RUPERT • "Everything's going to be OK."

Those, according to Rupert Police Detective Jeff McEwen, were the last words 29-year-old Norine Kay Boyd spoke to her family before she disappeared on Dec. 20, 1988.

Boyd and her sister spent the day together listening to Christmas music and talking, said Diane Gines, a retired certified crime and intelligence analyst who is working on the case.

Since 2009, Gines, who worked in both the Air Force and the Riverside County Sheriff's Office in California before retirement, has helped McEwen and Detective Richard Reusze work on the case that has eluded police for 24 years.

According to a Times-News article from 1993, Boyd was reported missing two weeks after Rupert police obtained an arrest warrant, charging her with stealing $992 from a Rupert man. In March of 1989, hikers from Buhl found Boyd's 1984 two-door Ford in the City of Rocks area near Almo.

According to the article, law enforcement organized a two-day search for Boyd in the area, then waited for snow to thaw to see if her body could be found.

Some speculated she may have committed suicide. Others believed foul play was involved in her disappearance, while some believed she simply ran away.

"There are hundreds of theories," McEwen said. "I simply want the truth."

Recently, the team of investigators hatched a new plan to find a trace of someone who may know something about Boyd's disappearance. Outside Boyd's car, Cassia County deputies found a pair of aviator sunglasses. Until recently people believed the Please see LENS, A3 Park Avenue West.

Department director Jon Caton said the city discussed moving to a new facility for several years.

The building isn't ready for the public works department quite yet. The city needs to make improvements, Caton said, including adding safety upgrades and heating.

Councilwoman Suzanne Hawkins said when she first toured the public works facilities, she was shocked.

"If anybody is wondering why we're taking this step now, it's definitely a needed step," Hawkins said.

THE MARKET AT A GLANCE

US stocks slip; Apple hits new high

NEW YORK (AP) • After surging over four days to near pre-recession highs, stocks slipped further from that goal Monday following a new sign of a slowdown in the U.S. economy and worries over Europe's struggle to keep its currency union intact.

All three major indexes were down, though barely. The Dow Jones industrial average fell 40.27 points, or 0.3 percent, to 13,553.10.

U.S. stocks are coming off a surge last week that sent the S&P 500 to its highest level in nearly five years.

TIMES-NEWS Lecture Marks Constitution Day

BY JULIE WOOTTON jwootton@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • On the 225th anniversary of the U.S. Constitution, College of Southern Idaho students took time during a class Monday to learn about its impact.

Each year on Constitution Day, history professor Russ Tremayne invites a guest speaker to his U.S. history class. Sometimes, there's a panel discussion.

"Every year, we do something different," he said.

On Monday, Twin Falls City Manager Travis Rothweiler talked to students about the U.S. Constitution and its role in local government.

Rothweiler told students that the Constitution became the "cornerstone of the freedoms we know today."

It's important to understand the historical context of the Constitution, he said, and how laws have been applied, interpreted and shaped over the past two centuries.

A few dozen students from Tremayne's U.S. history class - as well as Don Hall's law enforcement class listened and took notes during the presentation.

Rothweiler set the scene for the lecture by asking students to think about what it was like during the Constitutional Convention.

It was a hot summer in 1787 in Philadelphia, and it was before the days of air conditioning.

"If you think it gets hot in Idaho, try living in a place with humidity," Rothweiler said later in the lecture.

Delegates struggled with their individual differences, he said. But on Sept. 17, they signed the Constitution. Rothweiler also talked to students about a few amendments to the Constitution and their importance.

The 10th Amendment states: "The powers not delegated to the United States by the Constitution, nor prohibited by it to the States, are reserved to the States respectively, or to the people."

"What that allows us is to have some level of local control," Rothweiler said.

While talking about the Fifth Amendment - which forbids the confiscation of private property for public use without just compensation - Rothweiler shared a local example.

He said he's not aware of a time the city of Twin Falls used eminent domain, but there were opportunities.

For the road project at the intersection of Addison Avenue and Eastland Drive, city officials negotiated a fair market price for several parcels of land they wanted to buy.

But two property owners didn't want to sell.

Rothweiler said the city council had two choices: use eminent domain to obtain the land or modify the project.

Council members decided to make changes to the project.

CSI Board Hears Legal Clinic Proposal

BY JULIE WOOTTON jwootton@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • College of Southern Idaho students may soon have access to basic legal without leaving advice campus.

The college's board heard a presentation Monday night for a free legal clinic for students.

CSI's student body president, Jeremy Bridges, said the student senate voted unanimously in favor of the proposal.

"What a great opportunity for CSI to have something like this on campus," he said.

Twin Falls attorney Laird Stone said the idea arose about two years ago. His wife asked if he'd help some of her fellow students with basic legal questions. Topics ranged from landlord/tenant issues to divorces. If approved, the clinic would be on campus from 3-5 p.m. every other Thursday.

Beyond legal help, students who need more information would be provided with a list of local attorneys who specialize in a particular area.

Stone said it would take two or three weeks after approval to get the clinic up and running.

CSI board members thanked Stone for his work on the proposal.

The topic will come back as an action item during next month's meeting.

Planetarium Upgrades

CSI trustees heard an information item about needed upgrades to the Digistar system in the planetarium at the Herrett Center for Arts & Science.

College president Jerry Beck said the need for upgrades has been an ongoing discussion for at least three years.

The CSI Foundation led a campaign to purchase the Foundation executive direcoriginal system in 1995.

tor Debra Wilson said the system needs upgrades and is running on used parts.

It would cost a minimum of $850,000 to replace.

Beck, she said, asked if the foundation would help fund at least a portion of that cost.

CSI has about $350,000 budgeted this year to go toward the purchase of a new planetarium system.

Board member Alan Frost, who was involved in selecting the first system in the 1990s before he was on the college board, said the new system would allow the college to market the planetarium to a wider audience.

Her family told detectives Boyd was very feminine, preferred girly styles and didn't remember her owning a pair of aviator sunglasses, McEwen said.

"I think she was really trying to make her life good," Gines said.

While Reusze and McEwen work on the case in their spare time, Gines volunteers her time. Gines does the bulk of the research in the case - sifting through decades-old newspaper articles, letters, weather reports and other items for any sign that might bring her closer to the truth. Gines said she has built a timeline and a chart linking everyone Boyd knew and the places she frequented. "At first everyone said she just left," Gines said. As a child Boyd ran away, but at 29 she had three young children and her goals in life seemed to center around raising them well, Gines said. Looking at similar cases can help to a point, but with so little evidence to go on, it's hard to match the cases up. "There's a lot of missing people," Gines said. "Her case is so cut and dry. It's almost like she was raptured." In 2011, detectives believed the case was cracked wide open when police in central Washington found human remains at the site of a golf course under construction. The group hopes to send the evidence off in the next month, he said.

Though DNA evidence would be a big help, interviews make up the bulk of the work done on the case, McEwen said.

Through interviews and reading documents, the three have built a profile of Boyd – looking at her lifestyle, routines, habits, her likes and dislikes, and goals for her future.

Commerce Officials Offer State's Assistance

BY STEVE KADEL

skadel@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • The Magic Valley's proximity to Asia and the Pacific Rim markets gives local businesses a solid competitive advantage in international exporting, a state economic official says.

Gynni Gilliam, chief economic development officer for the Idaho Department of Commerce, made that observation Thursday during the Southern Idaho Economic Development Organization's 11th annual summit at the College of Southern Idaho. More than 100 agriculture representatives, business leaders and state government heads attended the event.

Gilliam said other factors that help Magic Valley companies are the region's transportation options and a good work force.

"The Magic Valley has done such a tremendous job of economic development," she said. "You have shown what partnership can do."

Gilliam noted that south-central Idaho ac-Gilliam counts for a significant amount of the gross state product. She said that can grow in the future as research and development leads to growing more food in less space and with less impact on the environment.

She emphasized that Commerce can help build businesses a variety of ways.

"You tell us what your strength is and we will help you grow that strength," she said.

That includes helping identify emerging industries and growth opportunities as well as improving partnerships with other agencies such as the Idaho Department of Environmental Quality and the Idaho Transportation Department. Gilliam said their goal is to help businesses get answers quickly and resolve issues that block progress for those in business.

"We work closely with DEQ," she said. "We bring them in at the beginning rather than the back end. We want to know what the timelines are."

She emphasized that Commerce isn't trying to sidestep environmental policies, but rather expedite things that businesses need.

"We want to help you," Gilliam said. "We want to be your resource. We want to see your business grow and prosper. There are lots of opportunities ahead."

Democrats Hope to Exploit Farm Bill Delay

BLOOMBERG NEWS

WASHINGTON • Democratic Senate candidate Heidi Heitkamp walks through neat rows of soybeans in blue jeans and a fleece jacket, with a silo and grain bins visible in the background, talking about the need to put North Dakota farmers ahead of partisanship.

That TV ad, which debuted Sept. 13, is the latest in a series of appeals to the state's rural voters. She often reminds them that the Republican-led House has failed to even vote on the every-five-year agriculture-policy bill that funds subsidies for farmers. She credits that pitch with helping nudge the North Dakota Senate race from a probable Republican pick up to a tossup.

"Agriculture is still king in this state," Heitkamp, who is challenging Republican Rep. Rick Berg in the race to succeed retiring Democratic Sen. Kent Conrad, said in an email. "You can't represent North Dakota in the United States Senate without fully representing our farmers and ranchers."

With Democrats holding a slim majority in the Senate, both national parties have shifted resources to North Dakota, a state with a booming economy and lowest-in-the-nation unemployment rate of 3 percent. It is among a handful of rural states where Democrats see opportunity in the stalled farm bill, a version of which passed the Senate.

"If you had asked Republicans a year ago, they would have told you North Dakota would be over by Labor Day, and it's not," Jennifer Duffy, who monitors Senate races for Cook Political Report, said in an interview. Democrats "are Please see FARM BILL, A10

Chicago Teachers Weigh Options

CHICAGO (AP) • An angry Mayor Rahm Emanuel's appeal to the courts to end a six-day teachers strike in the nation's third largest city set off a new round of recriminations Monday, but did little to end a walkout that has left parents scrambling and kept 350,000 students out of class.

It might not matter. By the time a Cook County Circuit Court judge considers the issue, the city's teachers might well have voted to end the strike and recommend they agree to a tentative contract that labor and education experts - and even some union leaders elsewhere - called a good deal for the union.

"This was an enormously successful strike (thus far)," said Emily Rosenberg, director of the Labor Education Center at DePaul University in Chicago. "I've never seen solidarity like this among teachers."

Iran Nuclear Chief Criticizes Atomic Agency

VIENNA (AP) • Iran's nuclear chief said Monday that "terrorists and saboteurs" might have infiltrated the International Atomic Energy Agency in an effort to derail his nation's atomic program. It was Tehran's harshest attack on the integrity of the U.N. organization and its investigation of allegations that Iran is striving to make nuclear arms.

Fereydoun Abbasi also rebuked the United States in comments to the IAEA's 155nation general conference, reflecting Iran's determination to continue defying international pressure aimed at curbing its nuclear program and nudging it toward cooperation with the IAEA inspection.

Revealing what he said were two sabotage attempts on his country's nuclear program, he challenged the perpetrators to launch new attacks, saying his country is determined to learn how to protect its interests through such assaults.

The defiant speech was bound to give a greater voice to hardline Israeli leaders who say that both diplomatic efforts and economic penalties have had no effect on Iran, leaving military strikes as the only alternative to stopping it from developing nuclear weapons.

Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu, a proponent of such an option, made a direct appeal to American voters on Sunday to elect a president willing to draw a "red line" with Iran.

In the past week, Netanyahu urged President Barack Obama and other world leaders to state clearly at what point Iran would face a military attack. But Obama and his top aides, who repeatedly say all options remain on the table, have pointed to shared U.S.-Israeli intelligence that suggests Iran hasn't decided yet whether to build a bomb, despite pursuing the technology, and that there would be time for action beyond toughened sanctions already in place.

In Berlin, German Chancellor Angela Merkel described Iran as "a threat, not only for Israel but for the whole world." But she said she wants to see a "political solution" and that the international community should work together.

BEIRUT • The head of Lebanon's powerful Hezbollah movement appeared Monday at a massive rally assailing the United States and warning that broadcast of a film produced in California mocking Islam could have grave consequences.

"America must understand that releasing the entire film will have dangerous, very dangerous repercussions around the world," an emotional Sheik Hassan Nasrallah, Hezbollah's secretary-general, told supporters gathered in a Beirut suburb.

The appearance suggested that Hezbollah, an influential political and military force in Lebanon, is deteroutrage against the incendiary film.

The gathering was among a string of demonstrations in Muslim communities from Tunis to Jakarta following the release on the Internet of a trailer for the amateur, privately produced film, which ridicules the Prophet Muhammad and the Islamic faith. The day's protests in South Asia turned violent and left at least one person dead.

Tens of thousands of pro-Hezbollah supporters attended the rally in Beirut's Dahiyeh suburb, a stronghold where the group has the ability to stage highly disciplined actions. The gathering was boisterous but fied U.S. Embassy.

The participation of Nasrallah, who seldom appears in public reportedly for fear of assassination, underscored Hezbollah's apparent determination to use the outrage generated by the film to bolster its standing as a moral force in the Arab world. The group's strong backing of Syrian President Bashar Assad, who is facing a bloody uprising, has cost it considerable support among many Arabs.

On Sunday, a Hezbollahcontrolled television station, Al-Manar, reported that Nasrallah regarded the issue of the film as "more serious than what's going on in Syria" – a position disputed by thousands of civilians.

During Monday's rally, Nasrallah demanded that the United States and the international community block release of the full film. He insisted that the trailer should no longer be available on the Internet and called for a boycott of websites that show the video.

In his comments Sunday, the Hezbollah chief dismissed as "hypocrisy, deception and double standards" the Western arguments that blocking the video would violate freedom of speech. He called for "an international resolution criminalizing the defamation of heavenly religions."

Giant Panda Cub Born at National Zoo

WASHINGTON (AP) • A giant panda at Washington's zoo surprised scientists and zookeepers by becoming a mom again after years of failed pregnancies.

Scientists at the zoo had all but given up on 14-yearold Mei Xiang's chances of conceiving, but they were watching the panda for a possible cub nonetheless after she was artificially inseminated earlier this year. She gave birth late Sunday, her first cub since 2005.

Like all newborn pandas, the cub is pink, hairless and about the size of a stick of butter. Officials will follow Chinese custom and give it a name after 100 days.

Four American zoos have pandas, but Washington's pandas have special significance. The zoo was given its first set of pandas in 1972 as a gift from China to commemorate President Richard Nixon's historic visit to the country.

Mei Xiang and her mate Tian Tian, were born in China and are the second pair of pandas to live at the zoo. They're treated like royalty, and any offspring gets immediate star status.

"There's something very special here with our pandas," said giant panda curator Brandie Smith. "Everyone is part of our family. We, Washington, D.C., have had a baby panda cub."

Mei Xiang gave birth to her first and only other cub, a male named Tai Shan, in 2005. Since 2007, zoo officials have had five unsuccessful attempts at artificially inseminating Mei Xiang. Each time, she went through what is called a "pseudopregnancy," building a nest and experiencing high hormone levels. But each time there was no cub.

Scientists at the zoo worried she had become infertile and believed there was a less than a 10 percent chance she would become pregnant after so many failed attempts. As a result, they had considered replacing Mei Xiang or 15year-old Tian Tian with other pandas.

Chobani Opening Will Make Traffic on Kimberly Road Worse

The issue that I am very concerned about is the traffic on Kimberly Road. I noticed there have been accident reports on Kimberly Road lately. I feel that the Idaho Transportation Department has not done enough to investigate and study more detail before Chobani established the factory there. I think the ITD should discuss with the city engineer and council of Twin Falls before the city of Twin Falls lets Chobani establish its factory.

I noticed the problems from the beginning of Blue Lakes Boulevard South to Kimberly Road where the Twin Stop that had five lanes then changed from five to four lanes to Red Corner of Kimberly. I know that they will have the biggest problem with traffic due to the factory opening soon because the traffic will get heavy in the future and we'll get more and more accidents there.

I know that ITD has not done enough to study harder to find the way to get traffic safety on Kimberly Road. Just want to know where the trucks from Chobani will go to enter and exit on Kimberly Road to cause the waiting to get out from the plant. I get they will have lots of accidents because they have to wait for the cars to clear out before they could drive out. They only have four lanes. I understand that Chobani will hire more employees in the future when the economy is good, but the traffic is not good for the people. I am afraid they will have more accident reports where the state police will not be happy. For example, the tankers from the dairy, freight trucks and workers will come in the plant, so I doubt that they will have safety traffic.

The Talk of China

ere is the story of today's China in five brief news items.

Story No. 1: For most of the last two weeks, Xi Jinping, the man tapped to become China's new Communist Party leader, was totally out of sight. That's right. The man designated to become China's next leader in October or early November - had disappeared and only resurfaced on Saturday in two photos taken while he was visiting an agricultural college. They were posted online by the official Xinhua news agency. With the Chinese government refusing to comment on his whereabouts or explain his absence, rumors here were flying. Had he fallen ill? Was there infighting in the Communist Party? I have a theory: Xi started to realize how hard the job of running China will be in the next decade and was hiding under his bed. Who could blame him? Chinese officials take great pride in how they have used the last 30 years to educate hundreds of millions of their people, men and women, and bring them out of poverty. Yet, among my Chinese interlocutors, I find a growing feeling that what's worked for China for the past 30 years - a huge Communist Party-led mobilization of cheap labor, capital and resources - will not work much longer. There is a lot of hope that Xi will bring long-delayed economic and political reforms needed to make China a real knowledge economy, but there is no consensus on what those reforms should be and there are a lot more voices in the conversation. Whatever top-down monopoly of the conversation the Communist Party had is evaporating. More and more, the Chinese people, from microbloggers to peasants to students, are demanding that their voices be heard - and officials clearly feel the need to respond. China is now a strange hybrid – an autocracy with 400 million bloggers, who are censored, feared and listened to all at the same time.

So Xi is certain to make history. He will be the first leader of modern China who will have to have a twoway conversation with the Chinese people while he tries to implement some huge political and economic reforms. The need is obvious.

Story No. 2: In March, Chinese authorities quickly deleted from the blogosphere photos of a fatal Beijing car crash, believed to involve the son of a close ally of President Hu Jintao. The car was a Ferrari. The driver was killed and two young women with him badly injured. "Photos of the horrific smash in Beijing were deleted within hours of appearing on microblogs and websites," The Guardian reported. "Even searches for the word 'Ferrari' were blocked on the popular Sina Weibo microblog.... Unnamed sources have identified the driver of the black sports car as the son of Ling Jihua, who was removed as head of the party's general office of the central committee this weekend." It was the latest in a string of incidents spotlighting the lavish lifestyles of the Communist Party elite. Chinese authorities are so sensitive to these stories because they are the tip of an iceberg – an increasingly corrupt system of interlocking ties between the Com munist Party and stateowned banks, industries and monopolies, which allow certain senior officials, their families and "princelings" to become hugely wealthy and to even funnel that wealth out of China.

listic capitalism, and Lenin said the worst kind of monopolistic capitalism is state monopolistic capitalism – and we are practicing it to the hilt," a Chinese Internet executive remarked to me.

As a result, you hear more and more that "the risks of not reforming have become bigger than the risks of reforming." No one is talking revolution, but a gradual evolution to a more transparent, rule-of-law-based system, with the people having more formal input. But taking even this first gradual step is proving hard for the Communist Party. It may require a crisis (which is why a lot of middle-class professionals here are looking to get their money or themselves abroad). Meanwhile, the gaps between rich as part of the 1997 handover from Britain, organized a protest against Beijing's "brainwashing" that quickly spread to parent groups and universities. As a result, on Sept. 8, one day before local elections, Hong Kong's chief executive, Leung Chun-ying, Beijing's man there, announced the compulsory education plan was being dropped – to avoid pro-Beijing candidates getting crushed.

Story No. 5: A few weeks ago, Deng Yuwen, a senior editor of The Study Times, which is controlled by the Communist Party, published an analysis on the website of the business magazine Caijing. According to Agence France-Presse, Deng argued that Hu and Prime Minister Wen Jiabao "had 'created more problems than achievements' during their 10 years in power. ... The article highlighted 10 problems facing China it said were caused by the lack of political reform and had the potential to cause public discontent, including stalled economic restructuring, income disparity and pollution. 'The essence of democracy is how to restrict government power; this is the most important reason why China so badly needs democracy,' Deng wrote. 'The overconcentration of government powers without checks and balances is the root cause of so many social problems." The article has triggered a debate on China's blogosphere. This is just a sampler of the China that Xi will be inheriting. This is not your grandfather's Communist China. After three decades of impressive economic growth, but almost no political reforms, there is "a gathering sense of an approaching moment of transition that will require a different set of conditions for Chinese officials to maintain airspeed," observed Orville Schell, the Asia Society China expert. The rules are going to get rewritten here. Exactly how and when is impossible to say. The only thing that is certain is that it will be through a twoway conversation.

I want to see ITD think somehow; They should work right now before it's too late.

Sports Reporter Ryan Howe Is a Treasure to Our Community

Mr. Miley misses the point in his comment on Ryan Howe's clever piece on an area football team playing in Oakland, Calif.

He accuses Mr. Howe of being racist. I believe Mr. Howe was simply commenting on the diversity between the two teams. Most of us love the word "diversity," but what is diversity if not a celebration and acceptance of differences?

Mr. Miley feels that Mr. Howe made too much of a generalization in suggesting that only blacks have dreadlocks and white students have mullets. The fact is dreadlocks at Minico are statistically nonexistent. I have observed two examples in nearly 20,000 students over the years, and I would have to believe the incidence of blacks wearing mullets is similarly small. I believe that was the point of the football experience — to let students see the differences as well as the similarities of the participating young men.

And that is the point of Mr. Howe's column. A tip of the cap to Ryan Howe. What a treat to have a sports writer who not only knows sports, but can really write as well. What a treasure Mr. Howe is to our community. Let's enjoy him before he's off to Sports Illustrated.

When to Give Up the Keys

BY LAURAN NEERGAARD Associated Press

WASHINGTON • Jerry Wiseman notices it's harder to turn and check his car's blind spots at age 69 than it was at 50. So the Illinois man and his wife took a refresher driving course, hunting tips to stay safe behind the wheel for many more years -agood idea considering their state has arguably the nation's toughest older-driver laws.

More older drivers are on the road than ever before, and an Associated Press review found they face a hodgepodge of state licensing rules that reflect scientific uncertainty and public angst over a growing question: How can we tell if it's time to give up the keys?

Thirty states plus the District of Columbia have some sort of older-age requirement for driver's licenses, ranging from more vision testing to making seniors renew their licenses more frequently than younger people. At what age? That's literally all over the map. Maryland starts eye exams at 40. Shorter license renewals kick in anywhere from age 59 in Georgia to 85 in Texas.

The issue attracted new attention when a 100-yearold driver backed over a group of schoolchildren in Los Angeles late last month. That's a rarity, but with an

Jack Wyrad, 92, is seen reflected on his side mirrors as he adjusts them before driving his GM Buick on Aug. 30 in Los Angeles. Wyard, who got a perfect score on his written test for his license two years ago, says he believes older people should make their own decisions on when to quit driving.

Senior driving is a more complicated issue than headline-grabbing tragedies might suggest. Older drivers don't crash as often as younger ones. But they also drive less. About 60 percent of seniors voluntarily cut back, avoiding nighttime driving or interstates or bad weather, said David Eby of the University of Michigan's Center for Advancing Safe Transportation throughout the Lifespan.

Measure by miles driven, however, and the crash rate highest rate of deadly crashes per mile, even more than teens. More often than not, they're the victims, largely because they're too frail to survive their injuries.

And seniors are about to transform the nation's roadways. Today, nearly 34 million drivers are 65 or older. By 2030, federal estimates show there will be about 57 million - making up about a quarter of all licensed drivers. The baby boomers in particular are expected to hang onto their licenses riskier as the ability to judge speed and distance wanes with age. He knows to watch for other changes. "We'll be ready when it's time for one of us to stop," he said.

China Files Trade Case against Washington

BEIJING (AP) • China filed a World Trade Organization case Monday challenging U.S. antidumping measures on billions of dollars of kitchen appliances, paper and other goods, adding to worsening trade strains as global demand weakens.

Beijing's move came shortly before the Obama administration filed its own WTO case accusing China of improperly subsidizing exports of automobiles and auto parts.

China and the U.S. have clashed over complaints about market barriers and subsidies for goods including autos, solar panels, tires, steel and chicken. Political pressures on both sides are worsening as demand for their goods cools, raising the threat of job losses in export industries.

As campaigning for the U.S. presidency intensifies ahead of a November vote, President Barack Obama and Republican nominee Mitt Romney have traded barbs on China, accusing each other of backing policies that would move American jobs overseas.

The Chinese Ministry of Commerce said its latest WTO complaint centers on the U.S. Congress's passage of a law this year that retroactively gave the Commerce Department power to impose antidumping duties on Chinese goods. That came after a U.S. court reversed earlier duties imposed under rules covering countries such as China and Vietnam that are deemed to be "non-market economies."

"This practice puts Chinese enterprises in an uncertain legal environment, in violation of the relevant rules of the WTO transparency and due process," ministry spokesman Shen Danyang said.

The ministry said U.S. measures being challenged cover 24 types of products worth $7.2 billion. It gave no details, but a statement from the WTO in Geneva said they include paper, steel, tires, magnets, chemicals, kitchen appliances, wood flooring and wind towers.

The Chinese filing Monday requests consultations to settle the dispute, the first stage in a WTO complaint. If no resolution is found after 60 days, Beijing can ask for the case to be handed over to a WTO panel for judgment. Depending on the outcome, China might be allowed to request sanctions.

imminent surge in senior drivers, the federal government is proposing that all states take steps to address what the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration calls "the real and growing problem of older driver safety."

Here's the conundrum: "Birthdays don't kill. Health conditions do," said Joseph Coughlin, head of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology's AgeLab, which develops technologies to help older people stay active.

Healthy older drivers aren't necessarily less safe than vounger ones, Coughlin points out. But many older people have health issues that can impair driving, from arthritis to dementia, from slower reflexes to the use of multiple medications. There's no easy screening tool that licensing authorities can use to spot people with subtle health risks. So some states use birthdays as a proxy for more scrutiny instead.

of older drivers begins to climb in the 70s, with a sharper jump at age 80, according to the Insurance Institute for Highway Safety. Only teens and 20-somethings do worse.

That rising risk reflects the challenge for families as they try to help older loved ones stay safe but still get around for as long as possible, which itself is important for health.

The good news: Fatal crashes involving seniors dropped over the past decade, perhaps because cars and roads are safer or they're staying a bit healthier, said the Insurance Institute's Anne McCartt.

Yet the oldest drivers, those 85 and up, still have the SEOUL, South Korea • Kim Hye-min boasts a 4.0 gradepoint average at one of South Korea's top colleges, a perfect score in English proficiency and internships at Samsung Card Co. and AT Kearney Inc. All of her 20 job applications were rejected.

"A degree from a good university used to guarantee a spot at least at a top 10 company, but that was when a college degree actually meant something," Kim, 25, said as she walked to a Chinese lesson she's taking to boost her chance of joining one of the nation's most prestigious employers. "I studied hard and did everything right, but there are too many of us who did."

With almost three out of four high school students going to college in an effort to get a top-paying job in one of the leading industrial groups, South Korea is being flooded with more college graduates than it needs. Its 30 biggest companies hired 260,000 of them last year, leaving another 60,000 to swell the vouth unemployment rate to 6.4 percent in August.

French Court to Rule on Royal Photos Today

NANTERRE, France (AP) • Lawyers for Prince William and wife Kate asked a French court on Monday to block further publication of topless photos of the Duchess of Cambridge, saying the two were sharing a deeply intimate moment caught by the snap of an intruding photographer – images that ended up last week in a popular French gossip magazine, then in publications in two other countries.

The court in Nanterre, outside Paris, said it would announce its ruling at noon today on the request to stop Closer from reproducing the images. The magazine published 14 of the images of a partially clad Kate in its pages on Friday. On Monday, an Italian magazine, Chi, published a 26-page spread of the photos of Kate. Chi, like Closer, is part of the Italian publishing house Mondadori, owned by former Italian Premier Silvio Berlusconi.

An Irish tabloid published more Kate topless photos over the weekend, drawing a vow from Ireland's justice minister to revise privacy laws there. The editor of the Irish Daily Star was suspended.

The royal couple was sharing a "healthy and profoundly intimate" moment when the photos were taken, their lawyer, Aurelien Hamelle, told the court. The situation was "deeply personal."

Hamelle told the court that he is seeking $6,550 in damages from Closer and an injunction forcing the magazine to stop publication elsewhere, including on the Internet.

The failure of the House to pass a farm bill is not the only reason, she said. It has three more in order to control the chamber. Two senators are independents who caucus with Democrats.

Inaction on the farm bill may weaken the GOP Senate effort in rural, conservative states such as North Dakota and Montana that are out of a political science professor at Iowa State University in Ames.

"In some states it will be a big issue," Schmidt said in an interview, noting that divisions in the House between rural lawmakers who support subsidies and budget contributed to a narrative of Washington's failure, something Heitkamp is using to her advantage in her campaign against a House member, Duffy said.

Other Senate campaigns where farm issues could become a factor include in Indiana, where Democratic Rep. Joe Donnelly is running against Richard Mourdock, the tea party favorite who knocked off incumbent Richard Lugar in a Republican primary, and in Wisconsin, where former Republican governor Tommy Thompson is running against Democratic Rep. Tammy Baldwin for the seat vacated by Herb Kohl.

The stalled farm bill could influence some House races, though polls show that chamber will probably remain under Republican control. It is in the Senate, where Democrats hold 51 seats, that a handful of races could tip the balance of power. Republicans have 47 and need reach for Democrats at the presidential level yet still attainable in congressional races, said Steffen Schmidt, hawks within the Republican caucus may make it difficult for that chamber to pass a bill

Twin Runners from the Magic Valley Prepare for NYC Marathon

HEYBURN • Branden and Landen Teeter have conquered virtually every local race they've entered, including last Saturday's Rim 2 Rim in Twin Falls, which the twins finished one-two for the fourth year in a row.

Next challenge for the Teeters: New York City.

"We saw it on TV and said, that would be cool to do someday," Landen said of the New York City Marathon on Nov. 4. "We looked it up, found the qualifying times and decided to shoot for it."

been keeping pace with one another ever since.

"I hate training by myself, so having someone there with me helps a ton. Without him, I probably wouldn't be running," said Branden.

The 2003 graduates of Hansen High both ran track and cross country at Idaho State. They're often seen at races wearing matching clothes. They have identical tattoos – a Bengal tiger and a skeleton wearing running shoes. Both work at a Rupert cheese factory. Even about 50,000 runners and two million cheering spectators.

"Mostly we want to go say that we did it, have a good experience, but we also want to do good. I think we can both break 2:30 in the marathon," Branden said.

The Teeters, who now live in Heyburn, say they're better runners now than they were in college and are aspiring to obtain professional sponsorship. If there's any sibling rivalry, it's a healthy one.

had its goalkeeper ejected in the first half, but the Indians still managed a 4-2 win over Gooding on Monday, handing the Senators their first loss this season.

Kevin Hernandez scored in the first minute and set up Diego Tapia seven minutes later. Juan Perez added the first of his two goals midway through the first half, but Gooding drew a penalty just before halftime, resulting in the red card being shown to Buhl's net-minder.

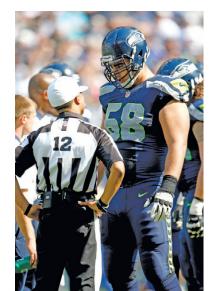

The Senators converted the spot kick and made it 3-2 in the second half, but Perez scored with six minutes left to ensure the Indians took all three points in the pivotal High Desert Conference encounter.

Gooding (5-1-2 High Desert, 17 pts.) visits the Community School on Wednesday. Buhl (7-3-1, 5-2-1, 16 pts.) hosts Declo next Monday.

LOCALS SAVOR THE LOTOJA EXPERIENCE

BY RYAN HOWE

rhowe@magicvalley.com

BURLEY • Jenni Campbell wanted to do something big to celebrate her 40th birthday.

She entered LOTOJA, one of the longest single-day bike races in the country that stretches from Logan, Utah, to Jackson Hole, Wyo.

But by the time the Burley resident trained for and completed the 206mile course, her LOTOJA journey had taken on a much deeper meaning.

First, Campbell needed to enter the race. Typically entrants' names are put into a lottery. However, to skip the process and ensure a spot in LOTOJA, people can raise money for Huntsman Hometown Heroes Program for cancer research in exchange for a race entry. Since Campbell's mother had beaten breast cancer two years earlier, the cause was near to her heart. She raised $1,000 and secured her spot in LOTOJA.

But then the unexpected hit last May. Campbell's mom was again diagnosed with cancer, this time in her bones and spine. She passed away June 8.

"Now I had a different reason for doing my best in the race: my mom," Campbell said. "So I dedicated my race to my 40th year, as well as to my mother and cancer. I thought of my mom, virtually, during every training bike ride I did. I thought of her several times during my race. I know she was looking out for me."

Campbell convinced her "training buddy and partner in crime," Tracy Hansen to join her LOTOJA quest.

"She had to talk to me for a while," Hansen said. "I knew what the race was Please see LOTOJA, S2

Love: Medinah Easier Than a Major

ASSOCIATED PRESS

ST. SIMONS ISLAND, Ga.

• U.S. captain Davis Love III wanted Medinah set up to favor the Americans next week in the Ryder Cup, and he kept to a simple philosophy.

The rough is down. The speed of the greens is up.

"It's going to look like a major championship because Medinah is a big old golf course, with big trees and obviously big tents," Love said Monday at Sea Island Golf Club. "It's going to look like a major, but it's going to play probably easier than a major. That benefits our team. We're a longhitting, freewheeling, funto-watch team. And I think it's going to be fun to watch."

Love returned from another scouting trip at Medinah, the course in the Chicago suburbs that has hosted the PGA Championship twice and the U.S. Open three times. He played Sunday with his son Dru, a freshman at Alabama, and Steve Stricker. Keegan Bradley, one of four Ryder Cup rookies for the United States, played Medinah a week ago.

Europe has dominated the Ryder Cup over the last two decades, going home with the gold trophy six out of the last eight times.

The Americans have lost only once at home dating to 1999, in 2004 at Oakland Hills, which was set up like a major with thick rough and narrow fairways. They had eight players among the top 20 in the world, but Europe trounced them, 181/2-91/2.

Love said limited rough and quick greens should benefit the U.S. team, and made it more enjoyable for spectators.

"We've set it up the way we think fans will like it? Love said. "People probably don't believe that, but we set it up so that it's fun to watch. You don't want to see players chipping out and putting for par at the Ryder Cup. You want to see ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHARLOTTE, N.C. • Fortunes turn fast in racing. Roger Penske knows that well.

In an emotional 24-hour span, his bid to win the Indy-Car championship came up just short – again – when points leader Will Power crashed early in the season finale. It made Penske a runner-up in the IndyCar final standings for a third consecutive year, and the fourth time since Penske Racing's last title in 2006.

Penske left California disappointed, but not defeated. He was rewarded the next day when Brad Keselowski won NASCAR's opening race of the Chase for the Sprint Cup championship.

"I guess the first thing is that after last night at California Speedway, I wasn't sure what to expect when I came here," Penske said after Keselowski's win on Sunday. "It's a great day for us. It cools me down a little bit after being hot last night?"

Keselowski's at win Chicagoland made the thirdyear Penske driver the Sprint Cup points leader for the first time in his career, and reaffirmed that The Captain may actually have a shot at a NASCAR championship this vear.

Keselowski Helps Penske

Cope With IndyCar Loss

It's the one crown that has eluded Penske, one of the most successful team owners in history. He has 15 Indianapolis 500 wins and 12 open-wheel championships. But in 29 years in NASCAR, Penske has never claimed the spot on the stage at the end of the season.

He tried for 15 years with Rusty Wallace, who built a Hall of Fame career driving for Penske. But not even a 10-win season in 1993 could get Penske that title; Wallace wound up second to Dale Earnhardt in the final standings.

Then along came Keselowski, who was unapologetic about his brash driving style or his big mouth. He says what he believes, races to win and doesn't let much stand in his way.

So even though he had a good gig in the Hendrick Motorsports pipeline, waiting in the wings for an open seat at NASCAR's top organization wasn't good enough for Keselowski. He decided he wanted to go somewhere else, and help another organization reach to the top.

He decided the best fit was Penske, where both driver and owner could reach their goals together.

Penske recalled speaking to Keselowski about a potential partnership when Keselowski was still under contract to Hendrick.

"He came by to see us and he said that he'd like to come and race for our team. But he couldn't do it, he had a commitment," Penske said. "But he said, 'When I do come, I want to help build a team to win the championship? I think he's never forgotten that."

Keselowski's desire has clearly resonated with Penske, who had created a perception that NASCAR was secondary to his open-wheel passion. He spends most of his time in IndyCar, where he was the race strategist for Ryan Briscoe this season. So when both series race on the same day, Penske is always with his open-wheel teams.

Europe, however, has its share of big hitters in Rory McIlroy, Nicolas Colsaerts, Sergio Garcia and Lee Westwood. There were reports that the first cut, typically a yard wide, had been extended as many as seven paces, and Westwood only shrugged when told about that.

"I've yet to see a setup that favors one team or the other," Westwood said two weeks ago at Crooked Stick. "You can play on a field that's 200 yards wide. It's who holes the most putts."

The PGA Tour typically plays on faster greens than in Europe, which would seem to favor the Americans. Then again, Europe has eight players on its 12man team who have some form of PGA Tour membership this year.

"They putt better than us, it seems like, in the Ryder Cup," Love said. "That's why I'm excited going in this year that our guys seem to be putting well, playing well. There's a reason we picked guys that were hot with the putter."

He used two of his four captain's picks on Stricker and Brandt Snedeker.

Love spent Monday promoting the McGladrey Classic at Sea Island, where he is the tournament host. He did a series of television interviews leading up to the Ryder Cup, and then said he would spend the rest of the week working on his pairings. LOTOJA about; we did a relay team several years ago, and I grew up in that area so I knew the terrain and how tough it was. My husband has done it several times. So when she suggested we do it, she had to talk to me for a couple months."

To prepare, the duo put in countless hours and more than 2,500 training miles since April, riding six days per week.

"I had been a bunch of nervous energy for a few weeks," Campbell said. "It's been a goal of mine for four years. I had a feeling of elation and pride because we had done so much hard work. I don't know how many hours of riding."

LOTOJA, which commemorated its 30th anniversary this year, features three mountain passes which adds up to over 9,700 feet of vertical climbing.

Campbell and Hansen lined up at the start in Logan alongside about 1,500 other riders. Some participate in relay teams. Others, like Campbell and Hansen, tackle the entire 206 miles.

Terry Patterson of Twin Falls was among the crowd. This was his 24th LOTOJA.

"It's a long day in the saddle. It's a pretty grueling ride and I compliment the folks who take on that kind of a challenge and complete it," said Patterson, who has a LOTOJA victory and a few other podium finishes to his credit.

At least three dozen cyclists represented the Magic Valley in this year's LOTOJA, which Patterson

Jenni Campbell,

cyclist who competed in the LOTOJA is happy to see.

"When I first started LOTOJA, I think I was the only Idaho rider that would go. Now it's fun to see a couple dozen riders from just the Magic Valley that went. Idaho is having a presence in that race and it's good to see more people involved. It's changed a lot from its early days, that's for sure," Patterson said.

Some of the top local finishers included Bret Campbell - Jenni's husband – in 9 hours, 30 minutes, 14 seconds, which placed him seventh in his category. Just 1:38 behind Campbell was Darren Smith of Twin Falls, who won his category. For the women, Cecelia Charland of Twin Falls finished fourth in her category in 11:16:09.

And "partners in crime" Jenni Campbell and Tracy Hansen overcame three flat tires to finish in about 14 hours.

"What have I learned from this? Hard work pays off. There is a higher power watching over me. And I can do anything I set my mind to," Jenni Campbell said. "I think those are some good lessons."

ATLANTA • Peyton Manning kept throwing up wobbly passes.

The Atlanta Falcons kept picking them off. Taking advantage of a stunning three interceptions in the first quarter, Matt Ryan and the Falcons built a big lead and held on for a 27-21 victory over the Denver Broncos on Monday night, an erratic effort by Manning that showed his comeback in the Mile High City is still a work in progress.

Ryan threw the 100th touchdown pass of his career, Roddy White had 102 yards receiving and the Falcons (2-0) made a 20-0 lead stand up, if just barely.

Willis McGahee scored on two 2-yard touchdown runs in the fourth quarter to give the Broncos (1-1) late hope. But, on third down, Ryan connected with Julio Jones on a 6-yard pass that gave Atlanta a crucial first down with less than 2 minutes to go.

They managed to run out the clock from there.

For Manning and the Broncos, it's back to the drawing board. Even though his velocity is supposed to be nearly the Denver Broncos quarterback Peyton Manning (18) is sacked by Atlanta Falcons strong safety William Moore (25) during the second half of Monday's game in Atlanta.

same as it was before four neck surgeries and missing his entire final season in Indianapolis, Manning threw a number of passes that seemed to just hang in the air long enough for the Falcons to step in front of them. Other times, it looked as though he had to put everything he had on the ball to get it where he wanted, even if it wasn't necessarily a deep route.

He finished 24 of 37 for 241 yards, including a 17-yard touchdown pass to Demaryius Thomas just before halftime.

The only other time Manning was picked off three times in the opening quarter was with the Colts in a 2007 game at San Diego.

Ryan was much more efficient than the four-time MVP, completing 24 of 36 for 219 yards. He hooked up with Tony Gonzalez for a 1yard touchdown pass in the second quarter, then went to White on a 4-yard score in the third period.

Michael Turner scored Atlanta's first TD on a 1-yard run, the play set up by the first of Manning's picks. Matt Bryant kicked two field goals for the Falcons.

McGahee finished with 113 yards on 22 carries.

MLB ROUNDUP White Sox Stretch AL Central Lead to 3

CHICAGO • Omar Infante's throwing error on a potential double play helped Chicago scored two runs in the fifth inning Monday and the White Sox beat the Detroit Tigers 5-4 in a pivotal makeup game.

Chicago increased its lead in the AL Central to three games.

Nate Jones (8-0) pitched 2 2-3 innings of one-hit relief and the White Sox won their fourth straight.

The game had been postponed by rain last Thursday and Monday's makeup was the final meeting of the season between the two front runners in the division.

Addison Reed, the last of three relievers in the ninth, got the final out for his 27th save in 31 chances.

RED SOX 5, RAYS 2 ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. •

Tampa Bay, coming off a 1-5 road trip to Baltimore and New York, fell 51/2 games behind the AL Eastleading Yankees. The Rays started play four games back of the Orioles - who were at Seattle later Monday night - for the second AL wildcard spot.

National League BRAVES 7, MARLINS 5

MIAMI • Dan Uggla hit a three-run home run in the first inning and Martin Prado tied a career best with four hits.

Tim Hudson (15-6) allowed a season-high 10 hits in five innings, still beating the Marlins for the fifth straight time. Atlanta which swept a three-game series from Washington over the weekend - moved within five games of the idle Nationals in the NL East.

Gorkys Hernandez had his first three-hit game for a four-run fourth inning for Miami. Miami was without right fielder Giancarlo Stanton, out because of muscle soreness in his rib cage. Chipper Jones got the night off for Atlanta and Prado went 4 for 4 playing third base in his place, including an RBI single in the eighth.

PHILLIES 3, METS 1

NEW YORK • Cliff Lee struck out 10 while outdueling Cy Young contender R.A. Dickey, and the Philadelphia Phillies regained their winning touch.

Jimmy Rollins homered with the help of video replay and Domonic Brown also hit a solo shot off Dickey (18-6). The Phillies pulled within 31/2 games of idle St. Louis for the second NL wild-card spot, though other teams are also in their path. Philadelphia had lost three of four at last-place Houston before arriving at Citi Field, where visiting teams have feasted.

Stokley 3-27, Dreessen 2-16, Tamme 2-13, McGahee 2-11, Ball 1-17, Willis 1-14, Moreno 1-12, Atlanta, White 8-102, Gonzalez 7-70, Jones 4-14, Douglas 3-27, Snelling 1-6, Turner 1-0. MISSED FIELD GOALS–None.

Affidavit: Vilma Offered $10,000 to Hurt Favre

ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK • The NFL presented Jonathan Vilma and his attorney with a sworn statement from former Saints defensive coordinator Gregg Williams saying the linebacker placed a $10,000 bounty on Brett Favre.

Vilma met with Com-

Replacement Officials Taking Heat

One official was pulled from duty because he's a fan. Another negated a touchdown without ever throwing a penalty flag. Several others had difficulty with basic rules.

Upon further review, Week 2 was a poor one for the NFL's replacement officials.

Coaches and players around the league are losing patience and speaking out against the fill-in officials following a slew of questionable calls in Sunday's games.

The NFL locked out the regular officials in June after their contract expired. Negotiations with the NFL Referees Association broke down several times during the summer, including just before the season, and the league is using replacements for the first time since 2001.

The results have been a mixed bag.

Just hours before kickoff Sunday, the NFL removed side judge Brian Stropolo from the New Orleans-Carolina game because it was discovered he's a Saints fan. n't throw the yellow flag, though he immediately signaled a penalty.

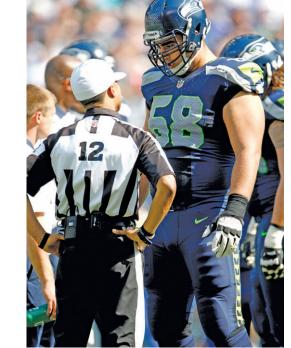

"I might sound like a little bit of a baby here," Flacco said. "But for them to make that call, I think, was a little crazy."

There was confusion later on during Philadelphia's go-ahead drive. First, the two-minute warning occurred twice. Then, quarterback Michael Vick's forward pass was called a fumble inside the Ravens 5. It was ruled incomplete following a replay, and Vick scored on the next play after a few anxious moments.

"It's extra stress when you have to sit there and wait," Vick said. "The one thing you don't want to do, you don't want to put the game in the officials' hands."

Lewis, like many players around the league, has seen enough.

"The time is now," Lewis said. "How much longer are we going to keep going through this whole process? I don't have the answer. I just know across the league teams and the league are being affected by it. It's not just this game, it's all across the league. And so if they want the league to have the same reputation it's always had, they'll address the problem. Get the regular referees in here and let the games play themselves out.

missioner Roger Goodell on Monday in New York about his suspension, which has been temporarily lifted. Attorney Peter Ginsberg said they were given an affidavit at the meeting.

"What Gregg Williams said in his most recent affidavit is the same falsity he has previously provided," Ginsberg said.

"I don't know what Gregg Williams' motives are, but I do know that any suggestion by Williams that Jonathan put up $10,000 as an incentive for his teammates to injure another player is absolutely false."

Vilma tweeted on Monday night that Williams was "bullied to sign the affidavit," saying Williams signed it on Friday.

Williams is now with St. Louis, though he has been suspended indefinitely. An associate of his said Williams did not want to talk to the media.

Vilma, who denied in court that he offered money in exchange for injuring the former Vikings quarterback, was one of four players suspended by Goodell in the bounty scandal.

"Today everyone was afforded an opportunity to start over," Vilma said outside the NFL's Park Avenue offices more than three hours after he went in. "It was in our best interest to meet today. We spoke truthfully, honestly, bluntly."

An appeals panel earlier this month said Goodell must clarify his rulings to ensure no part of his decisions was based on salary cap violations. That would be the jurisdiction of special master Stephen Burbank. ASSOCIATED PRESS

NFL referee Donovan Briggins and Seattle Seahawks defensive end Davis Dexter talk during Sunday's game between the Seahawks and the Dallas Cowboys in Seattle. And then came the on-field problems.

In Philadelphia's 24-23 win over Baltimore, two game-altering calls left quarterback Joe Flacco and linebacker Ray Lewis furning. It appeared on replay both calls were accurate as is. But that didn't make it any less controversial.

Flacco's scoring pass to receiver Jacoby Jones in the fourth quarter was called back because of offensive pass interference. The official who made the call did-

"We already have controversy enough with the regular refs calling the plays."

Despite the public outrage, the league backed the replacement crew, a collection of small college officials who have been studying NFL rules since the summer.

Time to Replace the Replacements t's time to stop playing games with the games. By now even the casual fan has figured it out it's just not working. The NFL's replacement referees have had their 15 minutes of fame, and can tell everyone back home they worked on the big stage.

That includes the one who shakes his cheerleading pom-poms for the New Orleans Saints, as well as the ref whose previous duties included making sure there were no uniform malfunctions in the Lingerie Football League. It also includes their fellow fill-ins, the ones who take forever after every call and even then can't seem to get it right.

Real refs made their share of mistakes, too. A lot of people still think the Minnesota Vikings would have been in the Super Bowl had a flag been thrown on an obvious illegal hit against Brett Favre in the third quarter of the 2010 NFC championship game against the Saints. San Diego Chargers fans still talk about Ed Hochuli's premature whistle in 2008 that probably cost their team a win over the Denver Broncos and certainly cost one of the best officials in the league a bit of his reputation.

And who could forget the 1998 Thanksgiving Day game when the referee flipping the OT coin gave the ball to Detroit when it came up tails, even though Pittsburgh running back Jerome Bettis clearly called "tails" on the toss. The Lions took the ball and went down the field to kick a game-winning field goal.

So, of course the real refs weren't perfect, even with cameras replaying every angle. There's a reason FOX Sports filled an analyst's job with Mike Pereira, the former vice president of officiating for the NFL – because some calls are going to be controversial and some are going to be flat out wrong. The operative word is "some."

But there's barely a shred of confidence in the replacements, a motley crew at best, culled mostly from the lower ranks in college. They're trying to officiate games played at a speed they've never encountered before, with some rules they've never heard about until just before the exhibition season.

What they do could cost you some money, if you're like millions of Americans and like to have a little something riding on the game. Worse, they could cost your favorite team a game or two — something that almost happened during Week 1 when the Seahawks were given an extra timeout against Arizona.

"It's just rookies. And you've got a whole crew of rookies. What do you expect?" Washington linebacker Lorenzo Alexander said after a particularly shaky performance by the officials working the Redskins-Rams game in St. Louis on Sunday. "If you've got a whole bunch of rookies on an NFL roster, you're going to have a lot of mistakes, so it's the same thing. And that's what we get."

The NFL's contention that all is well with the replacements is as much a joke as almost allowing a Saints fan to be a replacement side judge at a game between his favorite team and Carolina — something that almost happened Sunday. The league removed him just before kickoff when pictures of him wearing Saints gear and tailgating at a preseason game were spotted on Facebook.

That the NFL would cheapen its product and damage its reputation to save a few thousand dollars is astonishing. It speaks to the arrogance of the league, which exercises a heavy hand in whatever it does, particularly when it comes to labor relations.

So far, the penalty stats don't make a case against the replacements, though their indecisiveness is probably the reason games so far this season are averaging six minutes longer than last year. According to STATS LLC, the rookies are calling penalties at about the same rate as the real refs, though the penalties they call are slightly different.

Through Sunday, there have been more holding calls this season than last (99-86) and more pass interference calls (44-31). But the rookies have been more reluctant to blow the whistle for unnecessary roughness (19 as opposed to 27 last season) and roughing the passer (12 this season, 16 last). There's a growing consensus that the new refs are missing roughing calls and helmet-to-helmet hits, and allowing scuffles after the whistle is blown. That players hardly seem to respect them heightens the chance of someone getting hurt or a game getting out of control.

While players wouldn't risk their own careers by staging some kind of job action on behalf of regular refs, some are eager to do other things to get them back.

"I don't know what they're arguing about, but I got a couple of mill on it, so let's try to make it work," Redskins cornerback DeAngelo Hall said. "I'm sure the locker room could put up some cash and try to help the cause out."

The NFL doesn't need the cash. It got plenty back from the players after locking them out last year. Teams are making money and lots of it for their owners, many of whom are already millionaires many times over.

What it needs are competent referees.

And, please, don't take too long to think about it.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

"Therefore the sage knows without going about, Understands without seeing." – Lao-Tzu

Only one line of defense will defeat South's contract, but to find it, East had to visualize the holdings needed in the unseen hands.

Against three no-trump, West led the diamond 10, and declarer could count eight tricks, with the ninth to come from a 3-3 break in clubs or hearts.

Declarer put in the diamond queen, cashed the club ace and king, and on seeing the jack and 10 fall from West, decided, rightly as it transpired, that clubs were not breaking, so he broached hearts. As a heart trick had to be lost, and expecting to lose no more than three spade tricks, declarer played a low heart to dummy's eight.

On winning the heart, East did some calculating. West could hold just one high card — either the diamond king, the heart king, or the spade ace. If he held one of the red kings, there would be no defense. But even if he had the spade ace, the defense would have to be precise. East appreciated that on any return bar a spade, the likely 3-3 heart break would see declarer home. Thus four quick spade tricks were needed. For this to be possible, South had to have exactly the doubleton spade queen, and the only way to take those four tricks was to lead the spade king right now. East did so, and a second spade went to the queen and ace. West's last spade, through dummy's 10-8, produced the requisite four tricks. Nicely done.

DEAR ABBY: I thought "Arlene" was a close friend until I heard that she and another "friend" had arranged a trip to the theater. Several other women were also invited, but I wasn't. I should point out that when Arlene and I attended shows in the past. I was always the one buying the tickets.

I paid for her golf dues last October because she was a little short, and she still owes me about $1,000. I provided her transportation to the golf club for the last four years because she doesn't have a car. Arlene and I have shared many shopping trips together, and I have always picked up the tab for lunch.

What's your take on this? I'm crushed!

- LEFT OUT DEAR LEFT OUT: If this was a one-time event. then it's time to straighten up and "uncrush" yourself because, regardless of how much money you have invested in your relationship with Arlene, you don't "own" her. My take on this is that in your zeal to be a good friend you have gone overboard.

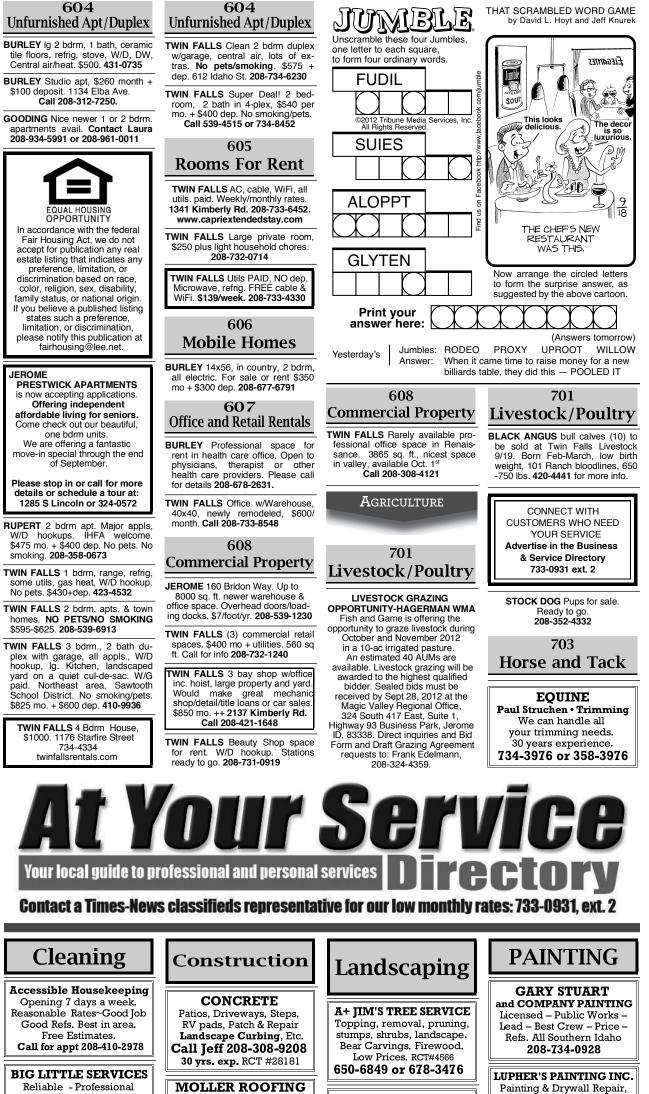

If being excluded is an ongoing problem, then you and this woman are not as close as you assumed, or she has decided to take a breather. In that case, my advice is to work out a payment plan for the golf dues you are owed and widen your circle of friends.

DEAR ABBY: We have a large condo in Florida and are thrilled to have family and friends visit. I keep a small calendar of our appointments, events, etc. in the corner of my kitchen. A few of our visitors have made it their business to read the calendar and ask me who and what these events are all about.

My husband and I have been having some marriage problems and are seeing a therapist. One relative noticed these appointments and wanted to know "what that was all about"! Abby, isn't it rude to read someone's personal calendar and ask these kinds of questions? I must leave the calendar where it can be seen or my husband doesn't remember medical appointments, etc.

- CALENDAR GIRL DEAR CALENDAR GIRL:

Of course it's rude to read someone's personal calendar. (It's called snooping.) Before the next houseguests come to visit, relocate the calendar to a private area. Then remind your husband about his appointments. That way he will know the schedule, and there will be nothing to arouse anyone's curiosity.

DEAR ABBY: Why can't bakeries slice English muffins and bagels completely through? Nobody eats either one without toasting them and slicing them first.

Along the same line: Why do loaves of bread have "ends"? Everybody throws them away and they are wasted.

- MINA IN KELSO, WASH.

DEAR MINA: English muffins aren't meant to be sliced. To prepare them at their best, they should be purchased whole and the perimeter perforated using a fork so the muffin can then be torn apart before toasting. This leaves lots of irregular nooks and crannies so when they are buttered, they are even more succulent.

As to the ends of bread loaves (called "heels"), not everyone throws them away, just as not everyone cuts the crusts off. Some people enjoy the heels because they make for a chewier sandwich.

IF SEPTEMBER 18 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Enjoy improved status and a release from pressures in the months to come. Refrain from being gullible or too ambitious in November and December. Much can be accomplished, especially if you act like a model of industry and concentrate on study, learning, travel and participating in community affairs. The best time to launch important plans or make crucial changes is in April when you will be wiser than usual and people are more apt to give you a boost up the ladder of success. Your love life can take a turn for the better next spring, too, because you meet your soul mate or because you are ready, willing and able to make a permanent commitment.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Don't take no for an answer. Your heart might beat a bit faster when you are in the presence of a certain member of the opposite sex. You might think that this is the "one," but only time will tell if you are right.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): The die has been cast. Once plans have been set in motion, all you can do is wait to see if it all works. Take your mind off controversies by doing lunch with a friend. Patience will be rewarded.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Pick up the scent of confidential information; put it to good use to improve your future prospects. You are as sly as a fox and savvy with business affairs. Someone might give you a valuable business tip.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Put on your white hat and spurs. You might not be a cowboy and home might not be on the range, but you can refuse to hear discouraging words. You are more attentive and wiser than usual with finances.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Smiles are great investments: The more you collect, the better you feel. Hold off on other investments that involve your hardearned cash. Stick to social outlays of time and energies that pay dividends.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Talk the talk, walk the walk. Under these stars, it is wise to find common ground with people who have dynamic business sense. You will find support from people who appreciate your sincerity.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Re-evaluate key situations. You may have become too close to a subject to see it objectively. All you need to do is step away for a moment and when you return, you'll see things as they truly are.

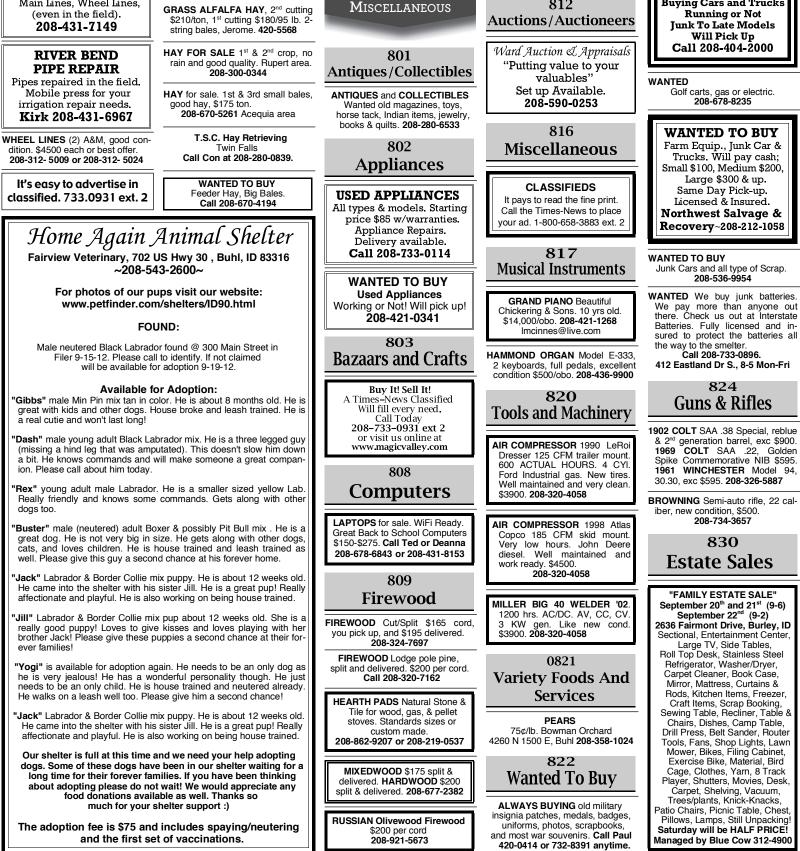

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Your partner or significant other has the right idea. Instead of being a leader, try being a follower. Don't try to compete with perfection. Focusing on unrealistic goals could waste time and energy.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A new heartthrob might enter the picture. Someone could find you highly attractive and desirable, so don't bother to fight destiny. Get rolling if you are in the mood for a fabulous fling.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Little things mean a lot. It may not seem like much, but a kind word, either given or received, can go a long way toward brightening an otherwise dreary day. New contacts may only be a passing fancy.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): By applying the theory of "forgive and forget" to matters of the heart, you can improve relationships. Don't let your own insecurity or intuitions interfere with giving others a fair and square deal.

PISCES (Feb. 19-Mar. 20): Study what makes a paragon of virtue such a success. Imitation is the sincerest form of flattery, so find a role model to emulate and flatter away. Romantic escapades get a big thumbs-up this evening.
