Jerome Approves Sanitation Increase

BY JULIE WOOTTON
jwootton@magicvalley.com

JEROME • Utility rate increases are on the way for Jerome residents.

The Jerome City Council approved a 3 percent residential sanitation rate increase Tuesday night. It takes effect Oct. 1.

Rates will increase to $6.33 per month for each residence, which city officials say is needed to balance the sanitation fund.

That's up from the current $6.15 rate. The city contracts with PSI Environmental Services for sanitation services.

Other rate increases may also be coming soon for Jerome residents.

The city is proposing a 49 percent increase in sewer rates, a 5 percent irrigation rate increase and 3 percent water rate increase.

Ordinances still needs to come before the council in order to approve new rates.

Final Budget

The City Council adopted a final $60.1 million budget for the coming fiscal year, which starts Oct 1. Councilman Chris Barber wasn't at the meeting.

Councilman Dale Ross voted no — the same as he voted for the tentative budget.

He said he's concerned about the $43 million amount that's factored in for a possible bond to expand the wastewater treatment plant.

More than half, he said, is to improve capacity for future economic development purposes.

Ross said the bond request should include some funding for expansion for economic development, but not as much.

Ross said less than half the potential bond amount is what's being mandated by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency.

The city is working with the EPA as a result of a sewage overflow issue that occurred in winter 2011.

The city hasn't decided on the exact amount to take to voters via a bond measure. An election date also hasn't been set.

Here are some of the highlights of the budget:

- Average 3 percent pay increase for city employees.

Whether an employee earns a raise — and how much — will be based on job performance.

- $43 million budgeted for a possible bond to expand the city's wastewater treatment plant.

- Decline in city property taxes.

Despite a 3 percent increase in its general fund budget, the city expects residents' property tax rates to drop about 7.5 percent.

That's due to the closing of Jerome Urban Renewal Agency's Area I.

Other Meeting Actions

During their Tuesday night meeting, the Jerome City Council also:

- Held a public hearing about a proposed city code change to require developers to install street lights in new subdivisions.

- Approved a $140,000 addition to the contract with Keller Associates. The company is working on a wastewater treatment facility master plan for the city.

The addendum to the contract is a result of extra, unanticipated work that has come while working on the plan.

- Voted "no" on paying Road Work Ahead Construction Supply $1,517.24 for lost signs on Highway 25.

City officials say the company was notified to pick up the signs.

- Heard a presentation by city finance director Ross Hyatt about a proposed utility fee relief program. The 337 city residents who meet the requirements through the state's Circuit Breaker Program would be included.

Mayor John Shine suggested a 15 percent reduction on city utility rates for those who qualify, but a decision hasn't been made yet.

Rancher Dies in Cassia Co. Plane Crash

BY ALISON GENE SMITH
alismith@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • Joseph Edgar Tugaw, a prominent rancher and veterinarian in the Twin Falls area for more than three decades, died Monday evening in a plane crash in Dry Creek Canyon.

An announcement from the Cassia County Sheriff's Office states deputies received information about a plane crash in the Dry Creek Canyon area at about 8:30 p.m.

They found Tugaw's single engine Savannah ADV fixed-wing plane about 18 miles up the canyon, the announcement states.

"Everyone here is deeply saddened," said Wyatt Prescott, Idaho Cattle Association executive vice president. "He's a legend in the Idaho cattle industry."

Tugaw was elected president of the Idaho Cattle Association in 1995 and in 1999 was inducted into the Southern Idaho Livestock Hall of Fame.

Mott Hill assisted in the search for Tugaw's plane. He said he worked with Tugaw for 20 years, but was also a friend.

Coming in from the Cold

Twin Falls police hope the passing years will encourage people with information about cold cases to share what they know.

BY ALISON GENE SMITH
alismith@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • While the passage of time can make a case go colder, it can also lead a once-reticent person to help police solve the unsolvable.

As the years go on, police occasionally revisit people who were previously interviewed in the same case, said Twin Falls Police Staff Sgt. John Wilson.

"Their relationship with the people involved may have changed," he said. "They get to a point in their lives where they say, 'I'm not going to lie anymore.'"

As the lead investigator, Wilson has the department's three cold homicide cases assigned to him.

"There are moms who have children who are dead and they want to know why," Wilson said.

There are also daughters.

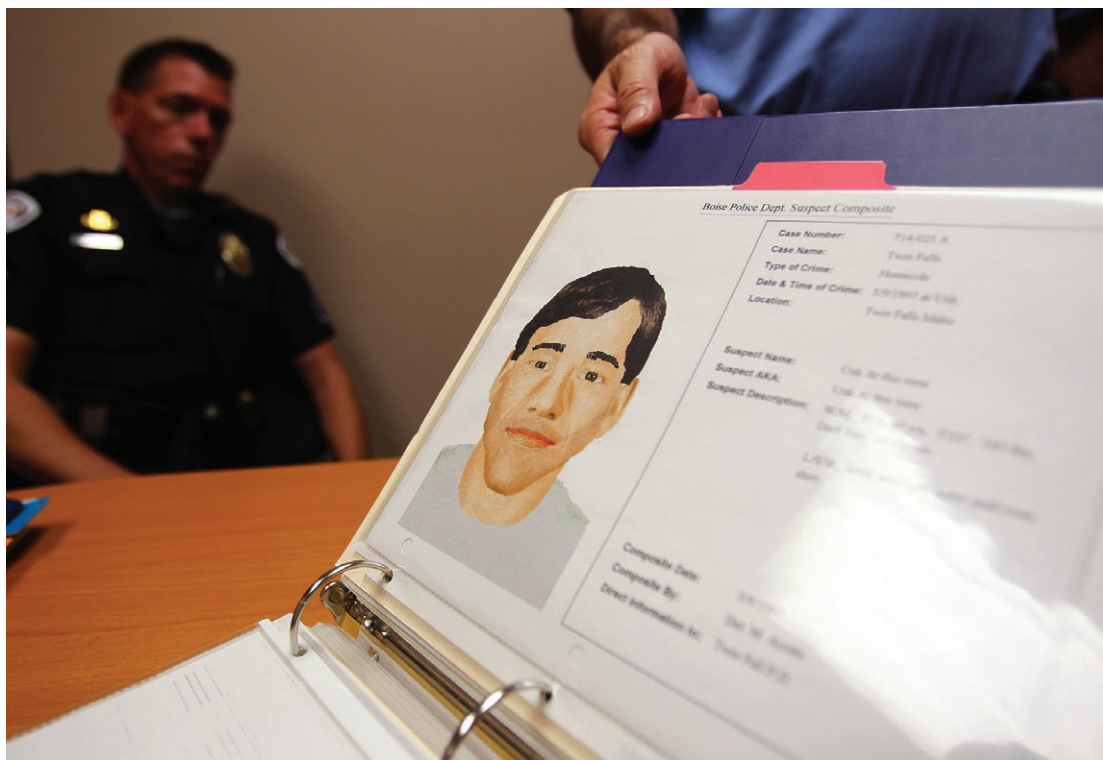

In May 1994, Leslie Chouinard's daughter came home from school to find her mother dead, a belt wrapped around her neck.

The person who killed Chouinard was most likely known to her, Wilson said.

"Somebody had to be allowed in," he said.

While police arrested Eddie Aguilar and charged him with Chouinard's murder, the case was thrown out at Aguilar's preliminary hearing. Police said Aguilar dated Chouinard for several months before her death.

According to Staff Sgt. Dan Lewin, prior to being charged, Aguilar allegedly admitted to going to Chouinard's home and said the two got into a fight before he left. Later, Lewin said, Aguilar told them he returned but Chouinard did not answer the door.

"Those windows need to be filled," Wilson said.

About a year after his release, Aguilar's body was found lying in a Salt Lake City field amid hypodermic syringes.

In 2005, new questions were raised in the case when Christopher C. Chouinard, Leslie Chouinard's husband, was charged with the kidnapping and rape of two women. Court records indicate Leslie filed for divorce against Christopher a few months before she died.

That year a detective was assigned to look over the case and came to the conclusion that the original suspect, Aguilar, was still the most likely killer.

Aguilar also was among several suspects in the shooting death of Edward Alvarado outside the Pour Haus bar in November 1991 — the coldest of the three unsolved homicides in Twin Falls.

Welcome to High School

As students flock back to class, Canyon Ridge and Twin Falls high schools help freshmen adjust to their new digs.

The Tuesday morning activity was part of freshman orientation at the school. The goal: to get the class of 2016 excited about the next four years of high school.

Stocks End Mixed on Weak U.S. Economic Reports

NEW YORK (AP) • Stocks zigged and zagged after reports that the U.S. economy is weakening at a time when China and Europe are also slowing.

The Dow Jones industrial average closed down 54.90 points at 13,035.94 on Tuesday. Heavy equipment maker Caterpillar was the weakest stock in the Dow average, slipping 3 percent, or $2.67, to $82.66. The Standard & Poor's 500 index fell 1.64 points to 1,404.94.

The Nasdaq index bucked the losing trend, gaining 8.10 points at 3,075.06. A big reason was that the index's biggest stock, Apple, rose $9.73 to $674.97 after the company invited reporters to a news event next week at which it is expected to announce the long-awaited iPhone 5.

Heading to the Top of Idaho

My palms began to sweat as I drove toward the jagged peaks to the east. This was the weekend that was going to test it all. All the way from my new camera and trekking poles to my endurance and resolve.

Nash

We jumped out of the car and were greeted by a jovial bunch. They had just cracked their first beers after reaching Idaho's highest point - Mount Borah - and were happy to tell us their tale. "It's basically a scramble all the way to the top," said one man. "It'll take everything you've got to overtake the last 800 feet," said another. I preferred what one 16-year-old told me, "Don't get ahead of yourself, keep one foot in front of the other."

I was surprisingly tired. We hit the sack at around 10 p.m. though I tossed and turned for over an hour once I was there. I woke up at 1 a.m., anxious and alert. I had to concentrate on keeping my heart rate down to get back to sleep. At 3:30 a.m. nearby hikers were getting up and preparing to hit the trail. My eyes were closed but I didn't sleep. At 4:30 a.m it was our turn. I scarfed down half a slice of cold pizza (our stove wouldn't light), turned on my new headlamp and we started up the mountain.

I found hiking under the stars surreal. A dozen or so lights bobbed through the trees behind us. Up we went, climbing 2,000 vertical feet before the sun even rose. A rainbow of haze began creeping up on us and I began making images using the golden light surrounding me.

We broke the timber line. Loose rock was everywhere as reporter Steve Kadel kept us on a slow and steady pace. We met fellow hikers and grabbed some quotes, took a break and gobbled a granola bar. We took in breathtaking views at 10,000 feet. The trail disappeared. We were out of options, or so we thought, as we waited for other climbers to reach us. No one wanted to say anything but I was pretty sure this was the beginning of Chicken Out Ridge. Climbers slowly began to trickle up an exposed rock face and we decided to follow. Once we overtook the obstacle, I still didn't see a trail and then I watched a man turn from a hiker to a climber as he dug his hands and feet into a scarred rock and shimmied across.

There was nothing to do but smile, because this, well this was ridiculous. I took a deep breath and I shimmied my tail off. I had already begun my trek along the infamous Chicken Out Ridge as I turned to my fearless leader, the man that had gotten me into this debacle, the guy who had climbed Mount Rainier a year ago. He said with a quiver, "Sorry man, this is too weird for me!" My quest to the top wasn't over yet. I asked the fellow hikers in front of me if I could tag along and they agreed. I kept telling myself just to focus on the next hand hold, than the next foothold, as I maneuvered over unforgiving jagged rock. One misstep here and my life would forever change.

We were like sheep. Following each others' every move, occasionally asking questions on what the best hold might be. We came to a 15-foot climb down at the end of the ridge. Without spotting each other, this would have been nerve-racking but in the end it wasn't all that bad.

It was time to scramble. With Chicken Out Ridge out of the way, we only had 800 feet of loose jagged rock separating us from the top of Idaho. I took a breath, hit play on my workout playlist (because this was going to be a serious workout) and started for my destination. The first 200 feet were reasonable, the next 300 were brutal. The last 200 felt like an all out bare-knuckle boxing match with Ali.

I reached the top of Idaho in around six hours. I immediately started checking off my list of things to do. Photo with the paper, photo of me with the flag, interviews, panoramic video, a panoramic still, sign the register, it felt never ending. When I was done it was time to leave. The men I had tagged along with had eaten, drank and been merry and it was time to get off this rock. As I skated down loose rock, I felt like a changed man, this had been a life event for me. I thought of all the people who motivated me to keep stepping, to keep pushing, the most important one was my Uncle Rob. He passed away in June, and this one was for him.

Answering Adventure's Call

Bob Locke of Gooding read Sunday's Times-News article about climbing Mount Borah and sent an email to me saying he has always wanted to climb the mountain - Idaho's highest at 12,662 feet - but never quite found time. "Always some other adventure takes precedence," he said.

Locke added he might be too old to pull off the feat these days, but he still isn't as old as one of the gentlemen shown in a summit photo from 74 years ago. Among the successful climbers that day was Fred Locke, Bob's father, who is visible at the upper left in one of the photos Bob sent to the newspaper.

"He's the one in those cute plaid pants," Bob said of his dad, whom he described as "an active guy in the community" prior to his death in 2005.

Becoming a Member of the U.S. Marine Corps Color Guard

At the PRCA rodeo Friday night, I had a chance to talk with members of the U.S. Marine Corps Mounted Color Guard.

Wootton

After the posting the colors, the group waited near two Marine Corps trailers behind the arena at the Twin Falls County Fairgrounds. They were also featured during the military night tribute to Idaho's fallen soldiers.

So how are Marines selected for the color guard unit?

Gunnery Sgt. Robert Smith said Marines are either assigned or can request to go - particularly, if they have a background working with horses. And those in the group must be in good standing with the Marine Corps.

The Best of Idaho

The past few years, some of the best Idaho football teams have had challenging opposition from other states come here, either in the Rocky Mountain Rumble in Pocatello or the Idaho Football Classic in Coeur d'Alene. This year, a couple of teams will go to them. Minico and Fruitland are headed this week to Sacramento, Calif. for the "Smackdown in SacTown." Minico plays McClymonds (Oakland) on Saturday in nearby El Dorado Hills.

This is a chance of a lifetime for these kids, but in the high school football world, it's nothing new.

Showcase games have been played for years, pitting top teams against other top teams. Usually it's been reserved for the crème de la crème of the prep football world.

Officials: Air Show Made Money, Boosted Businesses

BY KIMBERLEE KRUESI
kkruesi@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • This year's Air Magic Valley Air Show benefited local businesses and the community while leaving plenty of cash for the next event, according to event officials.

Air show director Jim O'Donnell gave a short presentation in front of the Twin Falls City Council on Monday explaining how the event affected the Magic Valley.

"This is something we have to do again," he said. "I wouldn't have said that when we were first planning this."

Thanks to thousands of spectators showing up to the air show, which included a U.S. Navy Blue Angels showcase, event officials were left with $53,000 after expenses. The total cost of the air show came close to $260,000.

The extra money will be saved for the next event's planning, O'Donnell said.

For every dollar spent on the air show, three more were reinvested into the community, said Dan Olmstead, air show committee member.

"This is something we have to do again. I wouldn't have said that when we were first planning this."

Jim O'Donnell, air show director

"By conservative estimates, the air show had a $1.2 million to $1.5 million impact on the community," he said.

Council members praised the event's success and commended the organizers' ability to stay out of the red. The city gave $65,000 in advanced funding for the project but that has since been paid off, according to expenditure documents.

A July 2008 air show ended about $50,000 in debt, split between Twin Falls county and city.

"We were initially apprehensive but we supported it," Councilman Jim Munn said Monday of this year's advanced funding. "This is important for our local community."

In other business, council members unanimously voted to award $84,854 to Heyburn-based Walton Inc. to improve water lines in the city's Block 132.

Council members also agreed to further work on amending a section of city code addressing zoning and subdivision regulations.

City officials have been amending sections of Title 10 for years. However, with so many new members on this year's council, Community Development Director Mitch Humble decided to revisit the issue.

He requested more direction from the council on which area to focus.

Mayor Greg Lanting suggested creating a committee that would help get easier items like parking lot sales and xeriscaping out of the way. This would help make more time to finess pieces of the code to take on subdivision regulations and downtown districts.

"This section of code is where good ideas go to die," said Councilman Chris Talkington. "My suggestion

Demonstration Park Opens

A year after funds were released for landscaping efforts, Twin Falls city officials are preparing to hold a dedication ceremony for the Tom Courtney Conservation Park.

The public is encouraged to attend the ribbon cutting and dedication ceremony on Sept. 14 at Falls Avenue West and Fillmore Street.

The unique park showcases entirely native grasses, shrubs and flowers. City officials built the park to promote native landscaping and other forms of plants that help conserve the area's limited water supply.

The project has been on hold for several years after a lack of funding prevented officials from installing an underground irrigation system. Eventually, the city's street department also plans to install curb and gutters.

The event will begin at 11 a.m. at the park.

Twin Falls County Holds Quiet Budget Hearing

BY MELISSA DAVLIN
mdavlin@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • On Tuesday night, the Twin Falls County Commissioners held the first of two public hearings on the proposed $41.5 million budget for fiscal year 2013.

Though about 25 people showed up to the hearing, only one woman spoke, standing up briefly to thank commissioners for increasing pay for county employees.

The budget includes a 3 percent merit-based raise for county employees, $4.5 million in reserve funds for county operations to move to the new facility at County West and a 3 percent property tax increase.

County employees will also see changes in their insurance coverage. Most notable: a deductible increase from $3,000 to $5,000 starting next year.

Part of the challenge of setting this budget, said Commissioner George Urie, was the drop in taxable property values. Last year, the county had an estimated $4.34 billion in taxable market value property, said County Clerk Kristina Glascock. This year, that dropped by an estimated $168 million.

"That was substantial," Glascock said last week.

Of the budget, $18.94 million comes from taxes. The rest come from other sources like grants, fees and reserve funds.

Voice Your Opinion

You have one more chance to voice your opinion on how Twin Falls County spends its $41.5 million budget for fiscal year 2013. The Twin Falls County Commissioners are holding a public hearing at 10 a.m. today on the third floor of the Twin Falls County Courthouse, 425 Shoshone Street N.

Now, the trickle-down has reached good Idaho programs like Minico and Fruitland, but the popularity of these events is growing exponentially. For instance, several prep teams, including my alma mater, played a regular-season high school game last week in Ireland.

It's a big (and expensive!) expedition, but these games are all about giving the kids a new experience and showcasing talent from other parts of the region. Whether they win or lose on the field this week is almost secondary — almost.

Hopefully both Idaho squads have some good experiences (and a win) to bring back to the Gem State.

Gone Fishing

During a recent visit to the Hagerman Wildlife Management Area, one of six WMAs managed by the Idaho Department of Fish and Game in the Magic Valley region, I met a lifelong fisherman named Don Torbett. After talking with the Wendell man for a few minutes, I realized that fishing isn't something to while away the time for Don, but something he deeply enjoys.

There's a large trout in the pond, he said with childlike excitement, probably well over 10 pounds. He's seen it come to the surface and hopes one day to catch the fish.

"Good luck," I said.

For the little while we visited, Don helped me remember how much fun it can be to fish, something I haven't done in a while, and how much fun it is to be excited about fishing. As he cast his worn jig into the pond, waiting for the next strike, he said, "I'd fish all day and all night if I could."

Record West Nile Cases Make World Diseases a Problem for U.S.

BLOOMBERG NEWS

With increasing numbers of mosquitoes in the United States carrying the West Nile and dengue viruses, it's getting a little scary to go outside.

West Nile is poised to break records this year. Almost 1,600 cases have been reported to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention so far, including 66 deaths. The virus has been in the U.S. since 1999, sickening 30,000 altogether; this year the worst outbreak has been centered around Dallas.

West Nile's cousin, dengue, also a sometimes fatal infection, has been in the U.S. since 1980, with outbreaks in Texas, Hawaii and Florida, most recently in 2010.

These are growing public-health problems, but they can also serve as opportunities to pull the U.S. squarely into the global fight against these mosquito-borne viruses.

Identified only in 1937, West Nile is a disease mainly of Africa, the Mideast and parts of Asia. Severe infections lead to brain diseases such as meningitis and encephalitis. Dengue, known as breakbone fever for the muscle and joint pain it causes, can lead to dengue hemorrhagic fever and the sometimes fatal dengue shock syndrome. As many as 100 million people are infected worldwide every year.

The two illnesses have come to the U.S. courtesy of climate change and globalization. Rising temperatures promote mosquito reproduction and survival. And infected mosquitoes easily travel via the cross-border exchange of goods. Globe-trotting people, for their part, carry viruses from endemic to nonendemic zones. (Neither dengue nor West Nile spreads directly from person to person, but a mosquito can transmit the viruses from one person to another.)

Health authorities have few good measures to cope with either disease, and are reduced to asking people in vulnerable communities to avoid exposure to mosquitoes by staying indoors in air-conditioned or well-screened quarters, wearing long pants and sleeves in the heat of summer, and using mosquito repellent. They counsel households to eliminate places where mosquitoes lay eggs, notably artificial containers that hold water.

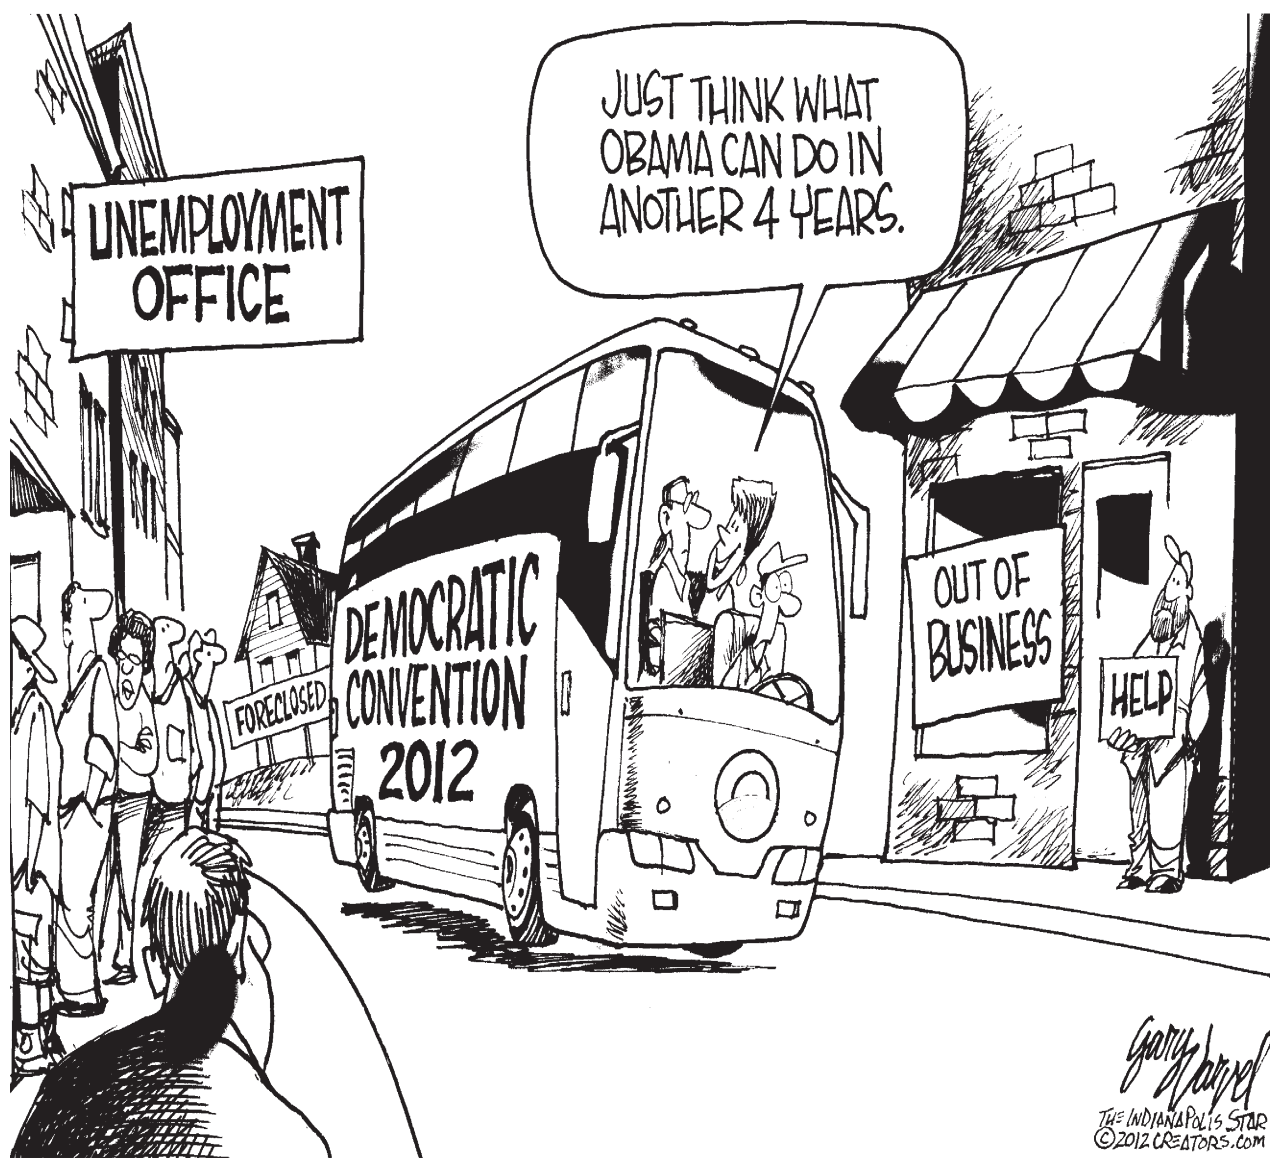

When outbreaks occur, officials apply insecticides on the ground or by air if the affected zone is large. Yet today's formulas don't pack nearly the wallop of those 50 years ago, which contained DDT.

Patients receive acetaminophen for fever and pain, fluids if they are dehydrated and get-well wishes. No vaccines, no cures and no specific medicines exist to prevent or treat dengue or West Nile.

That is not uncommon for illnesses that predominantly affect the developing world. Companies with the know-how to develop such products have generally lacked the profit motive to make the necessary investments, given that sales would be mainly in poor countries.

This failure of the market points to the need for other mechanisms. Thankfully, they exist. The U.S. government invests directly in neglected-disease research, principally through the National Institutes of Health. It also supports nonprofit organizations called product development partnerships that spur innovation and bring products for neglected diseases to market. These groups, were responsible for almost half of the 45 new global health products to treat a range of illnesses registered from 2000 to 2010.

Traditionally, government spending on neglected diseases has been seen as charity or foreign assistance. Now it must become a public-health priority for the sake of Americans, as well. Thanks to efforts of the Dengue Vaccine Initiative, a product development partnership, four experimental dengue vaccines are now undergoing trials. Yet only a few medicines to treat dengue are in the early stages of development. And research to address West Nile virus is embryonic. Funding is needed to study better methods of controlling the types of mosquitoes that spread the two viruses; especially promising is the development of genetically modified bugs that would wipe out their own species or be incapable of carrying disease.

Column Brought Back Memories of 'Farm in a Day' Project

Editor Autumn Agar's column, "The Rest of the Story" brought back memories of a time in 1954 when a busload of Future Farmers of America and their teacher, Mr. Luther, from Jerome High School went to take part in a "Farm in a Day" project at Hunt. I was one of those members. The farms we worked on were to be given to veterans of the Viet Nam War. With the help of large land moving equipment, transit surveying equipment and many tractors to do field work, we got the work on several farms completed to run water down the rows.

We teenagers whooped it up to see this accomplishment. Out of the 20 on the bus, over half of us went on to become farmers in this area, a career I have never regretted.

Times-News Should Have Played Photos Differently on Saturday's Front Page

The Mini-Cassia area has always been very supportive of its hometown veterans. Drew Nash's fine photo of the victorious Burley High School football team (Times-News, Sept. 2) should have taken a secondary position to the photo of the U.S. Marine Corps

Mounted Color Guard.

Position on the page indicates the importance of the subject. This display gave the impression that the Guard was secondary to a football team in consideration.

I taught at Burley High School for 16 years and support them in all endeavors. But I don't think the team should receive "top honors" when sharing the page with our Idaho war casualties, or with any war casualties for that matter.

The team will continue under Coach Thomas to excel. There will be plenty of opportunities to put them in star position. Our priorities demonstrate who we are.

Burley Policing Talks Go Smoothly

BY KIMBERLEE KRUESI
kkruesi@magicvalley.com

BURLEY • Cassia County commissioners submitted a draft of the county's law enforcement contract for FY 2013 to the city of Burley to review Tuesday.

And after last year's dispute over a decades-old policing partnership, that review is taking place calmly and agreeably.

The city briefly explored the idea of its own police department in 2011 amid concerns of how the county approached service in Burley. But four months of negotiations produced a contract that added "City Division" decals to Burley sheriff's vehicles and altered both protocol and communication regarding calls in Burley and the rest of the county.

Now, the draft copy of next year's contract includes only minor tweaks to the current agreement, said County Commission Chairman Dennis Crane.

Under the contract, the city is proposing to pay $1.4 million to the county for police services, Crane said.

"Everything is basically the same," Crane said. "We just made sure to add an appointment in the contract to begin the budgeting process in March, a little earlier than what we do now."

For fiscal 2012, the contract costs the city $1.35 million. However, this year, city officials are looking to increase the police service budget in order to pay for salary increases and purchase a new police vehicle, said Mark Mitton, city administrator.

raising quality cattle," Hill said.

Along with a passion for cattle, Hill said Tugaw was a good horseman, a considerate neighbor and was a great environmentalist.

"He took care of the land and it took care of him," Hill said.

Tugaw also took care of his friends, Hill said.

"He was just a kind, gentle person," he said. "He took better care of his friends and relatives — keeping contact and providing encouragement more than anybody I've ever known."

Just recently, fire swept through most of Tugaw's grazing land, but Tugaw remained optimistic and was looking for ways to keep the herd fed, Hill said.

On Monday evening, Hill said, Tugaw was checking on his cattle in grazing allotment in the South Hills and enjoyed that he could combine his love of flying with caring for his herd.

"He couldn't have been happier than when he was up there," Hill said.

Monday's crash is still under investigation by the Federal Aviation Administration and the National Transportation Safety Board.

Allen Kenitzer with the FAA said Tugaw's plane departed the Twin Falls airport earlier Monday. The aircraft was completely destroyed, he said.

Mini-Cassia Search and Rescue, Rock Creek Ambulance and Air St. Luke's assisted in the response.

According to a 1999 profile on Tugaw in Ag Weekly following his entrance into the Livestock Hall of Fame, Tugaw grew up on a cattle ranch in Okanogan, Wash., and in 1954 graduated from Washington State University in Pullman with a degree in veterinary medicine. Tugaw then entered the U.S. Air Force where he served at a hospital in Taipei, Taiwan, the article states. After two years in the service, Tugaw opened the Central Valley Veterinary Hospital in Salt Lake City with an uncle and later opened several more clinics in the Salt Lake Area.

In the article, Tugaw spoke of the variety of experiences he had throughout his life, while always returning to ranching.

"I wanted to be a cowboy and own a ranch forever and ever and ever, so that's what I did," Tugaw said at the time.

Cold Case

"Without any solid evidence coming forward we're really at a standstill," Wilson said of the case.

Officers interviewed everyone at the bar, but none admitted to seeing the shooting, he said.

"It's a crime that's 21 years old now," Wilson said.

One would-be witness struggles with whether they really saw anything, he said. Some people flat-out refuse to talk to police, while some who do come forward prove to be unreliable, he said.

"We know who our players are," Wilson said. "It's a matter of who pulled the trigger."

The most active cold case is the investigation of the murder of Su Cha Kim, who owned Lee's Oriental Massage at 1037 Blue Lakes Blvd. N.

Lewin, who was the assigned detective on the case, said Kim lived in the rear of the business.

A cook who lived nearby and walked by Kim's apartment on the way to work noticed her door was open two days in a row and called police.

"She has also these different kinds of clients," Lewin said. "There's a wide range of viable suspects in hurting her."

DREW NASH • TIMES-NEWS

Twin Falls Police Staff Sgt. John Wilson talks about three different cold cases Tuesday at the police department in Twin Falls.

Eventually, Lewin said, detectives discovered Kim's credit card was being used in several locations in the Boise area and Ontario, Ore.

Whoever was using the card went to a gas station and a mall, but the first charge was at another Asian-owned massage parlor in Garden City, he said. Police also had video of the suspect in a gas station, but never had a view of his face.

"We always felt like we were a step behind," he said.

Wilson said he believes more than one person out there knows who killed Kim. It's just a matter of someone coming forward.

"Inevitably it becomes a part of you," Lewin said. "We have to speak for the victims!"

As the years go on, Lewin said he can't help but think of a promise he made to Kim's sister.

"She said, 'You find who did this,'" Lewin said. "I looked her in the face and I looked her in the eye and I said 'I will!'" have a successful year.

Dickinson said there's just a short window of opportunity to get students excited about being in high school. Soon, they'll fall into a routine.

The goal, he said, is that their enthusiasm from the first day will continue.

Thousands of students around south-central Idaho went back to school Tuesday. And for new high-schoolers, there are many unknowns.

Madison Howell, 14, said she's nervous about getting lost at Canyon Ridge High for the first few days.

She described being at high school as a "different experience."

But she and a few classmates sitting nearby in the school auditorium — including 14-year-old Lorren Marsh — said the orientation event, though intense, made the first day more fun.

Howell and Marsh were part of the team that won the scavenger hunt during freshman orientation.

Afterward, they sat on the edge of the auditorium stage and waited for the other teams — with about 15 students each — to return.

Twin Falls High also hosted an orientation event Tuesday morning for its freshmen.

Student numbers at Canyon Ridge have grown since the school opened its doors in 2009.

When voters passed a $49.7 million bond in 2006 for a new high school, enrollment was projected to hit 1,000 students five years after the school opened.

It hasn't quite been five years, but Dickinson estimates there are already between 1,140 and 1,150 students.

"We've grown faster than expected," he said.

Dickinson said most of the growth is due to area students transferring from other school districts.

The high school's growing number of students meshes with the Twin Falls School District's enrollment trends.

Superintendent Wiley Dobbs told the Times-News last month that he expects the district will have 8,100 students — about 200 more than last year.

While teachers worked in their classrooms Tuesday morning, Canyon Ridge freshmen filled the school auditorium.

Thousands of students around south-central Idaho headed back to school Tuesday. Here are some updates about the new school year.

Jerome School District: Most students in the Jerome School District were back Tuesday. But at the high school and middle school, only sixth-graders and ninth-graders attended.

Other middle- and high-schoolers return today.

Superintendent Dale Layne said enrollment numbers aren't solid yet, but anticipates a 100-plus-student increase over last year.

There are 83 more students in kindergarten through fifth grade and 37 more in middle school.

As for the new traffic light near Jerome High School at the intersection of Main Street and Tiger Drive, it won't be activated until today or Thursday.

The Idaho Transportation Department originally planned to have the light online Tuesday.

Buhl School District: Superintendent Byron Stutzman said enrollment numbers are up, but he's not sure by how much.

Popplewell Elementary School has one new kindergarten teaching position to accommodate the growth.

Xavier Charter School: Head of Schools Thad Biggers said about 650 students are enrolled in kindergarten through 12th grade.

Minidoka County School District: It's the second week of school for students in Minidoka County. And there are about 3,980 students enrolled — down about 20 students from last year.

But Superintendent Scott Rogers said numbers continue to change each day.

One of the largest changes so far this school year, he said, has been new federal requirements for school lunches.

school didn't arrive until 11 a.m. for their first day.

During freshman orientation, topics ranged from bullying prevention to getting involved in activities outside the classroom.

When it comes to academics, Dickinson told the freshmen they all start their four years with a 4.0 grade-point average. It's their choice whether to maintain it.

Soon, freshmen will be asked to sign a class banner and fill out a pledge card committing to graduate with their class in four years.

Dickinson also encouraged the freshmen to look for classmates who are struggling and help them.

"This is your class," he said.

Fire Nears Idaho County Community; Some Flee

LEWISTON (AP) • Firefighters worked to protect homes from a wildfire in remote Idaho County on Tuesday as wind gusts pushed the blaze toward the community of Dixie, which some people have fled under a voluntary evacuation order.

The U.S. Forest Service began asking residents to leave Monday as the McGuire Fire Complex grew near the unincorporated community in north-central Idaho.

Some residents heeded the warning to leave town, but others planned on staying put, said fire incident commander

Shawn Pearson.

Firefighters estimated Tuesday the blaze was two miles from the center of Dixie and one mile from the nearest structure, he said.

"They're looking for areas where we can stop or slow down the fire's progression southeast into Dixie," Pearson said.

The fire started with a lightning strike on Aug. 27 and has since spread to more than 24 square miles.

Forest Service spokesman Ted Pettis told the Lewiston Tribune that fire crews are "working on structure" and that about 180 firefighters have battled the blaze.

The gusts were expected to shift to the southeast and in a more direct line toward Dixie, which has between 30 and 35 residents and more than 100 cabins that are occupied off and on throughout the year as vacation homes.

Also Burning

In southern Idaho, the state's three largest wildfires were proving difficult to control.

The Mustang Complex of fires are not contained and have been burning for more than a month along the Idaho-Montana border, so far covering approximately 377 square miles.

The fires will be difficult to contain without rain or snow, officials said. The community of North Fork is threatened and a community meeting was postponed due to evacuations ordered along portions of Highway 93 late Monday, fire managers said.

In central Idaho, firefighters worked on a small section of the 204-square-mile Halstead Fire, and vehicles along a portion of Highway 75, between Stanley and Challis, were being escorted by pilot car. The fire is about three miles from the mountain tourist town of Stanley.

To the south, a blaze that started when a utility vehicle caught fire in the Boise National Forest early last month has burned through 227 square miles.

Firefighters who protected the small town of Featherville from the blaze known as the Trinity Ridge Fire reported progress, saying the fire that was about one-third contained over the weekend was more than 40 percent contained by Tuesday.

Kayakers paddle into waves at the new whitewater park on the Boise River in Boise.

Boise's Whitewater Park Proves Popular

BOISE (AP) • A kayaker paddles into a wave at the new whitewater park on the Boise River, dropping suddenly from sight so that only the top of his bright-red helmet and the flashing blades of his paddle are visible amid the spray.

A few moments later, he pops up and flies through the whitewater, turning gently as he zooms downstream, hits an eddy, and paddles back to do it again.

While Spokane has struggled for years to achieve the vision of a whitewater park in the Spokane River, Boise's opened this summer, and has proven highly popular.

"I think it's sweet," declared Mason Shaw, 23, shaking water from his hair after a wave ride that left him shouting, "Wooh!"

The Boise River Park that's now attracting kayakers, surfers and boogie-boarders in throngs didn't just happen. "It was 12 years in the works," said Amy Stahl, Boise city parks spokeswoman. "They're very complicated projects."

The $3.6 million whitewater park is actually just the first of three phases. The second phase will develop the new

Esther Simplot Park along the riverfront just downstream, with parking lots and restrooms, and the third will add more in-river features.

"We did a lot of research, probably talked to 15 or 20 others across the country," said Boise city parks Superintendent Tom Governale. "And every one of 'em told us it wasn't so much the boaters, it was the spectators you have to worry about."

Boise's new park is right along the city's riverfront Greenbelt path and includes an overlook, a line of benches and a natural-looking seating area made of boulders that can accommodate a couple of hundred onlookers.

"It took a long time, between the fundraising and the design and just getting the political support for it," Governale said. "I really give a lot of credit to the citizens group, the Friends of the Park — they had a lot of perseverance, a lot of dedication."

The previously channelized site targeted for the whitewater park was once an industrial area marked by riverfront slaughterhouses, and an aging irrigation diversion dam had deteriorated and made the river hazardous there.

The first phase of the Boise River Park replaced the Thurman Mill diversion dam with a new one that both efficiently delivers water for irrigation, and also contains two high-tech "Waveshaper" mechanisms that can be adjusted daily to create waves.

Democrats: Romney 'Doesn't Get It'

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) • Democrats ridiculed Republican Mitt Romney as a millionaire candidate for president who "quite simply doesn't get it" and worse on Tuesday, opening night of a national convention aimed at propelling Barack Obama to re-election despite high unemployment and national economic distress.

Obama "knows better than anyone there's more hard work to do" to fix the sputtering economy, said San Antonio Mayor Julian Castro, the convention keynote speaker, sharing the prime-time spotlight with first lady Michelle Obama.

Delegates cheered as a parade of speakers extolled Obama's support for abortion rights and gay marriage, for consumer protections enacted under his signature health care law and for the auto industry bailout he won from Congress in his first year in office.

"He said he'd take out bin Laden, and with our great SEAL team, he did," declared former Virginia Gov. Tim Kaine in one of several references to the military raid that ended the life of the terrorist mastermind behind the attacks of Sept. 11, 2001.

The crowd cheered even louder when the subject turned — dismissively — to Romney.

"If Mitt was Santa Claus, he'd fire the reindeer and outsource the elves," former Ohio Gov. Ted Strickland said in a biting speech.

Obama was back home in the White House after a campaigned appearance in Virginia earlier in the day. He said he'd be watching on television when his wife spoke.

There was no end to the appeals for donations to his re-election campaign, falling further behind Romney in cash on hand with each passing month. "If you think Barack's the right man for the job, please show your support with a donation of $5 or more today," the first lady emailed supporters a little more than 90 minutes before her scheduled speech.

Polls made the race for the White House a tight one, almost certain to be decided in a string of eight or 10 battleground states where neither the president nor Romney holds a clear advantage. There was ample evidence of an underperforming economy, from a report that said manufacturing activity declined for a third straight month to a government announcement that the government's debt exceeded $16 trillion for the first time.

Castro was unsparing in criticizing Romney, suggesting the former Massachusetts governor might not even be the driving force on the Republican ticket this fall.

"First they called it 'trickle down,' the supply side," he said of the economic proposals backed by Republicans. "Now it's Romney/Ryan. Or is it Ryan/Romney?"

"Either way, their theory has been tested. It failed. ... Mitt Romney just doesn't get it," Castro said. Romney's running mate is Wisconsin Rep. Paul Ryan.

Insider Book Details Komen Foundation Rift

NEW YORK (AP) • Criticizing major players on both sides, former Susan G. Komen for the Cure vice president Karen Handel has written a blistering insider's account of the prominent cancer charity's decision to halt grants to Planned Parenthood and its swift retreat in the face of an intense, widespread backlash.

Titled "Planned Bullyhood" and due for publication on Sept. 11, the book depicts Planned Parenthood as an aggressive, partisan organization that was willing to weaken Komen to further a liberal political agenda. However, Handel also assails Komen's leadership as indecisive, timid and politically naive, and says the hasty decision to backtrack was "a terrible mistake."

Handel was hired by Komen as vice president for public policy in April 2011 after losing a Republican gubernatorial primary in Georgia, and was given the task of figuring out how to disengage Komen from Planned Parenthood. The grants from Komen were for breast-cancer education and screening, but the charity was under pressure from anti-abortion groups to cut ties with Planned Parenthood because it is the nation's leading provider of abortion.

Late in 2011, Komen made a final decision to halt the grants, which totaled $680,000 that year. However, the rift did not become public knowledge until Jan. 31, when The Associated Press broke the news.

Reaction was immediate and passionate. Twitter and Facebook were flooded with denunciations of Komen's action.

San Antonio Mayor Highlights Opening Night

MCCLATCHY NEWSPAPERS

CHARLOTTE, N.C. • San Antonio Mayor Julian Castro walked onto the stage

Tuesday night to share the story of how his grandmother came from Mexico to build a life in the United States, ultimately leading to his time in the spotlight — and Democrats are counting on him to energize the party's base and electrify Latino voters of all political persuasions who could be decisive in the November election.

Latinos are to take center stage on opening night of the Democratic National Convention. Not only was Castro the first Latino to give the keynote address, but he would be speaking to the highest number of Latino delegates, 800, at any presidential convention.

Latino voters are being wooed by both Democrats and Republicans to a degree never seen before.

The fastest-growing voter bloc could be the difference in November, as the election will likely be decided in battleground states such as Florida and Colorado that have large Hispanic populations. And Latino delegates in North Carolina are reminding supporters that Obama won the Tar Heel state by a mere 14,000 votes.

Exit polls showed Obama received 26,000 more Latino votes than John McCain, according to the Immigration Policy Institute.

At a Hispanic Caucus meeting, delegate Matty Lazo-Chadderton called on South Carolina Latino delegates to come to Charlotte to help mobilize Latinos in the state.

"We're fired up," said La-zo-Chadderton, a Cary, N.C., delegate originally from Peru. "We're walking the walk. The Hispanic vote is more important than people realize."

Latinos make up just a fraction of North Carolina's 6.4 million registered voters, but their voter registration numbers have doubled in the past four years. Arturo Vargas, executive director of the National Association of Latino Elected and Appointed Officials, said Latinos could decide the state if they vote in a bloc.

"Everyone wants to be asked to the dance," he said. "The key here is that there will be no majority party in this country without participation from Latinos. We're already 16 percent of the population, 9 percent of the voters. It's only going to increase."

In excerpts of his speech released by the campaign earlier Tuesday, Castro criticized Romney for failing to understand the challenges most Americans face and that sometimes they can use a little help.

"Republicans tell us that if the most prosperous among us do even better, that somehow the rest of us will too," he said, according to the prepared speech. "Folks ... we've heard that before."

Rep. Debbie Wasserman Schultz, chairwoman of the Democratic National Committee, warned Latinos at a Hispanic Caucus meeting this week that a loss for Obama would be devastating for Latinos who have benefited from Obama's policies, including a new health care law and deferred deportations for young undocumented immigrants.

35 Years Later, Voyager 1 Heads for the Stars

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) • Thirty-five years after leaving Earth, Voyager 1 is reaching for the stars.

Sooner or later, the workhorse spacecraft will bid adieu to the solar system and enter a new realm of space — the first time a manmade object will have escaped to the other side.

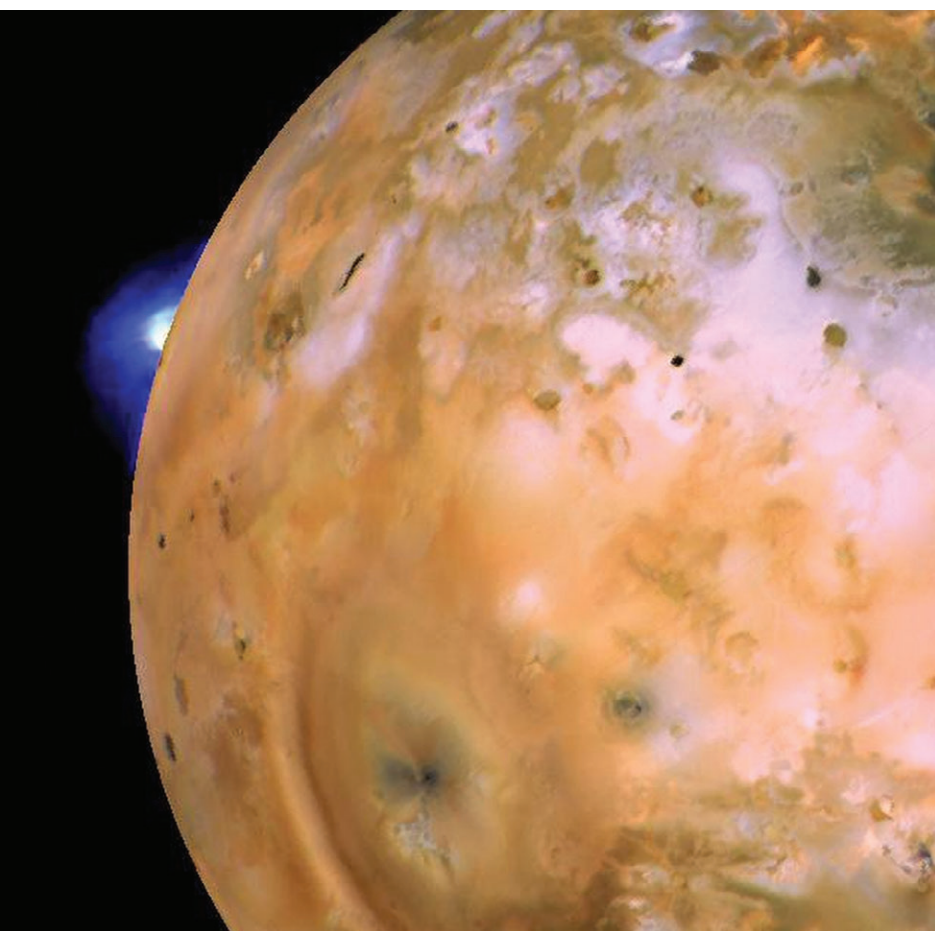

Perhaps no one on Earth will relish the moment more than 76-year-old Ed Stone, who has toiled on the project from the start.

"We're anxious to get outside and find what's out there," he said.

When NASA's Voyager 1 and Voyager 2 first rocketed out of Earth's grip in 1977, no one knew how long they would live. Now, they are the longest-operating spacecraft in history and the most distant, at billions of miles from Earth but in different directions.

Wednesday marks the 35th anniversary of Voyager 1's launch to Jupiter and Saturn. It is now flitting around the fringes of the solar system, which is enveloped in a giant plasma bubble. This hot and turbulent area is created by a stream of charged particles from the sun.

Outside the bubble is a new frontier in the Milky Way — the space between stars. Once it plows through, scientists expect a calmer environment by comparison.

When that would happen is anyone's guess. Voyager 1 is uncharted celestial territory. One thing is clear: The boundary that separates the solar system and interstellar space is near, but it could take days, months or years to cross that milestone.

Voyager 1 is currently more than 11 billion miles from the sun. Twin Voyager 2 trails behind at 9 billion miles from the sun.

Elaine Joyce Ostic

Aug. 6, 1932-Aug. 28, 2012

JEROME • Elaine Joyce Ostic, formerly of Jerome, passed peacefully from this life to be with her Lord on Tuesday, Aug. 28, 2012, at her home in Leeds, Utah, after a long struggle with Alzheimer's disease.

Family was always Mom's priority. Her greatest joy was to have everyone together. Her time, energy and resources were generously spent on loved ones, friends and the church family she served, cared for and labored with for so many years. In her unassuming way, she was always willingly to share anything that was needed. Everyone was welcomed into her home and no one ever left hungry or feeling they were alone in this world. She leaves us all a lasting legacy of faithfulness, endurance and love. She will be missed by all who knew her.

She leaves behind a devoted husband, Bronson Ostic; one brother, Drue (Betty Jo) Hogland; five children, Fred (Vickie) Ostic, Linda (Kendrick) Greer, David Ostic, Tim (Carla) Ostic and John (Tonya) Ostic; 10 grandchildren, Shannon, Kristy, Jennifer, Michael, Samuel, Benjamin, Nathan, Kevin, Katie and Kylie; three great-grandchildren, Michael, Mahala and Delaney; six nieces; and one nephew.

Born in Melrose, N.M., on Aug. 6, 1932, to Fred and Thelma Hogland, she was raised in Albuquerque and graduated from high school there in June 1950. On June 17, 1950, she married Bronson, and they began their journey together. After living throughout New Mexico and Nevada, they moved to Jerome in 1967. A devoted wife, she and Bronson were married for 62 years, facing all the sunshine and storms that life brought their way together, overcoming many obstacles and celebrating innumerable joys. Their faith in God, trust and devotion to each other has been a lifelong inspiration to many. Elaine's life was characterized by her love for the Lord and her family.

Elaine was preceded in death by her father, her mother, one brother and one nephew.

A family graveside service will be planned at a future date. In lieu of flowers, the family suggests donations in her name to the charity of your choice or to the Jerome Church of Christ Memorial Library Fund, P.O. Box 259, Jerome, ID 83338. Arrangements are under the care of Farnsworth Mortuary of Jerome.

Nellie Eaton Henning

Dec. 10, 1916-Aug. 28, 2012

PEORIA, Ariz. • Nellie Eaton Henning of Peoria, Arizona, a 50-year resident of Twin Falls, Idaho, died Tuesday, Aug. 28, 2012, at the age of 95.

Over the next 20-plus years, Harm and Nellie were selflessly devoted to raising their three nearly normal kids, with much assistance from Memorial Lutheran School and Immanuel Lutheran Church, the other passions besides family, in their lives. In the '60s, with all the kids in school, Nellie began to work outside the home, first as the church secretary at Immanuel Lutheran, and then at the urging of Isabel Ohlaug, a family friend, at the Twin Falls Bank and Trust, where Nellie worked in various capacities from 1964 until her retirement in 1984. Harm and Nellie moved to Mesa, Ariz., in 1991, Harm died the following year, and Nellie has lived ever since in Mesa, Glendale or Peoria. Throughout all the years, her family and her church were the cornerstones of Nellie's life.

Nellie was preceded in death by her parents; all of her brothers and sisters; and her beloved nephew, Melvin (Vera) Eaton. She is survived by three heartbroken kids, Sherryl (Tom) Valentine of Sedona, Ariz., Ted (Donna) Henning of Goodyear, Ariz., and John (Jill) Henning of Tigard, Ore.; as well as two grandsons, Martin and Mark Kniep; and five great-grandchildren. She is also survived by a myriad of nephews and nieces who will have many fond memories of Aunt Nellie and will long remember the part she played in their lives.

Nellie was the last of her generation on either side of the Eaton/Henning family. Nellie was born in Franklin, Neb., on Dec. 10, 1916, the youngest child of Joseph Eaton and Laura (Kelso) Eaton. She was much loved, and probably spoiled, by her parents and older siblings, John Eaton, Ruth Eaton Bush, Nancy Eaton Remaley and Joseph L. (Doady) Eaton, as well as four special nephews, Melvin and Eugene (Bill) Eaton, and Bob and Dean Bush, who were almost like kid brothers to her. She grew up on the family farm outside Franklin, graduated from Franklin High School and taught in the rural schools of Franklin County until her fateful meeting with Harm Henning, a native of Rost Township in Minnesota, who had somehow wound up in Franklin operating a service station with his older brother, Jack. It was at this station that Nellie literally fell (she always claimed) out of the car and into the arms of Harm. After that, everything changed quickly for Nellie as Harm, in a few short years, turned her into a Henning, a Lutheran, a mother (Sherryl, in 1940) and an Idahoan in 1942.

As the Eaton family farm slowly blew off into Kansas and Missouri during the Dust Bowl days of the '30s, all of the Eatons, save John and Delores and their family, migrated to Twin Falls, so Harm and Nellie decided to follow, a decision for which their children are eternally grateful. In Twin Falls, Nellie devoted herself to being a wife and mother (Ted in '44 and John in '50).

A memorial service for Nellie will be held Thursday, Sept. 6, at Good Shepherd in Peoria, with a graveside service to be held in Twin Falls at a later date. In lieu of flowers, the family suggests donations to Immanuel Lutheran Church or School of Twin Falls.

When some of her children joined their father farming, she decided to become a rural mail carrier with the United States Postal Service of Jerome, Idaho. She had 20-plus years of service to the USPS and became friends with all. Lorna was an avid Democratic National Convention supporter and was instrumental in several of Congressman Richard Stallings' campaigns. She was president of the Catholic Women's League at St. Jerome's Catholic Church.

OBITUARIES

Betty Stellene Frantz

May 28, 1926-Sept. 2, 2012

TWIN FALLS • Betty Frantz, 86, of Twin Falls, passed away at her home Sunday, Sept. 2, 2012. Betty was welcomed back into the loving arms of Art, her husband of 66 years.

Betty was born May 28, 1926, to Charles and Norma Collins in Crowley, Colo. In 1944 while at a USO dance, she met Arthur W. Frantz. She and Art were married Feb. 16, 1945, and were inseparable until Art's passing in October 2011. Together, they established a dental practice spanning more than 30 years, raised a family and became an integral part of the Twin Falls community. Although she preferred to remain out of the spotlight, she was the heart and soul of Art's endeavors and participated in many capacities with the Dilettantes and Magic Valley Little Theater. In 2010, Betty and Art received the "Lifetime Achievement" award from the Magic Valley Arts Council and, in 2007, she and Art were chosen as "Pioneers of the Year" by the city of Twin Falls.

It's difficult to describe Betty's life, not because it was complex but simply because she was "Mom." Although appearing to always be in a supporting role, Betty was a star in her own right. Her love of Bridge and the discipline required to master the game earned her recognition in the Bridge community, not only on a local and state level but on the national stage as well. Betty's creative thirst was quenched by the hand-crafted quilts she designed. Her talents with scraps of material and a quilting rack were unequaled, and the pieces she created were sought by many and are still cherished by the people who were lucky enough to receive one.

In her later years, arts and crafts became the vehicle in which she could raise countless contributions for her favorite causes and organizations. Among her passions was the beloved Rock Creek Community Church, which benefited often from her seemingly endless creative ideas to raise funds for their needs. Betty was a friend to many organizations, including the Battered Women's Shelter, Valley House, Jubilee House and the Humane Society. Mom was the type of woman who never wanted anything for herself but was constantly looking out for the others.

Perhaps this is the reason why animals played such a significant role in her life. Her true love of the many dogs and cats that made their way into her world was ever present. Since her passing, her cats, Tom and Jerry, have wandered aimlessly in search of her. There are stories told of a woman who, after learning that the animal shelter was running low on food, would raise money and unexpectedly show up with grocery carts full of food for her hungry friends. Their friend's name was Betty.

If ever there was a bargain to be found, Betty found it. Her knowledge of antiques and collectables, as a result of conducting estate sales for many years, was uncanny, and on Saturdays, you would find mom making the rounds at every garage sale for "that" bargain. She also loved spending time at the Twin Falls Senior Citizen Center and cherished her lunches spent with friends and a spirited Bridge game on Monday afternoons.

Betty is survived by a daughter, Jeanne English; and three sons, Dave (Raedine) Frantz, Rick (Sandi) Frantz and Matthew Frantz; a sister, Mary Ann Koester; and a brother, Charles Herbert Collins Jr., both of Colorado Springs, Colo.; 10 grandchildren; and 13 great-grandchildren. She was preceded in death by her parents; her husband of 66 years, Art; a brother, Lloyd (Jake) Collins; and a great-granddaughter, Makennah Anderson.

A celebration of Betty's life will be held at 11 a.m. Friday, Sept. 7, at Reynolds Funeral Chapel, 2466 Addison Ave. E. in Twin Falls. Cremation is under the direction of Reynolds Funeral Chapel and, at the family's request, a private family graveside interment will take place after the service. Friends are asked to gather at the Rock Creek Community Church, 252 Fifth Ave. E. in Twin Falls, for a luncheon and to share stories and thoughts with the family immediately following the service.

In lieu of flowers, the family asks that donations be made to the Twin Falls Humane Society. Contributions may be given to funeral chapel staff or mailed to Twin Falls Human Society, 420 Victory Ave., Twin Falls, ID 83301.

Services are under the direction of Trent Stimpson and staff at Reynolds Funeral Chapel in Twin Falls. Condolences may be left for the family by visiting www.reynoldschapel.com.

"Life is not measured by the number of breaths we take,

But by the moments that take our breath away."

Thank you, Mom, for the many moments that took our breath away — Jeanne, Dave, Rick, Matthew.

Harold Gene 'Deno' Fitzpatrick

Oct. 31, 1934-Sept. 1, 2012

EDEN • Harold Gene "Deno" Fitzpatrick of Eden, Idaho, passed away quietly at home Saturday morning, Sept. 1, 2012.

Deno was born Oct. 31, 1934, in Clarkridge, Ark., to Odaus and Myrtle (Crawford) Fitzpatrick. Deno originally came to Idaho in 1951 but made Idaho his permanent home in 1952. On Aug. 29, 1952, he married Imogene Bentley and lived in or around Eden the rest of his life.

Deno did not have the word "can't" in his vocabulary. He was always a hard worker and gave more than what was expected of him. During his working career, he held many positions to make sure that he took care of his family. He worked on farms, a machine shop, bean warehouses and finally in the '70s, he started his own welding business that he did in the evenings and on the weekends while still holding down his other full-time job. Deno was a great fix-it man and spent many happy hours working on the lawn mowers, bicycles and whatever the neighbors brought him to fix. He loved being helpful. He was a volunteer fireman for the city of Eden for 30 years and was the fire chief from 1987 to 1988 before finally retiring from that position.

Deno loved the outdoors. In his younger years he loved to hunt, but his great passion was fishing. He loved to get up early and head to a fishing hole with his fishing buddies. He was also an avid game player and, especially in his later years, loved to play gin rummy, checkers and dominoes. He loved music. He loved the "jam sessions" that brought his musical friends and family together. He loved to play the guitar and sing.

He became disabled in 1990 with a shoulder injury and soon after was diagnosed with Parkinson's disease and had several operations to fix a neck injury. In May of 2012, he was diagnosed with brain cancer, but through all of these disabling medical issues, he kept his positive attitude and sense of humor. Deno was baptized in 1964 and was a faithful member of the Church of Christ.

He was preceded in death by his father, mother, one sister and five brothers. He is survived by his wife, Imogene; children, Jeff Fitzpatrick, Laurie (Jim) McCall and Lisa (Jerry Russo) Williams; eight grandchildren; and 10 great-grandchildren. He is also survived by three sisters; one brother; and many nieces and nephews.

A memorial service for Deno will be held at 11 a.m. Saturday, Sept. 8, at White Mortuary "Chapel by the Park," 136 Fourth Ave. E. in Twin Falls, Idaho. A community potluck and gathering will be held starting at 1:30 p.m. Saturday, Sept. 8, at the Eden Church of Christ. Those who would like to bring a side dish are welcome to do so.

In lieu of flowers the family is requesting that donations be made to Silver and Gold Senior Citizens, Eden, ID 83325 or to Hospice Vision, 1770 Parkview Drive, Twin Falls, ID 83301.

Arrangements are under the direction of Dustin Godfrey and the staff at White Mortuary. Condolences may be left for the family at www.whitemortuary.com.

Edward G. Engkraf

April 29, 1927-Sept. 2, 2012

HEYBURN • Edward George Engkraf, age 85, of Heyburn, passed away Sunday, Sept. 2, 2012, at his home with his family by his side.

Ed was born April 29, 1927, in Rupert, Idaho, the son of Jacob Victor and Bertha Agnes (Schmidt) Engkraf. He received his education in Rupert and graduated from Rupert High School. He served in the United States Army during World War II and, upon his honorable discharge, held the rank of staff sergeant. He married Daisy Laney in 1947 and together they had three children, Sherrie, Randal and Rodney. They later divorced. On Sept. 9, 2009, Ed married Maurine Seal Smiley and joining their family were Maurine's two children, Ted and Candy.

Ed was an extremely hard worker and had farmed, worked in heavy bridged construction, owned and operated a metal fabrication business and also worked for the Titan Missile Complex in Warden, Wash., the Hanford Atomic Energy Site and as president of North American Conveyor.

He was a member of St. Nicholas Catholic Church in Rupert, Veterans of Foreign Wars and had served in the Coast Guard Reserves. He loved fishing and hunting, his friends and family, and most recently enjoyed driving beet truck for the past several years. Most important is the fact that he was a loving husband, father, grandfather, brother and uncle — always willing to lend a helping hand to his friends, family or anyone in need. He will be deeply missed by all.

Military rites will be provided by the Mini-Cassia Veterans Organization. Arrangements have been entrusted to the care of the Rasmussen Funeral Home of Burley.

Owner of Restaurant Touted by Andy Griffith Dies

MOUNT AIRY, N.C. (AP) • The owner of a Mt. Airy, N.C., restaurant made famous by "The Andy Griffith Show" has died after a long illness.

Moody Funeral Home director Rixie Gordon said

Charles Dowell died Tuesday. He was 84.

Dowell was known for his "World Famous Pork Chop Sandwich," and for the many years he stood in the window of his restaurant cooking the pork chops while tourists watched through a window.

Griffith's TV character, Sheriff Andy Taylor, once recommended Snappy Lunch as a nice place to take a date.

The restaurant opened in 1923 inside a former post-office building and provided lunch for mill workers and students at nearby schools. Dowell started working there in 1943. After buying out his partner, he became the sole owner in 1960.

Stoner Voters Targeted in Dutch Election Campaign

BY MIKE CORDER
Associated Press

THE HAGUE, Netherlands • With slogans like "Don't let your vote go up in smoke!", owners of the free-wheeling cafes where bags of hashish are sold alongside cups of coffee are mounting a get-out-the-stoner-vote campaign ahead of next week's Dutch election.

The campaigners are calling on their sometimes apathetic dope smoking clientele to get out and support political parties that oppose the recently introduced "weed pass" that is intended to rein in the cafes known as coffee shops and close them altogether to foreign tourists.

At a coffee shop in The Hague, a member of staff selling weed wears a T-shirt emblazoned with a modified Uncle Sam style poster calling on smokers to "Vote against the weed pass on Sept. 12." Under the new system, coffee shops become member-only clubs and only Dutch residents can apply for a pass to get in. The cafes are limited to a maximum of 2,000 members.

The online vote2smoke.nl campaign offers cannabis and marijuana users voting advice by showing which political parties support dumping the "weed pass," which came into force in the southern Netherlands earlier this year and is intended to roll out over the whole country in coming years.

Joep Oomen of the legalize cannabis movement says it is hard to know exactly how big the pot-smoking constituency is, but he estimates it at around half a million people in this nation of 16 million.

Basically the advice to them boils down to this: Voting for any political party on the left is good, and any party on the right is bad.

One champion of the smokers' lobby is Socialist Party leader Emile Roemer, a jovial 50-year-old former teacher whose party is expected to make significant gains at the Sept. 12 election.

Speaking at a campaign event this weekend, Roemer called the weed pass "incredibly stupid" and vowed to scrap it if he wins power.

He said the pass system simply pushes drug dealers onto the streets and out of the controlled environment of the coffee shops — "so stop the wietpas," he said, using its Dutch name.

Jerome Croonenberg, enjoying a joint at The Hut coffee shop in a side street close to the Dutch parliament building, said he would be voting for Roemer because of his coffee shop policy.

"I will vote to keep coffee shops open so I can keep smoking," he said Tuesday. The center-left Labor Party, which is surging in pre-election polls thanks to strong performances by its leader Diederik Samsom in televised debates, also advocates scrapping the pass and replacing it with legislation that would further enshrine tolerance of marijuana in Dutch law and regulate not only coffee shops but also growers.

However, the coffee shops still have a fight on their hands — the conservative VVD party of outgoing prime minister Mark Rutte is topping polls and looks set to become the biggest single party. It was a VVD-led coalition that introduced the weed pass and it is standing by the policy.

If Rutte winds up negotiating a centrist coalition, all parties would likely be willing to bend or drop their position on the pass in favor of other policy goals.

Coffee shops have long been tolerated in the Netherlands because authorities believe they keep dope smokers away from street dealers of more dangerous and outlawed drugs like cocaine and heroin.

The cafes have become tourist magnets in Amsterdam, but Rutte's government clamped down on them because they are blamed for crime, traffic and parking problems in towns and cities close to the Dutch borders with Germany and Belgium.

In those places, authorities say that many of the clients are foreign drug runners who drive in from neighboring countries to stock up on marijuana.

The VVD's election manifesto underscores the party's support for the weed pass, and other right-leaning parties who back the crackdown on cannabis.

Marc Josemans, who runs a coffee shop in the southern city of Maastricht and has long fought against the weed pass, says he is attempting to push smokers to the voting booths to support parties that reject the pass.

UN chief: Both Sides in Syria Violating Rights

BY EDITH M. LEDERER
Associated Press

UNITED NATIONS • U.N. Secretary-General Ban Ki-moon accused both the Syrian government and the opposition Tuesday of large-scale human rights violations, including torturing and reportedly executing prisoners and failing to protect civilians fleeing the war-ravaged country in record numbers.

In an address to the U.N. General Assembly, Ban demanded that those responsible for violating international humanitarian and human rights laws be held accountable.

The U.N. chief went before the 193-nation world body to report on an intensifying conflict that he said has taken "a particularly brutal turn." He warned that "the entire region is being engulfed by the complex dynamics of the conflict."

Activists say the civil war has claimed between 23,000 and 26,000 lives.

The U.N. refugee agency said Tuesday that more than 100,000 Syrians fled their country in August, the highest monthly total since the crisis began in March 2011. A total of 234,368 Syrians have fled to neighboring countries in the past 17 months, the agency said.

Ban said more than 2.5 million people inside Syria need assistance, along with those who have fled to Turkey, Jordan, Lebanon and Iraq. He urged donors to come forward, saying the U.N. appeal for $180 million is only half-funded.

The U.N. chief accused Syrian forces of indiscriminately shelling densely populated areas with heavy weapons, tanks and military aircraft and urged both sides — but especially President Bashar Assad's government — to end the fighting.

Ban lamented that civilians are bearing the brunt of the violence, saying even people in bread lines have been attacked.

"Prisoners on both sides are subject to harsh treatment and, often, torture," he said. "There have been alarming reports of summary executions on both sides." He added, "government forces and the armed opposition have clearly failed to protect civilians and respect the rules of international humanitarian law."

The U.N. chief urged the world to unite behind a plan to end the conflict.

Missing in all international initiatives so far, Ban said, "is a unity of effort that will have an impact on the ground."

"How many more will be killed and wounded, their lives shattered, before president Assad and his advisers are persuaded to change course?" Ban asked. "How can we convince armed groups that a better future lies not in fighting, but in building the foundations of a new political and social contract that guarantees freedom and justice?"

Former NC Congressman Charlie Rose dies at age 73

BY EMERY P. DALESIO
Associated Press

RALEIGH, N.C. • Former U.S. Rep. Charlie Rose, a savvy political player who used his seat on the House Agriculture Committee to help tobacco farmers, has died. He was 73.

Stacye Hefner, the wife of the former congressman, said Tuesday that he died of Parkinson's disease at a hospital near their northern Alabama home. She said Rose was diagnosed with the degenerative brain disorder last year.

Rose, a Democrat, spent 24 years in Washington representing the 7th Congressional District, which included his hometown of Fayetteville. The attorney and former prosecutor became a powerful lawmaker in Congress and used his Agriculture Committee seat to back the interests of farmers, especially tobacco growers back home.

He also chaired the House Administration Committee in the early 1990s.

Rose retired in 1996 and then worked as a lobbyist.

Twin Falls brewery plans to open tap room.

BY BLAIR KOCH
For the Times-News

Pat Scheidt

TWIN FALLS • Matt Koch had tried porter beer in the past, but long after consuming that glass he remembers the bitter taste of the heavy swill.

During a wine and beer tasting event at Kurt's Pharmacy and Hallmark, Koch, 28, of Twin Falls eagerly sampled Von Scheidt Brewing Co.'s easy amber ale and knutkase, flavored with maple and pecan.

Twin Falls' only nanobrewery on Aug. 31 was offering samples of the same three varieties it has for sale at about 100 retail locations throughout southern Idaho. Owner Pat Scheidt plans on opening a tap room at its 157 Second Ave. W. location in December. Friday's tasting offered a great opportunity to connect face-to-face with local customers like Koch.

When Koch was offered the Twin Falls' nanobrewery's coffee porter Otto Pilate, he balked, reminiscing over that not-forgotten "too bitter, dark ale" of yore.

Brewmaster and owner Pat Von Scheidt pours a sample of one of the beers called 'Otto Pilate' that he ferments at Von Scheidt Brewing Co. in Twin Falls.

After some gentle persuading by Von Scheidt Brewing Co. Marketing Director Travis Capps, however, who plays bass guitar in the local band for which the craft brew is named, Koch soon had a small cup of the dark liquid in hand and was eyeing it suspiciously. Raising the syrupy-colored brew under his nostrils, Koch inhaled deeply, noting the aroma of roasted coffee. Bringing the cup to his lips, Koch tipped the cup to the ceiling and gulped.

Ketchum Restaurant Turns Up the Wow Factor

BY KAREN BOSSICK
For the Times-News

KETCHUM • Digging into John Beriker's Lobster and Avocado Bomb is an afterthought.

First you have to admire the creative way in which the avocado is sliced and stuffed and topped with crispy wonton chips. Then you have to size up the bright colors that Beriker has so carefully selected. Finally, you have to applaud the way the swirl of sweet chili sauce contrasts with the fiery red borders of the hand-crafted plate on which it is served.

Then, and only then, do you get to bite into the dish, detonating a wave of flavors over your tongue as you savor the healthy fresh ingredients that Beriker has assembled.

"I strive for the 'Wow' factor I hear guests exclaim when they're tasting the cuisine," said Beriker.

Beriker and his brother Timur Beriker recently opened B. Restaurant and Bar in the 60-year-old brick building that formerly housed the Roosevelt Grille owned by Elevation 486 Restaurateur Tom Nickel.

The first thing they did was to throw out the curtains in the Main Street Ketchum restaurant and lighten the place up in keeping with the white linen tablecloth service they introduced.

Then John Beriker went to work creating a long list of dinner items culled from an award-winning career as chef in such venues as Singapore, Sydney, Australia and the Inn at Rancho Santa Fe in San Diego.

His menu — a fusion of French, Asian and California tastes — features such dishes as oven roasted halibut with corn, leeks and asparagus served with seafood ravioli and a sundried tomato cream sauce; tandoori prawns with Indian-scented basmati rice and mango chutney in a red bell pepper sauce with a light coconut cream, and a roasted rack of lamb in an herb crust with polenta, ratatouille and garlic in a mint sauce.

"His dishes are exotic-everything from comfort to exotic, safe to daring," said Joanne Zwingenberg, a 30-plus-year resident of Ketchum.

They're also artfully prepared, with Beriker turning even Warm Chocolate Flourless Lava Cake into a piece of art.

"The colors are paramount. We eat with our eyes. If it looks good, we want to eat it," he said. "I take you

TWIN FALLS • The smell of roasted sweet peppers signals today's special to the group of eight men on their lunch break.

"The boys are here," co-owner Mo Black says Aug. 28, spotting them walking across the parking lot.

But there are several groups of "boys" who frequent The Coffee Shop and Lunchbox Deli, 1105 Kimberly Road, on the industrial side of Twin Falls.

At about 12:15 p.m. the lunch crowd swarms in, stomachs empty from working all morning in the pits at the sugar factory or on construction at the Chobani plant.

"We get them nice and full," co-owner Sam Wilson says.

Wilson serves them hearty plates of her meatloaf sandwiches, made with Texas Toast and topped with olives, mayonnaise, cheddar and pickles.

The meatloaf sandwich used to be something Wilson made only on certain days, but now it is a mainstay. She doesn't want to disappoint loyal customers who often call to make sure it's on the menu.

After assembling the sandwich,

The whistle of a passing train nearly drowns out the order of a tall man wearing a cornflower blue T-shirt as Black takes his order at the register.

Mo Black, her husband Shane and Wilson first purchased the location on the corner of Blue Lakes Boulevard and Kimberly Road a year and a half ago. Black and Wilson said they were told by many they were crazy.

The building used to be a gas station and lawn mower repair shop and required a lot of clean up to be made into a coffee shop and deli. But Black and Wilson said they loved the location.

"We held our breaths, but now we feel comfortable," Wilson said.

Natural light floods the room from six-pane windows, some painted different colors — red, blue, burnt orange, chartreuse — like stained glass. The afternoon sunshine warms the cream and yellow walls, enticing you to take a seat at one of the tables and order the latte of the day — Smores — for $2. In spring and fall the shop often opens the garage doors to allow customers to dine al fresco.

If you don't want to sit and dine, you can always order take-out or pull up to the window on the side and order without getting out of your car. And if you really don't feel like leaving home or the office, they also deliver for online or telephone orders.

When they came up with the idea to open a restaurant, Black and Wilson said, they said they didn't want to join the chain stores that sit along Blue Lakes and instead opted for a side of town with more history.

On Saturday mornings the shop often gets large groups of runners looking for food after their workout. They are greeted with batches of homemade oatmeal, biscuits stuffed with sausage and cheese or spinach and cheese, and parfaits. But always with the hungry man or woman in mind — Wilson and Black serve up a plate of biscuits smothered in gravy.

They like to use fresh and local produce. Sometimes the produce is so local it grows right outside. Butternut squash, chocolate cherry tomatoes and peppers grow in small swatch of soil surrounded by gravel, next to a neighboring auto repair shop. Vegetables growing in friends' and families' gardens are also chopped up.

The next day's special is pulled pork with homemade barbecue sauce and coleslaw, so Katelyn Jorgensen, one of the deli's three workers, shreds chunks of cabbage in a food processor. Then she slices carrots, two at a time, placing the bright orange medallions on top of the heap of slaw.

In a month or so, the garage doors will open once again, letting in crisp fall air to mix with the sweet smell of Butternut squash soup wafting from the kitchen.

from your eyes down to the mouth with the flavors. I strive for a dish that's simple, yet a work of beauty."

The Beriker Brothers were seemingly destined for this restaurant.

Their father — Swiss-born Kerman Beriker — has managed luxury hotels and resorts in Europe, Canada, Mexico and the Caribbean, including the Mansion at Turtle Creek in Dallas and the Four Seasons in Toronto.

The boys lived above Michael Jackson when the pop star stayed at the Bel Air Hotel and they watched a parade of kings and queens and movie stars pass through the Beverly Hills Hotel, which earned its first five-star ratings when their father managed it.

John Beriker began helping out a French chef in the kitchen of the Rosewood Crescent Hotel in Dallas when he was 12.

"He was a tough cookie," he recalled. "If you messed up, you'd find yourself having a one-on-one in the refrigerator. But I realized that's what I wanted to do with my life. I want to make people happy, have good experiences."

After online training in several five-star restaurants, Beriker found himself at Wolfgang Puck's side at Spago in Beverly Hills. There he learned to cook for 650 people every night — and make the food taste good. And he won the admiration of his boss, who called him "one of the world's leading chefs with extraordinary ability and brilliant talent."

But, wanting his own thing, he went on to become executive chef at Raffles in Singapore where he was named Best Chef in Singapore by the Ministry of Tourism.

"I landed in that country with two suitcases in my hands and $800 in my pocket. But the food there inspired me," he recalled.

Eventually, Beriker moved on to the Four Seasons Hotel in Hamburg, Germany, where he was named Best New Chef of the Year by Gault & Millau. He then went to the Merchant Court Hotel in Sydney and Auberg Dab in Bangkok before joining his father at The Inn at Rancho Santa Fe.

There, he penned "The Inn at Rancho Santa Fe Cookbook," which features such recipes as Crab Tower with Cilantro Coulis, Organic Cucumber Martini, Japanese Pumpkin Soup, Chocolate Won Tons and Veal Loin with Red Currant Sauce. The book is available for $29.95 at Amazon.com and the restaurant.

He struck out for Sun Valley after his father retired in April. And he's set his touch in his new restaurant, opening up the kitchen so it looks out onto the dining room and adding row upon row of colorful sauces and fresh fruits and seasonings for himself and his assistants to dip into.

Many of the guests who have eaten there in its first month of operation still remember eating John's grilled chopped vegetable salad at Rustica, which the Beriker brothers ran for five years in Beverly Hills, said Timur Beriker.

"Having lived here for 15 years I know what people want — an international menu with food for everyone," Timur Beriker added. "Usually, you have to choose between eating at a Mexican restaurant or a Chinese restaurant. But we have something of everything, and our kids menu is as big as the adult."

John Beriker says the B. Restaurant and Bar, named for the family surname, is quite small compared with the two hotels, restaurants and deli he's opened.

"But it's mine," John said. "My goal here is to make people happy by offering something new, authentic and different from anywhere else."

John Beriker's Wok Fried Lobster in Thai Chili Sauce

Canola oil, for frying
1 cup cornstarch, more if needed
Sea salt
White pepper
6 fresh or frozen lobster tails, cut into chunks
2 tablespoons peanut oil
3 tablespoons garlic, crushed
1 small yellow onion, finely sliced
2 cups sweet and sour Thai chili sauce
2 tablespoons green onion, finely chopped

Heat the canola oil in a large deep pot or heat an electric fryer to 360 degrees F.

In a large bowl combine cornstarch and salt and pepper to taste. Lightly dredge lobster in the cornstarch, making sure each one is completely coated. Lower lobster into the oil and deep fry until crispy — about 2 minutes. Transfer lobster to drain on paper towels.

In a wok, heat peanut oil to medium high heat. Add garlic and yellow onions. Saute until caramelized.

In a large bowl combine lobster with caramelized garlic and onion. Add sweet and sour Thai chili sauce. Toss gently to combine.

Place lobster on a large platter and garnish with green onions.

Serve with steamed white rice. Serves 6.

John Beriker's Tortilla Soup

Three 14.5-oz. cans diced tomatoes
One 6-oz. can tomato paste
2 jalapenos, finely chopped
2 yellow onions, finely chopped
2 carrots, roughly chopped
3 celery stalks, roughly chopped
2 garlic cloves roughly chopped
8 cups chicken broth
1 bag tortilla chips
1 small bunch cilantro
1 rotisserie chicken, diced or shredded

In a large saucepan, combine tomatoes, tomato paste, jalapenos, onions, carrots, celery and garlic. Bring to a slow boil and cook until the vegetables are tender — about 15 minutes. Add chicken broth, chips and cilantro. Simmer until the liquid is reduced by one-half — about 15 minutes. Cool to room temperature. Transfer to a blender, in small batches, and puree until smooth. Place the chicken back into the saucepan and heat until warm.

Ladle soup into a bowl and garnish with diced or shredded chicken.

Dinner in 35 Minutes: Stuffed Tomatoes

BONNIE S. BENWICK
The Washington Post

You'll want to choose large, firm tomatoes for this preparation, because they need to yield enough chopped flesh to add to the filling and because they will serve as edible vessels for the eggs. The stuffed tomatoes are seated on pita or flatbread because: It's a good way to use up those slightly stale pieces; the bread base helps keep the tomatoes upright, and it absorbs some of the tomato goodness; baking intensifies the tomato flavor.

A finishing touch of the earthy Middle Eastern spice blend za'atar makes the dish. You can find it at some larger grocery stores, in addition to Middle Eastern markets.

Serve with a fruit salad. Adapted from a recipe in "The New Middle Eastern Vegetarian: Modern Recipes From Veggiestan," by Sally Butcher (Interlink, 2012).

Cheese-Baked Egg-Stuffed Tomatoes

2 or 3 servings.

3 whole-wheat pitas or 1 large flatbread
2 or 3 large tomatoes
2 medium cloves garlic
1 small onion
1 tablespoon olive oil
Leaves from 2 sprigs marjoram
1/2 teaspoon ground turmeric
2 or 3 large eggs
Kosher salt
Freshly ground black pepper
3 1/2 ounces freshly grated hard cheese,

such as pecorino Romano
1 teaspoon dried za'atar (may substitute sweet paprika)

Preheat the oven to 350 degrees. Use non-stick cooking oil spray to grease the inside of a medium baking dish.

Toast the pita bread, or cut the flatbread into pieces that will fit in the toaster, then toast them.

Core the tomatoes. Cut the tops (about one-third) off the tomatoes, then coarsely chop the tops and place in a bowl. Use a melon baller or grapefruit spoon to scoop out the insides of the tomatoes, adding them to the bowl. Mince the garlic. Coarsely chop the onion to yield about 3/4 cup.

Heat the oil in a small skillet over medium heat. Add the onion and cook for 6 to 8 minutes, stirring occasionally, until the onion becomes translucent. Stir in the garlic, marjoram and turmeric, then add the chopped tomato and bits, stirring to incorporate.

Arrange the toasted pita or flatbread pieces so they cover the baking dish in a single layer. Divide most of the onion-tomato mixture between each tomato shell, then spread the rest on the toasted bread in the baking dish. Nestle the tomatoes on the bread, then crack an egg over each tomato, letting it fall on top of the onion-tomato mixture. Season with salt and pepper to taste. Sprinkle with the cheese and za'atar.

Bake for 15 minutes or just until the eggs have set and the cheese has melted. Transfer the bread and tomatoes to individual plates; serve right away.

Von Scheidt

"That wasn't bad at all. Not bitter and no bad aftertaste," Koch said. "I like that."

Koch was familiar with Von Scheidt's beers — they've been brewing since 2009 — and looks forward to the tap room opening.

The brewery operated a restaurant, which closed last summer, that Koch frequented. The tap room will be located in the same 1,500-square-foot space as the restaurant, while brewing takes place in a 1,500-square-foot processing space at the same site.

"I worked next door so we'd stop in for lunch, have a burger and beer," Koch said, adding that the tap room would be a good way to try the craft brewery's new blends.

Tap rooms are part of "the brewery microculture" and Scheidt said he will develop three new varieties for his opening, but those haven't yet been determined.

"I was a lousy restaurant manager, but this will allow me to focus on the brewing while giving customers a chance to visit the brewery and try our beers and see what we are about," Scheidt said. "We also plan on hosting special events once a month or so — comedians, musicians or even special guest speakers."

The tap room will open one day a week and feature Scheidt's creations on tap, as well as cases for sale. Customers will also be able to purchase or refill kegs and growlers (half-gallon containers).

Capps said customers have been great about feedback and the brewery takes positive and negative comments to heart.

"We are small enough that we can pinpoint sluggish sales down to the batch. We find the inconsistency and fix it, although that doesn't happen very often," he said. "We've been lucky to perfect our brews with unwavering community support and look forward to the future. We're going to grow and Twin Falls has been a big part of that."

Capps said the tap room doesn't require any additional permits beyond what the brewery already maintains. It renewed its city-issued retail alcohol sales permit last month, he said.

An opening date and hours of operation for the tap room have yet to be scheduled.

A Simple Grilled Tuna Steak with Big, Bold Flavors

BY ALISON LADMAN
For The Associated Press

Summer makes us long for the grill. But by the end of the season, even our favorite burgers and dogs can feel a bit tired.

So to keep your grilling interesting, we came up with a speedy grilled tuna dish that packs tons of big, bold flavors. For our recipe, we used tuna steaks, which are thick, meaty pieces cut from the fish in the opposite direction than a fillet. You also could use salmon steaks, which often include the bone (which helps the flesh hold together on the grill). Swordfish also would work in this recipe.

We kept the prep simple with just a light coating of oil and a bit of salt and pepper. We wanted to let the flavor of the tuna shine. But to ensure we also could taste the fresh flavors of summer, we top the tuna with a cross between a fruit salsa and an herby chimichurri. It goes together in about 2 minutes with the help of a food processor.

Grilled Tuna Steaks with Mango Herb Salsa

Start to finish: 20 minutes. Servings: 4.

1/2 cup packed fresh parsley leaves
1/4 cup packed fresh oregano leaves
1/4 cup fresh mint leaves
3 tablespoons olive oil, divided
3 tablespoons red wine vinegar
2 cloves garlic
1/2 teaspoon red pepper flakes
Zest and juice of 1 lemon
2 mangos, peeled, pitted and diced
Salt and ground black pepper
Four 6-ounce tuna steaks

Heat the grill to high.

In a food processor, combine the parsley, oregano, mint, 2 tablespoons of the olive oil, the red wine vinegar, garlic, red pepper flakes, and the lemon zest and juice. Process until well chopped, scraping down the bowl as needed. Add the mango and pulse once or twice to combine and lightly chop. Season with salt and pepper, then set aside.

Rub the tuna steaks on all sides with the remaining 1 tablespoon olive oil, then season them with salt and pepper. Grill the steaks for 2 to 3 minutes per side for medium-rare. Serve topped with the salsa.

Nori: What It Is and How to Use It

BY J.M. HIRSCH
Associated Press

If you've ever had a California roll, you've had nori.

Now it's time to learn what else you can do with this ubiquitous, yet always overlooked paper-like ingredient made from seaweed.

Nori — also called laver — is a somewhat generic name for a variety of seaweeds cultivated for use mostly in Japanese cooking. I say mostly because the same varieties are added to oatmeal in Ireland. But Americans know nori best as the paper-thin black-green wrapping used in sushi.

It is produced by washing and chopping fresh seaweed to create a slurry. That mixture then is spread thin, dried, cut into sheets and lightly toasted. The result is a crunchy, dark paper with just a hint of ocean flavor.

In Japan, nori has a life beyond the sushi bar. It is consumed for breakfast with fish and rice, eaten as a snack dunked in soy sauce and used to wrap balls of rice. In recent years, the snack approach has begun to catch on in the U.S. Nori now is sold in small potato chip-like strips, often seasoned with sea salt, wasabi, even chipotle pepper.

Most grocers sell packages of 10-inch sheets of nori, usually near the sushi or in the international aisle. It also is used in Japanese snack cracker mixes.

Nori sheets usually are sold pre-toasted; use them as is for sushi. But when using the nori in other ways, toasting it briefly can improve the flavor and texture. To do this, simply use tongs to hold the sheets one at a time over a lit burner (or candle if you have an electric stove). About 10 to 15 seconds will suffice.

For ideas for using nori, check out the Off the Beaten Aisle column over on Food Network: <http://bit.ly/NGAZAP>

seaweed, toasted
6 eggs
Salt and ground black pepper
1 roasted red pepper
1 tablespoon butter
2 scallions, finely chopped
1/4 cup grated Parmesan cheese

Crumble or cut the nori into small pieces. In a medium bowl, combine the nori and eggs. Beat well, mixing in 1/2 teaspoon each of salt and pepper. Set aside.

Use paper towels to blot away as much moisture as possible from the red pepper. Cut it into small chunks.

In a medium skillet over medium-high, melt the butter. Reduce the heat to medium and add the egg mixture. Cook until the bottom is firm, about 4 minutes.

Scatter the red pepper and scallions evenly over half of the egg. Sprinkle the cheese over the vegetables. Use a spatula to carefully lift the other half of the omelet and gently flip it over onto the fillings. Cover the pan and cook for another 6 to 7 minutes.

When the eggs are set at the center and the cheese has melted, cut the omelet in half and season with salt and pepper, as needed. Per serving: 370 calories; 210 calories from fat (59 percent of total calories); 24 g fat (10 g saturated); 0 g trans fats; 670 mg cholesterol; 10 g carbohydrate; 27 g protein; 2 g fiber; 810 mg sodium.

Sunflower Butter Is a Cinch

THE WASHINGTON POST

People who make their own nut butters already know: They're a cinch to make, they can be customized to your taste and they're less expensive than many brands you can buy.

The butter can be refrigerated in an airtight container for up to 1 month. Adapted from "Food in Jars: Preserving in Small Batches Year-Round," by Marisa McClellan (Running Press, 2011).

Cinnamon Vanilla Sunflower Butter

Makes 1 1/2 cups.

2 cups (about 10 ounces) raw sunflower seeds
1/4 cup sunflower oil, or more as needed
1/2 teaspoon sea salt, plus more as needed
2 tablespoons vanilla paste, plus more as needed
3 teaspoons ground cinnamon, plus more as needed

Preheat the oven to 325 degrees. Have a rimmed baking sheet at hand.

Spread the sunflower seeds on the baking sheet in an even layer. Bake for 25 to 30 minutes, stirring the seeds at least twice to ensure even doneness. The seeds should be fragrant and lightly browned. Let cool for 10 minutes.

Transfer the cooled seeds to the bowl of a food processor. Add 1 tablespoon of the oil and the 1/2 teaspoon of salt and begin to puree. With the motor running, gradually drizzle in the remaining 3 tablespoons of oil. Puree in 10- to 20-second intervals, stopping to scrape down the sides of the bowl and break up any clumps. The mixture may form a ball; drizzle in a little more oil as needed and keep processing until the mixture relaxes.

As the puree begins to look like a smooth butter, add the vanilla paste and cinnamon. After they are fully incorporated, taste, and adjust the salt, vanilla paste and/or cinnamon as needed. Transfer the butter to a jar with a tight-fitting lid. Refrigerate for up to 1 month.

Bittman: Dark and Leafy Suddenly Hip and Trendy

BY MICHELE KAYAL
For The Associated Press

Not so long ago, the admonishment to "Eat your greens!" generally focused on lettuce, maybe spinach. And that's about as adventurous as it got.

Today, it's hard to flip through food magazines or watch television shows without seeing someone sauteing chard, roasting kale, wilting mustard greens or swooning over watercress. You even can get collards and kale washed, chopped and bagged at big box stores and niche grocers.

It's a change for the better, says New York Times' food and opinion columnist Mark Bittman. And it's happening because more people are listening to messages about what is good for them to eat.

"That is a big change. All the talk about these things has had some kind of impact and that's a great thing," he says. "They're being sold because there's noise being made about them and there's noise because they're good things for us to be eating," he says. "And some people are listening."

Greens were one of Bittman's early obsessions as a gardener. Today, they still feature prominently in his recipes and in his overall approach to food. In fact, he just reissued his 1995 book, "Leafy Greens" (Wiley, 2012).

Several years ago, Bittman began including more plants and fewer animal products in his diet. The result? He dropped more than 30 pounds, published the responsible eating manifesto "Food Matters," and began writing about food policy and its impact on our health. Today, his fresh, unfussy recipes share space with columns that advocate a healthful, environmentally friendly plant-heavy diet.

Most Americans fall somewhere on a spectrum that runs from pure vegans who eschew all animal products to folks who live Morgan Spurlock's famous 30-day fast-food-only diet.

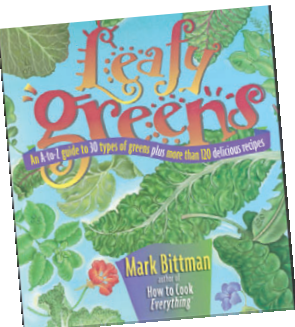

"For better personal and planetary health, the idea is for all of us to move away from the Morgan Spurlock end toward the vegan end," says Bittman, whose next book, "VB6: Eat Vegan Before 6:00" (due out March 2013), encourages people to eat vegan for the first two meals of the day. "I don't think that means we have to become vegans. But I do think we need to move toward eating a greater portion of plants."

But Bittman thinks real change needs to come at the political rather than personal level. He urges the revamping of the government subsidies that supports commodity crops, a system many say artificially lowers the cost of many of the unhealthiest processed foods. He also favors regulations that discourage eating junk food, such as New York Mayor Michael Bloomberg's proposal to ban from city restaurants sodas and sugary drinks larger than 16 ounces.

"In 50 years, I won't be alive, but people who are will say, 'Ha, ha! Remember when you could buy soda for a dollar anywhere you wanted?'" he says. "That's not going to be the case."

Mark Bittman's Spinach Gnocchi.

Spinach Gnocchi

Spinach not your style? Bittman says chard and beet greens (leaves only for both) can be substituted. Start to finish: 60 minutes. Servings: 4 small (suitable for lunch or an appetizer).

10 ounces fresh spinach, tough stems removed
3 or 4 medium potatoes
Salt and ground black pepper, to taste
Dash or tiny grating of nutmeg, about 1/16 teaspoon 1 cup all-purpose flour, approximately
About 1 cup any light tomato sauce
Freshly grated Parmesan cheese

Bring a large pot of salted water to a boil. Set a bowl of ice water nearby.

When the water boils, add the spinach and cook until it wilts and the stems become tender, 30 seconds to 2 minutes. Use a slotted spoon or strainer to transfer the spinach to the bowl of ice water (leave the pan of water at a boil). Once the spinach has cooled, lift it from the water, squeeze out any excess moisture, then chop very finely.

Wash the potatoes. Using the same water the spinach was cooked in, cook the potatoes until tender but not mushy, 30 to 40 minutes. Transfer the potatoes to a large bowl (leave the pan of water at a boil, adding more water if needed).

Mash the potatoes or put them through a food mill, then combine them with the spinach, salt, pepper and nutmeg. Add the flour a bit at a time, kneading with your hands, until the mixture is no longer extremely sticky (the amount of flour you add will depend on the potatoes). Not enough flour will make gnocchi that fall apart; too much will rob them of flavor. Once they stop sticking, add a little more flour and do a test run, then add more flour if necessary. Form the gnocchi, by hand, into inch-long oval shapes. Cook the gnocchi about 6 at a time, lowering them into the water and removing them with a slotted spoon when they rise to the top, 2 to 3 minutes. Place the cooked gnocchi in a warm, shallow bowl and keep warm. When all the gnocchi are cooked, top them with tomato sauce and cheese, then serve. Per serving: 400 calories; 25 calories from fat (6 percent of total calories); 2.5 g fat (1 g saturated; 0 g trans fats); 5 mg cholesterol; 83 g carbohydrate; 14 g protein; 11 g fiber; 820 mg sodium.

Pork Dinner in 30 Minutes

BONNIE BENWICK
The Washington Post

The original recipe called for a 30-minute marinade of whole pork tenderloin that is cooked on the grill for about 20 minutes, then brushed with some remaining marinade and grilled for 5 minutes to create the glazed effect.

That works great. But here's a quick alternative: Cut the tenderloin into slices, then pound them into cutlets. Turn the marinade ingredients into a sauce.

Serve with sauteed snow peas or sugar snap peas.

Adapted from "Artisanal Gluten-Free Cooking: 275 Great-Tasting, From-Scratch Recipes From Around the World, Perfect for Every Meal and for Anyone on a Gluten-Free Diet — and Even Those Who Aren't (Revised and Expanded Second Edition)," by Kelli and Peter Bronski (Workman, 2012).

Curry-Glazed Pork

4 servings.

3 cloves garlic
1/4 cup honey
2 tablespoons red curry paste
2 tablespoons tamari or wheat-free soy sauce
3 to 4 tablespoons olive oil
1 1/2 to 2 pounds pork tenderloin
Kosher salt
Freshly ground black pepper

Mince the garlic and place in medium bowl. Stir in the honey, red curry paste, tamari or soy sauce and 2 tablespoons of the oil.

Cut two pieces of plastic wrap.

Trim and discard any visible fat and silver skin from the pork.

Cut the pork tenderloin crosswise into 1 1/2-to-2-inch-thick sections (a total of about 12). Place a slice on one piece of plastic wrap and cover with the second piece. Use a meat pounder to create a cutlet that's 1/4-to-1/2-inch thick, then place it on a plate. Repeat with the remaining pork. Season each piece on both sides with a light sprinkling of salt and pepper.

Place a wire rack over a rimmed baking sheet.

Heat a tablespoon of the oil in a large nonstick skillet over medium-high heat until the oil shimmers. Add three or four cutlets and cook for about 2 minutes on each side, until lightly browned but not quite cooked through (they will be a little springy when gently pressed with a finger). Transfer to the rack and cover loosely with aluminum foil to keep warm. Repeat with the remaining pork, adding up to another tablespoon of oil to the skillet as needed.

When all of the pork is cooked, add the garlic-curry paste mixture to the (empty) skillet. Bring it to a boil and cook for 1 or 2 minutes to form a glaze, then return the cutlets to the skillet, turning them to coat evenly. Once they are glazed and heated through, divide them among individual plates, spooning any glaze over the meat. Serve right away.

Dietrich Takes No. 1 in 1A Div. II

BY DAVID BASHORE
dbashore@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • There's a new No. 1 in the Class 1A Division II ranks.

Lighthouse Christian's loss to 1A-I Grace was just enough for Dietrich to sneak in and take over the top spot in the classification's media poll, released Tuesday.

The Blue Devils (2-0), ranked third last week, got six of the 11 first-place votes, with Lighthouse Christian retaining three. Dietrich earned 41 points overall, with the Lions getting 39. Carey slipped from second to fourth after getting blown out by 1A-I Raft River, which received votes in its classification for the first time this season. Camas County and Castleford got votes in the 1A-II voting.

Hagerman remained atop the 1A-I poll after a 60-8 win over Castleford last week. Only Grace, which replaced Wallace at No. 5, was a change in the top five in that classification.

HONORS EVEN

dbashore@magicvalley.com

JEROME • After 338 scoreless minutes of play to start the season, Wood River's boys soccer team finally conceded a goal on Tuesday against Jerome.

The Wolverines responded, however, as both teams kept their unbeaten starts intact.

Neither team was fully satisfied after the 2-2 draw, but both took confidence boosts as they head deeper into Great Basin Conference play.

"In the first half we passed really well and controlled the game, but in the second we didn't communicate and started not playing together," said Jerome winger Ricardo Rodriguez, whose drilled cross led to the goal that finally broke Wood River's rearguard.

In the 19th minute Rodriguez burst down the right flank and delivered a perfect cross to Alberto Vidaca, who charged into the space near the back post and smashed the ball home to put Wood River behind for the first time all season.

Gerardo Gonzalez added a second five minutes later and Jerome looked to be cruising, but Desmond Porth capped a slick passing move from Wood River near the end of the first half and switched the momentum.

The game was tied when Andrew Graves took a quick free kick from 20 yards out and caught the Jerome defense napping as the ball sailed cleanly into the top corner of the goal midway through the second half.

"Their (defensive) wall was turned and the referee said I could take the kick, so I did," said Graves.

The game featured arguably the best two teams in the conference. Wood River, which plays a defense-minded style hinging on team movement, counter-attacking and set pieces, has scored seven goals in its five games (2-0-3, 2-0-1 Great Basin, 7 pts.) but has conceded only the two it yielded Tuesday.

Jerome, playing a more direct style with deep diagonal passes, has scored 37 goals and allowed only five in its six games (4-0-2, 2-0-1, 7 pts.)

Wood River Finds Consistency in Win at Minico

BY RYAN HOWE
rhowe@magicvalley.com

RUPERT • So far this season, the Wood River volleyball team has struggled to close out close sets.

It happened again Tuesday in the first set of Wood River's Great Basin Conference match at Minico. The Wolverines failed to execute late and the Spartans took Game 1, 26-24.

But that was the only hiccup in an otherwise dominating performance as Wood River bounced back and breezed through the next three, 25-10, 25-15, 25-16.

"It's just being consistent at the end of the game," said Wood River coach Tim Richards.

In the final three sets, Wood River did a better job defensively, improved its ball control and sharpened attack angles. The execution allowed sophomore Brittny Bradley to evenly distribute 22 assists among Kori Paradis, Lily Richards and Mary Petzke.

The Wolverines collected 11 aces, led by Ciceley Peavey and Richards, who had three apiece.

Wood River, which continues GBC play with a home match against Jerome on Thursday, improved its season record to 6-5.

Broncos Out of AP Top 25, Barely in Coaches Poll

TIMES-NEWS

For the first time in four years, Boise State is out of the Associated Press college football poll.

After a 17-13 loss at Michigan State on Friday, the Broncos slipped just out of the poll, ending a 62-week streak that dated back to Sept. 2008 and was the second-longest streak to Alabama.

Boise State did remain in the USA Today coaches' poll, down three spots to No. 25. The Broncos, who upped the streak in that poll to 63 weeks, are idle this week and host Miami (Ohio) on Sept. 15, five days before their big matchup against BYU.

Alabama is the new No. 1 in the AP poll, moving past Southern California after its resounding victory against Michigan.

The Crimson Tide swayed more than enough voters with its 41-14 win Saturday night in Texas to overtake the preseason No. 1 Trojans, who beat Hawaii 49-10. USC entered that game a 40-point favorite at home.

The Tide receives 45 first-place votes, up 28 from last week. USC draws 11 first-place votes and No. 3 LSU four.

It's the 47th time Alabama has been No. 1, the 16th under coach Nick Saban. This is the 86th time in the 76-year history of the AP media poll that the top-ranked team won and dropped in the rankings. It's happened at least once every year since 2007.

Cowboys, Giants Kick Off NFL Season Tonight

ASSOCIATED PRESS

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J.

• A good start is what is on the line this time when the New York Giants host the Dallas Cowboys in the NFL season opener.

The stakes were much greater the last time the NFC East foes faced off to close the last regular season. New York won to claim the division title en route to the Super Bowl title. Dallas was left out of the postseason.

Tonight at MetLife Stadium, the winner will take the early upper hand in the divisional race.

For Eli Manning and the Super Bowl champion Giants, this will be a chance to silence the critics and detractors who have sounded off repeatedly after they beat the New England Patriots in February to claim their second title in five seasons.

The Giants heard it all. They were lucky to get into the playoffs with a 9-7 record. They really didn't beat the Packers or 49ers, they were just handed the games. There is a lot more, but that is the gist.

That is now over.

The goal for Tom Coughlin's players is to show they have constructed that bridge the 65-year-old coach urged them to build to link their late-season 6-0 run to the title to the 2012 campaign.

"The leadership we have on this football team, that's going to be the spine of the bridge, if you will," defensive captain Justin Tuck said. "I think we're in a good place as far as where we want to be coming into the game."

The Giants are confident, and they don't care what outsiders are saying about them.

"We've already showed people who we are," safety Antrel Rolle said. "We can care less about that. We leave that up to spectators. We're just going out there and playing ball. And that is what it is all about. We can care less about what kind of recognition we are getting or who is crowning us and who is not crowning us. None of that matters coming into the 2012 season."

Packers Still Atop AP Pro32 as Season Begins

ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK • Green Bay had staying power in the AP Pro32 through the preseason. Now, let's see how long the Packers can remain the top-rated team in The Associated Press NFL power rankings.

Green Bay earned five first-place votes from a panel of 12 media members who regularly cover the league, and had 373 points overall to edge New England and the defending Super Bowl champion New York Giants. The Patriots got two first-place votes and 367 points, while the Giants were No. 1 on five ballots and totaled 363 points.

"I've seen enough improvement from the defense in preseason to keep the Packers at the top," said 2002 NFL MVP Rich Gannon of CBS Sports and SiriusXM NFL Radio.

Added Dan Pompei of the Chicago Tribune: "The addition of Cedric Benson could give the Packers a dimension they lacked."

That would be a running game, of course. If the Packers, who went 15-1 last year with virtually no ground attack and a leaky defense, improve both areas, there seems no reason they won't lead the AP Pro32 for a long time.

Still, the Giants might feel slighted heading into Wednesday night's season opener against Dallas. "After all, as Chris Berman of ESPN put it, "they are defending champs."

The top eight are the same as in the previous poll conducted just before preseason games. San Francisco, Baltimore, Houston, Pittsburgh and Philadelphia followed the Giants.

One team that cracked the top 10 was Atlanta, which replaced NFC South rival New Orleans at ninth. The Saints, who begin the schedule without coach Sean Payton — suspended for the season — and interim coach Joe Vitt (six-game suspension) because of punishment for the team's bounty program, slipped to 10th.

Cowboys-Giants: Didn't We Just Do This?

ASSOCIATED PRESS

So there we were, the final game of the 2011 season, the Cowboys at the Giants with the NFC East title on the line.

New York won 31-14 and, a month or so later, was taking home its second Vince Lombardi Trophy in five seasons.

Now, here we are, the opening of the 2012 schedule, and there are the Cowboys journeying Wednesday to the Meadowlands to take on the Super Bowl champions, who are 4-point favorites.

It's one of the NFL's better rivalries, but the Giants have won most of the significant meetings in recent years. And no team has lost the prime-time kickoff to the season after winning the NFL title since the tradition was begun in 2004.

"Every game is a tough game," Giants coach Tom Coughlin said. "Seems to go pretty close to the wire. On the 17th week last year was a little bit of an exception, but every game is a battle. These two teams play each other hard and they're two talented teams that are very physical and that's the way these games always are."

As this one will be. Dallas retooled its defense, particularly the secondary, to deal with the strong passing game the Giants and Eagles present in the NFC East. The Giants (No. 3 in the AP Pro32) also had significant changes, especially on offense with rookie David Wilson now the primary backup to running back Ahmad Bradshaw, and big-play third receiver Mario Manningham gone.

One key player, Dallas tight end Jason Witten, is recovering from a lacerated spleen. The Cowboys (No. 15, AP Pro32) need him to have any chance.

"We want to play more technically but our touch isn't there yet. We've played a lot together so our chemistry is really good, and we just know where the other guys are going to be," Graves said. "This was good for us today. We would like to have won it, and I think we deserved to, but we've got them coming to our place later in the season."

Media Poll

No. 3, behind Grangeville and Firth, in an unchanged 2A top five.

In the 3A poll, Gooding crept into the reckoning at No. 5, capitalizing on Weis-er's second straight loss and subsequent fall from the poll. The top four remained unchanged.

Blackfoot was a unanimous No. 1 in the 4A poll, followed by conference rival Bonneville, Minico received the most votes outside of the top five.

"We have four tenth-graders on the floor. It's about experience and consistency. They're learning how to play the game," said Tim Richards.

Keandra Harris and

Hannah Bailey each had 14 digs for Minico. Bailey also added six kills and four blocks.

The Spartans' leader at the net was Becca Child, who notched 10 kills and five blocks. Setter Stacie Sanderson had 16 assists.

Snedeker to Make Ryder Cup Debut

ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK • Brandt Snedeker had nothing more than big hopes and another strong finish when he left the TPC Boston, expecting to wait deep into the night for a phone call from Ryder Cup captain Davis Love III that would determine if he was on the U.S. team.

"I had no clue one way or another," Snedeker said Tuesday. "Got on the plane, got here to Indianapolis and got a voicemail from Davis just asking if I brought my putter from Boston and if I wanted to be on the team. I was just so excited. Couldn't hardly sleep last night. Just a huge, huge thing for my career."

Snedeker was among four players whom Love selected to fill out his 12-man Ryder Cup team. The captain also took a pair of veterans, Jim Furyk and Steve Stricker, and Dustin Johnson, who showed the hottest hand over the past two weeks and who Love said was "perfect for Medinah."

The Ryder Cup is Sept. 28-30 at Medinah outside Chicago, which has hosted the PGA Championship twice since 1999 and is known as a power golf course. Tiger Woods won two majors there.

More than power, however, Love emphasized putting. Stricker is regarded as one of the best in the game, and Snedeker is not far behind, as he showed at the British Open and during his charge up the leaderboard the past two weeks at Bethpage Black and the TPC Boston.

"I've been saying a lot that we need hot putters, and there really has not been a hotter putter on tour since the British Open," Love said, referring to Snedeker, one of four Ryder Cup rookies for the U.S.

There was just as much talk about who didn't make the team.

Hunter Mahan, whose two PGA Tour wins this year included the Match Play Championship when he beat Rory McIlroy, was leading the Ryder Cup standings after the Masters and still didn't qualify for the eight automatic spots.

Also left off was Rickie Fowler, who picked up his first PGA Tour win this year at Quail Hollow and turned in the most dynamic American performance at Wales two years ago when he won the last four holes to earn a halve that kept alive the American chances. Fowler has not had a top 10 since a tie for fifth at the Colonial in May.

Love said all the players who didn't make the team handled the news well.

"It was tough to leave anybody off," he said. "This is probably the deepest, strongest year of earning points that I have seen. There was a lot of guys that played a lot of really good golf, and you can analyze the number up and down and back and forth. ... There's four great players that we picked that are all playing very well and bring a lot to the team. And it was definitely a tough call for me."

Indeed, both teams are as stacked as ever.

The eight players who qualified three weeks ago for the U.S. team are Woods, Jason Dufner, Masters champion Bubba Watson, U.S. Open champion Webb Simpson, Keegan Bradley, Zach Johnson, Matt Kuchar and Phil Mickelson. They have combined to win 12 times this year, including two majors and a World Golf Championship.

KENSETH MAKES MOVE TO JOE GIBBS RACING OFFICIAL

ASSOCIATED PRESS

HUNTERVILLE, N.C. • Matt Kenseth opened this season with a second victory in the Daytona 500, and it didn't take him long to establish himself as a legitimate championship contender.

But before the midpoint of the season, Kenseth had decided he no longer wanted to drive for Roush Fenway Racing. On Tuesday, nearly two months after RFR said Kenseth was leaving, the driver finally confirmed he's moving to Joe Gibbs Racing at the end of the season.

"Surprise," he said as he entered a JGR news conference, a dry quip at one of the worst kept secrets in NASCAR.

Kenseth was deliberately vague, though, as to why he's leaving RFR after 13 full Cup seasons. He's never driven for anyone else at NASCAR's highest level, and paired with Jack Roush won 22 races, a pair of Daytona 500s and the 2003 championship.

"I knew it would not only be a good fit, but it's about winning races and winning championships and you want to put yourself in a position to be competitive going forward," Kenseth said. "I felt like this was it."

But he was winning races and he was competitive at Roush, where the 40-year-old Kenseth is considered one of NASCAR's elite drivers. Pressed as to what JGR offered, Kenseth knew he wasn't going to give a clear answer.

"There's just a lot of different things that go into that. It's about 2013 and beyond," Kenseth said. "I felt like and I feel like (Gibbs) was the right place for me. I know without a doubt at all it's the right place for me to be."

Kenseth was in the final year of his contract with RFR, and every one of his previous deals with Roush had been extended before he'd gotten to the final season. But he indicated Tuesday things "got cloudy" after his Daytona 500 victory.

Enter JGR, who has room for a fourth car but was also eager to add an upgrade to its lineup.

"When we realized there might be a possibility to get Matt, we realized it would be foolish not to do that," said team president J.D. Gibbs.

Kenseth said it was RFR's decision to announce in June that Kenseth was leaving at the end of the year and would be replaced in the Sprint Cup Series by defending Nationwide champion Ricky Stenhouse Jr.

Then it was Joe Gibbs Racing's decision on when it was ready to announce Kenseth had signed to drive the No. 20 Toyota next year. Behind the scenes, Gibbs officials were trying to figure out how to also keep Joey Logano but Penske Racing made it formal Tuesday and hired him to drive the No. 22 Ford in the Sprint Cup Series.

"I am very excited to join Penske Racing and begin the next phase of my career," said Logano, who is 22. "I am looking forward to the opportunity as it will be an honor to drive for Roger Penske and race for wins and championships."

Logano has spent four seasons in the No. 20, and JGR wanted to keep him even after signing Kenseth. But they didn't have the pieces in place for a fourth full-time Cup team, and AJ Allmendinger's failed drug test opened the No. 22 seat at Penske Racing that Logano pursued.

"We felt like if we could get Joey into a full Nationwide deal and add some Cup races, we'd be in good shape," said J.D. Gibbs. "When the 22 car opened up, we knew it might look different."

DEAR ABBY: My mom's boyfriend wants to spend time with my 16-year-old sister and take her places all the time. He wants to cuddle with both of us whenever we sit on the couch and gets really upset when we don't want to. He's my biological father, but I have known him only for a year because he left my mom when she was pregnant with me.

DEAR ABBY Jeanne Phillips

Now he wants to play "dad" when I already have had a dad all my life. (Mom was married for 11 years to another man.) I'm 14.

He yells and swears all the time and takes things away from us if we don't do what he wants. He isn't physically abusive yet, but the cuddling freaks me out and I don't think it's right. I told my school counselor. She said to get over it, that it wasn't a big deal.

Abby, what can I do? I think he is grooming my sister for sex since he told us he likes young girls and was used to them before Mom. Mom has problems with depression and reality and won't listen to us. Help us, please. Where can I go?

— HELPLESS IN THE MIDWEST

DEAR HELPLESS: Because your father's overtures make you uncomfortable, and he "punishes" you if you don't accept them — it IS a "big deal." Before this goes any further, you should call Childhelp and describe what's happening. The toll-free number is 800-422-4453. The person who answers the phone can refer you to help in your state. Please don't wait. Your safety and that of your sister could depend on it.

DEAR ABBY: I am romantically attracted to a girl, "Jade." We have known each other ever since we were in diapers. She's bubbly, vivacious and beautiful. We flirted with puppy love about 10 years ago, but it never went beyond writing love letters and ended quickly. It was so disappointingly brief that I have never regarded it as a true relationship. I consider her my first love.

Jade goes through boyfriends like a chain-smoker goes through cigarettes. It seems as if every time I ask her, "So, how is your current boyfriend?" that she has a new one. Her mother is the same way, truth be told, and never found a good father figure for Jade. The men her mother dated were abusive. Consequently, Jade isn't the best judge of men, either.

My parents have suggested that she may view me as a friend because I'm the only decent guy in her life, and she's afraid we wouldn't be friends if our romantic relationship ended. I want to tell her that I'd like to date her the next time her current relationship ends. At the same time, I want her to know I'd rather have her as a friend than nothing at all. Thanks to the wonder of social media, I will know when her next relationship ends. Should I wait till then? If not, how long?

— FIRST LOVE IN THE SOUTH

DEAR FIRST LOVE: You seem to have a lot of insight about Jade. Because she was raised by a mother who was involved in one abusive relationship after another, she may feel that unless there is pain and drama, that what she's experiencing is boring and not really "love." Until she realizes that the criteria she's using in choosing men are flawed, and is willing to get help to straighten out her thinking, her pattern will continue to repeat itself.

As you hover over your keyboard waiting for news of her next romantic failure, I suggest that rather than "pounce," you keep her as a friend until she's ready for a mature relationship. If you don't, you will only suffer more disappointment.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE Bobby Wolff

"Ignorance of the law excuses no man ..." — John Selden

In today's deal, from the World Olympiad four years ago in Beijing, West has a splendid hand, but until he finds a fit, he can hardly drive to the four-level.

Few pairs judged the East-West cards that well; let's focus on the match between Norway and China. In one room, Glenn Groethelm as West played four clubs doubled after his two-no-trump overcall had shown the minors, then had doubled three spades. North cashed his heart winners and played a third heart, ruffed with the queen and overruffed. That had the effect of promoting a trump trick for the defenders, to go with their diamond winner, for down one.

This was good, but not good enough. In the other room (shown here) the Chinese West overcalled two no-trump and also balanced with a double of three spades, which East gambled to pass for want of anything better to do. After three rounds of clubs, ruffed and overruffed, declarer played the side suits, ruffing diamonds high and hearts low, and made nine tricks.

In England v. Romania, both East-West pairs defended against three spades (one contract doubled, one not). Both Wests led three rounds of clubs and both Easts ruffed in and were overruffed. In each case, declarer handled the trump spots sensibly to bring home nine tricks. None of these three Easts noticed they had a guaranteed way to set the hand. All they had to do was discard a diamond on the third club instead of ruffing in, thus ensuring they could collect their ruff to beat three spades.

BID WITH THE ACES

South holds: ♠ K Q 8 5 2 ♡ J 7 ♦ K Q 9 6 ♣ Q 2

Hand notation for South, West, North, East showing cards in each suit.

ANSWER: Your partner is a passed hand. Do you really think he has a long club suit with which he can back in at the four-level after not being able to open? Of course not! He has a real fit for spades, and a hand inviting you to lead clubs against the opponents' heart contract. Bid four spades now and await developments.

Today is Wednesday, Sept. 5, the 249th day of 2012. There are 117 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight:
On Sept. 5, 1972, terrorism struck the Munich Olympics as members of the Palestinian group Black September attacked the Israeli delegation; 11 Israelis, five guerrillas and a police officer were killed in the resulting siege.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:
In 1774, the first Continental Congress assembled in Philadelphia.

In 1793, the Reign of Terror began during the French Revolution as the National Convention instituted harsh measures to repress counter-revolutionary activities.

In 1836, Sam Houston was elected president of the Republic of Texas.

In 1912, American avant-garde composer John Cage was born in Los Angeles.

In 1914, the First Battle of the Marne, resulting in a French-British victory over Germany, began during World War I.

In 1939, four days after war had broken out in Europe, President Franklin D. Roosevelt issued a proclamation declaring U.S. neutrality in the conflict.

In 1945, Japanese-American Iva Toguri D'Aquino, suspected of being wartime broadcaster "Tokyo Rose," was arrested in Yokohama. (D'Aquino was later convicted of treason and served six years in prison; she was pardoned in 1977 by President Gerald R. Ford.)

In 1957, the novel "On the Road," by Jack Kerouac, was first published by Viking Press.

In 1961, President John F. Kennedy signed legislation making aircraft hijackings a federal crime.

In 1975, President Gerald R. Ford escaped an attempt on his life by Lynette "Squeaky" Fromme, a disciple of Charles Manson, in Sacramento, Calif.

In 1986, four hijackers who had seized a Pan Am jumbo jet on the ground in Karachi, Pakistan, opened fire when the lights inside the plane failed; a total of 22 people were killed in the hijacking.

In 1997, Britain's Queen Elizabeth II broke the royal reticence over Princess Diana's death, delivering a televised address in which she called her former daughter-in-law "a remarkable person." Mother Teresa died in Calcutta, India, at age 87; conductor Sir Georg Solti (johrj SHOL'-tee) died in France at age 84.

Ten years ago: Afghan President Hamid Karzai survived an assassination attempt in Kandahar, hours after an explosives-packed car tore through a Kabul market. Actor Cliff Gorman, who'd won a Tony for portraying comedian Lenny Bruce in the 1971 play "Lenny," died in New York at age 65.

Five years ago: German officials announced that three militants from an Islamic group linked to al-Qaida were planning "imminent" bomb attacks against Americans in Germany when an elite anti-terrorist unit raided their small-town hideout. Fred Thompson announced on "The Tonight Show with Jay Leno" that he was running for the Republican presidential nomination; his candidacy lasted less than five months. Alicia Sacramone's floor routine rallied the United States to the world women's gymnastics title in Stuttgart, Germany.

One year ago: President Barack Obama used a boisterous Labor Day rally in Detroit to put congressional Republicans on the spot, challenging them to place the country's interests above all else and vote to create jobs and put the economy back on a path toward growth. The prosecution's first witness in the trial of ousted Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak, Gen. Hussein Moussa, startled the court by testifying that police had not been ordered to fire on protesters in Cairo's Tahrir Square, contradicting prosecutors' central claim.
