Twin Falls Sees Explosion in Code Violation Warnings

TWIN FALLS • Make sure you're pulling your weeds, or you may hear from the city.

Across Magic Valley, code enforcers are working with residents to fix sanitation code violations. Between weeds, irrigation and illegally parked boats, late summer gives enforcers plenty to track.

Twin Falls has seen an especially large increase in code enforcement activity: In August 2012, the department issued 819 warnings, more than three times the amount of warnings it issued in August 2011.

The Twin Falls City Council will hold a public hearing on proposed downtown parking pass rates and fines for parking violations.

Why the surge? Part of it is restructuring within the city's code enforcement office, said Twin Falls community development director Mitch Humble.

After the city council voted to get rid of parking meters downtown, the city gave the parking enforcer new responsibilities in the code enforcement department, giving the city more eyes to watch for low-hanging tree branches and rubbish-filled yards.

"(The violations) have always been occurring," Humble said. "We just didn't have the manpower to go out and do something about it."

Code enforcement duties have also been streamlined. Previously, sanitation and zoning violations were handled by two different departments. Now, one

Redwood Water Pipe Uncovered in Ketchum

BY KAREN BOSSICK

KETCHUM • It was perhaps fitting that the water pipes under Trail Creek Village sprung a leak over Wagon Days weekend.

When workers uncovered the offending pipe, they found an old 2-inch-diameter pipe constructed of redwood, bound with tar paper and cinched with spiral wire.

It looked a perfect match for the late 1800s Big Hitch ore wagons that paraded through the streets of Ketchum that weekend.

"I haven't seen pipe like that in 25 years," said Pat Cooley, utilities services

Man Attacked by Dog in Kimberly

BY ALISON GENE SMITH

KIMBERLY • A man says he was attacked by a pit bull that was charging a young girl while he worked recently in Kimberly.

On Sept. 17, Dan Blackwood said he was working near a trench in the 400 block of Monroe Street West in Kimberly when he heard growling he thought might be two dogs fighting.

When he looked, he said he saw a pit bull running toward a young girl who was playing with a cat or rabbit in a nearby dead-end alley.

"I jumped out of the trench and told her to run," he said. "She just kind of stood there. I turned around and the dog bit my left leg and

Daughter of Peggy Lee Tours North Dakota Museum

BY BRIAN WILLHIDE
The Jamestown Sun

WIMBLEDON, N.D. • It was an emotional trip back in time for Nicki Lee Foster, daughter of famous jazz artist Peggy Lee.

Foster, 68, traveled nearly 1,100 miles from Twin Falls, along with her son, David, to get her first look at the Midland Continental Railroad Depot Transportation Museum in Wimbledon. The depot was home to Foster's mother from 1934 to 1937 prior to the Jamestown-born artist launching a more-than-60-year career as a singer, songwriter and actress.

A tribute to Lee and her career is now on display on the second floor of the museum.

Foster was unable to attend the grand opening of the museum in May because she was still recovering from a broken leg suffered about three years ago.

"I didn't know if I was ever going to see it," Foster said. "I had to work really hard with my physical therapist to get to the point where I could be here today."

This marked Foster's first vacation trip away from her Idaho home in three years.

After touring the renovated depot with family, friends, volunteers and depot renovation committee members for about 2 1/2 hours Wednesday, Foster sat down to discuss her impressions of what she saw.

"For a community this size to put together something of this quality is just extraordinary," she said.

Foster reflected on what her mother would think about seeing the museum if the famous entertainer was still alive today.

"She would be so happy. She would just love it," Foster said. "I honestly think she would be both astounded and delighted."

Seeing the museum also brought back personal memories from Foster's childhood.

code enforcement department handles all issues.

Since the restructuring happened in mid-summer, code enforcement activity has exploded.

But August is always busy, Humble said. The majority of issues code enforcers deal with involve weeds.

"The curve coincides with weed season," he said.

That's consistent with what other cities see, too. In Burley, chief building inspector Gary Pawson said weed violations make up a large amount of what the city tracks. The city also warns residents of boats and RVs parked illegally on the street.

"This time of year we see a big increase in that," Pawson said.

In Jerome County, code enforcer Bob Wright spends much of his summer educating property owners about water on the roads. During irrigation season, it's an especially big problem, he said.

"It's a safety issue," Wright said. It also causes long-term road damage if left alone.

Humble pointed out that 819 warnings in Twin Falls doesn't mean 819 tickets. The department's philosophy is education first, enforcement second. The majority of the time, code enforcers inform residents about the laws about tall weeds or yard sale signs, and most offenders work with the city to fix the problem. Of the 819 warnings in August, more than 700 are already resolved, Humble added.

"We believe that ... the goal is compliance," he said. "The goal isn't fees or fines."

Code enforcer Sean Standley agreed.

"Our number one priority is voluntary compliance," he said. "We do exhaust every avenue before we fine anybody."

Pawson and Wright do the same, giving residents time to comply. If Burley residents ignore weed or junk warnings, Pawson's crews will clean up the lot, then send a bill to the property owner.

According to the city of Twin Falls' website, the most common code violations involve weeds, junk, yard sale signs, vegetation encroachment, sight obstructions, animal permits, sidewalk obstructions and occupied RVs on residential property.

The department also takes care of zoning violations in Twin Falls, including businesses operating illegally out of homes and sign violations.

Words of Encouragement

"Train a child in the way he should go, and when he is old he will not turn from it." Proverbs 22:6

Words of Encouragement

The late coach John Wooden of UCLA fame wrote that mentoring is about ... how we will serve the world and how we will act in it. He got excited to get up in the morning to teach and be taught.

Life is about learning and teaching. The attitude of openness is the bedrock of mentoring. The mentor must know how to both learn and teach. We owe much to the many active mentors in Magic Valley. Thank someone for their encouragement.

The voice of the parent should be the most important voice in a child's life. That happens with love, positive effort, and good listening followed by appropriate response. It must ring clear and consistent. A bad day doesn't lessen the value of a child.

Tim and Beverly Wood manage half-way houses in Twin Falls for men and women transitioning out of prison or jail back into the community. They help the residents in their homes get back on their feet by sharing their experience, strength, and hope.

Most of the people starting over have never had anyone who really loved them that they could trust. Tim and Beverly consistently give them this as they endeavor to help these men and women recover.

"I always acknowledge their success, no matter how big or small," Beverly says. "My girls are encouraged by my affirmation!"

Tim says, "I should do everything to help my guys develop their potential!" Tim and Beverly have been there. They understand what their mentees are going through. They don't plan on giving up on anyone.

I chuckled when Tim brought up the "concrete thinker" as he remembered his rebel days of stubbornness. He said, "We need to keep an open mind. Bad stuff happens to good people all the time. You need to keep doing the right thing no matter what."

Beverly summed it up when she said, "Seize the 'ah-ha' moment to teach the truth that will guide and shape someone's life."

Tim thanks Steve Wills for not giving up on him.

Teachers deserve our thanks, too. I talked about mentoring with Sue Nelson, a math teacher, at Canyon Ridge High School. It didn't take long to see her loving and nonjudgmental approach of respect to her students. The two important life skills she teaches in mathematics are perseverance and problem solving.

"The student makes mistakes that can be corrected, and the student can learn from his or her mistakes," she said. "I want them to be able to think through the problems of life to reach their potential!"

She uses love and logic that she learned from Jim Faye. "Make them love you because you love them. Your caring gives them something else to care about. Because you care, they care."

Take from Sue Nelson that hard work pays off. We owe so much to our teachers. Thank you.

Public Hearing on Parking Tonight

BY MELISSA DAVLIN
mdavlin@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • Today, the Twin Falls City Council will hear a presentation on code enforcement changes and hold a public hearing on proposed downtown parking pass rates and fines for parking violations. Though parking downtown is now free, there is a three-hour limit for most spaces. A parking pass would allow cars to stay in the spaces for longer than three hours.

The proposed rates are $2 for a one day pass, $8 for a week pass, $20 for a month pass and $220 for a year pass.

The council will also consider new parking fines. Previously, violations increased with each additional violation.

Under the new proposal, each violation would cost $35, or $50 if not paid within three business days, regardless of how many previous violations the offender has.

The meeting begins at 5 p.m. at the City Council Chambers, 305 Third Ave. E in Twin Falls. The public hearing starts at 6 p.m.

representative for the city of Ketchum.

"On a rare occasions we do find a piece like that," added Steve Hansen, Ketchum's utility manager. "The last we found in service was probably back in the 1990s on Walnut Street. That was the city main line so we replaced it with modern plastic pipe. I'd estimate that the wooden pipe is gone from 99 percent of city property now."

Redwood pipe was state of the art in the late 1800s when the first water systems were built in the then-fledgling city of Ketchum. The pipe was probably manufactured in Oregon and brought here by wagon or train, said Hansen.

The city replaced the wooden pipes with steel line and later plastic pipe as those technologies became available. But it didn't touch private property such as that at Trail Creek Village, which sits on the south end of Ketchum across from the Kentwood Lodge on Main Street.

The property was developed as a two-story timber lodge in 1927. Chances are, the pipe was there when the hotel was built, said Cooley.

"As antique as this is, they're lucky it lasted as long as it did," said Dave Rambo, water division supervisor for the city of Ketchum.

Dave Rambo, Ketchum's water division supervisor, shows off a piece of redwood pipe that was considered state-of-the-art when it was laid as water pipe under Ketchum.

The property is owned by Ketchum Developer Jack Bariteau, who recently got a year extension to build a 73-room luxury hotel on the site. Bariteau was given the green light to build Hotel Ketchum in 2008 but the project was delayed by the recession.

The pipe probably would have been dug up by now and replaced had the hotel been constructed, said Hansen.

The city of Ketchum bought the water system of the Ketchum Spring Water Company in 1986. But that didn't include pipe on priprivate property such as Trail Creek Village.

City workers gave those repairing the pipe a repair clamp, which was then enclosed in cement. But leaks sprouted in other places.

Time is of the essence with winter approaching and water pressure low for renters in the village. The renters will have no water if the pipe freezes before it's replaced, said Rambo.

The owner is examining alternatives for dealing with the leaking water pipe, said the village's property manager Tim Eagan.

Peggy Lee

"As I went through (the museum), there were a lot of things that had personal meaning to me also," she said. "There were gowns, shoes and hats I can remember her wearing — things I'd look at and say 'I remember that.' In a way, it was like I was looking at my own history, too."

When Lee died in January 2002, Foster said, it was important the family stayed close together and tried to preserve her memory.

"We knew it was our job to make sure her memory would carry on, and that's what you all have done here," Foster said, speaking to the depot volunteers and renovation committee members who were present Wednesday.

Foster said the museum will go a long way toward helping achieve a goal of family members that they have had since Lee's death.

"This is about keeping her legacy going and being able to have newer generations respect and appreciate her," she said.

More than 500 people from 33 states and foreign countries have come through the museum since it opened Memorial Day weekend.

IDAHO OFFICIALS FAIL TO FIND WOUNDED GRIZZLY BEAR

BY KEITH RIDLER
Associated Press

BOISE • Wildlife officials in eastern Idaho say they were unable Sunday to find a grizzly bear wounded a day earlier by elk hunters as they tried to retrieve a six-point bull elk carcass in the Island Park area west of Yellowstone National Park.

Steve Schmidt of the Idaho Department of Fish and Game said a team of seven well-armed wildlife officers reported finding the blood trail of the bear near the elk carcass but that it disappeared after about 460 yards.

Schmidt said the team of five Fish and Game officers and two U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service officers flushed a grizzly bear from the carcass Sunday when they arrived, but it's unknown if that's the same bear wounded on Saturday.

Fish and Wildlife is investigating along with Fish and Game because grizzly bears are a threatened species. Schmidt said the group contained a grizzly bear expert who identified the track of the wounded bear as an adult grizzly, but couldn't estimate its size or determine its gender.

"The blood trail petered out and they did not find the bear and they could not follow the trail any farther," Schmidt said. "At this point their belief is that the bear is not critically injured. It's very possible the bear might

"At this point their belief is that the bear is not critically injured. It's very possible the bear might recover from whatever injuries it has, but that's unknown, of course."

recover from whatever injuries it has, but that's unknown, of course."

He said the trackers, who were in the area for about six hours, didn't find large amounts of blood on the ground, but just a smear of blood here and there, "so it did not appear to be seriously injured." He said there are no plans to resume searching for the bear.

The elk was killed by an eastern Idaho archery hunter whose name isn't being released. The hunter and four others told officials they went to retrieve the elk Saturday morning when the bear charged. The hunters said they fired about a dozen shots with handguns and a shotgun before the bear turned and ran, leaving behind a blood trail.

Schmidt said the area where that occurred is about three quarters of a mile east of U.S. Highway 20 and south and east of the Buffalo River in the Targhee National Forest. The highway in that area crosses the Buffalo River about 12 or 15 miles west of Yellowstone National Park. The nearest residence is about a mile away. Schmidt said signs are being posted on entrance roads to the area warning of grizzly bear activity. He said the elk carcass had been covered with debris by one or more grizzlies, a typical behavior of grizzlies feeding on a large carcass.

The wounding of the grizzly followed an incident in eastern Idaho on Sept. 14, when a 67-year-old archer from Midland, Mich., was bitten on the arm by a grizzly bear. In that incident, the man was helping his hunting partner retrieve a bull elk carcass killed the previous evening along Sheridan Creek in Clark County when the grizzly charged from the brush, bit the man on the bicep, then quickly returned to the trees.

The two hunters walked four miles back to their truck, and the injured hunter was treated at a medical clinic in Ashton and released.

"We need folks to understand that because of the hot, dry summer, the potential conflict with bears is higher than in past years," Schmidt said. "Bears are searching more widely than they have in past years looking for food. The berry drop they might be exploiting this time of year did not do well because of the hot, dry summer."

He said people visiting the forest should be alert for bears, carry bear spray, and not travel alone. He said hunters should make an effort to get killed game out the same day. If that's not possible, he said hunters should approach the area cautiously when they return.

"The three states that surround the Greater Yellowstone area have all heard stories of grizzly bears who fairly quickly moved in on an elk that was downed by hunters," he said.

pushed me into the trench and bit my right leg."

Blackwood said he was bit all over his legs, thighs and groin area. He said he tried to kick and punch the dog, but the dog kept coming back and continued its attack.

When the dog continued to bite him, Blackwood said he picked up his shovel and hit the dog.

"He was bleeding pretty good," Blackwood said. Blackwood said he thought the dog was dead and drove himself to the emergency room. He later called police and said he filed a report Friday. When police searched the area, he said officers told him they couldn't find the dog's body.

The dog didn't have a collar so officers don't know who the dog belonged to and since the dog was never found, Blackwood said he'll need to be tested for rabies.

Blackwood said he's doing well except for being stiff and the pain from the puncture wounds.

Kimberly Police Officer Shane Saufley said he spoke to Blackwood and was working on a report about the incident. Officers have checked local veterinarians and talked to people in the neighborhood, but have not been able to locate the owner, he said.

"We've done some looking around," he said. "We haven't been able to find leads."

If the dog's owner is found they could be charged with harboring a vicious dog, Saufley said. Blackwood described the pit bull as being brown with black marbling.

NEPAL AVALANCHE

AT LEAST 9 CLIMBERS KILLED, 6 MISSING

In this photo provided by Nepalese airline Simrik Air, an injured victim of an avalanche is rescued at the base camp of Mount Manaslu in northern Nepal on Sunday. The avalanche swept away climbers on a Himalayan peak in Nepal on Sunday, leaving at least nine dead and six others missing, officials said.

'It's super sad when our fellow climbers die'

BY BINAJ GURUBACHARYA
Associated Press

KATMANDU, Nepal • An avalanche hit climbers on a high Himalayan peak in Nepal on Sunday, leaving at least nine dead and six others missing, officials said. Many of the climbers were French or German.

Police official Basanta Bahadur Kuwar said the bodies of a Nepalese guide and a German man were recovered and that rescue pilots had spotted seven other bodies on the slopes of Mount Manaslu in northern Nepal, the eighth highest mountain in the world.

In Madrid, Spain's Foreign Ministry said one of those killed was Spanish, but did not release the person's identity.

The identities of the other victims were still being confirmed.

Ten other climbers survived the avalanche but many were injured and were flown to hospitals by rescue helicopters, Kuwar said.

Rescue pilot Pasang, who uses only one name, said three injured French citizens and two Germans had been transported to hospitals in Katmandu.

He said rescuers were also attempting to bring the bodies of the dead back to the base camp.

Weather conditions were deteriorating and it was not possible to continue air searches of the mountain Sunday afternoon, Kuwar said.

The avalanche hit the climbers at a camp at 7,000 meters (22,960 feet) early in the morning as they were preparing to head toward the summit, which is 8,156 meters (26,760 feet) high.

There were Italian, German and French teams on the mountain, with a total of 231 climbers and guides, but not all were at the higher camps, officials said.

It is currently the beginning of Nepal's autumn mountaineering season. The autumn season comes right after the end of the monsoon rains, which make weather conditions unpredictable, and is not as popular among mountaineers as the spring season, when hundreds of climbers crowd the high Himalayan peaks.

Officials were investigating the cause of Sunday's avalanche.

Nepal has eight of the 14 highest peaks in the world. Climbers have complained in recent years that climbing conditions have deteriorated and risks of accidents have increased.

Veteran mountain guide Apa, who has climbed Mount Everest a record 21 times, traveled for months across Nepal earlier this year campaigning about the effects of global warming on the mountain peaks.

He told The Associated Press the mountains now have considerably less ice and snow, making it harder for climbers to use ice axes and crampons on their boots to get a grip on the slopes.

Loose snow also increases the risk of avalanches.

Bill Amos, of Portland, Oregon, an avid mountaineer and ice climber who founded the mountaineering apparel company NW Alpine, said "it's super sad when our fellow climbers die." Amos said his initial thought when he heard about the deadly avalanche in Nepal was that the mountain was being overcrowded with climbers. "That seems to be the same thing that's going on in Everest," he said. "All of that is overcrowding and these commercial expeditions trying to make money?"

Amos added that people who venture into the mountains need to understand the risks and dangers associated with backcountry travel and be able to spot avalanche terrain and dangerous snowpack.

Sinai Raids May Force Israel-Egypt Accord hanges

BY JOSEF FEDERMAN
Associated Press

JERUSALEM • Israeli officials said Sunday they would resist any Egyptian attempts to reopen the military arrangements under the countries' historic peace deal, despite the rapidly deteriorating security situation in Egypt's Sinai peninsula.

But following a series of attacks staged by militants in the Sinai, including a raid that killed an Israeli soldier last week, Israel may have no choice but to allow Egypt to beef up its forces in the largely demilitarized border area.

Friday's shooting is likely to fuel new Egyptian calls to reopen the peace treaty. In recent years, as shadowy militant groups have grown more active in the Sinai, Egyptian security officials have said they need to be allowed more firepower to bring the area under control. Ansar Jerusalem, a group inspired by al-Qaida that is hostile to both Israel and Egypt, claimed responsibility for the latest attack.

For now, Israel is standing tough. Israel's hard-line foreign minister, Avigdor Lieberman, said Sunday that Israel would not agree to reevaluate the terms of the peace deal.

"There is no chance that Israel will agree to any kind of change," he told Israel Radio. "The Egyptians shouldn't try to delude themselves or delude others, and they should not rely on this demand!"

Lieberman said troop strength was not the issue and suggested the Egyptian military was just not prepared to tackle the challenge.

"The problem in Sinai is not the size of the forces, it is their readiness to fight, to put pressure and to carry out the job as is needed," he said.

The 1979 peace accord, the first between Israel and an Arab country, has been a foundation for regional stability for three decades.

For Egypt, it brought the return of the Sinai, captured by Israel in the 1967 Middle East war, and access to American aid and weapons. For Israel, it allowed the military to divert precious resources to volatile fronts with Lebanon, Syria and the Palestinians.

Ivory Coast Reopens Air Space with Ghana

ABIDJAN, Ivory Coast (AP) • Ivory Coast says it will allow flights to resume with Ghana, and has reopened its air space after closing its borders following last week's cross-border attack. However, the country has not yet agreed to reopen its land and maritime borders.

Four gunmen were killed in an attempted raid on security posts on Friday in the town of Noe, near the Ghanaian border. Military officials said late Sunday they believe the attack originated in Ghana, and the government announced Friday that all borders would be closed.

Ivory Coast accuses allies of ousted President Laurent Gbagbo, including some hiding in Ghana, of being behind a spate of attacks on military positions that began in August. Ghanaian President John Dramani Mahama has vowed not to let his country be used as a staging ground.

PHILADELPHIA MAN NAZI PROBE TARGET

ASSOCIATED PRESS

BERLIN • Germany has launched a war crimes investigation against an 87-year-old Philadelphia man it accuses of serving as an SS guard at the Auschwitz death camp, The Associated Press has learned, following years of failed U.S. Justice Department efforts to have the man stripped of his American citizenship and deported.

Johann "Hans" Breyer, a retired toolmaker, admits he was a guard at Auschwitz during World War II, but told the AP he was stationed outside the facility and had nothing to do with the wholesale slaughter of some 1.5 million Jews and others behind the gates.

The special German office that investigates Nazi war crimes has recommended that prosecutors

charge him with accessory to murder and extradite him to Germany for trial on suspicion of involvement in the killing of at least 344,000 Jews at the Auschwitz-Birkenau death camp in occupied Poland.

The AP also has obtained documents that raise doubts about Breyer's testimony about the timing of his departure from Auschwitz.

The case is being pursued on the same legal theory used to prosecute late Ohio autoworker John Demjanjuk, who died in March while appealing his conviction in Germany on charges he served as a guard at the notorious Sobibor death camp, also in occupied Poland.

The conviction was not considered legally binding because Demjanjuk died before his appeals were exhausted. But prosecutors maintain they can still use the same legal argument to pursue Breyer. Under that line of thinking — even without proof of participation in any specific crime — a person who served as a death camp guard can be charged with accessory to murder because the camp's sole function was to kill people.

SENIOR

Q. We realize that it is important to prepare for a serious emergency such as a natural disaster. Do you have any simple suggestions to get us started?

A. Whatever your age it is wise to think about "emergency readiness." Some experts suggest a 3-step approach. First, know the basics. Recognize risks your community faces (such as blizzards, floods, tornadoes, earthquakes). Know how to turn off your home's gas and electricity. Know your neighbors! Second, keep emergency supplies on-hand so you can survive at home until help arrives. Include ready-to-eat food, medications, water, pet food (if needed), a first-aid kit, and a battery-powered radio and flashlight (and extra batteries), a list of emergency contact numbers, and a cell phone. Pre-pack an "evacuation bag" with items you would need to make a safe and quick evacuation from your home. Third, make a personal plan for special needs you or your loved ones have. If vital medical equipment is powered by electricity, explore options for temporary emergency power. If you rely on a home health provider, know their emergency plan. Also, your community leaders have a plan to respond to a serious emergency. Be sure to know what it is.

Former CIA Operative Edwin Wilson Dies at 84

SEATTLE (AP) • Edwin Wilson set up front companies abroad for the CIA, made millions in the arms trade and entertained generals and congressmen at his sprawling Virginia farm.

His high-powered, jet-setting life in the 1970s and early 1980s followed a career in the CIA. But it came crashing down when he was branded a traitor and convicted in 1983 for shipping 20 tons of C-4 plastic explosives to Libya.

After two decades in prison, Wilson finally got the conviction overturned, convincing a judge that he had continued to work informally for the agency.

The man who once posed as a rich American businessman abroad spent his final years living with his brother near Seattle.

Wilson died Sept. 10 from complications from a heart valve replacement surgery, said Craig Emmick, a director at Columbia Funeral Home in Seattle. He was 84.

"Our family always supported him and believed in him," his nephew, Scott Wilson, said Saturday, adding that the biggest part of his uncle's vindication was "that the label of being a traitor would be taken off."

"He never considered himself a traitor, of course," Wilson added.

Wilson was born May 3, 1928, to a farming family in Nampa, Idaho. He worked as a merchant seaman, and earned a psychology degree from the University of Portland in 1953.

He joined the Marines and fought in the last days of the Korean War, according to his death notice. He went to work for the Central Intelligence Agency in 1955 after being discharged from the Marines.

Wilson entered the arms trade after leaving the CIA in 1971, according to a 2004 Washington Post article.

"I had a couple of villas that were very, very nice," he told the newspaper at the time. "I had Pakistani houseboys and I had Libyans working for me, typing up proposals in Arabic."

In 1982, he was lured out of hiding in Libya and brought to New York for arrest.

A federal court in Virginia convicted him of exporting firearms to Libya without permission and sentenced him to 10 years. He was convicted in Texas in 1983, receiving a 17-year sentence for similar crimes.

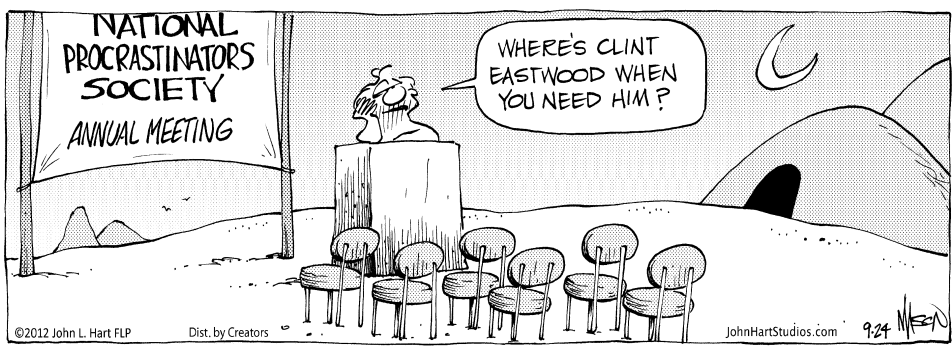

A New York court also sentenced him to 25 years, to run consecutively with the Texas and Virginia sentences, for attempted murder, criminal solicitation and other charges involving claims that Wilson conspired behind bars to have witnesses and prosecutors killed.

At trial, Wilson said he made the sales to ingratiate himself with the Libyan government at the CIA's request. While in prison, Wilson sought to prove his innocence by using the Freedom of Information Act to request government documents.

Suburbs Create Interesting Shift for Idaho Politics

Most of Idaho is stable politically: For a couple of decades now its Republican/Democratic votes have varied hardly at all. Idaho generally isn’t a likely candidate for very much change in this year’s elections and the next few beyond.

Randy Stapilus
Ridenbaugh.com

But there are a couple types of areas that bear some watching. The area of Idaho that is, or ought to be, the most interesting politically is — the suburbs.

Washington or Oregon illustrate what I’m talking about. Oregon was mostly Democratic in much of the 80s; in the mid-90s Republicans staged a comeback, which ebbed into Democratic majorities in recent years though as elsewhere they made some pushback in 2010 (and its state House now is tied between the parties). Washington’s story is similar.

Most of those states changed little in these ebbs and flows. Rural areas were Republican and stayed so. The most urban — close in to Seattle and Portland — were Democratic and if anything became more so. What shifted was the suburbs. In Oregon, the long-Republican second-largest county in the state (Washington) changed sides about a decade ago and has since been reliably Democratic. Most of the people there live in Portland suburbs and smaller urban centers in its orbit — not so different from Meridian and Nampa in Idaho. When Republicans gained in 2010, that happened almost exclusively in Washington County and other suburbs around Portland; the central urban and the rural parts of Oregon barely moved. Again, the same dynamic has happened in Washington state.

Could it happen in Idaho? Point one is that there’s no significant evidence that it has — yet at least.

The real suburban areas in Idaho are two: west and north of Boise and north and west of Coeur d’Alene. Depending on how you count, these suburban areas account for six or seven legislative districts out of 35. The Boise suburbs, including places like Meridian, Eagle, Kuna, Middleton and to some extent the city of Nampa as well, have been solidly Republican ... always. Since the New Deal era western Ada has elected hardly any Democrats, just two in 1990 to the Senate, lasting one term each. Few general elections in the area since 1990 have even been competitive, even when the Democrat is running a strong campaign. The same has become true in Kootenai County; more than two decades back, areas like Port Falls were politically competitive, but not now.

There are a few tests of these propositions coming up in this year’s election. The biggest are two legislative races in District 15, which includes part of Boise city (on the west side) but long has had a suburban feel. District 15 has been solidly Republican for decades, the last exception being one Senate term held by a Democrat after the 1990 election. This year, Democrats have a pair of strong candidates running strong campaigns, Betty Richardson, the former U.S. Attorney and congressional candidate, for the Senate, and Steve Berch, who ran a strong campaign (which nonetheless was swamped) in the old District 14, for one of the House seats. There are indications one or both might succeed — not a prediction here of who will win, but a suggestion that these may be really competitive races.

Indications, but not much more. They will be significant test cases. As districts closer in to Boise’s core shifted to competitive (16 and 18) or even Democratic (17) in the last decade, 15 shows some signs it may do that as well. If it does, other suburban districts later may as well. We may learn something interesting about Idaho’s suburbs when we see the results in November from those two races.

Beliefs of Democratic Party in Line with Teachings of the Bible

Ayn Rand’s novel “Atlas Shrugged” is back in the news, as some Republican candidates have held up her philosophy of Objectivism as an inspiration.

“I grew up reading Ayn Rand and it taught me quite a bit about who I am and what my value systems are,” Paul Ryan, the Republican vice presidential candidate, said in 2005. Ryan asked his congressional staff and interns to read Rand’s novels to find the moral basis for capitalism and individualism.

So, if Republicans follow Rand, what’s the one author or book that describes the Democratic philosophy? Several people have mentioned Charles Dickens, Upton Sinclair (“The Jungle”) and Howard Zinn (“People’s History of the United States”). But the Democrats have a large tent and do not support a narrow ideal. Perhaps one author cannot represent them.

I find the parables of Jesus Christ meet the match of “Atlas Shrugged.” It is not an original answer, but the parables get right to the point of what nonconservatives are all about. The parables are time tested for much longer than Rand’s philosophy and much shorter in length compared to “Atlas Shrugged.”

Ayn Rand was an excellent fiction writer (many conservatives like her even 55 years later) and succeeded in generating intense emotion from her readers. She essentially preached that people should work hard and live for themselves. She encouraged self-idolization and serving one’s true character, desires, happiness and personal zeal. She opposed communism for the same reason — it purports to promote society over individualism. In a peculiar way, she has embodied the ideal expressed in the U.S. Declaration of Independence: life, liberty and the pursuit of individual happiness. Compassion and caring for others are seen as weaknesses by her protagonists. She vehemently promotes individuality and the idea of making money. Adultery is not forbidden since it promotes satisfaction of the self.

Jesus’ parables, on the other hand, are simple stories with humble, straightforward messages meant for all — rich or poor, successful or not. Essentially, they teach us to be compassionate to our fellow men — to be selfless rather than selfish. The essence of the parables, compared to Rand’s ideologies, is self-evident: The “Parable of the Good Samaritan” (Jesus commanded, “Love thy neighbor as thyself.” He then said, “Go and do likewise.”); “The Parable of the Prodigal Son” (teaching forgiveness and to be happy that the reckless son/brother has returned); “A Camel and a Needle’s Eye” (sell your possessions, give to the poor, and follow me); “The Sheep and the Goat” (whatever you did for one of the least of these brothers and sisters, you did it to me.), etc.

You be the judge of which philosophy to pursue. Then vote accordingly.

New Movie a Reminder that Freedom Bought at a Great Price

We went to see a new movie recently, and I was so disappointed that there were only eight people in the whole theater. Well, it was a Monday night, but I got to thinking, maybe all you folks around Twin Falls just haven’t heard of the movie!

It’s called “Last Ounce of Courage,” and it is a movie that every patriotic American who cares about his or her freedom, especially our freedom of religion, should go see. It reminds us that separation of church and state was to keep government from cramming any particular religion down our throats, not to keep us from voluntarily enjoying our religion of choice.

No matter what religion you relate to, or even if you choose none at all, we all have an equal right to express it openly, which should include our children’s right to voluntarily take a Bible to school or to pray if they should so choose. That is not forcing anyone else to do so, but is exercising one’s own right.

The movie reminds us too that our freedoms, all of them, have been bought with a great price over the last few hundred years and should not be taken lightly. These freedoms are being slowly, but surely, taken away due our own complacency. We must take action if we, the majority, are to keep a small minority from destroying these freedoms. Take the time to go see this movie, and judge for yourself. Or just do nothing and continue to allow evil to triumph.

Please Drive with Caution near Semis

Let me start by saying I know a lot of people don’t know what truck drivers have to go through. It isn’t easy driving the big truck and having to deal with the traffic, so please give us room. I know nobody likes to be stuck behind a big truck. We don’t care if you pass us, but please do so with caution and don’t cut us off. We can’t stop like a car can if we are going 55 miles per hour. It takes 100 yards to come to a full stop, the length of a football field.

Please remember if it wasn’t for trucks, then the country couldn’t function.

There is a saying, “If you bought it, then a truck brought it.”

So as a professional driver of 26 years myself, I’m asking for all of us please be courteous and patient. We are working to make this world operate a little smoother. Thank you.

Idaho Is Poor State Under Republican Rule

Republicans, your votes count. Your party platform states “no abortions,” period. Even, pay attention now, if your daughter, your wife, your mother or your sister is brutally raped and left for dead. Your vote for the Republican Party ensures your loved one will have no other option than to endure the birthing process to bring her at-tacker’s abomination into the world against her will.

This position is horrible, despicable and your vote for Republicans supports this immoral outrage against women. Democrats support a woman’s choice, equal pay for women and thanks to “Obamacare,” 40 million women now have free preventative “girl stuff” health care. Use this benefit from “Obamacare” now because if you vote Republican, Romney says he will destroy “Obamacare” the first day. Why? President Obama plugged the Medicare “donut hole” for seniors, provided insurance for your children over 18 and stopped predatory insurance companies from dropping you from coverage. These are good things.

Further, Idaho is a very poor state under Republican rule. The U.S. Catholic Bishops call the Romney/Ryan budget “immoral” because their budget hammers the poor. That’s you, Idaho. Hammered to give tax breaks to the wealthiest.

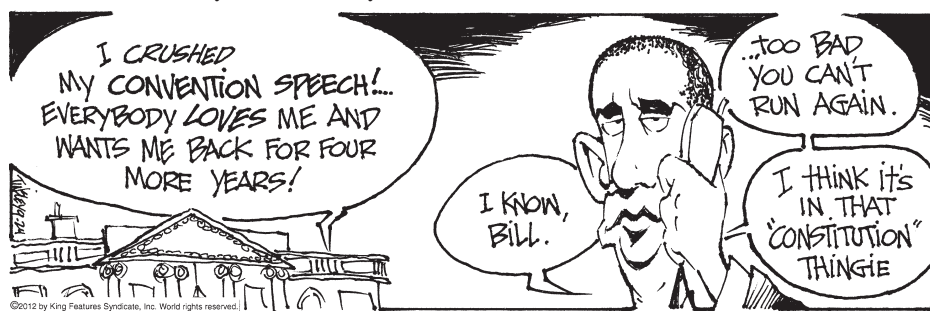

Author Ayn Rand, an atheist is the guiding light of Paul Ryan and the Republican Party and advocates that altruism (helping others) is a sign of weakness and only helps undesirables to live longer. This is contrary to the teachings of Jesus Christ. Though Republicans say they embrace Christianity, their policies of torture, forcing a raped woman to have the baby and the Romney/Ryan budget are distinctly anti-Christ. Republicans manipulate Christianity to serve not the God of Abraham, but the god of profit through false teachers/churches. You know false teachers/churches by their actions/fruit/deeds/support of policies opposing the example of Jesus. Vote Obama/Democrats instead.

MEDICARE Q&A

Q: Will there be a set of guaranteed benefits that private plans must cover in Romney's revamped Medicare?

A: The Romney campaign website says, "All insurance plans must offer coverage at least comparable to what Medicare provides today."

Q: What will Obama do if seniors start having problems getting the care they need?

A: The administration says that's unlikely to happen. Cuts are being introduced gradually. "The president will continue to make sure that seniors have access to the benefits they have earned," Obama campaign spokesman Adam Fetcher says.

ROMNEY

Romney Medicare Plan: Key Details Still in Flux

BY RICARDO ALONSO-ZALDIVAR
Associated Press

WASHINGTON • Medicare is the one health insurance plan that will cover virtually every American at some point in life, and Republican Mitt Romney is proposing the biggest changes since its creation nearly 50 years ago.

With important details still hazy, The Associated Press asked the Romney campaign five questions about how his Medicare plan would affect consumers on critical matters of costs and benefits.

Some of the questions remained unresolved after the campaign's responses. It may take electing Romney to find out how his plan would work.

"One of the things that concerns me about both campaigns is that they tend to use jargon terms like 'competition' or 'protection for benefits' without spelling out how they would deal with the challenges that come up," said economist Marilyn Moon, a former trustee overseeing Medicare finances. "Their answer is to attack the other side, or simply reinforce the same jargon, rather than explaining how things would work."

Broadly speaking, Romney calls for shifting people now age 54 and younger into a different sort of Medicare. Once eligible, these people would get a fixed payment from the government, adjusted for inflation, to pay for either private insurance or a government plan modeled on Medicare. Current beneficiaries and those nearing retirement could stay in the traditional program.

Some Medicare questions for consumers to keep in mind, along with answers from the Romney campaign and the views of several experts:

Q: What happens if Romney's fixed health insurance payment for future retirees fails to keep up with rising medical costs?

A: Thousands of dollars in costs could get shifted to retirees, punching holes in household budgets. Health care inflation is now in a lull, but historically it has grown faster than the economy, overall inflation, and workers' wages.

Romney's campaign says his goal is to avoid cost shifting and to secure for future Medicare beneficiaries affordable coverage options at least as good as what's available for today's seniors. Lower-income Medicare recipients would get more money from the government for their health insurance.

Tom Scully, Medicare administrator under President George W. Bush, says Congress would intervene to make up the difference. "The reality is if inflation outstrips that payment, Congress will probably make an adjustment," said Scully.

Q: Romney has said he would repeal Obama's health care overhaul. Would he reinstate Medicare benefits improved by the law? They include closing the prescription drug coverage gap — the "doughnut hole" — and expanding coverage of preventive care with no copays.

A: The campaign is silent on this issue, although Vice President Joe Biden is hammering the GOP nominee, saying Romney's repeal of the health law would lead to an immediate loss of benefits for millions of current Medicare recipients.

"I think it would be very hard for (Romney) to take that away," said Berwick.

Q: Romney would turn the Medicaid program for low-income people over to the states, sharply limiting its the future growth. The costliest Medicaid cases are some 9 million elderly and disabled people who also have Medicare, more than 1 million of them in nursing homes. Would Romney require states to institute special protections for this vulnerable group?

A: The campaign says Medicaid spending would grow under Romney's plan, and states will have the flexibility to design programs that serve low-income people most effectively. But several experts said the federal government also has to require accountability from states.

"If there is no protection for these people a lot of states are going to start knocking them off the rolls," said former AARP CEO Bill Novelli, now at Georgetown University in Washington. "These are the most vulnerable among us. There has to be a way to deal with Medicaid without leaving it entirely to the states."

Q: Romney's privatization plan would not affect current beneficiaries or anyone joining Medicare before 2023. But does Romney also guarantee that he will protect traditional Medicare from any future cuts?

A: The campaign is silent on this issue. Moon, the former trustee, says it's an important question, and deserves an answer.

"I would be very nervous about remaining in a program that it has been announced is going away," said Moon, now with the nonpartisan American Institutes for Research. "Because there will be fewer and fewer people who will speak up for it over time."

OBAMA

Obama Medicare Plan: No Voucher but Maybe a Bill

BY RICARDO ALONSO-ZALDIVAR
Associated Press

WASHINGTON • He'll never turn Medicare into a voucher, but if you are lucky enough to be financially comfortable in retirement, odds are you'll pay higher premiums under President Barack Obama's plan. It's not just the 1 percent who'll feel the pinch.

And take note, baby boomers: The Medicare you get won't be quite as generous as what your parents' generation enjoys. A higher deductible here, a new co-payment there, and the tweaks add up.

With the future of Medicare on the line in the presidential election, The Associated Press asked the Obama campaign five questions about how his plans for seniors' health care would affect critical issues of costs and benefits.

Unlike Romney, Obama is not calling for a major Medicare remake. Most of the president's cost-cutting ideas are incorporated in his health care law, and will phase in unless Romney wins and makes good on his pledge to repeal it. Other Obama proposals are drawn from government advisory groups or bipartisan commissions seeking consensus on how to reduce deficits.

If Obama is re-elected and plunges into deficit negotiations with congressional Republicans, he will be pushed for greater Medicare savings, by cutting payments to service providers or squeezing more from recipients.

Some Medicare questions for consumers to watch, along with answers from the Obama campaign and the views of several experts:

Q: What new costs can seniors expect under Obama's plan for Medicare?

A: You may need a CPA degree to understand the complicated details of changes proposed by the president.

Broadly speaking, Obama would raise monthly premiums for retirees making $85,000 or more ($170,000 for married couples). He also would hit newly joining baby boomers with a series of fees.

Currently only about 5 percent of beneficiaries pay higher, income-based monthly premiums for outpatient coverage under Medicare Part B and even fewer pay higher premiums for prescription drug coverage.

Under Obama's proposal, a growing share of seniors would pay the higher premiums over time. He'd also bump up the premiums paid by higher-income beneficiaries by 15 percent.

After about 20 years, the top 25 percent of Medicare recipients would be paying higher, income-based premiums.

An analysis by the nonpartisan Kaiser Family Foundation estimates that in 2017, a single retiree with income of $86,000 would pay $447 more in premiums for Medicare's outpatient and prescription drug coverage. A married couple with income of $894 more in that year.

As for the fees on newly joining baby boomers, they'd face a $25 increase in their annual outpatient deductible (initially for a few years only), some limits on the use of "Medigap" insurance to fill in gaps left by Medicare, and a new home health co-payment in certain cases.

Think of these proposals as the president's opening bid in budget talks.

Q: Hasn't Obama also hinted he might be willing to increase the eligibility age for Medicare?

A: In budget negotiations with Republicans last year, Obama indicated a willingness to consider gradually raising the eligibility age to 67, from 65 now. Romney supports the idea. But the president has since walked it back.

"President Obama has always been willing to make hard choices to confront big challenges, and sometimes that means listening to other ideas," said campaign spokesman Adam Fetcher. "But (Obama) believes we can strengthen the future of Medicare without raising the eligibility age."

Translation: The idea is not quite off the table, and Obama, if re-elected, will again face the choice in budget negotiations. "I think it will continue to be analyzed," said Don Berwick, Obama's first Medicare chief. Berwick believes there is a downside to postponing Medicare eligibility, because a sizable number of future retirees would join the program in weaker health.

"As an administration official, I was not impressed that it would save money for the (Medicare) trust fund," said Berwick. "But I would say it will continue to be studied."

Q: Obama's health care law already increases the Medicare payroll tax for individuals making over $200,000. What's to rule out a broader tax increase?

A: McClellan says that's always a risk, particularly because Obama's health care law funnels the higher Medicare payroll tax into providing coverage for working-age uninsured people.

"Because those revenues are dedicated to the coverage expansion, everything else being equal, the government is going to need more revenue to cover the cost of the (Medicare) program," he said. "If that money had been used for deficit reduction, or to increase the life of the trust fund, the government would have more existing resources."

The White House says there are no plans to propose higher Medicare taxes.

Q: The administration pulled the plug on a new long-term care insurance program because of financing problems. How does Obama plan to address this unmet national need in his second term?

A: The campaign says Obama is willing to work with anyone who has good ideas about long-term care, and that Medicaid and Medicare will continue working to help seniors who want to stay in their own homes, instead of going into nursing facilities.

But Novelli said paying for long-term care remains a huge problem for middle-class elders and their families.

Obama "may have to punt, they may not want to go there," said Novelli. "But, yes, as a society we've got to go there."

2012 Challenge: Corral Undecided Likely Voters

BY NANCY BENAC
AND JENNIFER AGIESTA
Associated Press

WASHINGTON • Loretta Mitchell is 100 percent sure she's going to vote in the presidential race come November. She doesn't have a clue who'll get that vote.

That makes her a rare and highly sought after commodity: an undecided likely voter.

The challenge for President Barack Obama and Republican Mitt Romney is how to lay claim to this small but mightily important swath of the electorate. These people are truly up for grabs, claim they're intent on voting and yet aren't paying that much attention.

With six hard-fought weeks left in the campaign, just 7 percent of likely voters have yet to pick a candidate, according to an Associated Press-GfK poll. When combined with those who are leaning toward one candidate or the other but far from firm in their choice, about 17 percent of likely voters are what pollsters consider "persuadable."

That includes 6 percent who give soft support to Obama and 4 percent for Romney.

Mitchell, a 68-year-old independent from the small town of Lebanon, Ind., voted for Obama in 2008 but says both candidates this year strike her as "true politicians, and I'm just really down with Washington and politicians."

Like a lot of undecideds, she isn't sure what's going to determine her ballot, and she's in no rush to decide.

The triggers for how and when the undecideds will make up their minds are intensely personal.

So the campaigns have to hope to pick them off as they pursue swing groups in the most competitive states — segments of voters such as independents, seniors and white working-class voters.

People such as Donna Olson, a 66-year-old semi-retired truck driver from Oskaloosa, Iowa, who calls herself a former Democrat.

Olson expects to wait until November to make up her mind, just as she did four years ago, when her vote ultimately went to Republican John McCain.

"I don't like either one of them," Olson says of Obama and Romney. She specifically mentions Obama's support for gay marriage and Romney's proposed tax breaks for wealthy Americans.

So how will she make up her mind?

"I'm just trying to watch a little bit of everything," says Olson. "It probably will come down to November, but I'm open to see what happens between now and then."

At least Olson's tuned in to the race. One huge hurdle for both sides in the next six weeks will be getting the attention of the undecideds.

While 69 percent of likely voters report they're paying a great deal of attention to the race, the figure drops to 59 percent for persuadable likely voters. Among the larger group of all registered voters, just 31 percent of persuadables show much interest in the campaign.

That's one reason both campaigns are pouring so much money into advertising in the most contested states, and why so many ads focus on the campaign's central issue, the economy.

Persuadable voters are deeply negative about the current state of the economy. Almost two-thirds call it poor, and only 28 percent expect the economy to improve in the coming year.

That is far more pessimistic than other voters. Fifty percent of likely voters who have settled on a candidate think the economy will improve in the next year.

While the campaigns are trying lock down every vote they can — through early voting whenever possible — there's always a chunk of the electorate that's late to make up its mind.

In 2008, 4 percent of voters said they didn't pick their candidate until the last day, and they favored Obama by 5 percentage points. Another 3 percent decided in the last three days, and they skewed toward McCain. A further 3 percent decided sometime in the last week and they were about evenly divided.

In 2004, 9 percent of voters reported deciding in the last three days, and they heavily favored Democrat John Kerry over President George W. Bush, who nonetheless won re-election.

In general, the persuadables look a lot like other likely voters, and they're similarly distributed around the country, which makes it tricky for the campaigns to specifically target them. About 52 percent are male and 48 percent female. They do skew slightly Democratic.

Thirty-nine percent say they are Democrats or lean that way, 34 percent are Republican or lean GOP, and 27 percent are independent. Among all likely voters, by contrast, just 8 percent are independent and don't lean toward one party or the other.

The campaigns are intent on firming up those persuadables who already lean their way, and then hope to pick off undecided voters in the swing voter groups they're already making a priority.

The campaigns also are hoping their firm supporters can zero in on undecideds within their own spheres of influence.

'Illegitimate' Militias Ordered to Disband

BY OSAMA ALFITORY
Associated Press

BENGHAZI, Libya • Libya's president ordered all of the country's militias to come under government authority or disband, a move that appeared aimed at harnessing popular anger against the powerful armed groups following the attack last week that killed the U.S. ambassador.

The assault on the U.S. mission in Benghazi, which left Ambassador Chris Stevens and three other Americans dead, has sparked an angry backlash among many Libyans against the myriad armed factions that continue to run rampant across the nation nearly a year after the end of the country's civil war. On Friday, residents of Benghazi — the cradle of the Libyan revolution last year that toppled dictator Moammar Gadhafi — staged a mass demonstration against the militias before storming the compounds of several armed groups in the city in an unprecedented protest to demand the militias dissolve.

Late Saturday, President Mohammed el-Megaref told reporters that the militias, which the weak central government has relied upon since Gadhafi's ouster in October to provide security in neighborhoods and at state facilities across the country, must fall under the umbrella of the national authorities or disband.

El-Megaref said a joint operations room in Benghazi will coordinate between the various authorized armed brigades and the army. Militias operating outside the "legitimacy of the state" will be dissolved, and the military and police will take control over those armed groups' barracks, he said.

In a statement published by the official LANA news agency, the military asked all armed groups using the army's camps, outposts and barracks in the capital, Tripoli, and other cities to hand them over. It warned that it will resort to force if the groups refuse.

Since Gadhafi's capture and killing, the government has brought some militias nominally under the authority of the military or Interior Ministry, but even those retain separate commanders and often are only superficially subordinate to the state. Even following el-Megaref's announcement, it was unclear whether the government had the will — and the firepower — to force the most powerful militias bend to its authority.

Over the past 11 months, a series of interim leaders in Libya has struggled to bring order to a country that was eviscerated during the eccentric dictator's 42-year rule, with security forces and the military intentionally kept weak and government institutions hollowed of authority.

The militias, which arose as people took up arms to fight Gadhafi's regime and are organized largely along local lines, bristle with heavy weapons, pay little attention to national authorities and are accused by some of acting like gangs, carrying out killings. Islamist militias often push their demands for enforcement of strict Shariah law.

On Friday, some 30,000 people took to the streets of Benghazi for a mass protest against the militias. The crowd marched to the compounds of several armed groups in the city, and thousands overran the headquarters of Ansar al-Shariah, an Islamic extremist group suspected in the Sept. 11 attack on the U.S. Consulate.

The protesters drove out the Ansar gunmen and set fire to cars in the compound — once a major base for Gadhafi's feared security forces — while others stormed into the Jalea Hospital, driving out Ansar fighters there.

NFL Roundup: Ryan, DeCoud Lead Falcons over Chargers 27-3 • S3

Twin Falls' Jason Byce holds onto the ball as Skyline's Rudy Cortez comes down on him Friday night at Twin Falls High School in Twin Falls.

Magic Valley's Athletes of the Week

11-man football: Jason Gillette, Declo. Gillette "only" ran for 105 yards, but four of his 15 carries went for touchdowns as the Hornets dispatched Filer 63-0 on Friday.

8-man football: Logan Bosma, Lighthouse Christian. Bosma threw for nearly 300 yards and tossed seven touchdowns against North Gem on Friday. He also rushed for one in the 60-12 win.

Boys soccer: Eder Macias, Wendell. Macias scored two goals in each of the Trojans' games last week, both wins as they surged back into first place in the High Desert Conference standings.

Girls soccer: Jordyn Clark, Twin Falls. Clark netted two hat tricks last week as the Bruins won three games to extend their win streak to 12 and get within four points of an outright conference title.

Volleyball: Mallory Critchfield, Oakley. Critchfield was at her best when the Hornets needed her against Hansen last week, smashing down 26 kills in five-set win over the Huskies.

Boys cross country: Eliseo Garcia, Gooding. Garcia continued to deliver on the promise he showed as a freshman last year, blowing away the field for a 14-second win at the Bob Firman Invitational (16:38).

Girls cross country: Jasmine Nesbitt, Jerome. The standard bearer for District IV this season, Nesbitt continued her dominant season with a run of 19:10 at the Blackfoot Invitational, winning by 25 seconds.

What We Learned: Week 4

TWIN FALLS • Well, that was certainly an interesting week. And not all of it was good.

So much of what we thought we knew got thrown out the window Friday night. Teams we thought were good played really poorly, and other teams surprised. It's the midway point, so we should have a good finger on these squads, but there's still a lot playing out that's unexpected.

1. The Great Basin Conference is either very good, or very poor, with very little in between. The good and bad camp members vary almost weekly, it seems. Twin Falls isn't winning games, but the Bruins looked solid until Thomas Corr injured his ankle against Highland Sept. 7. Since then they've had trouble moving the ball and had to lean on the defense yet again — except Skyline pretty much exposed the secondary last week. Not quite back to the drawing board, but it's emblematic of a conference that's still figuring itself out. Jerome looks very strong one week, and gets blown right off the field the next. Burley, after looking so promising against Minico, can't get out of its own

SPORTSWEEK FOR SEPT. 24

If you can only do one thing per day, here's what you just cannot miss:

Monday
Bliss dropped precious points to Filer, which could be a fatal blow in the chase to overhaul the Community School in the High Desert girls soccer standings. The Bears travel to Wendell (4:30 p.m.), knowing they can't afford another slip-up.

Wednesday
One of the final twists in a topsy-turvy High Desert Conference boys soccer season will unfold as Wendell travels to Buhl (approx. 6 p.m.) The Trojans took over first place in the conference with some help from Buhl, which surprised Gooding. Now they look to avoid the same fate.

Thursday
It's the final battle for Great Basin Conference girls soccer supremacy — at least in the regular season. Twin Falls travels to Wood River (4:30 p.m.), likely needing just a draw to clinch the conference title outright for the first time after sharing it last year.

Tuesday
It's the first clash of the Great Basin Conference volleyball titans. Jerome and Twin Falls have gone one-two the last two seasons. The Bruins haven't dropped a GBC set since 2010. They play at Twin Falls (5 p.m.) as part of a tri with Filer.

Friday
If you're not interested in Twin Falls-Jerome or any of the other football games on the docket (what's wrong with you?!), a top 10 JUCO volleyball showdown takes place when North Idaho College (which will drop from No. 1) visits CSI (which will go up from No. 4) at 7 p.m.

Saturday
This is what we call the deep breath before the plunge. Districts for soccer start late next week, and volleyball won't be too far behind. Enjoy a day on the couch (or at your favorite watering hole) and catch some football, or sneak over to Hansen for some 1A volleyball.

MAGIC VALLEY SPEEDWAY

McKean Wraps Up Another Championship

BY LINDA BRITTSAN
For the Times-News

TWIN FALLS • As the point standings leader, Kris McKean was planning on just staying out of trouble in the final race of the season.

But once on the track at Magic Valley Speedway, the adrenaline flows, the competitiveness sets in and things happen.

With Dan Pehrson holding a sizable lead in the Super Stocks main event race Saturday night, McKean and Hannah Newhouse fought for position behind Casey Pehrson. Touching and rubbing as they ran side by side lap after lap, the pair was finally broken up after Newhouse ran out of room on the front stretch getting sandwiched between McKean and the wall. As she spun into Turn 2, the yellow lights lit up the track and a restart was soon set up with McKean taking his place at the rear of the field for bringing out the caution.

Taking full advantage of his position on what would be the final green flag restart of the race, Casey Pehrson motored to the front of the field with his father Dan Pehrson falling to second. Casey Pehrson was able to maintain the lead and would go on the take the checkered flag at Lap 30.

"I was only worried about my dad whooping up on me," said the race winner. "Those other guys can do whatever they want to do — I was just racing."

Magic Valley Speedway Results

- Commercial Tire Super Stocks: 1. Casey Pehrson, 2. Dan Pehrson, 3. Allen Williams, 4. Hannah Newhouse, 5. Kris McKean.
- Brennan's Carpet Street Stocks: 1. Ernie Hall, 2. Billi Miles, 3. Justin Boyd, 4. Russell Dalton, 5. Jay McDonald.
- Quale's Electronics Jr. Stingers: 1. Mckayla Woll, 2. Justice Coates, 3. K.C. Sutton, 4. Devri Browne, Hailey Douglas.
- The Car Store Thunderdogs: 1. The Woodpecker, 2. Chad Everett, 3. The Hoffa Mobile.
- Pro Trucks: 1. Jerry Rice, 2. Doug Dugger, 3. John Newhouse, 4. Scott Luttmner, 5. Johnny Pierre.

Newhouse, who was shooting for Rookie of the Year honors as well as a main event win, recovered from damage received to her car during the Lap 24 incident to finish fourth. However, she felt that she "had the car to win the race but hit the wall four times from Kris (McKean) sliding up into me."

"I am hoping this will be the hardest year for the rest of my career," she added. "This small town politics stuff here has beaten me down a couple of weekends to where I just wanted to throw in the towel — but it's over now. I just want to thank my sponsors and fans for their support through all this."

"I was just racing real hard and trying to keep her (Hannah Newhouse) behind me. I felt she got into me and my car turned right then we just got tangled up. It's not the way we wanted to end the night and it's not the way we wanted to win the championship. I feel real bad for her but it was one of those racing deals. It is what it is."

Kris McKean

For McKean, the final night of his 2012 championship season did not go exactly as planned.

"I was just racing real hard and trying to keep her behind me," he said of the late-race clash with Newhouse. "I felt she got into me and my car turned right then we just got tangled up. It's not the way we wanted to end the night and it's not the way we wanted to win the championship. I feel real bad for her but it was one of those racing deals. It is what it is."

AP Poll: BSU Still No. 24, Oregon Moves Past LSU to No. 2

ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK • An ugly win on the national stage didn't help Boise State in the latest The Associated Press Top 25 Poll.

Turns out it didn't really hurt, either. The Broncos remained No. 24 in this week's AP rankings, released Sunday, after a 7-6 win over BYU on Thursday night in which their only score was a defensive touchdown.

Oregon has slipped past LSU to No. 2 in the latest AP poll behind Alabama after the Ducks rolled to a victory and the Tigers struggled to remain unbeaten.

Oregon routed Arizona 49-0 on Saturday night in Eugene. No. 3 LSU hung on to win at Auburn 12-10.

Florida State remained No. 4 after its 49-37 victory against Clemson, and Georgia held steady at No. 5. No. 6 South Carolina gives the Southeastern Conference four of the top six teams in the nation.

Alabama got 59 of 60 first-place votes from the media panel, with LSU receiving the other.

Kansas State moved up eight spots to No. 7 after beating Oklahoma 24-19, the Wildcats' best ranking since September 2006. The Sooners dropped from sixth to 16th.

Snedeker Pulls Away to Win FedEx Cup

ASSOCIATED PRESS

ATLANTA • With the biggest round of his career, Brandt Snedeker won something far more valuable than money Sunday.

He proved to himself he could beat the best in the world.

Snedeker knew his best chance to be the FedEx Cup champion was to win the Tour Championship, no simple task with East Lake as tough as ever and Rory McIlroy and Tiger Woods going after the same prize.

Snedeker was the only player in the last five groups to break par.

He answered the final challenge with three big birdies on the back nine, building such a big lead that his final tee shot sailed into the grandstands to the left of the 18th green and it didn't even matter. Snedeker still closed with a 2-under 68 for a three-shot win in the Tour Championship, and a $10 million bonus for winning the FedEx Cup.

But this was never about money.

"I think it solidifies what I already know," Snedeker said. "I think when I play my best golf, my best golf is some of the best in the world. I've never had more confidence in myself than I have the last five weeks, and I made sure that I kept telling myself that all day. I am one of the best players in the world. This is supposed to happen. It's OK to feel nervous, and no matter what I feel today, everybody else in the field feels exactly the same way I do.

"So go out there and get it done. I did a great job of that."

McIlroy, the best player in golf this year and the No. 1 seed going into the Tour Championship, faded early by dropping four shots in a four-hole span on the front nine. So did Woods, who already was 3 over on his round before making his first birdie on the par-5 ninth.

Snedeker wound up with a three-shot victory over Justin Rose (71) to win the Tour Championship, his second win this year and a trophy that came with $1.44 million. Add the $10 million bonus from the FedEx Cup, and it's the richest payoff in golf.

Big deal.

The 31-year-old from Nashville, Tenn., calls that kind of money "crazy talk ... like winning the lottery." Far greater perspective came from a 30-minute hospital visit Sunday morning with Tucker Anderson, the son of his swing coach who was critically injured in a car accident and is in a responsive coma.

"I asked him if he thought I was going to beat Rory McIlroy, and he gave me a wink," Snedeker said.

He beat McIlroy out of the FedEx Cup, and everyone else in his way at East Lake. Ryan Moore was tied for the lead with birdies on the 14th and 15th holes, only to make bogey on the last three holes for a 70 to tie for third with Luke Donald (67).

Hamlin Takes New Hampshire for 5th Win

ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOUDON, N.H. • Denny Hamlin stepped out of his car, pointed into the air and took a mighty swing of an invisible baseball bat. Like Babe Ruth did before him (or so the legend goes), Hamlin had called his shot.

The top winner in NASCAR's regular season earned his series-leading fifth victory of the year Sunday, backing up a tweet of "We will win" with a mistake-free and dominating run at New Hampshire Motor Speedway in the second event of the Chase for the Sprint Cup.

"You don't want to sound too cocky, but I knew what we were capable of," said Hamlin, who was 32nd in qualifying after his crew put the wrong pressure in his tires. "I know we made a couple of big mistakes, but I said we were fast enough to make it up and we did."

It was the 100th career victory for team owner Joe Gibbs, who also won three Super Bowls as the coach of the Washington Redskins. And it came with a little teamwork, too, when Kyle Busch slowed down to help suck some debris off the front of Hamlin's car and propel him to victory.

"As fast as he was, he could have gone to the back of any car and pulled that off," said Jimmie Johnson, who finished second and took over the Chase lead. "I kind of thought he would be the guy to beat and he certainly was. We are second-best."

Johnson will head into Dover, Del., one of his top tracks, one point ahead of Chicago winner Brad Keselowski, who was sixth Sunday. Jeff Gordon, who was the last man to qualify for the Chase, was third.

"We had a great race car," said Johnson, a five-time NASCAR season champion, "just not an amazing car like the No. 11 did here today!"

Hamlin improved to third in the Chase, seven points behind Johnson, despite a tumultuous week that began with him running out of gas in Chicago and continued when his crew used race pressure instead of qualifying pressure in his tires on Friday. Hamlin also had problems with his crew here in July, when confusion during a tire change dropped him into traffic and left him scurrying to get back to the front of the field.

Yankees Come Up Short, Fail to Sweep A's

ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK • Cliff Pennington hit a go-ahead single in the sixth inning after a key error by backup shortstop Eduardo Nunez and the Oakland Athletics bounced back to avoid a sweep, edging New York 5-4 Sunday and stopping the Yankees' seven-game winning streak.

A day after their stunning 14-inning loss, the A's held on to at least maintain their 2½-game lead for the second AL wild-card spot over the Angels, who played later.

The Yankees kept their one-game lead in the AL East because Baltimore lost in Boston. Despite the defeat, the Yankees have to like their chances to win the division — their final 10 games are against three teams with records below .500.

TWINS 10, TIGERS 4 GAME 1

TWINS 2, TIGERS 1, 10 INNINGS GAME 2

DETROIT • Jamey Carroll hit an RBI single in the 10th inning and the Twins beat Detroit, winning both games of a doubleheader to prevent the Tigers from at least tying the Chicago White Sox atop the AL Central.

Chicago still has a one-game lead in the division despite extending its losing streak to five with a 4-1 loss earlier in the day against the Los Angeles Angels.

Detroit closer Jose Valverde (3-4) allowed pinch-hitter Denard Span to lead off the extra inning with a single and gave up a one-out, fall-behind single to Carroll.

Jared Burton (2-1) got the win and Glen Perkins pitched a perfect 10th for his 14th save in 17 chances.

The Orioles began the day one game behind the first-place New York Yankees in the AL East and two games ahead of Oakland for the top wild-card spot in the league.

ANGELS 4, WHITE SOX 1

ANAHEIM, Calif. • Jered Weaver kept the Angels within striking distance in the AL wild-card chase, posting his league-leading 19th victory with a decision over the struggling White Sox.

INDIANS 15, ROYALS 4

KANSAS CITY, Mo. • Carlos Santana hit two homers and drove in five runs as the Indians routed Kansas City in their highest-scoring game of the season.

Santana connected for a two-run shot in the sixth inning off Jake Odorizzi, who lost in his major league debut. Santana added his team-leading 18th homer, a three-run drive during a seven-run ninth.

RAYS 3, BLUE JAYS 0

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. • B.J. Upton hit his eighth home run in 14 games and Jeremy Hellickson won for the first time in more than a month to help the Rays beat the Blue Jays.

RANGERS 3, MARINERS 2

SEATTLE • Ryan Dempster allowed two runs and six hits over six-plus innings and Mike Napoli and Geovany Soto homered to lead the Rangers over the Mariners and preserve a four-game lead over the Oakland A's in the AL West.

National League

CARDINALS 6, CUBS 3

CHICAGO • Kyle Lohse and the short-handed St. Louis Cardinals won for the sixth time in seven games, holding their lead in the NL wild-card race with a 6-3 win Sunday over the Chicago Cubs.

Minus All-Stars Yadier Molina and Carlos Beltran from the starting lineup, the Cardinals stayed 2½ games ahead of Milwaukee for the second wild-card spot.

Lohse (16-3) made his team-leading 32nd start, giving up three runs and five hits in six innings.

BREWERS 6, NATIONALS 2

WASHINGTON • Jonathan Lucroy had a pair of RBI singles and Milwaukee beat Washington to keep the Brewers in the playoff chase.

BRAVES 2, PHILLIES 1

PHILADELPHIA • Tim Hudson tossed two-hit ball over 7 1-3 innings to help the Braves move to the brink of a playoff spot with a win over the Phillies.

PIRATES 8, ASTROS 1

HOUSTON • A.J. Burnett allowed one run in eight innings for his 16th win, and Josh Harrison tied a career high with four hits to jumpstart Pittsburgh's offense in a win over Houston.

METS 3, MARLINS 2

NEW YORK • Ruben Tejada singled home the winning run with two outs in the ninth inning to give the Mets a victory over Miami.

DIAMONDBACKS 10, ROCKIES 7

DENVER • Aaron Hill hit a tiebreaking three-run homer in the eighth inning and the Arizona Diamondbacks beat Colorado, the Rockies' season-high ninth straight loss.

DODGERS 5, REDS 3

CINCINNATI • Adrian Gonzalez hit a pair of solo homers off Homer Bailey on Sunday night, powering the Los Angeles Dodgers to a 5-3 victory over the Cincinnati Reds that let them keep pace in the wild card race.

The Dodgers remained three games behind St. Louis and a half-game behind Milwaukee for the final NL playoff spot. All three won on Sunday.

PADRES 6, GIANTS 4

SAN FRANCISCO • Yonder Alonso's two-run single in the seventh inning snapped a tie and helped the Padres beat the Giants.

Mark Kotsay hit a home run and Yasmani Grandal also drove in a run for the Padres, who had lost four of their previous five games. Everth Cabrera had four hits, walked and stole three bases in five plate appearances.

Week 4

way and almost literally gives the game away against a Canyon Ridge side that was outscored 103-2 in its previous two games. The Riverhawks have three field goals, a safety and a defensive touchdown through four games. Minico looked great against the speed and athleticism of McClymonds (Calif.), then gets shredded by one of the worst 5A teams in the state. The only thing I know is that Wood River isn't quite as good as it was last year. Other than that, this league has me scratching my head. I think Twin Falls might be the best team, all players healthy. Ask me next week and I might have a different answer.

2. Declo will shatter its school record for shutouts and won't be tested until the state quarterfinals.

I'm sure of two things: Kelly Kidd will probably not think too much of this statement, and it'll be front and center in the locker rooms of the other four Canyon Conference teams. Don't think anything is going to make it any more difficult than the Hornets can make it for themselves. So far they've got three shutouts (the school record is four) and have allowed 14 points through four games. There are better teams that Declo will play than North Fremont or Filer, but none of the remaining four can score with the Hornets. And Declo will put up points the rest of the way. That quarterfinal matchup with the District I-II champ, likely Grangeville, is looking mighty tasty right about now.

3. Similarly, Gooding looks set for an undefeated run.

The Senators passed possibly their biggest test on Friday, handling Buhl. If they beat Kimberly this week, they'll be the first District IV team to clinch a playoff berth at any level (we'll tell you in Friday's Grid Locks if we think that'll happen). It hasn't been flashy, but Gooding is just a good, sound football team that methodically takes care of every opponent it comes across. The best thing for Gooding is that the passing game is finally showing signs of life, with Josh Faulkner tossing a couple of touchdowns against Buhl. The Senators can probably get through the rest of their schedule leaning heavily on their big offensive line, but to make headway in the playoffs they've got to throw the football, especially if they want to prove that they're not at best a distant third to Fruitland and Shelley in the 3A ranks.

4. We might have misjudged the Snake River Conference's "Game of the Century."

All signs pointed to an epic Hagerman-Butte County clash Oct. 12 in Arco. Of course, that meant another team was always bound to throw a wrench into everything, like Grace did last week in edging Butte County. All that does is A) move forward the biggest game of the Snake River Conference schedule to this week, when Grace comes to Hagerman; B) make Hagerman's trip to Arco either the second-biggest (or next biggest, if the Pirates win this one) of the season. It'll all hinge on this weekend, and how Hagerman defends the pass. Grace is a big unconventional in that the Grizzlies like to chuck the ball all over the place. It neutralized Butte County's size and speed, but Hagerman has athletes all over the field. Could be the 8-man game of the year in the Magic Valley.

If Grace wins, the Grizzlies are basically on cruise control to the SRC title. If Hagerman wins, that trip to Arco looms larger than before.

5. Grace's win over Butte County validates Lighthouse Christian.

How's that? Easy. Lighthouse Christian was down three two-way starters in a 52-40 loss to Grace, which saw the Grizzlies score touchdowns on three interceptions (a complete anomaly), including the last play of the game. So what does Grace beating Butte County have to do with anything? The Pirates and Grizzlies are viewed as two of the best teams in IA-I, so with the mitigating circumstances of that loss, it by definition makes the Lions a very, very good IA-II squad (historically, the best IA-I programs beat the best IA-II programs by at least two touchdowns, give or take. Last year, Hagerman hung 74 on Lighthouse Christian, and both ended up being champions in their respective classes. All goes to show the Lions are still trending upward, even if they may again not be at the top of the list when it comes to playoff favorites, with Dietrich undefeated and cruising toward a division title.

racing deals. It is what it is."

Jerry Rice was the main event winner in the Inter-mountain Pro Trucks series main event race after coming from near the rear of the field to take the win. He was followed to the checkered flag by Doug Dugger and John Newhouse. The Thompson Motorsports 50-lap race was marred by just a single caution, when Bobby Latham III and Drew Reitsma tangled on Lap 7.

Scott Luttmner, who led the point standings going into this final race of the year, finished fourth, enough to capture his first championship in the series.

"This means a lot to me,"

Luttmner said. "We have been whittling away at this all year and we finally found the right setup. My family did the whole thing but we had a little luck too, I really think that's what it takes to win a championship."

In other Whelen American Speedway Racing action, Ernie Hall took the lead from Billi Miles at lap 13 of the Street Stocks main event race to seal the deal on the win and the 2012 championship. Hailey Douglas was crowned the newest Jr. Stinger champion after Mckayla Woll received the trophy for her victory in the main event race.

Adding to his Hornet championship he clinched Sept. 15, Jeff Peck captured the Thunderdogs title after piloting the Woodpecker through a tough final round in the division.

DeCoud's three takeaways, plus William Moore's fourth-quarter fumble recovery, extended the Falcons' NFL-high turnover differential to plus-10.

A week after the Buccaneers' big push against the Giants in their victory formation, Tampa Bay used a pair of timeouts in the final 40 seconds after a failed onside kick attempt.

TITANS 44, LIONS 41 NASHVILLE, Tenn. • Rob Bironas kicked a 26-yard field goal in overtime, and the Titans stopped backup quarterback Shaun Hill on fourth-and-1 at the Tennessee 7 to pull out a 44-41 win over the Detroit Lions on Sunday.

After a dominant start to their NFC North tour by decisively beating playoff teams Green Bay and Detroit, the 49ers (2-1) were beaten in every way by a team least likely to do so.

The Cowboys (2-1) scored twice in the first half when starting in Tampa Bay territory after turnovers. They overcame three turnovers by Romo — two on plays reversed by replay — with a defense that held Tampa Bay to 166 total yards.

The Titans (1-2) blew a 20-9 halftime lead in a crazy game featuring big plays, scoring swings and some suspect officiating.

Schaub finished 17 for 30 for 290 yards to help Houston move to 3-0 for the first time in franchise history.

Romo's interception on the game's fourth play set up Tampa Bay (1-2) for Josh Freeman's 1-yard TD to Luke Stocker.

TEXANS 31, BRONCOS 25 DENVER • Matt Schaub outplayed Peyton Manning, throwing four touchdown passes against a confused Denver defense.

Six days after throwing three interceptions in the first quarter of a loss to Atlanta, Manning didn't throw any against the Texans. But just as happened last week, the Broncos fell behind by 20 and lost by six.

The Cowboys drew even on Murray's run after Sean Lee's interception. Bailey had kicks of 32, 26 and 22 yards.

CHIEFS 27, SAINTS 24 OT NEW ORLEANS • Ryan Succop kicked six field goals, one to force overtime in the final seconds and another from 31 yards to lift Kansas City to its first win and keep New Orleans winless.

The game turned somber early in the fourth quarter when Heyward-Bey was knocked unconscious by a helmet-to-helmet hit in the end zone by Steelers safety Ryan Mundy.

That was enough on a day when Jay Cutler struggled, and the Bears (2-1) came away with the win after an ugly loss to Green Bay the previous week. The Rams fell to 1-2.

RAIDERS 34, STEELERS 31 OAKLAND, Calif. • Sebastian Janikowski kicked a 43-yard field goal on the last play to connect on a fifth field goal. Hill, in for injured Matthew Stafford, was stopped by defensive tackles Jurrell Casey and Sen'Derrick Marks on his sneak, and Tennessee escaped with its first win of the season.

IF SEPTEMBER 24 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: You have the power to pursue your dreams in the year to come. You might be caught up in a romantic fantasy or you could be held in the grip of some new business idea. In either case, work hard, study hard and pay your dues, but hold off on making new commitments or irrevocable decisions. In December, your penchant for fantasy could distract you from really needs to be done, so turn down a blind date or offer that seems too good to be true. Wait until the end of January to get down to business as your skillful maneuvering can get you to the top of the heap where finances, job or career are concerned. Your best quality in the next six months is the ability to imagine what the future can bring.

HOROSCOPE Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You snooze, you lose. Energy levels will change for the better faster than you can say "Rip Van Winkle!" when members of the opposite sex are around. Take advantage of opportunities to meet new people.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Race like a turtle at rush hour. You might feel as though you are stuck in the slow lane when everyone around you is in a hurry. Remain true to your beliefs and don't be prodded into unnecessary action.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Your success depends upon popularity, not precision. You have plenty of enthusiasm and are avid for adventure. Make sure you spend time on constructive activities, even if social affairs beckon.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Tackle the nasty jobs no one else wants to handle. You can earn respect and Brownie points. If you encounter a brick wall, remain patient, as the way around it will appear by the end of the day.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Friends prove their worth. Technology can offer a new and profitable viewpoint. You could find that your energies are stirred, making you eager to tackle emerging issues. Group activities bring opportunities.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Financial security is like a knitted sweater. Money can make you feel secure on a chilly winter day but pull the wrong thread and the whole thing can unravel. Don't make spur-of-the-moment changes.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You are perched on the brink of success. Have faith that precious plans for the future are viable even when it seems that core values are briefly opposed by others. Hang on tight and don't overreact.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You could be exuberant about work. Just because you can't find the right combination today doesn't mean you won't ever find it. Use good manners even on the rough and ready playing field.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): There is fair weather ahead. Increasing energy levels make you a powerhouse of initiative and enthusiasm. You may regret letting someone persuade you to change your mind.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Aspire to perfection. You want to be the best that you can be without seeming like an automated drone. Don't be embarrassed or dismayed by minor imperfections; enjoy your natural humanity.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You are sold by the book's appealing cover. Don't forget to look at what lies inside. Avoid making important decisions until you have more facts. Well-intentioned promises can be difficult to keep.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Make reasonable demands and take adequate precautions. If you are afraid of the dark, plug in a night light and turn it on. You are not a helpless victim; control your environment as well as your destiny.

DEAR ABBY: I am very concerned for my hen-pecked son who is expecting his first child. He works long hours (50+ plus a week) at a low-paying job with an hour commute. His wife works part-time (10 hours a week). The problem is, their tiny apartment is a pigsty, and she doesn't clean or pick up. She expects him to do it all, and he tries to, while she reads and makes baby quilts.

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

How do I tactfully get her to do her share now, before the baby comes and she expects my son to "help her" even more? He is totally overburdened, stressed out, but seemingly happy. Until I saw the condition of their apartment I had suspected it was bad, but had no idea how bad the situation really was.

— DESPAIRING MOM IN CONNECTICUT

DEAR DESPAIRING MOM: Not knowing your daughter-in-law, I can't judge whether she is lazy, or whether the reason she isn't doing more around the apartment is pregnancy-related. You say your son is happy. Be GRATEFUL for that. Rather than "tactfully getting her to do her share," why not volunteer to help them until your grandchild is on a regular sleep schedule? It would make you appear to be an angel instead of critical, and bring the three of you a lot closer than you appear to be. However, if your offer is refused, then accept that this is how your son and daughter-in-law prefer to live.

DEAR ABBY: I spent tonight in a parking lot, knowing I had no options. My husband of 25 years is an alcoholic and abusive. I have two teenage children at home. I'm in bad health and haven't worked in decades. I'm trapped.

I have the typical arguments with my daughter. My son is a gem who stays home because he doesn't want to leave us with his father. It's a sad situation. While catching up on reading Dear Abby tonight, I saw a number for an abuse hotline where they will help me with a plan to leave. I have no money, no chance of getting a job. But that number gave me a glimmer of hope. It seems too good to be true, but I'll make that call. Thank you, Abby.

— BEATEN DOWN IN TEXAS

DEAR BEATEN DOWN: I'm glad you are making that call to the National Domestic Violence Hotline. Part of the reason you feel so hopeless and "beaten down" is that for so many years your abuser chipped away at your self-esteem.

For any other reader who may have missed that column and needs the toll-free phone number, it is 800-799-7233.

DEAR ABBY: My good friend "Claire" has two daughters, 8 and 10. Her younger daughter is the same age as my daughter and they are very close. We spend a lot of time with them and have the girls at our house often.

After the last sleepover, my daughter commented that the sisters argue all the time and it's not fun having them over anymore. She would like to invite only the younger daughter for a sleepover, but we have put off asking as we are afraid of hurting the older daughter's feelings by not including her. Actually, I'm afraid it might hurt the mother's feelings, too. What's the best way to invite only one sibling?

— SLEEP OVER NIGHTMARE

DEAR S.N.: If the girls are arguing when they're at your house, you can bet it's talking to Claire and explain what happened and your daughter's reaction. The older girl should be interacting/socializing with friends of her own.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE® Bobby Wolff

"All strange and terrible events are welcome, But comforts we despise."
— William Shakespeare

There is no easy answer as to what plan South should have followed here, but his leap to six hearts was precipitous and perhaps an overbid. But how would you play the slam when West leads the spade three and East covers dummy's 10 with the jack?

Declarer won with the ace and drew trumps in four rounds. With only one entry to dummy outside the diamond suit (the club ace), it seemed that he would need a 3-3 diamond break to make the contract. Declarer played ace, king and another diamond and shrugged his shoulders when East showed out on the third round. He ruffed in his hand and could do nothing but finesse the club queen. Had the finesse worked, he could have ruffed out the diamonds successfully. However, East produced the club king and cashed the spade king for one down.

Can you see how declarer should have made the contract? When the diamond queen and 10 fall on the first two rounds, dummy's 9-7 have become equals against West's J-6. All declarer needs to do is to lead the diamond nine and let it run, discarding his spade loser.

West wins with the jack and returns a club, but declarer can win with the club ace in dummy and throw his two club losers on the diamonds.

(Yes, a club lead would have beaten the slam, but I don't ever want to play against anyone who could find that!)

ANSWER: This is a close call between a diamond and a spade. Had partner opened one club, I would definitely prefer the spade lead. Here a spade lead has the better chance to set the game; the diamond lead is more likely to hold the overtricks. So I would lead a diamond at pairs, a spade at teams.

Today is Monday, Sept. 24, the 268th day of 2012. There are 98 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight:
On Sept. 24, 1890, the president of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints, Wilford Woodruff, wrote a manifesto renouncing the practice of polygamy, or plural marriage (the manifesto was formally accepted by the Mormon Church the following month).

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:
In 1789, Congress passed a Judiciary Act providing for an Attorney General and a Supreme Court.

In 1869, thousands of businessmen were ruined in a Wall Street panic known as "Black Friday" after financiers Jay Gould and James Fisk attempted to corner the gold market.

In 1929, Lt. James H. Doolittle guided a Consolidated NY-2 Biplane over Mitchel Field in New York in the first all-instrument flight.

In 1934, Babe Ruth made his farewell appearance as a player with the New York Yankees in a game against the Boston Red Sox. (The Sox won, 5-0.)

In 1948, Mildred Gillars, accused of being Nazi wartime radio propagandist "Axis Sally," pleaded not guilty in Washington, D.C. to charges of treason. (Gillars, later convicted, ended up serving 12 years in prison.)

In 1955, President Dwight D. Eisenhower suffered a heart attack while on vacation in Denver.

In 1957, the Los Angeles-bound Brooklyn Dodgers played their last game at Ebbets Field, defeating the Pittsburgh Pirates 2-0.

In 1960, the USS Enterprise, the first nuclear-powered aircraft carrier, was launched at Newport News, Va. "The Howdy Doody Show" ended a nearly 13-year run with its final telecast on NBC.

In 1963, the U.S. Senate ratified a treaty with Britain and the Soviet Union limiting nuclear testing.

In 1976, former hostage Patricia Hearst was sentenced to seven years in prison for her part in a 1974 bank robbery in San Francisco carried out by the Symbionese Liberation Army. (Hearst was released after 22 months after receiving clemency from President Jimmy Carter.)

In 1981, four Armenian gunmen seized the Turkish consulate in Paris, killing a guard and holding 56 hostages for 15 hours before surrendering.

In 1991, kidnappers in Lebanon freed British hostage Jack Mann after holding him captive for more than two years. Children's author Theodor Seuss Geisel, better known as "Dr. Seuss," died in La Jolla, Calif., at age 87.

Ten years ago: British Prime Minister Tony Blair asserted that Iraq had a growing arsenal of chemical and biological weapons and planned to use them, as he unveiled an intelligence dossier to a special session of Parliament. Gunmen stormed a Hindu temple in the western Indian state of Gujarat, killing some 30 worshippers.

Five years ago: Iranian President Mahmoud Ahmadinejad questioned the official version of the September 11 attacks and defended the right to cast doubt on the Holocaust in a tense appearance at Columbia University in New York. United Auto Workers walked off the job at GM plants in the first nationwide strike during auto contract negotiations since 1976; a tentative pact ended the walkout two days later. Two kidnapped Italian intelligence operatives were rescued in a NATO-led combat operation in western Afghanistan, two days after they went missing. As many as 100,000 anti-government protesters led by Buddhist monks marched in Yangon, Myanmar.

One year ago: Russian President Dmitry Medvedev proposed Vladimir Putin as a presidential candidate for 2012, paving the way for Putin's return to office four years after he was legally forced to step aside. NASA's dead six-ton Upper Atmosphere Research Satellite fell to Earth, 20 years after being deployed from the space shuttle Discovery.
