Parents Arrested for Cancer Fundraiser Fraud

BY ALISON GENE SMITH

BUHL • Police in Buhl arrested a couple Saturday for allegedly raising money for their daughter, who they said was being treated for leukemia in Seattle.

On Saturday, Lisa Dawn Holley and Michael Wayne Holley were arrested by Buhl police at the Valley Country store, the site of a planned car wash and raffle fundraiser to help raise funds for the girl, who police say does not have cancer.

Both were charged with grand theft by deception and are being held at the Twin Falls County Jail, Lisa on a $5,000 bond and Michael on a $50,000 bond.

Buhl Police Chief Eric Foster said the two were arrested during the car wash with donors present.

“They did wash some cars before we came in,” Foster said.

The couple’s alleged deception was discovered after a neighbor called police last Thursday, a police report states. According to the report, the woman said she and

BUHL SCHOOL LEVY PASSES

Election results

BUHL • Voters gave a nod of approval to a new supplemental levy for the Buhl School District.

Unofficial results from Tuesday’s election show the two-year, $400,000 annual measure earned 477 “yes” votes and 408 “no” votes.

Results aren’t official until they’re certified by Twin Falls County Commissioners.

Buhl School District Superintendent Byron Stutzman said he wants to thank residents for turning out for the election.

“It’s good to know that they support the school district when it comes down to crunch time,” he said.

Stutzman said the supplemental levy will set the school district up to be more successful.

Funding will be used to cover district operating expenses and balance the budget.

“We will continue to be very judicious with our funds,” Stutzman said.

It was the school district’s first successful levy election in recent years. Two past ballot measures – including one in May 2011 – failed by narrow margins.

Election results came in earlier than usual Tuesday night. That’s because the county used new ballot counting machines for the first time.

Once the polls closed at 8 p.m., results were called in from each precinct location. Election results were posted less than 45 minutes later.

Ballots were still transported to the Twin Falls County Courthouse Tuesday night for a second check of the results.

Twin Falls County Clerk Kristina Glascock said she didn’t expect the results to change.

The Buhl School District joins 12 other south-central Idaho school districts that received voter approval for levies this year.

94-year-old Twin Falls woman recalls a lifetime of 4-H.

TWIN FALLS • Old binders with newspaper clippings, photos and certificates hold the physical remnants of Irene Baltzer’s role in 4-H. But her real legacy will be the lessons she taught.

The 94-year-old Twin Falls woman was both a member and a leader of 4-H clubs in the Magic Valley, and has watched as her charges have grown and used the homemaking skills she taught them.

Baltzer first joined a 4-H canning club at 10 years old, when her family lived in Colorado. Her mother was the only one in the area with a pressure cooker, Baltzer said, so the two would carry the stove using a broom stick through the handle, Baltzer recalled on Monday as she traced her fingers over the cooker’s rounded bottom.

That day, the appliance sat unused on her kitchen table, but Baltzer could still vividly recall her mother using it to teach girls how to prepare meat and vegetables.

Wendell Elementary Begins Year in New Building

WENDELL • After the bell rang on the first day of school, a few students at Wendell Elementary School weren’t sure how to get to class.

They stood near giant windows in the school entryway and gazed down the long hallways. School employees quickly helped them find their new classrooms.

A new school year started up Tuesday with one major change — a new elementary school building.

“It’s a lot nicer,” parent Jillyn Johnson said as she stood in the hallway outside a classroom. She has a child at each of Wendell’s three schools.

THE MARKET AT A GLANCE

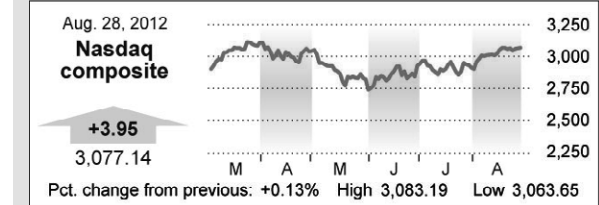

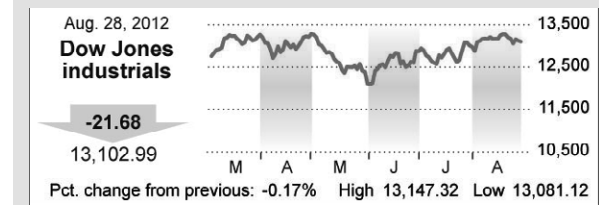

Stocks Mixed in Thin Trading; Oil Creeps Over $96

NEW YORK (AP) • Mixed economic data kept the stock market hovering near break-even Tuesday. One report on home prices looked encouraging, and another on consumer confidence was worrisome.

House prices increased in all major U.S. cities in June, according to the closely watched Standard & Poor's/Case-Shiller home-price index. The report was the latest sign that the housing market has been gaining strength.

The Dow Jones industrial average dropped 21.68 points to close at 13,102.99. Hewlett-Packard led the Dow down. HP's stock lost 31 cents to $16.90 and hit a new one-year low.

Crude oil crept above $96 a barrel as Hurricane Isaac picked up speed in the Gulf of Mexico, where roughly one-quarter of the country's oil is produced. Much of the region's production and refining activity has shut down. The National Hurricane Center forecast that Isaac would reach the coast of southeastern Louisiana late Tuesday.

Long Lines for Free Haircuts

When I stopped by the Mountain View Christian Center last week for a photo, I was taken aback by the number of children waiting to get free back-to-school haircuts. This was the first year the church, in conjunction with local hairstylists, offered the service.

When I stepped inside the large room filled with waiting parents and children, Pastor Jim Powell's steady gaze met the surprise that must have reflected in my eyes. Powell told me a story of how one parent had expressed extreme gratitude for the free haircut. She had scraped together enough money for the bare necessities to get her child in school but simply did not have enough money for a haircut.

"Every one of these children deserves to look sharp and feel good about themselves on their first day of school," Powell said.

I've never gotten out of my sleeping bag so quickly. Still drowsy, I hopped around framing different perspectives on the sunrise and shouting to my bewildered husband to get out of the tent and walk along the shoreline. Later in the day, I found plenty of strangers to populate my story and my other photos. But I needed that silhouette on the sunlit shore, and my husband was the only one around. He apparently forgave me; on the hike out, he lightened my pack at the expense of his own.

No Tears on the First Day of School

As an education reporter, I never quite know what to expect when arriving at a school to write about the first day. School buildings are always bustling with activity. But the reactions parents and students have to the start of a new school year aren't as predictable.

At Gooding Elementary School last week, kindergartners in Collette Born's class didn't seem too phased when they waved goodbye to their parents. I didn't see any tears, either, which Horn said is rare.

Their first school day started with eating breakfast in the classroom.

Classroom volunteers helped the children unwrap bread and unpeel half a banana.

"Guys, let's just try one bite," Horn told her new students. She told them it's a good idea to eat breakfast to feel good and "help your brain learn."

Lightning Strikes Not Twice, but 8,000 Times

Sunday's thunderstorm included more than 8,000 lightning strikes scattered throughout south-central Idaho but only one of them made me jump.

To be honest, lightning storms always tend to make me nervous but usually because they signal I'll be scrambling to cover new wildfires for the next several days. But on Sunday, I was unusually upbeat. I was driving back from Boise with a few friends and happy to end the weekend on a high note.

When we got to Twin Falls, the lightning was dancing right above our heads. I quickly dropped one friend off and headed west on Pole Line Road. I was just about to merge onto Washington Street when a flash of crooked light struck down a power line no more than 50 feet away from me.

I screamed. Every nerve in my body was on fire as the roar of thunder quickly filled the air. I wanted to cover my head in fear, but I was in charge of a moving vehicle and had to remain in control. Meanwhile, my friend had gone white with shock.

"Did that just happen?" I asked a little too loudly.

"That just happened!" He said, screaming right along with me.

We weren't in danger of actually getting hit by lightning, but it was hard to remain cool as sparks continued to bounce across the street.

I think it's fair to say lightning still makes me nervous.

Fun in the Mud

This past weekend, I got to leave crime reporting behind for a day and break out my camera again. Before I decided to become a print reporter, I studied photojournalism in college, and it's been awhile since I picked up a camera for something other than a late-night house fire or a tense courtroom moment.

On Sunday, I traveled to Bogus Basin near Boise with fellow reporter Kimberlee Kruesi and two other friends for the Dirty Dash run. While the other three slogged through six miles of mud and obstacles, I planted myself at the finish line — the final mud pool — camera ready. I got pictures of small children, college students, middle aged couples and even one pug, all flailing their way through the final muddy challenge.

About two hours later, I spotted my friends and captured their first joyous moments as they emerged from the mud. On Tuesday morning it was fun to see my name in a photo credit for a truly happy moment.

The residence shown in this Clarence E. Bisbee photo was misidentified in a recent Hidden History feature. This house, once owned by Robert M. McCollum, was the first permanent residence built in the village of Twin Falls and now houses Ann's Eyewear Boutique, located at 691 Shoshone St. N.

Although historic, this building is not on the National Register of Historic Places, due to the significant amount of alterations it has undergone.

Today, as Ann's Eyewear, the building faces Shoshone Street, at the intersection of Shoshone and 7th Avenue North. However, the McCollum house was built at the intersection of Shoshone and 5th Avenue North — where the Twin Falls County Courthouse stands today. The house was moved to Shoshone and 7th Avenue North before construction of the courthouse began. The 1910 Polk city directory for Twin Falls County gives McCollum's address as 107 7th Ave. N.

Later, an addition and new front entrance was constructed along Shoshone Street, which changed not only the appearance of the building, but the street address, too. The gables seen in this photo are still visible from 7th Avenue today.

Confusion over the National Register listing began in 1982, when McCollum's second house — a 1910 Craftsman bungalow built for his daughter at 708 E. Shoshone St. — gained National Register status.

sure, window restorations, sure, history of our community, never. Well, that all changed the other day as I received an amazing one-on-one account about the one and only Ira Burton Perrine from Mychel Matthews.

Perrine sort of did it all.

He was one of the first farmers in the area, he created public transportation from downtown Twin Falls all the way to the rim of the canyon near Shoshone Falls. Perrine found a balance with the hydroelectric dam he helped build along with the tourism the awe inspiring waterfalls he knew would bring to the area. He was friends with Thomas Edison and William Jennings Bryan, a three-time presidential candidate. He also won a gold medal at the World Expo in Paris for the fruit he grew here in the Magic Valley. Learn more about Perrine and his legacy at our local museum.

Trust me, it'll be fun.

Union Numbers Shrink

While researching a story about local labor unions this week, I learned from Dale Varney of the Magic Valley Coalition of Unions that there was a time when half of U.S. workers were union members. That's been whittled down, he said, by big corporations that are not concerned about workers.

"They're concerned about profit," Varney said. "They are not concerned about America or the Magic Valley. They're in business to make money and that's what they care about. They're going to do that any way they can."

Anti-work legislation, such as that aimed against public employee bargaining rights in Wisconsin, has caused union members to band together regardless of industry, he said.

"When we unite workers together we instill pride and our common goals," Varney said.

Hazmat Cleans Up Pesticide Spill in Buhl

TIMES-NEWS

BUHL • The Buhl Fire Department responded Monday evening to the 900 block of Robertson Street in Buhl after residents in the area called about a strange gas smell. Assistant Fire Chief Nathan Fawcett said at about 6:30 p.m. a crew went out to the area to attempt to locate where the smell was coming from. Eventually, the crew discovered several small puddles in the road were the source. "Due to the nature and smell and the properties nearby we decided to call in regional response hazmat team," Fawcett said. The hazmat team identified the liquid as a pesticide. "We placed floor-dry on the puddles immediately," Fawcett said. "Today we're working with public works to dig up the material and properly dispose of it and replace it with gravel." Fawcett said he believes the pesticide was picked up from a city garbage truck and spilled in a few areas along the street when the truck compacted. Fawcett said it appeared less than a gallon of the pesticide was spilled but it was giving off a definite odor. If someone has a potentially hazardous material to dispose of, Fawcett said, they should contact the landfill, or check with the product's manufacturer.

the report states. The Holleys said their daughter had a mental disorder. On Aug. 22, the woman told police Lisa Holley contacted her and said she and her husband wanted to hold a car wash to raise money in order to get custody of the girl, according to the report. The woman contacted police after reading an article in the Buhl Herald about how the Holleys were holding a fundraiser to raise money for their daughter who was diagnosed with leukemia and was being treated at a hospital in Seattle. Police contacted the relatives in Seattle and confirmed the girl was not being treated at any hospital for leukemia or any other condition, including her mental disorder, the report states. The relatives also told police the girl was removed from Lisa Holley's care by Health and Welfare in Yakima County, Wash., and a no contact order, including phone calls, was in place, the report states. According to the report, the article in the Buhl Herald stated people could get their cars washed and purchase raffle tickets for a chance to win an emergency kit or alignment check at Les Schwab tires. Other prizes were also donated by Napa Auto Parts, King's, Don's Thriftway, Garibaldi's Mexican Restaurant, Jackson's Kountry Korner, La Plaza and Ridley's Market, the report states. According to the report, there was also a flier in support of the car wash posted at the Buhl Police Department. That flier stated 4-H students and a Methodist church youth group would be washing the cars and listed sponsors for the event. On Saturday, undercover detectives from Idaho State Police spoke to Lisa Holley saying they wanted to donate $1,200 to her daughter's medical bills. According to the report, detectives told the woman multiple times they wanted to make sure the donation would go to the girl's cancer treatment bills. Both Michael and Lisa Holley stated the money would go to cover medical costs because of their daughter's cancer, the report states. Shortly after the two confirmed the money would go to the girl's medical bills, Buhl police officers moved in and arrested both parents. Officers were able to find the items donated from several stores along with gift certificates worth about $310, the report states. Once in custody, Michael Holley allegedly told officers it wasn't his intent to defraud anyone and said the money was not going to pay for medical treatment, but to help pay a lawyer fee of $750 to help get custody of their daughter. After the Holleys were arrested, police contacted the managers and owners of the stores that donated funds. According to the report, all had similar stories of a woman coming in asking for donations to help her daughter who was ill. "We don't know how far reaching this goes," Chief Foster said. "Right now, both officers from our department and Idaho State Police are doing follow up interviews." Continued investigation and additional information will tell law enforcement if they caught the allegedly false fundraiser before it got too big, Foster said. Police believe many people who helped the Holleys were not accomplices and believed their story. "We're starting to hear from more people that they fell victim to the story," he said. "They wanted to help people in need."

Community Open House

Interested in seeing the new elementary school building? Wendell Elementary School will host a community open house from 6-9 p.m. Sept. 13. The event will include tours of the new building.

there are already more elementary school students than expected — especially, in first and fourth grades. In first grade, there are about 125 children in five classes. Lowe said district employees will "do what we need to do" to accommodate the larger number of students, such as possibly hiring another teacher. For fourth grade, district administrators reduced a teaching position at the end of last school year based on projected enrollment. But since then, more students have enrolled.

plification system with speakers in the ceiling. "Getting all that installed was tremendous," Lowe said.

Tax Dollars at Work

The goal of a new elementary school building became a reality when Wendell voters passed a $9.8 million bond in 2010. Last summer, construction crews broke ground on the approximately 60,000-square-foot facility. During a community open house Sept. 13, community members will get a chance to see how their tax dollars were used. "This is their building," Superintendent Greg Lowe said, adding that he hopes many people will come to the event. The new facility replaces the old elementary school, which was spread out in nine buildings — six portables and three brick buildings.

more classrooms. The project didn't begin until this summer after old school buildings were demolished in mid-June. While most students are in the new building, one class of fourth-graders who started the year in an old building. Lowe said Phase II of the project has a completion date around Thanksgiving break. After that, the 27-student fourth-grade class will move into one of the newest classrooms. On Tuesday, exterior landscaping work around the school building — such as putting in a new sprinkler system — was in progress. The school site also doesn't have trees and shrubs yet, and there's still work left to do on the playground.

Getting into the New Building

Once construction wrapped up on the new elementary school, moving in was a time-consuming process. Even though teachers' contracts for the school year just started days ago, many set aside time starting Aug. 1 to set up their new classrooms. "They spent a lot of their own time," Lowe said. The school district's information technology workers also had a large project: Getting equipment up and running in the new building. Each classroom has a projector, document camera, five student computers and one teacher computer. There's also a new feature in each classroom — an am-

The family moved to Idaho in 1930, when Baltzer was 12.

"There was nothing to do for girls," she said, so her mother started a new canning group.

"We named our club 'The Welcome 4-H Club' because Mother wanted everyone to feel like they were welcome," Baltzer said.

Back then, the food preservation skills were crucial. During that first summer in Idaho, at the beginning of the Great Depression, Baltzer's family lived out of a trailer hitched behind her father's truck. She remembers her mother cooking over a campfire every evening, and using a fire-heated iron to smooth the children's clothes before church.

"But we never felt poor," she noted. Soon, the family was able to move into a farmhouse in Magic Valley.

Baltzer and her mother stayed involved with 4-H for several years after, with Baltzer stepping up to help as a junior leader for two years. She took a break from the club and got married to Darrell "Jerry" Baltzer in 1941. Their first date was to the county fair, Baltzer said.

When her three daughters were old enough, Baltzer stepped back into 4-H involvement, this time as the leader of the Merry Maids 4-

H Club.

Through the '50s and early '60s, she oversaw 59 girls and two boys as they learned to cook, sew, can and cross stitch. She made sure the stitches were perfectly even, and made them start over if one stitch was off, recalled former Merry Maids member Annette Skabronski.

"She was really a perfectionist," said Skabronski, now 69. "And I appreciate that now."

There was a reason for that perfectionism, Baltzer said. Judges at the county fair looked for uniformity in everything the 4-H-ers entered, whether it was cookies or sewing.

But with the demands for precision came understanding, said Charlene Reeder of Twin Falls.

"She was so patient with us," Reeder said.

Baltzer's lessons stuck with the women through the years.

"I remember at our cooking classes how we would have to do things over and over and over and make them just perfect," Skabronski said. "To this day, I still measure things exactly and do things just like she taught us."

Just before she and her husband started their trophy business in 1966, Baltzer quit her 4-H leadership role. But every year until her husband's death in 2010, she made sure to stop by the 4-H exhibits at the Twin Falls County Fair to see club members' projects.

ASHLEY SMITH • TIMES-NEWS

Irene Baltzer, 94, shows a 4H award she received; she's been involved with the organization since the 1920s.

The organization has changed since the '50s and '60s, Baltzer acknowledged. Now, most children don't know what tea towels are.

That's not necessarily a bad thing, she noted. She sees how confident today's 4-H members are when they show their rabbits and llamas.

"I think 4-H is wonderful, no matter the changes," Baltzer said.

Cannon DUI Trial Delayed

BY ALISON GENE SMITH
 alismith@magicvalley.com

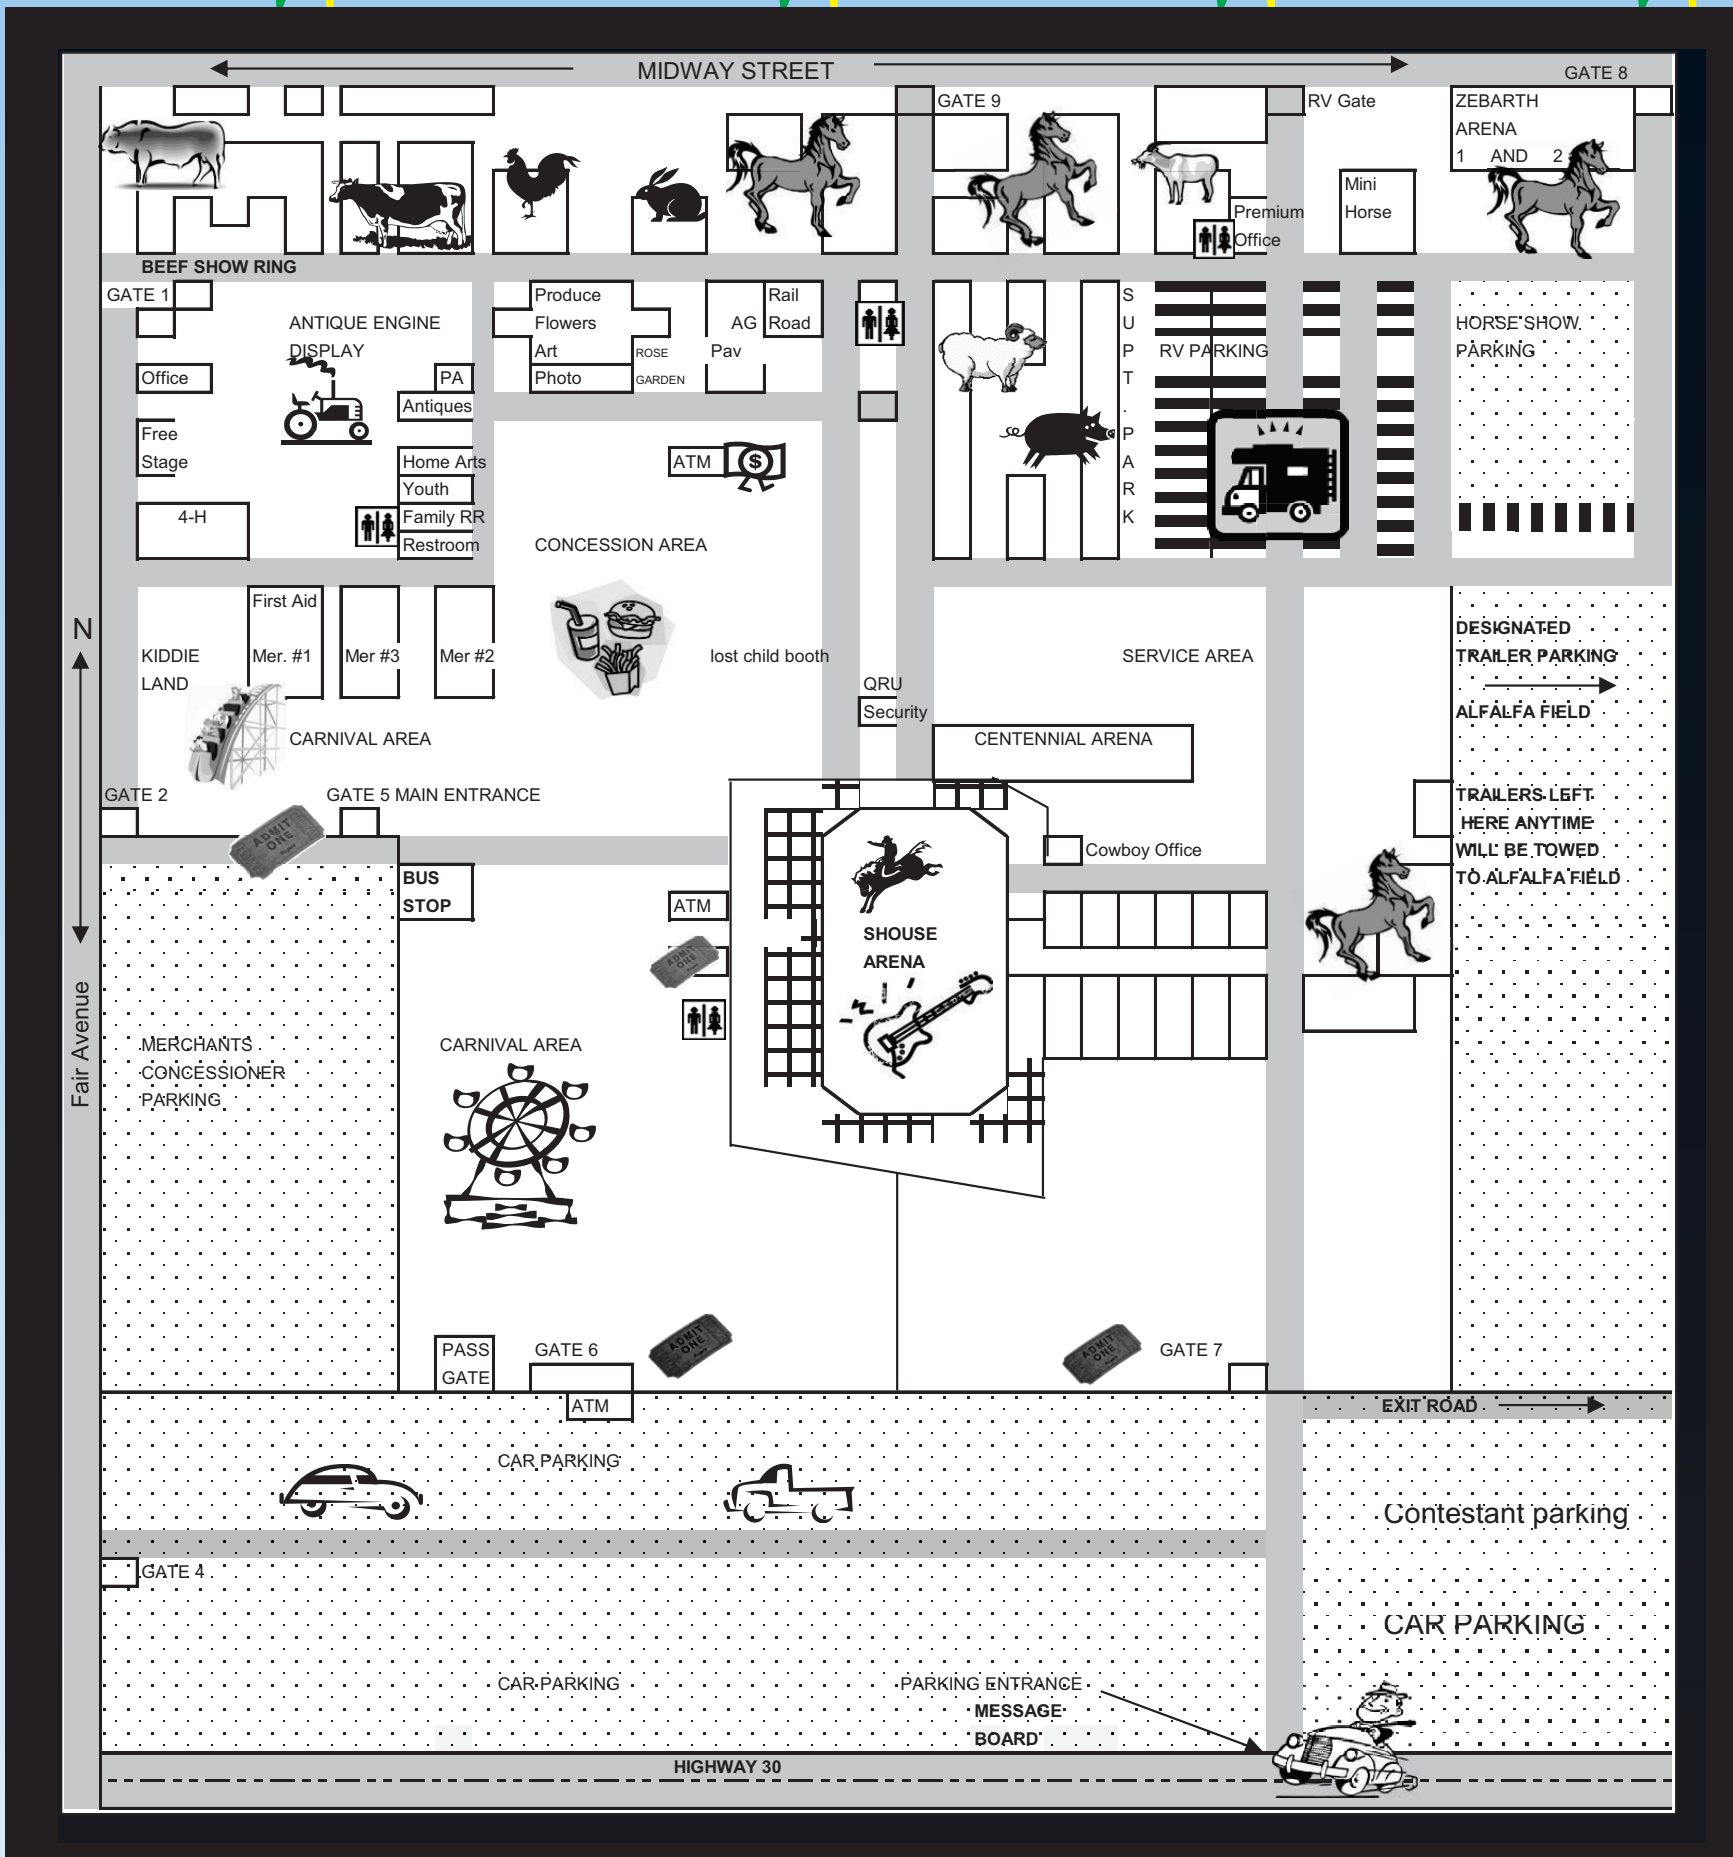

BOISE • The driving under the influence trial for former Twin Falls County 5th District Magistrate Judge Nicole Cannon was delayed Tuesday in Ada County.
 The trial was scheduled to begin at 8:30 a.m. Tuesday, but online court records show an agreement was made by both Cannon's defense and state prosecutors to delay the trial. An Ada County court records clerk said no new date was set.

Cannon was charged with an excessive DUI when a Boise police officer made a traffic stop and gave her two tests allegedly showing a blood alcohol content of 0.239 and 0.221, nearly three times the legal limit to drive.

 Cannon resigned her judgeship in late June. The former Minidoka County prosecutor became only the second female judge in the history of the 5th Judicial District when she was picked for the job in January 2011.

Gooding County Prosecutor Calvin Campbell was chosen as Cannon's replacement after a series of interviews in mid-August. He is scheduled to take the oath of office Sept. 6 at 3 p.m. at the Twin Falls County courthouse.

"You can't predict God's work. This is nerve-wracking. I hate leaving my house, worrying if it's going to flood or get looted. But I'm not going to stay in the city again."

New Orleans resident Linda Grandison in comments as Tropical Storm Isaac is forecast to make landfall in New Orleans on the seventh anniversary of Katrina, raising familiar fears and old anxieties in a city still recovering from a near-mortal blow seven years ago

Myths About Republicans

TAMPA, Fla. • There are a lot of pundits here in Tampa with no real politics to report on. So I thought now would be a good idea to do some explaining about the Republicans the punditocracy has ventured out to poke and prod and report back, as if they are 21st-century Margaret Meads.

Jennifer Rubin

The Washington Post

1. The GOP has been taken over by tea party.

In 2012 the Republicans chose the least conservative candidate. If anything, the tea party has been absorbed into the GOP and accepted direction from party leaders. House Speaker John Boehner, R-Ohio, got majorities (including the vast majority of freshmen) to pass a continuing resolution and then the debt-ceiling deal. The GOP continues to support budgets that spend more money every year (they slow the rate of increase) and extol Medicare and Social Security.

2. The GOP is obsessed with social issues.

Mitt Romney barely talks about social issues. It is the Democrats who have latched onto Todd Akin and reportedly set out to emphasize abortion at their convention. The gubernatorial race in Virginia in 2009 is typical of races these days. The Republican Bob McDonnell talked bread-and-butter economic issues while his opponent and the media raised social issues as a wedge to try to turn off independent voters. (McDonnell won by 17 points.)

3. The GOP doesn't believe in community.

President Obama likes to say that Republicans want everyone to be "on his own." In fact, conservatives, as Romney put it in a speech at Liberty University this year, believe family, communities, churches and other civil institutions are critical building blocks in society. They favor investing authority in the level of government closest to the people (locales and states), which they believe is most responsive and governs best.

4. The GOP wants to undo the New Deal.

Never has it been so clear how devoted mainstream Republicans are to Social Security and to Medicare. Rep. Paul Ryan's budget actually does not reduce spending in absolute terms; it merely slows the rate of growth. Republicans, to the dismay of libertarians, have essentially accepted a large, vigorous federal government.

5. Republicans have a problem with women voters because of abortion.

The pro-life and abortion-rights divide is not gender-based. Moreover, Republicans tend to do fairly well with married women. (In 2004 President George W. Bush won married women by 11 points.) It is among single women that Republicans struggle. The reasons are complex, including Republicans' unwillingness to promise "Life of Julia" cradle-to-grave support.

6. The GOP is out to hurt the poor.

Liberals tend to equate the amount the federal government spends on the poor with concern for the poor. Liberals are also suspicious of the free market. Conservatives think exactly the opposite and point to welfare reform as the greatest social program enabling people to move from the dole to self-sufficiency. When, for example, Republicans want to follow the welfare reform model they do so in large part because they think these programs can be better managed by the states.

7. Republicans are against regulation.

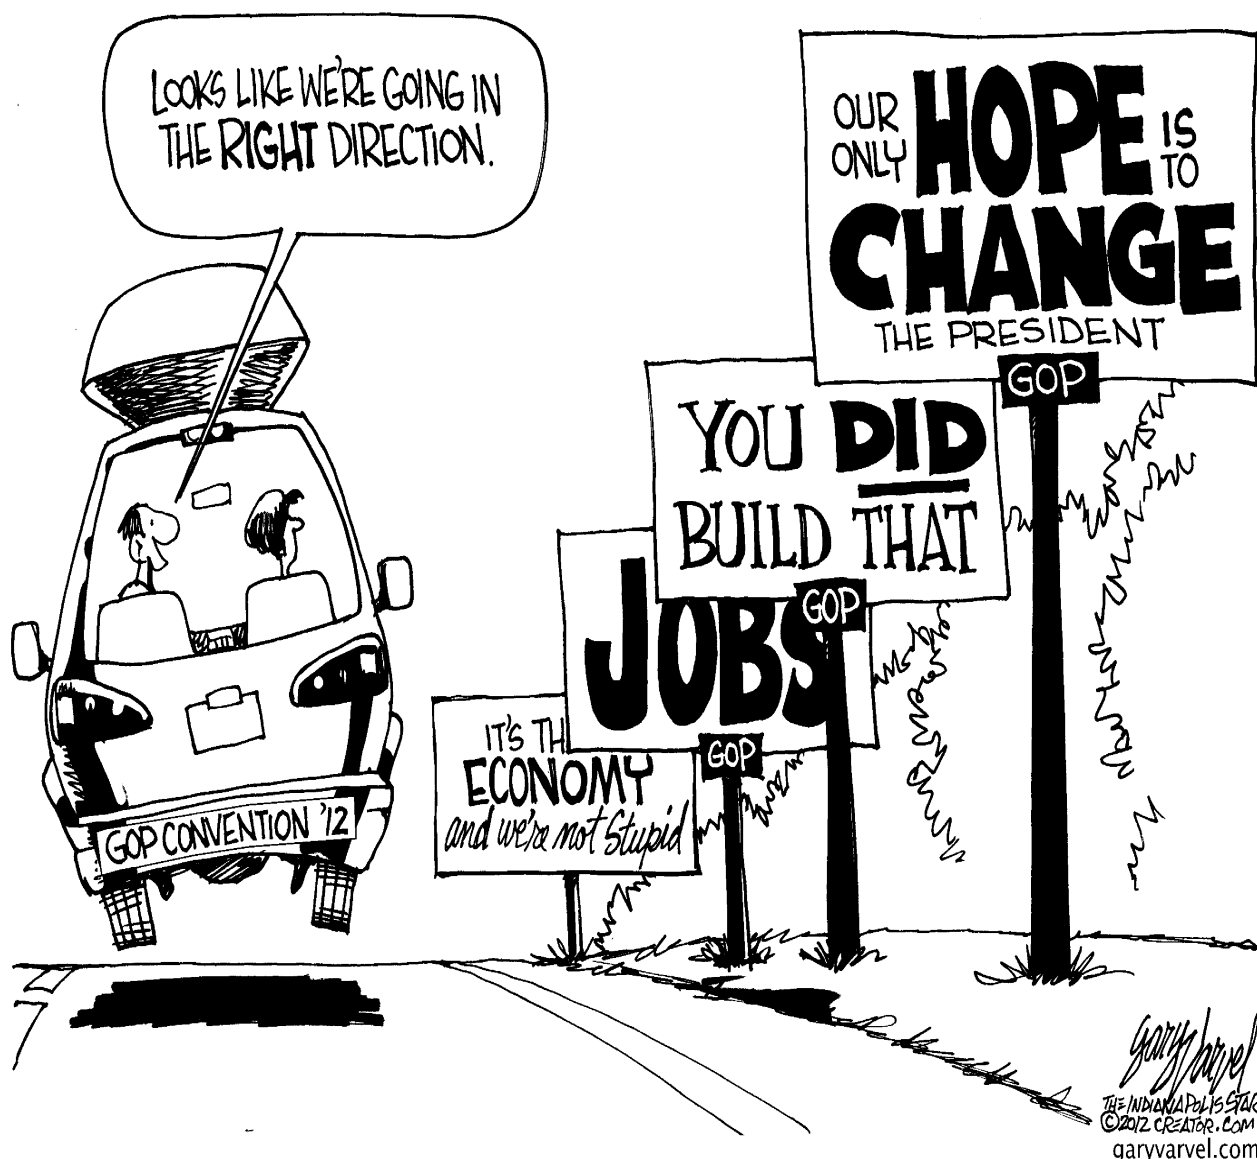

GOP presidents and Republican-controlled Houses and Senates over the years have not moved to do away with the SEC, FDIC, FDA, EPA or other regulatory bodies. What they object to is burdensome and/or irrational regulation.

8. The GOP's entire agenda is about tax cuts.

Obama says this quite a bit, but he's wrong on two counts. First, Republicans have plenty of other ideas, including domestic energy development, entitlement reform, school choice and increased trade. Moreover, Romney has explained that he wants tax reform (flattening of the rates and broadening the base), which would be revenue neutral.

9. The GOP is stuck in the past.

It is an odd charge from a Democratic Party that has reverted to a tax-and-spend pre-Bill Clinton philosophy. Republicans are the ones attacking the status quo in education, recommending innovations in Medicare and other entitlement programs and setting a goal for North American energy self-sufficiency by 2020.

Celebrate the 100th Anniversary of 4-H

From its conception, 4-H has been leading the way with positive youth development opportunities for youth outside of school.

Though it began primarily as an agricultural and home arts program, the 4-H Program has expanded to offer youth a wide variety of projects in areas like leadership, robotics, citizenship, entomology, hiking and woodworking. In fact, many examples of these projects are on display through Aug. 26 in the South Expo Building at the Western Idaho Fair in Ada County and all this week at the Twin Falls County Fair.

A 4-H project is a learning experience that is very rare in the world of youth activities. 4-H members are required to keep records of their project work, documenting their goals, expenses, community service activities, leadership experiences, and club meetings.

Brian Luckey

Ada County Extension Educator

They are required to present an oral presentation about some aspect of their project in a public setting. And they are required to present the completed project to a judge who will evaluate their growth throughout the year.

It is a very intense process, and one that encourages youth to develop a wide variety of life skills valuable to them for the rest of their lives.

As a University of Idaho Extension Educator, I talk to a wide variety of people who often tell me that they are amazed by the skills that youth learn in 4-H. A speech teacher once told me that he can always spot the 4-H members in his class because they have such polished presentation skills. A potential employer calling me for a reference on a former 4-H member told me that the 4-H member was "very impressive" in the interview process. And I find that a very large percentage of high school 4-H members attend college at the completion of their 4-H careers.

I am often humbled to meet people who are proud 4-H alumni. Gov. Butch Otter was a 4-H member in Ada County. Former Sen. Larry Craig told me that he was both a 4-H member and leader in Washington County 4-H. Many of our active 4-H volunteer leaders are themselves 4-H alumni. It seems that I cross paths with former 4-H members on a regular basis as colleagues and as successful professionals in the community. I am also an alum of Idaho 4-H and can attribute many of the skills I use in my daily life to my experience in the program.

As we enter into another 100 years, I am encouraged by the amazing young people with whom I work on a regular basis. They are truly our leaders of today. The University of Idaho Extension 4-H Program is alive and well in Idaho. We can always use more caring adults to help reach more young people in our community. I look forward to working with you in the future as a 4-H Volunteer.

Brian Luckey of Boise is the Ada County Extension Educator with statewide responsibilities in 4-H Youth Development.

ONLINE COMMENTS

The conversation continues 24/7 on Magicvalley.com.

A couple online readers took a moment to leave kind words on the obituary of Donald Ayre William Gibbons:

idcowgirl: "Don, you are one of a kind. You will truly be missed. I really enjoyed going to the auctions on Tuesdays, just to talk to you. You had a sense of humor that wouldn't quit. I will miss sitting there listening to your stories. You were one of a few that actually knew where Labarge, Wyoming is. I will always remember and love you for ever."

Serendipity79: "... Your kindness and wonderful sense of humor brightened many hours sitting at horse auctions or Tuesdays night auctions. Some of my favorite memories are of sitting between you and my Uncle Frank — two old cowboys who could not have been better company."

Online readers argue over the reasons in response to the article, "Two Twin Falls Restaurants to Close Sept. 30:"

IdahoHeathen: Downtown — where businesses go to die. I'm very sad to hear that one of the nicest places in town is closing its doors.

SnakeRiver: "Downtown - where businesses go to die." No, not true. Dunkens, Twin Falls Sandwich Shop, and Janitzio's are doing just fine. It's the type of businesses that go to die in downtown. Once downtown gets places like these (above) it will boom! What happened with Cucina Gemelli's is that it was very expensive. The food was great. The price was simply too high for the demographics here."

An online reader responded to a Times-News editorial, "OUR VIEW: A One Man Mission?"

Andre Leonard: "I salute Pastor Lopez and Victory House for an ideal mission of helping people turn their lives around. It's unfortunate that when dealing with people who have social, drug and alcohol related problems, you are faced with recidivism, those people who will fail and re-offend.

"City leaders have a difficult choice to make in balancing the needs of a viable program to help people who need a new start and re-entry into society and those property owners who believe it's a little too close for comfort. The property owners are likely to vote and their wishes should be considered.

"My own view is the location selected is the wrong location. A better location needs to be found."

Triple-digit Heat Sparks Mont. Fires

BILLINGS, Mont. (AP) • A new wave of wildfires ignited in eastern and south-central Montana Tuesday as forecasters warned that near-record temperatures and wind gusts up to 50 miles per hour could lead to explosive fire growth.

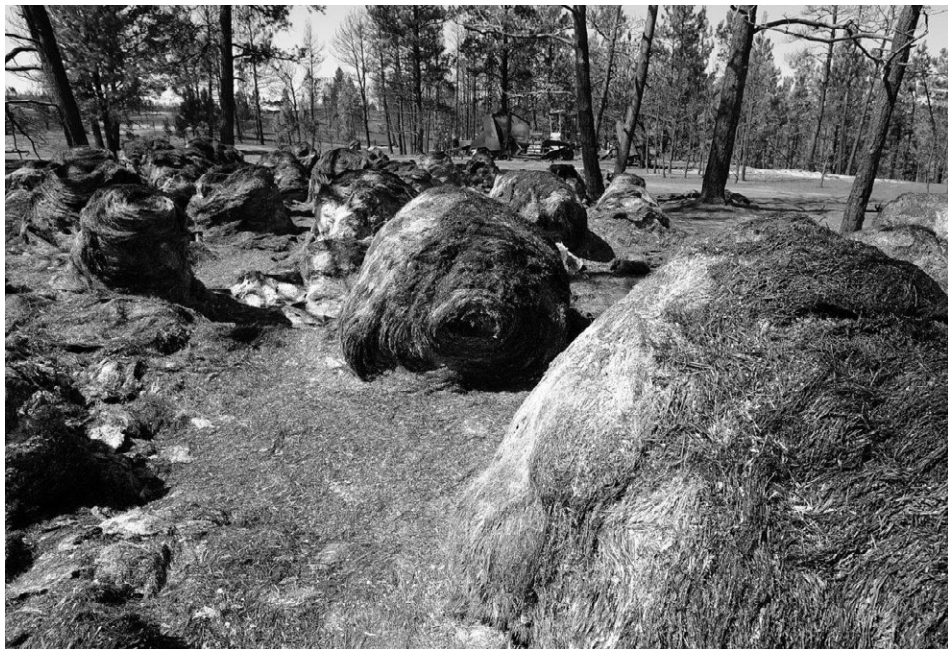

A 30-acre fire reported Tuesday afternoon about 6 miles southwest of Roscoe ballooned to 600 acres in just a few hours, said Paula Short with the state Department of Natural Resources and Conservation.

She said about 50 to 60 vacation homes in the Roscoe area were potentially threatened, although no evacuations were immediately ordered.

"This fire has tons of potential. It's got a lot of fuel out there, a lot of erratic winds," Short said.

Another new fire was reported on 70 acres in the Gallatin National Forest about 20 miles south of Bozeman.

North Dakota and northwestern South Dakota through today.

Forecasters cautioned against any activities that might produce sparks, warning that new fires could quickly take hold and existing fires could expand.

Temperatures hit the triple digits in parts of the parched region and were expected to climb even higher Wednesday. A cold front is expected to descend on the state by Thursday behind the gusting winds.

Crews were battling a fire east of Roundup that already had scorched 63 square miles.

Silver Valley Cleanup Could Cost $635M

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) • The massive cleanup of a century's worth of mining pollution in Idaho's Silver Valley would cost $635 million and take up to 30 years under a final plan approved by the federal government on Tuesday.

The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency released the interim Record of Decision Amendment, which details its proposal to clean up arsenic, lead and other heavy metal pollutants in the valley, which is located 50 miles east of Spokane.

"This will bring real human health and environmental protections in the basin," said Dan Opalski, director of EPA's Superfund office in Seattle. "This is an important milestone."

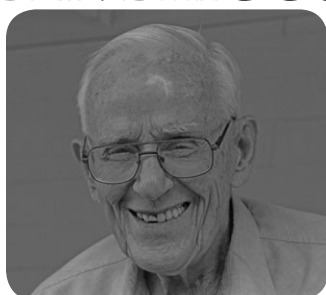

The EPA has already received written concurrence from the state of Idaho and the Coeur d'Alene Tribe, the other main players in efforts to clean up the Upper Basin of the Coeur d'Alene River.

The agreement follows disputes over the scope of the cleanup work, which in a 2010 proposal called for spending $1.3 billion over a time frame of some 50 years.

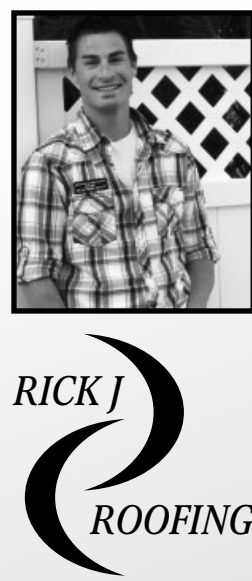

Earlier this year, the EPA proposed sharp cuts in the costs and time of the work. The changes were partially the result of a huge outcry from Silver Valley residents and Idaho politicians.

Hurricane Isaac can be seen Tuesday as it moves toward New Orleans over the Gulf of Mexico.

Isaac Builds to Hurricane, Makes Landfall

New Orleans waits out the storm, hoping its strengthened levees hold.

NEW ORLEANS (AP) • The Gulf Coast braced for the landfall of Hurricane Isaac late Tuesday, hunkering down behind boarded-up windows with stockpiles of food and water as wind-driven rain lashed bayous and beaches. New Orleans calmly waited out another storm on the eve of Hurricane Katrina's seventh anniversary, hoping the city's strengthened levees will hold. Isaac, a massive storm spanning nearly 200 miles from its center, zeroed in on New Orleans, turning streets famous for hosting celebrations at all hours into ghost boulevards. Evacuations were ordered in Mississippi's coastal counties and the closure of its 12 shorefront casinos. But there was little fear or panic. With New Orleans' airport closed, tourists retreated to hotels and most denizens of a coastline that has witnessed countless hurricanes decided to ride out the storm. "Isaac is the son of Abraham," said Margaret Thomas, who was trapped for a week in her home in New Orleans' Broadmoor neighborhood by Katrina's floodwaters, yet chose to stay put this time. "It's a special name that means 'God will protect us.'" Isaac, which strengthened late Tuesday to 80 mph winds and crossed land in southern Louisiana near the Mississippi River, drew intense scrutiny because of its timing to the Katrina anniversary and the first major speeches of a Republican National Convention in Tampa, Fla., already delayed and tempered by the storm. "We don't expect a Katrina-like event, but remember there are things about a Category 1 storm that can kill you," New Orleans Mayor Mitch Landrieu said, urging people to use common sense and to stay off any streets that may flood. Other officials, chastened by memories and experience, advised caution. Tens of thousands of people were told to leave low-lying areas. Many residents along the Gulf Coast opted to ride it out in shelters or at home and officials, while sounding alarm about the dangers of the powerful storm, decided not to call for the mass evacuations like those that preceded Katrina, which packed 135 mph winds in 2005.

New Gas Standard: 54.5 Miles per Gallon

THE WASHINGTON POST

WASHINGTON • The Obama administration will finalize strict new fuel-efficiency vehicle standards Tuesday, requiring the U.S. auto fleet to average 54.5 miles per gallon by 2025, according to individuals briefed on the matter.

The new rules, which expand on existing standards requiring American-made cars and light trucks to average 34.5 mpg by 2016, will significantly cut U.S. oil consumption and greenhouse gas emissions by the time they are fully implemented, the Environmental Protection Agency says. Unlike

It's Mitt: Romney Confirmed as Candidate

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) • Mitt Romney swept to the Republican presidential nomination Tuesday night at a storm-delayed national convention scripted to propel him into a close race for the White House in tough economic times. The former Massachusetts governor watched on television with his wife, Ann, at a hotel suite across the street from the convention hall as delegates sealed his hard-won victories in the primaries and caucuses of last winter.

New Jersey put him over the top in a ritual roll call of the states. Republican mockery of President Barack Obama began almost instantly from the podium at a convention postponed once and dogged still by Hurricane Isaac. The Democratic president has "never run a company. He hasn't even run a garage sale or seen the inside of a lemonade stand," declared Reince Priebus, chairman of the Republican Party. To send Romney and ticketmate Paul Ryan into the fall campaign, the convention quickly approved a conservative platform that calls for tax cuts — not government spending — to stimulate the economy at a time of sluggish growth and 8.3 percent unemployment. Ann Romney's speech was scheduled as a prime-time highlight, an appearance meant to cast her multimillionaire-businessman-turned-politician husband in a soft and likable light before a national TV audience. Aides said Romney would be in the hall when she spoke. While there was no doubt about Romney's command over the convention, the residue of a heated campaign for the nomination was evident inside the hall. Texas Rep. Ron Paul, who never won a primary or caucus, drew several dozen delegate votes. Earlier, his supporters chanted and booed after the convention adopted rules they opposed, but were powerless to block, to prevent those votes from being officially registered. Opinion polls made the race a close one as the Republicans' days of pageantry and speechmaking began in earnest, and the man tapped to deliver the keynote

GOP Platform Shifts through the Years

THE WASHINGTON POST

The word "abortion" does not appear in a Republican Party platform until 1976, when the party concedes it is deeply split between those who support "abortion on demand" and those who seek to protect the lives of the unborn.

The quest for lower taxes does not define Republicanism until the 1980s, and matters of faith play almost no role in the party's platform until the 1990s.

The Republican Party, viewed through its quadrennial platform documents, is consistently business-oriented and committed to a strong defense, but has morphed over the past half-century from a socially moderate, environmentally progressive and fiscally cautious perspective to a conservative party that is suspicious of government, allied against abortion and driven by faith.

Influenced by the rise of tea party activists, this year's platform has shifted to the right, particularly on fiscal issues. It calls for an audit of the Federal Reserve and a commission to study returning to the gold standard. There are odes of fidelity to the Constitution, but also a call to amend the Constitution to require a 2/3 majority in Congress to raise taxes.

House Speaker John Boehner (R-Ohio) expressed skepticism that the lengthy recitation has much meaning or function.

"Anybody read the party platform? I never met anybody," Boehner told reporters. He said the document should be no more than one page long. "That way, Americans could actually read it."

Party platforms are not easy reading. They are the meat missing from a campaign menu dominated by sweet and sour TV commercials. Platforms are aspirational laundry lists, packed with sops to every interest group that makes up a modern party. But in retrospect, they provide a pretty good guide to where the party is heading.

What it means to be a Republican has changed enormously over the past half-century. The GOP opposed a Palestinian state as late as 1992, went silent on the issue for eight years, but has endorsed the idea in its past two platforms. During the George H.W. Bush years, Republicans acknowledged global warming and boasted of efforts to commit billions in federal dollars to finding solutions. The party then spent two election cycles saying there was too much "scientific uncertainty" before finally accepting in 2008 that humans have a role in altering the planet's climate.

Many positions Republicans often tout as traditionally conservative are actually relatively new to GOP ideology. Indeed, although the party's stance on the issues has shifted rightward in the past 20 years, Republicans have studiously avoided using the word "conservative" in platforms.

For decades, the party presented itself as "moderate" or even "progressive." The 1960 platform, for example, touts "progressive Republican policies" such as "liberal pay" and urges that government "must be truly progressive as an employer."

Mitt

address set the stakes.

"Conventions are always huge for a challenger, because they're the ones introducing themselves" to the voters, said New Jersey Gov. Chris Christie.

Convention planners squeezed two days of speeches and other convention business into one after scrapping Monday's scheduled opener because of fears that Isaac would make a direct hit on the Florida Gulf Coast.

That threat fizzled, but it was instantly replaced by another — that Republicans would wind up holding a political celebration at the same time the storm turned its fury on New Orleans, devastated almost exactly seven years ago by Hurricane Katrina.

Romney's convention planners said they were in frequent contact with weather forecasters, but they declined to discuss what contingency plans, if any, they had to accelerate plans for him to deliver a formal acceptance speech

Thursday night.

"This is obviously the biggest speech of my life," Mrs. Romney said as she visited the custom-made podium to prepare for her remarks.

Ratification of a party platform was prelude to Romney's nomination, a document more conservative on abortion than the candidate.

many energy policies enacted under President Barack Obama, the vehicle standards are a relatively uncontroversial move embraced by industry and environmentalists alike.

Phyllis Cuttino, director of the Pew Clean Energy Program, said the fact that so many people now accept the idea of greater fuel efficiency does not lessen the rules' "historic" importance.

"We've just come a long way in five years," Cuttino said, noting that in 2007 lawmakers debated whether the U.S. fleet could average 30 mpg by 2025.

"This gives me hope for energy policy in this country?"

This second phase of standards, which apply to model years 2017 to 2025, will double the efficiency of the U.S. fleet compared with vehicles manufactured in 2008.

Tuesday's announcement by Transportation Secretary Ray LaHood and EPA Administrator Lisa P.

Jackson will mark the culmination of a compromise the White House forged between the auto industry, environmentalists, labor unions and the state of California.

California enacted its own greenhouse gas emissions standards several years ago, and battled the auto industry in court until the administration brokered a deal between all the parties in May 2009.

"Customers want higher fuel efficiency in their cars and trucks, and GM is going to give it to them," said Greg Martin, General Motors' executive director for communications. "We expect the rules to be tough, but we have a strong history of innovation, and we'll do our best to meet them."

and allowed them to help write bills that some lawmakers then tried to enact in their home states.

Western Union also has left ALEC, spokesman Tom Fitzgerald said.

GE, Sprint and Western Union were among those lobbied to quit the group by ColorofChange.org, a New York-based civil rights organization that has counted more than three dozen companies that have ended their ALEC memberships, including General Motors and Walgreens.

"These significant developments, coupled with recent withdrawals from ALEC by companies like Walgreens and GM, further prove that everyday people working together to hold corporations accountable can achieve tremendous change," said Rashad Robinson, executive director of ColorofChange.org.

A spokeswoman for Fairfield, Conn.-based GE, Lindsay Lorraine, said the company left ALEC "in connection with our ongoing review of the political and policy organizations we belong to."

Overland Park, Kansas-based Sprint was solely involved in telecommunications issues with ALEC and participated on a communications task force "to ensure that Sprint's voice is heard by state lawmakers," said John Taylor, a spokesman.

Kaitlyn Buss, a spokeswoman for ALEC, said Sprint "simply decided not to renew."

She has previously decried

"this corporate intimidation and bully campaign" to get companies to exit ALEC, saying it was "politics at its worst and should be ignored."

Those praising the departures included Bob Edgar, president of Common Cause, a Washington-based advocacy group that has challenged ALEC's tax-exempt status on the basis that it is a lobbying organization.

"Clearly the light bulb has gone on at General Electric that ALEC's extreme agenda is not good for business," said Edgar, a former Democratic congressman from Pennsylvania.

ALEC has been criticized for advocating the "Stand Your Ground" laws that allow individuals who feel threatened in a public space to fight back rather than retreat.

A state version of the law was cited by authorities in Sanford, Fla., when they didn't initially arrest George Zimmerman, who claimed self-defense in the February killing of teenager Trayvon Martin. Zimmerman, later charged with second-degree murder, has pleaded not guilty.

OBITUARIES

Bernard Leo Kreilkamp

March 11, 1916-Aug. 26, 2012

SEATTLE • Bernard Leo Kreilkamp died Sunday, Aug. 26, 2012, at Providence Mount St. Vincent in Seattle, Wash.

He was born March 11, 1916, in Princeton, Wis., one of six children born to Christian and Emma Kreilkamp. He received his premedical training at the College of St. Thomas in St. Paul, Minn., and his M.D. degree in 1941 from the University of Minnesota. He met Renee Rosenberger when he was serving as a junior intern at St. Mary's Hospital in Rochester, Minn.; she was a senior nurse on his floor. She took one look at him and said to a friend: "That is the man I am going to marry and have a dozen kids." He began his residency at the Mayo Clinic on Jan. 1, 1942, and Ben and Renee married nine days later.

With war looming, only one month after their wedding he enlisted in the U.S. Army Medical Corps and received only six weeks of aviation flight training to become a flight surgeon. He said he was not a surgeon and did not know how to fly, but he took care of the soldiers. He served in the South Pacific from 1942 to 1945 in the 68th Fighter Squadron for the 357th Fighter Group. One of his duties was to provide each pilot after his bombing run with two shots of whiskey. (He said some would save up their shots until after the fifth or sixth run.) He was stationed on a small island that was a mere 5,000 feet and an eighth of a mile wide, just big enough for an airstrip. The squadron was subject to numerous bombing raids, with nowhere to hide but a fox hole. He was awarded the World War II Victory Medal, the Asiatic-Pacific Campaign Medal, and the Philippine Liberation Ribbon, finishing his career in the military with the rank of major.

When he returned home in October 1945, his first daughter, Ann, was nearly 3 years old. He resumed studies as a Fellow in Internal Medicine at Mayo. Upon completion of his studies, he packed four children in a new car (purchased with borrowed funds) and headed west, only to drive into a blinding snowstorm during the great blizzard of 1948. The family abandoned the car in Nebraska and continued on by train to Twin Falls, Idaho, where a friend from medical school, Dr. Fred Kolouch, had settled and invited him to open his practice. Ben practiced medicine in Twin Falls for more than 20 years and was long active in medical affairs, serving as president of the Idaho Heart Association, the Idaho

Society of Internal Medicine and the Idaho Medical Association. He was chief of staff of Magic Valley Memorial Hospital. In Twin Falls, his parish was St. Edward's, where all of his eight children attended the parish Catholic school. The family moved to Ketchum/Sun Valley in 1970, where Ben practiced first in Sun Valley's Moritz Community Hospital and later co-founded the Ketchum Medical Clinic. After 38 years practicing medicine in Idaho, he retired in 1986. Not long after, Ben and Renee moved from Sun Valley to Seattle to be nearer their children and their growing families.

Ben was ordained a deacon in the Catholic Church in 1980, serving as a parish homilist, taking communion to the homebound, blessing the marriages of many of his offspring, baptizing a number of his grandchildren, and helping to bury many of his fellow parishioners. He served his ministry, with Renee at his side, in the parish of Our Lady of the Snows in Sun Valley, Idaho, and the Parish of St. Monica in Mercer Island, Wash. Ben and Renee celebrated their 70th year of marriage on Jan. 10, 2012.

He is survived by Renee; his brother, Hermes of Rensselaer, Ind.; sister, Rosemary of Madison, Wis.; eight children, Ann Kreilkamp of Bloomington, Ind., Marnie Schreck of Mercer Island, Wash., Paula Assaf of Baton Rouge, La., Katherine Kreilkamp of Seattle, Mary Cowan of Cheney, Wash., John Kreilkamp of Anchorage, Alaska, and Kristin Dixon of Seattle; 21 grandchildren; and 25 great-grandchildren.

A rosary will be offered at 10:15 a.m., with a funeral Mass following at 11 a.m. Friday, Aug. 31, at St. Monica Catholic Church in Mercer Island, Wash.

The family would like to thank the assisted living nurses on Floor 2 of Providence Mount St. Vincent: Annette, Angela, Kari, Kathrine, Linda and Sonya; as well as the Providence aides; and the Care-Force caregivers, Bether, Charity and Esther.

In lieu of Flowers, the family suggests a donation to St. Edwards Catholic Church in Twin Falls or the Ascension Priory in Jerome.

Brett Eugene Hall

Dec. 10, 1969-Aug. 26, 2012

GOODING • Brett Eugene Hall, 42, of Gooding, left us way too early Sunday, Aug. 26, 2012, at 7:30 p.m. surrounded by those who loved him. His pain was more than his body could bear and God said, "No more."

Brett was born in Buhl, Idaho, on a snowy winter night, Dec. 10, 1969, in the office of Dr. Vern Anderson. He couldn't wait to get into the world and, to our sadness, wouldn't wait to leave.

Brett began school in Buhl but graduated from Gooding High School in 1988. He attended classes at CSI, with the goal of teaching high school. Brett loved his children, his family, his friends, music and his dogs. Brett's love was always available for every person. Brett married Tracie Pruett in 1990, and to that marriage, were born three beautiful daughters whom he cherished. He later married Kathy Teater and loved the children who were added to his family through that union. In time, through changes that happen in life, he married Debbie Leija and inherited four of her children as sons and daughters.

Brett is survived by his wife, Debbie of Gooding; mother, Letty Beery (Jerry) of Gooding; father, Don Hall (Linda) of Prescott, Ariz.; brothers, Shane Hall of Twin Falls, Gary Beerly of Gooding and Rick Beerly of Washington, Utah. He is also survived by three lovely daughters, Jamie Hall, Hailey Craner (Jake) and Lucy Hall of Twin Falls. His newest loves were his granddaughters, Emyka Trey Hutchinson and Zoey Craner; and soon-to-be grandson, Brett Michael Craner. He is also survived by his beautiful nieces, Julia and Lacy; as well as other children that came into his life whom he embraced with all of his heart. Brett was preceded in death by his grandparents whom he cherished, Roy and Alice Davis Stricklan and Don and Bonnie Hall; and his much-loved uncle, Raymond Stricklan.

Brett's greatest attribute was love. He loved without condition from the day he was born until the Lord took him home.

There will be a memorial celebration for Brett at 10 a.m. Friday, Aug. 31, at the First Christian Church in Buhl, with a burial following at Buhl's West End Cemetery. He will rest with his grandparents and his uncle whom he loved deeply. We ask you all to join us in our celebration of his life.

SENIOR
My aunt is in her 70's and she has several very close friends. Two of these friends are quite a bit younger than she is, and the other is at least 15 years older! Are my aunt's relationships unique?
A. There is a chemistry to good friendships, and close bonds can and do form between people of any age! While most friends tend to be in your age range—plus or minus five years—common interests and passions can create the platform for strong friendships regardless of age differences. Experts tell us that intergenerational friendships are special: perspectives, life experiences, expectations, and stage of life challenges help to create new and different opportunities for thinking, talking and doing. Sometimes, an older friend can encourage faith and strength, while a younger friend can promote enthusiasm and the willingness to reach for dreams. What makes an intergenerational friendship work isn't all that different from a friendship between two people of a similar age: common ground, respect, caring, openness to sharing, and willingness to enjoy each other's company! A good friend of any age, and at any age, is a gift to be treasured. Your aunt is a fortunate person, indeed!

Cucina Gemelli to Close Sept. 30

TWIN FALLS • If you are a fan of Cucina Gemelli and Papa Hemi's Hideaway, make dinner plans soon. You have little more than a month left.

The companion restaurants — operating from a single kitchen in Twin Falls' historical warehouse district — will close Sept. 30.

During September, to thank their customers, the restaurants will host a series of specials on food and wine and provide entertainment.

Cucina Gemelli's lease was ended as building owner David Woodhead plans to retire and is looking to bring in a new tenant to the building.

"It's time to redefine what's going on down there," Woodhead said this week.

Plans for what will occupy the vacant storefronts is still in negotiation as Cucina Gemelli owner Dan Fuchs works with Woodhead in the transition.

Woody's Bar, which sits next to the two restaurants in another portion of the renovated warehouse, will remain open.

"The complete details are unclear; it's still in the planning stages," said Woodhead, who owns Woody's.

Known for showcasing local foods and products, executive chef Lynn Sheehan said she plans to cook a feast in honor of the restaurants' final day.

On Sept. 30, by reservation only, Cucina Gemelli will celebrate with its Last Sunday Supper, a fixed-price, multi-course dinner with paired wines available. Tickets are $59 plus

The Countdown

Cucina Gemelli and Papa Hemi's Hideaway are open from 5 p.m. to close Tuesdays through Saturdays at 233 Fifth Ave. S. in Twin Falls.

- From now to the end of September there will be 2-for-1 Happy Hour drink specials from 5 to 6 p.m. and from 9 p.m. to close. Expect other drink and food specials, too.
- Live jazz with Michael Frew and Friends is 7-10 p.m. every Friday; The Barking Owls will play bluegrass-inflected indie folk 6:30-9:30 p.m. Sept. 15, 22 and 29.

"We're going out in style, raising a toast to great friends, fans and the staff who've made it all possible," Sheehan said.

Feeding Time on the Elk Farm

BY TETONA DUNLAP
tdunlap@magicvalley.com

Lydia Miller touches the nose of an elk Aug. 22 on her family's Buhl elk ranch. The Millers, who started the ranch with seven elk, now manage 130-150 head.

BUHL • Tuesday is the first to saunter over, sniffing the air with her wet, black nose.

She knows it's feeding time without seeing a strand of hay.

Perhaps she was attracted by the familiar smell of diesel fumes, the rumbling of the truck's engine or the faces of those who bottle-fed her since birth.

Lydia Miller, 12, extends her hand, greeting the cow elk's head with her palm. Tuesday watches as Lydia uses a bucket to scoop from a large green pail on the back of the flatbed.

Hundreds of pellets hitting the bottom of a metal trough call the rest of the herd. Dozens of cows elegantly walk over, following the sound.

Lydia signals her mother in the cab of the truck with a "Yeah" so she can release the break and drive on. As the truck lurches forward, Tuesday is lost in the crowd of other elk with their heads in the trough.

Bumping over ruts and through mud, Lydia seems to hang on with ease, jumping out to open and close fences. Mom Erin Miller said the girl accompanies every feed, usually going out with her father, David Miller. But on Aug. 22, with him out of town on business, all three kids loaded into the truck with mom — Wyatt, 7, in the back with Lydia and 2-year-old Ally sitting shotgun.

The Miller Elk Farm, owned by David and Erin Miller, is in its 10th year of raising domestic Rocky Mountain elk as a source of healthy meat.

Elk meat is low in cholesterol and fat. According to Wapiti.net, the website of the North American

TWIN FALLS • For a man whose culinary expertise in graduate school was to pour the contents of a TV dinner tray over rice, Saaïd Dabestani has come a long way.

Saaïd whips around his Twin Falls kitchen Aug. 21 knowing exactly what he needs to do next without having to look at a recipe.

He uses an orange in half and then a lemon, placing each half in a juice press. Saaïd is making Sour Chicken Stew and it calls for a sour orange, an orange with a bitter flavor due to the higher acidic content. This type of orange is difficult to find in Twin Falls but is common in Iran, where Saaïd grew up.

So Saaïd works with what he can find in southern Idaho and mixes lemon juice with orange.

Saaïd's wife, Kathy Dabestani, assists her husband, keeping an eye on the chicken browning in a pot with onion, garlic and oil. When it comes to cooking Persian cuisine, Saaïd is head chef.

The recipe states three cups of water should be added to the browned chicken and simmered. But today Saaïd says he will add 2 1/2 cups.

"Eh, maybe a little more," he said. "I've done this so much I don't need to measure."

Saaïd first came to the U.S. in 1978 as a graduate student studying chemistry at the Colorado School of Mines.

It was also the first time Saaïd had to cook for himself. For the student far away from his home in Tehran, one of the first things he taught himself to cook was the food from Iran.

"Watch out, I'm a mad chemist," Saaïd says, warning Kathy as he dumps more water into the browned chicken.

"I need more water because chick-

Kathy remembers the first time Saaïd cooked for her. The outcome was more chemistry than food science.

It was their first date, and initially Saaïd planned to take Kathy to dinner at a restaurant. But everything was closed that Sunday.

So he cooked kabobs for her — with a very scientific approach, Kathy said. Saaïd knew that the meat needed to be plump, so to make sure this texture was achieved he added baking soda to the meat. As they ate, she said, they both had mouthfuls of foam. But she was already smitten.

Prepared Polenta: What It Is and How to Use It

BY J.M. HIRSCH
Associated Press

Most people consider polenta a restaurant food. That's because as good as this creamy, cheesy Italian staple is, few of us have the hour needed to crank it out.

But hidden on the grocer's shelves is a shortcut that can help get polenta on your dinner table any day of the week in minutes — prepared polenta. This is different — and far better than — a related product known as instant polenta. But first, some polenta basics.

Polenta is a traditional starch in Italian cooking, an alternative to pasta, rice and potatoes that pairs deliciously well with robust sauces and meats. Polenta is made by slowly simmering and stirring cornmeal with chicken broth or water. It usually also is seasoned with Parmesan cheese and butter.

Freshly made, polenta resembles a thick porridge. This variety often is topped with thick sauces, especially meaty ones. But if you let the polenta set up or chill a bit it becomes firm enough to cut into grill-worthy slabs or wedges. The trouble is the slowly simmering and stirring part of making it.

While there is a dry product called instant polenta (just add water!) that promises results in 5 minutes or less, it tends to be grainy and flavorless. The better choice is tube-style pre-cooked polenta, usually sold in the grocer's natural foods section. This product is ready to slice and toss on the grill, under the broiler or into a skillet to pan-fry.

It also can be reconstituted to its soft (porridge-like) form by heating it with a bit of liquid, such as milk or broth. For ideas for using prepared polenta, check out the Off the Beaten Aisle column over on Food Network: <http://bit.ly/Nfg8Ka>

Spicy Pork with Polenta

For the crushed pepper sauce, I used Pastene's Crushed Peppers. You'll find jars of it alongside other Italian ingredients or next to the jarred peppers. If you can't find that, substitute any jarred crushed pepper sauce, such as sambal. Start to finish: 45 minutes. Servings: 4.

- 1/2 cup mirin
- 1/4 cup crushed pepper sauce
- 1/4 cup seasoned rice vinegar
- 2 tablespoons soy sauce
- 1 pound thinly sliced pork cutlets
- 18-ounce tube prepared polenta, cut into chunks
- 1 cup milk
- 2 tablespoons toasted sesame oil
- 4 ounces crumbled feta cheese
- Salt and ground black pepper

In a large glass or stainless steel bowl, stir together the mirin, crushed pepper sauce, vinegar and soy sauce. Add the pork, toss, then refrigerate for 20 minutes.

Meanwhile, in a medium saucepan over medium heat, combine the polenta and milk. Stir until soft and heated through, 6 to 7 minutes. Cover and set aside.

In a large skillet, heat the oil over medium-high. Remove the pork from the marinade (reserve the marinade) and add to the pan. Brown the cutlets on each side for 3 to 4 minutes. Add the marinade from the bowl to the skillet and bring to a boil.

Stir the feta cheese into the polenta, then season with salt and pepper. To serve, spoon polenta onto each plate, then top with pork cutlets and sauce from the pan.

Adorable Yogurt Sandwiches: Addictive

STEPHANIE WITT
SEDGWICK

Special to The Washington Post

With imagination and gentle handiwork, it's easy to transform frozen yogurt, a stack of cookies and a few trimmings into adorable, sweet sandwiches good for adults and children alike. With just the right balance of cookie to yogurt to topping, these little treats are addictive.

The key is to find thin wafer cookies that are low in fat and calories, big on flavor and sturdy enough to stay in one piece when being pressed into a sandwich. Anna's Thins work fine, as do several other brands. When you press any cookie too hard, it will break, but freeze the sandwich anyway; once frozen, it will hold together and taste just as good.

When you're picking trimmings for the side of the cookies, make sure to go small. Nuts and dried fruits should be chopped into mini-chip-size pieces. Anything bigger won't fit.

The cookie sandwiches need to be wrapped and frozen for at least 1 hour and up to 4 days.

Mini Frozen Yogurt Sandwiches

Makes 12 mini-sandwiches.

- 2 cups vanilla nonfat frozen yogurt

24 thin wafer cookies, plus more in case of breakage

About 12 teaspoons any combination of mini chocolate chips, nuts, granola and dried fruit, finely chopped

Line a baking sheet with plastic wrap and place it in the freezer.

Remove the yogurt from the freezer and let it soften for a few minutes.

Don't wait long; it will defrost quickly. As soon as it is soft enough to work with, hold one cookie with its bottom side up and spread or lay a slice of the frozen yogurt over it. Cover the outside edge of the yogurt-covered cookie with the chips, fruit or desired garnish. Top with a second cookie, placed bottom side down, pressing just enough to make sure the top cookie is stuck to the yogurt. Immediately place the sandwich on the baking sheet in the freezer. Repeat to form a total of 12 cookie sandwiches. If the yogurt becomes too soft as you work, return it to the freezer to firm up before proceeding.

Allow the sandwiches to freeze for 45 minutes, then wrap them with plastic wrap and return them to the freezer for at least 1 hour and up to 4 days (wrapped individually and placed in a freezer-safe plastic food storage bag). Serve frozen.

Pluck Purslane for this Salad

THE WASHINGTON POST

You can make this bright, crunchy salad with wild-harvested purslane — chances are good you've got some growing in your yard — or cultivated "golden" purslane. Look for it at farmers markets or at Latin grocery stores, where it's labeled verdologas.

From Washington food writer Emily Horton.

Purslane, Cherry Tomato and Cucumber Salad

4 servings.

- 12 ounces purslane
- 3/4 pint (about 1 3/4 cups) Sungold cherry tomatoes or other cherry tomatoes, cut into halves (or quarters if they are large)
- 1/2 medium cucumber or 1 lemon cucumber, cut into thin wedges
- 1/4 cup extra-virgin olive oil
- 4 teaspoons red wine vinegar
- 1/2 teaspoon sea salt, or to taste

- 1/4 teaspoon cracked black pepper, or to taste
- 4 ounces semi-aged goat cheese

Rinse the purslane in plenty of cold water, drain it, strip the leaves from the stems and discard the stems. (It's okay if a few of the more tender bits of stem remain.) You should have about 3 1/2 cups of leaves.

Pat the leaves dry and transfer them to a medium bowl. Add the tomatoes and cucumber, and toss gently to combine.

Whisk together the oil and vinegar in a small bowl until emulsified; season with salt and pepper. Add the dressing to the purslane mixture and toss gently until the leaves are well coated. Divide among individual serving plates. Crumble the cheese over the salads and serve.

while he was pursuing his doctorate and she her undergraduate degree. An early miscommunication might have nipped their potential love, but it didn't. After all, Kathy noticed Saaïd immediately.

When she spotted Saaïd across the crowded bar in downtown Lincoln, it seemed like a spotlight was shining down on only him, Kathy said. She went over to ask if she could take the empty seat next to him.

Kathy said she felt rejected when he replied: no. But a waitress came over and told her that a guy wanted to talk to her. It was Saaïd.

"No, you can't take the chair," Kathy said he told her. "But you can sit here."

...

Kathy leaves the kitchen and comes back with a page from a chemistry book suspended in a glass case. It looks ordinary, but when she turns it over, written in pencil in the corner are her name and number. Saaïd had saved it all those years.

The Dabestanis celebrated their 34th wedding anniversary Aug. 12. They have a son, Javid, who is married with two children.

"It is a family tradition to go to the University of Nebraska and marry an alumni," Kathy says.

"Did you add saffron to the rice?" Saaïd asks Kathy.

"No, not this one," she replies.

"Ah ... that's okay," Saaïd says as he takes the Estamboli Polo — or rice with vegetables and tomato sauce — from the stove and flips it upside down over a plate. This technique frees the tahdig, or hard rice, from the bottom of the pot.

"You'll like this, it's crunchy, flavorful, you'll like it," Saaïd says.

The tahdig is served in a separate portion from the rest of the rice dish, and the Dabestanis often cook a tortilla on the bottom of the rice for an extra crunch. They eat the dish British style, using a fork and spoon, to scoop up all the rice.

Saaïd puts the finishing touches to the Sour Chicken Stew by cracking two eggs with a knife over a bowl, beating them and pouring them over the stew.

"The recipe says four, but use two. It's too much and becomes too solid," he says.

After the cooking is completed, what's on the Dabestanis' table looks like a feast but is a good representation of a lunch. The spread includes Estamboli Polo, Khoresh-e Morgh-e Torshe (sour chicken stew) and Persian Baklava, which is prepared differently than Greek baklava. Instead of honey, the Persian recipe uses syrup made with sugar, water and rose water. It has cardamom instead of cinnamon, and almonds and pistachio nuts with shell instead of walnuts.

To drink is hot Earl Grey tea brewed in a samovar — a Russian tea urn — and served in a glass cup decorated in silver-plated paisley along the bottom. A spoon made of twisted, silver-plated metal sits in the tea cup.

There is also a sour cherry fruit drink that is customary to give visitors on a hot day. The drink also comes in flavors such as quince, orange blossom and mint. It is made with syrup, water and ice. The Dabestanis buy the syrup, and most ingredients, from the

When introducing Americans to Iranian food, Kathy likes to make them Estamboli Polo.

Saaïd, who has been a wrestling coach at Twin Falls High School for 12 years, likes to host a fish head night, which strikes fear and intrigue into the hearts of his athletes. On that night, Saaïd prepares for them a meal of trout heads, which he said many end up enjoying. Growing up next to the Caspian Sea, Saaïd said, it is typical to eat fish at dinner.

"Iranians have a reputation for being hospitable," Saaïd says.

When the baklava is served, Saaïd insists a cup of hot tea accompanies it.

Saaïd said it is not every day that his wife makes baklava, only on special occasions. "So thank you for visiting!"

Khoresh-e Morgh-e Torshe (Sour Chicken Stew)

Recipe courtesy of Saaïd and Kathy Dabestani.

- 4-6 chicken thighs
- 1 small onion, chopped
- 2 cloves garlic, minced
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1/4 teaspoon black pepper
- 1 bunch scallions, chopped
- 1 bunch cilantro, chopped
- 1 bunch parsley, chopped
- 1/2 cup chopped fresh mint
- 3/4 cup fresh orange juice

- 1/4 cup fresh lemon juice
- 1 tablespoon rice flour (can substitute all-purpose flour)
- 1/4 cup yellow split peas
- 2 eggs

In a 4-quart pot, brown chicken with onion and garlic in 3 tablespoons of oil. Season with salt and pepper. Add 3 cups water and let simmer, covered, for 30 minutes.

Saute the scallions, cilantro, parsley and mint in 2 tablespoons of oil. Set aside. Mix the juices together and dissolve the rice flour in the juices. Set aside.

Add the yellow split peas, sauteed herbs and juice mixture to the chicken. Cover and simmer until the chicken is done and the split peas are cooked. Taste sauce to adjust seasoning.

Just before serving, beat the eggs in a bowl and add to the simmering stew, stirring constantly. Serve on top of cooked rice.

Estamboli Polo (Rice with Vegetables and Tomato Sauce)

Recipe courtesy of Saaïd and Kathy Dabestani.

- 1 onion, chopped
- 4 tablespoons plus 1 tablespoon oil
- 1 1/2 to 2 pounds stewing meat of lamb or beef, cut into 1/2-inch cubes
- 3 tablespoons tomato paste
- 1 can diced tomatoes
- 1 medium potato, cubed
- 1 can cut green beans
- 1 carrot, chopped
- 1/4 teaspoon turmeric
- 1/2 teaspoon cinnamon
- 1 teaspoon plus 2 tablespoons salt
- 1/4 teaspoon black pepper
- 3 cups uncooked long-grain rice
- 1/4 cup butter

In a deep saucepan, brown the onion and meat in 4 tablespoons of oil. Add tomato paste and tomatoes, 1 cup water, potato, green beans, carrot, turmeric, cinnamon, 1 teaspoon salt and pepper. Cover and simmer on medium-low heat until the meat is tender and vegetables are cooked. There should be very little liquid left.

Bring 8 cups of water and 2 tablespoons of salt to a boil in a large pot. Pour in rice. Stir. Boil on medium-high heat for about 6-7 minutes, stirring every two minutes during this cooking stage. Drain the rice in a colander.

In the now empty and clean rice pot, place a sheet of foil to cover the bottom. The foil should come up the sides slightly. Melt 1/4 cup butter with 1 tablespoon oil. Add 1/2 cup water. On top of this place 1/3 of the rice, then a layer of 1/2 the meat mixture. Repeat layering with the second 1/3 portion of rice, the remaining 1/2 portion of meat mixture and the last 1/3 of the rice. Cook over medium-high heat until water begins to steam. You may add a little more water if needed to create some steam.

When steam appears, place a paper towel over the pot and cover firmly with the lid to prevent the steam from escaping. Cook over medium-low heat for 45 minutes. Remove from heat and cool for 5 minutes without opening. Remove the lid and place an inverted pizza-size plate on top. Then flip the pot and plate at the same time so that the rice falls onto the plate. Remove the foil. Serve immediately.

For the filling: Chop nuts very fine in a food processor. Add sugar and cardamom; set aside.

For the syrup: Place water and sugar in a small pan. Boil on medium heat for 15 minutes. Remove and add rose water; set aside.

Layering: Melt 2 sticks butter in a small pan. With a pastry brush, butter a 9-by-13-inch pan. Lay in 1 leaf of dough and brush the entire leaf with butter. Layer another leaf and brush top with butter. Sprinkle a thin layer of nut mixture to cover leaf. Place another leaf on top and butter. Place second leaf on top; butter. Sprinkle a thin layer of nuts. Repeat the pattern (2 dough leaves, 1 layer of nut mixture) until the dough and nut mixture are used up.

Bake at 350 degrees for 20-25 minutes or until light brown on top. Pour syrup over the baklava as soon as it comes out of the oven. Cut and serve when cooled.

It's even better on day two. Store in an air-tight container.

Elk Breeders Association, elk meat has 1.45 grams of fat per 100-gram serving compared with beef's 24.05 grams of fat per 100-gram serving.

Erin laughed when asked her favorite elk recipe. She said they like cooking the meat the most unhealthy way: sprinkling it with flour, salt, pepper and other seasonings and frying it so it's nice and crisp on the outside while tender inside.

The Millers have always been hunters, tracking these creatures in the mountains rather than seeing them in pens in their fields.

"It was so weird to have them so close and on the hoof," Erin said. "We didn't know you could raise the darn things."

There were a couple of reasons the Millers started farming elk, whose antlers arch above their heads like crowns. Erin said they wanted to help wild elk numbers by raising domestic ones instead.

"It might be the only way our grandchildren or great-grandchildren can see them," Erin said. The Millers welcome groups, classes or individuals to their farm to learn more about elk, but reservations are required at 208-539-9562.

Another big reason: They wanted to give people who couldn't go hunting access to healthy venison.

In 2002, the farm started in Jerome with seven head of elk — one bull and six cows — and it has multiplied to almost 150. Now in Buhl, it butchers from three to 18 elk a year for meat; last year it butchered 18. Elk meat is sold at about $4.50 a pound by the whole or half animal, and it can be either self-processed or custom processed through B & L Meats in Buhl. No elk are allowed to leave the farm alive unless they are being shipped to another farm or to a USDA plant to be processed.

You won't find any packets of ready-to-purchase elk steaks at the farm, because they don't butcher enough to send them to a processor, Erin said.

On average the Millers spend about $250 to $350 a year per head in hay, feed, supplements and vaccinations. Similar to beef, elk are given vaccinations — but not during a few months before they go to the butcher.

ED GLAZAR • FOR THE TIMES-NEWS

But no elk will be used for meat right now because it's almost rutting, or mating, season for the elk on the Miller farm, just like it is for their counterparts living in the West's mountains.

Next spring will bring even more mouths to feed, which means some will need to be butchered or sold.

If a cow under 8 years old hasn't had a calf for two years she usually is butchered. Cows are usually sent to market between the ages of 4 and 8 years, and bulls between ages 3 and 4.

The orange sun hovers over the skyline, as hay dust floats from bales wrapped in twine. A storm yesterday left the fields moist, and several times the tires on the truck momentarily sink into the ground. The tread cuts across the field of grass like a finger sliding across green frosting, revealing the brown cake underneath.

The gentle cows are fed first, then the young bulls, with nubs or forked antlers growing straight up. The last are the bulls with velvet hanging from their antlers like clumps of brown moss. Though they seem docile, flocking to the truck, they still push away less aggressive bulls, heads lowered, ready to battle. Nearby cows chirp at them as they eat.

Feeding the whole lot pellets and hay takes about 2 1/2 hours. Hay is given to them only every three days. In the winter they don't eat the hay as much because in the wild they are used to not grazing during that time.

There are some elk, like Tuesday, who will never be used for meat. Four permanent pets on the elk farm — Tuesday, Syringa, Babe and Aspen — were all bottle-fed and are very comfortable around the family. Tuesday's twin, June, died shortly after birth.

"Deer have twins all the time. With elk it's harder on them," Erin says, adding that deer often bed down with their young, forming a bond, but elk won't and often forget they have two babies.

Erin often has a hard time keeping count on the farm.

"Ever since we went past 40," she says, "I've lost track."

Fresh Inspiration for Delicious, Well-dressed Dogs

BY J.M. HIRSCH

Associated Press

Plenty of people surely will disagree, but I firmly believe that underdressed hot dogs simply aren't worth the calories.

If all you're going to do to a hot dog is drizzle some ketchup, splurt some mustard and spoon some relish on it, it's not worth the effort to eat. I favor a well-dressed dog, a hot dog accompanied by robust and inspired toppings that transform this classic summer food into so much more.

As such, my preferred hot dogs tend to be on the overflowing and messy side. But that's why they are summer food, so you can eat them outside.

But just because they are overflowing and messy doesn't mean they shouldn't have a plan. I like to draw inspiration from other dishes when planning the toppings for a hot dog. An Indian curry, for example, is a fine starting point when selecting toppings. Same for Greek spanakopita (spinach and feta cheese pie), pizza and tacos.

THE CURRY DOG

One part Indian curry, one part all-American dog, this frankfurter isn't afraid of big, bold flavors. There's not a whole lot of work involved in this hot dog, but the potato roll is key. It not only has a crazy good taste and texture, it's also a subtle nod to the potatoes added to so many more authentic curry dishes. Paneer, a heat-resistant Indian cheese that can be grilled, usually is found in the grocery's international or specialty cheese aisles.

• Drizzle a bit of canola oil

MATTHEW MEAD • ASSOCIATED PRESS

over 4 hot dogs, rolling them to coat evenly. Sprinkle the hot dogs evenly with curry powder (mild or spicy, to taste). Grill the hot dogs, as well as 4 small slabs of paneer, over medium heat. Grill the cheese for 3 minutes, flipping once, or until nicely browned on both sides. Toast 4 potato hot dog buns on both sides. Finely chop the grilled paneer and fill each toasted bun with some. Place a hot dog over the cheese, then spoon mango chutney over the top. Garnish with chopped fresh cilantro. Serves 4.

THE GREEK DOG

Inspired by the gobs of feta cheese and spinach that are layered into classic spanakopita, this hot dog has the big, robust flavors of Greek food.

• Thaw 1 cup of loose-packed frozen shredded spinach, then squeeze it over the sink to remove as much water as possible. In a large skillet over medium-high, heat a splash of olive oil. Sauté the spinach, a diced medium yellow onion and 2 minced cloves of garlic. When the onion is tender, season with salt, pepper and dill seed. Grill 4 hot dogs and toast 4 hot dog buns over medium heat. Spoon some of the spinach mixture into each bun, then place a hot dog over it. Top with crumbled feta cheese and, if desired, a bit of purchased tzatziki (Greek yogurt dip — sold alongside the hummus). Serves 4.

THE PIZZA DOG

Because the only way to make meat-wrapped meat better is to add melted mozzarella cheese.

• Using 2 slices of prosciutto per hot dog, wrap 4 hot dogs tightly in prosciutto. Grill the hot dogs over low heat, turning regularly, until the prosciutto is crisp and lightly browned, about 8 minutes. Meanwhile, fill 4 hot dog buns with bocconcini (small balls of fresh mozzarella). Toast the buns on the grill (bun opening facing up) until the cheese is warm and starting to melt. Place a hot dog in each bun, then top with oil-packed chopped sun-dried tomatoes and chopped fresh basil. Serves 4.

THE TACO DOG

Soft and crunchy and spicy and creamy — exactly the way a taco should be.

• Spoon refried beans into 4 hot dog buns. Lightly crumble about 12 tortilla chips, then sprinkle some over the refried beans in each bun. Grill 4 hot dogs over low heat. Toast the prepared buns (bun openings facing up) until the beans are heated. Place a hot dog in each bun, then top with sliced jalapeno peppers, tomato salsa, sliced black olives and shredded cheddar cheese. Serves 4.

Slather Tomato Butter on Sandwiches

THE WASHINGTON POST

With about 150 tomato plants in her garden, Seneca, Md., resident Nan Fuhrman says she has become "a somewhat renowned tomato-based chef." She and her husband throw an annual tomato party for some 100 friends and family members for which she sometimes makes as many as 35 tomato dishes. This is one of them.

Fuhrman serves it on Melba toast or crackers; we would also slather it on sandwiches as a substitute for mayonnaise or ketchup.

The tomato butter can be made a week in advance, covered and refrigerated. Bring it to room temperature before using.

Tomato Butter

Makes about 1 cup.

3 tablespoons extra-virgin olive oil (may substitute coconut oil)
1/2 large Vidalia onion, finely chopped (about 3/4 cup)
2 pounds dark, pulpy tomatoes, such as Black Pear variety, stem end sliced off and discarded, juice and seeds squeezed or scraped out and discarded
1 teaspoon sweet Hungarian paprika

1 teaspoon light brown sugar
1/4 teaspoon salt
3/4 teaspoon mesquite-flavor liquid smoke

Heat the oil in a large, heavy skillet over medium heat. Add the onion and cook until translucent, about 5 minutes. Cover, reduce the heat to medium-low and cook until the onion is soft, stirring occasionally, about 10 minutes. Stir in the tomatoes, paprika, brown sugar and salt. Cook uncovered until the mixtures thickens to the consistency of jam, stirring frequently and using a wooden spoon to break any large pieces of tomato, about 30 minutes.

Transfer the mixture to a blender; remove the center from the blender lid and place a towel over the opening to contain splashes. Puree the mixture until it is smooth (strain, if desired, to remove any bits of skin), then add the liquid smoke and blend on low speed. Transfer to an airtight container to cool to room temperature, then cover and refrigerate. Per tablespoon: 35 calories, 0 g protein, 3 g carbohydrates, 3 g fat, 0 g saturated fat, 0 mg cholesterol, 40 mg sodium, 0 g dietary fiber, 2 g sugar.

Can Lemon Juice Make Raw Egg Safer?

BY KATHLEEN PURVIS

The Charlotte Observer

Question: I was given a dessert recipe that included raw egg whites and lemon juice. I remember being told that lemon juice "cooks" raw eggs, but I'm still reluctant to use it. What do you think?

Answer: I think that's taking a pretty big risk. It's impossible to predict the acidity in a fresh lemon, so you really don't know what the effect would be.

To double-check, I asked Benjamin Chapman, a food safety expert with N.C. State University and the North Carolina Cooperative Extension. He agreed that the acidity in the lemon juice might not affect salmonella if it is already present in the egg.

More importantly, though, salmonella is only one pathogen that can be present in raw egg. Others, such as E.coli, are acid-tolerant. So if E.coli was introduced while you were making the dish, it could grow despite the lemon juice.

The best practice for that kind of recipe is to use pasteurized eggs, other shell eggs or a liquid-egg product, and to make sure you keep the dessert refrigerated. Or you could just skip that recipe and find something else to make.

Pickled Tomatoes Are a Bright Surprise

THE WASHINGTON POST

Try these tangy, fresh, quick pickles on burgers or in salads, to brighten a sandwich or to serve as a side dish.

They're best made with summer tomatoes, but Audrey Genova suggests using this recipe year-round to rescue hothouse tomatoes from blandness. She says that substituting rosemary for the dill turns the tomatoes into a nice accompaniment for pork or lamb. She also recommends making the pickles with a quart of sweet cherry tomatoes, to be served with salami and cheese as an appetizer or tossed into a salad.

The recipe can be easily cut in half.

The pickles can be refrigerated for 2 to 4 days, depending on the firmness and ripeness of the tomatoes. The softer and riper they are, the more their texture will suffer with longer storage. From Genova, of Bristow, Va.

Kicked-Up Pickled Tomatoes

Makes about 3 cups.

3 to 4 large tomatoes (20 to 24 ounces total)
1 small to medium red onion, sliced very thin
1/4 cup chopped dill
1 teaspoon salt
1/4 cup sugar
1 1/4 cups white balsamic vinegar
4 bay leaves, preferably fresh
1/2 teaspoon whole black peppercorns
1 teaspoon crushed red pepper flakes (may substitute 1 small whole chili pepper)

Core the tomatoes and cut them into 1/4-inch-thick slices. Layer the tomatoes, onion and dill in a heat-resistant (preferably glass) 24-ounce or larger container with a tight-fitting lid, or in 2 smaller containers.

Combine the salt, sugar, vinegar, bay leaves, peppercorns and crushed red pepper flakes or chili pepper in a small saucepan over medium heat, stirring until the sugar has dissolved. Pour the mixture evenly over the tomatoes and allow it to cool at room temperature for 20 minutes.

Serve immediately, or cover and refrigerate for 2 to 4 days.

Greek Chicken Saute Uses Up Green Beans

STEPHANIE WITT
SEDGWICK

Special to The Washington Post

The flavors are Greek; the cooking method is Chinese. The fusion results in a dish that is full of flavor. It's a good way to use up late-season green beans, which can be a little tough.

It's also one of those dishes that seems to improve as its sits and doesn't need to be piping hot. It's good even at room temperature, so get it ready and then relax for a few minutes until it's time for dinner. If it gets cold, re-heat just until warmed through.

Serve over rice, noodles or lightly toasted slices of Italian bread.

Greek Chicken, Tomato and Green Bean Saute

4 or 5 servings.

Salt
1 pound green beans, trimmed and cut into 1-inch pieces
2 tablespoons mild olive oil
1 pound boneless, skinless chicken breast halves, trimmed and cut into strips 1/4-inch thick and 1 to 1 1/2 inches long
1 medium (4 or 5 ounces) onion, diced (1 cup)
3/4 pound plum (Roma) tomatoes, peeled and seeded, then cut into 1/2-inch dice (1 cup; see note)
Finely grated zest and freshly squeezed juice of 1 large or 2 small lemons (at least 1 1/2 teaspoons zest, 3 tablespoons juice)
Freshly ground black pepper

SARAH L. VOISIN • THE WASHINGTON POST

1/2 teaspoon sugar, or to taste
1 cup homemade or no-salt-added chicken broth
1 tablespoon cornstarch
3 tablespoons chopped dill
3/4 cup (3 ounces) crumbled feta cheese

Bring a medium pot of salted water to a rapid boil over medium-high heat. Have a large bowl of ice water and a clean, dry towel at hand.

Add the beans to the pot and cook for 6 minutes, then drain the beans and immediately transfer them to the ice water. Let the beans cool for 5 minutes, then drain them and transfer them to the towel to dry. Heat 1 tablespoon of the oil in a large nonstick saute pan or skillet over medium-high heat. Working in batches to avoid crowding, add the chicken to the hot oil. Cook for 2 to 3 minutes without stirring until the chicken browns. Use a spatula or tongs to turn the chicken pieces over; cook for 2 to 3 minutes. Transfer the chicken to a clean plate. Repeat with the remaining chicken until all of it is cooked.

Add the remaining tablespoon of oil to the saute pan or skillet and reduce the heat to medium. Add the onion and a pinch of salt; cook, stirring, for 5 to 6 minutes, until the onion is soft. Add the tomatoes and lemon zest. Season with salt and pepper to taste; mix well and cook, stirring, for 2 minutes. Stir in the sugar and broth. Increase the heat to medium-high and bring to a boil; cook for 3 minutes, then add the green beans and par-cooked chicken and stir to combine. Cook for 3 minutes.

Whisk together the lemon juice and cornstarch in a small bowl, then stir it into the chicken mixture until it has thickened.

Remove from the heat; stir in the dill and feta. Taste, and adjust the seasoning as needed. Let it sit for 15 minutes before serving.

Note: To peel tomatoes, bring a medium saucepan of water to a boil. Have ready a bowl of ice water. Cut an "X" in the bottom of each tomato and remove the stem. Working with one at a time, place the tomato in the boiling water for 15 seconds. Use a slotted spoon to quickly transfer it to the ice water. The skin should simply slip off.

Ditch Burgers and Do a Healthy Salmon on Labor Day

BY SARA MOULTON

For The Associated Press

Labor Day generally gets people thinking about grilling up the last of summer's burgers and steaks. Allow me to suggest setting aside tradition in favor of a leaner alternative, namely, a full-bodied fillet of salmon. And topping it off is not a slice or two of cheese, but a robust, chunky, vegetable-packed vinaigrette.

You won't be sorry. And you won't miss the burgers and steak.

Salmon's richness always cries out for a little acid, even if it's nothing more than a squeeze of lemon. This recipe's gazpacho vinaigrette ups the ante. Gazpacho is a cold Spanish soup with many variations, but the basic recipe is a refreshing tomato-based vegetable soup. Here I've added extra-virgin olive oil and sherry wine vinegar, thereby repurposing the soup into a chunky vinaigrette dressing.

It was delicious. And unlike a traditional vinaigrette, it didn't need much oil.

Vinaigrette is a balancing act of oil and acid, usually with a 3-to-1 ratio of oil to vinegar. As a salad addict, I'm always searching for ways to lighten a dressing. One of the best tricks is to swap in a strongly flavored ingredient for at least some of the oil. In the past I have used chicken and vegetable broths quite successfully, as well as buttermilk and tomato juice. Here, I let those beautiful late summer tomatoes do the job.

As for the salmon, even if you don't plan to eat the skin (it's delicious!), you should grill it with the skin on. It crisps beautifully on the hot grates and acts as a buffer between the grill and the flesh. As long as the skin's on, the fish won't stick to the grill and the meat remains succulent. I cook the salmon for the majority of the time on the skin side and then give it a just few minutes on the flesh side to pick up grill marks and flavor.

How do you know when the salmon is done? You stick a paring knife through it. If you feel heavy resistance at the center, it needs more time. If you feel just a little resistance, it is still slightly undercooked. I take it off the grill when I feel just a little resistance and let it sit for a few minutes. The residual heat will finish cooking it.

Your labor complete, you can plate up your fillet, pour yourself a cold beer or a dry white wine, and soak up just a little more summer before it disappears again for a year.

Grilled Salmon with Chunky Gazpacho Vinaigrette

Start to finish: 30 minutes (20 minutes active). Servings: 4. Sara Moulton was executive chef at Gourmet magazine for nearly 25 years, and spent a decade hosting several Food Network shows. She currently stars in public television's "Sara's Weeknight Meals" and has written three cookbooks.

1/2 red bell pepper, diced

1/2 pound ripe tomatoes (about 2 medium tomatoes), diced
4-inch piece English cucumber, diced
Kosher salt
1/2 clove garlic, smashed
1 tablespoon sherry vinegar
Ground black pepper
2 tablespoons extra-virgin olive oil
Four 6- to 8-ounce pieces center-cut salmon or arctic char fillets, skin on Olive oil cooking spray
Chopped fresh herbs (such as basil, chives, tarragon, cilantro or parsley), to garnish (optional)

Heat the grill to medium. In a medium bowl, toss together the pepper, tomatoes, cucumber and 1/2 teaspoon of salt. Mix well, then spoon half of the mixture into a blender.

To the blender, add the garlic, vinegar, a few grinds of pepper and the olive oil. Puree until smooth. Add the puree to the bowl of diced vegetables, stir well and season with salt and pepper.

Use paper towels to pat dry the salmon fillets. Spray the fillets all over with the olive oil spray, then sprinkle them with salt and pepper. Arrange the fillets, skin side down, on the grill grate over direct medium heat. Cover and cook until the flesh right next to the skin looks opaque, 6 to 7 minutes.

Flip the fillets and cook until just cooked through, another 2 to 3 minutes. Transfer the fish from the grill using a wide metal spatula.

To serve, divide the sauce between 4 shallow bowls, then set a piece of salmon over each, skin side up (you can easily peel off and discard the skin at this point, if desired). Garnish with chopped herbs, if desired. Per serving: 450 calories; 260 calories from fat (58 percent of total calories); 29g fat (5 g saturated; 0 g trans fats); 115 mg cholesterol; 6g carbohydrate; 40 g protein; 1 g fiber; 360 mg sodium.

Dinner in 30 Minutes: Lobster Pies

BONNIE S. BENWICK
The Washington Post

The simple and buttery version of this dish has been served at the Maine Diner in Wells, Maine, for the past quarter-century or so. Here, we made the shopping list a bit easier on your wallet by adding a bit of moist, grated vegetable to the lobster filling. And we cut back on the butter. You won't miss it.

If you buy lobster that has been freshly steamed at the store, the preparation is clean and simple; if you choose to boil your own, you'll need the meat from two 1 1/4-pound lobsters; allow for an extra 15 to 20 minutes.

The green tomatillo augments the lobster flavor here, but it can be omitted.

This can be made in a 1-quart baking dish as well. If you're not pressed for time, the dish can be assembled, covered and refrigerated up to 8 hours in advance. Allow to come to room temperature for 1 hour before baking.

Serve with a salad. Adapted from "Lobster! 55 Fresh and Simple Recipes for Everyday Eating," by Brooke Dojny (Storey Publishing, 2012).

Ritzy Lobster Pies

cooked lobsters
1 teaspoon lobster tomatillo (optional)
2 lemons
1 medium yellow squash or zucchini
16 low-sodium Ritz crackers, plus a few more for texture (optional)
6 tablespoons (3/4 stick) unsalted butter
1/3 cup seafood broth or clam juice
Water (optional)

Kosher salt
Freshly ground black pepper
Small handful of flat-leaf parsley leaves, for garnish

Preheat the oven to 425 degrees. Have two or three 12- to 16-ounce ramekins or heatproof gratin dishes at hand.

Chop the lobster meat into chunks to yield about 2 cups, transferring it to a mixing bowl along with the teaspoon of tomatillo, if using.

Finely grate the zest from 1 lemon to yield 2 teaspoons, and reserve it. Squeeze enough juice from the zested fruit to yield 2 tablespoons, right over the lobster meat in the bowl. Cut the remaining lemon into wedges for serving. Trim off and discard the ends of the squash or zucchini, then use the large-holed side of a box grater to grate it, yielding about 1 1/2 cups (do not squeeze out any moisture). Add the grated vegetable to the lobster meat and lemon juice, mixing to incorporate, then divide evenly among the ramekins or gratin dishes, mounding the mixture as needed. Crush the crackers to yield 1 cup of crumbs; if desired, crush 2 or 3 more and keep separate to apply just before baking.

Melt 4 tablespoons of the butter in a large skillet over medium heat. Add the cracker crumbs and stir to coat; cook for about 4 minutes, stirring, until fragrant and lightly toasted. Stir in the lemon zest.

Taste the broth or clam juice; if it seems too salty, dilute with water. Stir into the cracker crumb mixture.

Taste, and season with salt and pepper as needed. Use the mixture to evenly and completely cover the lobster mixture in each ramekin or baking dish. If desired, sprinkle the extra dry, crushed crackers evenly over the top of each portion. Bake for about 10 minutes or until just heated through.

Meanwhile, melt the remaining 2 tablespoons of butter in the microwave on HIGH. Finely chop the parsley.

Carefully transfer the hot lobster pies to individual plates. Sprinkle with the parsley leaves and serve with lemon wedges. Pass the melted butter at the table for drizzling on each portion.

Reinvent that Tired, Uninspired Casserole

THE WASHINGTON POST

Recipes for this casserole, usually made with frozen shredded hash brown potatoes, condensed cream of chicken or mushroom soup and a butter-soaked topping of crushed cornflakes, are all over the Internet as well as on the back of some frozen-potato packages. This version uses fresh potatoes, does away with the canned soup, cuts back on the butter and sour cream and substitutes crushed tortilla chips for cornflakes.

It makes for a rich but irresistible side dish.

Packaged shredded cheese is often coated with powdered cellulose to keep it from clumping, so shredding your own is a better choice here. Fresh potatoes are preferable; use frozen shredded potatoes (coated with dextrose) if you want, but defrost them first. For best results, use the large shredding disk on a food processor to prep the fresh potatoes.

The casserole can be assembled, covered and refrigerated without the topping a couple of days in advance. Put the topping on just before baking. From columnist David Hagedorn.

Potato Casserole

8 to 12 servings.

2 chicken bouillon cubes
1 cup heated chicken broth, preferably homemade
3 tablespoons unsalted butter
1/2 large yellow onion, finely chopped (1 1/4 cups)
2 large cloves garlic, coarsely chopped
2 tablespoons flour
1/2 teaspoon freshly ground black pepper
8 ounces sharp cheddar cheese, shredded (2 cups)
1 cup regular or low-fat sour cream
2 pounds russet potatoes, peeled
1 cup crushed tortilla chips

Preheat the oven to 350 degrees. Grease a 9-by-13 baking dish with non-stick cooking oil spray.

Place the bouillon cubes in the hot broth and stir until they have dissolved.

Melt the butter in a medium saute pan over medium-high heat. Add the onion and garlic; cook for several minutes, until the onion begins to soften but not brown. Stir in the flour and pepper and then the broth, allowing the mixture to thicken for a minute or two, stirring constantly. Transfer the mixture to a large bowl and allow to cool. Stir in the cheese and sour cream.

Coarsely shred the potatoes in a food processor fitted with the large shredding disk. Add them to the cheese mixture as fast as possible so they don't have a chance to discolor. Make sure the mixture is well combined and spread it evenly in the baking dish. Top with crushed tortilla chips; bake for 50 minutes, until the casserole is bubbling around the edges. Allow to rest for 5 to 10 minutes before serving.

Tropical Slaw Steers away from Mayo

STEPHANIE WITT SEDGWICK
Special to The Washington Post

This fruity slaw veers far from the standard mayonnaise-based ones, with its combination of sweet mango, pineapple and red cabbage tossed in a light vinegar dressing. The assembled dish needs time for the flavors to meld and for the cabbage to soften. After several hours, the tropical juices mix with the vinegar, and the cabbage is just right.

This slaw goes great with simple grilled or broiled fish, honey-glazed pork tenderloin and spice-rubbed chicken.

The slaw is at its best when made ahead of time. It should sit in the refrigerator for at least 2 hours or, preferably, overnight.

Tropical Fruit Slaw

Makes 6 cups (about 8 servings).

8 ounces fresh pineapple, cut into cubes, 1/2-inch or smaller (about 1 1/2 cups, 1/2 of a pineapple)
Flesh of 1 large, ripe mango, cut into cubes, 1/2-inch or smaller (about 1 1/4 cups)
12 ounces red cabbage, cut into 1/2-inch dice (4 cups, about 1/2 of a cabbage)
3 scallions, white and light-green parts, finely chopped (about 1/4 cup)
1/3 cup finely chopped cilantro leaves

1/4 cup apple cider vinegar
3 tablespoons mild olive oil
2 teaspoons sugar
Kosher salt
Freshly ground black pepper

Combine the pineapple, mango, cabbage, scallions, cilantro, vinegar, oil and sugar in a large bowl. Season with salt and pepper to taste. Mix well. Cover and refrigerate for at least 2 hours or, preferably, overnight.

Taste, and adjust the seasoning as needed. Serve at room temperature.

An Easy, Healthy Shrimp Dish Steamed on the Grill

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

When we think of steaming, we generally think stovetop cooking. And during the heat of summer, that can make this very healthy form of cooking seem very unappealing.

But the folks at Cooking Light magazine have come up with a simple way to enjoy a delicious steamed dinner without the fuss (or heat) of indoor cooking. For this deliciously spicy shrimp, black bean and corn dish, they use the grill to get the job done. The results are quick and easy, and you don't need to heat up your kitchen.

The trick is using heavy duty foil to create a packet in which to cook the food on the grill. By crimping the edges of the packet, the liquid in the food stays inside, turning to steam and cooking the food quickly, while also keeping it moist. And while this recipe calls for doing the entire dish in one large packet, it would be easy enough to create smaller packets and divide the ingredients among them (adjust cooking time if you do).

And this same technique works on other seafood (scallops and haddock would be delicious), as well as chicken.

Grilled Fiesta Shrimp

Start to finish: 20 minutes. Servings: 6. Recipe from "Cooking Light Way to Cook: Grilling," Oxmoor House, 2012.

2 pounds raw peeled large shrimp
1 tablespoon olive oil
2 teaspoons Creole seasoning, divided
1/2 cup (2 ounces) shredded Mexican-blend cheese or cheddar cheese
1/2 cup canned whole-kernel corn with sweet peppers, drained
3 tablespoons chopped fresh cilantro
15-ounce can black beans,

rinsed and drained
4 cups cooked long-grain rice, hot

Heat the grill to medium-high.

Arrange the shrimp in the center of a large piece of heavy duty foil. Drizzle the oil over the shrimp, then sprinkle it with 1 teaspoon of the Creole seasoning. Toss to coat. Top the shrimp with the cheese, corn, cilantro and beans. Sprinkle the remaining teaspoon of Creole seasoning over everything. Fold the opposite ends of foil together over the ingredients to form a loose bundle. Crimp to seal.

Place the foil packet on the grill. Cover and cook for 10 minutes, or until the shrimp are done. Serve over hot cooked rice.

This Appetizer Shows Off Crab

THE WASHINGTON POST

The lightly dressed crab shines in this pretty appetizer, which is finished with a tangle of mixed greens and small local or cherry tomatoes.

You'll have leftover vinaigrette, which can be used to dress any fresh greens. Adapted from a recipe by Mark Salter, chef-owner of the Robert Morris Inn in Oxford, Md.

Crab Crostini with Maple-Mustard Vinaigrette

4 servings.

For the crab salad:

1/4 cup mayonnaise
1/2 teaspoon Old Bay seasoning
2 teaspoons freshly squeezed lemon juice
1/4 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
1/2 teaspoon powdered mustard, preferably Colman's
8 ounces jumbo lump crabmeat, picked over to remove shells and cartilage
1 1/2 tablespoons diced yellow bell pepper
1 1/2 tablespoons thinly sliced scallions, white and light-green parts

For the vinaigrette:

1 tablespoon Dijon-style mustard
4 tablespoons coarse-grain mustard
2 teaspoons sherry vinegar
1/4 cup maple syrup
1/4 cup light olive oil
For assembly:
1 mini baguette (about 8 inches)
1 tablespoon olive oil
Salt
Freshly ground black pepper
2 cups mesclun or spring

mix
3 large small local tomatoes or cherry tomatoes, cut in half

For the crab salad: Combine the mayonnaise, Old Bay, lemon juice, Worcestershire sauce, powdered mustard, crabmeat, bell pepper and scallions in a medium bowl; fold together carefully, trying not to break up the lumps of crab. Cover and refrigerate to chill slightly.

For the vinaigrette: Combine the mustards, vinegar and syrup in a medium bowl. Slowly add the light olive oil, whisking continuously until the dressing has emulsified. The yield is about 3/4 cup.

For assembly: Preheat the oven to 375 degrees. Cut 12 slices from the baguette that are a scant 1/2-inch thick. Brush or drizzle them with the oil, then season with salt and pepper to taste. Transfer to a baking sheet and bake for 10 minutes, until crisp. They may be slightly browned on the edges. Allow them to cool.

Toss the mesclun with about 1 tablespoon of the vinaigrette in a small bowl. Pile 1/2 cup of the dressed greens on each plate.

Spoon the crab salad onto the crostini; arrange 3 crostini on each plate, surrounding the salad. Add 3 tomato halves to each serving and season lightly with salt and pepper. Salad Showcases Lump Crabmeat

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Seamus Mullen's masterful command of bold flavors shines in this simple summer salad of corn and jumbo lump crabmeat from his new cookbook, "Hero Food" (Andrews McMeel, 2012). The fresh flavors of both ingredients are set off by the addition of briny pickled shallots and creamy avocado.

Corn and Crab Salad

Start to finish: 20 minutes. Servings: 4.

4 ears white sweet corn, husks removed
Zest and juice of 1 lemon
1 tablespoon Champagne vinegar
1 clove garlic, grated
5 tablespoons olive oil
1/2 pound jumbo lump crabmeat (pick through to remove bits of shell)
Handful cherry tomatoes, halved
1 English cucumber, skin on, halved lengthwise and sliced into half-moons
1/4 cup pickled shallots (see recipe below)
1 avocado, peeled, pitted and diced
Salt
Ground black pepper
Aleppo pepper
Handful fresh basil leaves, torn into large pieces
Leaves from 1 branch fresh tarragon, torn

Bring a large pot of salt water to a boil. Add the corn and blanch for 2 minutes. Remove the corn from the water and set aside until cool enough to handle.

Once the corn can be handled, cut the kernels off the cobs. To do this, stand each ear on its wide end and saw down the length of the cob with a serrated knife. Turn and repeat until all of the kernels are removed. Set aside.

In a large serving bowl, combine the lemon zest and juice, the vinegar and garlic. Mix well, then whisk in the olive oil. Fold in the corn kernels, crabmeat, tomatoes, cucumber, pickled shallots and avocado, being careful as you mix so as not to mash the ingredients.

Season with salt, black pepper and Aleppo pepper, then garnish with fresh basil and tarragon. Per serving: 410 calories; 250 calories from fat (61 percent of total calories); 28 g fat (3.5 g saturated; 0 g trans fats); 50 mg cholesterol; 30 g carbohydrate; 18 g protein; 6 g fiber; 440 mg sodium.

Pickled Shallots

Start to finish: 40 minutes. Makes 1 cup.

1 cup cider vinegar
1/2 cup water
2 tablespoons sugar
1/2 tablespoons mustard seeds
1/2 tablespoon black peppercorns
1/2 tablespoon coriander seed
1/2 tablespoon fennel seed
1/2 tablespoon guindilla pepper
1 sprig fresh thyme
1/2 sprig fresh dill
1 clove garlic
3 shallots

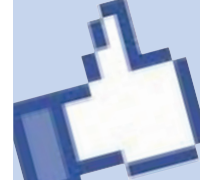

To make the pickling liquid, in a medium saucepan over high heat, combine the vinegar, water, sugar, mustard seeds, peppercorns, coriander, fennel, guindilla pepper, thyme, dill and garlic. Bring to a boil, then reduce the heat and simmer for 20 minutes. You should have about 1 cup of liquid. Strain out and discard the solids. Use a mandoline to slice the shallots paper-thin. Add the shallots to the pickling liquid and simmer for 2 minutes. Remove the pan from the heat and let steep for 10 minutes. Can be used immediately or refrigerated, covered, up to a week.

Star Chefs Turn to Mexican Haute Cuisine

BY ADRIANA GOMEZ LICON
Associated Press

MEXICO CITY • Christopher Kostow foraged in the open stalls of the Mercado San Juan, the most gourmet of Mexico City's crumbling, pungent public markets, as vendors hawked: "This way, this way! What can we offer you?"

Kostow, whose Restaurant at Meadowood in Napa Valley has three Michelin stars, wanted to sample the diversity of the country's fresh ingredients: gray oysters from Baja California, lychee-like hairy rambutan from southern Chiapas, and bags of red flying ants from Oaxaca.

Like other top chefs from around the world, Kostow comes to study and experiment with the purity of ingredients and flavors in real Mexican cuisine, now a top export commodity that was dismissed for decades as tortillas suffocated in heavy sauces, cheeses and sour cream.

"I don't know if you come to Mexico to learn what's new, but rather you come to Mexico to learn what's old," said Kostow, referring to the ancient cooking traditions of the country's many indigenous groups. "There are flavors of great depth, and there are techniques that are pretty challenging."

Though the movement has been slow, Mexico in the last few years has with difficulty earned the respect enjoyed by an Italy or France as a destination for the world's foodies, be they superstars such as Kostow, who was crowned America's best new chef just three years ago, or curious foreigners in sandals writing food blogs and leading mezcal-tasting tours. Mexico's diverse terrain, from deserts and coastlines to cloud forests and jungles, has produced a vast range of flora and fauna that since pre-Hispanic times has provided the ingredients for dishes that vary by ecosystem. It's the perfect model for the new global trend to cook "paleo," using basic ingredients such as fish, vegetables and roots, and eat local.

In Mexico, that includes worms, grasshoppers and insect larvae, long considered caviar-like delicacies that are now being introduced to a wider world.

"A lot of people that I know are sort of turning their eyes to Mexico as a new place where a lot of innovation is going to happen," said Lars Williams, the research director of the Nordic Food Lab in Copenhagen, Denmark. "It's going to be a very strong player in the culinary world."

Star chef Alex Stupak, who runs a high-end taco joint in New York, visited a Mexico City street food stall in July and made a cellphone recording of cooks kneading masa dough to make huaraches, thick oval tortillas topped with cheese and steak resembling the leather sole for which they're named.

He is experimenting with pasta made from the same dough.

"We are trying to get the right consistency," Stupak said.

Up-and-comer Rosio Sanchez, a Mexican-American pastry chef at Copenhagen's Noma — recently named the best restaurant in the world in a poll of more than 800 restaurant industry leaders — made her signature Gammel Dansk dessert, substituting the Danish liqueur with tequila and bathing the creamy whey in bitter cactus juice.

The movement's leaders include Mexican chef Enrique Olvera of Pujol restaurant, a pioneer in the country's rediscovery of its authentic cuisine. He has been featured in local magazines as a young yet influential cook who has managed to modernize Mexico's pre-Hispanic food traditions in an elegant way.

His menu includes tostadas with escamoles, or ant larvae, and green mole made with different types of ubiquitous Mexican herbs cultivated since Aztec times, known as quelites, that can range in taste from spinach salty to minty.

LIONS THINKING BIG IN 2012 SEASON

TWIN FALLS • At just after 5:30 p.m. on a Monday afternoon, members of the Lighthouse Christian volleyball team make their way from the dressing room to a large metal warehouse in the backmost part of the church/school's property. It's in the midst of a renovation, with steel framing separating the storage areas from the playing areas. In what will be the gym portion there's a volleyball net spanning a section of Sport Court that's well worn and bordered by weightlifting equipment, football tackling dummies and portable basketball hoops.

The lighting isn't great, and it's oppressively hot on this particular day, but it's still home. "It beats some of the other places we've had to practice at," senior opposite Andrea Helman says.

For now, Lighthouse Christian is a team without a gym — the Lions have practiced here and at other churches in the area, and they play their home games at Robert Stuart Middle School — but like their current practice spot, they're building toward something they hope is great. A fourth-place finish at the 1A Division II state tournament last year, combined with every starter returning, has the Lion faithful thinking big things could be in store in 2012.

"Since we were younger we've kind of been thinking that this could be the year we do something special," Helman says. This volleyball team and the Lions football team were in a race last season to see which could win the school's first state athletic trophy. The girls won that race, but the boys got the shinier hardware after they won the state title. "Our girls are very driven to try and get a state title this year, to show the boys that they aren't the only ones who can achieve that," Tobie Helman, the Lions' volleyball coach, half-jokes.

She's serious about the state title part, as are the players. Several Lions have played together on the high school team the last two seasons, and they also participated on a club team along with Katelyn Peterson, who led Camas

County to three straight state titles and is now starting for the University of Idaho as a true freshman.

Of course, that means Camas County is the standard both in the classification, as well as in the Northside Conference. The Musers delivered a stern reminder of that fact, beating Lighthouse Christian in straight sets last week.

"I think we came in there and we weren't expecting them to play as well as they did," senior setter Brynli Wooten says. "But we'll learn from that and work together to be better."

The way the league structure is set up, that loss won't matter too much when the

Canyon Ridge Holds Off Improving Jerome

BY DAVID BASHORE
dbashore@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • Jerome is going to take its lumps early, and perhaps often, in the 2012 girls soccer season.

Canyon Ridge gave the Tigers another lesson Tuesday, this one in finishing chances.

The Riverhawks made more of their opportunities than did Jerome, topping the Tigers 3-1 in the Great Basin Conference opener for both teams.

Rosalba Ramirez's quick-fire double in the space of six first-half minutes proved to be the difference, as she clinically handled two opportunities — the first on a rebound and the second on a breakaway.

"The first one I guess I just felt that (the goalkeeper) wasn't going to hold it very easily and I was there to put it in the net," Ramirez said. "The other, I saw there was a through-ball and I just ran as fast as I could."

Ramirez put herself in good positions early and often in the match, drifting around the field to find pockets of space where she could run onto passes and stretch the Jerome defense.

Jerome wised up and packed the center of the field, restricting traffic and motion. It worked more often than not, and the Tigers got themselves back into the game when Ashley Cox scored on a long free kick shortly before the end of a half that Canyon Ridge largely controlled.

The Riverhawks continued to press to start the second, but for the last 20 minutes it was Jerome that piled on the pressure. Players tried different ways to pick the lock of Canyon Ridge's defense, and the Tigers should have equalized but couldn't find the net on three opportunities.

Then Alex Jahns, who assisted on Ramirez's second goal, finished Jerome off with 10 minutes to play. Ramirez whiffed on a cross and it fell right to Jahns, who stabbed it into the net.

"That (third goal) hurt us a little bit, but it's not to say the way we want it to," said Cox. "I thought today we communicated a lot better than we have before, and we were always keeping our heads up and making ourselves available for passes. It's getting better."

Burley Outlasts Declo in Five

BY RYAN HOWE
rhowe@magicvalley.com

BURLEY • Separated by two classifications, but just 10 miles, Burley High and Declo High have established a nice Cassia County volleyball rivalry.

Last year, Class 2A Declo bested its big-school counterpart in four sets. On Tuesday, Burley returned the favor, dispatching the Hornets in five, 23-25, 25-17, 25-22, 14-25, 15-9.

Chelsea Baker had 14 kills and Allison Hepworth had nine kills and 18 assists for Burley (1-1). Baylee Robins added 17 assists, while Brooke Bowers had eight kills.

It was a tight match, but not necessarily a pretty one as each team struggled with streaky passing and ball control.

"We're not as consistent as we want to be," said Burley coach Don Terry. "We played some good ball in stretches, but we just didn't put it together. It looked like an early-season volleyball game."

Since a few Burley players missed the season opener last week, this was the Bobcats' first match with a full Declo (1-2) got 12 kills from Bailey Wilson and nine kills from Krissy Coats. Kelcie Carpenter dished out 23 assists.

After dropping the second and third sets, the Hornets seemed to grab momentum back with a dominating fourth set. But it all quickly evaporated as Burley scored the first four points of the fifth and Declo couldn't recover.

"When we were good, we were good. When we were poor, we were struggling," Declo coach Kerri Wilson said. "Once the girls focused, that fourth game is when I really saw my team come out and play the game of volleyball. They were in control of the ball, they were covering, passing the ball, everything. It was because they had the will to win."

2012 Prep Volleyball Capsules

CLASS 4A GREAT BASIN CONFERENCE

Three-time reigning GBC champion Twin Falls is a youth-ful team but still one of talent. Sierra Starley, Kiaya Moffitt and Regan Harr are among those tipped to hold the fort while the spine of the Bruin defense gains experience. ... Jerome may be best positioned to finally break the Bruins' grip on GBC supremacy. The Tigers have eight seniors returning, including twins Stephanie and McKenzie Martens. ... Minico has a big hole left by the graduation of Chelsea Hepworth, the 2011 Great Basin Conference MVP. The Spartans will need juniors Hannah Bailey and Kailee May to step into bigger roles. ... Burley has several players returning with varsity experience, including seniors Brooke Bowers, Ciera Page and Lexi Crane. Allison Hepworth is Burley's top returning player. ... Wood River will start four sophomores and need to build experience quickly. Kori Paradis and Lily Richards are a couple seniors the Wolverines will lean on. ... Canyon Ridge has five returning players, including Keri Schwarz and Kennedy Bell. But the Riverhawks are still looking for some younger players to step up.

CLASS 3A SCIC

Filer is looking to put it all together this year, with a class of experienced seniors like Sierra Koyle and Cassidy Ferrell, as well as a talented junior group headed by Sarah Sharp and Katie Trammell. ... Reigning champion Buhl has four players returning from last year's squad, including Annie Lauda and McKayla Lively. The Indians have a lot of newcomers to varsity play, however, which could be a concern. ... Kimberly returns six players for its 6-2 offense, including outside hitters Katy Robinson and Heidi Funk. Not terribly deep, the Bulldogs could be a title threat if they stay healthy and consistent. ... Gooding made state in the 2A ranks last season, but a return to the 3A ranks means a much tougher conference, let alone division.

CLASS 2A CANYON CONFERENCE

Declo won the district championship last season and has stud outside hitter Bailey Wilson back, along with Mariah Duncan and Kelcie Carpenter. Youth may take its toll early but this team is talented and deep. ... Oakley boasts height and athleticism in the form of middle blocking duo Mallory Critchfield and Paige Cooper, both of whom scored at the state high jump finals in May. ... Glenns Ferry returns a handful of players that tasted success at this year's state basketball tournament, hoping to translate that into more volleyball achievement. ... Wendell is incredibly young under first-year coach Norm Rock, who came over from Richfield. The Trojans will rely on sophomore Kassity Kelley and junior Michelle Ponce. ... Valley is hoping to put some consistency together after an up-and-down start to the season.

CLASS 1A DIVISION I SNAKE RIVER CONFERENCE

Out of the local teams in the division, Hagerman is perhaps best positioned for big things. The Pirates return most of their team from last year, including 6-4 middle blocker Aly Sauer and setter Hayley White. ... Raft River will also make things interesting the SRC, returning all-conference contenders Wynter Holtman and Sydney Hitt, along with libero Taryn Whitaker. Past that the Trojans aren't terribly experienced. ... Shoshone has a wealth of experience with setter Jessie Simonson and middle hitters Christy Race and Diana Vaught. But the Indians need to replace two outside hitters and find aggressiveness. ... Hansen is improving under second-year coach Babes Kalulu. Jenna Harris is one of the names to watch for the Huskies.

CLASS 1A DIVISION II NORTHSIDE CONFERENCE

As the three-time reigning state champion, Camas County is the beginning of any discussion in the Northside. Katelyn Peterson is gone, now starting at Idaho, but Stephanie Moore and Whitney Hurlless are among those trying to prove it wasn't a one-person act. ... Dietrich has Kendra McConnell, Charley Bingham and Cheyenne Hubert all back, but most of the Blue Devils' returners are playing different positions this season, so it's almost like a brand new team. ... Murtaugh is low on numbers, with only about 10 players in the program, but Brooklyn Worthington and Angelica Gonzales will look to provide leadership. ... Carey, Castleford, Community School and Richfield did not submit information for this report.

AP's 2012 College Football Guide

ASSOCIATED PRESS

PHOENIX • College football is in for some big and, some say, much-needed changes with the switch to a four-team playoff.

Before we get to that, there's still a couple more seasons under the current system; the playoffs don't begin until 2014.

And this one will be worth watching.

There's plenty of interesting story lines, from Penn State trying to rebuild in the wake of the Jerry Sandusky child sex-abuse scandal to Urban Meyer's return to coaching with Ohio State.

There's no shortage of great players, either.

Southern California quarterback Matt Barkley skipped the NFL for the chance at a national title, Michigan's Denard Robinson is a blur even without his shoelaces tied and Wisconsin's Montee Ball is like trying to tackle a wrecking ball.

Great teams? Could be a few of those, too. USC, LSU, Alabama, Oklahoma, Oregon — the BCS could be under a lot of strain this season with those teams all bidding for No. 1.

So to get you ready, we've got a rundown of some of the things to watch out for this season.

Enjoy.

Top Teams

USC. Barkley is back. So is his top target, Robert Woods. Former Penn State running back Silas Redd was a nice addition. Postseason eligible again, the Trojans aren't aiming for just any bowl; they want a trip to Miami and national championship.

Alabama. The Crimson Tide have won two of the past three national championships. They figure to be contenders for another.

LSU. The Honey Badger is gone. All those other NFL prospects — such as defensive end Sam Montgomery and safety Eric Reid — should keep the Tigers from missing him.

Oklahoma. The Sooners have a record-setting QB in Landry Jones, a brick wall of an offensive line and with the return of Mike Stoops, Bob's feisty little brother, they should be good on defense, too.

Oregon. LaMichael James and Darron Thomas are gone? Big deal. The Ducks have plenty of other players who can fly in those new winged uniforms.

Keep an Eye On

Arkansas. QB Tyler Wilson and RB Knile Davis are back, coach John L. Smith has calmed the storm after Bobby Petrino's motorcycle crash and subsequent firing. All Arkansas has to do now is get by Alabama and LSU — its only two losses a year ago — which isn't as farfetched as you might think. Both visit the Natural state, one early (Alabama on Sept. 15) the other late (LSU the day after Thanksgiving)

Florida State. The Seminoles' return to prominence has been rumored for years. Under coach Jimbo Fisher, it may actually happen this season.

Wisconsin. The Badgers are hungry after consecutive Rose Bowl losses and they have Ball, one of the nation's best running backs.

Michigan State. Behind RB Le'Veon Bell, the Spartans could be on the verge of breaking a Rose Bowl drought that goes back to 1988.

Texas. Mack Brown's crew appears to be headed back to the big stage behind a helmet-rattling defense.

West Virginia. The Mountaineers could make their first season in the Big 12 championship worthy.

Top Players

Barkley, USC. Projected as a high NFL draft pick, Barkley became an instant Heisman Trophy front-runner when he announced he was coming back for his senior season.

Ball, Wisconsin. The Badgers' star running back changed the pronunciation of his name from Mon-tee to Mon-tay. Whatever you call him, dude's good.

Robinson, Michigan. The Wolverines' electric quarterback has churned out more than 8,000 yards in his career, most of those the past two seasons. Imagine what he could do if he tied his shoes.

Geno Smith, West Virginia. The Mountaineers' QB set multiple school records as a junior and more could be on the way in his final season in Charleston.

Barkevious Mingo, LSU. Been known to train wreck offensive linemen.

Jones, Oklahoma. He's been around since Barry Switzer was coach. OK, maybe not that long, but the four-year starter will leave as the most prolific passer in OU history.

De'Anthony Thomas,

Oregon. Spectacular as a freshman last season and will likely get more touches this season now that James is in the NFL.

Marcus Lattimore, South Carolina. Back from a torn ACL last season, he should be one of the nation's top running backs this year.

Big Games

Sept. 1, Michigan vs. Alabama at Cowboys Stadium, Arlington, Texas. The annual opener at Jerry Jones' fun-house has had some great matchups in the past. This one could be the best of the bunch.

Sept. 15, Alabama at Arkansas. Winner could get the inside track on a national-title run.

Sept. 22, Michigan at Notre Dame. Last season's epic finish makes this a must-watch.

Oct. 13, Oklahoma vs. Texas in Dallas. The Red River rivalry continues after all the conference shuffling and could become epic again with these two teams on the rise.

Oct. 27, Notre Dame at Oklahoma. A rare meeting between power programs.

Nov. 3, Alabama at LSU. We may not get sucked into calling it the Game of the Century again, but it still figures to have national-title implications.

Nov. 3, Oregon at USC. Triple digits in combined points is a possibility with all those playmakers on the field.

Nov. 24, Michigan at Ohio State. Meyer is running the Buckeyes and Michigan appears to be back. This rivalry could be heating back up.

The New Guys

There was quite a bit of turnover in the coaching ranks over the offseason, with some pretty big names landing in new places. Here's a few:

Bob Davie, New Mexico. Away from coaching for a decade, Davie tries to turn around a program plagued by embarrassments on and off the field under Mike Locksley.

Todd Graham, Arizona State. The fast-talking Texan has done everything right in Tempe so far, soothing concerns about bouncing around while building excitement for the program. All that's left is to win some games.

Mike Leach, Washington State. His offenses are always entertaining. So's his mouth.

Meyer, Ohio State. Burned out no more, the two-time national champion coach returns to the sideline with one of the country's premier programs — and too many references to an Urban renewal.

Bill O'Brien, Penn State. The former o-coordinator of the New England Patriots might have the toughest job in the country.

Rich Rodriguez, Arizona. RichRod's three-year run at Michigan didn't go so well, but he has Tucson buzzing about football again with his suped-up offense.

Smith, Arkansas. The Razorbacks needed someone to smooth over the ugliness of Bobby Petrino's firing. The even-keel Smith should be a good fit.

Charlie Weis, Kansas. Weis' first stint as a head coach petered out at Notre Dame. The Jayhawks are hoping he can turn around a program that languished under Turner Gill.

DEAR ABBY: I am a confused transwoman. I have been in a committed relationship for years with a woman who knew me before "the change." I have lied to myself for a long time about what gender I have been attracted to, and now it's coming back to haunt me.

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

As I have gone through several years changing, my confidence and emotional depth have grown. I successfully transitioned two years ago, and live and work as a woman. This means when I go to clubs and bars with other girlfriends, I attract male attention in a positive way. (I'm attractive and pass well.)

The problem is, my attraction to women is fading and men are now much more appealing. My pulse races at the idea of spending time in the company of men, but no longer with women, who are now more like sisters than anything else.

My relationship with my current female spouse has become that of a housemate or female family member. She was there for me during my changes, and now I feel I am evolving away from her. This upsets me, and I know it upsets her because we have talked about the possibility that this might occur. Now I'm worried about breaking her heart, but feel if I don't move on, I will have cheated myself out of living.

What should I do? Should I swallow my feelings and stay with her, or admit that in order to feel like a heterosexual woman I must leave and be in a relationship with a man? Help!

— LOST ANGEL

DEAR LOST: I discussed your letter with Denise Leclair, the executive director of the International Foundation for Gender Education (IFGE), who tells me that what you're experiencing is not unusual. Transgender people can be so consumed with gender issues that they are sometimes unfocused on whom they are really attracted to.

While I can't make this decision for you, you can get some helpful input from IFGE. Founded in 1987, it offers support and educational services for and about gender-variant persons — including referrals to medical and psychological professionals. You can email IFGE at info@ifge.org.

DEAR ABBY: Thanks for the wonderful letters and sage advice over the years. I can't tell you how many columns I have clipped and shared.

Some years ago when I was teaching in Massachusetts, a dear friend, Pat, told me about something she did that impressed me. Every year on her birthday, she sent flowers to her parents with a note thanking them for their love and support. I adopted her idea.

We have a Mother's Day and a Father's Day, but isn't Pat's idea wonderful? Many parents would be thrilled to receive flowers from their child on his or her birthday, especially when a note accompanies the bouquet. After all, the parents gave the children life and nurturing. It seems only right that children should show their appreciation at that special time. Please share this idea with your readers.

— FORMER TEACHER IN ATHENS, GA.

DEAR TEACHER: Thank you for sharing your friend's tradition. It's not the first time I've heard this, but I'm pleased to share her terrific idea with those who are receptive.

P.S. If flowers aren't in the budget, a handwritten note of appreciation costs nothing and would be treasured for a lifetime.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE® Bobby Wolff

"Gaze upon the rolling deep (Fish is plentiful and cheap)."
— Edward Lear

At the 2011 Lederer there were awards for best-bid, -played and -defended hand. This one belongs in the category of "You should have seen the one that got away."

Andy Robson had an opportunity in this deal where, like many declarers, he found himself in six hearts.

On a minor-suit lead there are enough entries to establish and enjoy the diamonds. However, Justin Hackett found the most testing start, a spade, and Robson won and ducked a diamond. East won and returned a second spade, perforce won in the dummy. Robson now cashed two rounds of hearts and could no longer recover from the unfriendly breaks in the red suits.

The correct line at trick four is to cash the heart and diamond aces (you have no chance on a 5-1 break) and ruff a diamond high. Now the diamonds are known to be breaking 4-2, and when you cross to the heart nine, you also know the trumps are 3-1.

This forces you to fall back on your last chance, namely that spades were 3-3, by ruffing a diamond high, crossing to another heart in dummy, and throwing a spade on the long diamond. Then you can ruff out the spade and finally use your club ace to enjoy the 13th spade. So, the third chance, an unlikely one, would have worked.

In the end, you finish up ruffing two diamonds and a spade in your hand, establishing a long card in both of dummy's suits.

ANSWER: Passing here would be truly pessimistic, so a simple raise to three clubs looks reasonable. But I think you can be more descriptive than that. Bid two spades instead, which cannot show a long spade suit since you already denied that. This shows a club raise with spade cards, suggesting a maximum hand for the auction — perfect!

IF AUGUST 29 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: "Good things come to those who wait" should be your motto in the months ahead. You may feel that you have been taken for granted when a temporary breakup or relationship shift occurs in the next six to eight weeks. Don't be afraid to knock down an invisible barrier between you and a loved one, and don't leave the safety of a committed relationship for a fantasy. February is your best month to feel more vibrant than usual and more likely to be awarded the promotion or the new job you have been angling to win. The other possibility is that an important romance could sweep you off your feet and change your life forever.

HOROSCOPE

Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Check your mailbox, voicemail and email. News that will change your mind may arrive in the nick of time. If you are industrious and diligent, you will reach your goals.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Charity and generosity alone won't create a saint. Nevertheless, you can employ a business model that will also support good causes or protect the planet. Go through the day upholding high ideals.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): In the game of keep away, you need a trustworthy partner. Keep the ball in the air and avoid losing out to a competitor. Your fanciest footwork might include gathering data no one else can access.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Remain centered and self-motivated. Clear thinking objectivity is the best skill set to use to handle small details and get them out of the way. You are expected to handle responsibilities without supervision.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You must create or find bliss before you can follow it. A change does not need to raise a red flag. It is in your best interest to be spontaneous; go along with something out of the ordinary. Remain flexible.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Think outside the box. You can take pride in not allowing your talents to be pigeonholed. A partner or loved one might be restless for a change of pace so this is a good time to show off your versatility.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Positive platitudes can calm a tense situation. This may be a good day for meditation or to repeat empowering mantras. You have a friend who is very likely to pass along some valuable information.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Brains beat out brawn. You can put a delightful spin on anything you say and create a favorable impression during business presentations. You can attain your objectives by being sympathetic.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You can't always fight fire with fire. Two negatives always produce another negative. Make sure that your decisions add up logically in order to enjoy the best success.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): The business world can be your playground. Some people appear to worship the ground you walk on, but that may be because they want to follow in your tracks and take advantage of your good fortune.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Become a little more self-sufficient. Remember that you can't solve problems by throwing money at them. Pay attention to shifting loyalties in the workplace, but don't switch your own allegiances.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Love put under a magnifying glass can appear distorted. Don't become flustered if someone wants proof of your commitment. Employ creative intelligence to set you apart from the rest of the pack.
