Unsolved, but not Forgotten

Cold cases and unsolved crimes throughout south central Idaho will be explored in an ongoing series. Read Wednesday's Times-News for a story about cold cases in the Twin Falls Police Department.

TWIN FALLS • A tiny flicker of a memory. That might be all it takes to crack a cold case wide open, said Staff Sgt. Perry Barnhill with the Twin Falls County Sheriff's Office.

"They might not think it's important," he said. "But it means the world to us."

Public input and assistance are key in solving crimes, even when a case lingers. Once detectives do find a piece of evidence that reopens a case, it's just like the day the case opened.

"It just reignites everything," Barnhill said. "It might take you in a completely different direction or to a person you never thought of. Public input solves a lot of crimes."

Lack of time and staff prevent detectives from doing as much work as they would like on cases that have gone cold, he said.

"We have some I want to work with but don't have the manpower," Barnhill said.

Twin Falls County has three or four cases Barnhill said he would really like to work on solving but lacks the time for.

"One I really want to finish up is probably seven or eight years old," he said.

"The cold cases, they're just as important as any other cases. I'll actually assign it to a specific investigator and it's their job."

Staff Sgt. Perry Barnhill with the Twin Falls County Sheriff's Office

In the case, a man's car went off the canyon rim, but the man was never found.

"It could have been a survival accident," he said. "But the family has never heard of him since."

A busy summer for deputies means they haven't had a chance to look at older cases in about three months, Barnhill said. When new cases do slow down a little, Barnhill said he assigns a cold case that needs to be re-examined to an investigator.

T.F. County to Consider $41.5 Million Budget

BY MELISSA DAVLIN mdavlin@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • On Tuesday and Wednesday, the Twin Falls County Commissioners will hold public hearings on the proposed $41.5 million budget for the upcoming fiscal year, which begins Oct. 1.

Want a say in how they spend that money? Know what's in the budget before

The basics:

A 3 percent property tax raise. Each year, Idaho taxing districts are allowed to raise taxes a maximum of 3 percent. For residential property owners, that won't result in a huge dollar amount increase, as residential property values dropped. But agriculture land values went up, so farmers and ranchers in the county may see a bigger increase in the actual amount they pay for taxes.

A 3 percent merit-based raise for county employees. The raise won't be across the board for county employees. Instead, each department head or elected official will be able to dole out raises based on performance, how long the employee has gone without a raise, and other

A $4.5 million move. The county is moving most of its operations to the former St. Luke's Magic Valley hospital building, located on Addison Avenue West. Now called County West, the building will house the assessor, commissioners, planning and zoning, clerk and other offices, as well as provide a home for the Mustard Tree Wellness Clinic. But that money isn't coming from tax dollars -It's money the county had in reserve funds from the transfer of the property to St. Luke's.

Increased health insurance costs. Because the county's insurance costs went up 20 percent, officials had to rearrange health insurance coverage for its approximately 340 full-time employees, said County Clerk Kristina Glascock. For county employees, that means their $3,000 deductible will go up to $5,000

lwelch@magicvalley.com

RUPERT • System upgrades to the Minidoka County Sheriff's Office dispatch will bring cutting edge technology to the citizens of Minidoka County needing emergency assistance.

Minidoka County Sheriff Kevin Halverson said detectives' office space was remodeled to accommodate the new dispatch center.

Halverson said remodeling the new space was a more efficient use of money than trying to remodel the center in its old

"That way we didn't have a cook in the kitchen while we were remodeling," Halverson said.

The system upgrades will bring the center to Enhanced 911 Phase III compliant, which is the highest level of service currently available in the state.

Minidoka County Sheriff Capt. Dan Kindig, foreground, and Sheriff Kevin Halverson answer a 911 call Wednesday in the new dispatch center at the sheriff's office.

The cost of the newly remodeled space and upgrades will come to $200,000 and will be paid for through a combination of U.S. Homeland Security grants and 911 funding that is collected through landline and cellphone service.

lady who faithfully served on the Valley Vista Village board of directors for a number of years is re covering from a stroke. The loving support and prayers of VVV board go out to this family.

My wife's sister, who might be facing cancer surgery, talked with my wife, who has been free from cancer for seven years. We are here for each other so life doesn't overwhelm us.

Sometimes I feel like "this old house" that Rosemary Clooney sang about in 1954 is about to fall apart. With some refurbishing and a positive attitude and a sense of humor, I'll take care of the old house. Mama says, "We're not moving any-

It is often in the difficult times that we discover what really matters.

I have a rock garden with roses, petunias, geraniums, snapdragons, daisies, and numerous other flowers. Each rock has a story attached to it. One of them is for a campfire with friends gathered around, telling ghost stories. Another reminds me of the dining room window I looked out to see the hillside behind our house in the Rockies where elk grazed contentedly and the hummingbirds fed from a feeder hanging from an eve. It's the great memories that help me face the awesome sunset

We had a close call recently when my wife had surgery. She couldn't take much more pain. Then awesome organ music playing, "In the Garden," filtered into her room. The words, "And He walks with me / And He talks with me / And He tells me I am His own" were just what she needed not to give up. Her awareness of God's presence carried her through the dark night.

It took two surgeries and three weeks in the hospital before I brought her home. Last night, we completed her first six weeks of recovery. She's getting sassy so I know she's healing. It is in sharing life together that we find out what love is

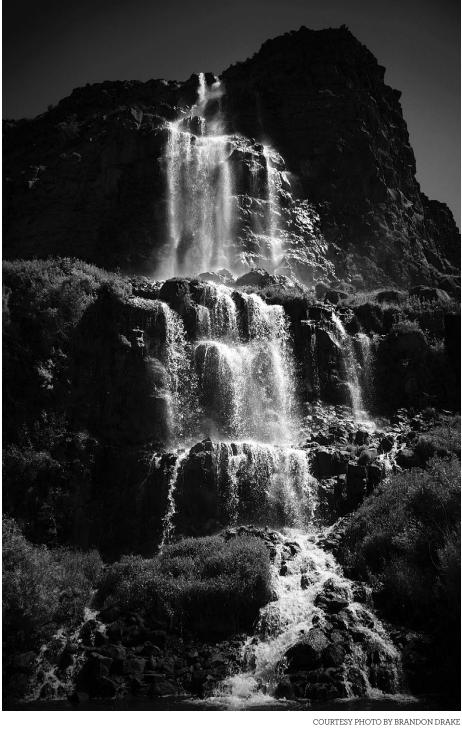

I wonder sometimes if we need to face death in order to appreciate life. Or, maybe in the process of dying, we learn to live.

Will you consider slowing down to see the significance you can play in someone else's life? These moments of awareness won't last forever. How quickly they fade as we move toward the end of the trail. It's a matter of living fully each step of the way. We have a tremendous opportunity to provide for the loving care of those who need us. Then, we can face death with the fruitfulness of our labor as a legacy of love to the next generation.

People make mistakes. Problems cannot be escaped, but I would hate to come to the end and imagine all the important things I didn't get around to doing. It's never too late to change our perspective.

I will humbly face death after having fully lived my impossible dream. I know that death too will pass, and the best is yet to come.

Minidoka County Sheriff Captain Dan Kindig, who oversees the dispatch center, said the system has mapping capabilities that interface with Blaine County and Cassia County as well as SIRCOMM.

"If a dispatch center goes down in Cassia County, our dispatch center can function as a redundant system and vice versa," Halverson said.

When a 911 call comes into dispatch, all of the applicable responding agencies for that jurisdiction come up on the dispatch screen along with the caller's address on a map. The call is then paged out in a single keystroke, saving time and possible human error.

"The dispatcher can then talk with the person on the phone and deal with the human aspect of the situation," Halverson said.

sign it to a specific investigator and it's their job."

Friday afternoon, Twin Falls County Sheriff's Detective John Koning was out trying to recover allegedly stolen property in the recent home invasion near Buhl. As he searched the side of the road and under sagebrush, Koning discussed cases, both hot and cold.

"The satisfaction comes when you take the smallest lead and make an arrest," he said.

For detectives time is one of the most important part of their job.

"When you invest time in it you take ownership," Koning said.

For many detectives it's hard to let go of a case when all the leads have disappeared, Barnhill said.

"I have some of the most amazing people working for me," hesaid. "They don't let go. They say 'give me one more week."

Koning said once a detective has spent a long time on a case it becomes important to make they've exhausted every lead before a case goes inactive.

"When it's hot we stay on it," hesaid.

If a major case does start to get cold and a detective is stumped on a case, Barnhill said it's discussed as part of a daily morning meeting.

"Everyone puts their two cents in," hesaid.

Unfortunately, every case won't be solved though, he said.

When major cases like homicide and rape last a long time, Lori Stewart, the Twin Falls County Sheriff's Office victim's assistance coordinator steps in.

"In those situations I still try to check in on a regular basis just to kind of ensure the family we're still working on it and it's still important to us," she said.

When the whys and hows of a case haven't been answeredit's hard for families to cope, especially when investigators can't tell them everything about the case, she said.

"It's natural for them to want to know exactly what you're doing and who you're talking to," shesaid.

Stewart said how much a victim's family can know is different for every case.

"We're also trying to be sensitive," she said. "There are some things that might be hard to hear."

Barnhill said he tries to keep families updated as much as he can on cases and what the next steps are. It's not unusual for detectives to come in on their off days to continue working on their unsolved cases.

"It's very personal," he said.

Twin Falls County Sheriff detective John Koning searches for evidence along River Road near Hagerman on Friday while investigating a crime.

3 Idaho Wildfires Resist Containment Efforts

BOISE (AP) • Firefighters in Idaho continue to battle three large wildfires that are proving difficult to bring under control.

In central Idaho, the 194square-mile Halstead Fire is only 7 percent contained and on Sunday was about 100 yards from power lines that provide power to the mountain tourist town of Stanley.

Custer County Sheriff's Office late Saturday told residents of about 30 homes between Sunbeam and Yankee Fork to evacuate, and that the agency couldn't guarantee the safety of those who remained behind.

The fire late on Saturday also sent out embers across a fire line that started spot fires on the east side of Yankee Fork Road.

"But firefighters were able to swoop in and extinguish all the spot fires," said fire spokesman Eric Mosley.

He said crews on Sunday have been setting back burns using firefighters on the ground and starting fires using helicopters to drop small incendiary spheres. He also said firefighters painted the wooden power poles with a fireresistant coating and firefighters are positioned to protect them from fire.

The fire has moved to within about three miles north of Stanley, but State Highways 75 and 21 remain Mosley also said there are modern mining operations in the area that fire crews are protecting as well as historic mining structures, including a large dredge. About 560 personnel are assigned to the fire that is also being fought by seven helicopters.

To the south, back burns on the 226-square-mile Trinity Ridge Fire have been effective in protecting Featherville and an evacuation order was lifted Sunday morning. Crews in recent days have been trying to slow the fire's growth toward the Middle Fork Boise River with helicopter water drops. About 1,200 personnel are assigned to the fire that is 31 percent contained.

Along the Idaho-Montana border, fire managers say the 329-square-mile Mustang Complex of fires will be difficult to contain without rain or snow.

Fire officials on Wednesday issued various evacuation levels for residents near the fire that remain in effect. Residents along Highway 93 between Hull and Sheep have been advised to leave immediately.

More than 900 wildland firefighters are fighting the blaze that is 16 percent contained and has burned across the Idaho border into Montana. Officials say more firefighters are being called in.

With Referendum, Teacher Bonus Money on the Line

Associated Press

BOISE • As Idaho voters decide on a sweeping education overhaul this November, teachers opposing the reforms may find themselves in a bind at the ballot box: By rejecting the changes, they could also be turning down a performance bonus after years of reduced or stagnant salaries.

Idaho introduced merit pay under the reforms approved in 2011 and teachers worked toward those financial incentives last year. But the bonuses won't be paid out until Nov. 15, nine days after the referendum, and state officials say they can't distribute the money if the laws are repealed.

The timeline is prompting outcry from the state's teachers union, which is fighting to overturn the reforms authored by Idaho schools superintendent Tom Luna.

"The state Department (of Education) is holding this money hostage;" said Idaho Education Association President Penni Cyr. "The teachers earned it, the legislature appropriated it last year and they intended it to be used for teacher compensation."

Luna's office counters that the bonus payout plan follows the law and the only barrier to handing out the money would be the referendum spearheaded by the

"It's not fair for them to say we're holding them hostage, they're the ones that put the referendum on the ballot, which is the only reason why these bonuses couldn't be paid;' said Luna spokeswoman Melissa Mc-Grath said. "We did not ask for there to be a referendum."

If the laws are voted down, McGrath said, the state won't have the legal authority to distribute the funding.

Teacher Sonia Galaviz is shown Wednesday in her elementary school classroom in Boise after classes. Galaviz plans to vote against a sweeping Idaho education overhaul, even though she could lose any merit bonus money she may have earned last year if the laws are repealed.

Idaho has long debated whether teacher pay should be tied to things like student test scores.

Sonia Galaviz, a Boise elementary teacher opposing the reforms, said she hasn't yet learned if she earned a merit bonus while working in the Nampa district last year. She's more concerned about the future of public education in Idaho, not the pay-for-performance money, she said.

"Truthfully, that's the last thing on my mind," said Galaviz, whose salary has been frozen for three years. "I don't care about the bonus."

She'd rather the merit pay money go toward increasing all educator salaries, she said, not just those who meet pay-forperformance goals. With merit pay, however, Luna made the case for paying teachers differently, arguing the old system was unfair and compensated good teachers the same as the Luna's department contends not every teacher will be faced with the dilemma of wanting to oppose merit pay with a salary boost at

"I don't think it's fair to say a majority of teachers are going to go the ballot box and have this dilemma;" McGrath said. "I think some teachers might, but there are a lot of teachers who support pay-for performance."

The bonuses are being jeopardized following three years of recession-drive pay cuts and salary freezes. Idaho is also shifting $14.7 million from salaries to fund parts of Luna's reforms that pay for high school students to earn college credit and boost minimum teacher pay while restoring raises for those who further their education.

Lawmakers passed legislation in 2012 to avoid future salary shifts, and found $38.7 million in new revenue for merit pay, under the increased public schools budget for this year.

Luna predicts average teacher pay would go up $2,082 with the increased funding including the merit pay. He expects at least 85 percent of teachers will receive a bonus for things like raising student achievement and taking on hard-to-fill positions or leadership roles. Luna's department insists its hands are tied when it comes to the timing of the bonus payout because the law says school districts were to receive the money as part of their third funding installment for the year. Districts receive that third piece of funding Nov. 15. He couldn't have known the money budgeted for bonuses would be subject to voter approval days before it was scheduled to go out, McGrath said.

Luna has highlighted the potential loss of funding for high school laptops and teacher bonuses if his reforms are undone, while the union argues repeal would allow the state to ditch contentious provisions making Idaho less attractive to educators. The state would also restore the $14.7 million taken from salaries.

The reforms — with provisions limiting collective bargaining and eliminating continuing contracts likened to teacher tenure – were unpopular with many educators, and the potential loss of a bonus won't sway those teachers when voting on the reforms, the union president said.

"They won't let a thinlyveiled attempt to bully them into voting for these laws keep them from doing what's right," Cyr said.

While the union doesn't buy the argument that the bonuses can't be paid out until after the referendum, the law doesn't appear to have any wiggle room. The statute states: "All distributions of moneys to school districts shall be made as part of the third payment to school districts?

This language schools time to review, and appeal if necessary, the data used to calculate the bonuses, the state Department of Education said. That includes test scores for the 2011-2012 school year, which the department released Friday. Districts have until Oct. 1 to appeal the results.

Iran May Be Pushing to Nuke Threshold

ANALYSIS

Associated Press

DUBAI, United Arab Emirates • A "big and unforgivable" sin. A Western falsehood. An attempt to deprive developing nations of peaceful nuclear technology.

That's how Iran's supreme leader addresses allegations that the Islamic Republic seeks atomic weapons.

Iran's denials - while forceful and delivered from the pinnacle of its ruling Islamic system - can carry a distinctly hollow ring among its foes as the U.N. nuclear watchdog piles on worries: Complaining about limits on inspection access and reporting that Tehran is expanding its nuclear fuel labs in a virtually attack-proof underground site.

They are enriching uranium far beyond what's needed for their lone energy reactor and preventing inspection, adding to the urgency while repeatedly predicting Israel will be destroyed and actively supporting militancy in the region.

But, as Israel increasingly weighs the option of a military strike, Western leaders wary of another Middle East conflict may have to pay closer attention to the claims by supreme leader Ayatollah Ali Khamenei and others. Quite possibly, they may be telling the truth. Or at least to a

Iran could be shaping its nuclear ambitions after Japan, which has the full scope of nuclear technology including the presumed ability to produce warhead-grade material but has stopped short of actually producing a weapon. It creates, in effect, a de facto nuclear power with all the parts but just not pieced together.

More than two years ago, Iran's Parliament Speaker Ali Larijani essentially embraced Tokyo's nuclear model during a visit to Japan that included a stop in Nagasaki, of the two cities destroyed by American atomic bombs World War II.

Larijani met with Japanese officials and praised the country's nuclear program as a symbol of a third path that dates back to the 1970s, when then Japanese Prime Minister Tsutomu Hata told reporters that Japan "certainly" could possess nuclear arms "but has not made them."

The major difference, however, is Israel and other U.S. allies, such as Saudi Arabia. They would have to adapt to a huge balance-of-power shift with Iran on the doorstep of having nuclear arms.

Following Japan's path would allow Iran to push their nuclear technology to the limit while being able to claim it has adhered to its international pledge not to develop a bomb.

BOOMERS RETIRING TO RURAL AREAS WON'T FIND DOCTORS

According to the American Association of Medical Colleges, rural areas need about 20,000 primary care doctors to make up for the shortages

GRANTS PASS, Ore. • Nina Musselman had no trouble finding a family doctor when she retired to rural Oregon nine years ago to be closer to her children. But then that doctor moved away, leaving her to search for another who would take

After a year of going from doctor to doctor, she finally found one who

As record numbers of baby boomers go into retirement, many are thinking about moving from the places they needed to live to make a living, and going someplace warmer, quieter or prettier.

If they choose small towns like Grants Pass, 250 miles south of Portland, they could well have a hard time finding a family doctor willing to take Medicare, even supplemental plans, rather than private

"It's a sad situation for seniors," she said.

There are several reasons boomers, the 78 million Americans born between 1946 and 1964, could face difficulties finding a doctor if they retire to small towns over the next 20 years.

First, many primary care doctors prefer to live and work in urban areas because of greater cultural opportunities, better schools and job opportunities for spouses.

Also, Medicare pays rural doctors less per procedure than urban physicians because their operating costs are supposedly less. That makes rural doctors less likely to accept Medicare patients. With cuts to Medicare reimbursement for doctors targeted under the federal health care overhaul, the shortage is likely to get even worse, said Mark Pauly, professor of health care management at the University of Pennsylvania.

Dr. Bruce Stowell examines patient Robert Busch at his office on June 19 in Grants Pass, Ore. Stowell is among many doctors in rural areas who have capped the numbers of Medicare patients they take due to low reimbursement levels. A nationwide shortage of primary care physicians willing to set up practice in rural areas is making the problem worse.

That is, unless increasing reimbursements for nurse practitioners and physicians' assistants encourages those providers to take up the slack, Pauly said. If the Medicare cuts go through, "the doctors are saying: "We're out of here," Pauly said. "The least they are saying is: 'We'll treat Medicare patients like we treat Medicaid patients; which is mostly not."

Still, there is some good news, depending on where you live.

Pauly said the Affordable Care Act "puts a lot of emphasis on wellness programs and primary care. Nurses, especially nurse practitioners, are intended to play a major role there."

In Oregon, Washington and 14 other states, nurses and nurse practioners "can operate independently of doctors, writing prescriptions, ordering tests, and even running clinics," Pauly said.

Nationwide, the 22.5 percent of primary care doctors who practice in rural areas roughly matches the 24 percent of Medicare patients living there, said Dr. Roland Goertz, chairman of the American Academy of Family Physicians board.

A survey of academy members nationwide shows 83 percent take new Medicare patients. But there is an overall shortage of primary care physicians that still makes it hard for retirees to find a family doctor.

The real problem, he said, is that the health care system "has not supported a robust, adequate primary care workforce for over 30 years."

According to the American Association of Medical Colleges, rural areas need about 20,000 primary care doctors to make up for the shortages, but only about 16,500 medical doctors and 3,500 doctors of osteopathy graduate yearly.

"We are always trying to recruit doctors. We are barely keeping even," said Lyle Jackson, the medical director at the Mid-Rogue Independent Physician Association, a cooperative of doctors in Josephine County, where Mussel-

Urban Voters Seek More Campaign Talk of Gun Crime

PHILADELPHIA • In a tough Philadelphia neighborhood where an off-duty police officer was shot to death last month, a mother is afraid to walk to the corner store with her two children. In a Chicago area where 23 people have been killed by gunfire so far this year, kids don't want to go outside. In Harlem, a 26-year-old man worries his family will get hit by crossfire.

Residents of inner-city neighborhoods plagued by gun violence say they feel neglected and ignored even in a presidential election year marked by highly publicized shootings at a Colorado movie theater, a Sikh temple in Wisconsin and outside the Empire State Building — a year in which Republicans have launched a fullthroated defense of gun ownership while Democrats have largely kept quiet about an issue they used to put front and center.

"People are being gunned down. Nobody's talking about it. But both parties want our votes," said the Rev. Ira Acree of Greater St. John Bible Church in Chicago. Acree lives in the city's Austin neighborhood, where 7-yearold Heaven Sutton was killed by a stray bullet as she was selling snow cones.

Gunfire frequently pierces the neighborhood. Nearly two dozen people have died this year, and children in his congregation are afraid to walk outside. Citywide, homicides are up sharply from 2011, though still way down from their historic highs in the early 1990s.

"It's a state of emergency here in Chicago," Acree said. "We want all hands on deck. That includes the pres-

But within the national Democratic Party — the traditional home of urban voters such as Acree - the voices calling for gun control are silent again this year. Jobs and the economy have muted discussion of other issues, while public opinion has swung sharply against restrictions on gun ownership.

Are Americans Better Off? Obama Aides Won't Say

CHARLOTTE, N.C. • Flinching in the face of economic weakness, President Barack Obama's top aides refused to say Sunday in the run-up to the Democratic National Convention if Americans are better off than they were four years ago.

Obama campaigned in Colorado and Vice President Joe Biden in Pennsylvania as their senior surrogates sought to deflect discomforting questions and turn them into criticism of Republican challenger Mitt Romney.

"The Romney path would be the wrong path for the middle class, the wrong path for this country," said David Plouffe, one of Obama's top White House aides.

But responding to the question that has become a staple of presidential campaigns, he sidestepped when asked if Americans are better off than when Obama took office.

"We've clearly improved ... from the depths of the recession," he said. Another aide, David Axelrod, Democrats have been critical of Romney for making no mention of the war in Afghanistan when he accepted the Republican nomination in Tampa, Fla., last week. He previously criticized Obama for setting a public date for the withdrawal of U.S. combat troops from the war.

Romney also has faulted Obama for allowing the government of Syrian President Bashar Assad to remain in power. Yet his aides have refused to say for a week if he agrees with French President Hollande's promise to extend diplomatic recognition to a provisional government if Syrian rebels form one.

Aug. 30, 2012. She was the daughter of Larry Poulson and Deborah Poulson-Baliey.

She attended Hillcrest Elementary, William Thomas Middle school, and graduated from American Falls High School. In 1999 she started her career at Idaho State University and never left. She graduated with a bachelor's degree in mass communication in 2003 and was two months away from her master's degree in health education and teacher's certificate, while planning a wedding to the love of her life (Kyle Tarpley).

Jackie competed collegiately for four years at ISU track and field, starting with running sprinting events and moving to competing in the heptathlon her sophomore year, then continued her professional career as a heptathlete for five years. Titles earned at ISU include two times Big Sky All-American Champion, finishing seventh in the NCAA national championship and eighth the following year. She competed in the U.S. Olympic trials in 2004 and 2008, finishing in the top 10. After the trials she competed for two more years then retired and continued following her dreams by coaching for ISU up until her untimely death.

Her hobbies included her nieces and nephews, steelhead fishing, hunting, camping, her dog Nellie and spending as much time as she could with family and friends. She always had a smile on her face and was the life of the party. She wore her heart on her sleeve, but it was big enough for everybody. Jackie was loy-

Unification Church Founder Rev. Moon Dies at 92

BY HYUNG-JIN KIM

Associated Press

GAPYEONG, South Korea • The Rev. Sun Myung Moon was a self-proclaimed messiah who built a global business empire. He called both North Korean leaders and American presidents his friends, but spent time in prisons in both countries. His followers around the world cherished him, while his detractors accused him of brainwashing recruits and extracting money from worshippers.

These contradictions did nothing to stop the founder of the Unification Church from turning his religious vision into a worldwide movement and a multibillion-dollar corporation stretching from the Korean Peninsula to the United States.

Moon died Monday at a church-owned hospital near his home in Gapyeong County, northeast of Seoul, two weeks after being hospitalized with pneumonia, Unification Church spokesman Ahn Ho-yeul told The Associated Press. Moon's wife and children were at his side, Ahn said. He was 92.

The church will hold a 13day mourning period beginning Monday and start accepting mourners Thursday at a multipurpose gym at its nearby religious center, the church said in a statement. The funeral will be held Sept. 15, and Moon will be buried at nearby Cheonseung Mountain, where his home is located, the statement said.

Moon founded his Biblebased religion in Seoul in 1954, a year after the Korean War ended, saying Jesus Christ personally called on him to complete his work.

The church gained fame and notoriety — by marrying thousands of followers in mass ceremonies presided over by Moon himself. The couples often came from different countries and had never met, but were matched up by Moon in a bid to build a

Today, the Unification Church has 3 million followers, including 100,000 members in the U.S., and has sent missionaries to 194 countries, Ahn said. But ex-members and critics say the figure is actually no more than 100,000 members world-

The church's holdings include the Washington Times newspaper; the New Yorker Hotel, a midtown Manhattan art deco landmark; and a seafood distribution firm that supplies sushi to Japanese restaurants across the U.S. It gave the University of Bridgeport $110 million over more than a decade to keep the Connecticut school operating.

It acquired a ski resort, a professional football team and other businesses in South Korea. It also operates a foreign-owned luxury hotel in North Korea and jointly operates a fledgling North Korean automaker.

The church has been accused of using devious recruitment tactics and duping followers out of money. Parents of followers in the United States and elsewhere have expressed worries that their children were brainwashed into joining. The church has pointed out that many new religious movements faced similar accusations in their early years. Moon's followers were often called "Moonies," a term many found pejora-

Moon was born in 1920 in a rural part of what is today North Korea. He said he was 16 when Jesus Christ first appeared to him and told him to finish the work he had begun on Earth 2,000 years earlier. Moon, who tried to preach the gospel in the North, was imprisoned there in the late 1940s for alleged spying for South Korea; he disputed the charge.

When the Korean War broke out in 1950, he went to South Korea. After divorcing his first wife, he married Hak Ja Han Moon in 1960. They have 10 surviving sons and daughters, according to the church.

In South Korea, Moon quickly drew young acolytes to his conservative, familyoriented value system and unusual interpretation of the Bible. He conducted his first mass wedding in Seoul in the early 1960s, and the "blessing ceremonies" grew in scale over the years. A 1982 wedding at New York's Madison Square Garden — the first outside South Korea - drew thousands of participants. "International and intercultural marriages are the quickest way to bring about an ideal world of peace," Moon said in a 2009 autobiography. "People should marry across national and cultural boundaries with people from countries they consider to be their enemies so that the world of peace can come that much more quick-

Moon began building a relationship with North Korea in 1991, even meeting with the country's founder, Kim Il Sung, in the eastern North Korean port city Hamhung. In his autobiography, Moon said he urged Kim to give up his nuclear ambitions, and that Kim responded by saying that his atomic program was for peaceful purposes and he had no intention to use it to "kill my own people." "The two of us were able to shared hobbies of hunting and fishing," Moon wrote. "At one point, we each felt we had so much to say to the other that we just started talking like old friends meeting after a long separation." When Kim died in 1994, communicate well about our

Moon sent a condolence delegation to North Korea, drawing criticism from conservatives at home. The late Kim Jong Il, who succeeded his father as North Korean leader, sent roses, prized wild ginseng, Rolex watches and other gifts to Moon on his birthday each year. Moon said Kim Il Sung had instructed Kim Jong Il that "after I die, if there are things to discuss pertaining to North-South relations, you must always seek the advice of President Moon."

The church also sent a delegation to pay its respects after Kim Jong Il died in December and was succeeded by his son Kim Jong Un.

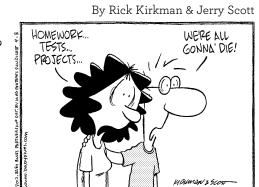

Moon sought and eventually developed a good relationship with conservative American leaders such as former Presidents Richard Nixon, Ronald Reagan and George H.W. Bush.

Yet he also served 13 months at a U.S. federal prison in the mid-1980s after a New York City jury convicted him of filing false tax returns. The church says the U.S. government persecuted Moon because of his growing influence and popularity with young Americans.

One of the more bizarre chapters in Moon's relationship with Washington came in 2004, when more than a dozen U.S. lawmakers attended a "coronation ceremony" for Moon and his wife in which Moon declared himself humanity's savior and said his teachings have helped Hitler and Stalin be "reborn as new persons." Some of the congressmen later said they had been misled and hadn't been aware that Moon would be at the event.

A Look at 'Extremism' for Idaho Environmentalists

n Idaho politics, the word "environmentalist" is almost always preceded with the adjective "extreme" — in Gem State political verbiage, there seems to be no other kind.

But in the terms of that narrative, consider two of the most significant Idaho news stories from last week, both very much about environmental concerns.

One, a subject of hot Panhandle discussion for many years, is the Coeur d'Alene River Basin cleanup, a federal-based (Environmental Protection Agency) action ongoing since the '80s. For all the dispute, there's been little disagreement on the existence of the problem, contamination from decades of mining in the Silver Valley. The EPA describes its effort simply: "The cleanup is part of a continuing effort to reduce risks to people's health and the environment from heavy metals."

The work has come in phases and parts, and it has been imperfect. For a large area around the Coeur d'Alene River's south fork and the Bunker Hill mine area, a "record of decision" was released in 2002. There were complaints and comments, a lot of them, about 6,700. These have had effect: "In response to widespread public request, EPA has changed the scope of the RO-DA. The cleanup's cost has been reduced by nearly half, to about $635 million. The cleanup's projected time frame has been reduced to about 30 years. In response to public concern about the cost of the cleanup and technical challenges, EPA removed construction of a river liner from the cleanup plan. This reduced the cost of the plan by nearly $300 million. To address contamination seeping into the river in the Osburn and Kellogg areas, we will instead collect and treat groundwater from those areas. Many public comments asked EPA to reduce the number of mine and mill sites slated for cleanup. EPA agrees that it makes sense to focus on the highest priority sites with the greatest potential impact on water quality. EPA has reduced the number of sites to be cleaned up from 345 to 145."

For all of the EPA's local reputation as opaque, unreachable, unknowable and bureaucratic, it appears to have been moved quite a bit.

The other Idaho environmental news last week concerned a mining operation proposed for the Boise Basin area near Idaho City, an area that has seen plenty of mining over the years.

Mosquito Gold, a mining firm from Canada, has proposed in the CuMo Exploration Project to mine for molybdenum in the area (political junkies may remember the fight over another proposed moly mine in central Idaho 40 years ago), building about 10 miles of roads and sinking hundreds of drill holes around the Boise River headwaters. That would be only the beginning of what might transform a large and beautiful backwoods area. The Idaho Conservation League described it (in terms similar to those seen elsewhere): "This drilling project is the next step toward constructing what the company hopes will be one of the largest open pit molybdenum mines in the world." The U.S. Forest Service gave its OK.

Is opposition to a massive open-pit mine necessarily extremist? At least under present terms, Federal District Judge Edward Lodge, no riotous liberal, appeared not to think so. In last week's decision, he said the Forest Service's approval was arbitrary and capricious, and at the least, study and analysis of groundwater in the area is needed.

Maybe some review is needed to consider what's extreme and what isn't.

No Means No

here is a theme surfacing in Idaho news lately focused on nuclear waste and the future of the Idaho National Lab. The premise of some nuclear proponents is that Idahoans should be willing to have a "new conversation" about Idaho's role in the nation's nuclear waste problems. But why have that conversation? Nothing has changed about the nation's waste problem or the approach to solving it. Nuclear waste from commercial reactors continues to pile up at each reactor site, and while the Blue Ribbon Commission on America's Nuclear Future made a number of recommendations about managing that waste, all were already extensively discussed in the 1970s and 1980s. As for Yucca Mountain, it was always a bad location for a permanent repository, for technical and political reasons, which led to its recent foreseeable cancellation. Nothing's new on the national stage, and nothing will change about Idaho's refusal to take commercial waste.

Idahoans have already said "No" to the storage or disposal of commercial radioactive waste in Idaho. The 1995 Settlement Agreement explicitly prohibits the storage or disposal of commercial radioactive waste here. But the Settlement Agreement is only one example of the many times the people of Idaho and our leaders have clearly said no to this waste. Since the early 1970s Idaho governors, congressional delegations and other officials, backed strongly by public opinion, have stood on the frontlines of the national nuclear waste debate and sent a clear message to the federal government: "Idaho will not be the nation's dumping ground? The ballot measure that ratified the 1995 Agreement is all the more convincing given that every Idaho voter in 1996 voted to protect Idaho from nuclear waste.

Liz Woodruff

So why do we need to talk again? Idaho has paid its dues in spades as the dumping ground for plutonium contaminated waste from Rocky Flats that will be above our aquifer until the end of time. It is true that the nation has a nuclear waste problem. It is true that there are upwards of 70,000 metric tons of waste from commercial reactors throughout the U.S. (mostly in the east). What is not true is that moving this waste solves the problem. Nuclear waste should be stored as safely as possible as close to its point of generation as possible.

Idaho has said no to commercial radioactive waste again and again. No means no. Nothing has changed in the nation's approach to nuclear waste and that means nothing about this conversation is new. We do not need to reconsider.

The LINE Commission and the governor would do well to respect this fact and uphold the key protections Idaho worked long and hard to establish.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Why Be So Worried About the Price of Ann Romney's Horse?

I don't understand some people in Washington, D.C. and the White House.

Talking about Ann Romney's expensive horse; if Mitt Romney wants to buy his wife an expensive horse to go to the Olympics, if it makes Ann happy, I think that's great.

President George Washington was one of the wealthiest people in his day. Washington had several horses throughout the war. The portrait of Washington at Valley Forge shows a white horse in the background. The painting of Washington crossing the Delaware is Washington standing in a boat and in another boat is a white horse. I suppose his white horse was expensive.

The Lipizzaner stallions are part of history. And Gen. (George S.) Patton saved them from the war by putting the horses under U.S. Army protection. I saw the Lipizzaner horse in Filer. I suppose the Lipizzaners are expensive.

Idaho's state horse is the Appaloosa. The Appaloosa is noted for the spotted pattern, leopard snowflake spotted blanket markings. I know some Appaloosas are expensive.

I saw a person in a wheelchair get on a horse, and when the horse walked, the man looked happy. To me, that horse is priceless.

If Ann Romney wants to show her horse in the Olympics, maybe her horse can be a part of history like Dean Olive and his horses of Idaho. He was an alltime world champion cowboy and calf roper and was inducted into seven different halls of fame I remember seeing Dean Oliver in the Filer rodeo. The calf didn't have time to run because the rope was on the calf and the hand was on the rope, calf down and tied. We couldn't even see; Oliver's hands were so fast and the horse was too. We saw Dean Oliver in a Nampa rodeo. I suppose Dean Oliver's horse was expensive.

I have one thing to say to Ann Romney: "Good luck." That from an Idaho woman that loves horses because horses have been part of American history.

Obama, GOP Duel over Rising College Expenses

BY ALAN FRAM

Associated Press WASHINGTON • President Barack Obama would make tax credits for college expenses permanent and expand Pell grants for students from lower-earning families. Mitt Romney and Paul Ryan would emphasize the need to curb rising tuitions and growing federal education expenditures that are burdening families and the government.

The different approaches to coping with rising college costs highlight one way Obama and the Republicans trying to replace him in the White House are vying for young voters. Youth voters leaned heavily toward Obama in his 2008 election victory and still prefer him, according to polls, though less decisively.

Tuitions and fees for fouryear public colleges grew by 72 percent above inflation over the past decade, averaging $8,244 last year, according to the College Board, which represents more than 6,000 schools. Student loan debt in the U.S. has hit $914 billion, with the average borrower owing more than $24,000, the Federal Reserve Bank of New York says.

Democrats are sure to reach for the college vote at the party's national convention in Charlotte, N.C., a week after Obama spoke to students in university towns in Virginia, Colorado and Iowa. Romney was counting on his youngest son, Craig, and the 42-yearold Ryan to court young supporters, campaign officials

In 2008, voters age 18 to 24 sided with Obama over GOP candidate John McCain, 66 percent to 32 percent. A Gallup poll taken in July and August found that same age group preferring Obama over Romney by a strong, but narrower, 56 percent to 36 percent, a margin Republicans would love to erode further.

Well before the party conventions, both sides had issued proposals directly affecting college students - and their parents - coping with those mushrooming costs.

Obama would let the current $5,550 per year maximum Pell grant increase to $5,635 next year, as scheduled under current law. That figure has grown by more than $900 since 2008 for a program that is the largest source of federal aid for students, serving more than 9 million of them.

Obama would make permanent the American Opportunity tax credit, created as part of his 2009 economic stimulus program. The credit provides up to $2,500 a year per student for college costs but is due to expire Jan. 1. Renewing it would cost an estimated $13 billion next year alone.

Obama has also proposed tying some federal aid - including Perkins loans and subsidies for students' workstudy jobs — to schools' abilities to curb tuition increases. The president's proposals continue "the administration's commitment to keep college affordable for students and their families," said his 2013 budget blueprint.

Separate plans by GOP presidential candidate Romney and his running mate, Ryan, focus more on containing federal costs.

In a May paper, Romney argued that even as federal spending for higher education has grown, the costs of attending college and student debt have ballooned. Obama initiatives making the government the direct source of federal student loans, creating the American Opportunity tax credit and boosting Pell grants have not worked, it said.

"Flooding colleges with federal dollars only serves to drive tuition higher," said Romney's education paper, "A Chance for Every Child."

It said Romney would improve college access and affordability: "A Romney administration will tackle this challenge by making clear that the federal government will no longer write a blank check to universities to reward their tuition increases." Romney would eliminate duplicative federal college fi-

Activists Say 5,000 Killed in Syria in August

BY BASSEM MROUE AND JAMAL HALABY

Associated Press

BEIRUT • Activist groups said Sunday that about 5,000 people were killed in Syria's civil war in August, the highest figure ever reported in more than 17 months of fighting as President Bashar Assad's regime unleashed crushing air power against the revolt for the first time.

The U.N. children's fund UNICEF put the death toll for last week alone at 1,600, the largest weekly figure for the entire uprising.

"The past month witnessed large massacres and the regime was conducting wide operations to try to crush the uprising," said Omar Idilbi, a Cairo-based activist with the Local Coordination Committees group. "Last month's acts of violence were unprece-

He said the increased use of the air force and artillery bombardments was behind the spike in casualties.

The civil war witnessed a major turning point in August when Assad's forces began widely using air power for the first time to try to put down the revolt. The fighting also reached Syria's largest city, Aleppo, which had been relatively quiet for most of the uprising.

The Britain-based activist group Syrian Observatory for Human Rights said that 5,440 people, including 4,114 civilians were killed in August. The LCC put the toll at 4,933 civil-

On Sunday, the Observatory and the LCC said more than 100 people were killed throughout Syria and the groups have been reporting 100-250 deaths per day over the past week. Syria's uprising has been the bloodiest in the Arab Spring that has already removed long-serving authoritarian leaders in Egypt, Tunisia, Yemen and Libya. The two main activists groups also released new death tolls for the entire uprising since March 2011. The Observatory said more than 26,000 have been killed, including more than 18,500 civilians. The LCC put the death toll at more than 23,000 civilians. The LCC does not count members of the military who are killed, but the Observatory does.

That averages out to about 1,300-1,500 deaths per month, making the August figure more than three times higher than average.

The groups had previously reported a toll of around 20,000 more than a month

On Thursday, Human Rights Watch said government forces have killed scores of civilians over the past three weeks by bombarding at least 10 areas where they were lining up to buy bread at bakeries near and around Aleppo. Last week, activists reported that between 300 and 600 people were killed in the Damascus suburb of Daraya during days of shelling and a killing spree by troops who stormed the town after heavy fighting.

"The reason behind the high death toll is military operations, shelling, clashes and air raids," said Rami Abdul-Rahman who heads the Observatory.

"I would say most people are being killed during clashes and executions;" he said referring to scores of bodies that are found in streets around Syria who are shot execution style with a bullet in the back of their heads.

UNICEF spokesman Patrick McCormick said 1,600 were killed last week alone, including some children. He did not immediately explain how he arrived at the figure, but said the number was documented. As the death toll mounted, international efforts to end the crisis faltered badly. The U.N. and Arab League have both led prolonged but ultimately failed efforts to negotiate an end to the violence.

Turkey this week called for the U.N. to authorize creation of a safe zone in Syria for tens of thousands fleeing their homes. Britain and France have left open the possibility of more aggressive action, including a militaryenforced no-fly zone to protect a safe area — though that still seems a remote possibility.

POLICE: NY MAN THROWS CID IN DAUGHTER'S FACE

NEW YORK (AP) • A man hurled acid in his daughter's face in a gruesome attack that sent her into a street screaming for help as her skin peeled and her clothes disintegrated, police and witnesses said.

As his 49-year-old daughter sat on his couch in Brooklyn on Saturday afternoon, Jerome Lynch abruptly left the room, returned with a cup of what she thought was water and doused her with it, she later told a cousin, according to the Daily News.

Then the corrosive burning started, and Darlene Lynch ran outside as her clothes disintegrated and her skin fell from her face, witnesses said.

"You could see the smoke coming off her body," Clarissa Shakespeare told the newspaper. "Everyone was just traumatized and scared. Her skin looked like melting wax?"

Bystanders poured water on the victim, helped pull away her clothes and covered her with a sheet, witnesses said. Her 69-year-old father was arrested on an assault charge. Information on his arraignment and lawyer weren't immediately available Sunday. Darlene Lynch is the main caregiver for her father, who uses a wheelchair and has been deteriorating mentally in recent years, said a cousin, Dominique Goodwin, who was in Brooklyn on a visit from her home in Winston-Salem, N.C.

The daughter was taken to tion, police said. The hospital declined to give an update on her condition Sunday.

Civil War Events Feature Minstrel Song Revival

BY DAVID DISHNEAU

Associated Press

HAGERSTOWN, Md. • With their slouch hats, whiskers and time-worn instruments, members of the 2nd South Carolina String Band look and sound like a Civil War camp band. And while they play "Oh! Susannah" and other familiar fare, they don't shy from other historical songs with inescapably racist overtones that may offend some modern listeners.

The aim of these musical re-enactors is to accurately recreate music that soldiers from both the North and South enjoyed around battlefield campfires at Gettysburg, Antietam and Bull Run. Along with "Buffalo Gals" and "Dixie," they perform lesser-known songs in the exaggerated dialect of blackface minstrels from that tumultuous era when slavery was breaking apart.

"A-way down in de Kentuck' break, a darky lived, dey call him Jake," Fred Ewers sings on "I'm Gwine Ober de Mountain," by "Dixie" composer Daniel Emmett.

"Angeline the Baker," a Stephen Foster song in the band's repertoire, begins, "Way down on de old plantation, dah's where I was born." It's the story of a slave who was "so happy all de day" until his beloved Angeline perform in blackface and typically shun the most offensive words and lyrics with cruel or violent imagery. Still, it's a tricky business presenting such racially jarring

Historically accurate? Certainly. The music comes from the minstrel shows that were the nation's most popular form of entertainment in the mid-1800s. Usually featuring white performers with blackened faces, the shows included songs and skits that often lampooned black people and portrayed slaves as happy and care-free.

The minstrel shows produced some of America's most beloved songs and contributed mightily to jazz, bluegrass, country and folk music. Blackface minstrels also helped popularize the banjo, an instrument with African roots.

Some scholars and musicians question whether a Civil War re-enactment is the best place to hear such songs performed. Some of these critics play similar material at banjo workshops and scholarly gatherings designed for discussion that they hope can help heal the wounds of American slavery. The 2nd South Carolina String Band seeks to present the music as true as possible to what was played in the camps. "We are performing, not lecturing," said banjoist Joe Ewers, Fred's brother and the band's chief spokesman.

His role models include Joseph Ayers, a Buckingham, Va., banjo historian who began researching and recording minstrel songs in 1985. Ayers favors broad public exposure to the music.

"We need to talk about our history openly and honestly, and the sooner we can do that the better," he said.

But some say more sensitivity is needed. Rhiannon Giddens of the Carolina Chocolate Drops, a black string band inspired by early African-American music, cringes at hearing exacting renditions of songs from a time when many blacks had no voice because they were either enslaved or struggling to survive.

"There is a part of me that absolutely squirms in my chair when I hear that music being done so earnestly," Giddens said.

She said she worries about camp band audiences focusing on derogatory lyrics instead of appreciating that minstrelsy borrowed instruments, playing techniques and perhaps even melodies from black musicians.

The Chocolate Drops have tried to bridge that gap by recording an instrumental version of "Dixie." In concert, they play two other wordless minstrel tunes, "Corn Shucking Jig" and "Camptown Hornpipe," preceded by a five-minute talk about banjo history and minstrelsy.

The 2nd South Carolina band – with members from Connecticut, New Hampshire, Pennsylvania and Virginia - plays "Dixie," too; twice, in fact, at their June appearance in Hagerstown to help publicize the Sept. 17 anniversary of the Battle of Antietam. Historians say the song was widely popular before the war; Abraham Lincoln once called it "one of the best tunes I have ever Ewers, of Ashuelot, N.H., said there's no better setting for the music than a Civil War scenario. The band's outfits, instruments and musical selections - including the occasional jarring lyric - are meant to faithfully represent a group of musically inclined Confederate soldiers or a traveling minstrel troupe.

"When we perform for the public, we try to bring what we think is the way the soldiers themselves would have presented the music," Ewers

Still, the band alters or avoids songs that originally contained the N-word. And they preface songs they consider sensitive with a dis-

"We explain that we are trying only to provide a glimpse into mid-19th century life and that the material we are presenting should in no way be considered representative of our own personal views or beliefs," Ewers said. "We then point out that the U.S. Constitution absolutely guarantees the right of free speech but offers no protection against being offended. Everyone has the right to walk away if what they are hearing makes them uncomfortable."

Magic Valley's Athletes of the Week

11-man Football: Carson Hawker, Burley. Hawker intercepted Buhl quarterback Kade Crossland four times Friday and also caught a touchdown pass on offense, helping the Bobcats to a 40-22 win.

 $\textbf{8-man Football:} \ Garrett \ Sant, Shoshone.$ Sant only completed 13 of his 35 passes, but those completions averaged nearly 40 yards as he threw for 514 yards and nine touchdowns in a 62-46 win over Rich-

Boys Soccer: Hector Cabrera, Minico. Cabrera bagged five goals on the week, two in a 5-2 win over Twin Falls on Tuesday and a hat trick in a 6-1 win over American Falls on Saturday.

Girls Soccer: Ellen Bartlett, Twin Falls. Bartlett scored five goals last week, striking twice in a 10-0 win over Minico Tuesday and netting a hat trick during the Bruins' 9-0 win over Jerome on Thursday.

Boys Cross Country: Jeremy Stark, Twin Falls. Stark clocked a 17:05 run at the Minico Invitational at Lake Walcott on Thursday, leading the Bruins to a convincing team win with 18 points.

Girls Cross Country: Twin Falls girls team. The Bruins recorded a "perfect" cross country score at the Minico Invitational on Thursday, sweeping the top five places in the event for 15 points, the sport's best possible team Volleyball: Stephanie Moore, Camas County. Moore was controlling in both facets of the Mushers' match at Richfield on Tuesday, notching an eye-popping 26 kills and 35 digs in a four-set win.

Sportsweek for Sept. 3

If you can only go to one local sporting event a day this week, here's what you simply cannot miss:

Today

Magic Valley Amateur

It's the final round of one of the last big golf tournaments in the area. Golfers will be playing Twin Falls Golf Club all morning, with the final participants expected to wrap up mid-afternoon.

Tuesday

Wood River-Jerome Boys Soccer

Wood River's 2-0-2 and has yet to concede a goal. Jerome's 4-0-1 and has outscored its opposition 32-3. Something's got to give in this test between Great Basin Conference heavyweights. Game time is 4:30 p.m in

Wednesday

Buhl-Wendell Boys Soccer

As usual, the High Desert Conference is arguably the toughest league around. A lot of the high-caliber matchups end in draws, but there are certainly goals to be had in this tilt, starting shortly after 6 p.m in Wen-

Thursday

Buhl-Filer volleyball

Reigning 3A District IV champion Buhl travels to face Filer, one of the teams vying to steal the Indians' thunder. And it's a local rivalry to boot. This one starts at around 7:30 p.m. in Filer.

Friday

Declo-Kimberly Football

Two of the longest-standing coaches in the area, Kirby Bright and Kelly Kidd, match wits for likely the last time. The squads, which have held the banner for their divisions in recent years, kickoff at 7 p.m. in Kimberly.

Saturday

Twin Falls Volleyball Tournament

It's an all-day volleyball extravaganza at Baun Gymnasium. Teams will begin play before 10 a.m. with preliminary play. Camas County won this tournament last year, so it's anybody's game.

M.V. STAMPEDE WRAPS UP IN FILER

BY DIANE PHILBIN

dphilbin@magicvalley.com

FILER • After welcoming record crowds each night, the 2012 Magic Valley Stampede at the Shouse Arena in Filer came to a close Saturday night as it had opened Thursday night with four flag-carrying cowgirls from the College of Southern Idaincluding Kyndal Stradley and Audrey Croy, 2012 Filer High School graduates. Fellow hometown classmate Colton Baratti competed in the final event, bull riding.

It was a dream come true for Baratti to ride in the Stampede.

"I've been coming here with my parents since I was 3 years old," said Baratti. "And I've been dreaming of getting in and riding here my whole life. I've was also fortunate to get in the Gooding and Jerome rodeos."

His next goal was to win a Professional Rodeo Cowboy Association check in his first hometown rodeo but he will have to wait until next year's Stampede to fulfill that dream after his Saturday draw, Jeff Robinson's 510, bucked the CSI cowboy off.

Robinson was voted PBR Stock Contractor of the Year for the last two years and is known for having one of the deepest pens of bulls in PBR history.

"I've been drawing good. But the PBR contractors bring the big, bad bulls," said Baratti. "No pressure, but I was surprised how nervous I was. I just needed to get my mind set and go have fun."

Coming into the weekend, Kimberly bareback rider Josi Young sat in 17th place in the world standings Please see STAMPEDE, S3

George Gillespie IV competes in the saddle bronc competition during the Magic Valley Stampede Friday at the Twin Falls County Fair.

What We Learned: Week 1

couple of game days into the season, we can start to make some more accurate assessments of the 26 football teams in District IV. All have played a game except Wood River, and around half have now played two. In a couple more weeks we'll pretty much know what these football teams are — of course, as Lighthouse Christian will remind me, there's an exception to every rule.

Week by week, though, the picture will start to come into focus. Here's some of what we learned after Friday's games.

1. Twin Falls can be a contender at the 4A level this season. Despite a two-touchdown loss to Hillcrest, the Bruins showed themselves to in the neighborhood of the same level at the start of this year as they were at the end of the 2011 season. That can only be a good thing in the maturation process of this senior-heavy squad.

Hillcrest has moved to 5A this season, yes, but the Knights had become a perennial force at the 4A level, and if they were still in 4A they would be right in the discussion of championship contenders. But for Caden Neuerburg's heroics, Twin Falls had Hillcrest largely in check.

I'm about as fond of moral victories as most coaches are (read: barely, if at all), but the Bruins should come back to practice this week with confidence that they can be players for the long haul this season.

2. Burley is improving, but the Bobcats aren't there yet. Victories over Filer and Buhl are nice feathers in the collective cap of a program that's essentially been a doormat both in and out of conference play for the last several years. But the fact is that Filer is in the same boat now as Burley's been in the Please see WEEK 1, S2 Test Your Word Knowledge with Our Crossword Page S9.

LOCAL GOLF Miley Opens Up Five-Shot

TIMES-NEWS

Lead

TWIN FALLS • Kyle Miley replicated his successful first round, putting himself in a commanding position at the Magic Valley Amateur.

Miley shot a second straight 3-under 65 on Sunday, taking a fivestroke lead headed into today's final round. He's 6 under par for the event.

Victor Velasquez was second at 1 under for the tournament, with David Hanchey third at even par.

Christian can chalk off the loss to Grace for a few reasons. The Lions were missing three two-way starters, playing against a similarly athletic team from a the three pick-sixes, which is a combination of bad decisions, great defensive play and good fortune that won't come

In the end Lighthouse

5. Castleford, on the othworried. It should be noted wrestling-team power, which that Hagerman is a special case among eight-man teams. The Pirates have track-team speed and higher division. There's also

Hamlin Pulls out 2nd Straight Cup Win in Atlanta

ASSOCIATED PRESS

HAMPTON, Ga. • Denny Hamlin won his second straight Sprint Cup race, holding off Jeff Gordon in a green-white-checkered finish at Atlanta Motor Speedway on Sunday night.

Martin Truex Jr. appeared to be positioned for his first win since 2007 until Jamie McMurray smashed the wall on the front straightaway, bringing out a caution with three laps to go. The leaders went to pit road, and back on the track first, just ahead of Truex. While Truex struggled to get up to speed on the restart, Hamlin pulled away with Gordon right on his bumper. The fourtime Cup champion desperately needed a win to improve his chances of getting into the Chase, but couldn't get by Hamlin on the final lap.

Hamlin took the series victory lead with four, putting him in position to top the standings when the 12-drive Chase starts.

last couple of years, and Buhl has been on a downward trajectory the past couple of seasons.

Don't get me wrong, the Bobcats have some nice pieces, and they've got the right guy in charge of the program. But there's still a lot of work to be done. A sterner test awaits in two weeks when they cross the river to meet Minico, but the fourgame stretch after that — at Canyon Ridge, Century at home, at Kimberly, and Wood River at home — will tell us more about Burley's progress toward being consistently competitive.

3. Most of us (me included) undervalued Raft River. I concede I was surprised to hear a halftime lead for Raft River over Carey. I was nothing short of stunned to hear a 34-point final margin in favor of the Trojans.

Like many others, I bought into the idea that Raft River was trending down after winning five games the previous two seasons and replacing longtime coach Randy Spaeth. Lost in the noise was the fact that they struggled because of youth, and those kids who got plenty of playing time in the lean years are now, in many cases, Christian shouldn't hit the panic button. For the reason above, it's not necessary for Carey to overly worry yet. The Panthers haven't lost more than two games in a season since the divisional split in eight-man football, and they may not play a team as talented as Raft River for the remainder of the regular season.

What's particularly troubling, though, is the Wolves' one-dimensional appearance. Against Hagerman you have to score points, but they still had far more success running the ball than they did passing, and Hagerman constantly had receivers in open pockets of space. Against teams like North Gem and Rimrock, leaning on a bigger line and run game might be just fine, but it's asking for trouble against teams that are more balanced.

is a lethal mix for most opponents in any brand of football, but especially eight-man.

Castleford has been a perennial bridesmaid the last few seasons, losing in the state semifinals each of the last three years. But if it can't get something going when a size advantage along the line isn't producing, the Wolves might be scrapping just for a wedding invite.

"I've been rodeoing like crazy the last couple of weeks and winning $800 to $1,000 a week," said Young. "You can win $2,000 or more here. There are several more rodeos left, like the tour finals and Pendleton (Ore.). I just need to draw and ride good and not get discouraged."

Unfortunately, Young and is draw, Firecracker, weren't able to post a score on Saturday so there was no prize money into Young's pocket.

Young has been lucky to have survived the year healthy with just the usual bumps and bruises of his profession. But now at 30, does he still have the drive and desire to compete?

"With all these young guys around riding good, I'm called the old man," said Young. "But I have worked at this my whole life. After 2008, I feel I still have some Young has pocked enough money up north to qualify for the Canadian National Finals in November and will be the top of five Americans to compete. As every little bit helps, the money he earns in Canada also goes towards his qualifying for the NFR.

"For now, I try not to watch the standings too much and just ride horse for horse, let the chips fall where they may and have fun," said Young. "I still have a few more years left. And when I'm done, I'll just be a family man."

CITY OF SHOSHONE NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN, in accordance with Idaho Code 63-1311A, by the City of Shoshone, Idaho that the Shoshone City Council will meet at 7:00 p.m. on September 4, 2012, at the Shoshone City Hall, 207 N Rail St. West, Shoshone, Idaho, to consider public comment regarding the institution of a new fee. Section 5.26 Chapter5.26.01.040 of the Shoshone City code will be amended to add a yearly fee for Business Registration. Whereas, a business registration would allow the City of Shoshone, and other interested parties to better communicate with the City of Shoshone Business Community and to understand how businesses may better serve the residents, guests, and visitors to the City of Shoshone. Encourage fire inspections twice a year for the purpose of ascertaining any conditions liable to cause fire to ensure health and safety of citizens.

Information about the proposed rate and changes may be obtained from the office of the City Clerk/Treasurer at Shoshone City Hall during regular business hours.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

"From things that differ comes the fairest attunement; all things are born through strife."

- Heraclitus

Today's deal has two problems in one. In both cases you play in six spades, but in one case you receive the unfriendly heart lead, which sets up a winner for the defenders immediately. In the other case you receive a passive club lead. How should your approaches differ?

The deal — like all this week's deals — comes from the world championships four years ago in Beijing.

West led the heart three and declarer won with the ace, drew trumps, eliminated the clubs ending in hand, and exited with a heart. East allowed West to win and he exited with a low diamond. (I've been told the jack is the best shot, but it never seems to work when I try it.) Declarer took East's queen with the ace, and the diamond finesse gave

In the other room the lead was a trump. Is there a better plan than the one described above? Yes, your best play is to draw trumps and go after diamonds to establish a discard for your heart loser. It is a very close decision whether to lead them from the top or finesse twice against West. So the best approach is to test clubs before playing diamonds. If West shows any real spade or club length, you should go for two finesses against her by leading to the nine, then to the king and finessing. If West appears to be shorter in clubs than East, play diamonds from the top.

ANSWER: On an auction of this sort there seems to be no obvious urgency to lead diamonds. If declarer is going to set up clubs or hearts successfully, he will probably be making his contract whatever you do. But what may be relevant is the need to kill a ruff in dummy. And when your side holds the balance of high cards, as appears to be the case here, repeated trump leads might be effective.

DEAR ABBY: My motherin-law is insisting that her adopted son and I each write a eulogy for her, so she can read it before she dies. We don't think her request is appropriate and have told her so, but she keeps insisting. What do you think?

- TO WRITE OR NOT TO WRITE DEAR T.W. OR NOT

T.W.: I think your motherin-law is starved for compliments, and that's why she's pressuring you. Ask her what she would like to have included in her eulogy, and then do some creative writing. When the time comes to read it, she won't be around - and you can say whatever you'd like with no repercussions.

DEAR ${f A}{f B}{f B}{f Y}$ Jeanne Phillips

DEAR ABBY: My daughter "Sally's" husband, "Donny," left her when she was three months pregnant with their second child. She had to move back in with us to make ends meet, and Donny says it's "too strange" to come here to visit his son. He hasn't paid a nickel of child support since he left Sally. He's seeing another woman and wanted to introduce her to my grandson, but Sally said he would have to pick him up at our house, so he refused.

Three days ago, Donny emailed Sally and asked her to call him when she goes into labor so he and his girlfriend can be there. She replied that he is welcome to come after the baby is born, but the girlfriend is not welcome. He emailed my daughter back that she is immature, and she needs to get used to the idea that the girlfriend is going to be involved in their children's lives and she should "get over it." $\,$

We are horrified that he thinks this is OK. What do you think? How do we handle this?

- UPSET GRANDMA IN MISSOURI DEAR UPSET GRAND-

MA: It appears your daughter married a self-centered loser who has been shirking his responsibility to his child. Because there is no reason to think this won't continue when their second child arrives, Sally should start talking with a lawyer, NOW.

As to the email he sent your daughter, she should refuse to take the bait and not respond to it at all. Sometimes silence sends a more eloquent message than anything one could say. It goes without saying that Donny and his girlfriend should not have a front-row seat for the birth of this baby.

DEAR ABBY: We are a vouthful senior couple who plan to remain single. We like to travel together. People assume that we are married. I know these incidents will increase on any trip we take.

A straightforward, "Oh, we're not married," seems to cause awkwardness, especially with the age group that will be on these trips. I'd like to avoid lying or allowing the faulty assumption to exist. Any suggestions for the appropriate response?

- COUPLE ON THE GO IN NEW JERSEY DEAR COUPLE ON THE

GO: Couples in your age group who cohabit without marriage often have financial reasons for it. And not all married couples share the same last name. Because you feel you must reveal your single status, the appropriate response is the one you are giving, and you don't have to apologize for it.

THAT SCRAMBLED WORD GAME

by David L. Hoyt and Jeff Knurek

Today is Monday, Sept. 3, the 247th day of 2012. There are 119 days left in the year. This is Labor Day.

Today's Highlight:

On Sept. 3, 1783, representatives of the United States and Britain signed the Treaty of Paris, which officially ended the Revolutionary War.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:

In 1189, England's King Richard I (the Lion-Hearted) was crowned in Westminster

Abbey. In 1658, Oliver Cromwell, the Lord Protector of England, died in London; he was succeeded by his son, Richard.

In 1861, during the Civil War, Confederate forces invaded the border state of Kentucky, which had declared its neutrality in the conflict.

In 1868, the Japanese city of Edo was renamed Tokyo.

In 1923, the United States and Mexico resumed diplomatic relations.

In 1939, Britain, France, Australia and New Zealand declared war on Germany, two days after the Nazi invasion of Poland.

In 1943, the British Eighth Army invaded Italy during World War II, the same day Italy signed a secret armistice with the Allies.

In 1951, the television soap opera "Search for Tomorrow" made its debut on CBS.

In 1962, poet E.E. Cummings died in North Conway, N.H., at age 67.

In 1972, American swimmer Mark Spitz won the sixth of his seven gold medals at the Munich Olympics as he placed first in the 100-meter freestyle.

In 1976, America's Viking 2 lander touched down on Mars to take the first closeup, color photographs of the planet's surface.

In 1999, a French judge closed a two-year inquiry into the car crash that killed Princess Diana, dismissing all charges against nine photographers and a press motorcyclist, and concluding the accident was caused by an inebriated driver.

Ten vears ago: Defense Secretary Donald H. Rumsfeld said the Bush administration had secret information supporting its claims that Saddam Hussein was close to developing nuclear weapons. The Senate opened debate on legislation creating a new Homeland Security Department.

Five years ago: Millionaire adventurer Steve Fossett, 63, went missing after taking off in a single-engine plane in western Nevada. (The wreckage of the plane and traces of his remains were found more than a year later.) President George W. Bush, accompanied by Defense Secretary Robert Gates and Secretary of State Condoleezza Rice, paid a surprise visit to Iraq, where he was briefed by U.S. military commanders and Iraqi leaders. Panama blasted away part of a hillside next to the canal, marking the start of the waterway's biggest expansion since it opened in 1914. Jerry Lewis raised nearly $64 million during his annual Labor Day Telethon.

One year ago: A judge in North Carolina sentenced Robert Stewart to spend the rest of his life behind bars for killing eight people at a rural nursing home in 2009. The Vatican vigorously rejected accusations it had sabotaged efforts by Irish bishops to report priests who sexually abused children to police.

IF SEPTEMBER 3 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: During the next six to eight weeks, your eyes may grow much bigger than your stomach. You may be attracted to people and things that fulfill an inner fantasy, but might not be what you imagine. Wait until late November or early December to make crucial decisions because you will be luckier than usual, so even if you make a mistake it won't have repercussions. Next February is the most auspicious month for major business changes or career decisions.

HOROSCOPE Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Make the most of this holiday by trying something new and different. You can plan on having an exciting adventure or see one at the adventure or see one at the 208-430-2788 movies. Don't hold back when entertaining guests at a backyard shindig.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Be the host with the most. Celebrate Labor Day by generously giving friends and loved ones a day they can remember. Stoke up the barbeque, call up the gang and embark upon a day of festivities and fun.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Get to the heart of the matter. While others may beat around the bush regarding a sensitive subject, you can easily find out the truth by doing a little investigating of your own. Don't rely on those who are vague.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Too much of a good thing can be just that. Be frugal when being praiseful or complimentary to someone this holiday. Sugary platitudes may make someone uncomfortable. Keep everything in moderation.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): There's no limit on success. You can be grateful and happy for what you have right now — or you can aspire to have even more. The most expensive items may catch your eye, but they're not what you actually need.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Get to the point indirectly. Others may be guarded against a direct inquiry but if you skirt around an issue gracefully you may learn a great deal more. Misdirection is the key to finding out all you wish to know.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): mbrace the spirit of the holiday. Surround yourself with family and good friends and enjoy good food, fun and company. Keep in mind that indulgence can make you a bigger person than you once were.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Put on your best and treat your guests with zest. Go the extra mile to make the holiday memorable by stretching the budget a little and treating your friends and family to an event rather than a simple gathering.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Everyone lets you be in the driver's seat. Others admire your ability to break the ice, as you set people at ease in social situations. Be careful about making promises — especially those you don't intend to keep.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Do one job well rather than trying to do four jobs poorly. Your current project will only be successful if you give it your full attention. Your financial situation improves through careful planning.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Keep it civil and chill out. Conversations should stay focused on safe topics to avoid friction. Politics and religion should be taboo subjects; there will always be someone with a differing opinion.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You'll never know until you try. You may discover abilities you never knew you possessed by meeting a difficult challenge. A face from the past may resurface today so prepare to spend a few hours reminiscing.
