Former Oakley Teacher Accused of Sex Crime Back in Court

BY LAURIE WELCH lwelch@magicvalley.com

BURLEY • A jury trial for a former Oakley teacher accused of having inappropriate sexual contact with a student began Tuesday with jury selection.

The trial in the case against Alvin Andrew, 62, will continue today with testimony. Andrew is charged with two felony counts of lewd

conduct with a child under 16 and one count of felony sexual abuse of a child under 16 after he allegedly had sexual contact with a 14-year-old victim at the school.

A trial was set to begin in June, but Cassia County 5th District Judge Michael Crabtree declared a mistrial and dismissed that jury after a jury commissioner was overheard giving inappropriate comments to the panel. The incident led to a new jury commissioner being appointed for the Cassia County courts.

TIMES-NEWS FILE PHOTO The Rupert-based A&B Irrigation District won another chance for examination of its call against fellow groundwater pumpers with an Idaho Supreme Court decision last week.

New ID Supreme Court Decision Affects Major Water Dispute.

BY KIMBERLEE KRUESI kkruesi@magicvalley.com

RUPERT • Idaho's Supreme Court reversed a judicial court's order on a major water delivery call case, allowing the possibility for another judge's review.

A&B Irrigation District, based in Rupert, first filed a judicial review petition after the Idaho Department of Water Resources issued an order denying its water delivery call to IDWR on the grounds that groundwater users were depriving them of their appropriated water. The district is a senior water right user and junior users like the ground water pumpers are forbidden to infringe on their rights.

However, it wasn't until 2007 when IDWR would begin reviewing the district's delivery call. After going over the evidence, the department denied the call in 2009, then again in 2011 after the case was remanded by a 5th District judge. The decision was eventually appealed to the Idaho Supreme Court, and in August, the Supreme Court upheld the department's denial.

district immediately petitioned to amend the order. According to court documents, IDWR had 27 days to respond and make a decision but it failed to do so.

A&B took the department's silence as rejection and went on to ask for a judge's review of the order in 5th District Court. What the irrigation officials didn't know was that IDWR decided to issue judicial review to the Fifth Judian amended order just three days after the judicial review was filed.

Jerome City Council Hears Zoning Request

BY JULIE WOOTTON

jwootton@magicvalley.com

JEROME • A subdivision developer is asking the City of Jerome for a zoning change in order to build multi-family housing units.

On Tuesday night, the city council held a public hearing and first reading of an ordinance.

The topic: a request to change zoning for phase II of the Maple Ridge Subdivision project from single family residential to multifamily residential.

The council didn't take action. The ordinance will come back for a two more readings before a vote.

Owner Aaron Robertson said the zoning request has come before city boards before.

It would allow Keystone Construction - which manages the subdivision - to move forward with phase II of the project.

The subdivision is located off of Tiger Drive.

Discussions on the topic have taken pace for more than one year. In March 2011, the city council voted 3-1 to deny the zoning change.

Concerns with the initial proposal included the lack of street parking, traffic in the area and not enough variety in floor plans for the units.

Now, the project calls for 93 units including single family homes, twin homes and fourplexes.

The proposal also includes street parking.

"In short, we've tried to accommodate a lot of concerns," Robertson said.

The second phase of the subdivision project aims to reach out to a different demographic, he said. There's a lot of demand,

Robertson said, for smaller, cheaper homes.

And that's what developers are being "forced to build from a market standpoint," he said.

Robertson said he wants to add to the community through the project.

Prices haven't been set for units yet, but Robertson said the goal is to aim for less than $100,000.

Community development director Zoe Monahan said Robertson presented to the city's planning and zoning commission Aug. 14.

Stocks Mixed after FedEx Gives a Glum Outlook

The Dow Jones industrial average posted a slight gain, but other indexes fell. Declining stocks outnumbered those that advanced. And seven of the 10 industries tracked by the Standard & Poor's 500 index declined.

European stocks fell. So did oil prices.

FedEx said it sees a worldwide economy that has stalled. Investors pay close attention to the company's forecasts because its package delivery business spans the globe and offers a window into how the economy is doing.

FedEx reduced its fiscal-year profit forecast sharply because its customers used its express air delivery service less in favor of slower and cheaper ground service. FedEx's stock fell $2.73, or 3.1 percent, to close at $86.55.

Apple climbed above $700 for the first time, rising $2.13 to close at $701.91. Apple shares have risen more than 19 percent in the past three months.

Passing of a Local Leader

One of Burley's leaders, James Henry Roper, passed away last week at the age of 89 and was laid to rest Monday leaving a legacy of hard work and community pride. Roper and his brother, John took over their father's clothing business, which later became the Roper Clothing Co. During an interview with him six years ago, I found him Welch charming, soft spoken and eager to share the formula behind his successful empire that included stores in Burley, Rupert, Jerome, Buhl, Twin Falls, Boise, Idaho Falls, Murray and Salt Lake City, Utah. Roper told me he sold his first suit at 13 years old to former Idaho Speaker of the House Bruce Newcomb's father, Wayne Newcomb. He never forgot that moment. Roper attributed much of his success to his willingness to jump in and learn every aspect of his business and his dedication showed. He was truly one of Burley's homegrown leaders. - Laurie Welch and Whiskey Over the weekend, a friend told us a family legend: His grandfather had been elected to Davlin represent Camas County in the Idaho Legislature after gaining notoriety for wrestling a bear. I couldn't find any references to this bear wrestling feat in my Idaho history books, but I wouldn't be surprised if it's true. It's not the only crazy story I've heard about our state's early lawmakers. According to "Idaho's Constitution" by Dennis C. Colson, 68 whiskey flasks and bottles were found hidden in nooks of the Capitol building during clean-up after the 1888 Legislature adjourned.

Bear Wrestling

Curb, Gutter Work

Fillmore Street Partly Closed for

"The number as well as the size of the bottles beats the record of two years ago," the Idaho Daily Statesman reported at the time, according to Colson. Wild West, indeed.

Railroad History in Shoshone I went to Shoshone Sept. 6 because the town was being honored as a Union Pacific Train Town. This year is Union Pacific's 150th anniversary and Shoshone joins Pocatello and Boise as registered train towns. I had a chance to ride the passenger Dunlap train from

Shoshone to

Gooding. For some Shoshone residents, it was the first time on a train like Jacob Volquardsen, 2, who sat on his mother, Jamie Volquardsen's, shoulders as it pulled into the station. Jacob had a lot of fun exploring the cabin of the train, keeping his parents busy, as he walked up and down the aisle. If he was born half a century ago his mother might have taken him to the dining car to eat and keep him occupied. A framed menu on the wall in front of my seat said riders had a choice of halibut or turkey for 75 cents.

Heart and Culture of the Magic Valley

If there's anything that says "south-central Idaho" more than a Future Farmers of America get-together, it's hard to imagine what it is. Covering the annual Castleford FFA Labor Auction on Monday was a glimpse into the heart of rural America and the culture of Magic Valley. Fifty

eight FFA students put themselves up for auc-Kadel tion to community members, agreeing to do from four to eight hours of work in return for contributions to the FFA chapter. When the evening ended, more than $8,000 had been raised.

As Castleford High School's agriculture advisor Dan Billington said, "This community is extremely generous."

(A story about the FFA Labor Auction will run in Sunday's Ag section.)

Jerome Residents Can Sign Up for Alerts

As Jerome city crews moved piles of mud and fixed a broken water main last week, the surrounding neighbors were surprisingly quiet. One street over, a few young children laughed as they splashed around in puddles of water near the intersection of West 7th Avenue and Cedar Street.

Then, a parent called them inside.

On Sept. 10, crews were boring in the area in order to put in a fiber optic conduit and hit a water line. The problem was fixed later that day.

The incident last week was an opportunity for the city to use its relatively new community alert system -Nixle – which launched in May.

Foot traffic picked up as walkers competing in the Rim 2 Rim race began coming across the bridge in the distance. I readied myself and quickly realized that many of these participants thought I was an event photographer, posing and laughing as they approached me. My job is to be like a fly on the wall and record history as if I'm not there. After humoring a few racers, I soon began to pretend I wasn't paying attention and at the last possible moment I would fire off a frame to grab the candid moment.

Some joggers who had decided to race in the walkers event quickly slowed down when they saw me. I smirked when I heard one mention that they thought I was "security" to police the race and make sure no one was bending the rules.

Deeper into the race I noticed some of the walkers were looking a little worn. I knew I had what I needed from the walkers part of the event so I set aside my cameras and began my best attempts at being a motivational speaker. "Dig deep, you're four miles in!" I yelled.

As I finished up the Rim 2 Rim assignment and headed off to Cowboy Poetry in Shoshone, I thought to myself, I just played the part of an event photographer, a security officer, a volunteer and lastly – a photojournalist.

BY ALISON GENE SMITH alismith@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • A 20-yearold Twin Falls man pleaded guilty to a voluntary manslaughter charge in the death of a 3-year-old boy.

Lane Alan Buddenhagen was originally charged with first degree murder, but the charge was amended in a plea deal Friday.

According to an amended indictment, Buddenhagen "unlawfully but without malice, aforethought and premeditation" killed the child by causing him to sustain a catastrophic brain injury.

A sentencing hearing is scheduled for Nov. 2.

The boy, who was not related to Buddenhagen, died on Aug. 7, 2011. According to court documents, emergency personnel responded to an apartment complex at 512 Jefferson St. the morning of Aug. 6 to find the child lying on the floor of a bedroom.

Buddenhagen allegedly told police the boy had been taking a bath. He said he left the bathroom and heard a loud sound, returning to find the boy on the floor. Buddenhagen said he moved the child to a bedroom and called 911. The boy was later taken to a Boise hospital where he died.

A doctor at St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center told police he believed the child was shaken, based on bruises on the child and the results of a CT scan, and called the injuries "severe child abuse."

In court documents, Buddenhagen stated he was giving the child a bath and pushed the child to get him to sit down when the child hit his head. He also wrote he was pleading guilty on his attorney's advice because he felt like it was the best option for him and feels responsible for the boy's death.

According to court documents, prosecutors will ask for a maximum of 10 years fixed time in prison for Buddenhagen.

A mental health evaluation and a criminal risk assessment have been ordered in the case.

Couple Accused of Sexually Abusing Child for Years

alismith@magicvalley.com

HANSEN • A Hansen woman and a Jerome man have been arrested on child abuse charges. Twin Falls County Sheriff's deputies say the two repeatedly molested a young child for several years, starting when the child was about 2 years old. The child is now about 10 years old.

David Michael Meyers, 45, and Kandi Gay Mohr were both charged with sexual abuse of a minor under 16 and two counts of lewd conduct with a child under 16.

On Friday, Twin Falls County Sheriff's detectives spoke with FBI agents and Jerome city police detectives about a lewd conduct with a minor case they believed happened in Hansen. The FBI agents explained a detective from the Metropolitan Police Department in Washington D.C. was working undercover in a multi-jurisdictional child

BY ALISON GENE SMITH exploitation task force and was involved in a Yahoo chat session with a Jerome man later identified as Meyers.

In an interview, detectives confronted Mohr with nude or partially clothed pictures of the child and told her they had information about her participating as well as aiding in the abuse of the child, an affidavit in support of arrest states.

According to detectives, Mohr and Meyer both participated in sexual abuse of the child. In the interview, Morh allegedly admitted to abusing the child on more than one occasion.

According to the affidavit, Mohr told detectives she and Meyer were sexually involved with the child "less than 25 times."

Lori Stewart, spokeswoman for the Twin Falls County Sheriff's Office, said the Department of Health and Welfare is involved in the case and the child is safe at this time.

Big Jump Seen in Endangered Moapa dace Population

LAS VEGAS (AP) • A twice-yearly count found what U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service officials are calling a healthy population jump for a tiny endangered fish found only in streams and springs about 60 miles north of Las Vegas.

A statement credited expanded habitat protection and the eradication of invasive species in the Moa-Valley National pa Wildlife Refuge, and said the species called the Moapa dace was getting what a statement labeled "a fighting chance" at survival.

Spokesman Dan Balduini said snorkeling divers in August counted 1,181 of the finger-length fish with a distinctive black tail spot up more than 65 percent from the 713 fish seen a year earlier and a larger increase from the 654 fish found in February.

It was the first time since an unexplained die-off left just 473 fish in 2007 that the Moapa dace population has topped 1,000. Officials say the Moapa dace still has a long way to go before it can be considered safe from extinction.

"This milestone could not have been reached without the focus and coordinated efforts of everyone involved," said Ted Koch, Nevada state supervisor for the federal agency.

"We know that recovery of the species is still a long way off," Koch added.

The Moapa dace has been under federal protection for more than 40 years. It is expected to remain on the endangered species list until at least 75 percent of its historical habitat has been restored and its population is holding steady at 6,000 adult fish.

The fish live only in thermal springs and streams that form the headwaters of the Muddy River, which flows to the Colorado River at Lake Mead. Efforts to raise the fish in captivity have been unsuccessful.

In the mid-1990s, nonnative mollies and blue tilapia decimated the Moapa dace population and other native fish in the Muddy River. The Nevada Division of Wildlife has been working to eliminate the non-native species.

Minidoka Animal Control Prepares for New Oversight

BY LAURIE WELCH lwelch@magicvalley.com

PAUL • Several pairs of soft eyes watched intently through the cage wire Tuesday as Jessica Helms, a part-time employee at the Minidoka County Animal Control Facility, gathered food bowls and scrubbed out kennels.

Amid questions about the shelter's future by county residents, it remains business as usual for employees as they prepare for a shift in administration from the county to the city of Rupert on Oct. 1.

Minidoka County Undersheriff Vic Watson, who currently oversees the facility, said officials are following the same seamless protocol to move the facility back to the city of Rupert that was used when the county first took over the administration of animal control in 2005.

Watson said the hours the facility is open to the public will remain the same during the transition.

The county is handing off the facility after it concluded animal control was not a function of county government. The joint-controlled facility is operated by the county and cities of Rupert, Paul, Minidoka and Acequia.

"I think the city of Rupert is sincere in how they want to operate the facility and that it will be in the best interest of the animals and the community," Watson said. "I think the city ... will operate it close to what we have been doing, but I think eventually you will see some changes."

Watson said it's likely the city will find a new location for the facility – currently housed in Paul – and city officials have expressed interest in transitioning the facility to a Humane Society operation.

"That's not a bad thing," Watson said, adding he believes the community would support it. "But, the start-up of an organization like that poses a lot of problems."

Other pending issues, like whether the animal control officer will be able to carry a sidearm while employed by the city, will ultimately hinge on future city decisions.

Watson said Minidoka County Sheriff Kevin Halverson has agreed to deputize the Rupert animal control officer, which would allow the officer to work in other cities and the county with a firearm.

Rupert Superintendent Kelly Anthon previously told the Times-News that the city could not shift the animal control officer from being a county employee to a city one without opening up the position to applicants.

According to the city's website the position will remain open through 6 p.m. Thursday.

Anthon was not available for comment on Tuesday.

Mary Jane Mani, long-time volunteer at the facility and wife of animal control officer Steve Mani, said he has applied for the position.

Watson said Steve Mani was on vacation and has been "trying to burning up comp time" for a few weeks now.

"He's back at work now," Watson said.

Part-time staff and volunteers kept the facility open in his absence.

Mary Jane Mani said the facility is currently taking in five to 20 dogs a week and staff has made great strides in finding homes for them.

Last weekend, the facility held adoption days and found homes for 10 dogs and a foster home for one other.

A good example, she said, is Jake the hound that had been in foster care for seven months.

"He barked and barked at everything," Mani said. "He was adopted by a family and now lives on five acres with two young boys. The family wanted a dog that barked a lot."

The transformation will include changes to the exterior facade, porte-cochere, lobby, casino and retail and dining levels. An additional 15,000 square feet will be added to the casino, and the main entrance will be moved so it's no longer facing the Strip.

A few residents spoke in opposition to the zone change.

Terrence Edwards had concerns including the city's comprehensive plan, increased traffic in the area, overlap with the airport's overfly area and wastewater capacity.

Mike Hatfield said he's concerned that putting in affordable housing will lead to devaluation of the existing homes.

And where will the city council draw the line, he asked, when it comes to zoning changes for other area subdivisions?

Other Meeting Actions

During their Tuesday night meeting, the Jerome City Council also:

• Unanimously adopted an ordinance to close out area I of the Jerome City Urban Renewal Agency. Mayor John Shine said after 12 years of hard work, the agency brought a $68 million increase in property values by attracting new businesses to the area.

As a result of closing out area I, Jerome residents can expect to see a 7.5 percent drop in property taxes this fiscal year.

• Introduced a bill to raise sewer rates. The ordinance will come back for two more readings next month.

• Unanimously voted to reduce utility bills for Diane Holley by half for May through August due to a water break.

• Unanimously approved a liquor license for Art Miller, representing Harvest Moon Cafe.

Labrador Takes Heat for Voting Absences

BOISE (AP) • Republican Rep. Raul Labrador is fielding criticism from his Democratic challenger over the number of times he has missed votes in the U.S. House.

Labrador has been absent from voting at three times the rate of his immediate predecessors in Idaho's 1st Congressional District, including former Reps. Walt Minnick, Bill Sali and now-Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter. Labrador's challenger, Jimmy Farris, said Labrador's absences show a lack of a work ethic.

"The people of Idaho need to fire him," Farris said.

Labrador missed 72 of 1,531 recorded votes or 4.7 percent, nearly twice the median average for House members, according to GovTrack, a group that follows Congress.

He cited three major reasons for missing votes, including his young son's weeklong hospitalization, the first-ever GOP presidential caucus in March and his May primary. He conceded that Farris has a legitimate point and said he thinks he can bring his absent rate down.

"I don't think it's acceptable," Labrador told the Idaho Statesman. "Of course, if my son gets sick, I'll miss as many votes as I have to miss. But, no, I think I can get that down. The people of Idaho hired me to do a job and I should be there."

Labrador, an attorney from Eagle, often makes media appearances but said he has missed only two or three votes because of interviews. He didn't miss any votes while campaigning for Republican presidential candidate Mitt Romney in Colorado earlier this month, he said.

Labrador, who is Republicans among working to boost Romney's popularity with Hispanic voters, said he has been asked to join the Romney campaign

House Destroyed in Widfire

BOISE (AP) • Authorities have arrested an 18-year-old volunteer firefighter suspected of starting a wildfire that was threatening up to 100 homes in a subdivision northeast of Boise.

The blaze started late Monday afternoon and has destroyed one house. It prompted the evacuation of about a dozen homes Monday night, forest spokesman David Olson said. Additional homes received evacuation orders Tuesday.

The Boise County Sheriff identified the suspect Tuesas Nathanial Fay day Bartholomew, who faces a felony arson charge for allegedly setting the Karney Fire that has burned 250 acres in the Robie Creek area of the Boise National Forest.

Bartholomew lives in the area and was arrested Monday night while actively battling the blaze, sheriff officials said. Boise County Chief Deputy Dale Rogers said it appears the motive for starting the fire was to get the attention of his father, who is a firefighter.

Land Board Approves Dredge Permit for Salmon River

BOISE (AP) • Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter and the rest of the state land board approved an exclusive mineral lease for a Grangeville man who wants to suction dredge a half-mile section of the Salmon River for gold and garnets.

The board unanimously approved a lease application Tuesday for recreational miner Mike Conklin over objections from conservationists who argue the process of scouring up gravel and riverbed is harmful to fish habitat and water quality.

The approval comes four weeks after the board postponed a vote to buy more time to study Conklin's plan and for some members to make a personal visit to the stretch of river Conklin wants to mine.

General Attorney Lawrence Wasden, who toured the site last month, acknowledged the aesthetic beauty of the Salmon River, but he also pointed out that state law, rules and regulations allow suction dredging to occur on the river. Wasden also said granting Conklin exclusive rights to a half-mile section could protect the river by preventing full-scale dredging by other hobbyist miners.

"The Legislature and state agencies adopted rules stating that this stretch of river is open to recreational dredge mining," Wasden told the board. "This is a pristine and beautiful river. It's had many uses over time, including mining."

Conklin has been conducting small-scale exploration on the river for two years. But his new, five-year lease gives him sole access to a half-mile stretch about 13 miles downstream of Riggins. Southwest Needs Power Lines to Become Solar Hub

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) • Pick any stretch of road slicing through the American Southwest. The sun beats down on the asphalt like nowhere else and heat waves distort the landscape.

It's here, in these open expanses, that experts say is a massive untapped source of energy that could meet the nation's growing needs. But only if developers can get it out of the desert.

Even as renewable power projects get a boost from the federal government, a lack of transmission lines prevents states such as New Mexico where the sun shines more than 300 days a year - from converting the obvious potential into real watts that can charge smartphones and run air conditioners thousands of miles away.

Aside from Phoenix and Las Vegas the region's rural stretches - the ideal places for acres of solar panels have few energy demands. And sending solar power from there to population centers isn't as simple as loading coal into boxcars and shipping it cross country.

"We have incredible renewable energy resources," U.S. Energy Secretary Steven Chu said during a visit earlier this year to a solar research lab in New Mexico. "The bad news is they're where there are not many people. We need a distribution system that can accommodate that."

Transmission lines are key to developing the region's solar resources. The problem is existing lines are maxing out, especially as the push intensifies to bring online more renewable energy.

Man Recounts Grizzly Bear Attack

IDAHO FALLS (AP) • A hunter who was bitten by a grizzly bear after surprising the animal in eastern Idaho says the attack happened in seconds.

Gary Detwiler, a 67vear-old archer from Midland, Mich., told the Post Register he was helping his hunting partner retrieve a bull elk carcass Friday when they encountered the bear, which may have already claimed the carcass.

James Kindy had shot the six-point elk the previous evening, and decided to track the animal the next day because it was getting dark, Detwiler said. The men located a blood trail on Friday and started following it, walking into a grove of small pine trees no more than 300 yards away.

"We basically heard branches breaking," Detwiler said. "I thought it was the elk ... but then a bear jumped out."

Detwiler said the bear was 10 to 12 feet away when it broke from cover, bit him on the bicep and then returned to the trees.

"I only had about one second between when I saw it and it jumped on me," Detwiler said. "And I had another second or two before it jumped back to the same spot."

He didn't remember any sounds, smells or pain, just the speed of the attack and how the bear was nearly the same color as an elk.

"I thought I was going to die for a minute, but then I knew I wasn't," he said.

The animal didn't give him time to react, he said.

"It wouldn't have mattered if I had pepper spray, a pistol or a shotgun," Detwiler said. "There was nothing I could have done in the second it took for the bear to bite me. Absolutely nothing."

The two men walked about four miles back to the truck and drove to a medical clinic in Ashton, where Detwiler was stitched up and released. In the days since, Detwiler has stayed behind at the Island Park hunting camp while Kindy hunted. He said he will hunt in the future, but may stick to areas that are free of grizzlies.

Steve Schmidt, the Idaho Department of Fish and Game's regional supervisor in Idaho Falls, said biologists will return to the scene in the coming days to find out if the bruin was guarding the elk carcass a source of food that a bear would be likely to try to defend.

"We don't have enough information to say what the bear was doing," Schmidt said.

Kindy hasn't yet found the elk he wounded, Schmidt said.

Stop it. Stop following their script.

Today, fury, violence and bloodshed are consuming the Muslim world. Why? Because a bank fraud artist in California offered people $75 a day to come to his house and act out scenes that ostensibly had nothing to do with Islam. Then he replaced the audio, putting words in the actors' mouths, and stitched together the scenes to make an absurdly bad movie ridiculing the Prophet Muhammad. He put out fliers to promote the movie. Nobody came to watch it. He posted a 14-minute video excerpt of the movie on YouTube, but hardly anyone noticed. Then, a week ago, an anti-Muslim activist in Virginia reposted the video with an Arabic translation and sent the link to activists and journalists in Egypt. An Egyptian TV show aired part of the video. An Egyptian politician denounced it. Clerics sounded the alarm. Through Facebook and Twitter, protesters were mobilized to descend on the U.S. embassy in Cairo. The uprising spread. The U.S. ambassador to Libya has been killed, and violence has erupted in other countries.

When the protests broke out, the guy who made the movie claimed to be an Israeli Jew funded by other Jews. That turned out be a lie. Now he says he's a Coptic Christian, even though Coptic Christian leaders in Egypt and the United States despise the movie and want nothing to do with him. Another guy who helped make the movie claims to be a Buddhist. The movie was made in the United States, yet Sudanese mobs have attacked British and German embassies. Some Egyptians targeted the Dutch embassy, mistakenly thinking the Netherlands was behind the movie. Everyone's looking for a group to blame and attack.

The men behind the movie said it would expose Islam as a violent religion. Now they're pointing to the riots as proof. Muslims are "pre-programmed" to rage and kill, says the movie's promoter. "Islam is a cancer," says the director. According to the distributor, "The violence that it caused in Egypt is further evidence of how violent the religion and people are and it is evidence that everything in the film is factual."

Congratulations, rioters. You followed the script perfectly. You did the propagandists' work for them. And the provocations won't end here. Laws and censors won't protect you from them. Liberal democracies allow freedom of expression. Our leaders and people condemn garbage like this video, but we don't censor it. Even if we did, the diffusion of media technology makes suppression impossible. Online propaganda is speech. But it's also part of the global rise of lethal empowerment. On YouTube, you can find videos insulting every religion on the planet: Jews, Christians, Hindus, Catholics, Mormons, Buddhists and more. Some clips are ironic. Others are simply disgusting. Many were posted to bait one group into fighting another. The baiters are indiscriminate. The promoter of the Muhammad video founded a group that also protests at Mormon temples.

The hatred and bloodshed will go on until you stop taking the bait. Mockery of your prophet on a computer with an Internet address somewhere in the world can no longer be your master. Nor can the puppet clerics who tell you to respond with violence. Lay down your stones and your anger. Go home and pray. God is too great to be troubled by the insults of fools. Follow Him.

Looking Out for the United States

As I listen to the news, I wonder what's going on with our or my country. This socalled president, I don't think he's for our United States.

He is un-American, always off somewhere, not tending to his job. He's more for the Muslim; He does not stand up for this country. So he should leave here and go to where he's welcomed.

And no more money for any foreign country until we are on the road to recovery. And I mean no more lending to anybody. Let them get their own money from China or wherever.

You cannot buy friends. P.S. I think this president is a bum. DAVE KEILLOR Twin Falls

Think It Can't Happen Here? Think Again

One of the most powerful things we can possess is knowledge. It is essential for us to obtain knowledge in order for us to preserve our freedoms. Forces are at work in the country to take away these precious freedoms. We simply can't remain free by being ignorant.

Many people have never heard of something called Agenda 21, but everyone will wish they had learned about if it is allowed to be fully implemented in this country.

So what is Agenda 21? It is a plan to control every human activity on the planet to ensure sustainability and smart stark reality of all this is government control of our lives at levels we can't even fathom.

Think it couldn't happen here? Think again. Check out the carbon footprint calculator at the city of Twin Falls website: http://www.tfid.org/carboncalculator.aspx. Want to learn more about Agenda 21? Watch the video about it on YouTube.

Better yet, attend a speech titled "Regulation Overload, How Agenda 21 is Slowly Strangling American Businesses and Property Owners to 'Save' the Environment" given by William F. Jasper, senior editor of the New American Magazine, Thursday, Sept. 27, at 7 p.m. at the Red Lion Hotel Canyon Springs, 1347 Blue Lakes Blvd. N. in Twin Falls. He recently attended the Rio +20 United Nations Agenda 21 Conference in Brazil. He will give us an update on their plans to lit erally destroy our economy and freedom.

The cost is $5 to attend, but it will be well worth it to obtain some precious knowledge to help you preserve your freedom. I urge you to attend this important speech.

Ronald Brewster said his brother, Michael Brewster, may have "wanted to go down with a bang" by allegedly robbing 10 banks in nine states since June. But he acknowledged he cut off contact with his brother six years ago, when Michael Brewster wrote him a letter from prison inquiring about insurance proceeds after their mother's death.

Michael Brewster, 54, of Pensacola, Fla., was arrested Thursday night after running a stop sign near a casino at Roland, Okla. Federal marshals said Brewster is scheduled to be moved to Erie, Pa., to face charges that he robbed a bank there on Sept. 10.

Ronald Brewster said he and his brother haven't talked for more than a decade, since Michael Brewster and another brother, Gary Brewster, were arrested in a forgery scheme that involved cashing bogus checks at Cincinnati-area banks.

Gary Brewster remains imprisoned on multiple charges, including forgery, possession of criminal tools and tampering with evidence, according to information from the Ohio Department of Corrections.

Court Tosses Ban on Judicial Endorsements

HELENA, Mont. (AP) • A federal appeals court has struck down Montana's ban on partisan endorsements of judicial candidates, citing the U.S. Supreme Court's Citizens United decision that has opened the door for more corporate spending in politics.

Judges from the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ruled Monday in a preliminary injunction that the ban was an unconstitutional free speech restriction. The decision could ultimately result in political party spending in state races for prized judgeships.

The ruling was the latest to overturn Montana campaign finance and election laws — a fight that has put the state at the center of the debate over the effect of the 2010 Citizens United decision.

Citizens United made it clear that the same First Amendment issue applies to the Montana ban on partisan judicial endorsements, according to the 9th Circuit ruling.

"Political speech — including the endorsement of candidates for office — is at the core of speech protected by the First Amendment," the court wrote. "This protection extends as much to political parties exercising their right of association as to individuals."

Attorney General Steve Bullock called it "one more case of federal intrusion" on the state's laws.

"I am extremely disappointed in this decision," Bullock said in a statement. "Without a truly independent and nonpartisan judiciary, Montanans may no longer continue to trust the integrity of the legal system they rely on to see that justice is done."

A dissenting opinion from the court backed the state, called the majority opinion a "big step backwards for the state of Montana" and argued the state had a compelling interest in protecting judgeships from the fray of partisan politics.

"Political endorsements, much more than judges' discussion of issues, lead to political indebtedness, which in turn has a corrosive impact on the public's perception of the judicial system," the dissent wrote.

Conservation Group Sues over Logging

GREAT FALLS, Mont. (AP) • Two conservation groups filed a lawsuit against the U.S. Forest Service arguing the agency should have completed a more thorough environmental review of a plan to cut down trees killed by mountain pine beetles in the Little Belt Mountains.

Lewis and Clark National Forest officials proposed removing such hazard trees near 58 cabins, five radio towers, 157 campgrounds and trails, and along 575 miles of roads in a total area of about 26 square miles.

"By mitigating hazard trees we're attempting to do our duty to maintain public safety while allowing the public to continue to access their national forest," spokesman Dave Cunningham told the Great Falls Tribune in a story published online Monday.

The lawsuit was filed Friday in U.S. District Court in Missoula by the Alliance for the Wild Rockies and the Native Ecosystems Council. It claims the forest service illegally used a "categorical exclusion" that requires less environmental review if the agency determines a project won't significantly harm the environment.

Orrin Hatch Challenger Makes Fun of His Age

Senate candidate Scott Howell speaks April 12 during the Democratic state convention.

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) • Sen. Orrin Hatch is many things: a former Judiciary Committee Chairman, the Republican next in line to head the tax-writing finance committee, songwriter and grandfather. But his Democratic opponent is warning that Hatch's age –78 –makes him "an old guy" at risk of retiring or dying in office if re-elected in the Nov. 6 elections.

"Our nation doesn't need that. And, at nearly 80 years old, he lacks the skills, knowledge and proficiency to face America's modern needs," read an email from Democratic hopeful Scott Howell, 58, to potential supporters. "We cannot risk the possibility of an 80-yearold man taking office, only to retire or die before his term is through."

Hatch campaign manager Dave Hansen called the comments "outrageous and offensive," adding they come from a candidate with no shot at winning in November. Utah hasn't elected a Democrat to the Senate since 1970.

"That's the first time I've ever heard a candidate say, 'Vote for me, my opponent is going to die,"' Hansen said Tuesday.

He said that Hatch is in great health and has no plans to either retire or die.

"He is the youngest 78-year-old you'll ever find," Hansen said.

Howell's campaign, meanwhile, defended the comments, citing Utah's overall average life expectancy of 78 years old.

"It's absolute reality," Howell campaign manager Emily Bingham Hollingshead said. "Age is a factor in this election."

According to the Senate Historical Office, the average age of senators in the current Congress is 61.5 years old. Hatch is one of 19 senators in their 70s. Three others – Hawaii Sens. Daniel Inouye and Daniel Akaka, as well as Sen. Frank Lautenberg of New Jersey – are in their 80s.

About 13 percent of the nation is over age 65, about the same as the percentage of seniors in Utah, according to the Census Bureau.

Obesity Problem Expected to Grow

NEW YORK (AP) • We Americans already know how fat we are. Can it get much worse?

Apparently, yes, according to an advocacy group that predicts that by 2030 more than half the people in the vast majority of states will be obese.

Mississippi is expected to retain its crown as the fattest state in the nation for at least two more decades. The report predicts 67 percent of that state's adults will be obese by 2030; that would be an astounding increase from Mississippi's current 35 percent obesity rate.

The new projections were released Tuesday by Trust for America's Health with funding from the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation. Trust for America's Health regularly reports on obesity to raise awareness, mostly relying on government figures.

The group's dismal forecast goes beyond the 42 percent national obesity level that federal health officials project by 2030. The group predicts every state would have rates above 44 percent by that time, although it didn't calculate an overall national average.

About two-thirds of Americans are overweight now. That includes those who are obese, a group that accounts for about 36 percent. Obesity rates have been holding steady in recent years. Obesity is defined as having a body-mass index of 30 or more, a measure of weight for height.

Trust for America's Health officials said their projections are based in part on state-by-state surveys by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention from 1999 through 2010. The phone surveys ask residents to self-report their height and weight; people aren't always so accurate about that.

The researchers then looked at other national data tracking residents' weight and measurements and made adjustments for how much people in each state might fudge the truth about their weight. They also tried to apply recent trends in obesity rates, along with other factors, to make the predictions.

Officials with Trust for America's Health said they believe their projections are reasonable.

And New York City's health commissioner agreed. "If we don't do anything, I think that's a fair prediction," said Dr. Thomas Farley whose city banned just supersize sugary drinks to curb obesity.

Trust for America projects that by 2030, 13 states would have adult obesity rates above 60 percent, 39 states might have rates above 50 percent, and every state would have rates above 44 percent.

Union Agrees to End Chicago Teacher Strike

CHICAGO (AP) • The Chicago Teachers Union's House of Delegates decided Tuesday afternoon to end the city's first teacher strike in 25 years and return more than 350,000 students to the classroom Wednesday.

The voice vote was taken after some 800 delegates convened at a union meeting hall near Chinatown to discuss and debate a tentative contract. Union leaders had already signed off on the agreement with Chicago Public Schools.

"We said we couldn't solve all the problems ... and it was time to suspend the strike," CTU President Karen Lewis said at a news conference after the vote.

Debi Lilly, a Lakeview resident, said she was thrilled her third- and fifthgrader would be heading back to Hawthorne School Wednesday after missing seven days of classes.

"Thank goodness, thank goodness," Lilly said. "Now I believe they're putting the children first."

While there still might be issues to work out between CTU and CPS, Lilly said she's happy the teachers agreed to do it while the children are in school.

Lilly said she told her children the news right away and the family will be treating Tuesday night like it should be - a school night.

"We'll be up early making lunches, packing backpacks and walking to school tomorrow," Lilly said.

Earlier in the day, teachers on the picket line outside CPS headquarters were mostly optimistic that they would be back in school

"In our meetings yesterday, it's apparent we're optimistic that we will return," said Mary Mark, a CPS speech language pathologist.

"We realize that by going out, we're diminishing our power, but on the other hand, we don't want to strike so long that we turn the tide of support. We all need to get back to work and the kids need to get back in school," Mark said.

Judge Allows Enforcement of Arizona Immigration Law

PHOENIX (AP) • A judge in Arizona ruled Tuesday that police can immediately start enforcing the most contentious section of the state's immigration law, marking the first time officers can carry out the socalled "show me your papers" provision.

The decision by U.S. District Judge Susan Bolton is the latest milestone in a two-year legal battle over the requirement. It culminated in a U.S. Supreme Court decision in June that upheld the provision on the grounds that it doesn't conflict with federal law.

Opponents responded to the Supreme Court decision by asking Bolton to block the requirement on different grounds, arguing that it would lead to systematic racial profiling and unreasonably long detentions of Latinos if it's enforced. She said early this month she wouldn't block it, and gave the goahead Tuesday for the law to take effect.

The section of the law requires that officers, while enforcing other laws, question the immigration status of those suspected of being in the country illegally.

The "show me your papers" name comes from opponents.

Arizona's law was passed in 2010 amid voter frustration with the state's role as the busiest illegal entry point into the country.

Five states – Alabama, Georgia, Indiana, South Carolina and Utah - have adopted variations on Arizona's law.

A call to the office of Gov. Jan Brewer, who signed the measure into law, wasn't immediately returned Tuesday afternoon.

A coalition of civil rights groups is awaiting a ruling from the 9th Circuit Court of Appeals on their latest effort to prevent the questioning requirement from taking effect about the GOP presidential nominee's chances of winning the White House.

The latest heartburn for these insiders is Romney's refusal to back down from his statement that nearly half of Americans believe they are victims dependent upon government.

After his remarks, made to donors at a private fundraiser in May, came to light in a video, the candidate defended his position – and did so again Tuesday. He

But, at least this week, there are doubts in GOP circles that he can prevail.

"This is a worst case scenario in some respects," Reof-touch elitist, and Lombardo said the remarks "tend to reinforce pre-existing perception."

"Anytime that happens a campaign has to worry," Lombardo said.

The remarks were just the latest headache for Romney seven weeks before Election Day and with early voting well under way.

Romney critics and backers alike point to his misstep-filled trip abroad in July as an early signal of worry.

Prophet Film Diverts Attention from Syria

BEIRUT (AP) • For the embattled Syrian regime, the crudely produced film mocking Islam that has unleashed fury across the Muslim world could not have come at a better time.

Images of furious protest ers targeting Western diplomatic sites in Libya, Egypt, Pakistan and elsewhere have diverted the world's gaze from the bloodstained streets of Syria, where President Bashar Assad is trying to crush an 18-month-old uprising.

The crisis over the film also has reinvigorated militant rhetoric that U.S. and Israel are the real enemies of Muslims, taking the heat off of both Assad and his loyal and powerful ally in neighboring Lebanon, the militant group Hezbollah.

On Tuesday, Syria's Cabinet condemned the movie, titled "Innocence of Muslims." In its first official reaction, the Cabinet said the film about the Prophet Muhammad is "cheap and provocative," adding that it's 'part of a Western project

Protests Spark Factory Closures

LOS ANGELES TIMES

BEIJING • The worst of the anti-Japanese protests that have swept China in recent days may be over. The financial fallout for the world's second- and third-biggest economies may be just beginning.

Japanese-owned factories, restaurants, mini-marts and clothing retailers across China closed en masse Tuesday as protests continued in nearly 100 cities, sparked by a dispute over control of uninhabited islands near Taiwan.

Automakers Nissan, Honda, Toyota and Mazda suspended operations at some plants, as did Sony. Hundreds of 7-Eleven shops run by a Japanese company were shuttered, as were dozens of outlets of the popular Gaplike Japanese clothing chain Uniqlo. Eateries serving Japanese food – even those with Chinese owners and staff - closed as well, shaken by weekend demonstrations that saw protesters overturning Japanese cars, ambassador had died. Then there were reports of infighting among his staff, and calls from Republicans for Romney to do more than just criticize Obama on the economy.

Heeding that advice, Romney began the week aiming to focus more on giving voters a better sense of what he would do as president. Then his remarks from the spring fundraiser surfaced, and he defended himself.

By Tuesday, Republicans were on edge. And some warned that Romney's road to the presidency was getting steeper.

Most of the more than a dozen GOP consultants interviewed for this story wouldn't openly discuss their concerns for fear of angering Romney's inner circle. But there was an overwhelming sense that Romney needs to do something to shake up the race. Many Republicans said they view the upcoming debates as Romney's last chance to turn the tide — and even then it might be too late, given that a chunk of voters in key states will already have voted before the first debate. Although they concede that the timing was bad, Romney aides insist he has nothing to apologize for. They say there is more than enough time to recover. They also point to larger polling gaps made up by Ronald Reagan and George H.W. Bush in past elections, and to national tracking surveys that show Romney starting to recover.

Some Republicans see the same trends.

"It's been rough couple of weeks, but better for Romney to be going through a rough patch now than a month from now," said Sara Taylor Fagen, a former top political aide to President George W. Bush. "Fortynine days is an eternity in politics, and the race remains very close."

Other Republicans fear that Romney isn't listening to advice from core staffers and is too involved in the day-to-day mechanics of the campaign, leading him to make mistakes he wouldn't otherwise make because he's not focused on his primary objective - persuading voters to back him. In GOP circles, there also are grumbles that the campaign is focused too much on the storyline of the day instead of articulat ing Romney's vision for the country, and that the campaign missed an opportunity to do that with a convention several said fell flat.

"It's incumbent on the Romney campaign to make it about Obama's handling of the economy," said Fergus Cullen, a former Republican Party chairman in New Hampshire. He's among the Republicans who think this is a temporary hiccup that will blow over, saying: "There are seven weeks to go and the topic of conversation will change, literally, from day to day."

Several Republicans noted Romney's schedule of the past few days, saying he was squandering an opportunity to talk to voters in battleground states. He's spent the bulk of the week raising money across the country in states that are not competitive. - Colorado, where about one-fifth of residents are obese - 45 percent would be obese by 2030.

Perhaps more surprising, Delaware is expected to have obesity levels nearly as high as Mississippi. Delaware currently is in the middle of the pack when it comes to self-reported obesity rates.

The report didn't detail why some states' rates were expected to jump more than others. It also didn't calculate an average adult obesity rate for the entire nation in 2030, as the CDC did a few months ago. But a researcher who worked on the Trust for America's Health study acknowledged that report's comment on the new report.

Whichever estimates you trust most, it's clear that the nation's weight problem is going to continue, escalating the number of cases of diabetes, heart disease and stroke, said Jeff Levi, executive director of Trust for America's Health.

By 2030, medical costs from treating obesity-related diseases are likely to increase by $48 billion, to $66 billion per year, his report said.

The focus of so much of the ongoing debate about health care is over controlling costs, Levi said. "... We can only achieve it by addressing obesity. Otherwise, we're just tinkering around the margins."

group as well as Assad.

Assad's fall would be a nightmare scenario for Hezbollah. Any new regime led by Syria's majority Sunni Muslims would likely be far less friendly — or even outright hostile — to Shiite Muslim Hezbollah. Iran remains the group's most important patron, but Syria is a crucial supply route. Without it, Hezbollah will struggle to get money and weapons as easily.

The Syrian conflict has descended into a civil war, with neither side able to strike a definitive blow against the other. The result is a murderous stalemate, with a growing sense of worldwide horror over violence that activists believe is responsible for killing 23,000 people.

The prophet film, however, has exposed a well of deep anger and frustration directed far beyond Syria's borders — and Syria and its allies are seizing on it.

In his first public appearance since 2011, Sheikh Hassan Nasrallah told tens of thousands of rapturous supporters Monday that there must be sustained demonstrations against the film.

There are four more rallies planned this week in Lebanon, starting Wednesday, as Hezbollah tries to redirect popular rage against the U.S., describing the film as an unprecedented attack on Islam.

The low amber sun and the slight chill in the air mean fall is near - the perfect time for gleaning in the Magic Valley.

This is the second time Phillips' group has gleaned this cornfield or collected from a field that has already been harvested - and they haven't even made a dent in the field's 50 rows and 100,000 plants.

"This is what the Native Americans used to do; they would go out and find areas where there would be prickly pear out in the desert and gather the fruit and preserve it," Phillips said.

"We hate to see it all go to waste," said Andrew Jarvis.

Jarvis co-owns Rock Ridge Dairy in Castleford along with Don Gaalswyk and Bill VonderPol. The three of them own the cornfield and planted it so their employees could take what they needed. Because of the field's plentiful crop, it turned into a community garden where the owners allow people to glean as they need.

Carve Out a Longer Gardening Season with Cold Frames

HAILEY • From 10 a.m. to noon Saturday, the Building Material Thrift Store will present a free workshop on cold frame construction using reclaimed materials. A cold frame is an easy do-it-yourself project for producing more of your own food by artificially extending the growing season.

Katja Casson built her own cold frame in last fall's workshop, and she told the Ketchum-based Environmental Resource Center that she recommends it to anyone who gardens.

"I have been growing salad greens, spinach, parsley and basil in the frame. I am excited to build a second cold frame so that I can experiment with planting seeds in it this fall for a super-early spring harvest," Casson said in a release from the nonprofit ERC.

Workshop participants will learn about constructing a simple cold frame, as well as season extension and cold frame placement.

The Building Material Thrift Store, in Hailey's south Woodside, will have materials on hand for purchase, if you would like to build along with the facilitators. Reserve your materials ahead of time through the ERC. You can also elect to build and donate a cold frame, which will be placed with a gardener through The Hunger Coalition's Hope Garden project.

To register, call the ERC at 208-726-4333.

Annual food- and winetasting event shows off Magic Valley producers.

TWIN FALLS • For the past 20 years or more, Pandora Handley has been creating tasty meals in the kitchen. On Sept. 28, she'll make all sorts of recipes from locally produced foods and wines for Savor Southern Idaho.

This is the third year for the food- and wine-tasting event sponsored by the Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce and Southern Idaho Tourism. Seven wineries, one brewery and 11 producers are on board to participate in the one-evening event, said Kyle Tarbet, the chamber's marketing coordinator. Handley, executive chef at Canyon Crest Dining and Event Center, will be the event's chef.

Elk sliders are presented Friday at Canyon Crest Dining and Event Center in Twin Falls. The sliders will be in the lineup for this month's Savor Southern Idaho tasting event.

Among the products she plans on using from local producers are trout, elk meat, yogurt and cheese.

Last weekend she still was formalizing her list of recipes for the event. One will be elk sliders, a tasty creation of elk meat, cheese and onion on mini rolls that she demonstrated making Sept. 14 at Canyon Crest, where the sliders are on the regular menu. But a Savor Southern Idaho attraction that you won't find on a restaurant menu: Handley's Sweet Corn Fritters with Chipotle Dipping Sauce.

Make Sense of Savings with Food Network Host

BY MICHELE KAYAL For The Associated Press

Melissa d'Arabian is a home economist for a new era. Actually, she's more CFO than home ec.

That's because the Food Network host is as adept at balancing ledger sheets as she is at getting dinner on the table. It's a handy skill that comes with being a trained financial strategist, and turned out to be an unlikely backbone for her culinary career. Her basic message to thrifty home cooks? Stretch your food dollars by treating your kitchen in terms of profit and loss.

"As the manager of a household you're actually running a fairly complicat-ed business," she says. "There are simple lessons we can take from the business world and apply to our own homes."

Before hosting Food Network's "Ten Dollar Dinners,'' d'Arabian was a financial services consultant, then a high-powered financial executive for The Walt Disney Co. Some of the same principles she applied to keeping her employers in the black are the ones she uses today to prepare healthy, cost-effective meals for her family.

Keeping a home kitchen in the black is a matter of considering five financial concepts, she says.

Procurement

In the business world, procurement is about obtaining goods. In the home kitchen, that means groceries. Most people understand that you can save money by buying what's on sale, d'Arabian says. But to really make the most of your dollars, think like a retailer. Each week, she says, grocery stores offer certain meats as "loss leaders," products discounted by as much as 50 percent just to get customers through the door.

"The way to know loss leaders is to grab the flyer at beginning and see what's on the front cover," she says. "If you're smart, you don't just buy one, you buy two or three."

freezer, the fridge, glance around and see what needs to be used up," she says. Then buy only what you need to fill out the meals already lurking in your pantry. Just being aware, she says, will automatically reduce your spending.

Marketing

Seriously? You have to promote dinner to your kids?

"You don't have to, but you'll be a lot more successful if you do,'' d'Arabi-an says. In the d'Arabian household, a different child "presents" the meal each night, explaining each dish in detail – what's in it, where it comes from, how it's made. "The simple act of presenting the food takes the mystery out of it for picky eaters, celebrates what we've spent and markets it to my family," she says.

Rub a bit of olive oil onto a cutting board, then place the pizza dough on it, turning to coat it lightly on all sides with the oil. Cover with a kitchen towel and let rest for 30 minutes. After the dough has rested, heat one side of a grill to medium-high and the other side to medium-low. In a medium bowl, combine the tomato, balsamic vinegar, lemon juice, salt, basil and the 1 tablespoon of olive oil. Toss well, then set aside.

Using a rolling pin, roll out the dough into a circle about 14 inches across. Use the cutting board to carry the dough out to the grill. Place the dough on the hot side of the grill and grill until the bottom is browned and has grill marks, about 1 to 2 minutes. Use a spatula to flip the dough and move it to the cooler side of the grill. Top the pizza with the mozzarella, then cover the grill and cook until the cheese is melted, about 2 to 3 minutes.

Successful businesses project what their upcoming costs and revenues will be. A "rapid review" of a month's worth of grocery receipts will give the home cook a rough idea of what's being spent, d'Arabian says.

A Primer on Smoked Fish and Why You Should Love It

BY J.M. HIRSCH Associated Press

Several thousand years ago, people discovered that exposing fish to intense amounts of salt and smoke was a great way of preserving the catch for later.

Today, our smoking techniques are considerably more refined, and we do it more for flavor than as a means of preservation. And that makes it a shame more people don't think to reach for smoked fish as an effortless way to add gobs of flavor to the foods they love.

But first, a primer on smoked fish. There are two ways to smoke fish - cold and hot. Salmon, trout, haddock and mackerel are the most common choices.

In cold smoking, the fish are brined in a heavy salt solution, then exposed to cool smoke (85 degrees max) for up to several days, then frozen to kill parasites. Cold smoked fish – which is essentially raw - has a soft, delicate texture, an assertive saltiness and a pleasant, but not over-should be exposed to long 2 stalks celery, chopped cooking times, especially hot smoked fish, which already is cooked.

The exception to this is certain baked recipes, such as fishcakes and fish pot pies, which usually contain enough moisture to prevent the fish from getting tough.

Grocers generally sell a wide variety of both types of smoked fish. Salmon, for example, can be found with different seasonings and cuts, including thinly sliced, thick slabs and whole sides. Smoked salmon is particularly good for making dips and pates. When doing so, look for cheaper packages labeled "trimmings," which are small pieces. Thinly sliced salmon is delicious topped with poached eggs and fresh dill.

Hot smoked fish, such as trout and mackerel, are delicious flaked into salads or tossed with warm pasta, especially with a cream sauce.

For more ideas for using smoked fish, check out the Off the Beaten Aisle column over on Food Network: http://bit.ly/RsyCqE

Hot smoked fish is more lightly brined, then smoked for a shorter time at a higher temperature (as high as 170 degrees), effectively cooking the fish. Hot smoking produces a fish with a more assertive smoky flavor and a meatier texture (though the lighter brine means it isn't as salty).

Both varieties often are seasoned, sometimes with just a bit of sugar, but also with black pepper, dill or other herbs.

As long as you keep in mind the differences in saltiness and smokiness, hot and cold smoked fish often can be used interchangeably in recipes. Generally, neither variety

Phillips is the executive director of the Farm Service Agency's Twin Falls County office and a member of the Kimberly Church of the Nazarene. While meeting with the owners of Rock Ridge Dairy, Phillips overheard them talking about the cornfield. He asked if members of the Kimberly church could come out and glean the field.

The corn will be donated to the soup kitchen at St. Edward's Catholic Church in Twin Falls, the Shoshone Food Bank and The Salvation Army, in addition to elderly church members and families. The gleaned vegetables will also supplement meals made at the church every Wednesday night for the price of $1; the meals use fresh produce from a garden co-sponsored by the U.S. Department of Agriculture and the Kimberly Church of the Nazarene through a program called the "People's Garden Initiative." Phillips is the coordinator for the Kimberly garden and four other People's Gardens statewide. According to Feeding America, more than 2 million rural households experience food insecurity, which means they don't have dependable access to enough food to sustain a healthy life. And almost 42 million Americans are food insecure.

"Gleaning ... is a blessing," Phillips said.

Phillips said he is not aware of a network of gleaners or gleaning opportunities in the Magic Valley but said there is plenty of opportunity for it. Because of his job with the FSA, he keeps his ears open for gleaning prospects.

But Phillips theorized that two reasons might be at the root of few gleaning opportunities: Gleaners have to be ready to pick immediately or be "Johnny-on-the-spot" as Phillips put it, and owners may be reluctant to take on the liability of people in their fields.

"I think we are missing out on something," he said.

The USDA used to run a gleaning hotline that gave people information on where they could volunteer to glean, but now 1-800-GLEAN-IT directs callers to the National Hunger Hotline because more people were calling to find out where they could get food rather than volunteer to glean.

The Gleaning Network, operated by the Society of St. Andrew, a national ministry, coordinates volunteers, growers and distribution agencies in 20 states. In 2012, 16.9 million pounds of food was gleaned, according to the Society of St. Andrew website. Idaho is listed as one of the non-gleaning states and is not part of the network, but the Gleaning Network still donates food to all the 48 contiguous states. Since its inception in 1979, it has sent 191,304 pounds of food to Idaho.

close to overripe.

Masarik, who used to work at Peaceful Belly for four years, said owners Clay and Josie Erskine always donated food, but the gleaning network makes the donations more consistent.

In one day gleaners picked 200 watermelons from the 60-acre farm. Masarik said on a farm that size you have to plant extra just in case some crops don't make it.

"It's good to glean so that younger veggies can grow ... (and) to have people come in instead of wasting it," Masarik said. "It feels good to help the Idaho Food Bank."

The event will give people a chance to become familiar with her wines, Snyder said, or for those who already are, to try them in a different setting. Tarbet said the annual event is a good thing for the community for at least a few reasons. "It serves as a fundraiser, helps promote the agricultural aspect of our economy and has an education component," he said. "It lets people know what is grown and produced here locally, some of the best products we have in the Magic Valley." All food producers in the event are from Magic Valley, he said. Finally, a Zucchini Recipe to Get Excited About

The trouble with late summer's bounty of zucchini isn't in the volume of the vegetable itself. Rather, it is in the lack of creative recipes for using it.

Because, frankly, what the world most certainly does not need are more recipes for zucchini muffins and breads and casseroles. The website AllRecipes.com, for example, lists some 244 recipes for zucchini bread alone. In fact, there are so many that users of the site have stopped even trying to come up with creative names for the recipes, instead resorting to Roman numerals. A slice of Zucchini Bread VI, anyone? So it has been a long time since I have been impressed by a zucchini recipe. Using a vegetable peeler to turn it into ribbons for a salad is benign. Shredding it into strands for "pasta" is creative, if not particularly delicious. And I have no interest in vet another variant of stuffing and baking them, no matter how much bacon, sausage and cheese you jam in there.

But recently I was impressed by, yes ... a zucchini recipe. I no longer thought this was possible.

A generous reader sympathetic to my ongoing battle to get my 8-year-old son to embrace more vegetables directed me to a recipe for zucchini hummus on blogger Kait Capone's site, LaCucinadiKait.com. The recipe is precisely as it sounds - a hummus-like spread made from ground zucchini. The name doesn't do it justice, hence I tried it somewhat reluctantly. As is my wont, I modified the recipe the first time I tried it. The recipe calls for pureeing raw zucchini, which held little appeal for me. So I grilled it first. I also upped the garlic, and added smoked paprika and salt. The result was insanely good.

A few more modifications in round two and I had something I'd long thought impossible – an amazingly delicious, creative and even healthy way to use zucchini.

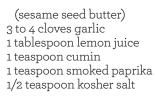

What to do with it? It certainly would make a fine sandwich spread or dip for vegetables, crackers or hunks of pita bread. I dumped some over a salad of baby greens and roasted vegetables and it was fantastic.

If you don't want to crank up the grill, you also could pop the zucchini under the broiler for a few minutes. Coat the zucchini lightly with cooking spray or olive oil, then set on the oven's lowest rack. Broil just until very lightly browned and starting to get tender.

Grilled Zucchini Hummus

I prefer roasted (also called toasted) tahini, but it can be hard to find. The recipe is still great with regular tahini. Start to finish: 20 minutes. Makes about 2 1/2 cups.

1 large zucchini (about 1 pound) 1/4 cup roasted tahini

Heat a grill to high. Use an oil-soaked paper towel held with tongs to lightly oil the grill grates. Trim the ends from the zucchini, then slice it in half lengthwise. If the seeds are large and watery, use a melon baller or small spoon to scrape out and discard most of the seeds from the center of each half. It's not critical to get them all. If the inside of the zucchini appears firm and the seeds small, you don't need to scrape them out. Place the zucchini on the grill, cut side up, then reduce heat to low. Cook for 10 minutes, or until just lightly browned and starting to get tender. Set aside to cool.

When the zucchini has cooled enough to handle, place it in a food processor. Add the tahini, garlic, lemon juice, cumin, smoked paprika and salt. Process for 1 minute, or until very smooth.

The hummus can be served immediately, or chilled. The hummus will thicken slightly as it chills. The Secret to Great Grilling Is Indirect Heat

BY ELIZABETH KARMEL

For The Associated Press

If you want to master the art of grilling, you need to accept the idea that more heat isn't necessarily better heat.

In other words, just because your grill is able to crank out 60,000 BTUs doesn't mean you should let it. That's because the key to great grilling actually isn't intense heat, but something far more nuanced called indirect heat. In fact, when I'm grilling, I use indirect heat at least 80 percent of the time.

The beauty of indirect heat is that it allows the heat to surround the food from all sides. The result is that the food almost cooks itself. As long as you keep the heat even and consistent, you won't need to rotate the food for it to cook evenly.

A common mistake when cooking with indirect heat is to turn off one side of the grill and just set the food there. But that's not ideal, as the food closest to the lit burner gets most of the heat. It's better to have the heat come from both sides, a method that involves creating a ring of heat around the food.

But to master indirect heat, you first need to understand how it differs from direct heat.

Direct heat (also called direct grilling) involves placing food directly over the heat source. This is the same method as when you broil in the oven, except the heat source is under rather than over the food.

Indirect heat (also called indirect grilling) means there is no heat source under the food. The burners are lit on either side of the grill and the food is placed in the center. The effect is similar to roasting or baking in the oven.

The benefit of indirect grilling is that it is a slower and more gentle method, enabling you to cook thicker cuts of meat (or those that toughen or dry out quickly) without burning the exterior. My general rule of thumb is that if the food takes less than 20 minutes to cook, use the direct method. Anything longer than that and indirect heat is your best bet.

It's also possible to use both methods. This involves searing the meat initially over direct heat, then finishing it over indirect. This technique works well for everything from chops and steaks to whole tenderloins and even slices of denser vegetables, such as sweet potatoes and fennel.

This combo method is a time-honored and well-respected tradition. It's also the grill version of the way most restaurants chefs cook almost everything - searing on the stovetop, then finishing in the oven.

How you use direct and indirect heat depends on the type of grill you have. So here are some tips for each.

Direct Heat on a Gas Grill

Turn all the burners on high as you normally would to heat the grill. When ready to cook, reduce the heat by turning all the burners to medium. This should result in a temperature of about 450 degrees. Place the food directly on clean cooking grates and grill as the recipe directs.

Indirect Heat on a Gas Grill

Setting a gas grill for indirect cooking is as simple as turning it on and off. Once the grill has been heated with all burners on high, simply turn off the burner or burners in the center of the grill and reduce the other burners to medium or medium-low. The food should be placed above the burner or burners that have been turned off.

If your grill has two burners, chances are that the burners are on the perimeter of the grill and the center of the cooking grate is already set up for indirect cooking. A three-burner grill is the easiest to set; you turn the center burner off and reduce the heat on the other two. Set a four-burner grill by turning both the center burners off and leaving the two outer burners on medium-high heat.

Since there are so many different models of gas grills, it is best to refer to the manufacturer's instructions. Most new gas grills are designed to be used for both direct and indirect cooking.

Direct Heat on a Charcoal Grill

Light 50 to 60 charcoal briquettes in either a chimney starter or in a pyramid mound on the charcoal grate. Once the briquettes are covered with a white-gray ash, spread the briquettes in a single layer across the entire charcoal grate.

Indirect Heat on a Charcoal Grill

Once the briquettes are covered with a whitegray ash, rake half of the briquettes to each side of the charcoal grate, leaving space in the center between them. Place a disposable foil drip pan between the two piles of with a white-gray ash when you add them.

Beer Can Chicken

When preparing this recipe, I use a porcelain chicken "sitter" because it stabilizes the chicken as it grills. Some kitchenware companies also sell metal and wire versions. They all serve the same purpose – an easy and stable way to prop a whole chicken upright and over a can or container of beer during cooking. You can do it without a sitter, but take care to position the chicken steadily during grilling. Start to finish: 1 1/2 hours. Servings: 4.

4- to 5-pound whole chicken, patted dry Olive oil

2 tablespoons favorite dry rub for meat (or a blend of kosher salt and ground black pepper), divided 12-ounce can beer

Heat the grill to high, then prepare it for cooking over indirect heat (as described above depending on the style of grill you have). Coat the chicken lightly with oil, then season it inside and out with 1 tablespoon of the dry rub. Set aside.

Open the beer can and pour out about 1?4 cup of the beer. Make an extra hole in the top of the can using a church key-style can opener. Sprinkle the remaining tablespoon of the dry rub inside the beer can. Place the beer can in the center of the cooking grate (or in the sitter, according to product directions) over indirect medium heat. Sit the chicken on top of the beer can. The chicken will appear to be sitting on the grate.

Cover the grill and cook the chicken for 1 to $1 \frac{1}{2}$ hours, or until the breast area reaches 165 degrees and the thighs reach 180 degrees. Use tongs to carefully transfer the chicken, lifting it off the beer can, to a platter. Let it rest for 10 minutes before carving.

Mix Things Up and Cool Down with a Wine Cocktail

BY MICHELLE LOCKE

For The Associated Press

Remember wine coolers? Turns out they're not actually all that cool these days.

But don't put that cork back in the bottle just yet. Why not mix up a few wine cocktails, which – unlike their commercial predecessors - are quite sophisticated and of-the-moment.

"Wine-based cocktails are something that I think have really taken off," says Amy Currens, wine director at Prospect, a restaurant serving contemporary American cuisine in San Francisco's South of Market neighborhood.

Wine cocktails are a year-round drink, but they're especially good for summer, adding a fun appropriately enough the Prospector, consists of blended scotch, Benedictine, bitters and Madeira, the fortified wine from Portugal. "Those red fruits that come out through the Madeira would complement roasted meat," says Currens. "I can see a good brat and a Prospector."

A classic wine cocktail is the Americano, which is part vermouth and part Campari, a liqueur. Another standby is the Bellini, a mix of sparkling wine, usually Italian prosecco, and peach puree. And in general, sparkling wine is an easy way to incorporate wine into a cocktail, providing fizz and a boost of flavor.

Port and sherry make good additions to a cocktail, as does moscato, which is often fruity and little fizzy. Sonoma County-based Redtree Wine has come up with some cocktail recipes for its Redtree moscato wine including Bumble & Bubbles, made of 3 ounces of prosecco, 1 ounce moscato, and two dashes of orange bitters.

It's probably not surprising that wine has popped up as a cocktail ingredient given the trend of inventive drinks recipes that focus on using fresh and unusual ingredients.

The advantage of wine as an ingredient "really boils down to two main things," says Bluestem Brasserie owner Adam Jed. "First of all, wine adds a really unique flavor profile to cocktails. The other is that wine, especially sparkling wine or Champagne, adds an inherent lightness that soda water, syrups and other ingredients do not. It's that unique texture that really makes wine cocktails stand out from the crowd."

Give Apples Healthy, Delicious Brulee Treatment

BY SARA MOULTON For The Associated Press

One of the great delights of autumn is the abundance of fresh, ripe, local and delicious apples. Of course, they're available year-round these days, but they're at their best right now, not least because there are more varieties to choose from in the fall, especially if you take advantage of your neighborhood farmers market or visit one of those pick-your-own orchards.

Everyone in my family has their favorite. My daughter Ruthie loves Ginger Gold. My son Sam is a fan of Honey Crisp. And the husband prefers a Granny Smith. Me, I go with Golden Delicious. I know, not a very exotic choice. Golden Delicious is second only to Red Delicious as the most popular kind of apple. All I can say is that it's a winner for a reason. When the Golden Delicious is baked, its flavor intensifies and becomes honey-like.

Then again, I've never met an apple I didn't like. They all have their strong points. Some, like the Honey Crisp, are perfect right off the tree juicy, with a snappy texture. Others don't really begin to shine until they are cooked. Granny Smith and Rome apples hold their shape perfectly in the oven, while Macintosh fall completely apart (which, happily, make them great candidates for applesauce).

Which kind of apple should you use for my apple cranberry brulee? In this recipe it doesn't matter. Just pick the one or two kinds you like best.

Preparing this recipe is surprisingly easy. I peel the apples, halve them by cutting down through the stem end, remove the core with a melon baller (a good little trick to remember), then thinly slice them to speed up the baking time. Baking the apples, rather than sauteing them, allows me to avoid adding any extra fat (aside from the egg yolk).

I flavor the apples with maple syrup and brandy. I recommend Grade B maple syrup, if you can find it. It is harvested at the end of the season and is much darker in color than Grade A. It also is more flavorful and, usually, cheaper. I don't just use Grade B in baking, I put it on everything. As for the brandy, if you want to lose it, feel free. This dish is plenty tasty without it.

This treat is a cross between a baked pancake, a souffle and a creme brulee. It has an eggy topping, reminiscent of a pancake, but the egg white in the topping has been beaten to soft peaks, which makes it lighter and airier. In the end, it is sprinkled with sieved brown sugar and popped back in the oven until it gets a dark brown crust that tastes like the burnt sugar on the famous custard. The finished product embodies the best of three great recipes, though nothing outshines the apples.

Apple Cranberry Brulee

Start to finish: 1 hour 10 minutes (30 minutes active). Servings: 6.

- 2 medium apples (about 1 pound), peeled, cored, quartered and thinly
- sliced 1/3 cup dried cranberries, cherries or raisins
- 5 tablespoons maple syrup (preferably Grade B),
- divided 3 tablespoons brandy, bourbon or rum, divided
- (optional)
- 1 large egg yolk
- 1 tablespoon cornstarch 1/2 teaspoon vanilla

extract Pinch table salt

- 2 large egg whites, room
- temperature
- 2 tablespoons dark brown sugar

Heat the oven to 450 degrees.

In a 9-inch round shallow baking dish, combine the apples, cranberries, 2 tablespoons of the maple syrup and 2 tablespoons of the brandy, if using. Cover the baking dish with foil and bake in the middle of the oven for 35 to 40 minutes, or until a paring knife goes through the apples very easily. Remove the apples from the oven and increase the oven heat to 500 degrees. While the apples are baking, in a medium bowl, whisk together the egg yolk, remaining 3 tablespoons maple syrup, remaining tablespoon of brandy, the cornstarch, vanilla and salt. Set aside. Once the apples are tender, in another medium bowl, beat the egg whites until they form soft peaks. Stir one half of the whites into the yolk mixture, then gently but thoroughly fold in the remaining whites. Spread the mixture evenly over the top of the apples. Place the brown sugar in a mesh sieve. Hold the sieve above the egg topping and press the sugar through it to evenly sprinkle it over the topping. Bake the dessert in the top third of the oven until nicely browned, about 2 minutes. Serve right away. Spartans Get Back on Track, Beat Burley

BY RYAN HOWE rhowe@magicvalley.com

RUPERT • Much more was riding on Tuesday's Minico-Burley boys soccer game than just the token rivalry.

Coming in, both teams were looking to snap losing streaks and get back on track in Great Basin Conference play with the District IV tournament looming in two weeks.

"We desperately needed to win it," said Minico coach Armando Tapia.

And the Spartans played like it, scoring a goal in each half to defeat Burley 2-0.

"We wanted it bad," said Minico sophomore Eric Tapia. "We needed to end the streak and we wanted to get back at Burley for when they beat us."

The Spartans (4-6-1, 3-4-0 Great Basin, 9 pts.) broke a four-game losing skid, while the Bobcats (2-7-2, 1-4-2, 5 pts.) are now winless in their last six outings and have lost four in a row. Burley hasn't won since a 3-1 victory at home against Minico on Aug. 30.

nicating better and we're trusting each other to take shots."

Minico struck first on Eric Tapia's goal.

"We tried popping it over and the defenders headed it out. Luckily I got it, pushed it to the side and took a shot," said Eric Tapia.

Senior Hector Cabrera netted Minico's other goal in the second half after Burley went down two players due to red cards.

"Minico came ready to play and we didn't," said Burley coach Wes Nyblade.

Each team has three conference games and one nonleague game remaining on its regular season schedule. Minico trips to Canyon Ridge and Burley hosts Twin Falls on Thursday.

"I think we're ready for districts, it's just that my team needs to trust themselves," said Armando Tapia. "I think they're doing better every game, it's just a matter of them trust-

That's More Like It: Bulldogs Sweep Gooding

BY NICK RULAND

KIMBERLY • The Kimberly volleyball team, dethroned of the District IV crown by Buhl last season and three years removed from playing for a Class 3A title, had spent much of the early 2012 season searching for their old selves.

Early in their match Tuesday against Gooding, the Bulldogs struggled to put away the inexperienced and experimenting Senators, with missed opportunities leading to prolonged rallies. A 25-19 first-set win lacked the verve of a contending team.

It was hard to pinpoint the exact moment things changed, perhaps a heavyhanded kill from captain Katy Robinson or a diving dig from the perpetually floor-burned defensive specialist Sydney Klemann, but the Bulldogs found something in the next two sets, sweeping Gooding 25-19, 25-11, 25-10.

"That's how it's done," said Bulldogs coach Lawrence Pfefferle. "We served really well."

While Kimberly had just four aces, three from right-side hitter Heidi Funk, they had the Senators on their heels and reeling much of the final two games.

"We definitely played harder because all of our other conference matches have gone to five games," Robinson said. "Our serves were great tonight. We knew where to place the ball and just played a lot smarter. When you put pressure on the other team it really helps because it takes the pressure off of us."

Murtaugh, Hansen Discuss Football Co-op

BY DAVID BASHORE

dbashore@magicvalley.com

MURTAUGH • There's no reason for panic, Murtaugh athletic director Clete Edmunson said Tuesday, but longtime rivals Murtaugh and Hansen have discussed contingency plans in case Murtaugh's recent struggles with football numbers return in the future.

That, as well as a potential co-op agreement in soccer with Kimberly, was on Monday's discussion agenda at the Hansen school board meeting. Kimberly does not presently field a soccer program, but a groundswell of support for adding the sport has surfaced in recent years. The Red Devils suffered from dangerously low numbers less than a decade ago, nearly causing the football program to shut down. Murtaugh has sufficient football numbers for at least the next four years, Edmunson said, adding that the discussions were exploratory in nature and weren't concrete.

"We've been in discussions with them for that situation, so if it ever develops, we want to try and be on top of that if it ever happens," Edmunson said. "We don't want to alarm anybody but ... we need to tell them that if this ever happened, this is our Plan A and Plan B. That's the responsible thing to do."

Dietrich Unanimous No. 1 in 1A-II Media Poll

BY DAVID BASHORE

TWIN FALLS • Dietrich left no doubt in voters' minds that it is presently the best team in the Class 1A-II ranks.

After handling Carey at home 30-14 on Friday, the Blue Devils are a unanimous No. 1 in the classification's most recent media poll, released Tuesday.

Dietrich received all 10 first-place votes to put some distance on Lighthouse Christian, which was voted No. 2 on all 10 ballots. Carey slipped a spot to fourth.

In the 1A-I poll, Hagerman remained atop the standings, picking up eight of 10 first-place votes. The Pirates, who share the state's longest active win streak with Blackfoot, were second on the other two ballots, totaling 48 points to stay ahead of Kamiah. Declo moved up a spot to No. 2 in the 2A poll following Grangeville's upset loss at McCall-Donnelly last Friday. The Hornets got one first-place vote, while Firth picked up eight of the other nine to move to No. 1.

Gooding remained at No. 3 in the poll, grabbing 25 points to stay behind Fruitland and Shelley.

In the 4A poll, Minico crept in at No. 5 despite only a narrow win over Burley.

49ers Take Top Spot in AP Pro32 Power Rankings

ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK • An efficient Alex Smith and a rock-solid defense have the San Francisco 49ers on top of the AP Pro32 power rankings.

Smith threw for 226 yards and two touchdowns and the 49ers shut down the explosive Lions in a 27-19 win over the weekend, giving San Francisco a second win over a playoff team from last season. The 2-0 Niners moved up from second in the latest AP Pro32 regularseason poll released Tuesday, receiving 11 of the 12 first-place votes and 383 points from the media panel who regularly cover the NFL.

Houston advanced two spots to second with one first-place vote and 360 points, eight points ahead of Green Bay, which started the season on top. Atlanta is fourth, followed by Baltimore and Philadelphia, up six places after a second straight one-point win.

"There isn't much not to like about the 49ers," voter Dan Pompei of the Chicago Tribune said in putting the 49ers first for the second week in a row. "At this point, the only question is who is No.2?"

That would be the Texans, winners in each of their games by 20 points.

"The Texans have the NFL's top defense and a 2-0 record to show for it," reasoned Rick Gosselin of the Dallas Morning News, the only voter with Houston ahead of San Francisco.

Everyone else went with the 49ers, who opened the season with a big win at Green Bay before dominating the Lions at home.

"Almost everyone has holes, but you have to look hard to find any with this team," commented Clark Judge of CBSSports.com "... and, please, could we stop the Alex Smith as 'game manager' talk? It's not only old; it's inaccurate."

New England, meanwhile, fell from the top spot to seventh following a surprising 20-18 loss at home to Arizona.

"Week 2 mulligan," ES-PN's Chris Berman called it.

San Diego made the biggest jump, up eight spots to ninth.

"Norv has this team believing," said Rich Gannon of CBS Sports/SiriusXM NFL Radio. "More team speed on D doesn't hurt either."

A pair of winless teams took the biggest tumbles -Kansas City dropped 10 spots to No. 31 and New Orleans eight places to 22nd after entering the season ninth.

"Think the Saints don't miss suspended head coach Sean Payton?" asked Newsday's Bob Glauber. "Perhaps an 0-2 start, something they'd avoided since 2007, will convince."

How to Beat 'Bama: Hit, Think, Pray

ASSOCIATED PRESS

They say no team is unbeat able. They apparently haven't seen Alabama play recently.

The top-ranked Crimson Tide has been startlingly good this season, outscoring Michigan, Western Kentucky and Arkansas 128-14. Each of Alabama's games has essentially been over at halftime.

And, oh by the way, did we mention Alabama is the defending national champion?

So what's the game plan? Where do you start looking for a way to beat the Tide?

"You've got to say a little prayer the night before," Western Kentucky coach Willie Taggart said. Uh-oh.

Taggart likes to kid. Before his Hilltoppers played Alabama he joked the Tide was the next NFL expansion team.

If he found a weakness on the game tape, he wouldn't share it Monday, but he did say, as you might expect, the No. 1 priority when beating Alabama is to not beat yourself. Limit turnovers, penalties and mistakes.

Former Arkansas and

Mississippi coach Houston Nutt said: "You've got to play error-free football."

The same can be said about beating any very talented team: LSU, Florida State, Oregon, etc. With Alabama, the margin for error is thinner.

Former NFL quarterback Gary Danielson, who has been the lead analyst for CBS' Southeastern Conference coverage for seven years, uses a hockey analogy to describe what it's like to play against Alabama.

"If you're going to go against Alabama you have to win the one-one battles against the boards," he said. "It's a rough, tough game. And there's 11 battles going on on the field right now and you can't get pushed around on the boards."

Brewers' Surge Continues

ASSOCIATED PRESS

PITTSBURGH • Yovani Gallardo gave up just two hits over 6 2-3 innings and the surging Milwaukee Brewers dropped the weary Pittsburgh Pirates 6-0 on Tuesday night.

Gallardo (16-8) struck out six and walked four to win his eighth straight decision as Milwaukee moved in front of fading Pittsburgh in the jumbled National League wildcard race. The teams entered the day $2^{1/2}$ games back of the Cardinals, who played Houston later.

Ryan Braun had two hits, drove in a run and stole three bases for the Brewers, who have won six of seven. Milwaukee's seven stolen bases were the most by the franchise since it moved to the National League in 1998. Carlos Gomez and Jonathan Lucroy had three hits apiece for the Brewers.

A.J. Burnett (15-8) gave up two runs in six innings but couldn't stop Pittsburgh's late season swoon. The Pirates are 4-12 this month.

MARLINS 4, BRAVES 3, 10 INNINGS

MIAMI – Jose Reyes hit a two-out RBI single in the 10th inning, and Miami overcame an awful ninth inning to snap Atlanta's four-game winning streak.

With one out in the 10th, pinch-hitter Rob Brantly was walked by Cory Gearrin (0-1), and Gorkys Hernandez was hit by a pitch. Following a strikeout, Reyes hit a blooper that fell in front of a diving Jason Heyward in right field, and Brantly scored without a play.

Atlanta lost to Miami for only the fourth time in 14 meetings.

REDS 3, CUBS 1

CHICAGO • Homer Bailey pitched effectively into the eighth inning, Ryan Hanigan hit a three-run double and Cincinnati moved closer to the NL Central title.

The Reds' Dusty Baker managed his 3,000th major league game, and Cincinnati reduced its magic number to four over the Cardinals to clinch the division.

Bailey (12-9) took a two-hit shutout into the eighth before Darwin Barney had his second single of the night and pinch-hitter Bryan LaHair hit an RBI double to make it 3-1. Sean Marshall then came in and hit pinch-hitter Dave Sappelt before getting a strikeout and grounder to end the threat.

CARDINALS 4, ASTROS 1

ST. LOUIS • Kyle Lohse threw seven scoreless innings for his 15th victory and contributed an RBI double as the St. Louis Cardinals stayed in front for the second NL wild card.

Fernando Abad (0-5) had a career-best six strikeouts in the Astros' 100th loss. They're 8-8 this month under interim manager Tony DeFrancesco and need nine wins in the final 14 games to avoid topping last season's franchiserecord 106 losses.

DETROIT • Miguel Cabrera homered twice, including an eighth-inning grand slam, and the Detroit Tigers had no trouble overcoming an early injury to right-hander Max Scherzer.

Cabrera matched a career high with six RBIs and now has 40 homers on the season - also a career best. Prince Fielder and Jhonny Peralta added home runs for the Tigers, who were three games behind the first-place Chicago White Sox in the AL Central coming into the night.

WHITE SOX 3, ROYALS 2

KANSAS CITY, Mo. • Gavin Floyd pitched seven crisp innings, Alex Rios hit a tiebreaking homer in the seventh and the Chicago White Sox beat the Kansas City Royals for their fifth consecutive win.

Alejandro De Aza and Gordon Beckham also went deep for AL Central-leading Chicago, which maintained a three-game advantage over Detroit and improved to 6-10 against the Royals. Chicago had lost seven of eight against Kansas City. Floyd (10-10), who was making his second start since coming off the disabled with an elbow flexor strain, gave up two runs in the first inning and nothing after that. He allowed five hits, walked one and struck out three, throwing 52 strikes in 78 pitches.

TWINS 6, INDIANS 5, 12 INNINGS

CLEVELAND • Darin Mastroianni scored the go-ahead run from second base on an infield hit in a two-run 12th inning and the Minnesota Twins tied the Indians for fourth place in the AL Central.

Mastroianni singled with two outs and stole second off Scott Maine (1-1), the team-record 10th pitcher used by Cleveland. Alexi Casilla then poked a ball between first and second that second baseman Jason Kipnis fielded in short right. But Casilla was safe when first baseman Matt LaPorta fielded Kipnis' throw, but was not on the bag. La-Porta held the ball before reacting too late to throw out Mastroianni at home.

RED SOX 7, RAYS 5

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. • Felix Doubront limited Tampa Bay's sputtering offense to one hit over six innings and the Boston Red Sox dealt another blow to the Rays' fading playoff hopes on Tuesday.

Jacoby Ellsbury, Dustin Pedroia, James Loney, Jarrod Saltalamacchia and Ryan Lavarnway drove in runs for the Red Sox, who beat their AL East rivals for the second straight night, extending Tampa Bay's losing streak to four games and dropping the third-place Rays six games behind the division-leading New York Yankees. Doubront (11-9) settled down after a shaky third inning when he loaded the bases on three walks before giving up a tworun single to Ben Zobrist and Evan Longoria's sacrifice fly.

NFL Films President Steve Sabol Dies at 69

ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK • With the eye of an art history major, Steve Sabol filmed the NFL as a ballet and blockbuster movie all in one.

Half of the father-son team that revolutionized sports broadcasting, the NFL Films president died Tuesday of brain cancer at age 69 in Moorestown, N.J. He leaves behind a league bigger than ever, its fans enthralled by the plot twists and characters he so deftly chronicled.

"Steve Sabol was the creative genius behind the remarkable work of NFL Films," NFL Commissioner Roger Goodell said in a statement from the league confirming Sabol's death. "Steve's passion for football was matched by his incredible talent and energy. Steve's legacy will be part of the NFL forever. He was a major contributor to the success of the NFL, a man who changed the way we look at football and sports, and a great friend." Sabol was diagnosed with a tumor on the left side of his brain after being hospitalized for a seizure in March 2011.

When Ed Sabol founded NFL Films, his son was there working beside him as a cinematographer right from the start in 1964. They introduced a series of innovations taken for granted today, from super slow-motion replays to blooper reels to sticking microphones on coaches and players. And they hired the "Voice of God," John Facenda, to read lyrical descriptions in solemn tones.

The advent of senior events at European and world championship levels brought many names from the past back into the playing arena. For instance, Joe MacHale first represented Ireland at the 1953 European Championships, held in Helsinki. Fifty years later, he was again in action under the Irish flag, in Salsamaggiore, Italy. His handling of today's contract showed that his skills remained intact.

As South, MacHale reached four spades after West had suggested he held most of the outstanding high cards. By chance South had managed to avoid playing four hearts, which would have been hopeless on a club lead. (Perhaps that is what is meant by the luck of the Irish.)

West led the club king against four spades, ducked by declarer. Next came ace and another diamond. On the established queen and jack, declarer did not discard his losing club, but two hearts from hand. He had appreciated that the way home lay in making two heart tricks, but without first losing two tricks in the suit. The bidding made West the likely candidate to hold the outstanding honors.

MacHale now played ace and another heart, endplaying West. West's best exit is a trump, but if he leads the nine, declarer covers, thus establishing two spade entries to dummy, one to ruff a heart, bringing down the king, and the second to cash the established jack for a club discard in hand. If instead West had played the spade five, it would have been covered by the eight to achieve a similar position.

SVRINGA ESTATES

Today is Wednesday, ex Sept. 19, the 263rd day of 2012. There are 103 days left opls, in the year.

Today's Highlight:

On Sept. 19, 1982, the smiley emoticon was invented as Carnegie Mellon University professor Scott E. Fahlman proposed punctuating humorously intended computer messages by employing a colon followed by a hyphen and a parenthesis as a horizontal "smiley face." :-)

TODAY IN HISTOR

On this date:

In 1777, the first Battle of Saratoga was fought during the Revolutionary War; although the British forces succeeded in driving out the American troops, the Americans prevailed in a second battle the following month.

In 1796, President George Washington's farewell address was published.

In 1881, the 20th president of the United States, James A. Garfield, died 21/2 months after being shot by Charles Guiteau; Chester Alan Arthur became president.

In 1934, Bruno Hauptmann was arrested in New York and charged with the kidnap-murder of Charles A. Lindbergh Jr.

In 1945, Nazi radio propagandist William Joyce, known as "Lord Haw-Haw," was convicted of treason and sentenced to death by a British court.

In 1957, the United States conducted its first contained underground nuclear test, code-named "Rainier," in the Nevada desert.

In 1959, Soviet leader Nikita Khrushchev, visiting Los Angeles, reacted angrily upon being told that, for security reasons, he wouldn't get to visit Disneyland.

In 1960, Cuban leader Fidel Castro, in New York to visit the United Nations, angrily checked out of the Shelburne Hotel in a dispute with the management; Castro ended up staying at the Hotel Theresa in Harlem.

In 1961, Barney and Betty Hill, a New Hampshire couple driving home from vacation, experienced what they later claimed under hypnosis was a short-term abduction by extraterrestrials.

In 1962, the Western TV series "The Virginian" debuted on NBC.

In 1970, the situation comedy "The Mary Tyler Moore Show" debuted on CBS-TV.

Times News

DEAR ABBY: My daughter "Anissa" is 3 and has an older cousin, "Billy," on my fiance's side who is 5. Billy has been caught on several occasions showing his "manhood" to little girls, and we recently found out he took Anissa into a pop-up tent and showed her as well. This was not on my watch, because I don't feel comfortable leaving them alone together.

After I learned about the incident, I was told that Billv had done this with another cousin and told her it was a "secret" and not to tell.

Abby, as far as I know, Billy was spoken to at great length and reprimanded after the first few occurrences, but he continues to do this, it seems, at every opportunity he gets.

Is this normal behavior for boys? I think the parents are burying their heads in the sand. They get defensive when the subject is brought up. Personally, all I can do is keep Anissa within arm's reach when Billy is around. What do you think?

- NOT ON MY WATCH DEAR NOT: I think that's intelligent. Although children are naturally curious when they learn there's a difference between boys and girls (hence the genesis of playing "doctor"), Billy appears to be overly preoccupied. Because he is telling the girls to keep what he's doing a secret, he knows he is doing something wrong. Repeated naughty actions can be corrected only if there are consequences for them, and it appears a lengthy talking-to and a reprimand haven't gotten through to the child.

DEAR ABBY: I need your assistance resolving an awkward situation. I have noticed other women experiencing "wardrobe malfunctions." In each instance, they were otherwise tastefully dressed but seemingly unaware of the sheerness of their clothing. For example, one was wearing white slacks through which the patterned fabric of her underwear could be seen clearly.

Is there a polite way to alert them of the problem, or is it better to say nothing? Most of these women were strangers, but I couldn't think of tactful wording even when it happened to a friend.

TOHELP DEAR JUST TRYING: If it's a friend, say, "Honey, I can see the pattern of your underwear through your slacks," and it will probably be appreciated. However, if it's a stranger, keep your comment to yourself because it probably won't be.

DEAR ABBY: My late partner and I had matching wedding rings, as we had a civil marriage. Since my partner's death, I have met someone else. We have become a couple and also want to have a civil same-sex marriage.

Do you think it would be wrong to use the same wedding rings I had with my first partner? I'm not sure how I feel about it and need some input.

- ALLEN IN FLORIDA DEAR ALLEN: Far more important than what I think about it is what your significant other thinks. Personally, I would "retire" the rings from your former marriage and start with new ones because it's a new relationship. While no rule of etiquette says there is anything wrong with using the old ones, this really isn't a question of etiquette.

Dear Abby is written by Abigail Van Buren, also known as Jeanne Phillips, and was founded by her mother, Pauline Phillips. Write Dear Abby at www.DearAbby.com or P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA 90069.

IF SEPTEMBER 19 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Have your fun in the sun or spend vacation time vacationing during the next six to eight weeks. You will want to stay on your toes in November and December when a tendency to be gullible or to indulge in fantasies could distract you from what is truly important. Friendships and organizations could bring you both joy and irritation in January, but as long as you don't neglect your duties or ignore the rules at work everything should turn out fine. Wait until April to start a new job, a new study or to make important commitments. During April, you will have ample help from friends and advisors as well as more opportunities to shine in business, career or financial activities.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Engage in a private adventure. You may be surprised to find you excel at activities you never dared to try before. An unexpected visitor might drop by without notice. Meet challenges with composure.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Utilize both inspiration and a realistic appraisal of situations in order to emerge at the top of the ladder. Ambitions are high, but street smarts are on the downturn, so evaluate issues before taking action.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A sincere attitude will win respect; your errors will be forgiven and quickly forgotten. Cultivate a forgiving, generous attitude for the best success. Admit to your faults and own up to your mistakes CANCER (June 21-July 22): Relationships don't operate on a timetable. A partner may require a firm commitment before you are ready. Take your time; if the other party can't accept hesitation, then the answer is clear.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Dream a little dream. You could be forced into an adversarial relationship for a short period of time. but that might inspire you to dream of bigger and better things. Romance can pop your top tonight.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Friends might invite you to try something daring or encourage you to engage in hazardous hanky-panky. Concentrate on getting caught up with a backlog of small but essential tasks around the home.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Fixate on having faith in the future. Although your natural inclination is to feel a bit guilty if you get something for nothing, you don't need to be suspicious of good luck. Welcome offers or opportunities.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): The wisdom of the ages can be adapted to fit the trends of the present. When faced by temptation or decisions you might be smart to stop and think about what your grandparents would have done.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Soak up spiritual inspiration from gurus. Pay it forward and motivate others. You may be able to help someone with something they can't do for themselves. Help someone stay focused.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): True love and affection don't depend on cue cards. You might find that it takes more talking than kissing to maintain and nurture a key relationship. Talk over goals and ambitions with a partner.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Put your best foot forward. Network; make an attempt to impress everyone you meet and you'll be the trending topic of the day. Use your charms and intuitive social grace to your advantage.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Your love of romance may help offset the dreary necessities of life. You might be wise to focus on planning "some enchanted evening" when the world around you is concentrating on business as usual.
