“... still LOUD in our minds.”

TIMES-NEWS

TWIN FALLS • Art Smith of Burley will never forget Sept. 11, 2001. It's a date burned in his memory.

“I'm just your average civilian who woke up that morning and got ready for work and saw the towers get hit and of course it was one of those unimaginable, unbelievable things that you don't really know what you're seeing,” Smith said. “For me, it was about my country getting attacked and what we were going to do about it. It was about the anger and the sadness.”

More than a decade after terrorists staged their shocking assault on American soil, the Sept. 11 attacks have already begun their transition into the history books. But they've remained fresh in the minds of Magic Valley residents, even as the number of public commemorations have dwindled.

Smith said during the 9/11 attacks he had a nephew at Walter Reed Army Medical Center in Washington D.C., close to the Pentagon.

“They sent for all the medics they could find at the time and he went right over there right after it happened and he was at ground zero there. And he told us about the feelings and devastation of mind, body and soul, plus the buildings,” Smith said.

They were only in first grade at the time, but four Xavier Charter School seniors are well aware of today's anniversary.

The 17-year-olds all say it's important to remember 9/11 every year.

Daniel McCarthy said it's “more of a remembrance for all the people who died.”

Kailee Hudson said the country came together after 9/11.

And it has affected many Twin Falls area residents, she said, who know members of the U.S. armed forces who served in Afghanistan or Iraq.

“It's still loud in our minds,” Hudson said.

As 6-year-olds, they weren't old enough at the time to fully understand what happened. But they do have some vivid memories of where they were on Sept. 11, 2001.

Hudson remembers she was home sick that day and was confused by the news of what was happening.

Once her parents explained it, she said she was scared something would happen in Las Vegas — where she was living at the time.

Anna McCreary said since she was so young, her parents wanted to use as much discretion as possible in telling her what happened.

She learned the full impact of what happened during later years and continues to learn more.

Xavier's Head of Schools Thad Biggers — a retired Naval officer — said he talks with his students about 9/11 every year.

It's a history lesson for his eighth-graders, he said, who weren't old enough in 2001 to have 9/11 memories of their own.

Pat Weems, 86, of Hailey, was in the hospital when she learned of the attack. She immediately began watching news coverage on a television in her room.

“I could not believe it,” she said. “I saw the second plane come in. That was a sad day.”

Son Mike Weems, of Bellevue, was visiting his hospitalized mother that day. He immediately thought of the loss of his nephew, whose military jet had exploded a few years before.

He likened it Monday to the assassination of President John Kennedy. He watched televised coverage of that tragedy, too, while at home from school with an illness.

Monica Miller, a deputy clerk in the records department at the Twin Falls County courthouse, said she can understand why organized commemoration of 9/11 has slowed down in the Magic Valley.

“It's harder because we're here in the Northwest,” Miller said. “There's not a centralized location or monument for people if they want to remember or leave flowers.”

She said she would support a monument at a local cemetery or even in downtown Twin Falls.

Schools Opt for Emergency Levies

BY JULIE WOOTTON
jwootton@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • With an influx of students this year, a handful of Magic Valley school districts have passed emergency levies.

In Kimberly, there are 71 more students this year. The Kimberly School District's board of trustees approved a levy Thursday in response.

The $142,624 amount isn't enough to cover all additional expenses — just enough for 32 students.

“We didn't go for the full amount we could have,” Superintendent Luke Schroeder said. “We're trying to be sensitive to raising taxes.”

The levy rate is about the same as what the school board approved last year.

A school emergency levy doesn't have to be approved by voters.

School boards are allowed under Idaho Code to pass an emergency levy before the second Monday in September if average daily attendance rates are higher than the previous year.

In Kimberly, Schroeder said levy funding will be used to cover additional expenses caused by the increase in enrollment.

For instance, funding will be used at Kimberly High School to pay for monitors for the Idaho Digital Learning Academy lab where students take on-line classes.

It will also cover the cost of a part-time credit recovery teacher at Kimberly Middle School.

Other funds will be used for textbooks, supplies, building maintenance and transportation.

The Dietrich School District also passed an emergency levy.

Superintendent Neal Hollingshead said the $23,601 amount is a result of 10 more students enrolled than last year.

Around the Magic Valley, a handful of other districts were eligible to pursue an emergency levy. But not all decided to move forward.

The Jerome School District's board of trustees met Saturday to consider a levy, but decided against it.

The reason: “Voters have been very supportive of the supplemental levies,” Superintendent Dale Layne said.

Also, he said the quick deadline to make a decision about an emergency levy — Monday — was a challenge since school just started last week.

“We were on a real tight timeframe,” Layne said.

The school district also doesn't have firm attendance numbers yet for Jerome High School.

So far, Layne said the largest increase in student numbers is in fourth, fifth and seventh grades.

The Twin Falls School District also decided against a supplemental levy, even though there are about 200 more students than last year.

Spokeswoman Beth Pendergrass said the district promised patrons that if they supported a two-year supplemental levy during the spring 2011 election, there wouldn't be any emergency levies.

In Buhl, there are about 100 more students than last year. But Superintendent Byron Stutzman said the school district didn't pursue an emergency levy.

That's because voters just passed a two-year, $400,000 annual supplemental levy last month.

“We didn't want to put more things on the tax roll,” Stutzman said.

No Charges Yet in Alleged Gun Incident

BY ALISON GENE SMITH

TWIN FALLS • A group of construction workers say a Twin Falls attorney pulled a gun on them while they worked in a new subdivision near the Twin Falls Gun Club.

On July 2, Twin Falls police responded to the 2200 block of Nisqually Street in Twin Falls for a call about a man with a gun.

According to a police report, officers arrived on the scene and spoke with Joseph Rockstahl, the person alleged to have the gun, and his wife about the incident.

Monday, Rockstahl told the Times-News he had no comment about the alleged incident.

According to the report,

Rockstahl said he and his wife were having a couple of drinks outside and were upset about the noise coming from a construction site two houses down the road. The police report lists the incident as being alcohol-related.

At about 9 p.m., the report states, Rockstahl said his wife walked down to complain about the noise and spoke with the three men working at the site. According to the report, the workers were still there an hour later so Rockstahl's wife returned to tell them again to leave.

In statements to police, the three workers claim the gap between the woman's two visits was only about 20 minutes.

OxyContin Baby Charge Dropped

BY ALISON GENE SMITH
alismith@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • A charge against a 20-year-old woman whose 14-month-old son allegedly consumed OxyContin was dropped Friday. Aerial Wood was originally charged with felony injury to a child, but the charge was dropped by prosecutors. At the court hearing Friday, Judge Roger Harris explained to Wood that because she was charged with a felony, prosecutors could file charges again. And Monday, Twin Falls County Prosecutor Grant Loebs said his office hasn't dropped the case. "We're continuing investigation on that," Loebs said. Loebs said prosecutors need to prove how the child actually ingested the drugs. "The child certainly had the drugs," he said. "The question is how did they get there and who's responsible?" Wood allegedly told police she went with a friend to a home she had never been to before. At the house, the woman said her child found some OxyContin pills when she left the room for a short time, but she didn't believe he'd eaten any, according to a police report filed with the case. Wood has disputed the police account. She declined comment Monday on the case.

According to burleyidaho.org, the popular park known as Storybook Park was a two-year-long venture that a group of Burley woman envisioned. It is commonly tagged as "A playground a whole community helped build!"

After raising money for the wooden structures, their vision came to life after receiving input from local children, one of whom named the park. The venue is a popular site for events and kid-friendly entertainment. It is located on the corner of Conant Avenue and 14th Street.

What can you tell me about the wildlife refuge around Lake Walcott, behind where the Minidoka Dam is being worked on?

The sanctuary was created after the Minidoka Dam and reservoir was developed. The area was identified as such because the large body of water drew lots of birds that either nested or migrated in the area.

"It originally was created for the protection of birds," said Krueger. "Later it was changed to protect all wildlife." Protection aside, the park is available for public use including hunting and fishing. Some restrictions apply and public activities are analyzed.

With more than 230 identified species of birds that either nest or migrate, bird watchers are in for a treat with Canadian geese in the spring and ducks of various types including mallards, pintails, shovellers and many more.

Man Shot in July Arrested for Robbery

BY ALISON GENE SMITH
alismith@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • A man whom police said was shot by another man in self-defense in July was arrested for robbery Saturday, for allegedly taking money from a woman and fracturing her jaw. According to a police report, Twin Falls police responded to a call in the 400 block of Ash Street at about 1:10 p.m. Aug. 30. Police arrived to find a woman bleeding from the left side of her jaw and chin area, the report states.

The woman said Joseph Cossette called her and accused her of "ratting" someone out who was arrested at her home, the report states. According to the report, the woman denied the accusation, but agreed to go to Cossette's Ash Street home to talk about it.

According to the report, the woman placed her purse on the ground. Cossette then allegedly removed a bag containing $35 and change and said he would keep the money "as tax for ratting someone out!"

When the woman said no and asked Cossette to return her money, he allegedly punched her twice in her jaw area, causing a laceration, the report states.

According to the report, emergency room staff confirmed the woman had a fractured jaw.

The report states Cossette fled the scene, leaving his three small children unattended. According to the report, police found a hypodermic needle, unused syringes and other items commonly used to inject methamphetamine at the scene and in Cossette's home. Water in a cup within reaching distance of the children was found to test positive for meth, the report states.

The $35 was later recovered at Cossette's residence, the report states.

Cossette is being held on $50,000 bond at the Twin Falls County Jail and a preliminary hearing is scheduled for Sept. 27.

Jerome Avoids Boil Order after Water Main Breaks

BY JULIE WOOTTON
jwootton@magicvalley.com

JEROME • City public works crews managed to avoid the need for a boil order on drinking water Monday after a water main broke at a residential intersection. Walt Appell, public works director for the city of Jerome, said the break was discovered at about noon. He said crews were boring in the area in order to put in a fiber optic conduit and hit the water line. The city kept residents informed of the incident, including the loss of water delivery to Cedar Street and F and G avenues, through its Nixle community alert system. At one point, the city alerts warned a boil order would be possible. But at the scene Monday evening, Appell said the boil order had been canceled. That's because the drinking water system didn't lose pressure, he said. Repairs were made by 6:30 p.m. Appell expected crews would wrap up their work within 1 1/2 hours. South Cedar Street was closed Monday evening, and city crews were removing piles of mud from the area. Some small water puddles led away from the open hole in the ground at the site of the water main.

T.F. COUNCIL APPROVES NEW DOWNTOWN PARKING RULES

BY MELISSA DAVLIN
mdavlin@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • The meters may be gone, but downtown hasn't turned into a parking free-for-all. On Monday, the Twin Falls City Council voted 6-1 to approve a new set of codes for downtown parking. Earlier this summer, the city council voted to get rid of parking meters, requiring a new set of rule changes, explained community development director Mitch Humble. That includes establishing a three-hour time limit on parking and allowing the City Council to set parking pass rates. Enforcement will begin Nov. 1. Until then, parking officials will leave informational pamphlets instead of tickets on violators' windshields. Council members disagreed on fines, whether to issue a citation on a first violation, and how much discretion to give to code enforcers. Councilman Chris Talkington objected to what he called over-enforcement of the parking rules, ultimately voting against the changes.

On Sept. 24, the council will hold a public hearing on new fees for parking passes.

T.F. Refinances, Save $900,000

TIMES-NEWS

TWIN FALLS • On Monday, the Twin Falls City Council approved an agreement with the State of Idaho Bond Bank Authority. The city is selling the debt to the bond bank, which will then sell it to investors, explained Stephanie Bonny of the Idaho Bond Bank. That will allow the city to refinance, which will save the city about $900,000 in the long term. The city accrued the debt to improve its water and wastewater systems. In other business, the city awarded a $2.7 million contract to Sawtooth Construction, Inc. for the Kimberly/Highland Water Extension Project.

Gun

Rockstahl wrote he heard yelling coming from the site. He wrote he grabbed a 9 mm pistol, tucking it under his arm, because he believed he would be outnumbered by the construction workers.

"He made contact with the three men working and claims they were yelling at his wife and that one man had actually pushed her," the report states. "When asked if Mrs. Rockstahl could identify the person who pushed her she could not."

According to the report, Rockstahl told police he brandished the pistol and pointed it at the ground, saying, "Let's get this gun fight started," in order to deter the workers.

Rockstahl attempted to chamber a round in the gun but was unable to due to recent wrist surgery, the report states.

When the gun appeared, the report states, one of the workers called 911.

Describing the alleged altercation, the three construction workers told police that Rockstahl attempted to point the gun at them, "which caused them to try to take the weapon away from him."

After the alleged altercation, the report states the Rockstahls returned to their home.

When police arrived, officers removed the bullets from the gun and took it into evidence without any problems, the report states.

A neighbor told police he could see the dispute but not hear it and left as soon as he saw a gun was involved, the report states. According to the report, the neighbor said he did not think the workers were making a lot of noise, but he himself was being noisy in his backyard and was surprised the noise complaint wasn't about him.

One of the alleged victims, Randy Carpenter, told the Times-News he and the others involved are frustrated with the slow progress of the case.

Josh Palmer, spokesman for the city of Twin Falls, said the case was originally sent to Twin Falls County Prosecutor Grant Loebs, but was later turned over to city Prosecuting Attorney Fritz Wonderlich because of a possible conflict of interest. Wonderlich is currently investigating the case, Palmer said.

Twin Falls Bowling Alley Gets a Colorful Overhaul

skadel@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • Imagine a bowling alley where colorfully lighted lanes guide your ball right into the pocket.

Where the pins have a fluorescent glow during midnight play.

And where children never again toss a gutter ball.

It will all happen when Magic Bowl at 340 Second Ave. E. in Twin Falls finishes its renovation, scheduled for completion Sunday.

"We're going to give southern Idaho a bowling experience they have never seen before," said Mike Weems, co-owner of the alley with his wife, Ruthie.

A Mack Lane Service crew from Green Bay, Wis., was hard at work building new lanes Monday afternoon. Weems calls them North America's No. 1 bowling lane installation company because of their precision — lane height must not vary more than a hair from one side to the other.

Weems said bowlers will notice truer roll on the new surface. Some of the other renovations are just plain fun, such as lighted pins, music and glowing lanes for midnight Monte Carlo play.

The lanes will feature a series of blue lights down the center with red lights on each edge.

"It looks like you're coming in for a landing on an airstrip," Weems said.

For children's enjoyment, bumpers will automatically cover gutters when youngsters bowl so each toss results in pins being knocked down.

New high-tech pin spotters are being added, too, replacing less accurate equipment installed in 1958. Weems said having the pins placed in exactly the right spot will increase bowlers' efficiency just as the better lanes will.

New 42-inch scoring screens are being installed, and Weems believes they'll be the largest in Idaho.

There will still be a snack bar, but Magic Bowl will add a full-service restaurant and a catering service.

"Twin Falls is a real bowling town," Weems said. "Southern Idaho needs a bowling center like this because this is one of the best bowling towns I've ever seen."

The Weemses also own the Mountain View alley in Shoshone and had the Mountain Sun Lanes in Bellevue until they closed the latter last week due to 62-year-old Mike's failing health.

He said he fell in love with bowling as a 7-year-old boy and began hanging around the alley in his hometown of Lancaster, Calif., taking a job as pin chaser and pin cleaner when he was 9. He's been in the business ever since.

Weems declined to say how much the renovation costs, but said it's well worth the money.

"It will be a real experience for people of all ages," he said, "and we want to help revitalize the downtown area."

SURVEY: IDAHO HOME PRICES RISE 10 PERCENT

BY STEVE KADEL
skadel@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • The Magic Valley housing market is mirroring the steady recovery nationwide, local real estate brokers say.

A national survey by real estate data provider CoreLogic found home sales prices rose 3.8 percent in the 12 months ending in July. That's the biggest jump in six years. Idaho was among five states seeing the biggest boost.

CoreLogic said Arizona prices rose 16.6 percent last year while Idaho posted a 10 percent gain.

Without citing specific percentage increases, local sales agents agree prices are going up in Twin Falls and Jerome counties.

"There has definitely been some gradual creeping up," said Mandi Riddle, associate broker with Prudential Idaho Homes.

She said home sale prices in Twin Falls County averaged $129,943 at the end of July. The average price rose to $131,403 a month later.

Part of the reason is that the supply of homes has declined. Riddle said there are 451 listings in the Twin Falls area now, compared with 650 to 700 a year ago.

"The demand has gone up" as a result, she said, accounting for higher prices.

Price increases occurred over the past six to seven months, and local real estate professionals are optimistic it will continue, Riddle said.

"There is only one place to go from the bottom, and that's up," she added.

Sid Lezamiz of Lezamiz Real Estate Co. agreed things picked up in the past year, and he estimates local prices could even exceed the 3.8 percent jump nationwide. He said there's a "feeding frenzy" among local buyers for homes priced at $125,000 and less. In addition, homes priced at $150,000 and below are selling more quickly than they did a year ago, Lezamiz said.

He said the local housing market began coming back 15 to 16 months ago and its renewed strength is good for the entire economy, not just the real estate industry.

Barry Brackett, co-owner of Canyon Trail Realty in Jerome, said he's seen a slight increase in the sale prices of homes, especially those under $200,000.

"We are seeing more new construction," he said, adding that Canyon Trail has four homes under construction in Jerome and others in Twin Falls.

Besides the 3.8 percent jump in homes sales prices nationally in the past year, CoreLogic's survey also determined average prices rose 1.3 percent from June to July of 2012. It represents the fifth straight increase in both the monthly and year-to-year indexes.

Joining Idaho and Arizona in the top five states with biggest price boosts from July 2011 to July 2012 are Utah, South Dakota and Colorado, according to CoreLogic. States that saw the biggest price drops during the period were Delaware, down 4.8 percent, and Alabama, down 4.6 percent.

Fireworks Possible Cause of Sunday's Jerome County Blaze

TIMES-NEWS

JEROME • U.S. Bureau of Land Management investigators suspect fireworks may have caused a Sunday night fire on the north rim of the Snake River Canyon.

But that suspicion has not yet been confirmed, BLM spokeswoman Heather Tiel-

Nelson said Monday afternoon.

Fire closed Golf Course Road west from its intersection with U.S. Highway 93 for more than an hour beginning at 9:15 p.m. Sunday.

The Jerome Rural Fire Department was the primary responder Sunday night and was aided by the Jerome City Fire Department, Jerome County Sheriff's Office, Twin Falls police, Idaho State Police and the Idaho Transportation Department. The BLM took over investigation of the fire.

A total of 58 acres burned, Tiel-Nelson said. Firefighters are still in the mop-up stage today.

LOCAL STUDENTS HONORED AS NATIONAL MERIT SEMIFINALISTS

TIMES-NEWS

TWIN FALLS • A few south-central Idaho students have been named semifinalists in the National Merit Scholarship Program.

The following students were named semifinalists: Brooke Lawrence from Wood River High School in Hailey, Truman Whitney from Kimberly High School, Sarah Brownlee from Richfield High School, Zerina Mehic from Canyon Ridge High School and Zachary Lambert from Twin Falls High School.

High school students have the opportunity to continue in the competition for 8,300 scholarships worth more than $32 million that will be awarded next spring.

About 90 percent of the semifinalists are expected to attain finalist standing. More than half of the finalists will win a National Merit Scholarship.

About 1.5 million juniors in more than 22,000 high schools entered the 2013 National Merit Scholarship Program by taking the 2011 preliminary SAT/National Merit Scholarship Qualifying Test.

Fewer Trees Dying from Pine Beetles

BILLINGS, Mont. (AP) • A pine beetle outbreak that has left many Western states with vast stands of dead and dying trees has eased for the second consecutive year, the U.S. Forest Service said Monday.

With fewer trees left for the beetles to eat, officials said a 2011 aerial survey recorded beetle-killed trees on 3.8 million acres of public and private land. That's down by more than half from 2009, when about 9 million acres with dead trees were tallied.

But the good news is tempered by more trees dying at higher elevations as beetles take advantage of warm winters to gain a new foothold, said Robert Mangold, the Forest Service's acting associate deputy chief for research and development. And with trees on roughly 42 million acres killed by various beetles since 2000, it could take decades for some forests to fully recover.

Beetle outbreaks can lead to more intense wildfires and hurt timber companies by making some trees unsuitable to harvest.

At Ground Zero, Can 9/11 Be Politics-free?

NEW YORK (AP) • The Sept. 11 anniversary ceremony at ground zero has been stripped of politicians this year. But can it ever be stripped of politics? For the first time, elected officials won't speak Tuesday at an occasion that has allowed them a solemn turn in the spotlight. The change was made in the name of sidelining politics, but some have rapped it as a political move in itself. It's a sign of the entrenched sensitivity of the politics of Sept. 11, even after a decade of commemorating the attacks that killed nearly 3,000 people at the World Trade Center, the Pentagon and a Pennsylvania field. From the first anniversary in 2002, the date has been limned with questions about how — or even whether — to try to separate the Sept. 11 that is about personal loss from the 9/11 that reverberates through public life. The answers are complicated for Debra Burlingame, whose brother Charles was the pilot of the hijacked plane that crashed into the Pentagon. She feels politicians' involvement can lend gravity to the remembrances, but she empathizes with the reasons for silencing officeholders at the New York ceremony this year. "It is the one day, out of 365 days a year, where, when we invoke the term '9/11,' we mean the people who died and the events that happened," rather than the political and cultural layers the phrase has accumulated, said Burlingame, who's on the board of the organization that announced the change in plans this year. "So I think the idea that it's even controversial that politicians wouldn't be speaking is really rather remarkable." Remarkable, perhaps, but a glimpse through the political prism that splits so much surrounding Sept. 11 into different lights. Officeholders from the mayor to presidents have been heard at the New York ceremony, reading texts ranging from parts of the Declaration of Independence and the Gettysburg Address to poems by John Donne and Langston Hughes. But in July, the National Sept. 11 Memorial and Museum — led by Mayor Michael Bloomberg as its board chairman — announced that this year's version would include only relatives reading victims' names. Politicians still may attend.

Border Patrol Halts Mexico Flights

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) • The U.S. government has halted flights home for Mexicans caught entering the country illegally in the deadly summer heat of Arizona's deserts, a money-saving move that ends a seven-year experiment that cost taxpayers $100 million. More than 125,000 passengers were flown deep into Mexico for free since 2004 in an effort that initially met with skepticism from Mexican government officials and migrants, but was gradually embraced as a way to help people back on their feet and save lives.

ASSOCIATED PRESS

Antonio Perez joins dozens of immigrants, many of them Mexican citizens, as they gather in sleeping quarters at a well known immigrant shelter, as many are making tough decisions on whether to try their luck at trying to make it to the United States, by illegally crossing the border Thursday in Nogales, Mexico.

The Border Patrol hailed it as a way to discourage people from trying their luck again, and it appears to have kept many away. But with Border Patrol arrests at 40-year lows and fresh evidence suggesting more people may be heading south of the border than north, officials struggled to fill the planes and found the costs increasingly difficult to justify. Flights carrying up to 146 people were cut to once from twice daily last year. And this summer, there haven't been any. "Everything comes down to dollars and cents," said George Allen, assistant chief of the Border Patrol's Tucson sector. "We're running into a more budget-conscious society, especially with the government"

He added: "Does it fit within our budget and is there an alternative that is not as effective but still effective?" In an effort to keep the flights going, American authorities proposed mixing in Mexicans who commit crimes while living in the U.S. The Mexican government balked at seating hardened criminals next to families, elderly and the frail who recently crossed the border in search of work.

"Right off the bat, I can tell you that Mexico was not going to allow, nor will it ever allow, that kind of repatriation, which puts families' safety at risk," said Juan Manuel Calderon, the Mexican consul in Tucson.

Executive Order Seeks to Improve Digital Defenses

WASHINGTON (AP) • The Obama administration is preparing an executive order with new rules to protect U.S. computer systems, after Congress failed earlier this summer to pass a cybersecurity bill. The provisions include voluntary standards for companies, a special council run by the Homeland Security Department and new regulations covering vital systems.

But just weeks before the election, the White House risks complaints that President Barack Obama is anti-business from Republicans and the same pro-business groups that killed the legislation on Capitol Hill. National security officials have warned that electric grids, water plants, banks and other essential industries operated by the private sector are vulnerable to cyberattacks.

Romney: Teachers are Turning Backs on Students

WASHINGTON (AP) • Republican presidential nominee Mitt Romney said Monday that striking Chicago teachers are turning their backs on thousands of students and that President Barack Obama is rooting for them. Obama's top spokesman said the president has not taken sides but is urging both the teachers and the city to settle quickly. Chicago's mayor, Obama ally Rahm Emanuel, called Romney's statement "lip service" as the nation's third-largest school system inserted itself into the hard-fought presidential campaign. Hours before he was to arrive in Chicago to raise money for his campaign, Romney said in a statement that he chooses to "side with the parents and students depending on public schools to give them the skills to succeed." He said he was "disappointed" with Chicago teachers, who walked off the job in the city's first schools strike in 25 years. White House spokesman Jay Carney said Obama was monitoring the situation in his hometown but was not itching to get involved. "We hope that both sides are able to come together to settle this quickly and in the best interests of Chicago's students," Carney told reporters.

Weather Affects Power Plant Operations

THE WASHINGTON POST
BOULDER CITY, Nev. • Drought and rising temperatures are forcing water managers across the country to scramble for ways to produce the same amount of power from the hydroelectric grid with less water, including from behemoths such as the Hoover Dam. Hydropower is not the only part of the nation's energy system that appears increasingly vulnerable to the impact of climate change, as low water levels affect coal-fired and nuclear power plants' operations and impede the passage of coal barges along the Mississippi River. "We're trying to manage a changing climate, its impact on water supplies and our ability to generate power, all at once," said Michael Connor, commissioner of the Bureau of Reclamation, the Interior Department's water-managing agency. Producing electricity accounts for at least 40 percent of water use in the United States. Warmer and drier summers mean less water is available to cool nuclear and fossil-fuel power plants. The Millstone nuclear plant in Waterford, Conn., had to shut down one of its reactors in mid-August because the water it drew from the Long Island Sound was too warm to cool critical equipment outside the core. A twin-unit nuclear plant in Braidwood, Ill., needed to get special permission to continue operating this summer because the temperature in its cooling-water pond rose to 102 degrees, four degrees above its normal limit. Another Midwestern plant stopped operating temporarily because its water-intake pipes ended up on dry ground because of the prolonged drought.

New Rules

I just arrived in Shanghai, but I'm thinking about Estonia and wondering about something Presidents Bill Clinton and Barack Obama have been saying.

Thomas L. Friedman

New York Times

Wired magazine reported last week that public schools in Estonia are establishing a program for teaching first-graders — and kids in all other grades — how to do computer programming. Wired said that the curriculum was created “because of the difficulty Estonian companies face in hiring programmers. Estonia has a burgeoning tech industry thanks in part to the success of Skype, which was developed in Estonia in 2003.”

The news from Estonia prompted The Guardian newspaper of London to publish an online poll asking its readers: “Children aged 7 to 16 are being given the opportunity to learn how to code in schools in Estonia, should U.K. school children be taught programming as part of their school day?” It's fascinating to read about all this while visiting Shanghai, whose public school system in 2010 beat the rest of the world in math, science and reading in the global PISA exam of 15-year-olds. Will the Chinese respond by teaching programming to preschoolers?

All of this made me think Obama should stop using the phrase — first minted by Clinton in 1992 — that if you just “work hard and play by the rules” you should expect that the American system will deliver you a decent life and a chance for your children to have a better one. That mantra really resonates with me and, I am sure, with many voters. There is just one problem: It's out of date.

The truth is, if you want a decent job that will lead to a decent life today you have to work harder, regularly reinvent yourself, obtain at least some form of post-secondary education, make sure that you're engaged in lifelong learning and play by the rules. That's not a bumper sticker, but we terribly mislead people by saying otherwise.

Why? Because when Clinton first employed his phrase in 1992, the Internet was just emerging, virtually no one had email and the Cold War was just ending. In other words, we were still living in a closed system, a world of walls, which were just starting to come down. It was a world before NAFTA and the full merger of globalization and the information technology revolution, a world in which unions and blue-collar manufacturing were still relatively strong, and where America could still write a lot of the rules that people played by.

That world is gone. It is now a more open system. Technology and globalization are wiping out lower-skilled jobs faster, while steadily raising the skill level required for new jobs. More than ever now, lifelong learning is the key to getting into, and staying in, the middle class.

There is a quote attributed to the futurist Alvin Toffler that captures this new reality: In the future “illiteracy will not be defined by those who cannot read and write, but by those who cannot learn and relearn.” Any form of standing still is deadly.

I covered the Republican convention, and I was impressed in watching my Times colleagues at how much their jobs have changed. Here's what a reporter does in a typical day: report, file for the Web edition, file for The International Herald Tribune, tweet, update for the Web edition, report more, track other people's tweets, do a Web-video spot and then write the story for the print paper. You want to be a Times reporter today? That's your day. You have to work harder and smarter and develop new skills faster.

Van Ton-Quinlivan, the vice chancellor for workforce and economic development at the California Community Colleges System, explained to me the four basic skill sets out there today. The first are people who are “ready now.” That's people with exactly the right skills an employer is looking for at the right time. Employers will give the local labor market and schools the first chance at providing those people, but if they are not available they'll go the “shortest distance to find them,” she said, and today that could be anywhere in the world. Companies who can't find “ready now” will look for “ready soon,” people who, with limited training and on-the-job experience, can fit right in. If they can't find those, some will hire “work ready.” These are people with two or four years of postsecondary education who can be trained, but companies have shrinking budgets for that now and want public schools to do it. Last are the growing legions of the “far from ready,” people who dropped out or have only a high school diploma. Their prospects for a decent job are small, even if they are ready to “work hard and play by the rules.”

Which is why if we ever get another stimulus it has to focus, in part, on getting more people more education. The unemployment rate today is 4.1 percent for people with four years of college, 6.6 percent for those with two years, 8.8 percent for high school graduates, and 12.0 percent for dropouts. That's why I prefer the new mantra floated by Clinton at the Democratic convention, (which Obama has tried to fund): “We have to prepare more Americans for the new jobs that are being created in a world fueled by new technology. That's why investments in our people” — in more community colleges, Pell grants and vocational-training classes — “are more important than ever.”

THEIR VIEW

Insurance that Would Serve Seniors Better than Medicaid

The following appears on Bloomberg View:

As the dust settles from the political conventions in Florida and North Carolina, one issue important to the health care of older Americans is rising into the sunlight and finally getting some of the attention it needs.

We don't mean Medicare; for months, the campaigns have taken regular shots at each other on that.

We mean Medicaid, the program generally thought of as health insurance for poor families. Yet one-third of Medicaid's budget, about $120 billion, goes to fund long-term care for the disabled and frail elderly, most of it in nursing facilities.

People who need custodial care often fall back on Medicaid after they've used up their own resources and can qualify for the program's very low income and wealth limits.

Even though President Barack Obama and his Republican challenger, former Massachusetts Governor Mitt Romney, have said little specifically about long-term care, it's clear from their general views on Medicaid that they differ on how much to continue this support. Obama intends to preserve Medicaid as an entitlement program — which means it promises to pay all acceptable expenses that arise for qualified beneficiaries. He even plans to expand the program, starting in 2014, to cover 11 million more Americans, including people with income as much as 138 percent of the federal poverty level.

Presumably, then, if Obama is re-elected, support for nursing-home care would continue — though it could be squeezed a bit by budget constraints, especially after 2020 when the federal government stops financing 100 percent of Medicaid's expansion.

Romney has endorsed his running mate Paul Ryan's proposal to change Medicaid's structure entirely, so that it would no longer be an entitlement program at all. Instead, the federal government would give the states block grants to spend on health care as they please. (The idea is to make the program work better by giving states more control.)

These grants would increase every year at a rate of 1 percentage point more than inflation, but this would be significantly less than Medicaid's budget is expected to expand under the current structure along with the changes set in motion by the 2010 health-care law. By 2022, the difference would add up to a budget cut of about $1.26 trillion, a new analysis by Bloomberg Government shows. That would mean considerably less money for long-term care, and everything else Medicaid pays for.

This policy disagreement illustrates the great divide between Obama and Romney over government aid: Obama believes in setting a floor to support Americans in need; Romney wants a ceiling on the government's responsibility. The ceiling is a simpler way to manage the budget, but it doesn't address what happens to people who urgently need medical or nursing care when neither they nor the federal government can afford it. Will the states really be able to come to their rescue?

Obama's strategy is preferable to Romney's in that it would at least preserve the Medicaid safety net for millions who need long-term care.

Yet there is another question to consider: Is a welfare program really the best way to provide medical services that so many Americans will someday require? It would be better for people to be insured for this care. Ideally, we would have a program analogous to the Medicare Part D drug benefit or the Medicare Advantage managed-care plan that would help people to buy affordable insurance from private carriers.

The 2010 health-care law did include a long-term-care insurance program, known as the Community Living Assistance Services and Supports (CLASS) Act. But this was abandoned when it became clear, almost immediately, that too few healthy people would enroll to allow the program to be financially sustainable. However, the CLASS Act was not well constructed, and, as Howard Gleckman, a resident fellow at the Urban Institute, has pointed out, Congress could design a new program that would have a greater chance of success. Gleckman suggests that such a program should, for example, be limited to people who work at least 20 hours a week and offer a greater menu of insurance options — including some with very high deductibles.

Tackling long-term care outside of Medicaid would have the added advantage of enabling the elderly to afford it without first liquidating their assets.

It's safe to assume that Congress and whoever is president next year won't be in a mood to immediately create a new health-care program. But lawmakers should at least begin waking up to America's growing need for a sensible strategy on long-term care.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

'Good Old Boys' Protect Their Own

The Twin Falls “Good Old Boy Society” is still alive and well.

About six weeks ago, I wrote a letter to the editor about a local attorney who pulled a gun on some hard-working young men who were working late on a house. I was complimented on my piece and told it would be in the paper. A day or two later, I was told it would not be because they were “doing a story on the incident.” No story has been done nor have any charges been filed on the attorney.

Some of these young men are roofing my house now. It is a second job for most of them so they come in the early evening after their first jobs and work late, as they did on the other job. None of my neighbors have felt compelled to pull a gun on them. They all know full well that they would be thrown in jail because they are not part of the “Good Old Boys of Twin Falls,” for whom the laws seem to not apply.

Fires Rage across the West

WENATCHEE, Wash. (AP) • Crews in central Washington and Wyoming worked Monday to protect homes from two of the many wildfires burning across the West as a destructive fire season stretches into September with no relief expected from the weather anytime soon.

Winds and temperatures remain high in parts of the region, worrying officials who had hoped cooler temperatures and moisture would eventually tamp down the threat. The National Weather Service issued red-flag warnings for wide swaths of eastern Washington and Oregon, Idaho, Montana and all of Wyoming, meaning conditions could exacerbate blazes.

In Wyoming, authorities evacuated 500 people from homes and cabins near Casper, and warned another 1,000 people in the ski resort town of Jackson to be ready to leave.

The Sheep Herder Hill Fire about 10 miles southeast of Casper started Sunday and grew quickly, burning at least six structures overnight and scorching more than 15 square miles of pine forest and sagebrush by Monday afternoon. State Forester Bill Crasper wasn't sure if any of the structures burned were homes but said even more buildings may have been lost.

In northwest Wyoming, about 1,000 Jackson residents were told to prepare to evacuate Monday as the Little Horsethief Fire burned about 1,500 acres in a forested, mountainous area less than two miles south of town. The blaze was 15 percent contained.

In Wyoming, authorities evacuated 500 people from homes and cabins near Casper, and warned another 1,000 people in the ski resort

Mountains that divide the state's western and eastern halves. And the forecast was for gusts that could fan the flames of dozens of blazes.

"Winds are starting to kick up," Wenatchee police Sgt. John Kruse said. "That is going to be an issue for firefighters to deal with."

Only a shed has been lost near Wenatchee, and no injuries have been reported at what appeared to be the most-threatening of many wildfires sparked by lightning in the state Saturday.

Residents of about 180 homes on the west side of Wenatchee, about 140 miles east of Seattle, were told to evacuate Sunday, Kruse said, and a shelter was set up at a church because of the 500-acre blaze that continued to burn in the hills. It was so windy that newly arriving crews struggled to set up their tents.

Connie Beck of Wenatchee was ready to get herself, her things and her dog out of harm's way if needed, but hoped crews would stop the fire.

"I packed my pictures, my recipe box and a couple of days' worth of clothes, and Mollie," she said, pointing to her Dachshund.

Elsewhere in Washington, fires that apparently started over the weekend burned more than 11,000 acres of sagebrush and grass, and were threatening homes near Grand Coulee Dam in Douglas and Grant counties. Another fire burned 200 acres of sagebrush and grass near Odessa in Lincoln County.

As many as 80 fires along the east slopes of the Cascades were set by Saturday night lightning strikes, the Department of Natural Resources said. Most remained small.

Idaho Could Save up to $380 Million with Medicaid Expansion

BOISE (AP) • Idaho's taxpayers could save $380 million over six years by agreeing to expand Medicaid coverage for more low-income people under President Barack Obama's health care overhaul, according to an analysis by the Spokesman-Review.

Currently, costs of caring for Idaho's indigent population — often poor, single men with no children who don't currently qualify for Medicaid — are borne by counties and the state as part of Idaho's "Catastrophic Health Care Fund." The total bill is expected to top $60 million next year.

Under Obama's law, Medicaid would be expanded to cover many of those people, with the federal government picking up 100 percent of the tab until 2016. Support is pared gradually to 90 percent after 2020.

Though the U.S. Supreme Court upheld the federal Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act in June, justices ruled states couldn't be punished if they didn't expand their Medicaid programs. Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter has a committee investigating what Idaho should do, with their recommendations due in a few weeks that are meant to help lawmakers decide what to do.

House Majority Leader Mike Moyle, a conservative Republican who has argued that "Obamacare" is an inappropriate intrusion of government, opposed expanding Medicaid coverage in a guest editorial to Idaho newspapers he penned in July with House Speaker Lawrence Denney.

"Resistance usually comes at a cost, but the state of Idaho must resist Obamacare," he wrote. "The cost of not resisting will be much higher."

On Monday, Moyle, R-Star, said he's still leaning against expanding the program, but he wants to see what Otter's panel comes up with.

"If I were to vote today, I would not vote to expand Medicaid and for health care exchanges on the state level," he told The Associated Press. "But having said that, we still need to get the facts."

Other GOP lawmakers, however, are already pushing to accept the expansion, with Sen. Joyce Broadsword, R-Sagle, telling the Spokesman-Review she thinks the changes will provide relief for taxpayers — and encourage patients to take health care into their own hands.

"We've got a huge population out there of uninsured that are putting off health care needs, especially catastrophic care, because they can't afford to go to the doctor," said Broadsword, who is retiring from the Idaho Legislature to run for the Bonner County Commission.

Catastrophic fund managers estimate Idaho will spend $61 million next year on indigent medical care, split between county property taxes and state general funds. With costs expected to escalate by at least 7 percent annually for the next six years, the cost for the program would be $436 million.

Local Fire Captain Gives Speech at National Firefighters Memorial

mdavlin@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • Across the country, Rock Creek Rural Fire Protection District Capt. Brent Blamires is spending today remembering fallen colleagues.

The Jerome resident will participate in the Sept. 11 memorial ceremony at the National Fallen Firefighters Memorial in Emmitsburg, Md.

"I will be giving a speech on why we ring the bell during a firefighter's funeral," said Blamires, 35. The bell, which rings three times during a funeral, signifies the last time a firefighter is called to duty, he said.

Eleven years after the terrorist attacks killed 343 firefighters and paramedics in New York City, it's important for Blamires to commemorate the date.

"It shows that the guys on Sept. 11 risked their lives to save the lives of thousands of people, climbing the stairs to get them out," he said.

Blamires is spending the week in Emmitsburg taking classes at the National Fire Academy, where he is learning how to develop better training programs for local firefighters.

He specifically applied to take classes during the week of Sept. 11. The day is special to him, Blamires said, and it was important for him to commemorate the day. "I want to continue the tradition."

as time goes on, she said. It also might have additional meaning for someone who was born on Sept. 11 or has the date as an anniversary.

"They're still rebuilding," she said. "Clearly people are still affected."

Mila Bagramyan, also a deputy clerk at the courthouse, was in ninth grade at then-Robert Stuart Junior High School on 9/11, she said.

Although she and her friends had heard of the World Trade Center, they didn't make the connection to the twin towers, she said. And she didn't realize the magnitude of the attack until she got to school and watched it on live TV, she said.

While the 10-year anniversary of the attacks was important, Bagramyan said the day still holds significance. And she's far from alone on that opinion.

"To forget it at this point seems like a slap in the face to everyone," McCarthy said.

Laurie Welch, Alison Gene Smith, Julie Wootton and Steve Kadel all contributed to this report.

Valera Keeps Wendell Boys in First Place at Midway Point

TIMES-NEWS

WENDELL • Jorge Valera scored on a 60th-minute free kick as the Wendell boys edged the Community School 2-1 on Monday.

From about 20 yards out, Valera drove his free kick low and bent it around the defensive wall to keep Wendell in first place in the High Desert Conference (5-1-0, 15 pts.) at the midway point in conference play.

Jorge Diaz opened the scoring 15 minutes in on an assist from Eder Macias, and the Trojans were off and running as they have been all season.

"Every time we play these guys it's a close match," Wendell coach Jon Goss said. "Our team started to get more offense in the attacking third in the second half, and that was good to see."

Ben Kanellitsas scored a 28th-minute penalty to draw the Cutthroats (4-3-1, 2-3-1, 7 pts.) level, only for Valera to win it in the second half.

"It was the best game our boys have played all season, even though the result didn't go our way," said Community School coach Richard Whitelaw. "It's just that bit of quality in front of goal that we're missing right now."

Both teams are in action Wednesday when Wendell goes to Gooding and the Community School hosts Buhl.

GOODING 7, FILER 0

FILER • Federico Mendez scored four goals to keep Gooding in second place in the High Desert Conference at the midway point.

Angel Garcia, Juan Valencia and Filiberto Gallegos also netted for the Senators (4-0-2 High Desert, 14 pts.), who host Wendell on Wednesday.

Filer (1-8-0, 1-5-0, 3 pts.) hosts the Community School Thursday.

BUHL 5, BLISS 4

BUHL • Juan Perez scored two goals, including the decisive one with four minutes remaining.

Perez put the Indians (6-1-1, 4-1-1 High Desert, 13 pts.) ahead in the fourth minute and Eddie Verduzco doubled their advantage in the 10th. Luis Carmona made it 3-1 in the 35th, but Bliss (3-3-0 High Desert, 9 pts.) scored twice to draw level.

Tony Ramirez netted in the 68th minute and Perez scored the eventual winner eight minutes later. Bliss pulled one back late but couldn't find the leveler.

Buhl visits the Community School on Wednesday.

Girls Soccer FILER 5, GOODING 0

FILER • Jenna Jarolimek's natural hat trick led Filer to the win.

Jarolimek scored in the fifth, 12th and 31st minutes to take the Wildcats to a 3-0 lead. Shelby Moyle added a second-half penalty and Anna Williams rounded out the scoring later on.

Filer had 17 shots on goal to three from Gooding.

Gooding hosts Wendell on Wednesday. The Wildcats host the Community School on Thursday.

COMMUNITY SCHOOL 5, WENDELL 0

WENDELL • Ellie Swanson scored twice to lead the Cutthroats to a comfortable win.

Lilly Jenner, Hannah Dies and Hayley Murach also scored for the Community School (5-2-1, 5-0-1 High Desert, 16 pts.), which hosts Buhl on Wednesday.

Wendell (2-3-1, 7 pts.) is at Gooding on Wednesday.

BLISS 6, BUHL 2

BUHL • Bliss routed the host Indians to remain unbeaten on the season and in second place in the High Desert Conference (4-0-2, 14 pts.).

Raft River AD Headed to Alma Mater Hall of Fame

TIMES-NEWS

DILLON, Mont. • The University of Montana Western announced that Raft River athletic director and former football coach Randy Spaeth will be inducted into the school's Hall of Fame on Saturday.

Spaeth

Spaeth was a member of the Montana Western football team from 1993-95 and was a two-time Frontier Conference first-team selection, as well as an honorable mention NAIA All-American in 1994.

During his time in Dillon, the Bulldogs went to back-to-back NAIA semifinals.

At Raft River, Spaeth coached the football team to 103 wins in 15 seasons, including 10 state semifinal appearances. Five times the Trojans reached the title game under his tenure, winning championships in 2002 (IA 11-man) and 2004 (IA Division I).

Spaeth was also the girls basketball coach for five seasons, the wrestling coach for three, and the head track and field coach for three, plus eight more as an assistant. In total he had a hand in 10 team championships before moving to the athletic director's seat full time this school year.

Bair Inducted to USU Hall of Fame

LOGAN, Utah • Kimberly resident Shae Bair is one of the most decorated female athletes in Utah State University history.

Now she's also an Aggie Hall of Famer.

Bair, along with seven others, was inducted into the Utah State University Athletics Hall of Fame on Saturday.

Bair competed in pole vault during her time at Utah State, earning All-American honors three times for top eight finishes at the 1998 and 1999 NCAA Division I Indoor Championships and the 2000 outdoor championships.

She also won the 2002 Big West Conference outdoor title and her high mark of 13 feet, 9.25 inches — set in 2000 — stood as the school's all-time record for six years. It's currently the third-best all-time mark.

The group was honored during halftime of the Aggie football team's win over Utah on Friday night and then was formally inducted Saturday.

There are currently 69 individuals and three teams to have been enshrined.

McIlroy: No Decision on Which Flag for Rio

ASSOCIATED PRESS

CARMEL, Ind. • One day Rory McIlroy was on top of the world, the next day he was caught in an identity crisis between two golfing nations.

"I was hoping that my success on the golf course would be the more popular topic of golfing conversation today," McIlroy said in a letter he posted Monday on Twitter.

Not long after he beat the strongest leaderboard of the year in the BMW Championship, McIlroy found himself in the middle of a debate over which flag he might represent when golf returns to the Olympics in 2016 in Rio de Janeiro.

The 23-year-old from Northern Ireland, already with two major championships and a No. 1 ranking by a widening margin, grew up "a proud product of Irish golf." Because his country is part of the United Kingdom, he also is eligible to play for Britain.

Stirring the debate was an interview with The Daily Mail in which McIlroy said he feels a greater connection with the UK than with Ireland.

"What makes it such an awful position to be in is I have grown up my whole life playing for Ireland under the Golfing Union of Ireland umbrella," he told the British newspaper. "But the fact is, I've always felt more British and Irish."

That led to speculation that McIlroy was laying the groundwork toward playing for Britain, and he quickly clarified his position, which remains on the fence.

"I wish to clarify that I have absolutely not made a decision regarding my participation in the next Olympics," McIlroy said. "On a personal level, playing in the Olympics would be a huge honor. However, the games in Rio are still four years away and I certainly won't be making any decisions with regards to participating any time soon."

His next event is the Tour Championship, where McIlroy is the No. 1 seed going into the FedEx Cup finale. Any of the top five seeds — Tiger Woods, Nick Watney, Phil Mickelson and Brandt Snedeker are the others — could capture the FedEx Cup and the $10 million bonus by winning at East Lake.

As for the flag, what matters immediately to McIlroy is European blue at the end of the month in the Ryder Cup.

Beyond that, he already has become a global star.

All it took was four tournaments in five weeks for McIlroy to establish himself as the game's dominant player, which has been missing in golf since Woods went astray following the 2009 season.

He won by a record eight shots in the PGA Championship at Kiawah Island, making him the youngest player since Seve Ballesteros in 1980 with two majors. Then, he rallied from a three-shot deficit with a 67 on the final day at TPC Boston to capture the Deutsche Bank Championship. Six days later, he arrived at Crooked Stick, just north of Indianapolis, expecting nothing less than another trophy. He delivered a 67 on a final day that featured Woods, Phil Mickelson, Lee Westwood, Vijay Singh, Dustin Johnson and Adam Scott in contention.

"I feel like it's just coming to me naturally," McIlroy said Sunday. "The more that you're in that position, the more you're able to do it. You feel more comfortable doing it. All these feelings that I had today, I'm used to because I just had them last week. And the feelings that I had last week, I still was used to them because I only had them a couple weeks ago."

Ravens Shove Bengals Aside

ASSOCIATED PRESS

BALTIMORE • Joe Flacco deftly directed Baltimore new, no-huddle offense, and the Ravens' defense administered an old-fashioned whipping on the Cincinnati Bengals.

Flacco threw for 299 yards and two touchdowns, Ed Reed took an interception 34 yards for a score, and the Ravens rolled to a 44-13 victory Monday night to extend their home winning streak to 11 games.

Using the no-huddle offense almost flawlessly, the Ravens amassed 430 yards and got two short touchdown runs from Ray Rice. After letting an early 14-point lead dwindle to 17-13, the Ravens pulled away by scoring 24 straight points in just over six minutes.

Flacco watched the final eight minutes of the blowout on the sideline after going 21 for 29 in Baltimore's ninth consecutive victory in the AFC North. The Ravens were the only team in the division to win the opener.

And while the offense certainly was impressive, Baltimore's defense also excelled in its first game under coordinator Dean Pees. Playing without injured NFL Defensive Player of the Year Terrell Suggs — who had 14 sacks last year — the Ravens dropped Andy Dalton four times.

Not only that, but Baltimore turned two turnovers into touchdowns over a two-minute span. After Reed's touchdown return, 37-year-old linebacker Ray Lewis forced a fumble that was recovered by Lardarius Webb, setting up a 1-yard touchdown run by Rice to make it 41-13 with 13:41 remaining.

Reed's jaunt with a pass tipped by Cincinnati receiver Brandon Tate put the diminutive safety in the NFL record book. Reed has 1,497 yards in interception returns, eclipsing the previous record of 1,483 yards by Rod Woodson. It was Reed's seventh career score on a pickoff return.

Dalton went 22 for 37 for 221 yards, and BenJarvus Green-Ellis rushed for 91 yards and a score in his Cincinnati debut. But the Bengals, who failed to beat a team that reached the post-season last season, once again came up short against a high-caliber opponent.

Dalton went 4 for 5 for 56 yards in the opening drive of the second half, and although the drive stalled at the Baltimore 1, Mike Nugent kicked a 19-yard field goal to get the Bengals to 17-13.

Flacco brought the Ravens right back, throwing a bit of Rice into the mix with excellent results. Rice caught a screen pass for 18 yards and ran for 13 more during an 89-yard drive in which Flacco went 5 for 7 for 73 yards, including a 10-yard touchdown pass to tight end Dennis Pitta.

After a 40-yard field goal by Ravens rookie Justin Tucker made it 27-13 with 1:13 left in the quarter, Reed struck exactly one minute later.

Flacco went 12 for 15 for 183 yards in the first half to stake Baltimore to a 17-10 lead.

Flacco set the tone for the shootout on the game's first offensive play, throwing deep to Torrey Smith for a 52-yard gain. That set up a 46-yard field goal by Tucker, who won the job in training camp from Billy Cundiff.

MURRAY WINS FIRST SLAM IN FIVE-SET THRILLER

ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK • His considerable lead, and a chance at history, slipping away, Andy Murray dug deep for stamina and mental strength, outlasting Novak Djokovic in a thrilling five-set, nearly five-hour U.S. Open final Monday.

It had been 76 years since a British man won a Grand Slam singles championship and, at least for Murray, it was well worth the wait.

Ending a nation's long drought, and snapping his own four-final skid in majors, Murray finally pulled through with everything at stake on a Grand Slam stage, shrugging off defending champion Djokovic's comeback bid to win 7-6 (10), 7-5, 2-6, 3-6, 6-2.

"Relief is probably the best word I would use to describe how I'm feeling just now," Murray said, adding: "You do think: Is it ever going to happen?"

Yes, Murray already had showed he could come up big by winning the gold medal in front of a home crowd at the London Olympics last month. But this was different. This was a Grand Slam tournament, the standard universally used to measure tennis greatness — and the 287th since Britain's Fred Perry won the 1936 U.S. Championships, as the event was known back then.

"He deserved to win this Grand Slam more than anybody," Djokovic said of Murray, who will rise to No. 3 in the rankings behind No. 1 Roger Federer and No. 2 Djokovic.

Murray vs. Djokovic was a test of will as much as skill, lasting 4 hours, 54 minutes, tying the record for longest U.S. Open final. The first-set tiebreaker's 22 points set a tournament mark. They repeatedly produced fantastic, tales-in-themselves points, lasting 10, 20, 30, even 55 — yes, 55! — strokes, counting the serve. The crowd gave a standing ovation to salute one majestic, 30-stroke point in the fourth set that ended with Murray's forehand winner as Djokovic fell to the court, slamming on his left side.

Andy Murray reacts after beating Novak Djokovic in the men's final of the U.S. Open in New York on Monday. Murray won the match in 4 hours, 54 minutes to claim his first major championship, and Britain's first men's Slam singles title since 1936.

"Novak is so, so strong. He fights until the end in every single match," Murray said. "I don't know how I managed to come through in the end."

But as the finish approached, Djokovic — who had won eight consecutive five-set matches, including in the semifinals (against Murray) and final (against Rafael Nadal) at the Australian Open in January — was the one looking fragile, trying to catch breathers and doing deep knee bends at the baseline to stretch his aching groin muscles. After getting broken to trail 5-2 in the fifth, Djokovic had his legs massaged by a trainer.

"Well, any loss is a bad loss. There is no question about it," Djokovic said. "I'm disappointed to lose the match, but in the back of my mind I knew that I gave it all. I really, really tried to fight my way back."

No one had blown a two-set lead in the U.S. Open title match since 1949, and Murray was determined not to claim that distinction.

When Djokovic sent a forehand long on the final point, Murray crouched and covered his mouth with both hands, as though even he could not believe this moment had actually arrived. The 25-year-old Scot took off his sneakers, grimacing with each step as he gingerly stepped across the court. Djokovic came around to offer congratulations and a warm embrace, while "Chariots of Fire" blared over the Arthur Ashe Stadium loudspeakers.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 62-year-old lady who has been a dedicated mother, helpful grandma and a good wife. I don't mean to imply that I'm perfect, but my heart has always been in the right place.

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

I'm writing now because I have a problem. I have been so used to being a mother that now I don't know how to break the habit. My children think I do too much for them, and it hurts me when they call me "annoying" and "impossible to deal with."

I wish I could act differently, but I don't know how. I've been told I need to do something with my life other than help my kids when they don't seem to need it — and even when they do. I know I deserve to be happy, but I don't know how to start. Can you tell me what to do, Abby?

—MELANCHOLY MAMA, WENATCHEE, WASH.

DEAR MELANCHOLY: You are a successful wife and mother, having raised independent children. Now it's YOUR turn.

Think back to before you were married and had children — what were your interests? Was there a class or subject you wanted to take at a community college? Did you want to act in a play, paint a picture, photograph a landscape, read Shakespeare, join a hiking club, travel the U.S., learn to dance? Learn to speak French, plant a garden, raise rabbits, write a novel or the story of your life, study architecture, learn more about the stock market, raise funds for your favorite charity, or (you fill in the blank)?

If you still can't get the urge to "mother" out of your system, consider becoming a foster parent — or volunteer at a school, children's hospital or as a literacy tutor at your local library. The possibilities are endless and the need is great.

Please let me know what you decide to do from the hundreds of options available. You have a lot to offer.

DEAR ABBY: "Jamie" and I have been close friends for almost 50 years. She has always been there for me when I needed her and vice versa. However, I can't get past her continual bragging about herself every time we meet for lunch or talk on the phone.

Jamie always manages to bring up how some person told her how young she looks, or another told her she's a wonderful manager at work, etc. Yesterday at lunch I mentioned how much I love doing crossword puzzles. I said I love learning new words and if I don't know the meaning, I look it up in my dictionary. Jamie replied she doesn't need a dictionary because she knows the meaning of ALL words!

Jamie is a good friend, but lately I've been wondering why she feels the need to spin tales. She is always out to impress everyone with how smart, young, savvy and sophisticated she is. She even told me some of her coworkers compare her to Jackie Kennedy, which is nowhere near the truth. Why do you think she has to act like this?

—PERPLEXED INPHILLY

DEAR PERPLEXED: Jamie's behavior is a sign of extreme insecurity. People who are comfortable with themselves do not feel the need to constantly self-promote as she does. When your friend announced that she doesn't need a dictionary because she knows the meaning of all words, you were kind not to contradict her, because it's obvious she doesn't appear to be familiar with the definition of "humility."

"Pleasure might cause her read, reading might make her know, Knowledge might pity win, and pity grace obtain ..."
— Sir Philip Sidney

I am always happy to receive deals from my readers. It doesn't matter that they didn't find the right play at the table, as long as the theme is an interesting one. We can all learn from real-life hands, even when not played by experts.

Today, Orville St. Clair, declarer in six no-trump, won the helpful spade lead in hand with the jack. West should surely have led a heart here — not that it would have worked out any better.

Now declarer finessed the spade queen, more to find out how many tricks he needed in the other suits than with great confidence that it would hold. Once the finesse worked, South was up to 11 sure winners, so correctly decided to set up a threat in hearts by leading a low one from dummy and putting in the nine. He was delighted to see it hold the trick.

Of course, if East had split his honors, declarer would have had 12 top tricks. As it was, South was now playing for a 13th winner. The best order to take the tricks is the heart ace, then one club and the spade ace, discarding a heart from hand. East has to pitch a diamond, and declarer must decide if he had begun with three diamonds and four clubs (when the three top diamonds would squeeze him in clubs and hearts) or with his actual hand, when cashing the clubs squeezes East in diamonds and hearts. St. Clair read the position accurately and brought home 13 tricks.

ANSWER: Jumping to three no-trump would be premature. You could be cold for a slam or end up playing in a hopeless spot, facing unexpected shortage in a major suit. The simple choice is to bid two clubs and hope to get diamonds in later; or to raise diamonds via the cue-bid, then bid no-trump next. Given the suit disparities, put me down as a cue-bidder. Switch the minors and I'd go the other way.

Need

IF SEPTEMBER 11 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Perseverance and diligence will see you through and help you outfox any obstacles that crop up between now and January. Do what is necessary to maintain the status quo, but don't actively seek added obligations or responsibilities because you are prone to wishful thinking and perhaps blind to drawbacks. Refrain from job changes or investments in November when your business sense at a low point. You may need to wait until February or March to fully reap the benefits of all your hard work or put new plans in motion.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Sometimes you must try something new; there is value in experimentation. If you pursue commitment under these stars, an attractive someone might decide it is best to be "just friends."

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You might be carrying a torch and not even know it. A friendship might be developing into something more intimate. This is a good time to network within the community and create new contacts.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Say it with flowers. It might be time to perform a good deed for a special someone. An imaginative gift might warm the cockles of someone's heart and earn you a kiss, a hug or lifelong appreciation.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Network for dollars. Put on your best smile and meet new people from various walks of life. You can broaden your friend base while making business transactions more pleasant and more entertaining.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Hitch a ride on the love boat. Be aware, however, that an attractive new romantic prospect could tempt you to jump ship. If you are looking for a permanent commitment this might not be the one. Don't dive in over your head.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Keep your cool. Good fences make good neighbors, but you want them low enough that you can reach across and extend a hand in friendship. Impulse purchases are in the air; watch the budget.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Following romantic whims might bring you the satisfying experience you crave. Remain loyal and true blue to your company, your family or spouse; it is better to be safe than sorry about an indiscretion.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You may change from a frog that is comfortably secure on its own lily pad to royalty that needs to find a bigger pond. One kiss from the right person is all it takes. Concentrate on upgrading relationships.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): They say that variety is the spice of life. With relationships, you may be happiest with a "just friends" situation, since you could be subconsciously in search of the flavor of the month.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Be comforted by the thought that you are younger now than you will ever be. At some point in the future, you will look back at this week, month or year and think how grand it was to be so young.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Be a good sport. The coach might ignore your talent and gifts, leaving you without a turn at bat. Let other people with bigger egos and a larger appetite for glory shine while you sit on the sidelines.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Your words can seem like music to someone's ears. This could be a good time to discuss problems or set down some relationship guidelines without offending anyone. Use your gift for gab wisely.

Today is Tuesday, Sept. 11, the 255th day of 2012. There are 111 days left in the year. This is Patriot Day.

Today's Highlight:
On Sept. 11, 2001, nearly 3,000 people were killed on America's worst day of terrorism as 19 al-Qaida terrorists hijacked four passenger jetliners. Two planes smashed into New York's World Trade Center, causing the twin towers to fall; one plowed into the Pentagon; and the fourth was crashed into a field in western Pennsylvania.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:
In 1777, during the American Revolution, forces under Gen. George Washington were defeated by the British in the Battle of Brandywine.
In 1814, an American fleet scored a decisive victory over the British in the Battle of Lake Champlain in the War of 1812.
In 1857, the Mountain Meadows Massacre took place in present-day southern Utah as a 120-member Arkansas immigrant party was slaughtered by Mormon militiamen aided by Paiute Indians.
In 1862, short-story writer William Sydney Porter, better known as "O. Henry" was born in Greensboro, N.C.
In 1922, the British Mandate for Palestine went into effect.
In 1936, Boulder Dam (now Hoover Dam) began operation as President Franklin D. Roosevelt pressed a key in Washington to signal the startup of the dam's first hydroelectric generator.
In 1941, groundbreaking took place for the Pentagon, now headquarters of the U.S. Department of Defense. In a speech that drew accusations of anti-Semitism, Charles A. Lindbergh told an America First rally in Des Moines, Iowa, "the British, the Jewish and the Roosevelt administration" were pushing the United States toward war.
In 1954, the Miss America pageant made its network TV debut on ABC; Miss California, Lee Meriwether, was crowned the winner.
In 1962, The Beatles completed their first single for EMI, "Love Me Do" and "P.S. I Love You," at EMI studios in London.
In 1971, former Soviet leader Nikita Khrushchev died at age 77.
In 1972, the troubled Munich Summer Olympics ended. Northern California's Bay Area Rapid Transit system began operations.
In 1987, the movie thriller "Fatal Attraction," starring Michael Douglas and Glenn Close, premiered.
Ten years ago: With words of comfort and resolve, President George W. Bush joined the nation in remembering "how it began and who fell first" in the terrorist attacks of one year earlier. Defiant Palestinian legislators forced the resignation of Yasser Arafat's 21-member Cabinet. Death claimed actress Kim Hunter at age 79 and football Hall of Famer Johnny Unitas at age 69.
Five years ago: Russian state television reported that Russia's military had successfully tested what it described as the world's most powerful non-nuclear air-delivered bomb, nicknamed the "dad of all bombs." A militant group called Islamic Jihad Union claimed responsibility for foiled bombings that targeted Ramstein U.S. Air Base as well as U.S. and Uzbek consulates in Germany. A new Osama bin Laden videotape was released on the sixth anniversary of the Sept. 11 attacks. China signed an agreement to prohibit the use of lead paint on toys exported to the United States.
One year ago: The nation, and the world, paused to remember the 10th anniversary of the 9/11 terrorist attacks. In New York, a tree-covered memorial plaza at ground zero opened to the families of the victims for the first time. President Barack Obama, after visiting the sites where terrorists struck, declared: "It will be said of us that we kept that faith; that we took a painful blow, and emerged stronger." Australian Sam Stosur beat Serena Williams, pulling off a 6-2, 6-3 upset in the U.S. Open for her first Grand Slam title.
