A Rise in Coal Exports Could Affect Idaho Towns

BY KIMBERLEE KRUESI

SHOSHONE • Stay long enough for coffee at the Manhattan Cafe and you'll be greeted with a familiar tune.

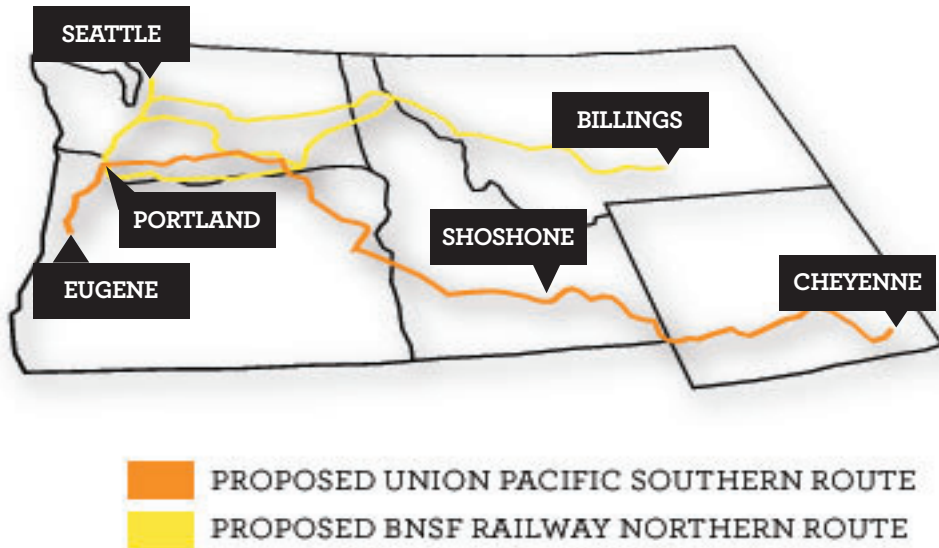

It's not a scheduled performance, but about once every hour, the rolling hum of a locomotive stops traffic.

This railroad routine is a norm for many Shoshone residents. However, in years to come, this historical little town's railroad could find itself in the middle of a debate over increased coal exports to China.

If this issue doesn't sound familiar, you're not alone. It's a conflict that's not expected to hit towns along the coal's possible route for several years. But it's important for many city leaders and commuters to begin discussing the issue now in order to prepare for increased traffic delays and potential environmental impacts from coal exports.

It starts with six proposed coal export terminals sprinkled along the Oregon and Washington state coasts. The proposed terminals would allow coal companies to ship coal to China, a nation with a hungry appetite for coal and loose environmental regulations regarding the energy source — unlike the United States.

Coal mines in the mountains of Wyoming and Montana would feed the Asian nation. Coal companies would theoretically ship the coal by train, which would require going through northern or southern Idaho.

The Union Pacific railroad goes through Shoshone. At the moment, no coal trains pass through the town, said Aaron Hunt, spokesman for the railroad. If that does change, it won't be for several years, he said.

But just how many railcars may go through Shoshone once the coal terminals open is still unknown, Hunt said.

"It depends on where they open and what our clients decide to do," he said. "Everything is kind of up in the air at this point."

Environmentalists and government officials in the Pacific Northwest have criticized the proposed terminals. The terminals must go through federal and HEYBURN • Heyburn police are still searching for a suspect in an armed robbery that allegedly occurred at Tony's Gas Station Tuesday evening.

Heyburn Police Chief Dan Bristol said a young male allegedly entered the gas and convenience store at about 8:45 p.m., pointed a black pistol at the clerk and demanded money.

"He left with an undisclosed amount of cash," Bristol said.

Police are still searching for the lone suspect who was wearing a blue hoodie sweatshirt and a blue bandana over his face.

Kimberly Health Clinic Hits a Snag

BY DAVE WILKINS
For the Times-News

KIMBERLY • Kimberly will have to revise its agreement with Family Health Services before a clinic can be built to serve the city's low-income population.

Elected officials still see a need for the clinic, but the city's plan to lease FHS a building for $10,000 a year and transfer ownership to the nonprofit after 10 years failed to comply with state law.

The city has already been awarded a $500,000 community development block grant to construct the clinic on the old City Hall site on Main Street.

But city officials didn't realize when they signed an agreement with Family Health Services earlier this year that ownership of the property could not be transferred without a competitive bid or public auction process.

"We as a council didn't realize that it fell into that category," Mayor Tracy Armstrong said in an interview Wednesday. "Because of that, we have to go back to the drawing board to see how to handle this."

The council also didn't realize that the city could be responsible for repaying the grant if Family Health Services were to abandon the project within five years.

The legal snafu may not scuttle the project, but construction, originally

No Coliform Found in Monday School Water Tests

BY LAURIE WELCH
lwelch@magicvalley.com

MALTA • Water samples taken Monday at three Cassia County schools all came back negative Tuesday for coliform bacteria.

Cassia County School District Superintendent Gaylen Smyer said Wednesday all the samples taken from Raft River Elementary School, Raft River High School and Almo Elementary School were free of the bacteria, which often indicate the presence of other harmful bacteria and pathogens.

Fourteen water samples were taken on Monday, including from three residences near the Raft River schools. One of the tests from a residence came back positive for coliform bacteria, but negative for the presence of E. coli.

The two Raft River schools, which share a water system, have been plagued with intermittent problems with the water for years. This was the first time the Almo school received a positive water test result.

U.S. Stocks Fall on Europe Unrest, Weaker Home Sales

NEW YORK • A mixed report about the housing market and unrest in Europe on Wednesday extended the longest losing streak for the Standard & Poor's 500 index since mid-July. Other risky assets, like European stocks and oil, fell more sharply.

The Dow Jones industrial average fell 44.04 points, or 0.3 percent, to 13,413.51. The S&P 500 index fell 8.27, or 0.6 percent, to 1,433.32. The only category that rose was utilities, relatively safe stocks that tend to hold their value when the economy is weak. The Nasdaq composite average fell 24.03 points, or 0.8 percent, to 3,093.70.

Hidden History

This restored Bisbee photograph shows a stagecoach approaching the Perrine Coulee from the west after crossing the Snake River at Blue Lakes. The original road ran under the coulee. I.B. Perrine began construction of the south grade into the canyon in 1897. The waterfall was formed by irrigation water when the Twin Falls canal system was created in 1905.

When Blue Lakes Boulevard met the Waterfall at the Perrine Coulee

BLUE LAKES • Driving the boulevard in the early days was no easy task.

Early in the 20th century, Blue Lakes Boulevard began near the present-day Jerome County Airport, ran south through sagebrush to the top of the Snake River Canyon, followed an old Indian trail into the canyon and past the Blue Lakes, ferried the river, began the climb up the south wall of the canyon, ran under the falls at the Perrine Coulee and over the canyon rim, then shot straight south to Rock Creek.

“The scariest part of the trip was driving a team of horses under the Perrine Coulee,” said Cleone Arrington, remembering the stories her mother used to tell.

Arrington’s grandfather was a Mormon bishop who lived in Carey. Occasionally, church business would require George Harris to travel to Albion. The trip from Carey to Albion took three days.

Arrington’s mother, Florence, was a teenager when she would accompany her father on those trips.

Back then, that section of the boulevard — today known as Canyon Springs Road — ran under the waterfall, where irrigation water from the canal system dropped over the canyon’s south rim on its way back to the Snake River.

When their wagon reached the waterfall, the skittish horses refused to go any farther, Arrington said.

George Harris would have to blindfold the horses and lead them on foot through the spray and the roar of the falling water. Florence Harris would drive the horses from the seat of the wagon.

In later years, automobiles would replace horse-drawn wagons on the grade and under the waterfall, but the fear factor probably remained.

The road into the canyon — which was built by I.B. Perrine in the 1890s — was eventually rerouted to avoid the waterfall. The graveled road was finally widened and paved in the early 1970s.

Remnants of the old road can still be seen west of the coulee.

The Perrine Coulee formed as a result of the creation of the canal system in 1905.

Blue Lakes Boulevard ended at the canyon rim once the first rim-to-rim bridge was built in 1927.

GAS LEAK ON BLUE LAKES REPAIRED

TIMES-NEWS

TWIN FALLS • All lanes of travel were open Wednesday morning in the 1200 block of Blue Lakes Boulevard North after a gas leak slowed traffic Tuesday afternoon.

The northbound right-hand lane on Blue Lakes was closed Tuesday afternoon after a construction crew hit a gas line at the site of the former Oasis Stop ‘N Go gas station.

A representative from Intermountain Gas said crews were able to repair the gas line by Tuesday evening and it was not necessary to return Wednesday, as was initially expected.

Gas levels in the air remained safe Tuesday afternoon, said city of Twin Falls spokesman Joshua Palmer.

An Attack on Free Speech

RALEIGH, N.C. • North Carolina is giving Steve Cooksey some choices. He can stop speaking. Or he can get a Ph.D. in nutrition, or a medical degree, or a bachelor's degree in nutrition and then pass an examination after completing a 900-hour clinical internship. Or he can skip this onerous credentialing, keep speaking, and risk prosecution.

He has chosen instead to get a lawyer. His case, argued by the libertarians at the Institute for Justice (IJ), will clarify the First Amendment's relevance to an ancient human behavior and a modern technology.

Four years ago, Cooksey was a walking — actually, barely walking — collection of health risks. He was obese, lethargic, asthmatic, chronically ill and pre-diabetic. The diet advice he was getting from medical and other sources was, he decided, radically wrong. Rather than eat a high-carbohydrate, low-fat diet, he adopted what he and other enthusiasts call a Paleolithic diet, eating as primitive humans did — e.g., beef, pork, chicken, leafy green vegetables. Cooksey lost 75 pounds and the need for drugs and insulin. And, being a modern Paleo, he became a blogger, communicating his dietary opinions. When a busybody notified North Carolina's Board of Dietetics/Nutrition that Cooksey was opining about which foods were and were not beneficial, the board launched a three-month investigation of his Internet writings and his dialogues with people who read and responded to them. The board sent him copies of his writings, with red pen markings of such disapproved postings as: "I do suggest that your friend eat as I do and exercise the best they can."

"If," the board sternly said, "people are writing you with diabetic specific questions and you are responding, you are no longer just providing information — you are counseling — you need a license to provide this service." This had the intended effect of chilling his speech; his self-censorship stopped his blog. By saying his bloggings will be subject to continuous review, North Carolina hopes to silence him in perpetuity.

IJ's Jeff Rowes notes that Cooksey's speech "involves no sensitive relationship (as in psychological counseling), no uniquely vulnerable listeners (as in potential legal clients forced to make snap decisions), and no plausible presumption that the listeners are unable to exercise independent judgment." That presumption is, however, the animating principle of modern regulatory government. North Carolina is uninterested in the fact that Cooksey's advice is unpaid, freely solicited and outside any context of a professional-client relationship. The state simply asserts that Cooksey's audience is "a uniquely vulnerable population," which is how paternalistic government views everybody all the time.

Were Cooksey blogging for profit to sell beef and other Paleolithic food, he would be free to advise anyone to improve their health by buying his wares. So his case raises two questions:

Is an individual's uncompensated advice, when volunteered to other individuals who seek and value it, constitutionally protected? And does the Internet — cost-free dissemination of speech to spontaneous, self-generated audiences — render many traditional forms of licensing obsolete?

Two principles are colliding. One is that when government regulates speech based on its content, judicial "strict scrutiny" of the regulation requires government to bear the burden of demonstrating a "compelling" need for "narrowly tailored" speech restrictions. The second is that when government regulates occupations in ways that restrict entry to them, excluded citizens bear an enormous burden of demonstrating that there is no reasonable basis for the regulation. People, being opinionated mammals, have been dispensing advice to one another since the advent of language, and have been foisting dietary opinions since cavemen weighed the relative benefits of eating woolly mammoths or saber-toothed tigers. So IJ has two questions for North Carolina and for the judicial system:

Did Ann Landers and Dear Abby conduct 50-year crime sprees by offering unlicensed psychological advice? Is personal advice as constitutionally unprotected as child pornography? If so, since a 2010 Supreme Court opinion, it is less protected expression than videos of animals being tortured.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Not Too Late to Revitalize Twin Falls Downtown

Congratulations to the Twin Falls City Council for finally removing the old parking meters on Main Avenue. It had only taken four to six weeks (or more) for someone to wake up and have the meters removed.

I remember when I was a kid, my parents and grandparents couldn't find a parking place because of all the hustle and bustle going on down Main Street. Downtown was the place to be in the 1960s to 1980s. Now look at it. It's pretty desolate now.

As I go down Main Street today, I see all the furniture stores now vacant. I purchased the majority of my home accessories from those merchants. There are many small shops that are now closed as well. That also saddens me.

I know the meters were left in there not only to generate revenue but to keep the shopkeepers from parking their cars right smack in front of their stores and shops. That has all changed now. The box stores down Blue Lakes and Pole Line Road didn't help the Main Avenue businesses; however, there was free parking at those businesses.

What needs to be done with the proceeds from the sale of the old meters is to refund some of the money generated back to the merchants who have lost so much business. Downtown Main Street could come back alive if the city of Twin Falls would consider refunding a portion of meter money back to those merchants. Those store owners could then remodel their storefronts and attract customers back downtown.

It's too bad the almighty dollar comes ahead and gets in the way of progress. Put the dollar bill on the back burner for a change. Let's get the Main Avenue going again, if it's not too late.

See the Real Obama and What He Has in Store for America

Remember Obama's beloved ACORN? The corrupt group of thugs that has been linked to scandals involving the misuse of federal funds, embezzlement, intimidation tactics and thousands of fraudulent voter registrations that were turned in in 2008.

The same corrupt group that Obama stated, "I have been fighting alongside of ACORN my entire career."

In 2009 under enormous pressure, Obama signed into law "the Defund ACORN Act." This law restricted any federal funds going to ACORN or any ACORN spin-offs.

Did this stop the most corrupt administration in our history? Hell no.

The plan was the idea of Wade Rathke, who founded ACORN International. Just change the name from ACORN to the U.S. Housing and Development Centers of America (ACHOA). Wade and his brother have been involved in scandal after scandal.

Louisiana claims his brother, Dale, embezzled $5 million while chief financial officer of Citizens Consultation Inc., the group that manages ACORN corrupt financial enterprise.

Then Gang Obama took over. Just a year later, Helen Kanovsky, general counsel for U.S. Housing and Development (HUD), ruled that ACHOA was not subject to the ACORN ban. Guess who appointed Helen Kanovsky? Yes, the leader of the gang, Obama. To date, ACORN/ACHOA has received checks from HUD in the amount of $729,849. That's federal funds going to this corrupt bunch of thugs the Obama way.

It's rather obvious that Obama and his political gang are deeply rooted in the corrupt political culture of Chicago.

If you want to see the real Obama and what he has in store for this nation, go see the film "2016."

Anyone notice that the interest on our debt is $3.5 billion per day and nothing is being done about it.

Administration Was 'Asleep at the Switch' in Middle East

Secretary of State Hillary Clinton failed to provide for adequate security at the Benghazi, Libya consulate. The tragic death of our ambassador and three other Americans may have been prevented had there been a customary contingent of U.S.

Marines for security.

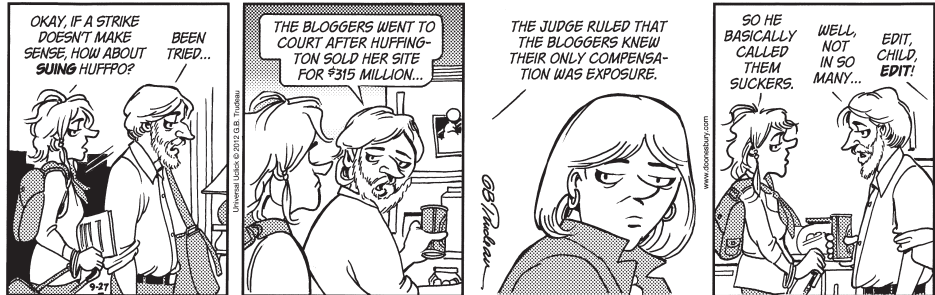

In my opinion, the "vulture of responsibility" for the tragedy rests at Clinton's doorstep. The Obama administration "ran for cover" and United Nations Ambassador Susan Rice was quick to come forth with disinformation (a real "smoke screen"). Will anyone be held accountable for the colossal failure — Clinton and Rice are both failures in my opinion. Perhaps they were too distracted by their efforts to sell our republic out to a corrupt United Nations (Law of the Sea Treaty, International Criminal Court, U.N. Small Arms Treaty (gun control), etc. Clearly our constitutional rights and our republic's general welfare are being placed at risk as Obama and his gang persists in their effort to sell us out! Any U.S. senator that votes in favor of any treaty that will erode our constitutional Rights needs to be voted out of office immediately if not sooner.

A final note: I earlier warned about the "Arab Spring" and the resultant danger to our republic. Our administration was "asleep at the switch," as it failed to appreciate the sinister nature of what was happening in a very dangerous environment in Africa. There is an urgent need for an awakening to the "grim reality" that our republic is under attack from without and within!

Nev. Student Teachers Lose Pell Grants

RENO, Nev. (AP) • Low-income students who graduate with a degree in education are no longer eligible for Pell grants to complete the last hurdle needed to become a certified teacher — a semester of student teaching.

Chris Cheney, College of Education dean at the University of Nevada, Reno, tells the Reno Gazette-Journal that a change in federal policy means about 30 of UNR's education students could be affected each semester.

"The sad part is just last year, the Pell grant did cover student teaching after our students graduated," Cheney said. "But they reinterpreted the rule and are tightening up on Pell grants."

Teaching for 12 to 13 weeks in one of Nevada's school districts is required for an education school graduate to be licensed by the state.

"They don't want to pay for anything that goes beyond the baccalaureate degree," Cheney said of Pell grant administrators. "The problem is our students do their student teaching after they graduate."

Cheney said the rule will be a hardship for students who are expected to give up working at any other job to devote three months to full-time student teaching.

"We highly recommended they don't try to work at another job because of all the time they spend planning and preparing for classes," Cheney said. "Student teaching is so extensive."

"We have about 250 to 300 education students who use the Pell grants, but the ones at jeopardy are the ones in their senior year who will be completing their degrees," Cheney said.

Police Department Goes to the Dog

VAUGHN, N.M. (AP) • The police chief of the small eastern New Mexico town of Vaughn resigned Wednesday, leaving the town with just one certified member on its police force — a drug-sniffing dog named Nikka.

Dave Romero, attorney for the town, said Wednesday that police Chief Ernest "Chris" Armijo decided to step down after news stories reported that he wasn't allowed to carry a gun because of his criminal background.

"He decided the attention was distracting," Romero said.

State officials said Armijo couldn't carry a gun since acknowledging that he owed tens of thousands of dollars in delinquent child support payments in Texas. Armijo also faces new felony charges after being accused of selling a town-owned rifle and pocketing the cash.

Romero said Armijo is working to clear up the latest case. He said Armijo has not ruled out seeking the police chief's position again if his case is resolved and the position is open.

According to records, the only qualified member of the Vaughn Police Department is Nikka, a drug-sniffing dog. Vaughn's other officer isn't certified and pleaded guilty to charges of assault and battery last year.

But Romero said not having an officer qualified to carry a gun didn't put Vaughn at risk. "England doesn't allow police officers to carry guns," he said. "Sometime the strongest weapon in law enforcement is communication."

Vaughn, a town of about 450 located 104 miles east of Albuquerque, is a quiet town that is an overnight stop for railroad workers. And while residents say there is no crime problem, the town is set deep in what U.S. Homeland Security Investigations officials say is an isolated region of the state popular with drug traffickers.

Officials say the desolate roads in Guadalupe County make it hard for authorities to catch smugglers moving drugs from Mexico.

Guadalupe County Sheriff Michael Lucero said since news about the police chief's record became public his department has helped patrol Vaughn. But he said those efforts have put a slight strain on his already short-staffed department.

"I visit the town at least once a month," said Lucero. "The important thing is to keep a presence so residents know we're there to help if we're needed."

University of California, Davis Police Lt. John Pike uses pepper spray to move Occupy UC Davis protesters while blocking their exit from the school's quad last year in Davis, Calif.

UC Pays $1M Settlement in Pepper Spray Lawsuit

BY TERENCE CHEA
Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO • The University of California has agreed to pay $1 million to settle a lawsuit filed by demonstrators who were pepper-sprayed during an Occupy protest at UC Davis last fall, according to a preliminary settlement filed Wednesday.

The Nov. 18, 2011, incident prompted national outrage, angry campus protests and calls for the resignation of Chancellor Linda Katehi after online videos shot by witnesses went viral.

Images of a police officer casually spraying orange pepper-spray in the faces of nonviolent protesters became a rallying symbol for the Occupy Wall Street movement. The demonstrators had been protesting steep tuition hikes and police brutality.

Under the proposed settlement, UC would pay $30,000 to each of 21 plaintiffs named in the complaint and an additional $250,000 for their attorneys to split.

Katehi, who has publicly apologized for the incident, would be required to issue a formal written apology to each of the plaintiffs, who are current students or recent alumni.

If the $1 million settlement is approved, total costs associated with the incident could exceed $2 million, according to the Sacramento Bee newspaper.

Those expenses come as UC faces the prospect of deep budget cuts if Gov. Jerry Brown's tax initiative fails in November.

UC and plaintiffs represented by the American Civil Liberties Union filed the preliminary settlement in U.S. District Court in Sacramento. The agreement, which was approved by the UC Board of Regents in mid-September, is subject to the approval of a federal judge, and parties have the right to appeal.

The settlement also calls for UC to set aside $100,000 to pay other individuals who can prove they were arrested or pepper-sprayed.

The university would give the ACLU up to $20,000 for its work reviewing free speech and protest policies at UC Davis.

VETERANS
TO EXPAND

BOISE (AP) • The Idaho Veterans Cemetery is receiving a $2.5 million grant to expand its capacity with more burial sites. Without the expansion, officials say the cemetery will run out of burial sites by 2016 and the columbarium that holds cremated remains would be at capacity by 2015. The cemetery plans to use grant money from the Department of Veterans Administration to install nearly 2,900 additional burial sites and add roughly 3,700 spaces to the columbarium. The project will likely start in early October and finish next August.

Neo-Nazi Festival Has
Boise Police on Alert

BOISE (AP) • The Boise mayor’s office is fielding numerous complaints about a neo-Nazi music festival planned for early October, the city’s police department said. Authorities have been on alert since advertisements for Hammerfest 2012 near Boise surfaced online, said Sgt. Jeff Basterrechea, who is with the police department’s gang intelligence unit. The white supremacist group Hammerskin Nation plans to hold the event Oct. 6, according to the flier circulating online. “This is a very high priority,” Basterrechea said. “The mayor’s office has received numerous complaints about this.” The skinhead group is rooted in Texas and has branches in Australia and Canada. The gunman who killed six worshippers at a Sikh temple in Wisconsin last month described himself as a member. The group has not disclosed the exact location of the planned Idaho event and attempts to contact local Hammerskin chapters were unsuccessful, KTVB-TV reported. Police are working with local venues to make them aware of the group, Basterrechea said. Former neo-Nazi skinhead Marine T.J. Leyden told the news station he previously recruited for the group with events like Hammerfest. Leyden, who famously left the movement in 1996 and has promoted tolerance ever since, said the Boise event will be used to boost the group’s numbers. “They’re going to say, ‘Hey, come to this show.’ These kids are going to see it, they’re going to get all pumped up, they’re going to think it’s fantastic,” said Leyden, who cautioned that protesters should stay away and allow law enforcement to monitor the event. “The group is extremely violent. The Hammerfests that they throw in different parts of the country are designed for a couple things. One it’s designed for unity, but it’s also designed to get people’s anxiety up,” Leyden said.

School Bus, Found in Lot

LEWISTON (AP) • A 5-year-old from north-central Idaho spent a half-hour alone in a parking lot after she was left on a school bus. Miranda Main said her daughter, a Lewiston kindergartner, normally takes a bus to another school and then switches buses for the remainder of her ride home. But Main said that last Wednesday, neither the bus nor her daughter showed up. “I waited for about half an hour, then started calling,” Main told the Lewiston Tribune. “I called the bus barn and got an answering machine, then I called the school, and they said she did get on the bus.” After she made a panicked phone call to the school district’s emergency line, workers found her daughter alone on the first bus, which was parked at the district’s bus barn. She had been sitting on the bus for about 30 minutes, Main said, and may have fallen asleep. “The driver didn’t have her switch buses at Centennial, and she stayed on the same bus, which was a totally different route,” Main said. Lewiston School District Assistant Superintendent Bob Donaldson said he can’t talk about specific incidents, but similar situations have happened in the past. “It’s very seldom, and we take it very seriously,” he said. Bus drivers are required to keep a checklist of students as they board and exit the bus, and they’re also required to check every seat after they park, Donaldson said. “We go through routine training and really harp on that and make sure that’s understood and the drivers understand that’s a responsibility they have,” he said.

The remains of a vehicle are seen outside Syria's army headquarters Wednesday in Damascus.

REBELS STRIKE SYRIAN CENTER WITH CAR BOMBS

BEIRUT (AP) • Syrian rebels struck deep in the fortress-like inner sanctum of President Bashar Assad's rule Wednesday in Damascus, detonating two car bombs that engulfed the army headquarters in flames.

The suicide bombings and subsequent gun battles in the Syrian capital killed at least five people, including a reporter for Iranian TV. The carefully orchestrated attacks highlighted the regime's growing vulnerability, even as the 18-month battle to bring down Assad is locked in a stalemate.

International diplomacy has failed to stop the bloodshed.

Making his debut on the global stage at the United Nations, Egypt's new President Mohammed Morsi said he will not rest until Syria's civil war is brought to an end. He called it the "tragedy of the age" and one that "we all must end."

Morsi has launched an "Islamic Quartet" of regional powers to seek an end to the violence, but he has not offered a specific plan of action. The explosions targeting the Syrian military compound went off about 10 minutes apart, around 7 a.m., with the first blast possibly meant to create a diversion to enable the second attacker to get into the compound.

Security camera footage aired by Syrian state TV showed a white van driving on a busy thoroughfare outside the military compound, then veering to the right and exploding. The footage showed a second blast going off inside the complex, with flames rising up behind trees.

After the second explosion, rebel fighters and regime forces exchanged fire for more than three hours, including inside the military compound, said Rami Abdul-Rahman of the Britain-based Syrian Observatory for Human Rights, an activist group. The fighting spilled over into nearby Omayyad Square, with regime troops — some wildly firing in the air — chasing after rebel gunmen, witnesses said.

Syrian state TV reported that four army guards were killed and 14 people were wounded, including civilians and military personnel.

The Iranian English language Press TV said one of its Syrian correspondents, 33-year-old Maya Nasser, was killed by a rebel sniper following the blast. The station replayed Nasser's last report, in which he was on the phone from Damascus during a live broadcast, when the line suddenly went silent. The Damascus bureau chief for Press TV, Hosein Mortada, was wounded in the clashes.

"It is obvious that there are no more safe areas in Syria," said Hala, a 28-year-old resident who only gave her first name for fear of repercussions. "We are all under fire."

The two sides are deadlocked in the northern battle for Aleppo, Syria's largest city. In the western slice of Syria that is most heavily populated, rebels control large swaths of the countryside, while the regime is clinging to urban centers.

Police to Search for the Remains of Jimmy Hoffa Under Detroit Driveway

DAVID ASHENFELTER

Detroit Free Press

DETROIT • Police will be taking soil core samples at a home in the Detroit suburb of Roseville on Friday in search of the remains of missing Teamsters boss Jimmy Hoffa, whose 1975 disappearance sparked one of the 20th century's biggest mysteries.

"We received information from an individual who saw something," Roseville Police Chief James Berlin told the Detroit Free Press. "The information seemed credible, so we decided to follow up on it."

Berlin wouldn't say who provided the tip — one of hundreds authorities have pursued in the years since Hoffa vanished from a restaurant parking lot in Oakland County, Mich.

Hoffa, 62, disappeared on the afternoon of July 30, 1975, from the parking lot of what then was the Machus Red Fox restaurant in Bloomfield Township. He had gone there for a reconciliation meeting with Anthony "Tony Pro" Provenzano, a mob-connected New Jersey Teamster official, and Anthony "Tony Jack" Giacalone, a Detroit mafia captain.

Despite thousands of tips, authorities never found Hoffa's body, and no one has been charged in his disappearance. Hoffa's daughter, Barbara Crancer, a retired St. Louis administrative judge, said she doesn't hold out much hope the search will produce her father's body or solve the mystery of his disappearance.

"I don't put much credence into it," she said Wednesday afternoon. "I don't think the case will ever be solved. Too many people are dead and gone. I believe there are people out there who know what happened, but they're not talking."

"After so many false turns,

I'll be surprised if anything comes of it. But as his daughter, I would like to have a body to bury."

Dan Moldea, a Washington, D.C., author who wrote a 1978 book — "The Hoffa Wars" — about Hoffa's disappearance, said he's crossing his fingers.

"After all these years, I have come to believe that the final solution to this case will come very suddenly out of left field from someone who has had no connection to the actual murder. For that reason, I always treat these tipsters with respect. One of these days, one of them might be right."

The Washington Monument, seen Wednesday, has been closed to visitors since it was damaged by an earthquake in August 2011.

Washington Monument Will Take More Than a Year to Repair

WASHINGTON • Work to repair remaining earthquake damage to the closed Washington Monument will begin within about 30 days and be completed in 12 to 18 months, National Park Service officials said Wednesday.

The Park Service announced that Perini Management Services Inc. of Massachusetts had been chosen to complete the $15 million project. The damage was caused by a magnitude 5.8 earthquake that struck the East Coast in August 2011.

"This is a major step toward getting the monument safely opened to the public once again," said Bob Vogel, superintendent of the National Mall and Memorial Parks. The $9.6 million contract will be funded in part by a congressional appropriation of $7.5 million. That sum was matched by philanthropist David Rubenstein, founder of the Carlyle Group.

"His support has been invaluable in our mission to restore and improve the National Mall, home to the history, heroes and hope of America," said Caroline Cunningham, president of the Trust for the National Mall.

Repairs have already been completed on the monument's elevator, which was severely damaged by the earthquake. Work yet to be finished includes removal of loose stone fragments, repair of stone and mortar joint damage, and replacement of the lightning protection system.

The western side of the National Mall is built on former marshland, which has caused the 555-foot-tall structure to gradually sink — albeit at an extremely slow rate.

"We did not find any change in the height of the structure that we could attribute to the earthquake," said Dave Doyle, chief geodetic surveyor at the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration. It is possible too that the monument is leaning slightly to one side, but Doyle confirmed that there is no current observational data available to make that determination.

IRANIAN PRESIDENT SAYS 'UNCIVILIZED ZIONISTS' THREATEN HIS COUNTRY

UNITED NATIONS • Iranian President Mahmoud Ahmadinejad told the United Nations General Assembly on Wednesday that "uncivilized Zionists" are threatening to attack his country, but he otherwise was silent on the continuing clash between Iran and world powers over the Tehran's disputed nuclear program.

Ahmadinejad, in an address that climaxed days of public and media appearances in New York, focused his remarks on what he described as an unjust international system, built around the United Nations, that oppresses the world in the interests of the West's wealthy minority.

He said his country has "suffered from the agonies of forced aggressions" from countries he didn't identify. He said that an "arms race and intimidation by nuclear weapons and weapons of mass destruction by hegemonic powers have become prevalent" and that a "continued threat by the uncivilized Zionists to resort to military action against our great nation is a clear example of this bitter reality."

He complained that the United Nations has no legitimacy, while praising the Non-Aligned Movement, which met weeks ago in Tehran with the Iranian regime presiding. Ahmadinejad said he spoke for the group.

"A state of mistrust has cast its shadow on the international relations, whilst there is no trusted or just authority to help resolve world conflicts," he said.

Ahmadinejad didn't dwell for long on his regime's disputes with Israel, as he has in earlier remarks to the media this week. In an interview on Monday, he said Israel's presence in the Middle East would be only a short-term one, and predicted that before long it would be "eliminated."

Before the U.N., he took aim at the materialism of the West and what he saw as the corruption of the American political system. He said the wealthy in the United States spend "hundreds of millions of dollars" on elections, spending they viewed as just "an investment."

Powerful Americans don't care, he said, "about the 99 percent."

The U.S. and Israeli delegations didn't show up for the speech, but many others did, including representatives of Britain, France, the Palestinians and many Arab countries.

Outside the U.N., protesters denounced his visit.

PROMINENT RUSSIAN TYCOON FACES CRIMINAL CHARGES

MOSCOW (AP) • A Russian tycoon who has financed a newspaper critical of the Kremlin and supported the opposition has been charged with hooliganism and assault for punching a fellow billionaire during a television talk show. He dismissed the criminal case as politically motivated.

Russia's top investigative agency, which announced the charges Wednesday, said the defendant, Alexander Lebedev, cannot leave Moscow while the probe is under way. In Russia, filing charges marks the start of a criminal investigation, which may or may not lead to a trial. Lebedev said in comments carried by the Interfax news agency that he considers the charges against him political and "completely made up."

He could face up to seven years in prison, if he's convicted on hooliganism charges similar to those that were filed against three members of the feminist rock band Pussy Riot. They were sentenced to two years each last month for performing a "punk prayer" against President Vladimir

Putin in Moscow's main cathedral. Putin has taken an increasingly tough course against dissent after massive protests against his rule last winter, with searches and interrogation of opposition activists and the passage of repressive bills.

Lebedev, whose net worth was reported by Forbes magazine to be $1.1 billion, made his money in the banking industry. He has financed the Novaya Gazeta newspaper, which is fiercely critical of the Kremlin, and the British papers the Independent and the Evening Standard.

Lebedev's son, Yevgeny, who owns the two British publications, tweeted that his father is "being targeted by people who don't like his stance against corruption, and hate Novaya." He later described the charges as "extraordinarily disproportionate."

"My father has been targeted because of his determination to fight against corruption and to be a crusader for democracy in a country where this has not always been welcome," Lebedev's son said in a statement.

Toyota Joins Nissan in Saying Deeper China Output Cuts Loom

MA JIE

TOKYO • Toyota, Nissan and Honda signaled Wednesday that Chinese production cuts may deepen this month after anti-Japanese protests flared in the world's largest vehicle market.

Nissan lowered August output in China, its largest market by volume, 8.9 percent from a year earlier to 86,488 units, the Japanese carmaker said Wednesday. Chinese production fell 18 percent to 67,625 vehicles at Toyota, Asia's biggest automaker, and declined 10 percent at Honda.

Officials at the Japanese automakers said sales and production are poised to worsen in September after anti-Japan protests over disputed islets in the East China Sea escalated, with some demonstrators torching auto showrooms and smashing cars. Japanese autos will lose their lead this year over German name-plates in the country for the first time since 2005, China's Passenger Car Association estimates.

"You can't leave the Chinese market, but you may try to move the production line out of China for the time being," said Yuuki Sakurai, president of Fukoku Capital Management. Investor demand for the automakers' shares "depends on how the companies are going to cover these risks," he said. Nissan fell 2.6 percent to 664 yen at the close in Tokyo trading, while Toyota dropped 2.7 percent and Honda declined 4.2 percent.

"The impact from the anti-Japan protests are not yet reflected in the August numbers," said Yurika Motoyoshi, a Toyota spokeswoman. "Last year's numbers were unusually high as we recovered from the earthquake and tsunami. We've already seen that orders are declining, so the protests' impact will be shown in the September numbers."

Nissan said Wednesday it's halting

Chinese production three days ahead of schedule to reflect demand, while Toyota said that it's suspending output from today until Oct. 8 at plants in Guangzhou and Tianjin, and at its Sichuan FAW plant starting Sept. 29.

Nissan will suspend production in China from Sept. 27 and resume output on Oct. 8 in view of the "current market situation," Chris Keefe, a spokesman for the company, said by telephone Wednesday. The company makes cars in the country with Dongfeng Motor Corp.

"In previous years, they often added shifts around this time to meet rising demand during hot sales season in September and October," said Han Weiqi, a Shanghai-based analyst with CSC International Holdings Ltd. "Japanese automakers will see their market share being taken away by American and European automakers, as consumers who need to buy cars will simply turn away and buy other brands."

Billionaire Rinehart Sued for Ownership of Pilbara Ore Mines

SYDNEY (AP) • Gina Rinehart, Asia's richest woman who built a fortune from her father's iron-ore discoveries, is being sued by the heirs of his former partner for half of some assets in Western Australia's Pilbara's region, including a mine being built with Rio Tinto Group.

Wright Prospecting, founded by Peter Wright, who with Rinehart's father Lang Hancock discovered the iron ore deposits, said Hancock Prospecting has been making commercial decisions regarding the properties without Wright Prospecting's involvement.

"Wright Prospecting is now trying to recover its interest in those tenements," Wright said Wednesday in an emailed response to questions from Bloomberg News, referring to part of the Hope Downs property. It's seeking a 50 percent stake in the Hope Downs 4, 5 and 6 tenements, according to a copy of the writ filed Sept. 24 in the Supreme Court of Western Australia in Perth and obtained by Bloomberg News Wednesday.

Hancock Prospecting and Rio jointly own the Hope Downs assets after a 2005 agreement. Hope Downs 4, owned 50 percent by Rio, will have annual capacity of 15 million metric tons once it is operating next year and will cost $1.6 billion to build, according to an August statement from Rio.

Rio, based in London, is expanding its iron-ore mines in the Pilbara region to 353 million tons a year by the first half of 2015 from current capacity of 230 million tons, it said in August. Australia is the world's largest exporter of iron ore.

Wright accused Hancock of breach of trust for selling the Hope Downs property without its consent and breaches of fiduciary obligations.

Wright sought an accounting of all profits earned by Hancock from the Hope Downs 4, 5 and 6 assets and compensation for the breaches. It also sought a declaration from the court that Hancock held half the property in trust for Wright as well as any proceeds from the sale and royalties Hancock received. The dispute over Hope Downs between the heirs of Hancock and Wright continues an ongoing battle over assets. The two families have an 11-year dispute over the Rhodes Ridge property, with a judge having awarded Rinehart's 25 percent stake in it to Wright. Rinehart appealed and a decision is pending.

Wright's children, Angela Bennett and Michael Wright, were listed the 14th wealthiest people in Australia last year on BRW's Rich 200 list. Michael Wright died in April. Rinehart is the 35th richest person in the world, with a net worth of $18.8 billion, according to the Bloomberg Billionaires Index.

The Hancock and Wright partnership owned the tenements, now known as Hope Downs 4, 5 and 6 in the 1970s, Wright said in the statement. The tenements were re-awarded in 1989 by the Western Australian government and held by Hancock on the partnership's behalf, according to Wright.

Lang Hancock and Peter Wright, whose lifelong friendship and business relationship appeared to be deteriorating by the early 1980s according to court records, initially agreed in 1983 to carve up some of their properties, with each having the option of taking full control of their portion.

Specks of Land at Center of Japan-China Islands Dispute

BY BARBARA DEMICK

Los Angeles Times

BEIJING • In its heyday, the largest island was home to several hundred workers who caught fish and collected albatross feathers to adorn women's hats in Europe.

Nowadays, the only inhabitants are a hardy band of feral, inbred goats descended from a fecund pair left behind in 1978 by Japanese ultranationalists who wanted to establish a living presence on the otherwise deserted shards of land.

Rarely in geopolitics have the stakes been so large over someplace so small.

Political scientists have compared the islands so vociferously contested between China and Japan to the Falklands, which sparked the 1982 war between Argentina and Britain. But in fact they are much, much less. The Senkaku (to the Japanese) and Diaoyu (to the Chinese) consist of eight islands, the largest all of 2 miles long and the smallest a mere rock jutting out of the East China Sea. In their entirety, the islands cover less than three square miles.

Nevertheless, they are a tinderbox for Asia's superpowers, one in which the United States is deeply entangled. The U.S. occupied the islands after World War II and was ultimately responsible for handing back administrative authority to Japan.

Until the late 19th century, the Chinese had the strongest claim to the islands. The Chinese name, Diaoyu, (taken from a legend about a fisherman) appears in literature dating back to the 13th century. Ming Dynasty records describe the islands as navigational markers for ships traveling between China and Okinawa, which was then part of a kingdom known as Liuqiu or Ryukyu.

Chinese ships occasionally stopped at the largest island to replenish supplies of fresh water and firewood. The only documented Japanese presence is from the 16th century, when Japanese pirates used an island as a base for launching raids against the Chinese coast.

The border between China and Liuqiu was an underwater trough to the east of the islands, making them clearly part of Chinese territory, wrote Japanese scholar Unryu Sug-anuma, in a study published in 2000. "There was no ambiguity about the Diaoyu islands being part of Chinese territory; these eight islets belonged to the Middle Kingdom, period!" Suganuma wrote.

That sole claim changed in the late 19th century, as a rapidly modernizing Japan eclipsed China's crumbling Qing Dynasty. In the 1880s, an adventurous businessman from Fukuoka, Tatsushiro Koga, asked the Japanese government for permission to lease them.

The government initially denied his requests, saying the islands probably belonged to China ("It has been found that these islands lie near the border area with the Qing ... and have Chinese names," the Japanese foreign minister wrote in an 1884 memorandum, according to Suganuma's book.) But the government changed its mind in 1895, the same year that it annexed Taiwan after its decisive victory in the first Sino-school for them," said Shaw, who had been studying Japanese documents including Koga's memoir.

Koga's son, Zenji, bought four islands from the Japanese government in 1932 after the lease expired. But the business became unsustainable after Japan's entry into World War II, because of rising fuel costs and economic sanctions.

After Japan's defeat, the islands came under U.S. occupation. They were given to Japan in 1972, along with the handover of Okinawa.

"The United States said it wasn't taking sides in the dispute. But this was the Cold War and they didn't want the islands to fall into communist hands," said Suganuma.

Zenji Koga later sold the islands to the Kurihara family, real estate developers who did little with the property except to lease one island to the Japanese Defense Ministry for training exercises and occasional use by the U.S. military.

The current flare-up began in April when the right-wing Tokyo governor, Shintaro Ishihara, announced during a visit to the Washington-based Heritage Foundation that he was raising money to buy the islands from the Kuriharas for an estimated price of $26 million and that he would try to develop them for tourism. The Japanese government stepped in, saying it would purchase three of the islands instead. (The island leased to the military is owned by a Kurihara sister and is not included in the sale.)

There is also a private Chinese claimant to the islands: In the 1970s, the granddaughter of a prominent pharmacist produced a will and purported edict from the late Empress Dowager Cixi bequeathing the island to her grandfather, Sheng Xuanhuai. Scholars have been divided about whether the edict was genuine, but in any case, the family never developed the property. (Ironically, the heirs now operate a Chinese restaurant in Japan.)

Chinese were outraged by the proposed sale of the islands they believe are rightfully theirs. Violent protests broke out this month in dozens of Chinese cities with Japanese stores and factories attacked and Japanese-model cars overturned and set on fire. In Xian, a 51-year-old Chinese man driving his son's Toyota to do the shopping was attacked by a mob and left comatose by a beating.

Hiroiyuki Kurihara, a Tokyo architect and spokesman for the Kurihara family, told the English-language Japan Times last week the dispute should be submitted to the United Nations' International Court of Justice before any more violence takes place.

Taiwanese scholar Shaw suggests that people study the history of the islands.

ON TARGET: YOUR WEEKLY HUNTING REPORT

Archery Season Comes to a Close

Hunters, Sunday is the last day of archery season. But don't fret. More hunts open in October.

Sharp-tail grouse season opens Oct. 1, providing Magic Valley upland game hunters with opportunity to bag birds in areas east of Interstate 84 in Cassia County, said Regan Berkley, regional biologist with Idaho Department of Fish and Game.

Other Magic Valley areas are closed to sharp-tail, though upland hunters have been known to travel distances to harvest the birds. Hint: eastern Idaho.

"The numbers we've seen have been good," Berkley said, noting that hunters need a sage grouse permit and a sharp-tail permit.

Rifle hunt: A lot of young deer are expected in the South Hills this season.

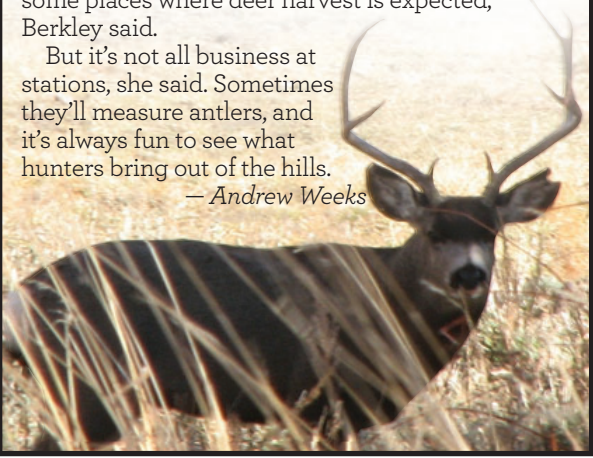

"We had a mild winter," Berkley said. "What that means is that we had good fawn survival and a pretty good crop of yearlings out in the hills."

That could be good news for hunters who aren't looking for trophy animals. "Young bucks don't have things quite figured out yet."

Check stations: They'll be set up in October at some places where deer harvest is expected, Berkley said.

But it's not all business at stations, she said. Sometimes they'll measure antlers, and it's always fun to see what hunters bring out of the hills.

F&G: Several Ways to Detect Wildlife Crimes

JEROME • Don't even think about breaking the law this hunting season.

Chances are good that you'll be caught.

In areas where the Idaho Department of Fish and Game receives complaints of spotlighting or other suspicious activity near roads, conservation officers will use "artificial simulated animals" to apprehend unlawful hunters.

Artificial simulated animals, commonly called ASAs, are life-like specimens of deer, elk and other game species.

Aside from the inherent danger in shooting from a vehicle or road, road hunting for wildlife brings to question the ethical behavior of some hunters. Most hunters abide by the laws, but those who do not continue to perpetuate a negative image for hunters.

"Road hunters are the visible minority," said Mark Hill, regional conservation officer of Lewiston. "They are what everyone sees, and many of their activities are bad for the image of all hunters."

Many of the citations issued to road hunters, who violate game laws, include spotlighting, trespassing, shooting from a motorized vehicle, shooting across the road and waste of game. The penalties for shooting an artificial animal may include a mandatory license revocation and a fine up to

"Road hunters are the visible minority. They are what everyone sees, and many of their activities are bad for the image of all hunters."

$1,000 and a jail sentence up to six months. There also is a $50 minimum restitution penalty for shooting an ASA to help maintain the decoys.

The use of such tools has been upheld in the court systems across the country as a legitimate method of apprehending violators and has helped to reduce illegal hunting. More than 48 states and several Canadian provinces have been using artificial animals since the late 1980s.

To check for law compliance, officers will conduct impromptu enforcement check stations at which all hunters and anglers, successful or not, must stop. Usually conducted on less traveled roads and set up at any time day or night, impromptu check stations are another tool officers use to detect wildlife crimes.

5 Best Bets for Fall Offroading

BY ANDREW WEEKS

JEROME • A busy work schedule and other commitments keep Ryan Patrick from riding the trails as much as he'd like. But whenever he does have the chance to get out, it comes as a blessing.

The Twin Falls man prefers heading north, to Fairfield or Stanley, but when time doesn't permit he might go closer to home — to the South Hills or Devil's Corral.

I met up with Patrick on Sept. 22 at Devil's Corral, north of the Perrine Bridge, just as he was suiting up for an afternoon ride with his buddy Tristan Benavidez, also of Twin Falls.

Benavidez was riding an all-terrain vehicle, Patrick a dirt bike. As the two readied to ride, the machines sat inside Patrick's trailer, their plastic and metal gleaming even in the shade. The Kawasaki's two wheels, jet black, appeared as though they never had been used. I looked down at my shoes, dust-covered from my short walk from my car to Patrick's trailer, and knew it would take only a couple of seconds before his bike's wheels became coated in dirt.

Devil's Corral, Patrick said, is a good place for amateur riders or for those who want a place to fling dirt without driving far. But with its dry desert landscape, it's not as scenic as other places in the region.

'A Tremendous Amenity'

Ketchum city approves master plan for whitewater park.

BY KAREN BOSSICK

For the Times-News

KETCHUM • Jeff Smull can wax eloquently about Sun Valley's skiing, mountain biking, hiking, fly-fishing and golf. But there's one thing missing, he says: A whitewater park.

That's about to change. The Ketchum City Council has approved a master plan for a $2.7 million park that would run along 1,500 feet of the Big Wood River near Hulen Meadows just north of Ketchum.

"It'll be just a tremendous amenity for a mountain town like Ketchum," said Smull. "Having something like this is in keeping with the Sun Valley thing and the Idaho thing since Idaho is the whitewater state of the U.S."

"There are certainly enough characters around who'd use it," added Scooter Carling, a Ketchum river guide.

Strategically placed drop features would create a variety of play waves on the river that kayakers can surf and perform flips at various water levels.

There also would be nature trails, wildlife viewing areas, dog play areas and fishing sites.

The city hired S2o Design and Engineering, a Lyons, Colo.-based whitewater park design firm to build the park. S2o designed the 2012 London Olympics whitewater course, which was voted the best venue of the Olympics.

Three-time Olympic kayaker Scott Shipley said he would expect the park to attract up to 50 kayakers a day during spring and early summer. Otherwise, the park will likely see the same amount and kinds of uses the area pond gets today.

Jen Smith, director of parks and recreation for Ketchum, said she hopes that the park will attract out-of-towners who might be persuaded to stop a couple days and practice their kayaking skills before heading on to the Middle Fork and Main Salmon rivers in early summer when tourism revenue for local businesses is at a seasonal low.

"I suspect the majority of users will be local and regional," she added.

This particular stretch of river was deemed the best site for a park because it's surrounded by public property.

"This will give people an area they can take kids and have a safe experience. The Big Wood is called the Big Wood because it has a lot of logs and debris in it and that makes it pretty unsafe for those who want to boat or ride it in innertubes," Smith said.

Smith said she hopes construction can begin in 2014 with the park opening in the spring of 2015.

First there must be a $101,240 environmental assessment, paid for by the Wood River Land Trust, the White Water Park Committee and the city.

The city also has applied for a patent from the BLM to create a park on the BLM land. The Recreational and Public Purposes Act permits public lands owned by BLM to be transferred to local governments for recreational purposes. The city already has been providing seasonal maintenance for the area since the BLM's Shoshone office doesn't have the resources to take care of it on a daily basis.

The park will have a more natural look than the new whitewater park in Boise or the Cascade park that hosted the USA Freestyle Kayaking National Championships last July.

Offroading

Tired of the same ol' places to ride? Here are five suggestions for fall offroading.

South Hills

Twin Falls resident Kent Gillett has been riding dirt bikes for about as long as he can remember. He devotes most of his riding time to motocross, and he and his Yamaha CRF450 are frequent visitors of Rock Creek Race Track near Kimberly.

But if you were to head out tomorrow, I asked, some place in the backcountry, where would you go? Probably the South Hills, he replied.

"It's a really good spot," Gillett said, noting the hills' fall-colored landscapes are a boon. "There are several different trails to ride."

The hills are most popular for ATV riding, because of their wide trails, but dirt bikers enjoy these easy trails, too. One popular trail is Porcupine-Alpine, an 11-mile loop accessed near Third Fork south of Magic Mountain Ski Resort. Head north of the resort to the Diamondfield Jack Snow Play Area to access other trails.

Information: Sawtooth National Forest, 737-3200.

Fairfield

Another place Gillett likes to ride is Chimney Creek near Fairfield, where "there's really good single-track trails for offroad fun," he said.

Chuck Sharp, co-owner of J&C Motorsports in Twin Falls, said he also enjoys Chimney Creek and knows several other riders who do, too. Trails here are best suited for intermediate dirt bike riders, Sharp said. But novice riders also can find trails.

The narrow trails here are best suited for dirt bikes, not ATVs, and offer dirt and wooded terrain and hill climbs.

The foothills near Soldier Mountain, also in Fairfield, are another scenic place to ride, Sharp said, and have much the same type of terrain.

For four-wheelers there's the Wilson Flat ATV trail system, which includes about 11 miles of loop trails designed for ATVs. These trails offer scenic views of Anderson Ranch Reservoir, South Fork of the Boise River and the surrounding area.

Get trail maps from the Fairfield Ranger District office.

Information: 764-3202.

Baumgartner

A lot of the riders Sharp knows also like to ride their offroad machines at Willow Creek in the Baumgartner complex of trails, he said.

Trails are accessed from the Baumgartner Campground along the South Fork of the Boise River about 12 miles east of Featherville.

Trails here are for both two- and four-wheelers; some are easier than others, but experienced dirt bikers like the single tracks and switchbacks.

Another popular trail: 9-mile Iron Mountain Trail, accessed about one mile west of the campground. The trail originally was a road providing access to Iron Mountain Lookout. Motorized travel is heavy, according to the Sawtooth National Forest website, and is restricted to vehicles with 48-inch or less wheel base. "The highlight of the trail," reads the website, "is the scenic view from the Forest Service Lookout on Iron Mountain."

Information: 737-3200.

Hemingway Butte

Hemingway Butte, which boasts a 2,602-foot mountain summit and several 1,000-foot peaks in Owyhee County, has a number of trailheads with access to literally hundreds of miles of roads. Single-track trails are specific for dirt bikes only, while ATV riders can access others.

Terrain here is varied, from wide dirt trails to more difficult narrow, wooded and pock-marked trails. According to the Bureau of Land Management, all types of surfaces may be encountered, from sand washes to rocky landscapes.

From Hemingway Butte — which is near Walters Ferry about 18 miles south of Nampa and a mile west of Reynolds Creek Road — visitors may also access popular Rabbit Creek and Fossil Creek trailheads.

Information: BLM Owyhee Field Office, 384-3300.

Yankee Fork

About 12 miles north of Stanley, Yankee Fork is a challenging place to ride. And what better time to visit its two ghost towns than before Halloween?

Rob Glodowski, of Action Cycles 'n Sleds in Twin Falls, said in a former Times-News article that it is one of his favorite trail systems because it offers challenges that other systems do not.

Don't expect to go fast here. Average speed for experienced riders is only about 22 mph. But, he said, that's fast for these trails.

Don't worry, ATV buffs. The area also offers opportunity for exploration on four wheels.

Information: Yankee Fork Ranger District, 838-3300.

Star and Flame Colors Have Different Origins

It's a common misconception that the same process is responsible for the colors of both candle flames and stars. While there's a tiny grain of truth in this notion, it's mostly wide of the mark.

First the truth: The blue part of the candle flame, nearest the wick, is hotter than the yellow part near the top. So it is with stars: Blue stars are hotter, and reddish stars are cooler. But the similarities end there.

The bluish part of a candle flame is a cloud of vaporized wax, whose molecules get broken apart, liberating carbon and hydrogen atoms. The combination of oxygen, carbon, and hydrogen (i.e. combustion) produces blue light by chemiluminescence (a cooler version of which gives fireflies their glow). The heat of combustion then excites the carbon compounds' electrons, which emit blue light when they return to lower energy states.

The yellow part of a candle flame comprises a rising cloud of soot particles (large carbon molecules) glowing like microscopic campfire embers.

Unlike soot particles — which are solid — stars are gas, and much hotter.

While the highest temperature in a candle flame (in the dull orange-brown region) might reach 2,600 degrees Fahrenheit, the coolest stars are at least 4,200 degrees and the hottest may reach 72,000 degrees Fahrenheit. A

Whitewater

Whitewater features will be built on nine natural structures that already exist. Eddies — areas of slow water — will be incorporated into the design as safe areas in case kayakers come out of their boats.

"It'll be great for the kids growing up, for adaptive sports, wounded warriors — anytime you can get to the water, it's a healing process," said Smull. "And like the halfpipe in the ski business, it'll attract people to watch kayakers do tricks. People take picnics to the whitewater park in Reno and never get their feet in the water but they have a ball watching the kayakers play in the hydraulics."

Sharp-tailed Grouse Season to Open

JEROME • Attention, upland game bird hunters, sharp-tailed grouse season opens Oct. 1.

The season runs through Oct. 31, with a daily bag limit of two birds and a possession limit of six.

The season is open only in eastern Idaho in these areas: Bingham and Clark counties east of Interstate 15, Franklin, Fremont, Jefferson County east of Interstate 15, Madison, and Teton counties, Bonneville County east of Interstate 15, Bannock County east of Interstate 15 and south of Interstate 86, Bear Lake, Caribou, Cassia County east of Interstate 84 and that portion west of Interstate 84 south of the Malta-Sublette Road and east of the Malta-Strevell Road, Franklin, Oneida, and Power County south of Interstate 86.

Sharp-tailed grouse have been introduced into historical range in southern Twin Falls county and southeastern Owyhee County. Twin Falls County, Owyhee County and most of Cassia County are closed to the hunting of sharp-tailed grouse. Sharp-tailed grouse also occur around Split Butte area in Minidoka County. Hunting of sharp-tailed grouse is closed in Minidoka County.

Any person hunting sharp-tailed grouse must have in their possession a valid Idaho hunting license with a sage/sharp-tailed grouse permit validation at $4.75. The permit, available at Fish and Game license vendor, allows better monitoring of the harvest of this game bird.

Pointing Dog Cub to Meet

BUHL • If you have a dog you've been wanting to train, this event might be for you.

The High Desert Pointing Club will hold its monthly meeting at 7 p.m. Oct. 3 at Garibaldi's Restaurant, 1003 Main St., Buhl. Members will not train your dog for you, but will show you how.

The club, which was established as a training club for anyone wanting to learn how to train a pointing dog, usually offers a training day a month where all members are invited to bring their dogs. Experienced and knowledgeable members demonstrate various aspects of the training process and discuss them to suit the owner's needs.

It also is an opportunity for newer members to learn about specialized equipment and methods to train a pointing dog. It's an organization for the hunter who wants to get the most out of their dog during hunting season and keep them trained and in shape during the off season. Yearly membership is $25.

Another Early Morning in Birdland

BY DENNIS ANDERSON
Star Tribune

RENVILLE, Minn. • The issue Friday night when we turned off the shack's gas lights was whether alarm clocks in sufficient number would awaken us at 4. We also wondered just how cold our two-bit clapboard hovel might get and whether a fire in the wood-burning stove would be required. Camouflage hanging from nails and cots carpeting the floor, this was as close to "Deliverance" as a fella could get without being in the movie itself.

As it happened, every weirdo jingle imaginable awakened our crew at the appointed hour. Smartphones in the hands of smart alecks will get you that: duck quacks rising from one cot, harps strumming from another, also car horns and various techno beats that have no place whatsoever in a backwoods shanty. Soon, oatmeal and orange juice were on the table. We wanted to eat more poorly, really laying into eggs and sausages. We just didn't have time.

Across Minnesota on Saturday morning when the state's most recent duck season opened, some waterfowlers surely had only short distances to cross from where they slept to where they hunted. This did not include us. Tangles of cedar and buckthorn needed conquering to reach our waters. Thankfully, the younger among our crew were happy to break trail, bags of decoys on their backs, trigger fingers itching.

With me were Parker Smith, a Willmar eighth-grader, and my son, Cole, a high school junior. On another stand overlooking a different portion of the same waterway were Matthew Smith, Parker's brother, and Neil Smith, the boys' cousin. We had another good gun not far away: Harrison Smith, brother to Matthew and Parker, and not far from him, Willy Smith, dad or uncle to all Smiths present.

Shooting time for us Saturday was 6:34 a.m. But the morning was dark. And cold. And windy, with strong gusts whirling from the north and northwest. Our decoys, once set, bobbed in mini-whitecaps, and I worried they might not attract even a whiff of winged fowl: Any blue-winged teal or wood duck worthy of its name should have ridden these nor'west-ers to Iowa and points south already on Friday.

Yet as the gloom of first light arched overhead, ducks took wing. Mostly these were teal. But reasonable smatterings of mallards also outlined themselves against the brightening sky. Watching every wing beat, Cole and Parker were as alert as sentries.

The morning's earliest fliers teased the two boys, who flamed their barrel ends but drew no feathers. But they chambered more cartridges, and more still, and soon a smattering of hard-luck ducks peeled away from their squadrons and somersaulted into the boys' decoys, dead.

Back, I'd huff when this occurred, directing Duke, the young black Labrador at my side, to retrieve.

The appeal here is to all of the senses: Smell, with the marsh's pungency; also the sight of waterfowl arrowing over water; the explosion of gunfire; and, finally, the telltale splash of a duck cartwheeling into water, a retrieving dog soon also on the crash site, eager to fulfill his birthright while earning a pat on the head.

Mark, Cole said, signaling that birds were approaching.

This was a tight knot of mallards he saw, banking hard against the chilled breeze before slipping air through their primary feathers and losing altitude.

Bang. The boys' shotguns echoed.

And twice more: Bang. Bang.

A big duck fell, and the boys reloaded.

Meanwhile, Neil, Matthew and Harrison, and Neil's good dog, Jade, also were having a day of it, jacking an occasional mallard but folding mostly teal before sleeving their scatterguns in late morning.

In the end, this was a day for brothers, cousins and friends, collecting as they did some 25 birds. Willy and I mostly looked on, as our next generation of waterfowlers, and the next generation still, entombed forever memories of big days over decoys.

The dogs were tired. We cleaned the birds. The sun set. We fired up the grill.

Before us soon was a duck feast on paper plates, the birds marinated first, then braised delicately, salad and beans on the side.

Harps strumming, ducks quacking, techno beats pulsating.

Sunday morning at 4, we looked forward to hearing each.

Enjoying the Musky Mornings and Golden Days of Grouse Season

BY SAM COOK

Duluth News Tribune

NORTH OF DULUTH, Minn. • The old tote road trail not only looks right on this opening day of Minnesota's 2012 grouse season — it smells right, too.

The trail is dappled with fallen aspen leaves, and every grouse hunter knows they smell earthy and a little bit sour. It's the smell of fall in the North Woods.

It is still early on this opening day in mid-September, cool and damp, and the sun throws long shadows down the trail. For now, it is just the yellow dog and I, working a familiar two-track about 20 miles north of Duluth.

This isn't supposed to be a banner year for ruffed grouse in Minnesota or Wisconsin. The bird population is starting its downhill slide toward the bottom of its 10-year cycle. Drumming counts were down significantly last spring in both states.

But for most of us who hunt grouse, the hunt isn't about how many thousands of birds will be taken this fall. It's about getting out in some good country, poking along with an old shotgun and seeing what opportunities present themselves. One satisfying shot, a couple of startling flushes, can make a hunter's whole week.

The dog courses back and forth from one side of the trail to the other. She has figured out, with some prodding, that this is the way to hunt grouse. A swing into the woods on the left. A swing to the right. When she crosses the trail, she throws a split-second glance over her shoulder to make sure the guy in blaze orange is still there.

A person can get spoiled hunting with an 8-year-old dog who understands the game.

The woods are brilliant with color. The maples are coming on in shades of peach and crimson. The sumac leaves are the color of merlot. The popples and birches quiver in gold. Every time the dog bumps an aspen on her passes, more gold coins shower down.

A quick look into the woods, though, tells me that any flushing grouse will have the advantage. The cover is still dense. I'm soon able to confirm this when a grouse launches into flight among the alders. I throw the gun up but catch only intermittent glimpses of dusky feathers. On top of that, the bird takes low trajectory, just over the dog. The familiar shoot/don't shoot scenario plays instantly in my brain, and I pass on the shot out of concern for the dog.

The whirring of the bird's wings diminishes to nothing, and the forest is silent again.

Other hunters are celebrating the opener as well. When I stop at Island Lake to refill the dog's water bottles, I come across Dan Frigaard of Duluth fishing just below the Island Lake bridge.

"I already got a grouse," says Frigaard, 32. "I saw four, got one. Now I'm trying to get a walleye."

Frigaard was hunting alone, without a dog. Early.

"I was north of Boulder Lake at 5:30," he says. "I started walking at 6:25 or 6:30."

He likes the early shift. "It's peaceful. The wind's calm. You can hear a lot better," he says. "I typically have my best luck in the morning."

A little later, Dan Mettner of Duluth is finishing a swing through woods on a snowmobile trail with Riley, his 11-month-old half yellow Lab, half golden retriever. In an hour's walk, he hasn't flushed a bird.

"I'd like to get one," Mettner says, looking down at Riley. "I'd like to see what he does. He retrieves real well."

At midday, I encounter Jim Winklesky Jr. and Amy Swanson of Rice Lake Township riding their four-wheelers. Winklesky has a shotgun on his rear rack. Both are wearing blaze orange.

"It's pretty slow around here," Winklesky says, assessing the grouse numbers. "I've been hunting around here since I was a kid. I haven't heard or seen that many this fall. It's just slow."

They've ridden 15 or 20 miles, Winklesky says. A couple of hours. They haven't seen a bird yet.

"We've seen a lot of deer, though," he says.

The yellow dog and I find another trail we've hunted before and take one more walk. I haven't hunted here for a while, but it used to produce some birds. Sure enough, on a rise topped with 20-year-old popples, the dog plunges in and all but disappears in the foliage. I hear one bird flush but never see it. Another appears and disappears in the same instant in the slice of sky right over the trail. No shots are fired.

The dog snuffles the spot hard, trying to make another bird materialize, but it won't happen.

It's still early in this season. We will be back in a couple of weeks, when the birds are dispersing. We'll be back when the leaves are down and thick on the trail, making the woods smell even more like grouse hunting.

Don't Kid Yourself, Archery is Expensive for Bow Hunters

BY MIKE LEGGETT

Austin American-Statesman

AUSTIN, Texas • When I got into bow hunting, I naively thought that I would save some money on equipment and get lots of extra hunting time with the special season.

After all, once you've bought the bow, all you need are a few arrows, maybe some points, a face mask and some smell-good scents, and you're in business.

Not so fast Natty Bumpo.

This is America, the land of consumerism, where bigger means better and better means more.

As I recall, my first bow, with a dozen arrows and a carrying case, cost me $1,200. The last one, with no carrying case and no arrows, cost me close to $1,500. Arrows run about $100 a dozen, and, between shooting hogs and targets, I go through a couple of dozen during the year.

Mechanical broad heads run about $12 each in a package of three, and I'll use three or four packages each year. Throw in field points for practice and fixed broad heads for hogs, and there's another $150 every year.

Then, I have to buy a couple of pop-up blinds every year, because they just don't make those things to last. That's another $300-400. Scents will set me back $30 a season, and I'll buy some new kind of camouflage every year, so figure another $50-75 for that.

What I'm getting at here is that hunting costs money; bow hunting costs real money.

Take binoculars and range finders, for example.

Ordinary binoculars will not do when you're bow hunting.

Unless you want to be chasing wounded animals or watching your $10 arrow go sailing off into the atmosphere, you better have some kind of range finder hanging from your neck when you're hunting.

After his father's death, his mother took a job on a cattle ranch teaching at a one-room school where Harry and his two brothers became students. After his mother's remarriage, the family moved to a farm on the Snake River; following this, Harry graduated from Buhl High School in 1949. During high school, Harry joined the National Guard (at age 16) and, following graduation, enrolled at the University of Idaho and obtained an undergraduate degree in forestry as well as an Army commission. While at the University of Idaho, Harry was a charter member of Delta Sigma Phi fraternity and served as its chapter president during his senior year. He was also elected into the Xi Sigma Pi Forestry honor organization. During the summer months, he worked for the U.S. Forest Service, which included a summer as a smoke jumper in Montana.

Della Mae Wickel Ward

May 11, 1920-Sept. 20, 2012

ALBION • Della Mae Wickel Ward, a 92-year-old Albion resident, returned to our Heavenly Father on Thursday, Sept. 20, 2012, at the Cassia Regional Medical Center in Burley.

She was born May 11, 1920, in Malta, the daughter of Henry and Mae Wickel. Della attended school in Elba and Malta. A lifelong learner, she later received her elementary teaching certificate from Idaho State University. She taught for 12 years at Heyburn Elementary School in Minidoka County. She married Reuben Ward on Sept. 6, 1939, in the Salt Lake LDS Temple. They ranched in Elba and lived on the ranch until Reuben's retirement, when they sold the ranch and moved to Albion, where she resided at the time of her death. Della was an active member of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints and served in many capacities in the church. She and her husband served a mission in Iowa, Kansas and South Dakota. Della had a colorful personality, making it an easy choice for gift giving. She loved her cowboy boots and was often heard remarking she loved any color as long as it was purple.

She is survived by her sister, Edna Cahoon of Malta; and many nieces, nephews and friends. She was preceded in death by her husband, Reuben Ward; her parents; and three brothers, Marvin Wickel, Arden Wickel and Orvil Wickel.

The funeral will be held at 11 a.m. Saturday, Sept. 29, at the Albion LDS Ward Chapel, with Bishop Randy Brackenbury officiating. Burial will be in the Grandview Cemetery in Elba. Sandra Lynn Eckbert

March 5, 1949-Sept. 24, 2012

TWIN FALLS • Sandra Lynn Eckert passed away at her home Monday, Sept. 24, 2012, surrounded by her loving family.

Sandy was born March 5, 1949, in Worcester, Mass., to Robert and Maude Plouf. At the age of 3, she moved to California with her family after her father was recruited by Howard Hughes as a master tool and die maker. Growing up, Sandy loved participating in competitive go-cart racing. Sandy was a driven student where she excelled in her studies. Throughout her school years, she was in the gifted and accelerated learning programs. In 1967, she graduated from Cleveland High School in the San Fernando Valley, Calif.

In 1970, she met Tom, the love of her life, and they were married later that year. They were blessed with three children, Danielle, Wendy Ann and Richard. They were later sealed for time and all eternity in the Los Angeles LDS Temple. As a mother of three, she continued her education at Cerritos Junior College and Long Beach State, where she received her bachelor's degree. She was the only and first female at that time to receive two money scholarships from the same institution at the same time.

Sandy worked as a credit counselor and also worked for the city of Downey California Library. Due to her love of literature, Sandy decided to further pursue her education at San Jose State University in San Jose, Calif., where she graduated with honors with her master's degree in library science. While obtaining her master's degree, Sandy worked full time for the city of Riverside Library. After obtaining her degree, Sandy was promoted to librarian. She was integral in implementing a computer lab into the library program. She was selected to participate in a research program at the Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation, which included security software and hardware implementation for the library. During this time, Sandy volunteered countless hours teaching underprivileged children how to read and write and helped them with their homework. She was a lifetime member of the Omicron Nu National Honor Society.

On Sept. 9, 2005, after serving more than 25 years in library service, Sandy retired from the Riverside Library, and she and Tom moved to Twin Falls, Idaho. Sandy found great joy in her family. She was a master at sewing, quilting, embroidery and needlepoint.

Sandy is survived by her husband, Tom; her children, Danielle Hession of North Hollywood, Calif., Wendy Ann (Mark) Eckler of Boise and Richard (Jill) Eckert of Twin Falls; five grandchildren; and two great-grandchildren. She is also survived by her sister, Audrey Ware of Twin Falls; her brother, Robert (Colleen) Plouf of Portland, Ore.; and numerous nieces and nephews. She was preceded in death by her parents.

A funeral service will be held in her honor at 2 p.m. Friday, Sept. 28, at the Caswell LDS Chapel, 824 Caswell Ave. W. in Twin Falls, with Bishop Brent Stanger officiating. Burial will be at Sunset Memorial Park. Friends may call from 6 to 8 p.m. Thursday, Sept. 27, at White Mortuary, 136 Fourth Ave. E. in Twin Falls, or one hour prior to the service Friday at the church.

Services are under the direction of Lance Cox and staff. Friends may leave condolences by visiting www.whitemortuary.com.

Jose Rodrigo Hernandez 'Mambo'

1928-2012

TWIN FALLS • Our beloved father, husband, grandfather, uncle and friend, Jose Rodrigo Hernandez, better known as "Mambo," passed away Thursday, Sept. 6, 2012, in Salt Lake City, Utah.

We will miss him so much. He was our foundation; what kept us a close family and kept us in love. He was the epitome of what a father and a husband should be. He also was a great "Tio" to all his nieces and nephews and an even greater grandfather to all his grandchildren; to them, he was the "King of Kink-a-con Nu National Honor Society. Dink." To his close friends and acquaintances, he was "Mambo." He was an entrepreneur, a pioneer, a first-of-his-kind in a small town; he gave the community its first taste of Mexican pop culture with entertainment (music, concerts, dances) and great Mexican food in his restaurants. And just as successful as he was, he was also equally generous to many people, his community and causes he believed in; one of his deepest loves was for the church he dearly loved and generously contributed and donated to, the Guadalupe Church of Twin Falls, Idaho. He was loved by many

and will be deeply missed.

He was preceded in death by his parents, Jose and Catalina; son, Phillip; and one nephew, Rudy Hernandez. Mambo is survived by his wife, soul mate and love of his life, Mary Hernandez; his children and spouses, Ruth Ramos of Texas, Kathy (Lupe) Curiel, Jose Rodrigo Hernandez Jr., Mary Helen (Allen) Nove of Alaska, Manuel (Ronda) Hernandez of Idaho, Annie (Jim) Hernandez of Nev., Norma Hernandez of Salt Lake City, Utah; brother, Jose Hernandez from Milwaukee, Wis.; five nieces; five nephews; 20 grandchildren; and 22 great-grandchildren.

May the Lord keep him until we meet again.

Please join the family for a celebration of Mambo's life led by Sister RoseMary Boessen RSM at 5 p.m. this Saturday, Sept. 29, at the Guadalupe Center, 630 Falls Ave. in Twin Falls, Idaho (which was once the church he faithfully attended). A reception will immediately follow.

For more information, please call Jamie Sanchez at 208-410-2460.

Non-profit Community Spotlight

HABITAT FOR HUMANITY OF THE MAGIC VALLEY (HFH-MV) has Much to Celebrate, but more to do....

Twenty years ago, in 1991, a small group of volunteers founded HFH-MV as an affiliate of Habitat International. Their goal, to help serve the low income housing needs in South Central Idaho. Today, the HFH-MV founders' dream is alive and thriving with a large group of volunteers, donors, and three staff members working family by family to provide simple, decent housing. We invite you to be part of this joyous team.

Much has been accomplished; much remains to be done. Today, in Twin Falls County alone, 14.1% of the people live in poverty and many (872 households) do not have the safe, decent housing the rest of us enjoy. These numbers reflect 9.8% of the families in Twin Falls.

Over the past twenty years, HFH-MV, in partnership with 115 children and 59 adults, has built or refurbished 36 homes to sell to these families at an affordable price (with no interest). HFH-MV receives monthly income from all these homes (most mortgages are for 25-30 years) enabling HFH-MV to survive, to grow, and to give the hope homeownership can provide to more low income families.

FAMILIES NEEDED: HFH-MV is currently in family selection for our 2013 build season. Should you know a family in need, please direct them to our offices or www.habitatmagicvalley.org for a pre-application.

DONORS & VOLUNTEERS NEEDED: PLEASE HELP US - We have volunteer needs at the ReStore, on-sites and in the office. Ages 17 and older are welcome, large groups needed for upcoming build project at the ReStore. Call Amanda at 735-1233 or go to www.habitatmagicvalley.org to register on line.

Youth Golf Facility Breaks Ground in Rupert

rhowe@magicvalley.com

RUPERT • Construction is under way for Wee Links, a new youth golf facility in Rupert.

Built adjacent to Rupert Country Club at 100 South and 200 West, “Wee Links” will feature a short six-hole course, a clubhouse, storage area and patio area.

The project is headed by Rupert Rotary Club, with partnerships by the Rupert Elks Lodge and Rupert Country Club.

“It’s truly a community service-driven idea,” said Charlie Creason, co-president of the Rupert Rotary. “Lifetime sports, golf especially, teach kids to play by the rules, respect, honor, and the sort of values that make for good kids.”

Initial design work was completed with a $5,000 grant from Project Mutual Telephone (PMT) Foundation. Creason is CEO of PMT.

The First Federal Foundation is providing partial funding to remodel a current building to serve as the Wee Links clubhouse. The largest chunk of remaining cost will come from Wadsworth Golf Charities Foundation, which has pledged $150,000 spread over a five-year period.

Rupert Elks Lodge is donating the land. Rupert Country Club will provide maintenance. Bob Lantz, RCC’s head professional, said the new course won’t cause members’ dues to increase. Planners aim to make Wee Links self-supporting through other means, such as hole sponsorships.

“It’s a great way to promote junior golf and get kids involved in golf,” said Lantz. “The juniors will come first, but adults will have the opportunity to work on their short game.”

If construction stays on schedule, Creason said Wee Links should be ready to play by late fall 2013.

“Lifetime sports, golf especially, teach kids to play by the rules, respect, honor, and the sort of values that make for good kids.”

No. 3 CSI Confident Ahead of Top 5 Showdown

BY DAVID BASHORE
dbashore@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • The College of Southern Idaho’s come-from-behind five-set win over Salt Lake Community College isn’t that far in the team’s rearview mirror, but the Golden Eagles are treating it like ancient history.

“That one’s done, and it was pretty easy to forget about that and get ready for this week,” sophomore outside hitter Emily Ottinger said after Wednesday’s practice.

The Golden Eagles (17-1), who moved up a spot to third in the NJCAA Division I poll released Wednesday, back-door swept Salt Lake after dropping the first two sets. They know they can’t afford a similar start if they want to beat visiting fourth-ranked North Idaho College on Friday night.

“We’ve had great weeks of practice, keeping errors down and just getting better,” setter Marie Fujii said.

Last week the Cardinals were ranked No. 1 in the nation, and they were the fourth straight top-ranked team to lose, falling in five sets to Salt Lake last Thursday.

They’re known for a defense capable of extending rallies longer than they should go, in order to buy time for a ball to be buried by one of their outside hitters.

“We’re used to those long rallies now because we’ve gotten better in practice at having longer rallies, so it’s not something that we have to necessarily prepare for,” Ottinger said. “If we can use our attack to manipulate their defense, we can win.”

Salt Lake moved up a spot to No. 6, while Snow College slipped to No. 20 after losing to CSI in three sets and North Idaho in four.

No team has held the top ranking for more than one poll, and on Wednesday San Jacinto-Central (Texas) be-

This week figures to break the chain of top-ranked upsets, and if not this week, then next. San Jacinto-Central and No. 2 Western Nebraska will be heavily favored to win every match from this point until the end of their respective region tournaments.

But the opportunity presents itself Friday night for the Golden Eagles to at least put a temporary lock on third position, and with it prime position should one of the teams ahead of them —

Murtaugh Forfeits Next Two Football Games

TIMES-NEWS

MURTAUGH • Due to injuries decimating its roster, Murtaugh will forfeit its next two football games, Red Devils head coach Mike Nunnelee said Wednesday.

The decision to cancel

Murtaugh’s home game this Friday vs. North Gem and the Oct. 3 game at Rockland was made after half the team’s 12 players suffered injuries last week against Rimrock, leaving the Red Devils unable to field the required eight players.

The Rimrock game was abandoned in the third quarter with Murtaugh trailing 36-16.

The fate of Murtaugh’s remaining schedule — Oct. 12 at Sho-Ban and Oct. 19 vs. Castleford — will be determined at a later date.

Rory McIlroy hits out of a bunker during a practice round at the Ryder Cup golf tournament Tuesday at the Medinah Country Club in Medinah, Ill.

McIlroy the ‘Marked Man’ of Ryder Cup

ASSOCIATED PRESS

MEDINAH, Ill. • Rory McIlroy has gone from being a rookie in the Ryder Cup to a marked man at Medinah.

McIlroy is the first European in nearly 20 years to go into the Ryder Cup as the No. 1 player in the world, although the star power of this 23-year-old from Northern Ireland is defined by much more than a computer ranking. He already has won two majors, with a record score in the U.S. Open last year at Congressional and a record margin at the PGA Championship last month at Kiawah Island.

His four wins this year are the most of anyone in the world, all against the strongest fields.

So it was no surprise when Jim Furyk referred to Boy Wonder as the “present day Tiger Woods” and a “marked man” at this Ryder Cup. That’s the role Woods played for so many years in these matches when he dominated golf. There was a feeling among Europeans that beating Woods was worth more than one point because of the emotional lift it gave the rest of the team.

McIlroy doesn’t see it that way.

“This week I’m not the No. 1 player in the world,” he said Wednesday. “I’m one person in a 12-man team, and that’s it. It’s a team effort. There’s 12 guys all striving toward the same goal. I’m just part of that.”

But even in this team competition, it’s easy to get wrapped in a single star, as it was for Woods.

There’s only one way to keep score in the Ryder Cup, though it’s tempting to make individuals accountable. Even when Woods was at his best, he still could only deliver a maximum of five points if he played every match. He never came close, and didn’t even produce a winning record until his fifth Ryder Cup.

“I don’t have a number. I don’t have a total,” McIlroy said. “I think with the U.S. playing here at home, I think they are the favorites. It’s a very strong team. So we know we have got to go out there and play very, very well to have a chance. So if I play on Friday morning, I just want to get my point and then take it from there.”

Wednesday brought the Ryder Cup one day closer to the start of matches that are growing in anticipation. Both teams look strong on paper, with all 24 players among the top 35 in the world. The Americans are loaded with experience behind Woods, Furyk and Phil Mickelson. Europe has only one Ryder Cup rookie, Nicolas Colsaerts, and has the experience when it comes to winning. It has captured the cup six of the last eight times.

And while captains Davis Love III and Jose Maria Olazabal have preached civility and respect throughout the week, leave it to Ian Poulter to set the record straight on how the intensity can change when the first tee shot is struck Friday morning.

“It’s not that we don’t like each other,” the Englishman said. “We are all good friends, both sides of the pond. But there’s something about Ryder Cup which kind of intrigues me, how you can be great mates with somebody, but boy, do you want to kill them in Ryder Cup.”

Poulter is not alone. Among the four American rookies is Brandt Snedeker, coming off an $11.44 million payday for winning the Tour Championship and the FedEx Cup.

“I’m very, very competitive,” Snedeker said. “People don’t get that, because I’m polite. But I tee it up on Friday here — tee it up against anybody — I’m going to try to beat their brains in as bad as I can.”

Love brought the first dose of tears to Medinah when talking about the time spent Tuesday night at a team dinner, when he showed a video of past captains and spoke of the camaraderie in the team room. Then, he dressed his team in bright red pants for a practice session of foursomes, keeping together the same partnerships he had the previous day. Olazabal mixed up his team ever so slightly, with Luke Donald and Sergio Garcia together. They are 4-0 in foursomes.

Both teams played only nine holes, trying to conserve energy for the most dynamic three days in golf. Even for such a short practice sessions, fans poured into Medinah and set a tone for the noise level, chanting, “USA! USA!” just for players leaving the practice range.

McIlroy, for all his ability, is so unfailingly polite and respectful that everyone likes him. Woods calls him “such a great kid.” The gallery adores him. Perhaps for the first time in his career, he might not get a lot of love from the other side of the ropes.

“I expect it to be loud. I expect them to cheer for them,” McIlroy said. “Hopefully, I won’t get heckled, but if I do, then you’ve just got to stay calm and be focused on the golf and just get on with it.”

He could not think of a time when he has heard it from a heckler.

“But just because of my hair,” McIlroy said, touching his curly brown locks. “Nothing too insulting.”

As for the notion that he has the biggest target on the back of his European uniform? McIlroy says that’s nothing more than a compliment. Love doesn’t buy into the idea that beating McIlroy is any better than beating a team that features Francesco Molinari or Martin Kaymer. The captain has wondered if a loss by any of his top players would be a boost for Europe, “but I hadn’t really looked at it from their side.”

“I don’t know if that’s worth scratching my head over,” Love said. “I didn’t go to bed until 2:30 already thinking about my team. If I had to think about their team, I wouldn’t get any sleep, because they’re as strong as we are.”

Steve Stricker sees it differently.

He has become Woods’ favorite partner over the last three years. They went undefeated in the Presidents Cup at Harding Park in 2009, and were 2-1 as a partnership at Wales in the last Ryder Cup. Stricker has noticed an increase in emotion when playing against Woods, and he believes it will be the same way for McIlroy.

“When Tiger was at the top of his game and No. 1 in the world for all those weeks, he was a marked man,” Stricker said. “Rory is the guy that’s playing the best golf in the world right now, and I agree that he’s a guy we all want to beat. ... Whoever it may be, the No. 1 player in the world, playing the best golf in the world, we’re going to want to beat that player no matter who it is. And it so happens to be Rory.”

Paris Museum Erects Statue of Head-butting Zidane

ASSOCIATED PRESS

PARIS • The historic head-butt that marked the end of France great Zinedine Zidane’s international soccer career is immortalized in bronze.

A 16-foot statue portraying Zidane aiming his shaven head at Italian opponent Marco Materazzi’s torso has been erected in front of Paris’ Centre Pompidou modern art museum.

Zidane played for Real

Madrid and other professional teams and helped France to victory at the 1998 World Cup. But in the 110th minute of a riveting World Cup final in 2006 against Italy, Zidane lowered his head and rammed Materazzi’s chest, knocking him to the ground.

Zidane, who planned to retire after the World Cup, later apologized and said he was responding to repeated insults from Materazzi.

NFL, REFEREES END IMPASSE

ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK • The NFL and the referees’ union have reached a tentative contract agreement, ending an impasse that began in June when the league locked out the officials and used replacements instead.

The NFL said it planned to have regular refs work tonight’s Cleveland-Baltimore game.

With Commissioner Roger Goodell at the table, the sides concluded two days of talks at 10 p.m. MDT with the announcement of a tentative 8-year deal, which must be ratified by the union’s 121 members.

NFL spokesman Greg Aiello tweeted “Pleased to report that an agreement has been reached with the NFL Referees Association. Details to follow.”

The replacements worked the first three weeks of games, triggering a wave of frustration that threatened to disrupt the rest of the season. After a missed call cost the Green Bay Packers a win on a chaotic final play at Seattle on Monday night, the two sides really got serious.

It was not certain who would work this week’s games, but ESPN reported regular refs will work tonight with Baltimore hosting Cleveland.

The union was seeking improved salaries, retirement benefits and other logistical issues for the part-time officials. The NFL has proposed a pension freeze and a higher 401(k) match, and it wants to hire 21 more officials to improve the quality of officiating. The union has fought that, fearing it could lead to a loss of jobs for some of the current officials, as well as a reduction in overall compensation.

The NFL claimed its offers have included annual pay increases that could earn an experienced official more than $200,000 annually by 2018. The NFLRA has disputed the value of the proposal, insisting it means an overall reduction in compensation.

Replacement refs aren’t new to the NFL. They worked the first week of games in 2001 before a deal was reached. But those officials came from the highest level of college football; the current replacements do not. Their ability to call fast-moving NFL games drew mounting criticism through Week 3, climaxing last weekend, when ESPN analyst Jon Gruden called their work “tragic and comical.”

Those comments came during “Monday Night Football,” with Seattle beating Green Bay 14-12 on a desperation pass into the end zone on the final play. Packers safety M.D. Jennings had both hands on the ball in the end zone, and when he fell to the ground in a scrum, both Jennings and Seahawks receiver Golden Tate had their arms on the ball.

The closest official to the play, at the back of the end zone, signaled for the clock to stop, while another official at the sideline ran in and then signaled touchdown.

The NFL said in a statement Tuesday that the touchdown pass should not have been overturned — but acknowledged Tate should have been called for offensive pass interference before the catch. The league also said there was no indisputable evidence to reverse the call made on the field.

Ravens Must Avoid Letdown Vs. Browns

ASSOCIATED PRESS

Championship teams avoid letdowns after big wins.

The Baltimore Ravens know that, and they’re coming off one of their most significant regular-season victories, that entertaining and dramatic squeaker against New England.

Normally, the Browns wouldn’t be much of a test for the Ravens. The vitriol in this rivalry belongs to the folks in Cleveland who still consider the original Browns’ move to the Inner Harbor in 1996 a betrayal. Not much hatred comes from the other side, in great part because the Browns have been a weak opponent for most of their 13 years back in the NFL.

Indeed, the Ravens (2-1) are ranked third in the AP Pro32 power rankings, while the Browns are all the way down at the bottom with an 0-3 record.

Baltimore is favored by 12 points, but remember this game Thursday night comes on the heels of that oh-so-satisfying win over the Patriots, who survived against the Ravens in the AFC title game last January. Coach John Harbaugh’s team better make sure it is looking ahead, not behind.

“We have to let this one go right now. We have to move on,” cornerback Lardarius Webb said.

“It’s going to be tough, and we knew that,” star linebacker Ray Lewis said. “So we’re going to have to get healthy and get healthy real quick. Cleveland doesn’t care how we feel.”

All the Browns care about is getting a win, but the Ravens swept the AFC North last year and have won eight straight against Cleveland. On a short week, the experienced team usually has an edge, as the Giants proved last Thursday at Carolina.

Go with the better, more seasoned teams at home.

West Virginia Gears Up for Big 12 Scoring Spree

ASSOCIATED PRESS

West Virginia is ready to start anewera, with what is primed to be a classic Big 12 scoring spree, and Urban Meyer will coach a Big Ten game for Ohio State for the first time.

Florida State, meanwhile, is on letdown alert.

The ninth-ranked Mountaineers host one of the two games this weekend matching ranked teams. No. 25 Baylor comes to Morgantown, W.Va., for West Virginia’s first Big 12 game.

The Mountaineers fled the Big East last year, paying the conference $20 million for an early release so they could play in the Big 12 this year.

The timing was excellent because West Virginia (3-0) brings a team capable of contending for a Big 12 title into its new neighborhood.

Heisman Trophy contender Geno Smith is piling up huge passing stats (1,072 yards and 12 touchdowns) and leading an offense that is averaging 47 points — or four less points than what Baylor (3-0) is averaging.

Nick Florence has proved to be a more-than-capable replacement for Heisman winner Robert Griffin III. He has passed for 1,004 yards and 11 touchdowns.

The other ranked matchup is unlikely to be as much fun.

No. 14 Ohio State visits No. 20 Michigan State as the Big Ten begins conference play after a rather uninspiring four weeks of nonconference games.

Meyer’s first Buckeyes team is saddled with NCAA sanctions, so it can’t go to a bowl game or play for the Big Ten championship. But Ohio State could still end up being the best team in the conference.

“I think by the end of the year this might be a hell of a football team,” Meyer said. “I mean, it might be sooner than that.”

To be that, Ohio State needs to work on its defense. The Buckeyes are last in the conference, allowing 395 yards per game. Ohio State features two of the best defensive linemen in the country in Johnathan Hankins and John Simon. Tying up blockers isn’t the problem. Wrapping up ball carriers has been.

That could be an issue when facing Le’Veon Bell, the Spartans’ 245-pound tailback who is third in the nation in rushing at 152 yards per game.

Michigan State can win the Big 12 title, but will need to fix an offense that has struggled to find a complement for Bell in the passing game.

All of the top six teams in the nation are big favorites this week, but it might be worth keeping an eye on No. 4 Florida State. The Seminoles are on the road for the first time this season, facing South Florida in a nonconference game.

Coming off last week’s 49-37 victory against Clemson, Florida State has to avoid a letdown against a Bulls team that has talent but is hard to figure. USF lost at Ball State last week. One thing is for sure, the Bulls can make their season by beating Florida State.

Source: Pac-12, Big 12 Could Face Best of Rest

ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK • A tentative plan for the new college football postseason calls for a Pac-12 or Big 12 team to face the best team from a group of five conferences, including the Big East.

A person with direct knowledge of the plan for the four-team playoff in 2014 told The Associated Press that either a Pac-12 or a Big 12 team likely will be the opponent for the top-rated champion from the Big East, Mountain West, Conference USA, Sun Belt and Mid-American Conference.

The person spoke on condition of anonymity Wednesday because the conferences did not want to make the plan public.

The proposal has the Pac-12 sending either its champion or a replacement team to the game in years when the Rose Bowl hosts a national semifinal. In years the Rose Bowl is a traditional Big Ten-Pac-12 matchup, the Big 12 would send one of its top teams to the game.

The deal with the Big 12 and Pac-12 would be similar to the one the Orange Bowl is working on with the Big Ten and the Southeastern Conference. That deal, which has not been completed, would match a team from either of those conferences or Notre Dame against the Atlantic Coast Conference champ or another ACC team.

The original playoff plan had the national semifinals rotating among six bowl sites, giving the new system two playoff games and four other high-revenue bowl games each season. The top four teams determined by a selection committee, regardless of conference affiliation, will play in the semifinals. The winners meet in a championship game about a week later.

The spots in those other four games would be for other highly ranked teams, but those slots have quickly started filling up as the major conferences began making deals.

The Rose Bowl, as has been tradition, will always match the Pac-12 and Big Ten when it does not host a semifinal. The new marquee bowl being created by the Big 12 and the SEC — site to be determined — will be also part of the system, so those two spots are filled. The Orange Bowl’s deals took two more spots out of play.

That led to concerns about limited access to the high-revenue games for the other five conferences.

The rebuilding Big East, which currently has automatic-qualifying status to the Bowl Championship Series, has been trying to gain a more secure spot in the new postseason system.

The person with direct knowledge of the plan said new Big East Commissioner Mike Aresco spearheaded the push for the addition of a seventh game to be added to the system, and presented a plan for the highest-rated champion from the other five conferences to be assured a spot in the game.

Sun Belt Commissioner Karl Benson told the AP last week there was enough support for a seventh game among the commissioners to make it happen.

The Big East is being transformed into a 12-team football conference next season that will include Boise State and San Diego State, along with Memphis, Central Florida, SMU and Houston. While the conference has lost its status as one of the BCS power-brokers, it’s still well-positioned to be the best of the other conferences and to grab that guaranteed slot if it does not have its best team selected to play in the national semifinals.

Allowing the Pac-12 and Big 12 to share the spot opposite the best of the rest in a bowl would give the game stability and likely increase the value of its television rights, as compared to having the opponent be left undetermined.

The site of the game is still being discussed, but Glendale, Ariz., site of the Fiesta Bowl, or Houston would make geographical sense and are prime candidates, the person said.

Today is Thursday, Sept. 27, the 271st day of 2012.
There are 95 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight:

On Sept. 27, 1962, “Silent Spring,” Rachel Carson’s groundbreaking as well as controversial study on the effects of pesticides on the environment, was published in book form by Houghton Mifflin.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:

In 1540, Pope Paul III issued a papal bull establishing the Society of Jesus, or Jesuits, as a religious order.

In 1779, John Adams was named by Congress to negotiate the Revolutionary War’s peace terms with Britain.

In 1854, the first great disaster involving an Atlantic Ocean passenger vessel occurred when the steamship SS Arctic sank off Newfoundland; of the more than 400 people on board, only 86 survived.

In 1862, during the Civil War, the Union Army’s first all-black regiment, the self-described “Chasseurs d’Afrique” (Hunters of Africa), was formed in New Orleans (which was then under Northern control).

In 1928, the United States said it was recognizing the Nationalist Chinese government.

In 1939, Warsaw, Poland, surrendered after weeks of resistance to invading forces from Nazi Germany and the Soviet Union during World War II.

In 1941, the United States launched 14 rapidly built “Liberty” military cargo vessels.

In 1942, Glenn Miller and his Orchestra performed together for the last time, at the Central Theater in Passaic, N.J., prior to Miller’s entry into the Army.

In 1954, “Tonight!,” hosted by Steve Allen, made its debut on NBC-TV.

In 1964, the government publicly released the report of the Warren Commission, which found that Lee Harvey Oswald had acted alone in assassinating President John F. Kennedy.

In 1979, Congress gave its final approval to forming the U.S. Department of Education.

In 1994, more than 350 Republican congressional candidates gathered on the steps of the U.S. Capitol to sign the “Contract with America,” a 10-point platform they pledged to enact if voters sent a GOP majority to the House.

Ten years ago: President George W. Bush said the United Nations should have a chance to force Saddam Hussein to give up his weapons of mass destruction before the United States acted on its own against Iraq, but told a Republican fundraising event in Denver that action had to come quickly.

Five years ago: Soldiers fired into crowds of anti-government demonstrators in Yangon, Myanmar; Kenji Nagai, 50, a video journalist for Japan’s APF News, was shot and killed. President George W. Bush promised to take steps to reduce air traffic congestion and long delays that were leaving travelers grounded.

One year ago: Opening statements in the Los Angeles trial of Michael Jackson’s personal physician, Dr. Conrad Murray, took place as prosecutors accused Murray of killing the superstar through irresponsible use of the anesthetic propofol, and the defense maintaining Jackson had caused his own death. (Murray was later convicted of felony involuntary manslaughter.) Israel gave the go-ahead for construction of 1,100 new Jewish housing units in east Jerusalem; the announcement met with swift criticism from the United States and the European Union.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

“You mean you can’t take less,”
said the Hatter. ‘It’s very easy to take more than nothing.’”

— Lewis Carroll

Timing the play to take advantage of all possibilities can be very difficult. Today’s deal defeated one of the best declarers in the country (who shall remain nameless).

Against four spades West led the diamond ace and king, then switched to the club four. Declarer won in the dummy and took a spade finesse. When that was wrong and clubs failed to break 3-3, he had to go one down.

Can you see how he could have done better?

Since he needed one of the major-suit finesses for certain, he should have won the club in hand and run the heart queen. In practice, West would have covered with the king (it doesn’t help him to duck), and declarer wins with dummy’s ace. Only now does declarer play a spade to the queen. West wins and no doubt continues with another club. Declarer wins in dummy, draws trump, then cashes the heart jack and crosses to the club king. If clubs are 3-3, he has no more losers. He can ruff a heart, cash his long club, and ruff a diamond with dummy’s last trump.

However, when clubs fail to break, he can take a ruffing heart finesse. The king and 10 have gone, and East just has the nine poised over dummy’s eight-seven. This finesse is certain to succeed because declarer knows that West started with two spades, four clubs, five diamonds (for his overcall) and therefore only two hearts, both of which have been played.

ANSWER: On this auction you would like to take a shot at three no-trump if partner has a spade guard. The way to find out after the opponents have bid two suits is to tell rather than ask. A bid of three clubs here shows the club guard and asks partner to bid three no-trump with a spade guard.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I just got some shocking news. His father — age 81 — is leaving his wife of 60 years! Mom is not entirely self-sufficient and seems dependent on him.

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

Dad found himself a younger woman — a “chick” of 70. He has announced that he still has sexual needs and wants to enjoy the rest of his life. My husband thinks it will be a short-term fling and he’ll return to Mom, but she says she won’t be taking him back. (Who knows how she’ll feel later?)

My problem is, no matter what happens between them, I’m having a hard time even considering forgiving him for his selfishness. I know it’s not my place as his daughter-in-law, but I don’t know how I can bring myself to face him feeling as I do. Any words of wisdom?

— JUDGMENTAL JUDY IN ARIZONA
DEAR JUDGMENTAL JUDY: I do have a few. If your mother-in-law hasn’t already done so, make sure she gets the best legal advice possible. After 60 years of marriage, there should be plenty of assets to split. They will make her financially independent, and from that, emotional independence will follow. Do not count her out as a weak sister just yet because she appears to be stronger than you think.

While it’s possible your father-in-law may want to reunite after the fling, it is equally possible that when the “chick” sees his nest egg is cracked in half, he will be less appealing to her. Only time will tell. In the meantime, keep the peace, bide your time, and as tempting as it may be to voice everything that’s on your mind, keep your lip zipped. This isn’t your marriage, so don’t stir the pot.

DEAR ABBY: I have been married to “Tom,” the love of my life, for four years. We have been together more than 10 years and have a 2-year-old daughter.

Tom was diagnosed with a terminal illness early last year and is close to the end now. He’s very angry, which I understand, but he takes it out on me since I am his caregiver. I’m also a full-time student about to graduate with my degree in registered nursing, so I’m busy all the time.

Between school, my daughter and giving full care to my husband, I’m stressed out. He yells a lot about everything, from money woes to the wrong bread on his sandwich. To top it off, we haven’t been intimate since our daughter was born.

I’m not considering straying from our marriage, but at times I feel I’ll be ready to date as soon as he’s gone. It makes me feel guilty. Is it wrong to feel this way? Do you have any advice to help me through this tragic time in our lives?

— DEPRESSED AND LONELY IN MICHIGAN
DEAR DEPRESSED: Yes. Stop beating yourself up for experiencing human emotions at a time when you’re hauling a load that would crush an ox. Of COURSE your husband is angry. He has good reason to be — but he’s misdirecting it on you.

Guilt is the last thing you need to add to what you’re dealing with. It’s normal to crave the closeness you haven’t experienced in two years.

If there are counseling services offered at your nursing school, please avail yourself of them. Venting your feelings in a supportive environment will lighten your load and help you cope with your husband. There are also online support groups for caregivers. If you reach out in either direction, you’ll feel better. It could also be helpful to ask your husband’s doctor for a referral to someone who does end-of-life counseling for him.

IF SEPTEMBER 27 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Between now and Christmas your undiscriminating charm can attract new friends from varied walks of life. Avoid making irrevocable changes,
however, as your impulsive side could overcome common sense. You can ride high on a tide of excitement and quickly changing scenarios, but must concentrate on getting ahead in December and January. What is most important in your life may undergo a shift in April as you can make smarter business or career decisions and attract people who are willing to make commitments.
Next spring, you may be blessed by a relationship that lives long and prospers.

HOROSCOPE
Jeraldine
Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Pull out your pocket watch. You might feel like the White Rabbit who was late for a very important date. It could seem as though social interactions interfere with your work or that work involves many contacts.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Trash can become treasure. Your resourcefulness is admirable but sometimes even your best efforts at recycling won't bear fruit.
If you can't change the world around you then change
your expectations.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): The definition of an upgrade might be to take old bugs out and put new ones
in. It can be extremely tempting to try out the latest and greatest, but you might add extra complications.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Changing your horse midstream leaves you all wet. Allegiances as well as policies may shift under these stars, but could return to normal in a few days. Stick to the tried and true for the best results.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22):
There is only one first place in every race. If everyone is in a rush to become top dog, someone can end up in the doghouse. A tendency to be overly competitive may put other people on the defensive.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept.
22): Get a grip. You lose traction when preoccupied with comparing your performance to others or weighing what you have against what you don't. Avoid spending if dollars burn a hole in your pocket.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22):
Maintaining high standards of behavior earns respect.
Tensions can begin to gain
attention so you must do your best to remain on friendly terms with others.
This is not a good time to burn bridges.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov.
21): So many fresh faces, so little time. In your enthusiasm to embrace every opportunity to meet new people you can act like the friendliest Pac-Man of your circle and gobble up every new contact.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-
Dec. 21): Seeing is believing.
Don't be led astray by wishful thinking or alluring exteriors. Appearances can be deceiving right now, so wait for a few days before finalizing agreements or making your move.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You may be more comfortable acting independently when other people insist on your undivided attention and assistance.
Give challenging situations
time to simmer down before offering peace tokens.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb.
18): In the land of the blind,
the one-eyed man is king.
You might be blind to the facts and jump headfirst into a new investment or romance. Steer clear of signing paperwork or contracts right now.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): When love is the subject, you are ready to second that emotion. On the down side, you might be in too much of a rush to own the latest technology and watch hard-earned money slip through your fingers.
