sunday.

The Save Valley Conservancy said thousands of people's livelihoods also are threatened in the 1,000 square mile (2,600 square kilometer) nature preserve and surrounding districts after hunting permits and land leases were granted to 25 leaders of the ZANU-PF party under a black empowerment program.

In Sunday newspaper advertisements, the consortium said "greedy individuals" — including a provincial governor and a Cabinet minister — wrongly claimed it was white dominated. The conservancy said Mugabe had used color as "a racial tool" to collapse world-renowned conservation efforts for short-term gain.

"When humans behave like animals, we destroy not only each other but generations to come," the group said.

The advertisements, the most strongly worded statements in the dispute so far, said politicians "want to destroy agreements and policies that have made Save the world leader in conservation management."

Save, pronounced Sa-veh

in the local Ndebele language, is a habitat for elephant, zebra, giraffe, and the nation's second largest surviving population of endangered black rhinoceros. The area also supports an array of African antelope and most species of birds and small animals.

"We as humans can help stop using color as a racial tool to destroy the very people who are working for our common good," said the advertisements, under the heading: Animals don't see in color.

Several Western investors, the World Wildlife Fund and conservation groups in Europe and the United States have funded breeding and animal research programs in Save.

European Union officials in Zimbabwe have warned the Save land takeovers put at risk bilateral agreements on conservation between Zimbabwe and European countries ahead of the U.N. World Tourism Organization summit scheduled in the northwestern Zimbabwean resort of Victoria Falls next year.

The state Herald newspaper, controlled by Mugabe loyalists, reported Saturday that the new conservancy members linked to Mugabe's party fired the consortium's longtime chairman Basil Nyabdzaza, an agricultural estates executive, and his deputy, rancher Willy Pabst.

A Mugabe party lawmaker was chosen to replace Nyabdzaza, the paper reported.

'Multiple Victims' in Small Plane Crash at Lake Tahoe

BY MARTIN GRIFFITH

Associated Press

RENO, Nev. • A small, single-engine plane crashed shortly after takeoff from the airport on Lake Tahoe's south shore, and authorities say several people were killed.

The single-engine plane burst into flames upon impact late Saturday night in a wooded area near South Lake Tahoe, Calif., said El Dorado County sheriff's Lt. Pete Van Arnum. The crash started a 1-acre fire that took more than 90 minutes to put out, he said.

The aircraft is registered to Francisco J. Delamora, of Fresno, Calif.

Delamora is owner of Jdm Transport Inc., a trucking company based in Fresno, said Jose Lopez, a company dispatcher. Delamora took a "personal trip" to Lake Tahoe for the day Saturday with his wife, Lorena, a 7-year-old daughter and two friends, and had planned to return the same day, Lopez said.

"We're waiting to hear from the FAA," said Lopez, who has worked for the company 11 years. He declined further comment.

Much of the wreckage was destroyed by the fire, making identification of the plane and victims difficult, Arnum said. Authorities wouldn't release any information about the victims until positive identifications have been made, he said.

Witnesses say the plane had apparent engine problems and dipped downward while attempting a turn just north of Lake Tahoe Airport.

The same plane was involved in a 2005 non-injury crash in Destin, Fla., according to the National Transportation Safety Board. It had a different owner at the time.

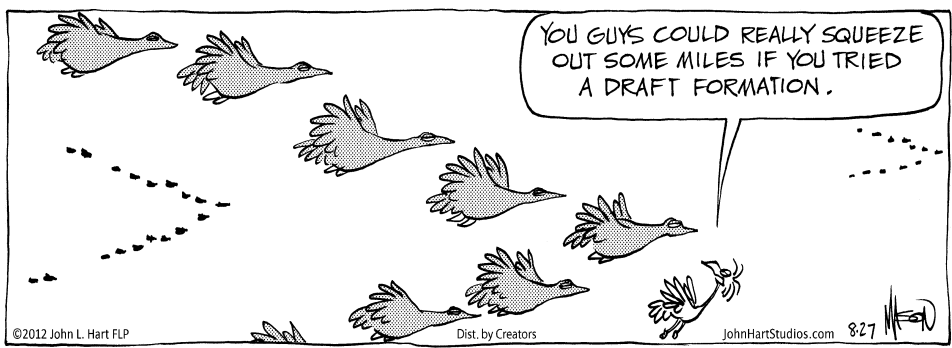

The latest crash occurred near the same area where a 2007 wildfire destroyed more than 250 homes and caused more than $140 million in property damage.

"Thanks to the quick and cooperative efforts by multiple agencies, the fire caused by this crash was put out quickly," South Lake Tahoe Mayor Claire Fortier said in a statement. "Our hearts go out to the families of those that perished in this tragic accident."

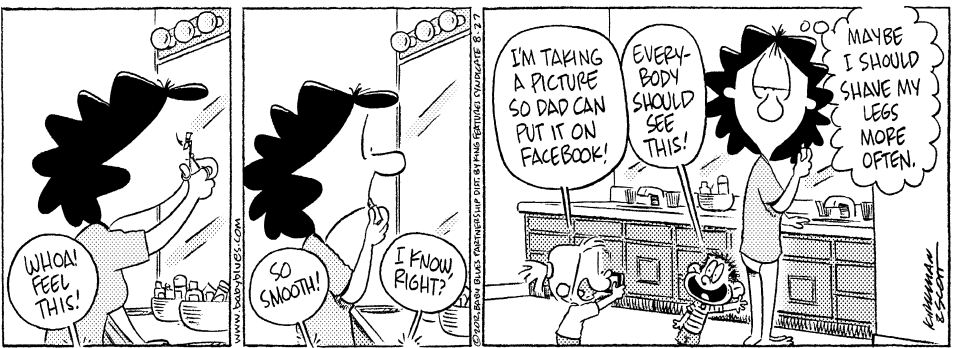

Earlier Saturday, the 23rd annual Lake in the Sky Air Show was held at the same airport. But the aircraft involved in Saturday's crash was not affiliated with the air show, South Lake Tahoe officials said.

It will take months before the NTSB, the lead investigative agency, comes up with a probable cause of the crash. Basic preliminary reports usually are posted on the NTSB's website within a week or two of an accident.

"No one's ever asked to see my birth certificate. They know that this is the place that we were born and raised."

Mitt Romney to a crowd of more than 7,000 in Michigan, raising the discredited rumor that President Barack Obama wasn't born in the United States. Romney later insisted the remark was just a joke and not meant to question Obama's citizenship

How Well Will Mitt Romney Do in Idaho?

The electoral college has narrowed serious campaigning for president to so few states that analysts now talk of no more than a couple of dozen counties, in a third as many states, as being especially crucial. None of those counties, obviously, are in Idaho.

Like every state it borders (debatably excepting Nevada), Idaho's electorate votes for president are already very nearly locked. The Gem State's four almost (remember: the vote isn't over till it's counted) certainly will go to Republican Mitt Romney. No surprise there. That puts Idaho in line with Montana, Wyoming and Utah, and on the other side from Washington, Oregon and (probably) Nevada.

Presidential years usually are good years in Idaho for Republicans (the reverse applies in most blue states), but that can vary. An especially strong Republican vote for president can carry down the ballot, shifting otherwise races. The number of legislative seats Democrats win this fall, for example, may relate to just how large a majority Romney wins.

This fluctuates more than you might think.

Taking the very long range of history, the highest vote percentage (78.1 percent) Idaho has ever given to a presidential nominee – Ronald Reagan included – was to a Democrat, though for that you have to go back to 1896, when the nominee was William Jennings Bryan. The last Democrat to win Idaho was Lyndon Johnson in 1964, though he led by only about 5,000 votes over Barry Goldwater, who went down to major crashing defeat nationally.

Since 1968, Republicans have won every time with decisive margins, but less uniformly as you might think. Reagan peaked at a very strong 72.4 percent in 1984, but his successor George H.W. Bush took just 62.1 percent – quite a comedown. And in 1992, eight years after Reagan's smashing win, when Ross Perot won a piece of the vote, Bush got only 42 percent. (Is that an indication that, under certain circumstances, a portion of those Republican votes can be peeled off?) Four years later Robert Dole again won an outright majority, but only barely, at 52.2 percent. And the '90s was when the Idaho Democratic Party already was in collapse, when it was elected near-record low numbers of legislators and county officials.

George W. Bush did considerably better, getting about two-thirds of the Idaho vote in his two races. But in 2008, a year when Idaho Democrats did a little better locally than they often had in presidential years, John McCain was back down to 61.2 percent. The odds are Romney will do a bit better, but by how much we have yet to see. The Republican presidential norm seems to be in the low 60s.

One other note is about counties. Blaine County is the only Idaho county to have voted Democratic in each of the last five presidential contests, and it was the only one in Idaho to do so in 2000 and 2004. (Before 1992 it had not done so since 1964.) But in 2008 only two other counties, Latah and Teton, joined it, and in 1996 just four counties (Blaine, Latah, Nez Perce and Shoshone) went Democratic. The pattern has shown some shift away from the old Democratic resource counties like Shoshone and Nez Perce, and toward counties with other bases, like resort-oriented Blaine and Teton. What will the pattern show this time?

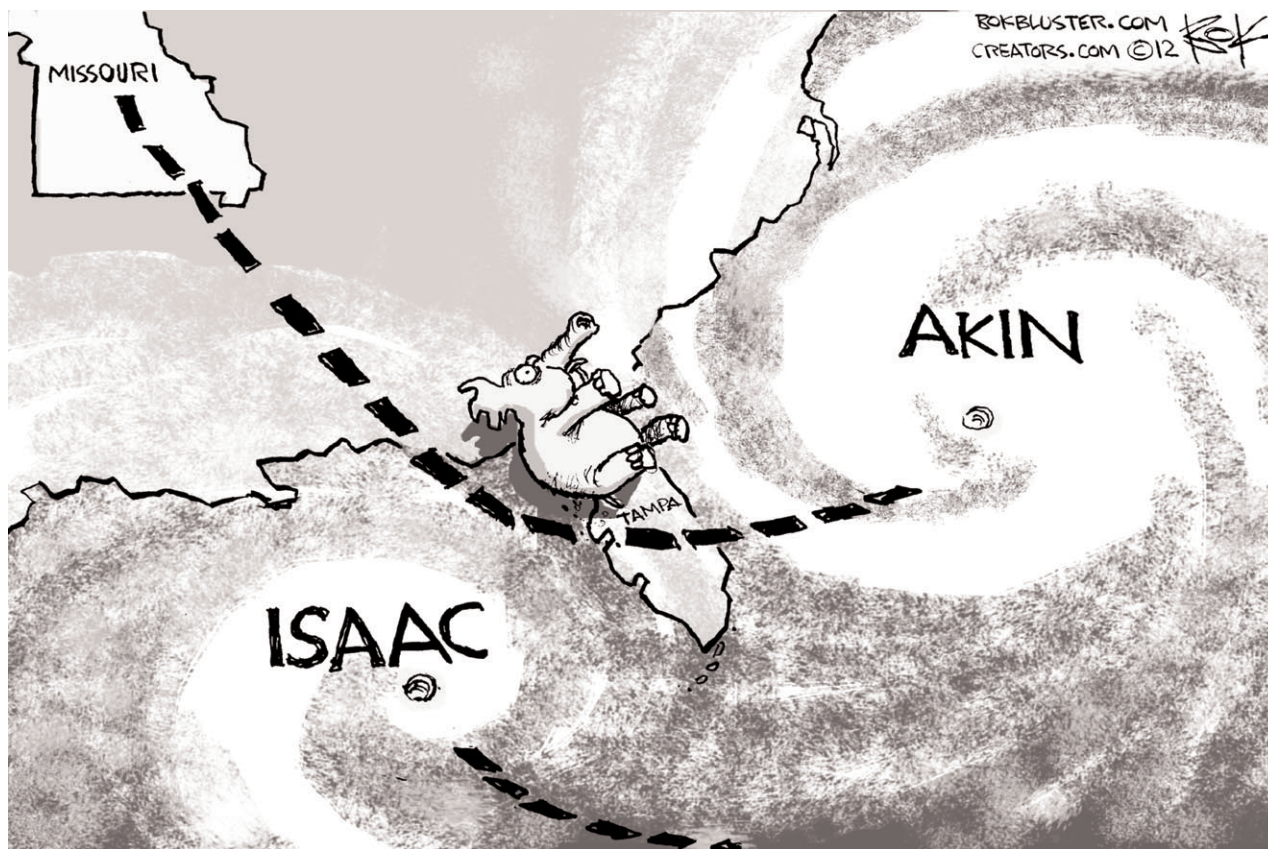

That may turn a great deal on just how close this presidential contests turns out to be.

How the GOP Can Mend Its Image Among Women

It is unfortunate that the stunningly insensitive statement about rape made last weekend by Rep. Todd Akin (R-Mo.) is casting a shadow over the start of the Republican National Convention. Republican leaders, led by Mitt Romney and Rep. Paul Ryan, rightfully and strongly repudiated his remarks. Yet, the comments from Akin reinforce the perception that we in the Republican Party are unsympathetic to issues of paramount concern to women.

I have worked for three decades as a staunch advocate to build a "big tent" party that includes both pro-choice and pro-life Republicans. In that time, I have seen controversies such as this one alienate a large segment of the female population and perpetuate the gender gap among voters that has historically plagued our party.

This is not where I hoped my party would be in 2012. Today, the Republican Party faces a clear challenge: Will we rebuild our relationship with women, thereby placing us on the road to success in November, or will we continue to isolate them and certainly lose this election? The Akin controversy, and the ongoing debate over abortion, is especially regrettable given the fact that Romney had made inroads with female voters. The most recent three-week average of polls from Gallup – taken before the controversy – showed him down only eight points to President Obama among women. That was a marked improvement from earlier margins; he was down 20 points in the spring.

At the convention, Romney must work to overcome what others in our party have done to undermine our standing with women, and he must restore the image of who we are as Republicans. The convention affords him the first unfettered opportunity to reset the debate. When he takes center stage, he can restate who he is and what he hopes to accomplish as president. First and foremost, Romney should vigorously, not timidly, disassociate himself from the extremes within our party by reiterating to the national audience that the overly rigid language on abortion contained in the GOP platform – which includes no explicit exceptions for cases of rape, incest or danger to the life of the mother – does not represent his view, nor has it been his position. In fact, 75 percent of Americans agree with Romney that these exceptions should be recognized, according to a recent Gallup survey, putting him squarely in the mainstream on this issue. In doing so, he will demonstrate that he can strongly stand up to those with whom he disagrees, even within his party. He should also emphasize his strong record on women's issues, which shows that he cares about their well-being. He will be off to a good start when former secretary of state Condoleezza Rice, New Mexico Gov. Susana Martinez and New Hampshire Sen. Kelly Ayotte, my colleague, speak to the convention about why the Romney-Ryan ticket is right for women in this election.

Olympia J. Snowe

Special to The Washington Post

Romney should highlight that, as governor, he enhanced the Massachusetts Sex Offender Registry by permitting information and photos of high-level offenders to be posted online. He also signed legislation allowing the GPS tracking of domestic violence offenders to help keep their victims safe at home and at work. At least 18 states have adopted similar laws. Massachusetts also led the way in the number of women in top positions of government during his tenure as the state's chief executive, including his lieutenant governor, chief of staff and numerous cabinet officials. This is one way Romney can help draw female voters to the Republican ticket.

But beyond these actions, Romney must continue to center his attention on the primary issue of importance to women: being able to support themselves and their families. And that means having a job. According to a recent Pew Research Center report, "Women represent the only group for whom employment growth has lagged behind population growth in the recovery." Even for young women, job prospects remain bleak, as the unemployment rate for those ages 16 to 24 has climbed from 13.8 percent this spring to 16.2 percent in July.

The public is clamoring for the presidential candidates to offer solutions to the challenges that are going to determine our economic destiny. The current policies emanating from Washington have produced little hope and even less results, leaving us mired in the worst post-recession recovery in our nation's history. This should be a winning conversation for Republicans, particularly given Romney's background in the private sector.

Romney should underscore that he would protect crucial safety-net programs such as Medicare and Social Security, on which women disproportionately rely. In 2009, for instance, 56 percent of Medicare recipients were female, and 43 percent of women enrolled in Medicare were living at or near poverty, compared with 32 percent of men. Women also make up 57 percent of Social Security recipients and a stunning 68 percent of those 85 or older. The simple truth is that the life expectancy of women exceeds that of men by approximately five years, on average, so many women will depend on these programs longer. Being mindful of these facts in discussing these programs will help reassure female voters that our party understands their unique circumstances.

Republicans have demonstrated sensitivity to women's issues in the past.

President George W. Bush strongly supported my proposal to make the child tax credit refundable in 2001 – a first-of-its-kind initiative – because he understood how this policy would help women and children, including single heads of households. The point is, past Republican presidents have heeded the voices of our nation's women and acted accordingly, with lasting effects.

This is Romney's threshold moment. He must demonstrate that he would follow the example of other Republican presidents in addressing issues important to women.

State Should Pay Teacher Bonuses Before Nov. 15

There are four basic facts regarding merit pay bonuses for educators.

First: One of the three education reform laws makes educators eligible to earn a pay-for-performance bonus.

Second: Educators developed and worked toward goals to make them eligible for this bonus.

Third: The law was in effect for the 2011 to 2012 school year.

Fourth: A total of $38 million for bonuses has been appropriated by the state.

There are two problems that the Idaho State Department of Education has indicated which will prevent the payment of the money.

First: The bonuses are scheduled to go out Nov. 15.

Second: The law is one of three involved in a referendum vote scheduled before Nov. 15.

The solution: Pay the bonuses before Nov. 15.

Reasoning: The law was in effect, the school personnel worked in good faith to achieve what was expected, and the money is available.

Opinion: Is denying the bonuses a ploy of the Idaho State Department of Education to defeat the referendum? The law does not state that it must be paid out on Nov. 15. An advantage to paying before the voting is that the strengths and weaknesses of the law will be seen. This will give voters a better chance to determine if they should support the law or the referendum.

Life Has Gotten More Difficult for Young People

Dave, the semester at the College of Southern Idaho is just starting. I understand this is your 17th straight semester there. I understand that you attended the University of Southern California during the 1950s. What differences have you noticed between those days of being a student and today?

Although USC is a private college, I did not have to take student loans. There were no student loans in those days. I worked summers and that money paid for college. At that time, credits were $27 at USC. The last time I checked, they were $1,100 a credit. In those days, $5,000 could get you through USC; now it takes at least a quarter of a million dollars.

At state colleges in California, several hundred dollars a year for tuition was all that was needed as a majority of students lived with the parents and commuted. Gasoline was 21 cents per gallon, so that was no problem. It gets better. Junior colleges in California – they are now called community colleges – charged less than $100 per year for tuition. Some were free. College books were about $5 and new editions did not appear every semester.

Parents did not save for their kids to go to college, as their children saved or worked through college on their own.

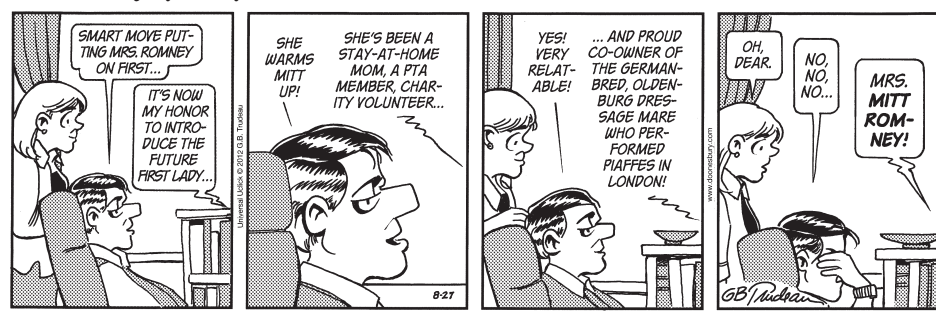

Jobs were plentiful and easy to secure on graduation as the unemployment rate was very low. I remember renting a room off campus for $10 a month. When I got out of the Marines in the early '60s, I bought a brand new house in Los Angeles with payments of $160 a month.

Life for young people was fairly easy compared to today. Today, life is getting to be like the Great Depression, as in those days, guys with Ph.Ds were driving taxi cabs.

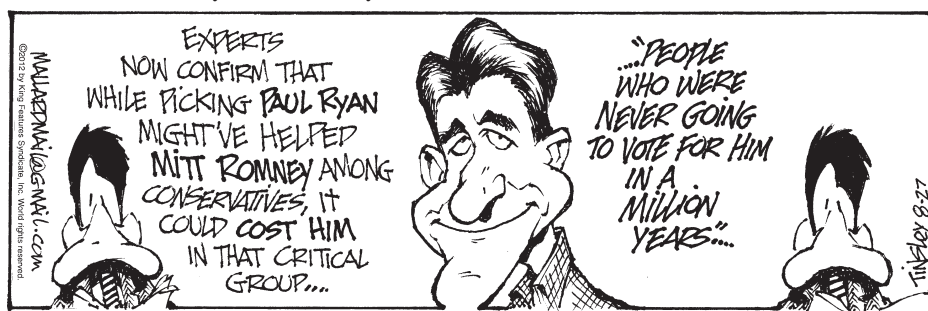

If we don't get a change in Washington pretty soon, I think it could get worse for young people.

Series of Quakes Rattle California

SAN DIEGO (AP) • Dozens of small to moderate earthquakes rattled Southern California on Sunday, shaking an area from rural Imperial County to the San Diego coast and north into the Coachella Valley.

The largest quake, magnitude 5.3, struck at 12:31 p.m. about three miles north-northwest of the small Imperial County farming town of Brawley, according to Paul Caruso, a geophysicist with the U.S. Geological Survey. It was followed minutes later by a 4.9 magnitude quake.

The first quake was a magnitude 3.9 that hit at 10:02 a.m. It was followed by a 3.4 quake about 90 seconds later in the same area near the southern end of the Salton Sea. Magnitude 2.2 and 2.0 quakes followed within six minutes of the first shock.

The USGS says at least 25 aftershocks struck the same approximate epicenter about 16 miles north of El Centro.

Some shaking was felt on the coast in Del Mar, some 120 miles from the epicenter, as well as in southern Orange County and parts of northern Mexico.

An Imperial County sheriff's dispatcher said there were no reports of damage or injuries.

Scientists aren't yet sure what fault the quake cluster was on but it was near the 800-mile San Andreas Fault, Caruso said.

Market Stalls at Heart of Fight over Old Hebron

BY KARIN LAUB
Associated Press

HEBRON, West Bank • Four stalls in a trash-filled, abandoned outdoor market have turned into hotly contested real estate in the center of biblical Hebron where several hundred ultranationalist Jewish settlers are wrestling with Palestinian residents for control, house by house and storefront by storefront.

The stalls' Palestinian tenants want Israel's Supreme Court to evict settlers who seized the properties a decade ago, but some in Israel's pro-settler government believe the small shops should remain in Jewish hands.

Such an outcome would boost one of the most controversial endeavors of the Jewish settlement enterprise — tightening Israel's hold over the center of the West Bank's largest Palestinian city.

"The fight is over the character of Hebron and the old city area," said Hagit Ofra of Peace Now, an Israeli anti-settlement group.

The first group of settlers moved into Hebron in 1968, a year after Israel captured the city, along with the rest of the West Bank, from Jordan. Over the years, the community has grown to about 800 people who live in several heavily guarded compounds, separated from the city's 180,000 Palestinian residents by barbed wire, blast walls and hundreds of Israeli soldiers.

Settler leader Noam Arnon said the community hopes to expand in what he called "Jewish areas" in the center where Palestinian access is limited and which he said make up about 3 percent of the city. This includes real estate owned by Jews who lived in Hebron before Israel's creation in 1948, he said.

Settlers say they are ready to co-exist in Hebron with the Palestinians, but argue that the city — which looms large in Jewish history but now serves as the center of Palestinian commerce in the West Bank — must remain under Israeli control. That runs counter to the Palestinian demand for a state in all the lands Israel captured in 1967 — the Gaza Strip and east Jerusalem, along with the West Bank.

Over the years, Israeli governments have maneuvered between the settlers and the Palestinians.

Israel transferred 80 percent of Hebron to Palestinian self-rule as part of interim peace deals in the late 1990s, but retained control over the rest, including the Tomb of the Patriarchs, a shrine sacred to Muslims, Christians and Jews as the traditional burial place of Abraham and other biblical figures.

WEB COMIC HELPS FUEL DONATIONS TO TESLA'S LAB

BY FRANK ELTMAN
Associated Press

SHOREHAM, N.Y. • A jolt of support from a popular Web cartoonist has re-energized a decades-long effort to restore a decrepit, 110-year-old laboratory once used by Nikola Tesla, a visionary scientist who was a rival of Thomas Edison and imagined a world of free electricity.

In little more than a week, tens of thousands of donors from more than 100 countries have kicked more than $1 million through a social media fundraising website to pay for the restoration of Nikola Tesla's Wardenclyffe laboratory, located about 65 miles east of New York City. A small band of followers who have struggled to establish a science and research museum and learning center in his honor are giddy with delight about the lightning-quick response they have received.

"Enormously, overwhelmingly, astounding," is how Jane Alcorn, president of the Tesla Science Center at Wardenclyffe and a retired school librarian, described her feelings about the project's newfound fortune. The not-for-profit formed about 17 years ago had managed to secure a state matching grant of $850,000 but had amassed only about $50,000 for the project. Its goal at times seemed insurmountable.

Then this summer Alcorn learned that Matthew Inman, a cartoonist who runs the oatmeal.com, posted a tribute to the scientist titled "Why Nicola Tesla is the Greatest Geek Who Ever Lived." Supporters of the Long Island effort reached out to Inman, a 27-year-old who lives in Seattle, and he and Alcorn began speaking.

Last week, he posted a request for donations on IndieGoGo, a fundraising website, and the response was nearly instantaneous. At 6 p.m. on Aug. 15, the plea went out, and before Alcorn went to bed that night, donors had given nearly a quarter million dollars.

"I was blown away by that," Alcorn said. "I kept refreshing the page and refreshing the page and the number kept going up. I went to bed after 1 that night, but I didn't really get any sleep, to be honest."

Inman, who is in Japan this week on business, told The Associated Press that he thinks "Tesla would be very pleased to see this many people kind of worshipping him as this geek hero" and backing it up with credit card donations by the thousands to restore his lab.

Tesla amassed hundreds of patents for his discoveries over his lifetime. Among his most notable accomplishments are his work in developing alternating current and other research in the creation of wireless communication and radio. He worked for Edison in the 1880s, but later became a rival. Tesla died in New York City in 1943.

For about 15 years in the early 1900s, Tesla worked at the lab in Shoreham, which was designed by noted architect Sanford White. He conducted experiments with wireless electricity and erected a 187-foot tower that Alcorn said was to be the centerpiece of a worldwide communications and energy system. But after he lost funding for the project, it was torn down in 1917.

Inman's cartoon also ignited an intense online discussion between supporters of Edison and Tesla over whose contributions to science were greater, he said.

"I realized how damn awesome it was that the whole Internet was getting in this raging debate about inventors who have been dead for 70 years or more," Inman said.

Inman plans to attend New York Comic Con in Manhattan in October and said he hopes to make a detour to the lab.

Beginning in the 1930s, the Tesla site was used as a photo chemical processing plant, but that was closed in 1993 after it was determined the area's groundwater had been polluted with cadmium and silver. The current owners, Belgian-based AGFA Corp., worked for years to decontaminate the site, and regulators deemed the remediation complete this year.

Despite a six-foot chain-link fence surrounding the property, many of the buildings have been vandalized, said real estate agent John O'Hara, who is representing AGFA in the sale. Graffiti and broken windows are a constant problem, and O'Hara said locks on gates have been broken numerous times. He confirmed the property has a $1.6 million asking price, but added that is negotiable.

16 Amish Face Trial in Beard-cutting Attacks

BY JOHN SEEWER
Associated Press

TOLEDO, Ohio • A breakaway Amish group accused of settling a score by carrying out hair-cutting attacks against members of its faith moved into the hills of eastern Ohio two decades ago following a dispute over religious differences.

How their community came about is quite common and on the rise among the Amish. Disagreements over church discipline and how to maintain their simple way of life amid the encroaching outside world have created dozens of splinter groups.

But there was something troubling about this one and its leader, according to authorities. They say Samuel Mullet Sr. allowed beatings of those who disobeyed him, had sex with married women to "cleanse them," and then, last fall, instructed his followers to cut the beards and hair of his critics, an act considered deeply offensive in Amish culture.

Mullet and 15 other Amish men and women are set to go on trial Monday in Cleveland on charges of hate crimes in the hair-cutting attacks. Other charges include conspiracy, evidence tampering and obstruction of justice in what prosecutors say were crimes motivated by religious differences. They could face lengthy prison terms if convicted.

The defendants — including four of Mullet's children, his son-in-law and three nephews — say the government shouldn't intrude on what they call internal church disciplinary matters not involving anti-Amish bias. They've denied the charges and rejected plea bargain offers carrying sentences of two to three years in prison instead of possible sentences of 20 years or more.

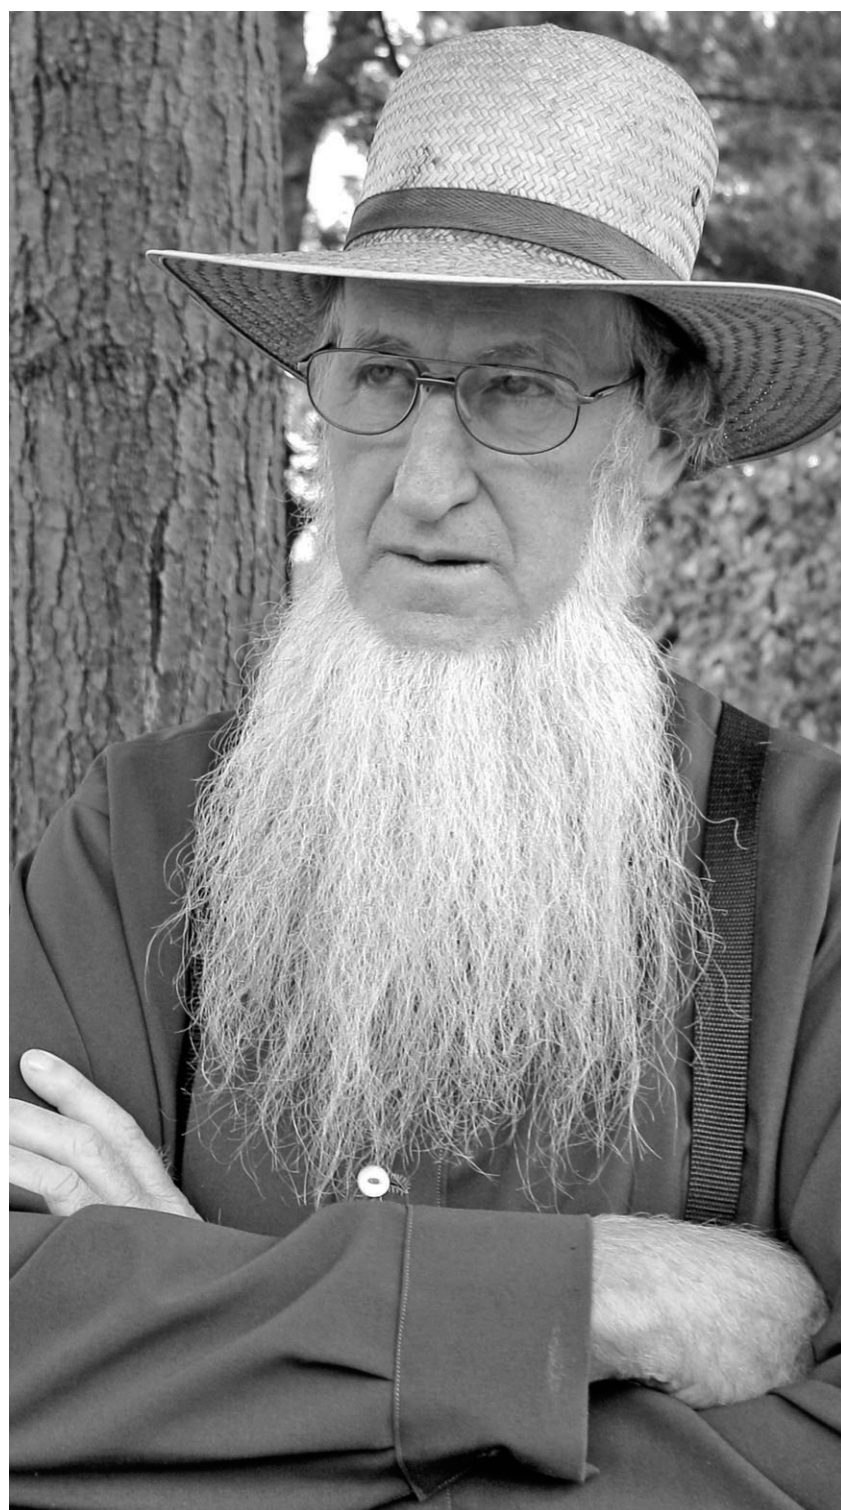

Mullet has said he didn't order the hair-cutting but didn't stop anyone from carrying it out. He also has defended what he thinks is his right to punish people who break church laws.

"You have your laws on the road and the town — if somebody doesn't obey them, you punish them. But I'm not allowed to punish the church people?" Mullet told The Associated Press last October. "I just let them run over me? If every family would just do as they pleased, what kind of church would we have?"

The tactics Mullet is accused of violate basic principles of the Amish who value nonviolence and forgiveness even when churches break apart. "Retribution, retaliation, the use of force; that's almost unheard of," said Thomas J. Meyers, a sociology professor at Goshen College in Indiana.

Schisms within the church, which has no central authority, go back centuries and have created a range of Amish churches with varying rules and beliefs. The Amish famously broke away from the Mennonites in 1693 over the practice of shunning church members. Another group known as the Beachy Amish formed in 1927 and soon began allowing the use of electricity and automobiles.

There are a dozen groups living in Ohio's Holmes County alone, home to one of the nation's largest Amish settlements, said David McConnell, an anthropology professor at Wooster College.

ASSOCIATED PRESS

Sam Mullet Sr., the leader of a breakaway Amish group, stands in the front yard of his Bergholz, Ohio, home. Mullet and 15 other Amish men and women are to go on trial today in Cleveland on charges of carrying out hate crimes in the hair-cutting attacks.

The number has grown as churches struggle where to draw the line on allowing modern technology into their simple, modest lifestyle. Those decisions often revolve around dealing with young people and those who have been forced out of the church, he said.

Matthew Schrock, who left Holmes County's Amish community during the mid-1990s, said religious disputes were common and often took an emotional toll even on those not directly involved.

"When there are conflicts and you find yourself outside the accepted set, it's a very difficult place to be," he said.

Some within the community have trouble letting go following a dispute, he said, because the Amish so closely identify themselves based on their beliefs. "When someone believes something slightly different, that's a threat to my existence," he explained.

“I now have a new outlook on life.”

Last year, I went to a HealthFair screening. The ultrasound revealed that my right carotid artery was 75 percent blocked. The HealthFair technicians advised me to contact my family doctor immediately. A few days later, a vascular surgeon confirmed HealthFair’s findings, and I was told that I needed to have surgery on my carotid artery. The surgery solved the problem. I sing HealthFair’s praises regularly. I now have a new outlook on life and cherish every moment. Thanks for being there, HealthFair.

Magic Valley's Athletes of the Week

11-man Football: Zach Thibault, Jerome. Thibault completed 19 of 27 passes Friday, throwing for 330 yards and three touchdowns in the Tigers' 40-6 win over Mountain Home.

as Wendell opened the 2012 campaign with a 3-0 win over county rival Gooding on Monday.

Boys Cross Country: Chase England, Wood River. England opened up the fall season with victory in the CSI Invitational on Friday, competing the course in 17 minutes, 57 seconds.

8-man Football: Hazen Weber, Dietrich. Weber decimated Shoshone almost by himself Friday, rushing for 349 yards and five touchdowns, also scoring on a pick-six in a 56-6 victory.

Girls Cross Country: Jasmine Nesbitt, Jerome. Nesbitt led Jerome's girls to a team victory at the CSI invitational Friday and was the highest local finisher, crossing in 21:33.

Boys Soccer: Ruben Juarez, Bliss. Juarez helped the Bears start their season in style Monday, bagging a hat trick and assisting on two other goals Monday as they shut out Declo 7-0.

Girls Soccer: Marlen Coronado, Wendell. Coronado scored a hat trick in her season debut Volleyball: Sierra Starley, Twin Falls. Starley racked up the kills Thursday against Highland and Century, totaling 37 in the Bruins' split against the two Pocatello schools.

Magic Valley Sportsweek

If you can only do one sporting thing a day, here's what you must do this week:

TODAY: Two of the High Desert Conference boys soccer contenders clash in Gooding, when the Community School comes to town. These two both went to the state tournament last season, so expect quality soccer and an unpredictable finish.

TUESDAY: An early conference volleyball test takes shape in Filer, when SCIC rival Buhl comes to town, along with 4A Wood River, for a tri-match. Several quality players on display, but keep an eye out for Filer's Sarah Sharp and Katie Trammell.

WEDNESDAY: The Community School has a hammerlock on the High Desert Conference girls soccer standings, but if there's a team that might be able to cause the Cutthroats a scare, it's Filer, which visits Sun Valley for the first of two regular-season tilts.

THURSDAY: Doesn't matter if it's football or marbles, if Minico and Burley are playing, it's a must-see event. The boys and girls soccer teams square off against one another, the girls in Rupert and the boys on the turf in Burley. No love lost here.

FRIDAY: There are a lot of football games on the docket, but none quite like the Wagon Wheel game. Harnsbrier to retain the Wheel after last year's 62-40 barnburner, while Murtaugh comes to town to try and take it back.

SATURDAY: It's the final performance of the Magic Valley Stampede over at the Twin Falls County Fairgrounds. It's not a short-go, just the conclusion of the rodeo, but winners will be crowned when the night is done.

What We Learned: Zero Week

Football fans the world over know that making assumptions week-to-week is an ulcer waiting to happen, so it's definitely too early to write these teams' fates in stone. Being a sports fan since before I could walk, I know better than most to keep from issuing knee-jerk reactions.

But based on 48 minutes of play, some patterns have already started to emerge. Here are some of the things we learned from the first week of the 2012 high school football season.

1. Canyon Ridge won't be a pushover this season. On paper, the Riverhawks looked to be at a significant personnel disadvantage with Columbia. The Wildcats were ranked No. 5 in the preseason 4A media poll, and they have no fewer than four players garnering significant college attention.

Canyon Ridge respected but didn't fear, and for large parts of the game outplayed its more heralded guest. If you ask the Riverhawks, they'll say they should have won the game, but two scintillating runs by Columbia's horses dashed their upset dreams.

Still, standing toe-to-toe with a potential state championship contender has shown the Riverhawks in good stead, and that can only mean good things for them and for the Great Basin Conference as a whole.

2. Burley's defense was strong, but the offense needs work.

The Bobcats' 33-0 win over Filer was impressive at first glance. Shutouts tend to grab more attention when they're double-digit shutouts than, say, a 3-0 overtime game (like Declo-Wendell, my very first game as a writer at the Times-News). But Burley did it mostly on the strength of its defense and special teams.

Short fields, like what happened with a squib kick,

Gooding manhandled Oakley on Friday night, but in the end both teams should be just fine in their respective classifications.

Burley rode an opportunistic defense and clutch special teams play to score an impressive win over Filer on Friday.

make big differences to an offense as opposed to being backed up in your own territory. When that happened, Burley struggled to move the ball. Big plays and a blocked punt gave the Bobcats the momentum and Filer couldn't overcome it.

Having a defense that's opportunistic is a good thing, but you can't always count on making your own luck. The offense needs to be better — fortunately for Burley, over the course of the season that generally happens.

3. Gooding's run game is as physical as it is explosive. The Senators' run playbook isn't complicated: it's a handful of plays run out of 67 different formations (full disclosure: hyperbole is one of my many talents). But when you have Cole McGinnis, who's turning

Newhouse Returns to Capture Win at MVS

BY LINDA BRITTSAN
For the Times-News

After less than preferred results in her previous outing, Hannah Newhouse returned to Magic Valley Speedway Saturday night to make the statement that she's still going to be a tough competitor.

After winning her heat race Newhouse lined up in the second row in a field of eight for the start of the 40-lap main event. A quick caution sent the leader Ron Beadle to the rear of the field giving Newhouse a new position out front for the restart. From there Newhouse began to pull away from the pack while points standings leader Kris McKean was left to fight his way through traffic. McKean would eventually work his way up to second, but as the race proceeded caution-free he ran out of laps and would cross the finish line nearly two seconds behind Newhouse.

"I didn't have a good starting position tonight," McKean said. "I gave Dan Pehrson a little bump to get around him but we would have needed another caution to get around Newhouse. Right now we're just racing pretty conservatively trying to keep the points lead that we have. Second place tonight is fine by us."

It was Newhouse's sixth main event win of the season. Just two more races remain on the 2012 schedule for the series.

"I am out here now to win races and get Rookie of the Year," Newhouse said. "If we happen to win the championship then that would be awesome."

Dan Pehrson put in an excellent performance finishing third followed by Casey Pehrson and Willie Dalton.

Street Stocks driver Billi Miles, who joined the series late in the season, captured her first main event win. Miles had to earn the victory the hard way by battling Paul Browne throughout the entire 30-lap race but she never gave up the lead that she earned at Lap 2. Top contender for the track championship

Hannah Newhouse motored to victory in the Super Stocks main event race Saturday night at Magic Valley Speedway, her sixth win of the season.

Magic Valley Speedway Results

- Commercial Tire Super Stocks: 1. Hannah Newhouse, 2. Kris McKean, 3. Dan Pehrson, 4. Casey Pehrson, 5. Willie Dalton.
- Brennan's Carpet Street Stocks: 1. Billi Miles, 2. Paul Browne, 3. Ernie Hall, 4. Jason Todd, 5. Russell Dalton.
- Magic Valley Pipe Hornets: 1. James Cole, 2. Jeff Peck, 3. Sharlet Pataro, 4. Eddy Cole, 5. Josh Black.
- Quale's Electronics Jr. Stingers: 1. Hailey Douglas, 2. KC Sutton, 3. Mckayla Woll, 4. Trenton Thomas, 5. Devri Browne.
- Idaho NAPA Late Models: 1. Dylan Caldwell, 2. Lee Hackney, 3. Dennis Wurtz II, 4. Dan Lowther, 5. Jeff Wilson.

Ernie Hall was jammed up in traffic for most of the race until he finally was able to break through to finish third behind Browne.

Afterwards Miles thanked her daughter Amanda for setting up the winning car.

In other racing action the Idaho Late Models brought six cars to the field for the main event. After the only caution in the race was brought out at Lap 21 for the spinning car of Kane Thomasson, Dylan Caldwell led a train of four competitors though the final laps but managed to stay out front until the checkered flag flew at Lap 30.

Hailey Douglas with the Jr. Stingers followed her win last weekend with another main event victory adding to her lead in the standings in her bid for the track championship. Devri Browne returned from a rough night Aug. 18 to finish fifth.

James Cole fought hard for his win in the Hornets division while standings leader Jeff Peck finished second after getting his car back together from damage collected in his previous outing.

Boise State Picks Southwick as Starting QB

BOISE (AP) • Boise State on Sunday named redshirt junior Joe Southwick the starting quarterback for the No. 24 Broncos.

Southwick, a 6-foot-1, 187-pounder from Danville, Calif., was a backup a year ago to Kellen Moore, who during his career won more games than any other quarterback in the history of college football.

As a backup Southwick mostly saw action in fourth-quarter mop-up duty. In eight games, he was 23 of 30 for 198 yards and one TD and one interception.

Coach Chris Petersen says Southwick knows the system well and prepared hard to earn the starting job. Southwick says he feels privileged as well as a lot of responsibility in being named the starter.

The Broncos open the season Friday against No. 12 Michigan State in East Lansing, Mich.

Tokyo's Noriatsu Osaka (10) rounds the bases past Goodlettsville, Tenn., second baseman Lorenzo Butler (8) after hitting a walk-off, two-run home run in the fifth inning of the Little League World Series championship baseball game in South Williamsport, Pa., Sunday. Tokyo won 12-2 in five innings.

Japan Takes LLWS Title, Beats Tennessee 12-2

ASSOCIATED PRESS

SOUTH WILLIAMSPORT, Pa. • Arms outstretched in the air with a smile from ear-to-ear, Noriatsu Osaka couldn't contain his glee.

Neither could his teammates from Tokyo after Osaka's third home run of the game put an exclamation point on Japan's 12-2 victory over Tennessee in five innings in the Little League World Series title game Sunday.

The 12-year-old Osaka added a triple for good measure, too, to top off his 4-for-4 afternoon. In a symbolic gesture, Japan's players jogged the traditional postgame victory lap carrying the flags for both their home country and the United States.

ed States.

"We had such a great time in Pennsylvania and we really played a good game today. It was kind of a, 'Thanks,'" Osaka said through an interpreter.

Starter Kotaro Kiyomiya struck out eight in four innings and added an RBI single for Japan. The game ended in the fifth after Osaka's third homer made it a 10-run game.

"We thought we played the best in the tournament so far, especially to win by the 10-run rule in the finals," said 12-year-old Rintaro Hirano, who homered in the fourth to make it 10-1.

A day after pounding out a 24-16 win over California in the U.S. title game, the Goodlettsville, Tenn., slug-gers could only muster two hits — solo shots by Brock Myers and Lorenzo Butler.

It was a bittersweet final game for two teams that grew close during their two weeks in South Williamsport. They exchanged customary postgame handshakes at the plate before Japan received the World Series championship banner and took their warning-track run.

"Tennessee was our best friends in the U.S. division," Kiyomiya said.

Japan's jog finally stopped in front of the team's giddy cheering section as proud family members and friends stood shoulder-to-shoulder to take pictures through the infield fence.

Flowers' HR for White Sox Beats Rain, Mariners 4-3

ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHICAGO • Tyler Flowers hit a go-ahead homer just before the final downpour and the White Sox earned their sixth straight victory.

Immediately following a 6-minute rain delay in the seventh inning, Flowers launched a two-run shot off Kevin Millwood (4-11) to lift AL Central-leading Chicago to its second consecutive series sweep.

Rain continued to pour until the tarp was put on to stay two batters later, and the game was called after a wait of nearly 2 hours.

The start was delayed for 1 hour, 51 minutes due to showers that persisted throughout the game before it was finally stopped.

Chicago starter Gavin Floyd left after two innings with right elbow discomfort. Nate Jones (7-0) earned his second win in two days.

Casper Wells hit a two-run homer for Seattle.

TWINS 6, RANGERS 5

but and Jacoby Ellsbury drove in the go-ahead run as the revamped Red Sox bounced back from a nine-player trade and a 12-inning loss.

CLEVELAND • Curtis Granderson hit his 200th career homer to help the Yankees get the win.

The Yankees took a 3-0 lead in the second inning off Ubaldo Jimenez (9-13). Granderson's 33rd homer in the sixth made it 4-2 and gave New York a record eight current players with 200 or more career homers.

National League

PHILLIES 4, NATIONALS 1

PHILADELPHIA • Cliff Lee tossed seven sharp innings to earn his first home win in nearly a year and the Philadelphia Phillies completed a three-game sweep against the major league-leading Washington Nationals with a 4-1 victory on Sunday.

Roger Federer reaches for a shot against Stanislas Wawrinka during a semifinals match at the Western & Southern Open tennis tournament on Aug. 18 in Mason, Ohio.

Federer, Murray Take U.S. Open Spotlight

NEW YORK (MCT) • Roger Federer and Briton Andy Murray take the opening-day spotlight matches as the U.S. Open begins on Monday with the Swiss trying to create more tennis history.

Federer, the top seed, comes into the last major of the season back on the world No. 1 ranking and ready to make another winning impression when he begins first-round play against American Donald Young, who just ended a massive losing streak stretching back months.

Murray, who beat Federer for the London Olympic gold medal three weeks after losing to him in the "regular" final at the All England club as the Swiss won his seventh title on the lawns, says he is over the knee problems which made his return to the ATP after his Olympic dream such a strain.

The Scot insisted on flying across the Atlantic and straight into the Toronto Masters, where he had to quit with a knee injury after an opening win. He won another match a week later in Cincinnati before going out as Federer won his ATP-leading sixth trophy of the season.

Murray begins with Russian Alex Bogomolov, who beat him in the depths of a slump in March 2011 but who has lost their last two matches.

Federer can hardly be more confident just weeks after turning 31 and ruling once again atop the ATP rankings.

"It's going to take something special from my opponent to win," said the 17-time Grand Slam singles winner. "That's how it feels right now. Then again, I might walk away from Monday and lose the first round.

"You have to always be very careful how you say it and how you then play. I will take it one match at a time. There's no doubt about that. I will never ever underestimate an opponent ever again. I did that enough when I was a teenager. Those times are long gone.

"I'm just happy how I'm playing. I already reached my goal for the year becoming world number one and getting Wimbledon again and getting a medal for Switzerland. It's been incredible. "But I do have this one left for me this year where I really, really want to do well, and I couldn't be more happy returning here as No. 1, it's super exciting."

Manning on the Money in Broncos' Loss to 49ers

ASSOCIATED PRESS

DENVER • That's the Peyton Manning the Denver Broncos and their fans have been waiting all summer to see. Magnificent. A machine. On the money. And no longer just a memory.

Manning was close to perfect in his final regular-season tuneup Sunday, throwing his first two touchdown passes for the Denver Broncos in a 29-24 loss to the San Francisco 49ers.

In less than a quarter of work, Manning completed 10 of 12 passes for 122 yards, including TD tosses of 10 and 5 yards to Eric Decker, and the only two misses were a dropped pass by Joel Dreessen and an errant throw to Brandon Stokley, who was held on the play but didn't draw the flag.

Alex Smith threw a 49-yard TD pass and David Akers kicked five field goals for the Niners (2-1, No. 4), who outscored the Broncos' backups 19-0 in the second half but lost wide receiver Ted Ginn Jr. to an ankle injury early in the second half.

PANTHERS 17, JETS 12

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. • Mark Sanchez looked pretty good for nearly three quarters. He just couldn't get the New York Jets into the end zone — again.

Tim Tebow had the play of the game, but also couldn't get that elusive preseason touchdown for the Jets.

Tebow got the fans fired up with a dazzling 20-yard run in the fourth quarter, but threw an interception three plays later and the Carolina Panthers held on for a 17-12 victory Sunday night.

The Jets (0-3) still have not scored a touchdown through three preseason games, an alarming display of ineptitude even though the games don't count. But Sanchez and the starters will not play Thursday night in the preseason finale at Philadelphia, so they certainly have a lot to work on before the regular-season opener against Buffalo on Sept. 9.

Sanchez played well into the third quarter, but got no help from his receivers who dropped a few passes. He finished 11 of 18 for 123 yards and an interception.

Zero Week

heads all over the northwest, at left tackle, it doesn't need to be complicated.

Add in Adam Kovacs, a 6-foot-7, 305-pound manchild who fell into coach Cameron Anderson's lap as an exchange student from Hungary, at right tackle, and it's just plain unfair. Gooding didn't pass the ball much against Oakley because it flat didn't need to. The run game is in good stead, and if the pass game takes shape, the Senators could have one of the most potent offenses around.

It's unlikely Gooding will match up with many defensive lines of similar size, which could give it the upper hand in the race for SCIC glory this fall.

4. Oakley will be just fine at 11-man football.

Sure, the Hornets didn't get off to the greatest of starts, getting pasted 34-0 by Gooding on Friday. But there are two mitigating circumstances. First, Gooding may post the biggest line that an undersized Oakley squad faces on either side of the ball all season. Second, it was the first game Oakley played since making the jump from 8-man ball.

The Hornets were clearly outmanned and overwhelmed by Gooding's size and physicality, but they never backed down. In the second half, they started moving the ball with a double-tight, no-huddle wishbone attack that gained more traction than the spread zone-read they ran in the first half.

Once they settle on an offense that best suits their players and go all-in with it, it's not inconceivable to see Oakley finish as high as second in the Canyon Conference, and make the playoffs in its first year at 2A.

5. Jerome's outburst might represent the Great Basin's depth.

I expected a Jerome victory over Mountain Home in Sid Gambles' first game as coach. What I didn't see coming was a 40-6 annihilation.

Gambles insisted there wouldn't be much different than in Gary Krumm's tenure other than a method of delivery with the message. After one week, the offense hasn't missed a beat. Zach Thibault threw for more than 300 yards and three touchdowns, and Jerome raced into the distance before conceding a late touchdown.

In its own right, the Tigers' win speaks volumes about how good they can be if things keep going their way.

Mountain Home isn't of the same caliber as Columbia, Middleton or Skyview, three of the teams tipped to compete for their conference title out of the Treasure Valley, but Jerome did what good teams should do against inferior opposition, and that's blow them out.

If Jerome, almost an afterthought in the Great Basin Conference discussion, can continue to flex its offensive muscles, it might prove the entire conference to be better than any of us anticipated.

Take notice that a Petition for Adoption was filed by Travis Michael Hatch on July 9, 2012 with the Clerk of Superior Court for Iredell County, North Carolina in the above-entitled special proceeding. The nature of the relief being sought is the step-parent adoption of Kyah Rae Hatch (who was born in Idaho on February 3, 2000) by her step-father Travis Michael Hatch.

Take notice that you are required to make defense to such pleading not later than 40 days after August 27, 2012 and upon your failure to do so the Petitioner will apply to the Court for the relief requested in the Petition For Adoption and any parental rights that you may have to the juvenile will be terminated upon the entry of the order of adoption.

This the 27th day of August, 2012.

DEAR ABBY: I am a pastor and just received word that a parishioner died yesterday. "Harold" had been hospitalized for a week in another city, and I wasn't notified. A member of his family said, "We didn't know if we should bother you or not." The saddest part is, I was in that city the night before he died, seeing another parishioner. It would have been easy to visit Harold.

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

Abby, permit me to share three reasons why I WANT to be "bothered" in the future:

First: The one who is ill is entitled to the care and support of his or her faith community. I have sat at the side of persons who appear non-responsive, taken their hands and told them who I am. Their hand frequently tightens around mine. When I say familiar prayers, their lips move in concert with mine. Spiritual leaders of other faiths report similar experiences.

Second: My presence may be physically and spiritually helpful to the family and friends of the patient. Many congregations provide networks of contacts for social agencies, additional medical specialists, and even respite care groups within the congregation.

Third: The ill person may have confided his or her wishes regarding maintenance of life, burial and funeral arrangements to his or her spiritual leader. When people come to me to discuss their wishes, I file that information in a secure place. (I also encourage them to share their desires with family and formalize them with an attorney or funeral director.) In at least one instance, the family purchased a burial plot through the funeral home, unaware that one had already been purchased in another cemetery of the person's own choosing.

I urge adult children and others in charge of another's affairs: PLEASE contact the faith community of the dying person — for the sake of the patient, the faith community and yourself.

— A PASTOR
IN WISCONSIN

DEAR PASTOR: Thank you for your informative and caring letter. I hope it will convince readers whose loved ones are having medical problems to notify their faith community leader immediately.

DEAR ABBY: I hope you print this because moviegoers worldwide will appreciate it.

Attention, all parents who bring their babies to the movies — PLEASE DON'T!

I just spent $11 to listen to a baby cry and fuss for two hours. It made it impossible to enjoy "Spider-Man." Thank you.

— SILENT MOVIE FAN
IN SACRAMENTO

DEAR SILENT: I understand that baby sitters are expensive and not always reliable — and that parents want to see the latest films, too. However, when a baby starts to fuss, the infant should be taken out of the theater to be fed, changed and/or calmed. To do otherwise is unfair to those who have also spent hard-earned money to enjoy a film without distraction.

P.S. DVDs are just what the doctor ordered for new parents — not only can they be paused, but they are cheaper, too.

Dear Abby is written by Abigail Van Buren, also known as Jeanne Phillips, and was founded by her mother, Pauline Phillips. Write Dear Abby at www.DearAbby.com or P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA 90069.

To order "How to Write Letters for All Occasions," send your name and mailing address, plus check or money order for $7 (U.S. funds) to: Dear Abby — Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, IL 61054-0447. Shipping and handling are included in the price.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE Bobby Wolff

"When the hurlyburly's done,
When the battle's lost and won ..."
— William Shakespeare

At last year's Lederer tournament, Nicola Smith and Sally Brock demonstrated the form that has won them three world titles as partners or teammates. And they needed all their experience to break the seemingly impregnable slam reached in today's deal by Norwegian Thomas Charlsen.

North's two-club call was an artificial game-force, and two no-trump showed a three-card spade raise. This was followed by Key-Card Blackwood to reach the good spade slam. Smith led the heart six, consistent with her actual holding, but also consistent with an original holding of J-7-6, J-8-7-6 or J-8-7-6-2. Brock defended well by false-carding with the queen when dummy played low, and Charlsen took his normal line in spades of low to the ace, followed by the jack, so that he could pick up Q-(9)-x-x with East.

When Smith won her spade queen, she continued with the heart seven, and Charlsen decided to believe the opponents rather than playing to establish diamonds with one ruff. When he put in dummy's heart nine, it was all over, and an unbeatable slam had been defeated.

Some commentators on Bridge Base thought Smith would not lead from the heart jack against a slam, but when you look, you will see that the defenders have all four queens, so they might well have been pushed to find a safe lead. They had to lead some suit, after all, and J-x-x-(x) might well have been the least evil. This defense earned Smith and Brock the award for the best-defended hand.

ANSWER: On an auction of this sort, where declarer may well have a void, leading an ace seems like a bad idea. A trump looks safe enough; I might choose the seven for deceptive purposes in case partner has the bare queen, but there is very little to choose from among the small spot-cards.

Today is Monday, Aug. 27, the 240th day of 2012. There are 126 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight:
On Aug. 27, 1962, the United States launched the Mariner 2 space probe, which flew past Venus in December 1962.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:
In 1770, German philosopher Georg Wilhelm Friedrich Hegel was born in Stuttgart.

In 1776, the Battle of Long Island began during the Revolutionary War as British troops attacked American forces, who ended up being forced to retreat two days later.

In 1859, Edwin L. Drake drilled the first successful oil well in the United States, at Titusville, Pa.

In 1883, the island volcano Krakatoa blew up; the resulting tidal waves in Indonesia's Sunda Strait claimed some 36,000 lives in Java and Sumatra.

In 1908, Lyndon Baines Johnson, the 36th president of the United States, was born near Stonewall, Texas.

In 1928, the Kellogg-Briand Pact was signed in Paris, outlawing war and providing for the peaceful settlement of disputes.

In 1939, the first turbojet-powered aircraft, the Heinkel He 178, went on its first full-fledged test flight over Germany.

In 1942, the Times of London published an editorial calling on the British government to promote the production of penicillin, the first mention of the antibiotic by a newspaper.

In 1957, the USS Swordfish, the second Skate Class nuclear submarine, was launched from the Portsmouth Naval Shipyard in Maine.

In 1967, Brian Epstein, manager of the Beatles, was found dead in his London flat from an overdose of sleeping pills; he was 32.

In 1979, British war hero Lord Louis Mountbatten and three other people, including his 14-year-old grandson Nicholas, were killed off the coast of Ireland in a boat explosion claimed by the Irish Republican Army.

In 1989, the first U.S. commercial satellite rocket was launched from Cape Canaveral, Fla. — a Delta booster carrying a British communications satellite, the Marcopolo 1.

Ten years ago: President George W. Bush met at his Texas ranch with Saudi Arabia's ambassador Prince Bandar bin Sultan; a White House spokesman said Bush told the Saudi diplomat he had not yet decided whether to attack Iraq. A Tokyo court acknowledged for the first time Japan's use of biological weapons before and during World War II, but rejected demands for compensation by 180 Chinese who claimed they were victims of the germ warfare program.

Five years ago: Attorney General Alberto Gonzales announced his resignation after a controversy over the firings of nine U.S. attorneys. Atlanta Falcons quarterback Michael Vick apologized for "using bad judgment and making bad decisions" and vowed to redeem himself after pleading guilty in Richmond, Va., to a federal dog-fighting charge.

One year ago: Hurricane Irene, after striking Puerto Rico and the Bahamas, pushed up the U.S. East Coast, prompting evacuations in New York City and leaving major flood damage in Vermont. Hundreds of soldiers and federal agents raided a casino in Monterrey in northern Mexico, two days after an arson attack on a gambling house killed 52 people.

IF AUGUST 27 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Your happy-go-lucky attitude will let problems roll off your back like water from a duck's back during the next four to six weeks. Put financial decisions and ambitions on the back burner, as your tendency to pursue unrealizable fantasies rises to the forefront by October. A new love affair begun in the month ahead may prove fascinating, but there may be very little in common to glue you together permanently. Keep your head down in career or job related situations in October, as it isn't a good time to search for a new position. Make your most important decisions and implement key changes in late November when a lucky break could offer more responsibilities but more rewards, too.

HOROSCOPE
Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Make headway. If you don't like something, change it. If you can't change it, change the way you think about it. Your sleeves-rolled-up attitude gets the attention of higher-ups at work or in the boardroom.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Follow the wise words of a respected U.S. president from the past. John Quincy Adams said, "Patience and perseverance have a magical effect before which difficulties disappear and obstacles vanish."

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Parade your public passions. You can circulate and promote your favorite charity or cause. This can be a good day to promote your wares in the marketplace — especially if you let the buyers come to you.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Shake off the cobwebs. Harmony-loving Venus is in your sign, making it easy to pursue social activities or personal improvements. Get relationships in shape to withstand the pressures of the week to come.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You can never have too many friends. Someone is likely to go the extra mile to help you out during the day. Remain committed to achieving an important objective — even if discouraged by unavoidable changes.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Live life in the fast lane and bypass the naysayers. There is no reason to be slowed by the caution of others. Move forward at your own pace and challenge others to keep up with you.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Do what you do best. A musician must make music, an artist must paint, a poet must write sonnets — so figure out what you are and then do it. A significant someone will show extra affection.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Never give up. Hard work does not need to be its own reward. There is also money, prestige and promotions. You can reach your goal, achieve your dream or make progress by sticking to your guns.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Tackle your work with gusto. The seven dwarfs may have sung "Heigh-ho, heigh-ho, it's off to work we go," but they had nothing on you. You have the golden touch with financial matters and purchases.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Your passion for success can turn you into a trendsetter. To accomplish great things, you must not only act, but also dream; not only plan, but also believe. People will start to follow your example.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Get an "E" for effort. Thomas Edison said, "Discontent is the first necessity of progress." Your discontent with financial arrangements, possessions, or position can spur you to greater accomplishment.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Relationships take a turn for the better. You may be the happy recipient of spontaneous acts of kindness that spring from a sincere desire to please you. Enjoy heightened peace and understanding with loved ones.
