Jury: Former Teacher Not Guilty

BY LAURIE WELCH
lwelch@magicvalley.com

BURLEY • Former Oakley High School teacher Alvin Andrew bowed his head and wiped tears from his eyes Friday after a Cassia County jury deemed him not guilty of three child sex abuse charges.

Andrew had been charged with two felony counts of lewd conduct with a child under 16 and one felony count of sexual abuse of a child under 16.

The verdict came less than two hours after the jury convened to deliberate on the case, where a former student accused Andrew of sexual misconduct in a classroom closet.

The verdict came after the jury heard Andrew testify on Friday.

In a shaky, soft voice, Andrew told the jury that he did not inappropriately touch the freshman student.

The student who accused Andrew testified earlier this week that she was a disruptive, troubled student who sought out Andrew because he was kind to her and counseled her on personal issues. She testified that in May 2007 she came into his classroom after school and helped him clean up a science lab. As they were putting things away in a closet, she said, he partially undressed her and touched her in a sexual manner.

As Andrew spoke, he scanned the jury members' faces, telling them how he became ill that year and had a brain tumor removed over Christmas vacation.

Andrew said the student had always been disruptive and hard to manage in class and when he returned from his absence, it was even worse.

It got so bad, he said, he dreaded going to bed at night because he'd just have to get up the next morning and go back to school.

Andrew said he didn't recall ever meeting with any students after school that semester.

"This is a simple case," said Doug Abenroth, deputy prosecutor for Cassia County.

The case, he said is all about whether the jury believes the alleged victim's testimony.

Jensen reminded the jury of the alleged victim's difficulty on the witness stand in revealing the details of what she alleged happened in the closet. Her testimony, the attorney said, was inconsistent throughout the case and not supported by the facts.

"This is every school teacher's nightmare, that a student would make an allegation like this," Jensen said.

Smoke Expected to Clear out this Weekend

BY ALISON GENE SMITH
alismith@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • Clearer skies are on the way to southern Idaho thanks to a weather system currently off the West Coast.

Joel Tannenholz, a meteorologist for the National Weather Service in Boise, said an upper-level low pressure system will move onshore tonight and will help get rid of some smoke at higher elevations. On Sunday, the system will be centered over Oregon, he said.

"By that time we're thinking most of that smoke is going to be mixed out and be taken out of the area, away from southern Idaho," he said.

Some precipitation is also possible in the low pressure system, which would help clear smoke out of the area.

Most of the smoke south-central Idaho residents woke up to Friday morning drained down from central Idaho, Tannenholz said. Some smoke is coming from wildfires in central Washington as well, he said.

Very little air circulation this time of year tends to trap smoke under temperature inversions, Tannenholz said.

Friday, a stage one air quality advisory was issued by the Idaho Department of

T.F. Man Sentenced to 7 to 20 Years for Rape

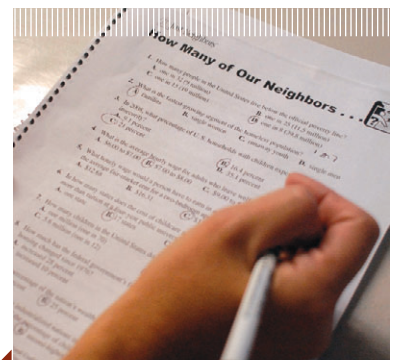

BY ALISON GENE SMITH
alismith@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • A Twin Falls man convicted by a jury of raping a 19-year-old Twin Falls woman in May 2011 will spend up to 20 years in prison for the crime, plus more for previous convictions.

On Friday, Twin Falls County 5th District Judge Randy Stoker sentenced Jason Jay Ward, 37, to seven to 20 years to run consecutively with sentences he's currently serving time on. Ward has previously been convicted of felony malicious injury to property and felony driving under the influence. He was sentenced to two to five years in prison for the DUI charge.

Twin Falls County Deputy Prosecutor Rosemary Emory asked Stoker to sentence Ward to 25 years to life in prison, arguing Ward has an utter lack of remorse and very little chance

Stocks Slip in Late Trading, After Long Fed Rally

NEW YORK (AP) • The market took a recess Friday from the Fed rally.

Stocks have been pushing higher for weeks, not because investors think the economy is healed but because of expectations, then confirmation, that the Federal Reserve would step in and try to fix it.

The Dow lost 17.46 points, or 0.1 percent, to 13,579.47. The Standard & Poor's 500 fell in the final minutes of trading, closing down a minuscule 0.11 point, or 0.01 percent, to 1,460.15. The other main index, the Nasdaq composite, rose four points, or 0.1 percent, to 3,179.96.

T.F. Man Hospitalized, Meridian Man Dies in Crash

TIMES-NEWS

RIRIE • A Twin Falls man was injured and the vehicle he drove caught on fire after another driver swerved into him Thursday evening, according to Idaho State Police.

Shaïne White, 37, of Meridian, died in the crash that sent Richard Hotchkiss, 56, of Twin Falls, to Eastern Idaho Regional Medical Center, according to ISP.

Hotchkiss was listed in fair condition at EIRMC Friday afternoon.

The crash happened about 12 miles east of Ririe on U.S. Highway 26 in eastern Idaho.

According to ISP, White was driving a 1993 Honda Accord west on U.S. 26. Hotchkiss was driving a 2008 Kenworth commercial vehicle east on the highway. White reportedly crossed the center line and Hotchkiss attempted to avoid the Accord, but it struck his vehicle despite his attempts.

The commercial vehicle caught fire as a result of the collision. Meanwhile, two people on a 2012 Harley Davidson motorcycle behind White — Burns

D. Leavitt, 45, and Burns M. Leavitt, 19, both of Pocatello — were struck by debris but were not injured.

White was not wearing a seatbelt and died at the scene, according to ISP. Hotchkiss was wearing a seatbelt.

ISP continues to investigate the crash.

14 Cars of Grain Train Derail in North-central Mont.

HELENA, Mont. (AP) • Fourteen loaded grain cars that were part of a west-bound BNSF Railway freight train derailed east of Havre, spilling some grain and blocking the tracks.

BNSF spokesman Gus Melonas says cars 26 through 40 of the 106 car train derailed at 5 a.m. Friday as the train pulled out of a siding about 15 miles east of Havre in Blaine County, blocking both the siding and the main line.

Some cars were on their sides and some remained upright. No one was injured. Melonas says the cause of the derailment is under investigation.

The train was en route from Breckenridge, Minn., to Tacoma, Wash. BNSF hoped to have the rail line repaired and reopened as early as midnight Friday.

NTSB Releases Reports in Nevada Amtrak-truck Crash

BY SANDRA CHEREB AND KEN RITTER
Associated Press

CARSON CITY, Nev. • A witness to the fatal crash involving a semi-truck and an Amtrak train in the Nevada desert said the truck driver seemed unaware of the approaching passenger train despite flashing lights and a lowered cross arm at the rural train crossing, according to documents released Friday by the National Transportation Safety Board.

Others interviewed said the driver of the 2008 Peterbilt big-rig described the vehicle as a “death trap,” and others still as a “lemon” or a “piece of junk.”

The accounts were included in thousands of pages of documents released by the federal agency detailing the factual findings in its investigation into the June 24, 2011, crash 70 miles east of Reno that killed six and injured dozens. The documents do not offer analysis or conclusions.

NTSB spokesman Peter Knudson said the federal board is expected to hold a hearing to review the investigative finding and make its conclusions and recommendations by the end of the year. No formal date has been set.

At least 15 lawsuits have been filed in the fatal wreck, including several that allege the railroad crossing gates either came down late or not at all.

The release of the NTSB materials showed progress toward board conclusions, said J.D. Sullivan, a northern Nevada lawyer who is representing plaintiffs in four death and injury lawsuits stemming from the crash.

“We’re trying to reconstruct what happened according to third-party accounts,” he told The Associated Press. “Obviously, eyewitness statements are the best evidence, in conjunction with any video from the train and the accident reconstruction from skid marks, crash debris and measurements taken by the NTSB and the Nevada Highway Patrol.”

The truck was owned by John Davis Trucking Co. of Battle Mountain. Its “black box” data recorder was too badly damaged to show the truck’s speed or the brake status at the time of the crash. According to tests done later on the steering mechanism, the truck drove straight into the train.

Investigators also said that while tire tread and the inflation levels were within limits, it had defective brakes.

According to the NTSB report, the witness who saw the crash — a truck driver with 54 years and over 5 million miles of experience — said he had been following the truck driven by Lawrence Valli, 43, for about 45 miles when they approached the railroad crossing on U.S. 95 north of Fallon. The name of the witness wasn’t in the report.

He told NTSB investigators that Valli “was driving like he didn’t see the train and lights that were flashing well before impact,” the report said. The witness said he was traveling about 65 mph one-quarter to one-half mile from the crossing when he noticed the train. When he saw that Valli wasn’t slowing, the man said he looked to see if the crossing mechanisms were working.

“He saw the lights flashing and saw the cross arm down,” the report said.

for rehabilitation. She also emphasized the impact of the rape on the victim.

"She was clearly physically hurt and those wounds heal faster than the emotional wounds, which may never completely heal," Emory said.

At one point Stoker questioned why prosecutors were asking for a longer sentence than when Ward initially pleaded guilty to the crime in December 2011. Ward later reversed his plea, citing bad advice from his former attorney.

"In December the defendant was taking responsibility for his actions," Emory replied. "He admitted he raped her. Now he's not."

If a rapist does not admit to their crimes, they are more likely to reoffend, she said.

Ward's attorney David Smethers explained to the court that alcohol is the singular reason behind all of Ward's troubles.

"Alcohol has been a huge factor in his life," Smethers said.

Although Ward maintains he's innocent of rape, Smethers said Ward accepts the jury's verdict and is completely willing to do whatever the court deems appropriate.

Smethers asked that Ward be sentenced to three to 15 years in prison and for the sentence to run at the same time as Ward's DUI sentence. Ward was unlikely to reoffend, he said, and has an extremely supportive family.

At the hearing, Ward spoke and thanked the court for hearing his case. He said he's been in jail for more than 500 days straight without getting in trouble and apologized for the things alcoholism caused him to do.

As he delivered his sentence Stoker pointed out Ward didn't apologize to the victim, who was present for the sentencing, for what she had to go through during the trial. The victim, he said, was obviously traumatized by the crime and reliving it at trial.

"I remember her sitting in this witness stand," Stoker said. "She wouldn't even look at you."

Stoker said while everyone has a right to go to trial, there are consequences for what happens at that trial.

"The judge gets to see the details of these offenses and see the impact on a victim from a live standpoint," he said.

Stoker did not impose a fine, but Ward must pay $2,082.54 in restitution to the victim.

Environmental Quality for south-central Idaho. Mandatory bans on open burning were issued for Twin Falls, Blaine, Camas, Jerome, Lincoln, Gooding, Cassia and Minidoka counties. Friday and today's air quality forecasts were moderate to unhealthy. When unhealthy air quality is reached, the DEQ cautions everyone should limit exertion whether indoors or outdoors.

The Idaho Department of Health and Welfare released a cautionary statement Friday afternoon telling the public to limit their exposure to wildfire smoke this weekend.

"It's getting more difficult to escape areas with poor air quality because it's so widespread, so it's important to be aware and adjust your level of exertion if you're outdoors this weekend," Jim Vannoy, health program manager for Health and Welfare, said in the statement.

Smoke can cause coughing and shortness of breath in everyone. But older adults, infants, children and people with medical conditions such as asthma, chronic obstructive pulmonary disease and heart disease are more affected.

People who use inhalers should keep them nearby, according to Health and Welfare. People who have uncontrolled coughing, wheezing or choking, or whose breathing difficulty continues once they are indoors should seek medical treatment.

Running an air conditioner, drinking plenty of water, avoiding heavy work and using a portable air filter with a HEPA filter can help reduce exposure to smoke, according to Health and Welfare.

Parents: Don't Panic Over West Nile

AMANDA SCHAFFER
Slate

This year's outbreak of West Nile virus appears to be the worst ever in the United States, according to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention. Most people infected with the virus have no symptoms. But a small percentage get a fever, or more seriously, brain inflammation — especially scary since there is no treatment. This summer brought heartbreaking cases, like a mother of four who died of West Nile on her youngest child's birthday.

In Dallas, officials sent planes to blanket the region with insecticide, since the virus is spread by mosquitoes. One infectious disease expert went so far as to say: "Anyone experiencing slight headaches, rashes and a fever should consult a physician for immediate attention." Parents' anxiety has naturally surged, with stories that urge them to "Protect kids against West Nile as they go back to school," featuring vigilant mothers like this one who says, "We spray them with mosquito spray constantly."

And yet the data show that West Nile is actually much less likely to cause severe disease in children than in older people, a pattern that has held since the disease first appeared in the United States more than a decade ago. The reasons for this aren't clear. But it does mean that parents can relax a little.

West Nile virus was first identified in Uganda in the 1930s. The disease made its American debut in 1999, in a spate of cases in New York City. That strain was closely related to one isolated the previous year from an Israeli goose, suggesting that West Nile in the United States might be of Middle Eastern origins. Birds often serve as a reservoir of the virus, which can also infect animals like horses, alligators and squirrels. After the New York City outbreak, West Nile began to spread across the country, causing unpredictable outbreaks from year to year. This year's major hotspot is Texas, where almost 40 percent of the reported cases have occurred. Overall, since 1999, tens of thousands of cases have been reported around the country, resulting in more than a thousand deaths.

Strikingly, though, the disease has not hit children as hard as other age groups. So far this year, more than 3,000 cases of West Nile have been reported to the CDC, with 134 deaths. But only around 4 percent of those cases have been in people under the age of 20. That's in contrast to about 17 percent in people ages 20 to 39, and about 41 percent in people 60 or older.

A small part of the age discrepancy may be explained by testing practices. West Nile, in its milder forms, can look like many other childhood illnesses, which also cause rashes, fever and malaise. The tests that would confirm a West Nile diagnosis can give false negatives when administered too early (because they look for antibodies to the virus, which the body may not have produced in sufficient quantities when a person first becomes ill). Given that there is no treatment, pediatricians may be more inclined to see if a mild fever simply runs its course, rather than pushing for a definitive diagnosis.

But that's not the whole story, as the data on severe cases of the disease show. In a small proportion of cases (less than 1 percent), West Nile infects the central nervous system, causing conditions like encephalitis and meningitis, which are forms of inflammation of the brain or of the membranes lining the brain and spinal cord. These are potentially grave — and far less likely to go undiagnosed. And these serious bouts of West Nile turn up a lot less frequently in children.

In the coming weeks, the CDC's West Nile totals will keep climbing, since it takes time for cases to be confirmed and reported, even though the number of infections has probably peaked for the year. But unless you live in a particular hotspot, like Texas, you probably don't need to keep your kids slathered in DEET. You don't want them to feed the mosquitoes. But you don't need to panic, either.

NATION WORLD BRIEFS

326 Convicted in Turkish Military Coup Plot.

A Turkish court on Friday convicted 326 military officers, including the former air force and navy chiefs, of plotting to overthrow the nation's Islamic-based government in 2003, in a case that has helped curtail the military's hold on politics. A panel of three judges at the court on Istanbul's outskirts initially sentenced former air force chief Ibrahim Firtina, former navy chief Ozden Ornek and former army commander Cetin Dogan to life imprisonment but later reduced the sentence to a 20-year jail term because the plot had been unsuccessful, state-run TRT television reported. The three were accused of masterminding the plot.

Memorial to Stalin's Victims Unveiled Outside Kiev.

The Presidents of Ukraine and Poland on Friday unveiled a memorial to the thousands of Ukrainians, Poles and others killed by Soviet Dictator Josef Stalin's secret police before and during World War II. The memorial is part of a remembrance complex in Bykivnia, outside the Ukrainian capital, where up to 120,000 people are buried. The victims include 3,500 Poles executed in the Kiev region by the Soviet secret police in early 1940, as part of Stalin's attempt to exterminate the Polish elite during the Second World War.

Romney Paid $1.94 Million Federal Taxes in 2011

WASHINGTON (AP) • Mitt Romney, one of the wealthiest candidates ever to seek the presidency, paid nearly $2 million in federal taxes on $13.7 million in income that he and his wife reported last year, his U.S. returns showed Friday. That came to an effective tax rate of 14.1 percent, lower than millions of middle-income Americans but actually more than he had to pay.

Most of Romney's income was from investment returns. That is why his rate was lower than taxpayers whose income was mostly from wages, which can be taxed at higher rates.

Romney's taxes have emerged as a key issue during the 2012 presidential race with President Barack Obama. Romney released his 2010 returns in January, but he continues to decline to disclose returns from previous years — including those while he worked at Bain Capital, the private equity firm he co-founded.

The Obama campaign and other Democrats have pushed for fuller disclosures, reminding the Republican candidate that his father, George Romney, released a dozen years of returns when he ran for president. Overall, the Romneys' main tax return and separate forms for blind trusts totaled over 800 pages. The blind-trust income came from hedge funds and other complex investment vehicles. The couple also reported $3.5 million in income "from sources outside the United States," citing "various countries." Their forms included filings on holdings in Switzerland, Ireland, Germany and the Cayman Islands.

Apparently hoping to resolve basic questions voters might have, the Romney campaign also released a letter from his accountants saying that in the 20 years prior to 2010 the Romneys paid an average annual effective rate of 20.2 percent, never lower than 13.66 percent. On average, middle-income families — those making from $50,000 to $75,000 a year — pay 12.8 percent of their income in federal taxes.

Israeli-Egyptian Border Clash Leaves Four Dead

By Edmund Sanders
Los Angeles Times

JERUSALEM • Well-armed militants from the Sinai Desert infiltrated Israel on Friday and attacked a military outpost, killing one Israeli soldier and wounding another. The three unidentified attackers were then killed by Israeli soldiers.

It was the most serious clash along the Israeli-Egyptian border since early August, when militants in Egypt attacked an Egyptian police station near the border and used stolen vehicles to break through an Israeli border fence. Sixteen Egyptian soldiers were killed in that attack.

At about noon on Friday, the three militants broke through a part of the Egyptian-Israeli border near Mount Arif, where Israel has not finished constructing the border fence.

"They came across very well-equipped, with explosive belts and light arms," said Israeli military spokesman Capt. Eytan Buchman.

It remained unclear whether the Israeli soldiers were wounded by gunfire or the detonation of one of the explosives belts worn by one attacker, he said. The attack lasted less than 30 minutes.

Border clashes have become more frequent over the last year, particularly since the collapse of the Mubarak regime, which had been a close ally of Israel.

Newly elected Egyptian President Mohammed Morsi has vowed to crack down against militants in the Sinai Peninsula, launching an offensive over the past two months to capture those responsible for the August strike.

Obama Declares Chimney Rock a National Monument

DURANGO, Colo. (AP) • A dramatic rock formation in southwestern Colorado that was home to ancestors of the Pueblo Indians 1,000 years ago now has protection as a national monument — a potential boost for tourism in a state key to the presidential election.

President Barack Obama signed a proclamation Friday creating Chimney Rock National Monument, preserving nearly 5,000 acres of high desert around the spires that hold spiritual significance for tribes.

The designation — celebrated at the site Friday by Interior Secretary Ken Salazar, Agriculture Secretary Tom Vilsack and Democratic Sen. Michael Bennet — comes as Obama and Republican Mitt Romney intensify their battle for the presidential vote in Colorado, considered a swing state. Yet both Democrats and Republicans — including Republican Rep. Scott Tipton, who represents southwest Colorado — had worked for years to create the monument in the San Juan National Forest west of Pagosa Springs.

"With President Obama's action and the strong support of the Native American community and others throughout the region, this new monument will bring new economic opportunity to Archuleta County and the Four Corners region," Vilsack said in a prepared statement.

A study commissioned by the National Trust for Historic Preservation said a monument designation could double the site's economic impact on the region from $1.2 million today to $2.4 million by 2017.

Ancestral Puebloan farmers in the Chimney Rock region built more than 200 homes and ceremonial buildings high above the valley floor to be near the sacred twin rock pinnacles. They inhabited the region for more than 1,000 years but had left by 1300. Their disappearance is still a mystery.

The site was designated a National Historic Landmark in 1970.

THEIR VIEW

Poverty, Inequality Aren’t as Bad as Government Says

The following editorial appears on Bloomberg View:

Poverty statistics can be used to prove almost anything. When the Census Bureau reported last week that 46 million Americans, or 15 percent of the population, live in poverty, conservatives said that five decades of the welfare state have had virtually no effect. Liberals answered that laissez-faire economics have kept poverty rates stubbornly high. This debate is based on a false premise: Poverty isn’t as high as the U.S. government says it is. The reason is that federal programs, supported by Democrats and Republicans alike, have dramatically reduced poverty and, by extension, income inequality. To understand why, let’s look at what the numbers don’t show. The Census Bureau doesn’t count safety-net benefits, including food stamps, housing aid, school lunches and other noncash transfers. Adding the cash value of food stamps alone would lower the poverty population by 3.9 million people. Census data also overcompensate for inflation by ignoring discount prices at big-box outlets such as Wal-Mart Stores, where many low-income families shop. The figures don’t even factor in Medicare and Medicaid benefits. But tax credits are the most overlooked numbers of all. One, the Earned Income Tax Credit, is refundable, meaning that some low-income breadwinners get a check from the Internal Revenue Service even if their earnings are so small that they owe no income tax. Counting that tax credit would decrease the number of people living in poverty by another 5.7 million.

The Census Bureau defines a family of four with income less than $23,021 as impoverished. But a better portrait of poverty in America would count all government benefits and tax credits, raising many households’ income considerably. An even truer picture of deprivation would measure consumption (how much a household spends on rent, autos, food and other items) rather than income (how much a household admits to bringing home in earnings). Incomes are unreliable because people are reluctant to reveal how much they make. They are less reticent when asked if they have television sets, cars and air conditioning, or if they eat out and go to movies. When adjusted for these flaws, the level of poverty is much lower, says a new paper by economists Bruce D. Meyer at the University of Chicago and James X. Sullivan at the University of Notre Dame. Instead of 15 percent, it is only 4 percent to 5 percent. In other words, the war on poverty hasn’t been won, but it’s making inroads. The lion’s share of the credit, the professors conclude, goes to the Earned Income Tax Credit, the Child Tax Credit and Social Security. This may not jibe with Republican presidential nominee Mitt Romney’s quip about the “culture of dependency,” a trait he ascribed to a remarkable 47 percent of voters. The opposite is true: Anti-poverty programs have reduced dependency and encouraged work and can be fashioned to work even better. The implications of all this go beyond politics. Poverty statistics are one of the U.S.’s most closely watched indicators of economic well-being. They can help tell us if poverty-fighting programs are working, or if our taxes are being wasted. They can also steer policy-setters toward more productive solutions and away from popular yet misguided ideas.

IDAHO

School Mixes Trades with Academics

IDAHO FALLS (AP) • English and auto mechanics are two subjects that generally aren't taught side-by-side.

At Bonneville Joint School District 93's new Technical Careers High School, however, students learn how to apply basic academic skills such as writing and math to hands-on careers such as auto mechanics and welding.

The Technical Careers High School opened Aug. 28 in several converted vocational buildings near the District 93 office and Rocky Mountain Middle School.

"A lot of what we do actually makes sense," senior Heath Hansen said. "You aren't just sitting there wondering 'How the heck am I going to use this?' You know how you're going to use (the instruction) in life."

Although students must meet all the same academic requirements as traditional high school students, instruction at the school teaches students core principles in a way that will benefit their careers.

"We understand our students are interested in the technical fields and trades," Principal Craig Miller said. "We are trying to make it so whatever subject we teach; we relate it to their interests."

In English class, for instance, students write a business cost estimate rather than an essay on classic literature, Hansen said.

In government and economics classes, students focus on policies that affect the trades and business.

"You tie your content to their trade in every way you can," teacher Terri Angell said.

Making lessons relate to student career choices keeps them interested in the general academic topics, Angell said.

Cody Carlisle, left, and Heath Hansen, seniors in the automotive program at a new Technical Careers High School, work on a car Sept. 13 at the school in Idaho Falls.

Students split their day between core classes and several hours in the school's various shops.

The school offers training in welding, auto collision repair and automotive tech. School officials plan to add construction and drafting and energy systems technology next year.

Energy systems technology will focus on energy production, robotics and engineering.

Today, the school only offers a full-time curriculum for its 25 seniors.

ADA Complaint Filed against North Idaho College

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) • A man has filed an Americans with Disabilities Act complaint against North Idaho College, saying the school wrongly required documentation before it would allow him to use his service dog on campus.

Anthony Cruz, 58, is working with Disability Action Center Northwest to file the complaint with the federal Office for Civil Rights in Seattle, the Coeur d'Alene Press reported. Cruz, who has spinal stenosis and diabetes, said the dog is trained to alert him when his blood pressure gets too low. He had hoped to pursue paralegal studies.

"All I wanted to do was go to school. I didn't think I would have all these obstacles," Cruz said.

NIC spokeswoman Stacy Hudson said the school's disability support services are in accordance with federal law, and Cruz was granted the accommodations he requested after he provided documentation required by NIC policy. Privacy restrictions prevented her from disclosing details about the matter, she said.

Health Officials: Stay Away from Bats

CALDWELL (AP) • Health officials in southwestern Idaho are warning residents to avoid contact with bats after reports of unusual daytime activity and increased numbers bats testing positive for rabies.

David Loper with Southwest District Health says most bats are harmless, but it's best to avoid them if possible.

Any bat that behaves abnormally is more likely to have rabies, including those that are active during the day, are unable to fly or are in a place where bats are not often seen.

Rabies is a viral disease that affects the nervous system of people and animals and is often fatal.

Anyone who is bitten or scratched by a bat should wash the affected area with soap and water and seek medical treatment. If you awake to find a bat in your room, you should consider yourself potentially exposed.

Signal Peak Energy President and CEO John DeMichiei, right, and mine manager Bob Hall pause for a moment in the Bull Mountain mine in Roundup, Mont.

Mining Boom Threatens Ranches in Montana

ROUNDUP, Mont. (AP) • The big mining companies first came knocking on Ellen Pfister's door in the 1970s, ready to tap the huge coal deposits beneath her family's eastern Montana ranch.

Pfister and others successfully fended them off, and as the coal industry retreated domestically, it appeared their battle might be won. But now, a fast-growing market in exporting coal to Asia has Pfister and other ranchers seeing their long-held fears become reality.

With the once-shuttered Bull Mountain Mine under new ownership, mining activity beneath Pfister's 300-head cattle ranch is in full swing, on target to produce more than 9 million tons of coal this year. At least once a day on average a coal train more than a mile long pulls out of the mine that sits atop an estimated one billion tons of the fuel. Sixty percent is destined for overseas markets, including Asia.

Pfister's biggest worry is that mining could permanently damage her water supplies — a crucial necessity on a ranch set in an arid landscape of sandstone, sage brush and ponderosa pine trees stunted by periodic drought.

"I'm trying to figure out how to protect myself," said Pfister. "If you don't have water, you have to go someplace else."

U.S. coal exports hit their highest level in two decades last year, with 107 million tons of coal sent primarily to Asia and Europe. Some project volumes to double again in the next five years as the industry moves aggressively to build and expand coal ports on the West Coast and Gulf of Mexico.

Coal's opponents are waging a political public relations battle to squash the export ambitions, and success for the industry could be undermined if the global energy market wanes. But for Pfister, the changes she's long feared are here.

Trucks rumble along access roads to the mine carved into the rocky coulees that lace through the ranch, which Pfister inherited from her mother and runs with husband, Don Golder. Giant fissures have appeared where portions of the mine collapsed after coal was removed. About ten acres have been cleared for an emergency escape portal for miners and for ventilation equipment.

Mine owner Signal Peak Energy controls the mineral rights under portions of Pfister's property, and federal law gives the company extraction rights and Pfister little or no compensation for her trouble. Pfister said she's made other concessions, as well, including easements for the escape portal and installation of a gas pipeline network to clear the mine of dangerous carbon monoxide. She worried miners could get killed otherwise, she said.

Signal Peak president John DeMichiei said the company will address any concerns raised by Pfister, but has to access the mine through her property to deal with unexpected events such as the high carbon monoxide levels.

Senators Run Through Buhl

BY NICK RULAND
nruland@magicvalley.com

BUHL • Buhl's homecoming was host to a stark contrast of football styles, pitting the Indians downfield passing attack against Gooding's deliberate, grandma-could-call-the-play-before-it-happens running attack.

But size was what mattered most Friday night, as the Senators, behind 6-foot-5, 275-pound junior two-way lineman Cole McGinnis, steamrolled to a 31-13 victory.

"(McGinnis) is a man among boys," Buhl coach Stacy Wilson said. "But they're all physical. Our tackles go about 180 pounds, and we had to use three guys on (McGinnis) at times."

Defensively, McGinnis disrupted most of the important plays the Indians (0-4, 0-1 SCIC) ran in the first half, at times beating half the Indian offensive line to emerge in the backfield and disrupt the fluid and strong-armed Buhl quarterback Kade Crossland as he repeatedly tried Fear of being engulfed by McGinnis appeared to play a part in at least two of Buhl's turnovers — Crossland interceptions into defensive crowds.

Offensively, Gooding (5-0) spent much of the game running power plays behind tackles McGinnis on the left and 6-7, 305-pound Adam Kovacs on the right. Torin Brunson led the way with 191 yards, sometimes sprinting through Mack truck-sized holes.

Idaho Falls pounded out 520 yards against Minico on Friday night, cruising to a 36-21 victory, its first of the season.

The Tigers (1-4) had not led any team all season and entered the game allowing 57 points per game.

Idaho, Wyoming Looking at Each Other in the Mirror

MOSCOW, Idaho • In two starts as Idaho quarterback, Dominique Blackman has played in front of a run-of-the-mill crowd of 16,591 at Bowling Green and 92,177 boisterous fans at LSU's Tiger Stadium.

He's seen both ends of the college football spectrum, and today he finally gets to take part in a game at the Kibbie Dome. The fact that the crowd likely won't top 10,000?

"None of that matters," Blackman said. "We've just got to win. We have to win this game, period."

Riverhawk D Earns Homecoming Win

BY RYAN HOWE
rhowe@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • They say homecoming memories are supposed to last a lifetime.

Canyon Ridge's dramatic 7-6 win over Burley on Friday will be one the Riverhawks may never forget.

Down 6-0 with less than six minutes remaining, Canyon Ridge was driving when sophomore quarterback Teague Sweesy was carted off on a stretcher after a big collision along the sideline. He gave the crowd and his teammates a thumbs-up as he was loaded into an ambulance.

Senior Eddie Marin took over at quarterback and the Riverhawks proceeded to drive to the Burley 3-yard line, but the Bobcat defense stood, causing a turnover on downs with 1:35 to go.

From its own 5-yard line, all Burley had to do was run out the clock. But the Riverhawks stripped the ball from a Burley ball carrier and senior Andy Powlus pounced on it in the end zone for a touchdown.

"I didn't see who stripped it; it was a big scrum. I saw the ball rolling and I knew I had to get on it," Powlus said.

On the extra point, Burley got a big push and blocked the kick. But a penal-

"Penetration came right up the middle on the first one, they blew me up," said senior long snapper Aaron Burton. "I don't think they're allowed to do that because they threw a flag. If I stand my ground they can't get through the middle, that's all I really have to do."

Burton snapped to Marin, the holder, and Cade Summers kicked the game-winner.

"We knew we had it in us and we just didn't give up," Marin said. "We believed in our team and everybody put in a full effort to pull off this win."

After the go-ahead score, Burley had 32 seconds left to answer. But on the Bobcats' first play, Marin stepped in front of the intended receiver and picked off Zander Cook's pass to seal the Riverhawks' first win of the season.

"I just read that perfectly and he under threw it," Marin said. "This means

Late TD Dashes Bruins' Fourth-quarter Rally

BY DAVID BASHORE
dbashore@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • Finally tied with Skyline and with momentum — and the homecoming game crowd — in its favor, Twin Falls played not to get beat over the top.

In so doing, the Bruins got beat underneath.

After seeing a 14-point fourth-quarter lead evaporate, Skyline made the final big play on a third-and-10 inside handoff to running back Tanner Nelson, who slipped two tackles on his way to a 50-yard touchdown that gave the Grizzlies a 24-17 win.

"It was just blank ... I guess I just ran on instinct," Nelson said when asked how he saw the game's decisive play unfold. "We had passed a lot, and we wanted to show that we could run the football as well. That's an important thing to show the other team."

Skyline (2-3) didn't run with a whole lot of success in the first half. Then again, neither did Twin Falls (1-3), which played for the second straight week without starting quarterback Thomas Corr.

The Bruins had to play catch-up from the second quarter on, and with a heavily run-oriented offense inviting Skyline to load the box, it wasn't easy. But when Jason Byce scored from a yard out with 1:43 to play, it looked like they had finally broken through.

Those 103 seconds proved to be too many, however, as the Grizzlies once again marched down the field to take said Byce, who had 118 yards on 21 carries. "That last one hurt a lot, but we have to just flush this game and get ready for the conference season, because we're 0-0 in conference."

seemed innocuous at the time, but ended up being huge.

“It’s a very big victory, but we’re never satisfied,” said Powlus. “This is just the beginning.”

Both teams play non-conference games next week as Burley (2-2) hosts Century and Canyon (1-3) Ridge travels to Nampa to take on Skyview.

Mimico coach Tim Perrigot said. “They turn over the football, they don’t finish drives and they kill themselves with stupid penalties. They didn’t do that tonight.”

Trailing 16-0 entering the second quarter, Mimico got on the board when Caleb Worley took an end-around 12 yards for the score. The Spartans added a safety and a Taylor Seaton touchdown run in the quarter and entered halftime in striking distance, down 22-14.

The Tigers responded with a defensive stop and an 88-yard touchdown pass midway through the third quarter, effectively ending the Mimico threat.

“When you play from behind you’re in panic mode,” Perrigot said. “You can’t start a football game in a hole like that. You take yourself out of your game plan, which is frustrating because that takes you away from what you practiced all week long.”

Seaton added a 30-yard touchdown run late in the third quarter for Mimico’s final score, and Idaho Falls finished the game off with a clock-eating ground game in the fourth quarter.

Idaho Falls quarterback A.J. Martin finished 9-for-11 with 261 passing yards and four touchdowns.

Mimico (2-2) was led by full-back Skye Dansie, who had 131 yards on 23 carries. Seaton had 92 yards on 19 rushes.

but Nelson, who rushed for 65 yards on 10 carries, had the final answer.

Johnson finished with 78 yards on 13 carries.

Both teams have rivalry games next week: Twin Falls travels to Jerome and Skyline plays Idaho Falls in the Emotion Bowl.

Championship Night at Magic Valley Speedway

BY LINDA BRITTSAN

For the Times-News

TWIN FALLS • Tonight, drivers from the Super Stocks, Street Stocks, Jr. Stingers, Thunderdogs and Pro Trucks divisions will all be honored with what they have been working for all season: the championship crown.

The biggest piece of the cash prize and a trip to the national NASCAR awards banquet later this year awaits the winner of the 2012 Super Stocks title. He or she will be honored as both the MVS track champion and the Idaho State champion in the feature division.

In order to get there, current Super Stocks points leader Kris McKean says his chief strategy is to “stay out of trouble” especially during the main event race.

“We’re not going to worry about a win so much as points,” he added. “I think we’ll probably just hang back and be careful.”

If McKean does wrap up the championship, it will be his fourth in a row in the series.

“We had some bad luck early in the season, and then I think we just got it out of the way. But we also had been trying some different setups, and finally found what worked,” he added.

Scott Luttmr and Jerry Rice are the top rivals for the 2012 championship in the Intermountain Pro Trucks Series. Rice is the defending champion in the division, while Luttmr is seeking his first title in the series.

With a 37-point lead, tonight Ernie Hall can finish off his battle with Paul Browne for the Street Stocks division title. Hall excelled in the second half of the season, and this evening he hopes to keep the momentum going for just one last round of competition.

Hailey Douglas has a comfortable advantage over Justice Coates in the race for the Jr. Stingers title, but it will come down to whoever is left running in the Thunderdogs division before the newest champion is honored.

• Both absorbed close losses to Mid-American Conference teams (Idaho to Bowling Green; Wyoming to Toledo).

• And both were wiped out by national powers (Wyoming lost 37-17 at Texas; Idaho lost 63-14 at LSU).

These teams differ in at least one regard, though. The Vandals rank 119th in the FBS in rushing offense through three weeks, while the Wyoming defense is 118th against the run.

“We’re both in the same mix there,” Akey said. “We’re looking to run the ball better;

“I don’t believe in that moral stuff, man. ... So I guessed it showed that we can be explosive at times. We stress all year, ‘Finish.’ And we’ve stressed all year, ‘Do it in the second half.”

Dominique Blackman

they’re looking to stop it better. Something’s going to give (today).”

The Cowboys were 8-5 last season and lost to Temple in the New Mexico Bowl. A big reason for their resurgence was quarterback Brett Smith, who excelled as a freshman in 2011 but was knocked out of the Toledo game on Sept. 8 when he took a blow to the head.

Smith sat out last week as Cal Poly upset Wyoming. His status is uncertain for today.

Blackman, meanwhile, is coming off a four-interception game at LSU. Yet he also was a key figure in an unlikely second-quarter outburst against the Tigers’ respected defense.

The 6-foot-5 transfer threw two touchdown passes in an eight-minute span, the last of which cut Idaho’s deficit to 21-14 — a score that would hold up until the final minute of the first half.

The glimpse of explosiveness from the Vandals didn’t do anything for Blackman.

“I don’t believe in that moral stuff, man,” he said. “... So I guessed it showed that we can be explosive at times. We stress all year, ‘Finish.’ And we’ve stressed all year, ‘Do it in the second half.”

Akey declined to characterize Idaho as desperate for a win. Despite the program’s worst start since 2005, he’s seen incremental progress in Idaho’s preparation and response to adversity.

“And now, being able to string that all together is what I believe is going to get us over the hump,” the sixth-year coach said.

Blackman took it a step further, declaring — and then repeating — that the Vandals “are going to get this win.”

favorite target, Joe Grinnell, caught seven passes for 149 yards.

Jacob Johnson scored early in the fourth to set the stage for Byce’s tying score, and a receiving touchdown. His touchdown reception was on a screen to the opposite side of McGinnis against an overloaded Indians defense. With the help of Kovacs and the outside receiver, McGinnis scored after breaking at least three tackles.

Despite stalling much of the second half after a 20-minute homecoming halftime, the Senators compiled 263 yards on the ground and another 160 through the air. Indians running backs were held to 13 yards rushing on 13 carries.

“Our identity is power football,”

Gooding coach Cameron Andersen said. “Teams might slow us down at first, but if we keep leaning on them it goes our way.”

Complementing the run, Gooding quarterback Josh Faulkner threw for two touchdowns and ran for another.

McGinnis was credited with just three tackles, but if scouts were on hand, they would have filled a few pages with superlatives.

“(McGinnis) is a great kid to build around,” Andersen said. “He’s one of the nicest kids on the team, but also the meanest.”

GOLF ROUNDUP

Furyk Races to Tour Championship Lead

ASSOCIATED PRESS

ATLANTA • Jim Furyk, the only American on the Ryder Cup team without a win this year, put himself in position Friday to join them.

Furyk made seven birdies through 10 holes at East Lake — including seven 3s to start the round — until he missed a few greens on the back nine that slowed his momentum. He wound up with a 6-under 64, giving him a one-shot lead over Justin Rose going into the weekend at the Tour Championship.

As for anyone questioning whether Furyk should have been a pick for the Ryder Cup?

He was more bothered by missing a 5-foot par putt on the 18th hole than what anyone thinks about his game or being in the Ryder Cup for the eighth straight time. With 16 wins, including a U.S. Open, and having qualified for every U.S. team since 1997, Furyk stopped believing he had to prove himself a long time ago.

“Look at the way I play golf — the way I swing the golf club and grip the putter,” he said. “Look at the way I go about my business. I don’t hit the ball very far. I’m short. If I really cared what the critics thought the last 19 years, I really wouldn’t be here. ... My teammates know that I’m going to give 110 percent. They know I have a lot of heart. I have a lot of grit, and that’s what I’m going to do.

“But I’ve never felt like I have to justify myself.”

All he cares about is winning the Tour Championship, with an outside shot at the FedEx Cup title and its $10 million bonus. Furyk was at 7-under 133 on a course where he won just two years ago.

Jim Furyk chips to the green on the 13th hole during the second round of the Tour Championship golf tournament in Atlanta on Friday.

Rose, who shared the 18-hole lead with Tiger Woods, made four birdies on the back nine and holed a 6-foot birdie putt on the 18th for a 68.

Woods went the other direction.

The lone bright spot was a bunker shot that was among the best he has ever hit. With a quarter of the ball below the surface of the sand from a fairway bunker on the third hole, he caught a 9-iron so perfectly that it came out low and ran across the green to 6 feet for birdie.

The rest of the day was forgettable — a muffed pitch from a bad lie on No. 8 that led to double bogey, and a series of bad swings that put him in bad positions on the back nine and led to four bogeys. He had to scramble for par on the 18th for a 73, his worst score at East Lake in 14 years, dating to a 76 in the second round in 1998.

“I didn’t play very good today. Didn’t hit it very good, and definitely didn’t putt well,” Woods said. “So it was a struggle all day.”

Woods was six shots behind.

Bo Van Pelt made three bogeys on the last four holes and still had a 68 that put him two shots behind at 135, along with Masters champion Bubba Watson (66). Dustin Johnson, who had to summon his college teammate from Coastal Carolina to caddie for him when his regular had back problems, had a 67 and was another shot back, along with Georgia Tech alum Matt Kuchar (69).

The caddie was Cameron Hooper, perhaps the only caddie to ever wear topsiders and no socks. He wasn’t expecting to do anything but watch. Johnson played with Garcia, who uses a CBS Sports spotter for his caddie.

Rory McIlroy, who is leading the FedEx Cup, had a 68 and was only four shots behind. He still has the best shot at the $10 million bonus, though he remains far more interested in winning his third straight tournament, and fourth in his last five starts. McIlroy was fortunate not to tumble down the leaderboard, but he scrambled for par on three of five holes at the start of his round, and made up plenty of ground with a 40-foot eagle putt on the 15th.

“I just have to try to think of my standing in this golf tournament, not really think about anything else,” he said.

Furyk hasn’t won since he turned his cap around in the rain, saved par from a bunker and won the Tour Championship in 2010, along with the FedEx Cup.

UCI Backs Off Doping Amnesty

ASSOCIATED PRESS

MAASTRICHT, Netherlands • The International Cycling Union backed away Friday from the idea of an amnesty or truth and reconciliation commission for riders who took performance-enhancing drugs in the past.

At its annual congress, the UCI adopted a motion calling on the governing body to deal with current and doping cases and “ignore attempts to exploit commercially or otherwise the painful aspects of cycling’s past.”

The motion was drawn up earlier this week by the UCI’s management committee during discussions about the possibility of setting up a truth and reconciliation commission at which riders could confess their doping pasts as a way of cleaning up the sport and draw a line under an era tainted by drugs.

“That was discussed at management committee and ... from that discussion came this (motion),” UCI President Pat McQuaid told The Associated Press after Friday’s congress.

The committee said, “This is the direction we need to go. We need to concentrate on the sport today and not so much to the past,” McQuaid told AP.

The motion’s preamble says there is “no point in continuing to re-examine the past of then undetectable doping and stigmatize the sport of the young generations now that the situation has considerably improved through the UCI’s continued efforts.”

Asked if the motion meant an end to the idea of setting up a truth and reconciliation commission, McQuaid said: “Not necessarily, we’ll have to wait and see.”

Earlier Friday, McQuaid emphatically denied that the sport’s governing body ever covered up a positive doping test by Lance Armstrong or that the organization ever tipped off the seven-time Tour de France winner ahead of a doping test.

McQuaid told delegates at the congress that the organization “has never hidden a positive sample, not just of Lance Armstrong, but of any other athlete.”

Disgraced former rider Floyd Landis has claimed that Armstrong tested positive for the blood booster EPO at the Tour of Switzerland in 2001 and paid off then-UCI president Hein Verbruggen to keep it quiet. Verbruggen and Armstrong have denied the allegations.

Tyler Hamilton, a former Armstrong teammate, also claimed Armstrong told him that he had tested positive at the 2001 Tour of Switzerland, but that it wouldn’t be a problem because “people took care of it.”

McQuaid also rejected claims that the organization tipped off Armstrong ahead of time that he was about to be tested.

He said both explosive claims could be included in a file of evidence compiled by the United States Anti-Doping Agency that prompted it to ban Armstrong from Olympic sport for life and strip him of his seven tour titles.

The UCI has not yet received a copy of the file. McQuaid said that the UCI “will give the appropriate sanctions” if its lawyers find the report “strong and clean.”

Armstrong has long denied doping but chose last month not to fight drug charges by USADA, which wiped out 14 years of his results.

USADA believes Armstrong used banned substances as far back as 1996, including EPO, steroids and blood transfusions.

Oilers, Flames Players: Lockout is Illegal

ASSOCIATED PRESS

EDMONTON, Alberta • Lawyers for players on the Edmonton Oilers and Calgary Flames are trying to have the NHL lockout declared illegal under Alberta law.

The NHL has argued before the Alberta Labour Relations Board that a league spanning two countries cannot operate under different laws for each team.

About a half dozen players attended the hearing, including Oilers forward Sam Gagner, goaltender Devan Dubnyk and veteran Ryan Smyth.

The lockout began last weekend, and some players are already signing with European teams for the season. There have been no formal talks between the two sides since Sept. 12. Training camps were to have opened Friday. The league has already canceled preseason games through Sept. 30.

NHLPA lawyer Bob Blair told the panel that the two teams are Alberta businesses, so provincial labor laws must be followed.

“No one gets to choose what labor laws apply to them in this province,” Blair said. “The law is the law is the law.”

He said players from the Oilers and Flames never agreed to forgo their rights under the Alberta Labour Code.

“It applies to every employer and employee,” he said. “That is the starting point.”

NHL lawyer Peter Gall pointed out that 23 of the 30 teams are in the United States and work under the same rules because labor laws there are federally regulated.

“So all of the players on all of the teams have been included in one bargaining unit,” Gall said. “The NHLPA has never bargained with individual teams. It has only bargained with the NHL.”

Bill Daly, the league’s deputy commissioner, told the panel there has never been individual bargaining between players and their teams. He said it’s important all teams operate under the same rules.

Blair countered by saying the way the league and union operated in the past is irrelevant.

It’s unclear what might follow if the board were to rule in favor of the NHLPA’s request, but Daly said he couldn’t imagine the fallout if that were to happen.

“It would be extremely destabilizing to how we do business and how we conduct this sports league,” he said. “I don’t know how we would proceed in the face of separate units in Alberta.”

Last week, players from the Montreal Canadiens launched a similar case in Quebec. The labor board there turned down their request for a temporary injunction against the lockout, but also ruled that more hearings are needed to make a final decision on the application. No date for those hearings has been set.

The two sides remain far apart on key economic issues.

The NHL believes too much money is being paid in salaries and has proposed a system to address it. Its most recent offer called for the players’ share in revenue to be set at 49 percent next season — down from 57 percent in the deal that expired last weekend — and proposed that it drops to 47 percent by the end of the six-year deal.

The union tabled an offer in which the salary cap would be set to fixed increases of 2 percent, 4 percent and 6 percent over the next three years. The system would then revert to a percentage-based system for the final two years.

AP Veteran Reporter Don Rothberg Dies at 79

WASHINGTON (AP)

Donald M. Rothberg, a versatile and respected reporter who covered politics, the Watergate scandal and foreign affairs during a 40-year career with The Associated Press, died on Friday after a brief illness.

Rothberg, 79, cut an impressive swath through the capital landscape, blending a reporter's need-to-know instincts with an easy-to-follow writing style that minced few words, laying bare his deep understanding of the corridors of power and the people who wielded it.

Born in Dorchester, Mass., and a graduate of Boston University, Rothberg was a journalistic frequent-flyer, whose writing and reporting pursuits took him across the United States with presidents and presidential candidates and to the four corners of the world with secretaries of state James A. Baker III and Warren Christopher.

He donned many hats in the Washington newsroom — chief political reporter, special investigative team member, diplomatic correspondent, enterprise writer, columnist, news editor. His reputation often made him the go-to man on breaking stories.

“Don loved covering smoke-filled-backroom politics and wanted his stories to give readers a chair in that room,” said Kathleen Carroll, AP's executive editor. “No backslapper, he sometimes presented a crusty exterior, the tough news guy, but the barking burst of his laugh was always one of the best sounds in the newsroom.”

Rothberg had a smooth but unrelenting journalistic style, and he wrapped his talent around some of the most eye-catching and history-making stories of the 20th century, including the Watergate scandal that toppled Richard M. Nixon's presidency.

“Don was an unerring witness to the machinery of Congress in an era when great lawmakers knew when and how to cut a deal,” said Jonathan P. Wolman, editor of The Detroit News and a former Washington AP chief of bureau. Rothberg's mastery of the special brand of journalism that is indispensable to covering Washington was obvious in his writing.

“Americans returned to their bullet-scarred Capitol less than 24 hours after a gunman fatally shot two policemen and sent a wave of fear through the national monument to freedom and democracy,” he wrote in his account of a shooting rampage at Congress in July 1998.

After college and a tour of duty in the Army, he went to work in 1959 at The Daily Astorian in Astoria, Ore. Rothberg joined AP in Boston in 1961, covering politics and state government. He transferred to Washington in 1966 and was a member of the special assignment team when it won the Worth Bingham award for a series of investigative reports.

He covered Watergate from its early stages through Nixon's resignation in August 1974 and the cover-up trial. Rothberg also covered four presidential campaigns.

Rothberg demonstrated his versatility when he pitched in on AP's coverage of the stock market crash of Oct. 19, 1987 — Black Monday as it became known. And for his efforts, he shared in John Hancock Award for Excellence in Business and Financial Journalism and the Top Performance Award of the Associated Press Managing Editors association.

Although he officially retired from AP at the end of 1999, he wasn't through with news. “Several years after his retirement, terrorists attacked Washington and New York on 9/11. Unbidden, Don showed up in the bureau and asked me simply, ‘What can I do to help?’” said Sandy Johnson, AP's former Washington bureau chief.

Rothberg subsequently returned a second time to serve as news editor for national security coverage during the Iraq war, mentoring younger journalists and lending his wealth of experience to the news report.

Rothberg is survived by his wife, Lynn; their daughter, Jennifer Rothberg Tanzi; and her husband, Brian; grandsons Connor and Landon; and his sister, Charlotte Kaufman of Boston.

Libyans Storm Milita in Backlash of Attacks on U.S.

BENGHAZI, Libya (AP)

Hundreds of protesters angry over last week's killing of the U.S. ambassador to Libya stormed the compound of the Islamic extremist militia suspected in the attack, evicting militiamen and setting fire to their building Friday.

In an unprecedented show of public anger at Libya's rampant militias, the crowd overwhelmed the compound of the Ansar al-Shariah Brigade in the center of the eastern city of Benghazi.

Ansar al-Shariah fighters initially fired in the air to disperse the crowd, but eventually abandoned the site with their weapons and vehicles after it was overrun by waves of protesters shouting “No to militias.”

No deaths were reported in the incident, which came after tens of thousands marched in Benghazi against armed militias. One vehicle was also burned at the compound.

For many Libyans, the Sept. 11 attack on the U.S. Consulate in Benghazi was the last straw in one of the biggest problems Libya has faced since the ouster and death of longtime dictator Moammar Gadhafi around a year ago — the multiple mini-armies that with their arsenals of machine guns and rocket-propelled grenades are stronger than the regular armed forces and police.

The militias, a legacy of the rag-tag popular forces that fought Gadhafi's regime, tout themselves as protectors of Libya's revolution, providing security where police cannot. But many say they act like gangs, detaining and intimidating rivals and carrying out killings.

Militias made up of Islamic radicals like Ansar al-Shariah are notorious for attacks on Muslims who don't abide by their hardline ideology.

After taking over the Ansar compound, protesters then drove to attack the Benghazi headquarters of another Islamist militia, Rafallah Sahati. The militiamen opened fire on the protesters, who were largely unarmed. At least 20 were wounded, and there were unconfirmed witness reports of three protesters killed.

Earlier in the day, some 30,000 people filled a broad boulevard as they marched along a lake in central Benghazi on Friday to the gates of the headquarters of Ansar al-Shariah.

“No, no, to militias,” the crowd chanted, filling a broad boulevard. They carried banners and signs demanding that militias disband and that the government build up police to take their place in keeping security.

Signs read, “Where is the army, where is the police?”

CONGRESS EXITS WASHINGTON TO HIT CAMPAIGN TRAIL

WASHINGTON (AP)

The most partisan, least productive Congress in memory is bolting Washington for the campaign trail, leaving in its wake a pile of unfinished business on the budget and taxes, farm policy and legislation to save the Postal Service from insolvency.

The GOP-controlled House beat its retreat Friday morning after one last, futile slap at President Barack Obama — passing a bill entitled the “Stop the War on Coal Act.” The measure, dead on arrival with Obama and the Senate, would block the government from policing greenhouse gas emissions and give states regulatory control over the disposal of harmful coal byproducts.

Over in the Democratic Senate, Majority Leader Harry Reid, D-Nev., delayed that chamber's getaway to force a procedural vote on legislation by endangered Democrat Jon Tester of Montana to boost access to public lands for hunting and fishing. Republicans protested that the move was nakedly political and had tried to block it.

The spitting match ensured a post-midnight Senate session before a final vote on the only must-do item on the get-out-of-Dodge agenda — a six-month spending measure to keep the government running after the current budget year ends on Sept. 30.

It's the earliest pre-election exit by Congress from Washington since 1960, though lawmakers will return in November after the election to deal with its stack of unfinished work.

SENIOR

Q. Can you explain what a Personal Emergency Response System is?

A. Personal Emergency Response Systems, or PERS, are small devices that are usually worn around the neck or on the wrist. The person wearing the device can signal for help simply by pressing a button. Another device in the home, called a communicator, then sends an emergency signal over the telephone line to a 24-hour monitoring center. After determining the nature of the emergency the center calls a relative, neighbor, ambulance or the police. PERS vary in features, contract requirements and price. Many vendors sell these popular items. Be sure to do good consumer research to determine the best PERS for your family's situation. A local hospital or trusted physician may be able to refer you to a company that provides good products and service. Research studies have confirmed that having a PERS increases feelings of independence, security and peace of mind! Also, they are a great idea for birthday or holiday gift-giving.

‘JUST NEIGHBORS’

Rupert church class educates congregation on poverty and how to help neighbors, community.

BY TETONA DUNLAP
tdunlap@magicvalley.com

RUPERT • For one hour out of the week, members of St. Matthew’s Episcopal Church will gather to discuss and understand poverty, and figure out how they can help.

On Sept. 18, a group of five met for the first of nine sessions that are part of “Just Neighbors,” an interactive poverty awareness program meant to help people understand poverty, inspire service and make a difference in their community.

The curriculum was created by Family Promise, an organization started in 1982 by Karen Olson whose mission is to help homeless and low-income families achieve sustainable independence.

According to the Family Promise website, Olson was a marketing executive who decided one morning, as she was on her way to a meeting, to buy a sandwich for a homeless woman she had seen everyday on her way to work.

The woman accepted the sandwich but asked for a moment to be heard, understood and be seen as more than a faceless statistic.

The idea to bring the “Just Neighbors” curriculum to their congregation came after St. Matthew’s Episcopal Church deacons attended a deacon’s conference where a session highlighted the “Just Neighbors” program.

“It was really well done ... this manual is really thorough,” said Ven. Janet King, a deacon at St. Matthews.

In a white building behind the small brick Episcopal church with the red door, the class watched a 15-minute video that featured three families struggling to live on low wages. The parents interviewed all had full-time jobs but still were struggling to pay for rent, food, clothing and child-care.

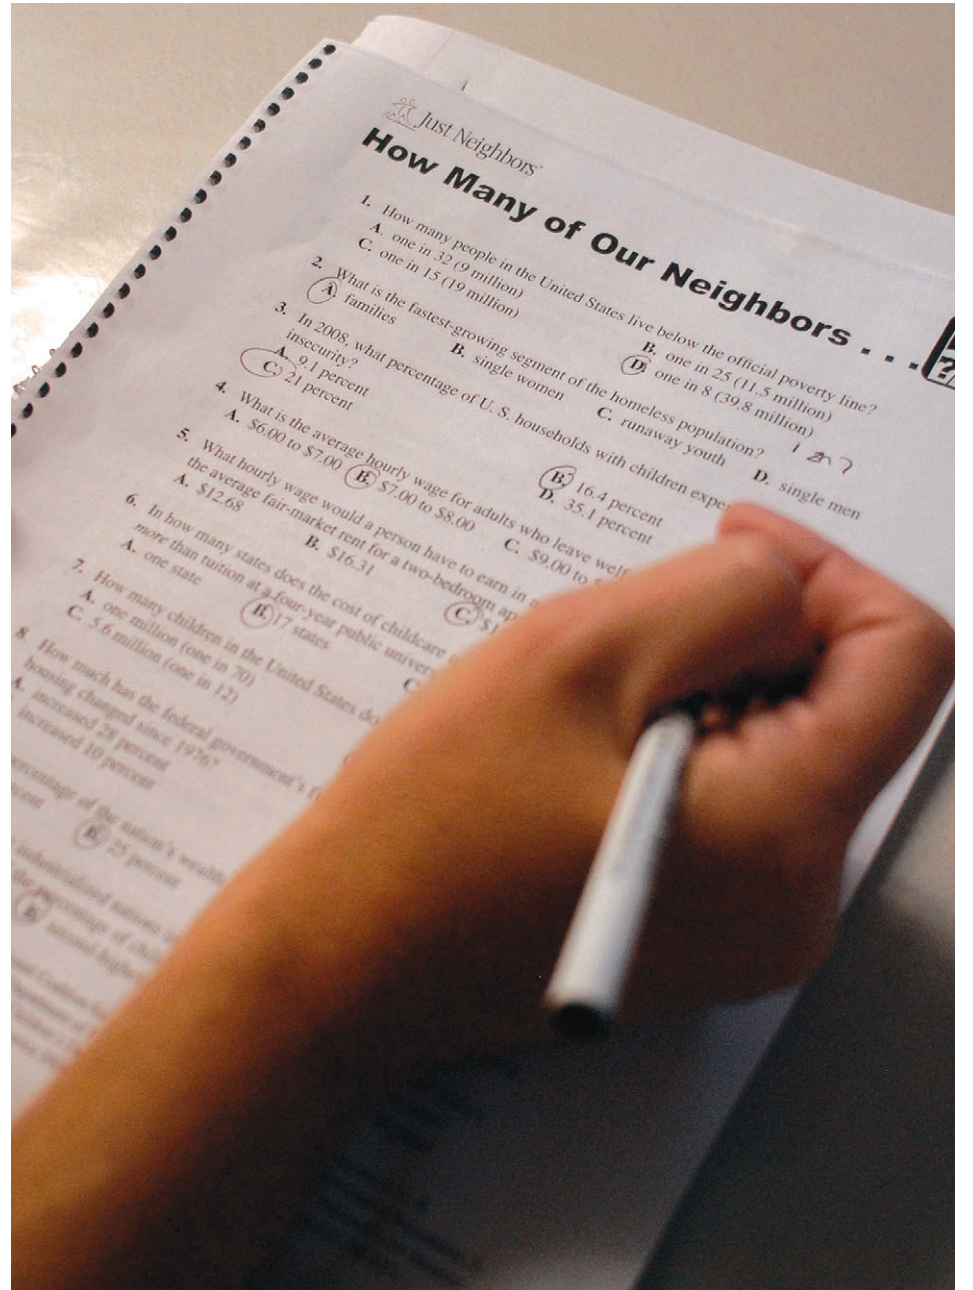

“It puts you in a person of poverty’s place,” said Rev. Tammy Jones of the curriculum.

Rather than simply mimicking another church’s food bank program, church leaders wanted to create a unique program that addresses an aspect of poverty that is overlooked. But first they felt it was important to dispell myths and promote understanding.

After the video the group compiled a list of immediate challenges and systematic challenges. Some of the immediate challenges the group listed were: coping with the rising cost of rent, living in unsafe neighborhoods, children going hungry and not having enough money for the clothing needed for jobs and school.

Some of the systematic challenges were: having a full-time job that offered health insurance, but not being able to afford it because the majority of the paycheck went to rent.

According to a quiz the group took after the video and their discussion, the fastest growing segment of the homeless population is families and one in eight Americans (39.8 million) live below the official poverty line.

And among all the industrialized nations in the world, the United States is ranked second-highest – behind Mexico – in the percentage of children living below the median income, according to the United Nations Children’s Fund.

“We’re here because we’ve been motivated by our faith,” King said.

Church member, Rachel Stevens, moved to Rupert five areas ago from the Boise area. She said she decided to attend the class because she once had to ask for help and now she wants to give back.

“I had to ask for help and I was working a full-time job ... I had one outfit for work,” Stevens said.

While living in the Treasure Valley, Stevens said she would volunteer at the local food bank and often handed out food to many of her friends. People she didn’t know were in need of assistance as well.

In Rupert, Stevens said she sees similar problems

Attend the Class

All nine classes for the “Just Neighbors” sessions will be held behind the St. Matthew’s Episcopal Church at 7 p.m. The next class is Oct. 2, and is called “Making Ends Meet.”

- Oct. 10 “What Would You Choose?”
- Oct. 17 “Does Working Work?”
- Oct. 24 “Housing Matters”
- Oct. 30 “Prejudice, Privilege and Poverty”
- Nov. 14 “Our Children, Our Future”
- Nov. 28 “Justice For All?”
- Dec. 5 “Stepping Out, Taking Action”

like children walking to school in the winter with no coats.

“I know there’s a need here too,” Stevens said. “Because someone helped me, I want to help.”

Church member Vernell Cowell said she learned a lot by attending and encouraged others to attend.

“We hope we can help, we have the means to do so much,” Cowell said.

“Just Neighbors” cost St. Matthew’s Episcopal Church $135 to buy but its an expense that they consider well worth its price.

“When we get through with the box we will pass it on,” King said.

A Discussion about Hell, Part I

I recently have re-read John Bunyan’s sermon on Luke 16:19-31, “A Few Sighs From Hell.” In it, this puritan preacher noted an amazing observation about how the Lord Jesus described the man who died and went to Hades (Hell.)

In this passage, Jesus says that the man died and was buried. “In [Hell] he lifted up his eyes.” This statement has caused me to write a series of columns about what the Bible teaches about Hell.

I encourage you to take a serious and sober consideration of this biblical teaching.

There is nothing comfortable about conversations of Hell; nor should there be. The reader will either agree or disagree with what the Bible has to say. The reader will consider these teachings on Hell as either literal or metaphorical. I will write from the position that Hell is literal.

I will write from the noted activity of the man who died, was buried, and went to Hell. “In Hell he lifted up his eyes.”

It is clear from the passage in Luke that this man was unaware of his sad condition until he was in Hell. It’s not until after his death that he lifted up his eyes. At that time (death) it was too late, thus showing the beginning of his misery and unending torment.

It is likely that some want to take issue with this already. After all, how can a loving God send anyone to Hell?

In this series on Hell, I will submit that the nature of Hell and the misery of those who dwell there will show that God does love, by offering an escape from the certain eternal misery to all who would lift up their eyes now.

I will write from the vantage point of David; “My soul cleaves to the dust; revive me according to Your word. I have told of my ways, and You have answered me; Teach me Your statutes. Make me understand the way of Your precepts, so I will meditate on Your wonders. My soul weeps because of grief; strengthen me according to Your word. Remove the false way from me, and graciously grant me Your law.” (Psalms 119:25-29, NASB.)

Lift up your eyes today, while it is still called today. Join in on the conversation by commenting at the email address below throughout my column series.

“When we depend upon man, we get what man can do; but when we depend upon [God], we get what God can do.” – A.C. Dixon.

Lifting the Name of Jesus

Filer church celebrates 75 years.

BY JOHN E. SWAYZE
For the Times-News

FILER • The Filer Church of the Nazarene has been lifting up the name of Jesus, through Scripture, song and mission outreach for decades. This Sunday will mark the congregation’s 75th anniversary.

Celebration activities are planned to begin with a continental breakfast at 9 a.m. A 9:45 a.m. celebration, including hymns, comments from former pastors, and a historical presentation will follow at 10:45 a.m. by a gospel music concert performed by the Liberty Quartet. The church is located at 315 Yakima, Filer.

In the summer of 1937, Clyde Ruth Lanchester approached the Rev. DL Smith, pastor of the Twin Falls Church of the Nazarene, with the idea of planting a congregation in the community. Charter member Barbara Damon’s family attended the Filer Mennonite Brethren in Christ Church when her mother began making inquiries. Shortly after speaking with the denomination’s district superintendent, Rev. Glenn Griffith, the fledgling 26 member congregation held its first service in a tent erected on the east end of Main Street.

“I was 8 years old and don’t know the reasons they needed to form a new church, but I do remember the tent had a straw floor and was put up about where the Masonic building stands,” Damon said. “This church is where I was married, my children were dedicated and I got started in the faith.”

Before breaking ground for construction of a permanent sanctuary at the corner of Yakima and Fifth Street, in November 1937, services were also held in

Changing of the Guard

After 15 years, outgoing pastor at a Kimberly church bids farewell; church welcomes new pastor.

BY BLAIR KOCH
For the Times-News

KIMBERLY • For 15 years Steelman Borden has served as senior minister for the Kimberly Christian Church.

As part of the community he’s witnessed many of Kimberly’s youth grow and mature, graduate, marry and even begin families of their own.

When Borden’s oldest grandson graduated high school last spring, he and wife Diane realized they were missing out on their own family, who live east of the Mississippi River, and decided it was time for Steelman to retire.

“It wasn’t an easy decision to come to. Kimberly is a wonderful community and the church has been great to us,” said Borden, who’s final Sunday with the church is Sept. 30.

The couple have already sold their Kimberly home and most of their personal belongings, Borden said, as they plan on living an “RV lifestyle as long as they can,” living and traveling in their 40-foot long fifth-wheel.

Borden may be looking forward to hitting the open road, but saying goodbye to his congregation is going to be tough.

Since coming on board the church has said, changed much, he said, although worship songs are more contemporary and instead of a choir is led by a “worship team,” and membership has grown to between 150 and 200 people with Sunday attendance at about 125.

“The church has and continues to be family oriented,” he said. “We’re focused on creating local disciples and have heart for world mission, with 15 percent of offerings going to directly support missions.”

the Odd Fellows Hall and the art building at the Twin Falls County Fairgrounds. Dedication services in the completed building were held on Dec. 4, 1938.

Six years later, in 1944, damage from a fire resulted in extensive repairs, and the later church renovations included an expanded worship area, class rooms, a baptistry and nursery. The church also purchased and repaired an additional building at the corner of Yakima and Main Street for use as a fellowship hall.

The congregation's acts of service have never been confined to its own four walls. Mission outreach has both a local community and international focus. The Ukrainian House of James, an orphanage providing children with a safe, Christ-centered living environment, is one project the church has supported for at least 10 years.

Parishioner Carol Kalbfleisch, who met her husband, Roger, and raised their children in the church's worship setting defines its overall purpose as performing a mission of love.

"I've attended services here since 1957 and it's a church family that laughs, cries and prays with you," she said. "Every part of our worship feeds the spirit and supports you throughout life."

CALL US TODAY FOR YOUR REAL ESTATE NEEDS

DEAR ABBY: I'm 15 and I really like this boy, but I can't find the courage to ask him out. I'm pretty sure he likes me, too, because whenever we're together he holds my hand or puts his arms around me.

He has a great smile and personality. We have many things in common, such as we both play an instrument, we make each other laugh and we're both close with our families. What I don't understand is why he hasn't made a move yet to ask me out.

—NEEDS LOVE HELP

DEAR ABBY
Jeane Phillips

DEAR NEEDS LOVE HELP: I can think of a few reasons, and none of them have anything to do with how much he likes you. He may not be able to afford to ask you out, he may feel shy, he may not feel ready to date, or his parents may prefer that he concentrate on something other than romance. Some teens get around this by socializing in groups, so instead of asking him "out," consider asking if he'd like to join you and a group of your friends sometime.

DEAR ABBY: I'm an 18-year-old woman who lives at home with my parents. I have been seeing an amazing person for a while now. There is just one problem. My mother has decided to put "rules" on our relationship.

By rules, I mean: a curfew, how often I see him, where I am to be with him and various other things. Also, she randomly blurts out that I am "never to move in with him until I am married." I don't plan on moving in with him until we both have our college degrees.

I am technically an adult, which means to me that I can make my own decisions and suffer the consequences if there are any. I know I live in my parents' home. I follow their rules and respect their wishes — but this is a bit extreme, don't you think?

Abby, please advise me on how to explain to my mom that I'm an adult and not a newborn baby as she regards me?

—NOT A CHILD ANYMORE IN OHIO

DEAR NOT A CHILD: Although you may be an adult in the eyes of the law in Ohio, you are not INDEPENDENT. As long as you are dependent upon your parents for shelter, food or anything else there is a price you will have to pay. In this case, the price you are paying is your mother's loving but hawklike supervision. And if you think you or I can talk her out of it, you're dreaming.

DEAR ABBY: My wife and I were invited to my brother's wedding, and we accepted. Later, my brother asked me to be a groomsman.

My wife is upset because I didn't ask her if she minded that I'll be in the wedding and I will walk down the aisle with one of the bridesmaids. She feels that my walking with another woman is a "date" and disrespectful to her. Is it proper wedding etiquette to accept an invitation to be in a wedding if you are married?

—GROOMSMAN IN THE SOUTH

DEAR GROOMSMAN: It is very common for the brother of the groom to be in his wedding party — and marital status has nothing to do with it. Escorting an assigned bridesmaid to and from the altar is NOT a "date," nor is it disrespectful to your wife, who may really be upset because she wasn't also asked to be part of the wedding party.

Bobby Wolff

"But Jack, no panic showing, Just watched his beanstalk growing, And twined with tender fingers the tendrils up the pole."

— Guy Carryl

On "Dad's Army," an old British television show, there was a character who was given to exclaiming "Don't panic!" A bad trump break can often inspire such sentiments, but stay focused and you can often limit the damage, or even emerge triumphant.

Today's deal was just such an example. In six spades South appeared to have a decent chance to make 12 tricks in some comfort if spades behaved. He won the club lead and advanced dummy's spade 10, covered by the king and ace, with West pitching a club.

The 5-0 break posed considerable problems. As East clearly had a singleton club, declarer needed East to hold three or four hearts and for at least one diamond ruff to stand up.

So he cashed the heart ace, king and queen, since East's length in that suit would dictate the rest of the plan. To his surprise, West showed out on the third round, so South ruffed a heart in hand, played the diamond ace and king, then ruffed a diamond low.

In the four-card ending with the lead in dummy, North had the spade five and three losing clubs, South had the Q-J-6 of spades and a diamond, while East had his four low spades.

South led a club from dummy, overruffed East's seven with his queen, then ruffed a diamond with dummy's spade five, forcing East to overruff with the eight. In the two-card ending, East had to lead from his 9-4 of spades into declarer's tenace — contract made!

ANSWER: Your partner has shown a powerhouse, but at this moment it is not clear if he has secondary hearts to go with his diamonds. However, you don't have to guess. Simply bid three hearts and your partner will raise with four, give delayed spade support with three, or take some other descriptive action.

IF SEPTEMBER 22 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Get pumped up and explore your need for physical outlets and leadership skills in the year ahead. Put a new exercise regime into place during December when you will be at your best and able to shine at all executive endeavors. After the first of the year, you may have excellent ideas for moneymaking activities. All your irons in all those fires can be put to good use next April and May when you can successfully launch crucial financial, business or career plans. Wait until March to take a luxurious vacation, meet a new amorous prospect or to investigate lifelong fantasies.

HOROSCOPE

Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Change it up. If a situation has been frustrating, take a walk around the block or wash the car to clear your head. Engaging in physical activity may be more to your liking than racking your brain.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A show of affection might stun you into wordlessness. You aren't a deer, so don't freeze in the headlights of love. Remain poised for romance this weekend; accept compliments with good grace.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Home is where the heart is. The stories you learned at a beloved grandparent's knee are often well worth remembering. If you don't have anything nice to say about someone, then say nothing at all.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Take steps to protect your assets as well as your feelings. You might feel more secure if you take steps to insulate yourself from financial risk. Focus on lasting values and long-term friendships.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Improve your naturally sunny disposition by getting some extra rest. You may need additional patience to deal with energetic, competitive companions. You might be invited to join a group that shares hobbies.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): It is commendable to be enthusiastic, but you might overwhelm others with your knowledge about arcane subjects. Diplomatic skills might be needed to sidestep controversy and avoid disagreements.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Cooperation requires plenty of give and take. When you give plants sunshine, they will grow and blossom; when you give someone a friendly welcome, that person is nurtured, as well.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Smiles take your social ambitions extra miles. Concentrate on the positive instead of the negative this weekend. It is best to be cautious about how you react to a challenge or confrontation.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Get out and about with friends; participate in group activities. Rub shoulders with people who might offer you ways to widen your scope. You can experience diversity without leaving home.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You may need to find suitable outlets to overcome a brief period of frustration and irritation. Anger management is used by those who acknowledge their anger, but wish to channel it appropriately.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You will find little time for idle idling. With a busy schedule and high expectations, you may fall prey to a restless inability to relax. This can create tensions between you and a loved one.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Breeze past trouble and controversy. Plug in the fan of lightheartedness and keep communications circulating. Someone may pressure you to support what is politically expedient but not politically correct.

Today is Saturday, Sept. 22, the 266th day of 2012. There are 100 days left in the year. Autumn arrives at 10:49 a.m. Eastern time.

Today's Highlight:
On Sept. 22, 1862, President Abraham Lincoln issued the preliminary Emancipation Proclamation, declaring all slaves in rebel states should be free as of Jan. 1, 1863.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:
In 1761, Britain's King George III and his wife, Charlotte, were crowned in Westminster Abbey.

In 1776, during the Revolutionary War, Capt. Nathan Hale, 21, was hanged as a spy by the British in New York.

In 1862, King Wilhelm I of Prussia met with Otto von Bismarck, whom he decided to appoint minister president, or premier.

In 1911, pitcher Cy Young, 44, gained his 511th and final career victory as he hurled a 1-0 shutout for the Boston Rustlers against the Pittsburgh Pirates at Forbes Field.

In 1922, Congress passed, and President Warren Harding signed, the Cable Act, which allowed an American woman to keep her U.S. citizenship following marriage to a foreigner, provided the husband was considered eligible for American citizenship.

In 1927, Gene Tunney successfully defended his heavyweight boxing title against Jack Dempsey in the famous "long-count" fight in Chicago.

In 1938, the musical comedy revue "Hellzapoppin'" starring Ole Olsen and Chic Johnson, began a three-year run on Broadway.

In 1961, the Interstate Commerce Commission issued rules prohibiting racial discrimination on interstate buses. Actress Marion Davies died in Los Angeles at age 64.

In 1964, the musical "Fiddler on the Roof" opened on Broadway, beginning a run of 3,242 performances.

In 1975, Sara Jane Moore attempted to shoot President Gerald R. Ford outside a San Francisco hotel, but missed. (Moore served 32 years in prison before being paroled on Dec. 31, 2007.)

In 1980, the Persian Gulf conflict between Iran and Iraq erupted into full-scale war that lasted nearly eight years.

In 1982, the situation comedy "Family Ties" premiered on NBC.

Ten years ago: Thousands of Palestinians marched to protest Israel's siege of Yasser Arafat's headquarters, and Israeli soldiers opened fire on Palestinians who defied curfews. Chancellor Gerhard Schroeder's Social Democrats won one of Germany's closest postwar elections. The White House drama "The West Wing" won its third consecutive Emmy as best drama series; "Friends" was honored as best comedy for the first time in its eight years on the air.

Five years ago: Secretary of State Condoleezza Rice spoke briefly with Iraqi Prime Minister Nouri al-Maliki at the United Nations, but they did not discuss a Baghdad shootout involving guards from a U.S. company protecting American diplomats that claimed civilian lives. Marcel Marceau, the master of mime, died in Paris at age 84.

One year ago: A group of European researchers at the world's biggest physics lab in Switzerland claimed to have measured a subatomic particle, a neutrino, traveling faster than the speed of light, a finding that challenged Einstein's theory of relativity (however, the results have since been refuted by other scientists). American diplomats led a walkout at the U.N. General Assembly as Iran's President Mahmoud Ahmadinejad (ah-muh-DEE'-neh-zahd) fiercely attacked the United States and major West European nations as "arrogant powers" ruled by greed and eager for military adventurism. Pope Benedict XVI arrived in Germany on his first state visit to his homeland.
