Historical Documents Destroyed by Insects

BY KIMBERLEE KRUESI kkruesi@magicvalley.com

SHOSHONE • Bookworms in Lincoln County have nothing to do with reading.

They devour public documents without ever filing a records request to the county clerk's office. They sneak into the county's records vault without ever having to crack a lock.

They're small. They're nefarious. They're insects.

According to Lincoln County officials, some of the county's older records have been destroyed by insects.

The county discovered the damage while working on an effort to digitize its older, paper records, said Suzanne McConnell, Lincoln County clerk.

Lincoln County keeps its older records in a vault below the county courthouse. While digging through the documents, volunteers discovered two books of court judgments, at least one from the 1930s, where it looked liked bugs tunneled through the pages.

"This isn't a good place for the records to be kept," Mc-Connell said. "We need to get them out of there."

At least two books are permanently destroyed but volunteers are still in the middle of digitizing the rest of the records, which include judgments, birth certificates, marriage licenses, land deeds and permits from the early days of Lincoln County. The process could take four to six weeks, McConnell said.

"All the other records we've opened up are in good shape,"

McConnell said. "We're going to fog the area so that no future damage will happen."

Natural Gas Rates Drop for Sixth Time

TIMES-NEWS

BOISE • Use natural gas for your home? Your monthly bill could Customers of Intermountain Gas received a rate decrease Monday that, combined with a onetime bill credit in December, means a 7.1 percent average drop in price.

It's the sixth consecutive rate decrease the Idaho Public Utilities Commission approved for the utility, according to a PUC press release. The change reflects a continued decline in the price of gas due to an increased supply.

The December bill credit is timed to offer "more immediate rate relief" at a time of year when natural gas usage is usually highest, the PUC release states.

Other factors in the rate change include income related to pipeline capacity and a $1.3 million deferred credit balance.

Average residential customers who use natural gas for both space and water heating will see their bills decrease by about $1.51 per month and will receive a one-time credit of about $29.85. Customers who rely on gas only for space heating will pay about 17 cents less per month and get a one-time credit of about $19.40. Commercial customers' bills will decline by about $6.46 per month, and they will receive a one-time credit of about $129.80.

Stocks Waver on Spain Report, Mosaic Miss

NEW YORK (AP) • Mixed signals on the world economy tugged on major stock indexes Tuesday.

The country's largest fertilizer company, Mosaic, said weak demand from China and India have hurt its profits. Mosaic, Dupont and stocks of other companies in the materials industry fell.

But utilities and health care stocks, where investors often retreat in a slow-growing economy, helped pull the Standard & Poor's 500 index above the break-even mark.

The S&P 500 index gained 1.26 to close at 1,445.75.

Payday Loan Robbery Suspect Identified

BY ALISON GENE SMITH alismith@magicvalley.com

Police say Ricardo Meraz-Terriquez, 21, of Jerome, is the man who allegedly robbed a payday loan store this weekend.

Police arrested Meraz-Terriquez on Saturday after a creative alert from staff: According to court records, the cashier at the store wrote "911" on her hand and showed it to a customer while the store was being robbed Saturday morning. The customer, who had a child with her, then called 911 from her cellphone.

Police responded to the EZ $\,$ Money Payday Loans at 607 Blue Lakes Blvd. N. in Twin Falls at about 9:50 a.m. after they got the call.

Officers interviewed the employee, who said the store was just robbed by a man who left on foot, a police report states.

The employee told police the man walked around the counter, pointed a black gun at her and said "money," the report states. While the employee was opening the safe, the customer with the child entered the store. According to the report, the cashier attempted to act normal and began to help the customer. She then used a pen to write "911" on the palm of her hand and showed it to the customer, the report states.

The customer then dialed 911 from her cellphone and hung up. When a dispatcher called the phone back, the customer excused herself from the store to answer the phone, the report states.

According to the report, Meraz-Terriquez left the store with about $3,400. When the employee took the money out, she also activated the panic alarm in the store.

While responding to the call, officers spotted a man matching Meraz-Terriquez's description walking down Blue Lakes. Officers detained the man, patted him down for weapons and found a black handgun in his front pocket, the report states.

According to the report, the gun was actually a BB gun.

Officers found the missing cash in his other front pocket, the report states.

Meraz-Terriquez was arrested and transported to the Twin Falls Police Department. During an interview there, he allegedly admitted to robbing EZ Money Payday Loans. The cashier from the store arrived at the police station and identified Meraz-Terriquez, the report Meraz-Terriquez was arraigned Monday on a charge of robbery and is being held at the Twin Falls County Jail on $50,000 bond. A preliminary hearing is scheduled for Oct. 12.

New Citizen's Firefighting Association Forms

I spent quite a few hours this past week talking with ranchers and officials about policies that prevent citizens from helping with fire suppression on public lands. Both sides of the issue have strong points. Many ranchers feel angry and frustrated by the policies that bar them from putting in any type of firebreaks on public land adjacent to their ranches or to protect their grazing allotments. The policies were put in place because citizens are not properly trained to fight the dangerous fires and don't have proper fire or communications equipment. That creates a liability for the agency and ultimately for all of us. A new citizen's firefighting association has been formed in Mountain Home, spurred by ranchers fed up with the policies, which could provide a solution for others in southern Idaho. Check out the story in this Sunday's edition of the Times-News.

Work Ethic Also Includes Showing Up

I met Kate Woods recently while researching a story on how job-seekers go about finding work. She is the Career and Counseling Services coordinator at the College of Southern Idaho, and has definite ideas about how people can get - and keep · jobs in a tough economy. She said some local employers complain that they can't find applicants who have what Woods calls "soft skills," including showing up on time and exhibiting a strong work ethic.

board of job openings confirmed that very issue. Among the listings was one from a Twin Falls-area construction company seeking 10 workers for temporary labor. The ad said they would pay $10 an hour. The reason for all those openings? Ten former employees of the firm had been fired for not coming to work. In an economic climate like ours, it's surprising that people would treat a job so cavalier. But the advertisement was proof that Woods' comment about the soft skills was accurate. Steve Kadel

intrigued by small-town restaurants attached or near gas stations, especially if they are close to a major high-

While sitting in the dining room, one of the the quirky things I noticed about Farmhouse was every table had two funny books to read that were also available to purchase in the restaurant's store. At my table was "So you think you can 'Geezer'" and "Men Exposed." Though I didn't have time to read through them, I took a mental note of something I would like to come back and try. I plan to return and order the Basque French Toast while reading whatever book I have at my table.

Hearing Delayed for Man Accused of Writing Bad Checks

TIMES-NEWS

TWIN FALLS • A man with five separate cases against him in Twin Falls County for allegedly writing thousands of dollars in bad checks asked for his preliminary hearing to be delayed Monday.

Dameniel Preston Owens, 31, was arrested on Aug. 27 after he allegedly visited several Twin Falls stores in May and June, writing checks from closed or empty bank accounts for car detailing and tuition at the College of Southern Idaho, among other things.

Owens also has a similar case in Ada County, where he was charged with theft by unauthorized control or transfer of property with intent of depriving the owner.

Community Remembers Life of Twin Falls Journalist, Volunteer

BY JULIE WOOTTON jwootton@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • When Lorayne Smith arrived in Twin Falls in 1945, it was to an unfamiliar community.

But for the young woman in her 20s, that didn't last long.

"The town just kind of became her home," said state representative and former Times-News publisher Steve Hartgen.

Smith - a former Times-News reporter and editor, and active community volunteer - died Sunday at age funeral service is planned for 11 a.m. Friday at Parke's Magic Valley Funeral Home in Twin Falls.

Throughout the decades, Smith served on numerous community boards. She was an active member of Twin Falls First United Methodist Church and served in many capacities.

Duke and OraLee Wiseman knew Smith for decades through the church.

"We found her to be a really true friend," Duke said.

OraLee said Smith was a good businesswoman and "really good mother" who was smart and inquisitive.

"Lorayne was really ahead of her time," she said.

In addition to her career and community involvements, Smith was named the Idaho Mother of the Year in 1992 by American Mothers, Inc.

Duke said Smith served wherever she was needed, including on many committees at Twin Falls' Methodist Church.

He described her as honest, straightforward and someone who "never concealed her thoughts."

"I thought that was one of her strong points," he said.

Smith lived out her faith in all aspects of her life, Duke said, and gave her time freely for good causes.

Smith filled a number of roles at the Times-News over the years — a Magic Valley or regional editor for 12 years, a North Side beat reporter in the mid-1970s, a lifestyle editor and features reporter.

She retired in 1989 after 31 years in the newsroom.

Hartgen said Smith was a wonderful writer who loved talking with and listening to community members.

Slifer, who is still involved with the group, said Smith was "very sharp" and informed about current events and what was going on in the community.

"She was a role model for me in that way," Slifer said.

Carol Robertson worked with Smith on the Magic Valley Habitat for Humanity board for more than a decade.

"She was unlike anyone her age I had met before," Robertson wrote in an email to the Times-News. "She was old enough to be my mother but was out there on committees and boards, playing in the symphony and volunteering for the city."

Roberston said Smith was a "no-nonsense woman" and had great skills to keep boards on track, as well as juggling all her volunteer commitments.

Smith was also one of the founding members of the Magic Valley Symphony in 1959. She played viola in the ensemble until 2002.

SIRCOMM to Upgrade 911 System

BY ALISON GENE SMITH

JEROME • A grant from the Idaho Emergency Communications Commission will help pay for a new radio console system and an upgrade to the 911 telephone system for the dispatch center that covers four Magic Valley counties.

John Moore, director of the Southern Idaho Regional Communications Center, said he applied for the grant in August and received notification that SIRCOMM was chosen to receive funds last week.

The dispatch center handles communications for law enforcement, fire and emergency medical agencies in Gooding, Jerome, Lincoln and Twin Falls counties - all except for the city of Twin Falls.

The upgrades will replace an aging system for alerting first responders built by a company that's been defunct for a decade, Moore said. New technology could also improve response times by pinpointing the locations of cellphone calls. Some grant money will also pay for new servers to store information and new computer work stations for 911 dispatchers.

The state grant totals $387,501.07, but updating the 911 system and replacing the radio console system will cost a total of $511,116.81.

Moore said the additional money to fund the projects comes from money saved by SIRCOMM and its governing Joint Powers Board over the past few years.

SIRCOMM and the board have been frugal in the last few years, Moore said. The goal was to build a cushion of cash in case the whole system needed to be replaced.

Moore said he and the state commission asked for an audit of the 911 phone system from current vendors, CenturyLink and Intrado, to see if it was more economical to replace the whole system or just upgrade it.

The current 911 system separate from the alert system was purchased in 2007. Upgrading its hardware will allow SIRCOMM to eventually update its software and accomodate new forms of communication, Moore said.

"As technology changes it's hard to keep up," Moore said. "But as a 911 call center we've got to."

The state grant money comes from fees on phone bills. On each bill there is a $1.25 fee. SIRCOMM keeps $1 for operation expenses and upkeep, Moore said. The rest is sent to the state commission and saved up for the grants, which go to different 911 call centers every year based on need.

The improvements are expected to be completed by spring 2013.

How Does Romney's 47 Percent Analysis Represent 'Misguided Ideas'

Regarding the Sept. 22 Times-News editorial, Bloomberg View:

"Poverty statistics can be used to prove almost anything" is a true statement as proven by the paradox posed in the editorial in the Times-News. The authors of this perplexing piece claim that persons who are using food stamps, free school lunches, housing aid and Medicaid and are recipients of the Earned Income Tax Credit issued to those classified as "low-income breadwinners" do not represent those who are classified as living in poverty.

As a teacher for many years and the mother of five children, I could have many times passed for a "lowincome breadwinner" but chose to leave the aid given to such persons to those who really needed help. And there are many worthy persons who live in poverty not by their own choice. They deserve the help which will give them a foot up. And yet, I have seen persons checking out copious amounts of groceries purchased by their food stamps, who then load their purchases in new high-profile automobiles (which they have probably purchased from the no credit-checks dealers who sell cars to these people). I guess this exempts them from the classification of poverty?

I do believe that these were indeed the people to whom Mitt Romney referred in his "quip" about 47 percent voters, as described by the editorial. I prefer to substitute the word "quip" with "statement," as given by a person who is quite conversant with the economy. Please explain to me how Romney's analysis represents "misguided ideas."

Vote Nationally, Locally for the Democratic Party

My mother was a strong woman. She believed in women's rights and American dreams. My greatgrandfather came to America as famine ravished Ireland. He was just a boy. He spoke with a brogue; an outsider, but the Collins persevered. We lived on the wrong side of the tracks with other hard-working folks. We were not victims. I continued my mother's dream of going to college and have lived the American dream in many ways. My elderly mother suffered from dementia, resorting to Medicare after long-term care took all her savings. She was not a victim. She had high hopes for

I saw this hope in the eyes of my students, many in poverty and many so-called dreamers. I see hope in the faces of those with chronic health issues that I work with now. They are not victims. Community outreach and social programs are safety nets that help people. Helping people is what we are called to do as people of faith. One recent study reveals that women are driven by bonding with others, not fear. Some use fear and movies full of lies to get your vote. But here in Twin Falls, smart candidates like Rosemary Fornshell and Pat Marcantonio bring much needed women and Latina wisdom to our Legislature. Thank the Environmentalists for All the Smoke

For those of you who are sick of all the smoke, you can thank the environmentalists, college professors, tree huggers and, most of all, the USFFS. Who is the USFFS, you ask? The United States Forest Fire Service.

Thanks to all these highly educated, well-meaning (maybe) and professional people our forests are burning up and will continue to do so until they or someone else realizes that our public lands must be used, opened up and managed by persons who understand the concept of multiple use.

Multiple use does not mean multiple abuse. It means the use, care and preservation of our natural resources. Logging, mining, grazing, hiking, camping, hunting, fishing, bird watching, predator control are all tools that must be used.

As the old saying goes, "Use it or lose it!" Well, we are losing our public lands, resources and the use of them. The United States Forest Service has done gross disservice to the lands and resources for many, many decades.

According to my father, who logged for years in the Sierra Nevada Mountains, the first college educated forestry personnel were called "Piss Fir Willies" because they were taught in college and believed that white fir was the best tree to replant in logged and fire-burned timber areas. The loggers and timber companies tried to tell them that you replant with the species that were there naturally. Millions of acres of those now dead firs are burning. Back then when a fire broke out everyone fought it - loggers, farmers, ranchers, students, teachers and whoever had a shovel. Why, because they all had an interest in and a desire to protect our forests. Today, no one but trained fire personnel approved by the USFFS can fight fires.

Oops, did I say fight fires? The USFFS does not fight fires, they "manage" fires! Well, they are "managing" to burn our forests down and don't need any help from anyone because they are the professionals.

On Sept. 22, I participated in a wonderful fundraising activity, CROP

CROP Walk is a multi-denominational effort between different churches in the Magic Valley. Each year, members of the various congregations solicit pledges and walk to raise money to fight hunger at both a local level and across the globe. A portion of the money raised was donated to Safe Harbor, an organization that feeds the hungry in Twin Falls on weekends when no other meal programs operate. I was so impressed.

The CROP Walk route included the canyon rim walking paths. Our journey started at Elevation 486, went to the visitor center and then looped back to our point of origin. The scenery was gorgeous. I recently moved back to town and must admit I sometimes forget how amazing our surroundings are. The company was great, too. It was fun to see such a varied array of individuals walking for such a good cause.

Another high point was the generosity of Elevation 486. It was kind enough to set up registration tables complete with fruit and juice for all of the participants. In addition, it gave the people who participated in CROP Walk a 50 percent discount on lunch. My meal and the service were excellent.

Overall, my morning was perfect. I felt proud to be part of such a great cause. I gained a renewed appreciation for the canyon rim. The other individuals in the CROP Walk were so friendly and kind-spirited. And I discovered a terrific locally owned restaurant that legitimately cares about its community. I plan to put CROP Walk on my calendar every year.

Do Not Let Religious Fanatics Gain Power in This Country

My fellow Americans, whether you are Republican, Democrat, Independent or any other party, whether you are Christian, Muslim, Jew, Mormon, Hindu or any other religion, do not allow fanatics from any religion to gain power in this great country or ours.

The freedom we enjoy did not come easy or free. And do not give it easy to these religious fanatics. The religious issue should be between the person and their god. They should not force others to do what these religious fanatics want to or believe in. If you would like to know what religious fanatics do when they gain power, check what the religious fanatics did in Afghanistan, Iran, Ireland and some other countries. Trying to force from hundreds to thousands of years of old rules but still enjoying the modern tech and rides. You don't see religious fanatics riding a donkey or horse when they travel, instead of cars and planes or sending their message by a pigeon, instead of computer or modern mail system.

So when you are voting, vote for the person not their religious beliefs. Regardless of your party, because we should vote for a smart person, whether it is local, state or general election, not a religious person.

For your information, Talib means a student; Taliban means students. May God bless this great country. Happy voting to all of you. BARI A. FEDAI Twin Falls

Eliminate Pre-funding Burden for U.S. Postal Service

Even with today's technology, the U.S. Postal Service has the ability to financially stand on its own without any taxpayer money. Many people still use and trust the Postal Service.

The Postal Service will again default on a multi-billion dollar payment to prefund retirees' health benefits for the next 75 years, which Congress has imposed. No other public agency or private company has to make this outrageous requirement. This pre-funding burden has accounted for 85 percent of the Postal Service's red ink so far. Congress started this problem back in 2006 and Congress can fix it now. It is not the Postal Service defaulting on its responsibilities, it is Congress. The Postal Service should not have "shrink to survive" by reducing services to the American people by eliminating Saturday delivery and closing post offices along with mail processing centers.

The people of America deserve the best possible service at the lowest costs. The solution is simple: eliminate the pre-funding account payments, which Congress has to act on and act very soon. This account has already been overfunded by $45 billion.

Mini-Cassia School Districts Did Great Job on Canned Food Drive

As president of the Mini-Cassia Christmas Council, I would like to tell both school districts what an outstanding job they did on the canned food drive. Although our goal was 20,000 cans of food, we collected more than 18,000 cans of food. The wonderful thing about this is that together, we did make a difference in our community. It proves once again that we live in two of the greatest counties in the state.

All of this food will make it possible for more families in our area to have a Christmas dinner this year. Thank you to your leaders, the Booster Clubs and the kids who came to help unload the thousands of cans of food. All of those hands made for light work. To the rest of the folks in our communities, thank you for your caring example. The Christmas Council has officially begun its Christmas preparations. We hope to be able to provide Christmas boxes to approximately 600 families this year. If all of you continue to give gifts, food and financial help, no deserving family will go without on Christmas morning.

Our working hours are Tuesdays from 2 to 6 p.m. and then on Saturdays from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. If you have any questions, you may call Linda Short at 436-0571, Mary Young at 436-0241 or Carla Blincoe at 438-8466.

Remember: By working together, we can make a difference in our community.

Albion Mansions Are a Haunting Production

BY LAURIE WELCH lwelch@magicvalley.com

ALBION • Even in daylight there is something unsettling about the dilapidated buildings on the campus of Albion Normal School.

"You couldn't recreate these decrepit old buildings for an attraction if you tried," said Troy Mortensen, as he glided down pitch-black halls and past rooms so creepy they make you want to get as far away as possible. "But, it's the people who really make these buildings come alive."

Mortensen and his wife, Heather, operate the Haunted Mansions of Albion, a Halloween attraction set on the old campus that once educated teach-

"It's more of a production than a haunted house," Mortensen said. About 60 people were hired this year to play the ghouls that inhabit the four buildings a new attraction this year - a corn maze. A non-haunted version of the corn maze will be open Wednes-

In McMurray Hall, once a boys' dormitory, eerie music, strobe lights and fog setthe mood as visitors wind their way through narrow hallways packed with actors in full makeup and wielding props.

Many actors come back year after year and truly like to play their parts.

Mortensen said that as the evening wears on the actors are fueled by the adrenalin and screams of the crowds and become more and more feverish in their ghoulish pitch.

"I like to make sure people get their money's worth," said Sharon Hardy-Mills, who has been with the production since its inception five years ago. "I've made grown men scream like little girls."

Hardy-Mills plays the part of a witch, and she sets up her own room each year. This year her lair will be in the auditorium.

Other buildings include the old gymnasium and what Mortensen calls "the real haunt," which is the old girls' dormitory, Comish Hall.

"We've had about 30 groups of ghost hunters come through here in the past four years and there are two spots, Comish Hall and the auditorium, where they report a lot of paranormal activity," Mortensen said.

Half the fun is all the ghost stories and legends about the place that have persisted for decades, he said.

As a teenager, Mortensen didn't like haunted houses "at all" and doesn't even like scary movies today.

"When you get inside the buildings it can be kind of scary," Mortensen said. "Especially when I'm all alone I feel like someone is watching me."

Some of the actor's masks line a table in a prop room in McMurray Hall.

A couple of workers claim they experienced disturbing events that kept them from returning to parts of certain buildings, he said.

"Everyone is scared of different things like clowns, chainsaws, Dracula or just the dark in general," Mortensen said.

The fun, he said, is figuring out what will scare people. Then the hard work begins.

Mortensen said along with maintaining the buildings year-round he changes the attractions each year so they are fresh for the 10,000 expected visitors. They also have to hire and train the actors.

"Timing plays a big part in being scared," Mortensen said. "It's all placing credence on the theory that oil rags Fred Wood used to clean his firearms spontaneously combusted.

Fred Wood had returned Sept. 22 from a hunting trip to north Idaho for grouse. On Sept. 23, he cleaned his firearms using rags and solvent, he said, and hadn't gone to the room since.

Burley Fire Chief Keith Martin said the rags and solvent could have resulted in just the right combination of material to combust. The rags and cleaning materials were located several feet from the gunpowder in the room, but were next to boxes on the floor.

As of Tuesday, investigators are no longer seriously considering any other potential causes, Martin said.

"What we're thinking happened is the rags spontaneously combusted, melted the container they were in, spread to the boxes and then it just went from there," Martin said.

So what caused the explosion? "That's the million dollar question," Martin said, adding it's likely the hot air had nowhere to go in the secure room.

Speaking Tuesday, Fred Wood also acknowledged the oil rags as a possibility. It wasn't natural gas: His home has none in or around it, he said.

But he noted that the investigation hasn't completed.

"At this point in time, we don't know what happened other than the damn thing blew up," he said.

The room where the explosion originated is a 13-by 15-foot secure storage room where Wood said he keeps valuables, including guns, cameras, binoculars, collectible magazines and jewelry. It also included smokeless gunpowder and guncleaning solvents.

Alleged Victims Testify in Home Invasion Case

BY ALISON GENE SMITH alismith@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • Leo Ray calmly relayed the early morning events of Aug. 7 to a Twin Falls County courtroom Tuesday afternoon. Several masked men came to the door at about 6 a.m., Ray said. They had a rope, he said, and they told him they were here for his money.

Ray and his wife, Judy, are the alleged victims of a home invasion robbery. The two both testified at the preliminary hearing for the four suspects in the case: John Valenciano, Dylan Contreras, Luis Sotelo and a 16-year-old boy.

The hearing was to determine if the case would advance to district court for trial. Twin Falls County 5th District Magistrate Judge Roger Harris decided the state had enough evidence to take the case to trial and sent all four defendants on to district court.

Leo Ray testified he was led to a stool where one man held a gun to his right temple and one held a gun to his left. Another stood in front of him with the rope, he said.

"I said, 'I don't have any money here, that's what banks are for," Leo Ray testified, adding he had no doubt he would be shot if he didn't hand the cash in his wallet over.

The three suspects then took Leo Ray into the bedroom where his wife was, he said.

After demanding his wife's jewelry and asking where the Rays kept their guns, Leo Ray said both he and his wife were told to lay face-down on the bed and their hands were tied.

"Then our heads were covered so we couldn't see," Leo Ray said.

During her testimony, Judy Ray said one of the men came around to her side of the bed while one stayed at the foot of the bed.

"All they did was say not to look at them or they were going to shoot me," Judy Ray said. "It upset me a little bit. It also made me angry."

Leo Ray said he could hear the men going through the house and rattled off a list of guns and other items that were missing from his home.

Twin Falls County Sheriff's Detective Stephanie Haught testified that Sotelo admitted to being involved in the home invasion during an Aug. 30 interview.

"He said he was dropped off in the driveway and was supposed to act as a lookout," she said.

She also said Sotelo named Valenciano and Contreras as being involved.

Valenciano's attorney, Tim Williams, called a different 16-year-old boy who claimed Valenciano was actually with him at another person's house during the alleged robbery.

When all four attorneys said they had no more witnesses, Valenciano stood up, said he objected and stated he had two more witnesses out in the hall who would speak on his behalf.

Williams said he wasn't planning to call the two today and Harris allowed him a few minutes to speak with his client.

The four suspects are still presumed to be innocent. Valenciano and the juvenile will be arraigned in district court on Oct. 15; it wasn't clear Tuesday evening if dates had been set yet for the other defen-

Governor's Mansion Up for Debate

BOISE (AP) • The public gets its first chance Tuesday to formally weigh in on the future of Idaho's governor's mansion, the unoccupied hilltop edifice that rules Boise's skyline but is costing the state hundreds of thousands annually to mow, water and maintain.

The state holds an afternoon hearing starting at 4:30 p.m. in the Idaho Capitol.

The idea is to gauge residents' sentiment about the mansion, donated in 2004 to the state by potato mogul J.R. Simplot.

Options for the home include keeping it, trying to sell it or returning it to the Simplot family, a touchy subject. Simplot died in 2008 and his descendants have said they'd prefer the home remain in state hands.

Almost since taxpayers took ownership of the 7,500square-foot home, it's been the subject of dispute over just what to do with it.

Then-Gov. Dirk Kempthorne's grand plan to expand and remake the place foundered, as Kempthorne took a job as U.S. interior secretary and cash contributions to complete the work never materialized.

Then, Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter, who was divorced from Simplot's daughter in 1993, refused to live in the home.

In 2007, somebody used weed killer to burn an obscene image in the bluegrass hillside.

All the while, the bills are mounting, to the tune of more than $177,400 in the coming year — including to replace the enormous U.S. flag that flies above the many for orientation.

In fact, the cost of caring for the home, watering its expansive lawn and replacing the billowing flag when it becomes weather-tattered drained a maintenance fund to less than $900,000 barely enough to cover the bills for the next five years, unless something is done.

Idaho state Rep. Phylis King, a Boise Democrat who is one of five members of the Governor's Housing Committee that oversees the mansion, is a strong advocate of disposing of the house.

"I think what we're going to hear is the public thinks it's a waste of money," said King on Tuesday, before the meeting. "All I see is money going down the drain."

Selling the house isn't so simple, however. If Idaho decides to dispose of the mansion, it must first give members of the Simplot family the right of first refusal, at market prices.

And if any purchase offer is 2.1 million or less — the appraised value of the house in 2004 – the Simplots could take it back, even though Idaho has paid for six years of upkeep and used $310,000 from private donations for extensive renovations to make it fit to house official state visitors or host meetings.

Efforts by Democrats to sell the mansion died in the 2011 Legislature.

Sen. Chuck Winder, R-Meridian and chairman of the Governor's Housing Committee, didn't immediately return a phone call Tuesday seeking comment.

Meet GOP Candidates

TWIN FALLS • Republican Falls, and Rep. Pete Nielsen, legislators and GOP candidates from Districts 23, 24 and 25 are hosting community forums from 5-7 p.m. Thursdays in October.

The meetings will be at Perkins, 1564 Blue Lakes Blvd. N. in Twin Falls on Oct. 4, 11, 18 and 25.

Legislators attending include Sen. Lee Heider, R-Twin Falls, Sen. Bert Brackett, R-Rogerson, Rep. Maxine Bell, R-Jerome, Rep. Stephen Hartgen, R-Twin Falls, Rep.

Rich Wills, R-Glenns Ferry, Rep. Jim Patrick, R-Twin R-Mountain Home. GOP candidates Lance Clow and Clark Kauffman are also scheduled to attend.

Candidates and lawmakers will discuss legislative issues such as education spending, taxes, transportation and the criminal justice system, as well as take questions and comments from the public.

Debate Eve: Romney Says He May Cut Deductions

DENVER (AP) • Offering deficit-cutting ideas before his first debate with President Barack Obama, Mitt Romney says he might be willing to reduce income tax deductions used by millions of families for home mortgage interest and health care costs

He suggested the changes could be part of a plan that includes a 20 percent cut in tax rates across the board, continuation of upper income tax cuts that Obama wants to end and a comprehensive tax overhaul plan that the Republican presidential contender has so far declined to flesh out in detail. Romney says his overall plans would invigorate the slowly recovering U.S. economy.

Both Romney and Obama spent their time mostly in private on Tuesday, preparing for the debate, the president in Henderson, Nev., near Las Vegas, Romney already in Denver where the faceoff will take place Wednesday at 9 p.m. EDT. Neither held public campaign events, but Obama took a break from preparation to visit nearby Hoover Dam, and Romney picked up lunch at a Chipotle Mexican Grill near his hotel.

In an interview Monday night with Denver TV station KDVR, Romney said, "As an option you could say everybody's going to get up to a $17,000 deduction. And you could use your charitable deduction, your home mortgage deduction, or others - your health care deduction, and you can fill that bucket, if you will, that $17,000 bucket that way. And higher income people might have a lower number."

A Romney adviser said changes in other areas — a taxpayer's personal exemption and the deduction or credit for health care - would also be taken into account if deductions were limited as Romney suggested. Combining changes to those two areas with the limit on deductions would maintain Romney's goal of keeping tax burdens the same for wealthy and middle income taxpayers, the adviser said.

On another controversial subject, in a separate local interview ahead of the debate, Romney told The Denver Post that he would honor the temporary permission the Obama administration has granted to many young illegal immigrants to allow them to stay in the country. Obama announced in June that he would prevent deportation for some children brought to the United States by illegal immigrant parents. Applicants must not have a serious criminal record and must meet other requirements, such as graduating from high school or serving in the U.S. military.

The Romney-supporting independent group Crossroads GPS launched an $11 million, 10-day ad campaign in eight swing states. Its new ad criticizes Obama's assertion that unemployment would fall if Congress passed his proposed stimulus law. The national unemployment rate still stands above 8 percent.

In Denver, in his comments on taxes, Romney also cited the tax plan included in the Simpson-Bowles deficit commission recommendations as a possible course. That plan calls for reducing the top income tax rates. To pay for that, the plan would eliminate or reduce many popular tax breaks, including deductions for charitable donations and mortgage interest.

Romney's interviews with Denver outlets were the last ones planned before he takes the stage Wednesday night. Moderator Jim Lehrer plans to focus on the economy, health care and the role of government.

District Rebuilds After Fraudulent Testing

EL PASO, Texas (AP) • During his sophomore year, Jose Avalos was urged by a principal to drop out of high school. The next year, his brother was told to do the same after entering the 10th grade. A third Avalos brother shared the same fate in 2009.

Administrators at Bowie High School cited excessive tardiness in their efforts to remove the siblings. But now the brothers suspect they were targeted for an entirely different reason: The district was trying to push out hundreds of low-performing sophomores to prevent them from taking accountability tests. The scheme was designed to help El Paso schools raise academic standards, qualify for more federal money and ensure the superintendent got hefty bonuses.

Three years after the youngest of the Avalos brothers dropped out, the former superintendent faces prison time, state officials are strictly monitoring the schools and the district is trying to contact ousted students to help them complete their education.

The idea to cast out the weakest sophomores originated with former Superintendent Lorenzo Garcia, who pleaded guilty to fraud in a case that could put him behind bars for up to 31/2 years. He's scheduled to be sentenced Friday.

After being hired in 2006, Garcia soon began implementing a plan with several other administrators that included pre-testing 10th-graders to identify those who were likely to fail standardized tests. He even asked an employee to photograph students crossing the border so they could be forced out on the grounds that they were living in Mexico and not within the district. The whole idea, said former state Sen. Eliot Shapleigh, was to make those students "disappear" so they would not be counted among the students who were tested.

In the short term, the strategy worked. Test scores improved at eight of 11 high schools. The district's overall rating improved from "academically acceptable" in 2005 to "recognized" in 2010 — the second-highest rating possible. But the achievements came amid startling enrollment declines for sophomores. Austin High School, for instance, had 615 freshmen in 2005, but that number had dropped 40 percent by the time accountability tests were given the following school year. With the next batch of 571 freshmen, only about half were still enrolled by the time the tests were administered.

In June, Garcia admitted defrauding the Texas Education Agency and the U.S. Department of Education in his efforts to secure $56,500 in performance bonuses and federal funding for the district. His lawyers did not return repeated requests for comment. As for the Avalos brothers, they want to see Garcia in prison and to move on with their lives. Roger Avalos, now 21, is seeking his GED while working at a cowboy boot fac-

NYPD IS WATCHING SOCIAL MEDIA TO FIGHT GANG BLOODSHED

NEW YORK (AP) • Authorities in New York say a new generation of gang members is increasingly using social media to boast of their exploits and issue taunts and challenges that result in violence. And police and prosecutors have responded over the past several years by closely monitoring Facebook and other sites for leads and evidence. On Tuesday, New York Police Commissioner Raymond Kelly announced plans to beef up the NYPD's cyber crackdown by expanding the use of aggressive online investigative tactics and doubling the size of the department's gang unit to 300 investigators. The reinforcements will focus less on established gangs like the Bloods and Crips and more on loosely knit groups of teenagers who stake out a certain block or section of a housing project as their turf and exact vengeance on those who trespass or fail to show the prop-

"By capitalizing on the irresistible urge of these suspects to brag about their murderous exploits on Facebook, detectives used social media to draw a virtual map of their criminal activity over the last three years," the commissioner said in remarks prepared for delivery at a law enforcement convention in San Diego.

Police say much of the potentially incriminating material they gather can be found on Facebook profiles that are public.

But as part its new, stepped-up efforts, the department will refine and expand use of a tactic instrumental in the three-year Brooklyn gang investigation - having officers adopt Internet aliases, create phony profiles and seek to "friend" suspects to gain access to nonpublic information, officials said.

JUDGE HALTS PA.'S NEW VOTER ID LAW

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) • Pennsylvania's divisive voter identification requirement became the latest of its kind to get pushback from the courts ahead of Election Day, delivering a hard-fought victory to Democrats who said it was a ploy to defeat President Barack Obama and other opponents who said it would prevent the elderly and minorities from voting. Commonwealth Court Judge Robert Simpson said in his ruling that he was concerned by the state's stumbling efforts to create a photo

ID that is easily accessible to voters and that he could not rely on the assurances of government officials at this late date that every voter would be able to get a valid ID.

It's not clear how the laws could affect the presidential election, or even if they will, considering that the toughest identification laws are not taking effect this year in presidential battleground states.

If it stands, it is good news for Obama's chances in Pennsylvania, one of the nation's biggest electoral college prizes, unless Republicans and the tea party groups that backed the law find a way to use it to motivate their supporters and possibly independents. Simpson's ruling would not stop the law from going into full effect next year, though he could still decide later to issue a permanent injunction as part of the ongoing legal challenge to the law's constitutionality. The 6-month-old law — among the nation's toughest — is one of many that has passed a Republican-controlled state Legislature since the last presidential election.

Auto Sales Help Buoy Economy

WASHINGTON (AP) • The U.S. economy is looking more resilient, thanks in part to encouraging signs for the two most expensive purchases most Americans make: cars and homes. Cheap loans and a bounty of fuel-efficient models enticed people to buy new vehicles at a brisk pace last month. And the nation enjoyed another year-overyear surge in home prices in August – a sign that the housing industry is making a sustained comeback.

Both trends reflect rising confidence in the economy. More families are replacing aging cars. And rising home prices are leading more would-be buyers to conclude that a home is a good investment.

Two surveys last week also reported improving consumer confidence.

The apparent progress could benefit President

Barack Obama, who faces off with Mitt Romney on Wednesday in an economyfocused debate just five week ahead of the election.

Despite the brightening auto and housing industries, the broader American economy is still struggling. It grew at a meager 1.3 percent annual rate in the April-June quarter. Most economists foresee little strengthening the rest of the year.

Hiring remains too sluggish to reduce high unemployment, which is at 8.1 percent. The manufacturing sector is struggling to grow consistently. Workers' pay is lagging inflation. A dismal European economy has cut demand for U.S. exports.

And the economy remains at risk of falling off a "fiscal cliff" early next year. That's when tax increases and deep spending cuts take effect unless Congress reaches a budget deal.

Study: Race-neutral Admissions Can Work

BY JUSTIN POPE Associated Press

As the Supreme Court revisits the use of race in college admissions next week, critics of affirmative action are hopeful the justices will roll back the practice. A new report out Wednesday offers a big reason for their optimism: evidence from at least some of the nine states that don't use affirmative action that leading public universities can bring meaningful diversity to their campuses through race-neutral means.

That conclusion is vigorously disputed by supporters of race-based affirmative action, including universities in states like California which cannot under state law factor race into admissions decisions. The new report, by the Richard Kahlenberg, a senior fellow at the Century Foundation and prominent advocate of class-based affirmative action, calls those states' race-neutral policies largely successful.

The University of California and others call them a failure that's left their campuses inadequately representative of the states they serve.

Kahlenberg also acknowledges that highly selective universities like UCLA and the Universities of California-Berkeley and Michigan haven't recovered from drop-offs in minority enrollments after voters in those states outlawed racial preferences.

But in most places, the report argues, a combination of measures - aggressive outreach, de-emphasizing of standardized tests, affirmative action based on class instead of race, and even getting rid of legacy preferences that mostly benefit whites – has allowed minority representation on their campuses to recover to previous levels.

Seven states have banned racial preferences in admissions outright - Washington, Michigan, Nebraska, Arizona, New Hampshire, California and Florida. In Texas and Georgia leading public universities use a race-neutral system. though the University of Texas has maintained some use of affirmative action. It's that policy at UT that's now before the court in a case brought by Abigail Fisher, a rejected white applicant. Arguments are next Wednesday.

In its last two major affirmative action decisions, in 1978 and 2003, the court essentially took universities at their word when they argued it's impossible to achieve adequate racial diversity without factoring race into admissions.

But in the 2003 decision, involving the University of Michigan, the court also indicated it would pay close attention to race-neutral experiments in the states to make sure racial preferences were really necessary to achieve diversity.

Education Chief Wants Textbooks To Be Digital

WASHINGTON (AP) •

Worried your kids spend too much time with their faces buried in a computer screen? Their schoolwork may soon depend on it.

Education Secretary Arne Duncan called Tuesday for the nation to move as quickly as possible away from printed textbooks and toward digital ones. "Over the next few years, textbooks should be obsolete," he declared.

It's not just a matter of keeping up with the times, Duncan said in remarks to the National Press Club. It's about keeping up with other countries.

South Korea, which consistently outperforms the U.S. when it comes to educational outcomes, is moving far faster than the U.S. in adopting digital learning environments.

Illegal Immigrant Fights for Law License

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) A Florida man's bid to become the first illegal immigrant to obtain a law license in the United States met skepticism Tuesday from most of the state's Supreme Court justices.

Jose Godinez-Samperio came to the U.S. with his parents on visitors' visas when he was 9 years old, but the family never returned to Mexico. He graduated from New College in Florida, earned a law degree from Florida State University and passed the state bar exam last year.

"He's somebody who has done everything he's supposed to do. He complied with every rule," Godinez-Samperio's attorney and former American Bar Association president Talbot "Sandy" D'Alemberte, said after the hearing. Godinez-Samperio's case is one of a few across the country. Illegal immigrants in New York and California also want to practice law there.

The Board of Bar Examiners in Florida found no reason to deny the 25-yearold Godinez-Samperio a license but asked the state's high court for guidance, said the board's lawyer, Robert Blythe.

"It's not really about this applicant," Blythe said. "It's a broader question."

Justice Barbara Pariente compared Godinez-Samperio's status to someone who doesn't pay federal income tax.

"The board would never recommend that person for admission to the practice of law," Pariente said.

Later, though, she suggested the court could temporarily license Godinez-Samperio.

But the teams had yet to do much counterterrorism work in Libya, though the White House signed off a year ago on the plan to build the new military task force in the region and the advance teams had been there for six months, according to three U.S. counterterror officials and a former intelligence official. they were not authorized to discuss the strategy publicly.

The counterterror effort indicates that the administration has been worried for some time about a growing threat posed by al-Qaida and its offshoots in North Africa. But officials say the military organization was too new to respond to the attack in Benghazi, where the administration now believes armed al-Qaida-linked militants surrounded the lightly guarded U.S. compound, set it on fire and killed Ambassador Chris Stevens and three other Americans.

Republicans have questioned whether the Obama administration has been hiding key information or hasn't known what happened in the immediate aftermath of the attack.

Border Patrol Agent Shot, Killed on Patrol in Arizona

NACO, Ariz. (AP) • A Border Patrol agent was shot to death Tuesday in Arizona near the U.S.-Mexico line, the first fatal shooting of an agent since a deadly 2010 firefight with Mexican bandits that spawned congressional probes of a botched government gun-smuggling investigation.

The agent, Nicholas Ivie, 30, and a colleague were on patrol in the desert near Naco, Ariz., about 100 miles from Tucson, when shooting broke out shortly before 2 a.m., the Border Patrol said. The second agent was shot in the ankle and buttocks, and was reported to be in stable condition Tuesday afternoon.

Authorities have not identified the agent who was wounded, nor did they say whether any weapons were seized at the site of the shooting. At a news conference in Naco, an FBI official said the agency still was processing the crime scene and it might take several days to complete. The FBI and the Cochise County Sheriff's Office, which is also investigating, declined to say whether investigators have recovered guns or bullet casings. No arrests have been made, but authorities suspect that more than one person fired at the agents.

The last Border Patrol agent fatally shot on duty was Brian Terry, who died in a shootout with bandits near the border in December 2010. The Border Patrol station in Naco, where the two agents shot Tuesday were stationed, was recently named after Terry.

Terry's shooting was later linked to the government's "Fast and Furious" gunsmuggling operation, which allowed people suspected of illegally buying guns for others to walk away from gun shops with weapons, rather than be arrested. Authorities intended to track the guns into Mexico. Two rifles found at the scene of Terry's shooting were bought by a member of the gun-smuggling ring being investigated. Critics of the operation say any shooting along the border now will raise the specter those illegal weapons are still being used in border violence.

"There's no way to know at this point how the agent was killed, but because of Operation Fast and Furious, we'll wonder for years if the guns used in any killing along the border were part of an ill-advised gun-walking strategy," Republican Sen. Chuck Grassley said in a written statement.

The U.S. government has put thousands of sensors along the border that, when tripped, alert dispatchers that they should send agents to a particular location. The agents were fired upon in a rugged hilly area about five miles north of the border as they responded to an alarm that was triggered on one of the sensors, said sheriff's spokeswoman Carol Capas. It is not known whether the agents returned fire,

The wounded agent should be released from the hospital later Tuesday, said George McCubbin, president of the National Border Patrol Council, a union representing about 17,000 border patrol agents. The agents who were shot were on patrol with a third agent, who was not harmed, McCubbin said.

Twenty-six Border Patrol agents have died in the line of duty since 2002. Bisbee-area residents expressed a mix of concern and frustration about the shooting, along with recognition that the border can be a dangerous place. The region has seen its share of violence in recent years, including the Terry shooting and the slaying of a well-known rancher in 2010. That killing is, in part, credited with pushing Arizona lawmakers to pass a law that requires officers, when they stop someone, to check the immigration status of those they suspect are in the country illegally.

"There is no security on the border none," said Edward L. Thomas, who owns rental properties in Bisbee.

Islamists Struggle with Secularists in Egypt

CAIRO (AP) • Islamists are seeking to enshrine in Egypt's long-awaited new constitution a number of articles that secularists and liberals fear would bring theocratic rule and severely set back civil liberties, including provisions that could empower clerics to review laws and would stipulate that women's rights cannot violate Shariah law or "family duties."

Liberals and secularists have been struggling to keep out the provisions, but are finding themselves outnumbered and vulnerable to being overruled on the 100-member assembly that is writing the charter meant to set the path for post-revolution Egypt.

The assembly, where Islamists hold a majority, has been debating the constitution over nearly 50 sessions during the past months. But the wrangling has heated up as the body gets closer to voting on a final draft, which would then be put to a yes-or-no referendum by the public, expected by the end of the year. Liberals, however, say they have few tools to block Islamists' demands other than walking out of the assembly - a step they have wavered on taking for fear or losing their voice entirely.

Around 100 women protested against the Islamists' provisions Tuesday outside the upper house of parliament, where the assembly has been holding its sessions. They chanted against a "religious state" and shouted, "Down with the rule of the Brotherhood." Magda Adly, one rights activist at the gathering, warned of "a constitution that only sees women as tasked to make babies," saying the Islamists' provisions would open the door to dramatically lowering the marriage age for women and ending restrictions on female genital mutilation.

The constitution has been long awaited as a key step in establishing a democracy in Egypt after last year's ouster of autocratic ruler Hosni Mubarak. The uprising that forced Mubarak out was led by progressive, secular activists who rallied public anger over worsening poverty, the monopoly on power by Mubarak's ruling party, rampant corruption and widespread abuses by security and intelligence agencies.

A graveside memorial service will be held at 1 p.m. Saturday, Oct. 6, at the Wendell Cemetery. A celebration of life will follow the service at 2:30 p.m. at the

Jerome Senior Center. Arrangements are under the care and direction of Demaray-Robertson Funeral Chapel in Jerome. Norm was born Feb. 3, 1937, at St. Valentine's Hospital in Wendell, Idaho, to Paul Jerke Sr. and Norma Kukuk. Norm married Martha Cotter in Wendell, Idaho, on June 24, 1961. Together they had three children. Norm served in the U.S. Navy, farmed for many years in the Wendell and Jerome areas and proudly drove truck for Northwest Sand and Gravel and Circle A Construction.

Norm is survived by his three children, Shellie Thorn-ho, Curtis Jerke of Kimberly, Idaho, and Randy J. Jerke of Meridian, Idaho. He was the proud grandfather of four grandchildren; he is also survived by his three brothers, Paul Jerke Jr. of Wendell, Wally Jerke of Bancroft, Idaho, and Marion Jerke of Buhl, Idaho; and many nieces and quest of Hailey, Ida-

nephews.

Norm touched everyone with his loving and accepting ways. He always greeted everyone he met with a smile and usually a joke or two. His strong faith, strength and optimism encourages the family and carries us through this difficult time.

The family would like to extend a sincere appreciation to the staff at Alpine Manor in Twin Falls, to Jennifer Ordaz of Linc Services, to Arlene Gergens and to Ken and Bonnie Coleman for their loving care they gave to Norm. The family requests any donations be sent to the Jerome Senior Center.

Judith Allyne Heller July 31, 1937-Sept. 13, 2012

ALBION woman of frontierstyle endurance, quiet dignity and unfailing humor, Judith Allyne Heller of Albion, Idaho, will be warmly remembered by her loving family and neighbors. Always kind, always compassionate, Judith was a unique woman in every sense of the word. Part Audrey Hepburn, part Minnie Pearl, there was something lovably quirky about Judith.

Judith Heller was born to Ruth Townley and Arthur Edward Poole on July 31, 1937, in Elizabeth, N.J. Later, Judith attended high school in Cranford, N.J., after which she moved to Summit, N.J., where she met and married Ralph T. Heller. Judith was generous with her love and remained devoted to her late husband throughout all the years of their marriage. Passionately committed to leaving things better than she found them, Judith spent 10 years of her life renovating homes in Eugene, Ore. She was an avid gardener and enjoyed antiquing, reading a good book and viewing classic films. Judith took solace in the simple things, garnering joy from merely watching the sunset from her porch. Moments like these were golden to Judith. To her, paradise was a quiet

Judith leaves behind her sister, Constance Cornog-Robathan (Dave); a brother, Douglas E. Poole (Pat); five nieces and nephews; seven great-nieces and nephews, family members that she loved and enjoyed throughout her life. Judith also leaves behind another family, her Albion family, many devoted friends who loved and cared for her as though she was their own.

A memorial service for Judith will be held at 2 p.m. Saturday, Oct. 6, at the LDS Church in Albion, Idaho. To celebrate Judith's unique spirit, please wear something colorful. As well, should you like to give something in memory of Judith, donations can be made to the Minidoka County Animal Shelter. Cremation services are under the direction of Morrison Funeral Home and Crematory in Rupert.

At first glance, Idaho doesn't look like the leader - it's fifth nationally in bean production - but Idaho beans have a good deal of importance to the industry.

Why is that? Because Idaho is one of the top states producing seed beans. Five years ago Idaho was the top seed bean producer, said Craig Kelley, vice president of the Western Bean Dealers Association. Despite growing competition, most of the beans grown in Idaho still are sold as seeds to bean growers elsewhere, who rely on Idaho's certified disease-free seeds.

So why are Idaho seed beans popular? It's that disease-free certification, according to the Idaho Bean Commission.

Crates of beans wait to be shipped at Idaho Seed Bean Co.

strict standards for growers set by Idaho's Quality Control Program. The rules are strict because beans are prone to a number of fungal, bacterial, parasitic and viral diseases.

Idaho has a long history of bean breeding and research. Since 1925, the University of Idaho's breeding program has been developing varieties for Idaho's dry bean industry.

And the research continues — combating diseases like mosaic and curly top, said Kathy Stewart-Williams, program coordinator of the Foundation Seed Program based at the Kimberly Research and Extension Center.

Research on how to provide a better, more resistant product is ongoing in Idaho — and in other states, which is why Idaho has competition as the top seed bean producer. There are a number of states with dry bean breeding programs, including Oregon, Washington, California, Colorado, Nebraska, North Dakota, Wisconsin, Michigan and New York.

A small Twin Falls company is a significant player in that effort.

John Dean, co-owner of Idaho Seed Bean Co., submerged his hand into a metal crate full of chili beans, or pink beans, before the crate was loaded onto the belt with a forklift. John cupped a handful of beans, his palm dusted with light brown soil.

The bean business is dirty, literally.

"If you ever see a combine surrounded in a cloud of dust, it's harvesting beans," John said. When beans are harvested, the roots are still attached to clumps of soil.

The sound of pink beans falling and rattling over metal screens — to clean and sort beans from dirt and twigs — is deafening.

If you work in the mill during the cleaning process, John said, it's best to wear earplugs.

The majority of the seed beans produced at Idaho Seed Bean Co. are shipped to the Midwest for planting. What is the difference between a seed bean and a food bean? Not much, John said.

"You can go to the store and buy a bag of pintos and put it in the ground and it will grow," John said. "But Idaho has rules against it."

The bean crop usually makes its way back to Idaho after being grown elsewhere, either in packages of beans sold at the store or in the chili at Wendy's.

About half of the bean acres at Idaho Seed Bean Co. are for seed, and the others are usually sold to canners.

The company also maintains breeder seed for several universities conducting their own research on beans.

John's father, Leslie "Bill" Dean, started Idaho Seed Bean Co. in 1973. Bill is a retired professor from the U of I, where for 30 years he worked as the university's Extension plant pathologist and bean breeder.

But Bill's work and research is not done; he still goes out into the bean fields.

"I'm 93 years old. Why should I quit?" Bill said, sitting in the Idaho Seed Bean Co. office. A built-in bookshelf lined the wall on one side of the room. It contained books with the titles

"Plant Breeding," "Climate and Man" and "American Men of Science."

In 2009, Bill received the Governor's Award for Excellence in Technical Innovation at the Idaho Ag Summit. A native of Twin Falls, Bill has bachelor's and master's degrees from the U of I and a doctorate from Purdue University. Stewart-Williams told a reporter in 2009 that by the time Bill retired he had released 18 dry edible and snap beans, including two cornerstones of the North American pinto bean industry.

Stewart-Williams said she doesn't like to use the word "pioneer" but it's the only term suitable to describe Bill's work in bean breeding and research.

"He kept that work up and in certain aspects of disease research is a pioneer," Stewart-Williams said.

John remembers his father starting the company the same year he graduated from high school. Since then, John said, the bean industry has really shrunk over the past 20 years. There are 26 seed dealers listed on the Idaho Bean Commission website.

Overall, John said, there aren't many small companies left; most have been consolidated into larger corporations like Archer Daniels Midland. And compared with the bean companies still in operation, John said, Idaho Seed Bean Co. is tiny.

As John stood over a conveyer belt, millions of small beans rolled by at a pace fast enough to make you dizzy. He picked out beans with imperfections, tossing them into a tray off to the side.

Every day John is surrounded by beans. If he is not studying or caring for them, he is eating them.

And why not? They're an excellent source of protein and vitamins, he said. "I almost always have some bean soup for lunch."

end of that story — shared his tips for a smoked vegetable soup and a recipe for smoked fish, and the response from Times-News readers put his smoked pork into the Beacon Grill's weekly lineup.

I slipped in unannounced last week to give it a try.

The dining room's long, low profile and wood paneling suggest a bar, but the decor is pleasantly rustic, relying on fishing scenes, vintage farm tools and Idaho potato memorabilia instead of lighted beer signs. The lunch crowd sits on comfortable stools at high tables.

Beacon Grill serves the pulled pork with coleslaw and house-made barbecue sauce inside a choice of white or wheat bun, and my server offered four choices of sides: red potato salad, more coleslaw, chips or fries. (A small green salad is another option, Schroeder said later.) I took the potato salad, made by Sheppards Quality Fresh Foods in Twin Falls, and found it to be a standard creamy version.

The star, of course, was the generous helping of tender pork.

Before digging in, I looked inside the bun and was happy not to see hunks of fat.

"I trim the fat cap off," Schroeder said later, adding that barbecue purists might object. "I don't like to taste the fat either."

My sandwich was delicious, but to my taste the sweet sauce overpowered the pork's hard-won smokiness. No problem: Customers can ask for the pulled pork sandwich without the barbecue sauce, or with the sauce on the side, Schroeder said. What's he willing to say about that sauce recipe?

"Not a lot," Schroeder said. "It's a lot like Sweet Baby Ray's but on steroids."

He's reticent about his dry rub, too, but said he doesn't use monosodium glutamate, or MSG. Beacon Grill shreds fresh vegetables for its coleslaw but uses a purchased sauce there. "I don't put a whole lot on. I don't want it really wet," Schroeder said. "I want a little crunch."

That suits me fine. And now I know what to say next time I order the pulled pork sandwich:
Green side salad, please.

Bacon Shortage Baloney, but Prices to Rise

BY JIM SUHR Associated Press

ST. LOUIS • Bacon lovers can relax. They'll find all they want on supermarket shelves in the coming months, though their pocketbooks may take a hit.

The economics of the current drought are likely to nose up prices for bacon and other pork products next year, by as much as 10 percent. But U.S. agricultural economists are dismissing reports of a global bacon shortage that lent sizzle to headlines and Twitter feeds last week. Simply put, the talk of scarcity is hogwash.

"Use of the word 'shortage' caused visions of (1970s-style) gasoline lines in a lot of people's heads, and that's not the case," said Steve Meyer, president of Iowa-based Paragon Economics and a consultant to the National Pork Producers Council and National Pork Board.

"If the definition of shortage is that you can't find it on the shelves, then no, the concern is not valid. If the concern is higher cost for it, then yes."

Fears about a scarcity of bacon swept across social and mainstream media in recent weeks after Britain's National Pig Association said a bacon shortage was "unavoidable," citing a sharp decline in the continent's pig herd and

"Pork supplies will decrease slightly as we go into 2013. But the idea that there'll be widespread shortages, that we'll run out of pork, that's really overblown."

Farm Bureau economist John Anderson

drought-inflated feed costs. The report caused much consternation over a product that used to be merely a breakfast staple, but nowadays flavors everything from brownies to vodka.

The alarm was quickly dismissed by the American Farm Bureau Federation as "baloney."

"Pork supplies will decrease slightly as we go into 2013," Farm Bureau economist John Anderson said. "But the idea that there'll be widespread shortages, that we'll run out of pork, that's really overblown."

Monday, spokesman for the British pork trade group maintained its position that "there will be a significant tightening in the global pigmeat supply" in the second half of next year, because "the vast majority of pig producers around the world are losing money on every pig they sell."

"Given the huge amount of interest in the United States created by our earlier press release maybe more producers will now hang on in production, in the hope of recovering their losses next year and in 2014," Digby Scott told The Associated Press in an email. "We agree with the view of some economists in the (United) States that supplies will tighten and prices will rise BUT maybe you won't see 'standing-in-line' shortages in supermarkets. Time

The stubborn drought in the U.S., the world's biggest supplier of feed grains, undeniably will affect pig production. The Corn Belt's lack of moisture twice has prompted the U.S. Agriculture Department to slash its forecast for this year's corn output. The government now expects U.S. production of the grain to amount to 10.8 billion bushels, the least since 2006.

Those lowered expectations sent prices of corn also used in ethanol, further squeezing supply - to record highs through much of the summer. Feed generally makes up about 60 percent of the expense of raising a pig. Rather than absorb the higher costs, swine and beef producers often have culled their animals by sending them to slaughter.

Creme Fraiche Looks like Sour Cream, Tastes Better

BY J.M. HIRSCH Associated Press

Not sure what creme fraiche is or why you should care? Consider it a relative of sour cream. Except that while both are white, thick and creamy, creme fraiche is the richer, sexier and more talented relative.

Here's the deal. Like yogurt, sour cream and creme fraiche are dairy products produced thanks to the miracle of friendly bacteria. But while yogurt is made by adding those bacteria to milk, sour cream and creme fraiche are made by adding them to cream.

So what's the difference? Sour cream is made from cream that is 20 percent fat; creme fraiche sports an even more succulent 30 percent.

That may not sound like a big difference, but it matters in both taste and versatility. That extra fat turns creme fraiche into a kitchen workhorse.

But first, taste. While sour cream tastes, well, sour, creme fraiche is rich and tart. And as a byproduct of the bacteria added to produce it, creme fraiche tends to make other foods taste buttery.

But unlike yogurt, creme fraiche isn't particularly acidic (so it's not great for marinades).

The trouble with sour cream is that you have to be very careful when cooking with it. Heat it too much and it curdles. Ditto for yogurt. But the higher fat content of creme fraiche means you can boil with abandon and it won't separate. This makes it ideal for soups, sauces and simmered dishes.

It will, however, liquefy. That means that if you add it to the top of something, then toss it under the broiler (as in the recipe for croque monsieur below), or even just dollop it onto something hot, it will melt.

In France, where it originates, creme fraiche often is used in sauces for vegetables, particularly green beans and cauliflower, as well as in salad dressings, soups and pastries, and to top fresh fruit. It's sometimes used to make caramels and even is added to coffee and cocktails.

It's easy to make your own, but let's be honest, most of us won't. Add a tablespoon of cultured buttermilk to 1 cup of cream and let it sit in a cool room for up to bubbling. Immerse 6 half-pint jars in the pot. Place the rings and lids in a sepa-

24 hours, or until very thick. Refrigerate for several weeks.

Creme fraiche is widely available at most grocers in the U.S. It usually is found alongside the better cheeses, though it sometimes will be near the sour cream. It keeps, refrigerated, for about a month.

For more ideas for using creme fraiche, check out the Off the Beaten Aisle column over on Food Network: http://bit.ly/QyDefT

Croque Monsieur

Adding cornstarch to the creme fraiche allows you to broil it without it liquefying. It's an easy and delicious substitute for the traditional roux-based sauce used in croque monsieur. Start to finish: 15 minutes. Servings:

1/2 cup creme fraiche 1/2 cup grated Parmesan cheese, divided 1/4 cup grated cheddar 1 tablespoon cornstarch 1/2 teaspoon garlic powder 1/2 teaspoon hot sauce 1/2 teaspoon ground black

In a small bowl, mix together the creme fraiche, 1/4 cup of the Parmesan, the cheddar, cornstarch, garlic powder, hot sauce, pepper, salt and nutmeg. Set aside.

Spread a quarter of the mustard evenly over one side of each slice of bread. Top each with 1 slice of cheese and 2 slices of ham. Overturn 2 of the stacks onto the others to make 2 sandwiches. Spread the butter over one side of each sandwich.

Arrange the sandwiches on a baking sheet, buttered side up, and bake for 5 minutes. Remove the baking sheet from the oven. Set the oven to broil. Flip the sandwiches and

REATIVE CANNING: CHOCOLATE JAM

THE WASHINGTON POST

Canning cookbook author Mary Tregellas gauges the set of her jams, jellies and marmalades in one of three ways: the wrinkle test (place half a teaspoon on a plate chilled in the freezer; push it with your finger to see whether it wrinkles); the thermometer test (220 degrees, although she finds this not uniformly helpful); and the flake test (dip a wooden spoon in the mixture, let it cool for a few seconds then let it drop off the spoon; it should form flakes that hang on the edge).

It's best to use a pot that is wider at the top than the bottom (like a jamming pot or Maslin pan), to allow for evaporation. A saute pan might do the trick.

Store this jam (unopened) in a cool, dry place for up to 1

Dinner in 20 Minutes: Smoked Trout Salad

BONNIE S. BENWICK

The Washington Post

It would be hard to compose a more elegant, colorful and texturally interesting salad in such a short amount of time. You'll probably have smoked trout left over, which can be coarsely chopped along with fresh horseradish and a few swipes of lemon zest on a Microplane grater, then stirred into sour cream or creme fraiche. Serve over a baked potato or as a dip with cocktails.

Canning & Preserving Cookbook Roundup: Lids, Rings and Pings

BONNIE S. BENWICK The Washington Post

Some of the most accomplished cooks around – the ones willing to scout the best ingredients and splurge on the really good pots - have never put up food in jars.

It's not all that difficult to identify stumbling blocks. No family role models. Memories of seasonal family servitude. Misperception or laziness. Fear.

The fact that canning and preserving in America has been trending for a decade is both a blessing and a curse. For every enthusiast with a blog and a jar lifter, there's an essayist bent on exposing the posers among a genuinely interested, growing popula-

Yet the activity continues to empower home cooks. Talk about rewarding: You can sail past the produce department's rock-hard tomatoes, extend the shelf life of your farmers market favorites and reduce your household's food costs and waste; and when was the last time you turned down a gift of DIY dilly green beans? Jarden Home Brands, which manufactures Ball products in Indiana, has enlisted an army of can-do types at state fairs and through its online newsletter. Classes fill quickly and cyberspace facilitates bonds from coast to coast.

Is the person who makes freezer jams in July less committed than the cook who wields a pressure canner and pickles through the seasons? It's not a contest. After spending lots of time with the recent crop of canning and preserving cookbooks, though, I can say that jammers and picklers can both come out ahead.

There is a higher level of engagement in these guides. They provide technical information packaged with meaningful bells and whistles: bright images of every step or relatable stories or unexpected flavor combinations or recipes that incorporate what's gone into the jar - and, in some cases, all that and a bag of tips.

The biggest of the bunch seems like a bargain. Canadian cookbook author Pat Crocker's "Preserving: The Canning and Freezing Guide for All Seasons" (William Morrow, 2011; $30; 220-plus recipes) functions the way a Sears catalog used to, as a "wishbook." Its large type is easy on the eyes. Crocker shot all the photographs, which capture the beauty of raw ingredients and plated dishes as well as points of preparation. Her advice on best varieties for canning looks to be well researched, and the how-to-use-it recipes show depth and creativity.

If I'm allowed one quibble, it's with the page referrals to general processing directions at the front of the book (in fact, a common characteristic among most of the books). Understandably, the volume would be at least a third longer than its 525 pages if each canning recipe was written in full. But there's incentive and value in being able to read through what's entailed, start to finish. I suspect people who know the genre have perfected their bookmarking techniques.

Some of the most interesting flavor profiles can be found in "Jam On: The Craft of Canning Fruit," by Laena McCarthy (Viking Studio, 2012; $35; 68 recipes). A white nectarine jam with kaffir lime leaves and ginger. Pink peppercorns and dried hibiscus flowers in a brine for watermelon rind. The author's customizing and pairing suggestions are equally inspired, and small-batch recipes are less intimidating. In 2009, McCarthy elevated a passionate pursuit into a Brooklyn-based, artisanal business called Anarchy in a Jar. She has earned deservedly good press, in part for using local producers and for working with less or no sugar. Even if you are not moved to create, you can buy her products online and in a lot of New York stores.

Handsome and cozy in a soft cover, "Homemade Preserves & Jams: Over 90 Recipes for Luscious Jams, Marmalades, Tangy Crunchy Chutneys, and More," by Mary Tregellas (St. Martin's Press, 2012; $24.99; 90-plus recipes), offers a European sensibility, owing to the author's upbringing. Recipes grouped by categories such as Tangy, Aromatic and Intoxicating. In addition to the subtitle's roster, you'll find teas, cordials and flavored vodkas. Make the Speedy Pear and Chocolate Tart with her Pear and Chocolate Jam and your life could change.

ing With Pickles, Preserves, and Aigre-doux," by Paul Virant with Kate Leahy (Ten Speed Press, 2012; $29.99; 134 recipes). The "aigredoux" ("sour-sweet"; fondly described in the book as "preserves for cheese snobs and wine geeks") alone hints at a certain level of sophistication. Who else might conjure a Thanksgiving stuffing with pickled leeks, or a milk jam? However, Virant's Peach Saffron Jam is simple and not to be missed. More than half of the book is given over to complementary menus and recipes, and they sound tasty.

For a more homey and decidedly savory approach, there's "The Pickled Pantry: From Apples to Zucchini, 150 Recipes for Pickles, Relishes, Chutneys & More," by Andrea Chesman (Storey Publishing, 2012; $19.95; 150 recipes). Its charming illustrations and fonts evoke old times. This book is a good choice for beginners and geared for small batches. The one-page chart of produce yields is worth photocopying and affixing via magnet to a kitchen appliance. Notes on storage and substitutions are helpful. In addition to the well-curated standards, there's Pickled Cauliflower With Pomegranate Molasses and fermented cabbage of several cultures.

Last but not least, another: "Food in Jars: Preserving in Small Batches Year-Round," by Marisa McClellan (Running Press, 2011; $23; 110 recipes). Beginners could start here, and the conversation could continue through the Pennsylvania author's blog. (While you're there, check out the list of canning books she likes.) McClellan's voice is friendly and reassuring; the batches are manageable. True to its name, this recipe collection covers territory beyond the ping of a sealed lid, such as salts, syrups, granolas, stocks and butters.

Pepper Relish, Feta Dress Up This Broccolini

THE WASHINGTON POST

Broccolini is a great alternative to broccoli; the stalks are thinner, so it needs less time to cook. It's also mellower in flavor.

The relish for this dish can be made, covered and refrigerated up to a week in advance. Adapted from "Mike Isabella's Crazy Good Italian," by Mike Isabella (Da Capo, 2012).

Broccolini With Roasted Pepper Relish and Feta

4 small-plate servings.

For the relish: 2 large red bell peppers

(may substitute 3/4 cup diced jarred roasted red bell peppers) 1/4 cup extra-virgin olive oil, plus more for roasting the peppers 1/2 teaspoon kosher salt, plus more for roasting the peppers

1/2 cup walnut halves, toasted and chopped (see note)

3 pickled Peppadew peppers, finely chopped 1 pickled red cherry pepper, stem and seeds discarded, finely chopped 1 tablespoon red wine

2 tablespoons kosher salt vinegar For the broccolini: 16 stalks broccolini (12 to 16 ounces) For serving:

1/4 to 1/2 cup crumbled feta cheese

Position an oven rack in the second-highest position; preheat the broiler. Brush the bell peppers with oil and season them lightly with salt. Place them on their sides on a baking sheet, leaving about 3 inches between the tops of the peppers and the broiler flame or unit, and broil for 5 minutes on each side. This should take 20 to 25 minutes. The skins will become charred and the flesh soft. Place the peppers in a heatproof bowl; cover tightly with plastic wrap. Let them sit for 20 minutes. Finely dice the pepper flesh, discarding the skin, ribs and seeds, and transfer it to a medium bowl. (The yield is 3/4 cup.) Add the walnuts, Peppadews, red cherry pepper, 1/4 cup olive oil, vinegar and 1/2teaspoon of salt, stirring to incorporate.

For the broccolini: Bring 4 quarts of water to a boil with the salt in a large pot over medium-high heat. Fill a large bowl with ice water.

Trim 1 inch from the end of each broccolini stem

Fatty Duck? Not so Fast

BY SARA MOULTON

For The Associated Press

Duck is one of my favorite foods. No matter how you make it - roasted, braised,the legs confitted, the wings fried, the breasts grilled like a steak - it's just plain scrumptious.

I'm a particular fan of whole slow-roasted duck, a recipe I've been perfecting ever since I was a restaurant chef. But that's hardly a dish to dash off most weeknights, so I save it for special occasions. Duck breasts, however, are a very different story; we probably eat them for dinner once a week at home.

Why? There's the simplicity. They're so delicious all by themselves, they require almost no dressing up. There's the health aspects. Eaten without the skin, duck breasts are as lean as white meat chicken or turkey. They also contain more iron per serving than most other poultry, and even some cuts of beef. There's also the ease. Duck breasts are as easy to cook as steak and can be prepared in 15 to 20 minutes.

Duck often is sauced with fruit; humans long ago realized that the acid in fruit acts as a great counterbalance to the richness of the duck. A classic of French cuisine, canard a l'orange (duck with orange sauce) employs bitter oranges, which are not readily available in this country.

So for this recipe, I added orange slices to the juice in the sauce. The white pith in the peel provides a bitter edge. The sherry wine vinegar and Dijon mustard are there to offset the sweetness of the orange juice.

One whole duck breast two halves - can feed two to three people. (Each breast weighs from 1 to 1 1/4 pounds.) Cooking it is so simple that my teenaged son learned how to do it the first time I showed him. After it is cooked, while it rests, the duck will give off a delicious liquid that you can either add to the sauce, as in this recipe, or pour over the plain sliced duck breast, if you don't make a sauce.

Whether or not you end up eating the skin, I recommend cooking the breasts with the skin still on, which guarantees better flavor and prevents the breasts from drying out. If you want to avoid the extra fat, just remove the skin before serving. The fat is in the skin, not in the duck meat.

By the way, here's something counterintuitive but true – duck fat has properties similar to olive oil, with a good combination of polyand monounsaturated fats. Duck contains some saturated fat as well, so you don't want to go duck fat wild. But it's so flavorful that a little goes a long way. You might want to scoop up the duck fat generated by the making of this recipe and pop it into the freezer for future use. It will perk up your vegetables, potatoes in particular, in ways you never imagined.

Duck Breasts A L'Orange

Start to finish: 40 minutes (15 minutes active). Serv-

- 2 whole Peking duck breasts, (4 halves, about 2 to 2 1/2 pounds total) Kosher salt and ground black pepper
- 1 medium shallot, minced (about 1/4 cup) 3 small oranges
- 1 1/2 tablespoons sherry vinegar 1 cup low-sodium chicken

- 2 teaspoons Dijon mustard Chopped fresh chives, to Heat a large skillet over medium-high until hot. Reduce the heat to medium and place the duck breasts, skin side down, in the skillet. Cook for 10 minutes, or until the skin looks very crispy. Do not pour off the fat; the liquid fat in the pan helps to render out the fat in the skin. When the duck skin is crisp, transfer the breasts to a plate. Pour off all but 2 teaspoons of the fat from the pan (reserve it for another use, such as sauteing vegetables). Return the duck to the skillet, skin side up, and cook for another 3 to 5 minutes for medium-rare. Transfer the duck to a clean plate, skin side up. Cover it loosely with foil and let it rest while you make the Juice 2 1/2 of the oranges (you need about 1/2 cup of juice). Thinly slice the remaining half. Without cleaning the skillet, return it to medium heat and add the shallots. Saute until they are golden, 2 to 3 minutes. Add the orange juice and simmer until reduced by half. Add the sherry vinegar and simmer 2 minutes. Add the chicken broth and the orange slices and simmer until slightly syrupy, or reduced by about 1/3.

Whisk the cornstarch mixture to make sure the cornstarch is dissolved, then whisk it into the sauce. Simmer, whisking for 1 minute. Add the mustard and any juices that have collected in the plate the ducks breasts are on. Season with salt and pepper.

Remove and discard the skin from the duck, if desired (separating it by slicing off the skin with a paring knife). Thinly slice the duck and arrange on 6 plates. Spoon some of the sauce with the orange slices over each portion, then sprinkle with chives. Getting to the Whole-grain Side of Risotto

For The Associated Press

Many people like the idea of cooking with whole grains but refrain from actually plunging in because so many of them are unfamil-

What is the ratio of liquid to grain? Don't you need to rinse them, soak them or toast them first? How long do you cook them? Don't they take forever to cook?

For too long, I shied away from whole grains, too, especially because nobody seemed to agree on the answers to these questions. Then I did something really smart. I read the back of the package. And, duh! It's all right there. After all, who knows better how to prepare these products than the company that did the harvesting?

Product by product, and brand by brand, the instructions on the packages set me free to start cooking with many new whole grains.

One of my first and most gratifying discoveries was that most of these grains are pretty durable. You can boil up a huge batch during the weekend, then freeze them in 1-, 2- or 3-cup containers. All you need to do is reheat them with a bit of liquid or steam them over simmering water. And they are versatile, too. You can use them in any recipe that calls for cooked rice.

Which brings me to this recipe. My family loves regular risotto made with arborio or carnaroli rice. I was hopeful that I could prepare the same kind of recipe using farro.

A kind of hulled wheat, farro was first cultivated in the ancient Near East some 10,000 years ago. After a while, it started showing up in ancient Egypt and Israel. Today, it's grown in Morocco, Spain, Albania, Turkey, Switzerland and Italy. Recently, it's been gaining popularity right here in America because it's so nu-Happily, farro also happens to be delicious. It has a full-bodied taste and a pleasant, slightly chewy texture. It's less starchy than short grain rice, which means that this risotto is not as creamy as rice-based versions. But it still gets plenty creamy, especially with the addition of a little freshly grated Parmesan. I simmered the farro first to give it a jump start because it takes 50 to 60 minutes to get tender, and who wants to be stirring all that time? Traditionalists making the standard risotto contend that you're supposed to add the liquid in numerous small increments, which can get pretty te-

But I was liberated several years ago by Andrew Carmellini, who adds liquid to his risotto fewer times in larger amounts. I figured if it was all right for this celebrated Italian restaurant chef, I could get away with

I finish off my farro risotto with sauteed mushrooms, but you're welcome to substitute any kind of cooked vegetable - carrots, peas, eggplant or chunks of butternut squash. And adding a little cooked protein to it, such as shrimp, for example, or chicken, or Canadian bacon, easily turns this dish into an entree. It is the perfect base for repurposed leftovers, but your family also will love it straight up.

Mushroom Farro 'Risotto'

If you can only find parcooked farro (partially cooked), skip the initial step of the recipe (which calls for boiling the farro for 25 minutes). Instead, proceed to the next step. When the recipe directs you to simmer the broth and reserved farro cooking liquid, instead bring 2 1/2 cups of broth to a simmer, then proceed with the recipe and add the parcooked farro when it calls for drained farro. If you grate the cheese on a wand-style grater, you will get about 3/4 cup. If you use the fine side of a box grater, you will get about half as much volume, or about 3/8 cup. Start to finish: 50 to 60 minutes (25 minutes active). Servings: 8.

- 1 1/2 cups farro 3 tablespoons extra-virgin olive oil, divided
- 1 medium yellow onion, finely chopped (about 1 cup)
- 1 large clove garlic, finely chopped 2 teaspoons chopped fresh
- thyme leaves
- 1 1/2 cups chicken or vegetable broth
- 4 ounces fresh mushrooms (white button, cremini, shiitake, oyster or a mix) 1/2 cup dry red wine 1 ounce freshly grated

Parmigiano-Reggiano

Kosher salt and ground black pepper

Bring a large pot of salted water to a boil. Add the farro and simmer for 25 minutes. Drain the farro, reserving 1 cup of the cooking liquid.

Meanwhile, in a medium saucepan over medium, heat 2 tablespoons of the oil. Reduce the heat to medium-low, then add the onion and cook for 5 minutes, or until it has softened. Add the garlic and the thyme and cook for 1 minute more.

In a medium skillet over medium, heat the remaining tablespoon of oil until hot. Reduce the heat to medium-low, then add the mushrooms and saute for about 5 minutes, stirring occasionally, until the liquid they give off has evaporated. Set aside.

In a medium saucepan, combine the broth and the reserved farro cooking liquid. Bring the mixture to a simmer. Turn down the heat to low. Add the drained farro to the onion; cook, stirring constantly, for 1 minute. Add the wine to the farro and simmer 1 to 2 minutes, until it is absorbed.

Add the hot stock mixture to the farro in 3 increments, letting it simmer until almost all the liquid has been absorbed before adding each new batch of stock. This should take about 25 minutes. When the farro is tender, stir in the mushroom mixture along with the cheese, then season with salt and pep-

Little Changes in Prep Football Polls

BY DAVID BASHORE

TWIN FALLS • There wasn't any change atop any division of the state high school media poll, released Tuesday.

There was hardly any change at all.

Just two new teams came into the rankings - Rocky Mountain in Class 5A and Troy in 1A-I – and there was precious little shuffling among the 28 other teams who remained in the polls for another week.

Hagerman and Dietrich remained entrenched atop the 1A-I and 1A-II rankings, respectively. Hagerman got 11 of the 12 first place votes, the other going to second-ranked Kamiah. Butte County, Grace and Troy were third through fifth in the 1A-I rankings.

Dietrich was a unanimous selection in the 1A-II poll, with Lighthouse Christian, Garden Valley, Castleford and Carey finishing off the poll.

CSI Women Optimistic about This Season

BY NICK RULAND

nruland@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • CSI women's basketball coach Randy Rodgers knows that if his team is going to bounce back from just the second sub-.500 season in his 10-year tenure, it will need to stay healthy and a few of his 11 freshmen must stand out.

All true, of course, but three of his sophomores have a slightly different take. Monday marked the beginning of the 2012-2013 season for the Golden Eagles, and naturally they enter it brimming with optimism. Perhaps more importantly - according to returners Megan Tanner, Adriana "Shorty" Dent and Jessy Saint-Felix there's a brand new feel to this year's squad, one that is sure to spark to a turnaround. "(The team) got together this summer and connected," Dent said. "We shared a lot of laughs."

The trio, who will be counted on for leadership, major minutes and major production, said that this freshman crop connects with the sophomore bunch much better then last year's did — when the three were

"We work as a team more," Tanner said. "Last year we were more by ourselves."

Post Saint-Felix tore her anterior cruciate ligament late last season and is expected to be one of the strong points of the team. She's impressed with the newcomers.

"They are all winners," Saint-Felix said. "They don't like losing."

Rodgers acknowledged that his sophomores have "accepted his freshmen" better then most at this point, just two days into fall practice. But cultivating team synergy only matters when players have the basics

31-5 on the year, but did not place in the NCJAA Division I Tournament, losing to Indian Hills Community College.

"It's been a tough run the last two years," said redshirt sophomore and first-year scholarship player Jon Pulsifer, a former Twin Falls High School star. CSI returns four players, but only Pulsifer and Sebastien "Seabass" Michineau played meaningful minutes on the '11-'12 squad. "We have to be leaders and show all the freshmen what coach wants them to do," Michineau said.

Michineau and Pulsifer may be significant contributors. But they may not.

After two days of practice, Gosar has only a vague notion of what his team will look like in November.

"We are just trying to make sure we're getting in the kind of court shape we need to be in," Gosar said. "We're looking for different combinations and which ones work best together. I'm seeing what guys can and can't do. Some guys do better off ball screens, some guys shoot a little better than others. The talent is spread evenly so that we can compete against each other."

Jamestown, N.Y., native Jaysean Paige was perhaps the most impressive player at Tuesday's practice, gliding through conditioning drills well ahead of his teammates, flicking his wrists a foot behind the three point line and hitting bull's eye, elevating over teammates for rebounds and, at just 6-foot-1, dunking with ease. "He can sprint all day long," Gosar said of Paige. "He is a special athlete with a high-level skill set. He could be a good player if his work ethic is good." Tuesday was about Gosar's players proving their work ethic. It's early, but many could use improvement. Gosar said that not all players come into the program with perfect habits, but they'll be taught them.

"This is about mental toughness and getting through practice, getting through being yelled at a lot," Pulsifer said. "It is very tough because he wants us to learn that it is not going to be easy. Maybe (Gosar) is being harder because he sees more potential in this team, but whatever it is he is doing it for a reason and I'm 100 percent with it."

If there were any freshmen who had been coddled at their high school programs, Tuesday surely was a wakeup call, even if summer practices may have been an introduction to a program that expects nothing less then a national championship.

There was a canyon run to, according to Gosar, "reinforce classroom expectations." It came after a grueling conditioning portion of the practice which included suicides for each player who missed a free throw.

But the physical pain was likely preferred over the psychological. Gosar admonished many of his players Tuesday for failing — mentally and physically – in drills.

It's all a test. "We put them through a little bit of adversity and we see how they respond," Gosar said. "They'll figure it out that they respond a lot better when they act as a team and not individuals."

"We are so young, what we are trying to do with this group is have them understand what this level is about," Rodgers said. "They have to understand how hard you have to play, how tough it is, and the stance you have to stay in for longer periods of time."

While many of Rodgers' freshmen have either played in or won state championships in high school, they did it lacking some of the skills that translate directly to the next level. Most of them, Rodgers said, played zone defense. The Golden Eagles play man-to-man.

"I guess it feels easier to teach zone then it is man (at the high school level)," Rodgers said. "But now (we are teach-

And for now, the Golden Eagles are embracing the challenges together with their newfound camaraderie. But the true tests of the team's collective spirits lay ahead. It won't be until a depth chart is made that chemistry is known - intrasquad competition has the power to unite or destroy.

"Until you play the first game and someone has to sit, everyone feels like a starter," Rodgers said. "Everyone is happy-golucky. But they have to realize that even though they started in high school, they might not be starters here; they might not even play the minutes they want to play. Reds Delay Cards' Celebrations

ST. LOUIS • Mat Latos won his fourth straight decision to finish the regular season and Scott Rolen homered off Chris Carpenter, helping the Cincinnati Reds keep the St. Louis Cardinals' postseason plans on hold with a 3-1 victory Tuesday night.

The Cardinals' magic number for clinching the second NL wild card remained at one with a game to go, and they were left in the uncomfortable position of watching the Dodgers on television and rooting for a loss for the second straight night. Los Angeles, which began the day two games back with two remaining, played at home against the Giants later Tuesday. The result of that game wasn't available at press time.

The 37-year-old Carpenter (0-2) has a wealth of biggame experience and went 4-0 in the postseason last fall for the World Series champions, memorably outdueling Philadelphia ace Roy Halladay in Game 5 of the NL division series.

MARLINS 4, METS 3, 11 INNINGS

MIAMI • New York Mets knuckleballer R.A. Dickey struck out one-shot wonder Adam Greenberg, but also gave up two homers in his final start of a Cy Young-hopeful season and the Mets lost to the Marlins.

The Marlins' Greenberg struck out on three pitches against Dickey when he batted for the first time in seven years in the sixth inning. Greenberg signed a one-day contract before the game, his first since he was beaned in his major league debut in 2005.

WASHINGTON • A smile across Adam crept LaRoche's face while he rounded the bases Tuesday night after hitting his career-high 33rd homer to become the third Nationals player with 100 RBIs in a season, another celebratory moment for NL East champion Washington during a victory over the Phillies.

PIRATES 5, BRAVES 1 PITTSBURGH • Kevin Correia pitched effectively into the seventh inning, Garrett Jones homered and the Pirates won consecutive games for the first time in four weeks, beating the Braves.

pitched six shutout innings, Jason Castro homered and the Astros beat the Cubs in a matchup of 100-loss teams.

The season-ending series between NL Central clubs marks the first meeting of 100-loss team in the majors since 1962, when the Cubs played the New York Mets.

Houston (55-106) threw its third straight shutout and won for the fifth time in six games. The Astros have already matched last year's franchise-worst loss total with one game left.

American League ORIOLES 1, RAYS o

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. • Chris Davis homered for the sixth straight game and the Baltimore Orioles overcame a club-record 15 strikeouts by James Shields to push the AL East race to the final day of the season. Baltimore began the night one game behind the first-place New York Yankees, who were in extra innings against Boston late Tuesday.

Orioles rookie Miguel Gonzalez (9-4) limited the Rays to two singles over 61-3 innings. The right-hander walked two and struck out seven before manager Buck Showalter turned the game over to the bullpen. Davis joined Hall of Famer Reggie Jackson as the only Baltimore players to homer in six consecutive games, connecting off Shields (15-10) in the fourth. The Orioles managed only one other hit Nate McLouth's sixthinning single - in Shields' third complete game.

ROYALS 4, TIGERS 2 KANSAS CITY, Mo. • Miguel Cabrera had two hits and drove in two runs before leaving in the fifth inning, and the Kansas City Royals rallied to beat his AL Central champion Detroit Tigers.

INDIANS 4, WHITE SOX 3, 12 INNINGS CLEVELAND • Jason Donald singled home the winning run with two outs in the 12th inning. Lonnie Chisenhall doubled with one out against Matt Thornton (4-10), who then intentionally walked Russ Canzler.

BLUE JAYS 4, TWINS 3 TORONTO • Chad Jenkins earned his first major league win, Kelly Johnson hit a two-run home run and the Toronto Blue Jays beat the Minnesota Twins 4-3.

Mariners to Shrink Safeco Field Dimensions in 2013

ASSOCIATED PRESS

SEATTLE • Tired of seeing fly balls die in a cavernous outfield and free-agent sluggers choose more hitterfriendly settings, the Seattle Mariners are bringing in the fences at Safeco Field.

The Mariners announced Tuesday they will move in the fences for the 2013 season after years of debate on the impact one of the more spacious outfields in baseball was having on their offense.

"It's all about just the ballpark playing fair and I think they've done a great job with the changes they are planning on making. I just think it's a win-win situation," Seattle manager Eric Wedge said. "I think it's fantastic for our younger position players, it's a more attractive location now for players outside the organization who might consider coming this direction, so I think it's a good decision."

The biggest change will come in the left-center field alley, where the fence will move in as much as 17 feet. The left-center power alley is currently 390 feet, but will be at 378 next season. From there, instead of a rounded fence, the wall will move straight out to its deepest point at 405 feet, four feet shorter than currently. The straighter line of the fence will lead to the 17-foot

Seattle general manager Jack Zduriencik said many factors were taken into account when determining whether changes to the field would be made, including Seattle's notoriously chilly April and May. A small group of Mariners front-office personnel were brought together in the spring to begin study on whether the fences should be moved and where the dimensions should be. Led by assistant general manager Jeff Kingston, the group determined center field and left-center field were the areas most outside the norm.

"When we looked at the numbers in relation to the other 29 parks, those were the two areas that really stuck out. We felt like we needed to make an adjustment," Kingston said. The left-field corner will also see a significant change, with the removal of the handoperated scoreboard that raised the fence to 16 feet. The fence height will now be a uniform 8 feet from one foul pole to the other and the hand-operated scoreboard will be relocated to a yet-tobe-determined location.

The work on changing the dimensions is expected to begin soon after the conclusion of the season. The left-field and right-field lines are the only two listed dimensions that won't change. The deepest point in the park - just to the left of center field - will move in 4 feet to 405, while straightaway center will be 401. Right-center field will also come in 4 feet to 381.

"Our goal was to create an atmosphere here that wouldn't punish pitching but also make it a fair ballpark," Zduriencik said. "The dimensions the committee came up with and recommended are the dimensions that will accomplish that goal. We think the park will play fair."

This is the first change to the dimensions of the ballpark since it opened in 1999. Hitters have long complained of the cavernous dimensions in the outfield and the numbers show Safeco Field to be one of the more unfriendly parks for hitters in baseball. Pitchers love the vast outfield, and fly ball pitchers like current Mariners starter Jason Vargas - have thrived throwing in Seattle.

"I don't think you change the way you pitch based on the ballpark that you are in, especially when the dimensions aren't going to change that much," Vargas said. "It's still going to be fair."

But on this day - when top-level swimming featured its first male vs. female racing — Steffen made sure it was ladies first.

She held off the fastcharging men from Hungary and Ukraine to anchor her country to victory in a 4x50-meter medley relay at a short-course World Cup meet. She was embraced by smiling teammates as she jumped out of the pool.

"I only wanted to give my best and I did," she said.

Germany gambled by putting Steffen – a world record-holder in the 50 freestyle - on the final leg. But it proved a successful tactic when her teammates gave her a lead of half a pool length. Hungary's Krisztian Takacs and Ukraine's Sergii Frolov closed the gap, but Steffen guided Germany home by a comfortable margin.

Germany finished in 1 minute, 43.21 seconds -2.10 seconds faster than Hungary. Ukraine was another 0.58 seconds back.

"It's enjoyable and good team building," said Steffen, surrounded by her three teammates before they received a gold medal. "It was also good to see what I can do under pressure against the men."

A mixed freestyle relay is scheduled for Wednesday, the last day of the two-day meet.

The mixed relays feature two men and two women on each team. The format is being introduced at all eight World Cup meets this season in what swimming's governing body says is an attempt to move the sport forward. If these relays prove successful, FINA executive director Cornel Marculescu said they could be part of the short-course world championship in December.

Unlike mixed relays in some other sports, like biathlon, the swim teams can put the women in any of the four legs. That provides plenty of lead changes and adds an extra element of drama, making it difficult to tell which team actually has the edge at any point.

TEXANS REMAIN ATOP AP PRO32

ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK • The Houston Texans are on top of the AP Pro32 NFL power rankings again, and getting ready for the Monday night spotlight when they visit the New York Jets.

The Texans became the first team to retain the No. 1 spot after a resounding 38-14 rout of the Tennessee Titans to remain unbeaten in four games.

The other two unbeatens, Atlanta and Arizona, needed game-deciding field goals to stay perfect.

A week after becoming the fourth team in as many weeks to ascend to No. 1, Houston received 11 firstplace votes and 382 points Tuesday from the 12-person panel of media members who regularly cover the NFL. Atlanta remained second with 369 points, and Arizona was fifth with one first-place vote and 342 points. All eyes will be on the Texans come Monday night, when quarterback Matt Schaub and defensive end J.J. Watt lead them against the Jets in New Jersey. The Jets dropped five places to 23rd after a 34-0 loss at home to San Francisco, which moved up a spot to fourth, just behind Balti-

"The Texans are making it look easy right now and have shown themselves to be the most well-rounded team in the NFL," said John Lynch of Fox Sports, and "J.J. Watt is having an MVP type season."

ESPN's Chris Berman chimed in that the Texans have "answered every test with authority?

The Falcons beat Carolina 30-28 on Matt Bryant's 40yard field goal with 5 seconds

"Something special happening with the Falcons," said Rich Gannon of CBS Sports/Sirius XM, "and the players believe it as well." The Cardinals rallied against Miami to force overtime on Kevin Kolb's 15-yard touchdown pass to Andre Roberts with 22 seconds left, then won 24-21 on Jay Feely's 46-yard field goal 6:31 into OT.

"They have won eight in a row at home," said the Chicago Tribune's Dan Pompei, who voted Arizona No. 1 for the second week in a row. "Even if a lot of the wins have been ugly, they still count."

"If the NFL conducted its coach of the year balloting at the end of September, Ken Whisenhunt would be the slam-dunk choice," said the Dallas Morning News' Rick Gosselin of the Cardinals

NATURALLY POWERING TEAM USA

DEAR ABBY: My husband, "Aaron," had an affair with the woman next door. We were close friends. I found out three months ago, and needless to say I'm not happy about it. My husband and I spent a lot of time with her (he obviously more than I).

DEAR ${f A}{f B}{f B}{f Y}$ Jeanne Phillips

Aaron swears the affair is over, and he wants us to become a close threesome again. (She's in the process of divorcing her husband, who knows nothing about the affair.)

The three of us have gone to the beach, to the lake, dancing - just like old times. My husband is thrilled; I am miserable.

I am not convinced the affair is over, so I feel compelled to keep my eye on them. Every time we go out together, I come home upset and frustrated. Aaron savs I'm being unreasonable and keeping him on a "short leash." He sees no reason why we can't all be friends — but I have no desire to be friends with her.

Aaron and I have been together more than 20 years. I don't want to divorce him. I need to know what to do without driving him back into her arms. I have suggested counseling. He says he doesn't need it. What do you think I should do about this awkward situation?

- NOTLOVING MYNEIGHBOR DEAR NOT LOVING:

Three is a crowd, and your husband's insistence that you continue this painful and degrading threesome is highly suspicious. Please waste no time in getting counseling. If your husband refuses, go without him. It will make you stronger and help you to feel better about yourself at a time when you need it most.

You may not "want" a divorce, but be smart and discuss your options and a fair division of property with a lawyer NOW, so should a divorce be thrust upon you, you will be prepared in advance. You should also talk to a CPA, who can help you locate all the assets in your marriage. This will also give you peace of mind when you tell your husband that the threesome is history. I wish you the best of luck.

DEAR ABBY: My longtime friend "Mona," a busy profeshad a baby last year. Her son is now a toddler. Aside from his regular day care. Mona is lining up baby sitters so she can resume her social life.

She has asked me to volunteer. I do not relate well to young children. I have had no experience with them and. quite frankly, want none.

Mona has always known this, but when I told her I didn't think it would work out for me to baby-sit, she took offense and accused me of being a bad friend.

Now I feel guilty because Mona has always been good to me. However, I'm more than a little resentful that she put me in this position, knowing how I feel about kids. How should I handle this?

- NOTKEEN ON KIDS DEAR NOT KEEN ON KIDS: True friends don't impose on their friends for baby-sitting services when they've been told it would be awkward. Stand your ground and don't allow yourself to manipulated. shouldn't feel guilty about your feelings. Many people feel the same way.

DEAR ABBY: This morning as I was wheeling my grocery cart to the "return" area in our local grocery store parking lot, a boy of about 9 had the nerve to tell me, "Don't smoke."

While I agree with parents who teach their children that smoking is harmful, I also feel they should teach their children to respect their elders (I'm 52) and to mind their own business.

Am I wrong to feel this child was out of line?

- LIGHTING UP INMIMS, FLA. DEARLIGHTING UP: The child was not being disrespectful - he was being hon-

Today is Wednesday, Oct. 3, the 277th day of 2012. There are 89 days left in the

Today's Highlight:

On Oct. 3, 1962, astronaut Wally Schirra became the fifth American to fly in space as he blasted off from Cape Canaveral aboard the Sigma 7 on a 9-hour flight.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:

In 1789, President George Washington declared Nov. 26, 1789, a day of Thanksgiving to express gratitude for the creation of the United States of America.

In 1863, President Abraham Lincoln proclaimed the last Thursday in November Thanksgiving Day.

In 1932, Iraq became independent of British administration.

In 1942, President Franklin D. Roosevelt established the Office of Economic Stabilization.

In 1951, the New York Giants captured the National League pennant by a score of 5-4 as Bobby Thomson hit a three-run homer off the Brooklyn Dodgers' Ralph Branca in the "shot heard 'round the world.'

In 1952, Britain conducted its first atomic test as it detonated a 25-kiloton device in the Monte Bello Islands off Australia. The situation comedy "Our Miss Brooks;" formerly a radio show, premiered on CBS-TV with Eve Arden again in the title role.

In 1962, the British musical "Stop the World – I Want to Get Off" opened on Broadway with Anthony Newley and Anna Quayle reprising their West End

In 1967, folk singer-songwriter Woody Guthrie died in New York at age 55.

In 1970, the National Oceanic & Atmospheric Administration (NOAA) was established under the Department of Commerce.

In 1992, Barack Obama married Michelle Robinson at the Trinity United Church of Christ in Chicago.

In 1995, the jury in the O.J. Simpson murder trial found the former football star not guilty of the 1994 slayings of his former wife. Nicole Brown Simpson, and Ronald Goldman (however, Simpson was later found liable in a civil trial).

In 2008, O.J. Simpson was found guilty of robbing two sports-memorabilia dealers at gunpoint in a Las Vegas hotel room. (Simpson was later sentenced to nine to 33 years in prison.)

Ten years ago: Five people were shot to death in the Washington, D.C. area within a 14-hour period, sparking the hunt for the "Beltway Sniper." Hurricane Lili gave Louisiana's coast a 100mile-an-hour battering. Producer-director Bruce Paltrow, 58, died in Rome, Italy.

Five years ago: North Korea agreed to provide a complete list of its nuclear programs and disable its facilities at its main reactor complex by December 31, 2007. (However, North Korea later said it would move to restore its nuclear reactor, saying the United States had failed to follow through with promised incentives.) President George W. Bush quietly vetoed expansion of a children's health insurance pro-

One year ago: An Italian appeals court freed Amanda Knox of Seattle after four years in prison, tossing murder convictions against Knox and an ex-boyfriend in the stabbing of their British roommate, Meredith Kercher. Three scientists, Bruce Beutler of the U.S., Jules Hoffmann of France and Canadian-born Ralph Steinman (who had died three days earlier), won the Nobel Prize in medicine.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

'Study from new books but from old teachers."

— Turkish proverb

Turkey's Senior Team won its country's first-ever European Teams Championship a couple of years ago. This hand features a well-reasoned play by Orhan Ekinci, a member of that team, reported by Erdal Sidor, Turkey's Open Team captain.

Against four spades, West led his singleton heart, and South rose with dummy's ace. The play seems straightforward: Draw trumps, then pitch a heart on the third diamond and play on clubs for 11 tricks if the club queen sits onside, or for 10 if not.

But Ekinci had to reassess when, at trick two, he discovered he had a trump loser. How to proceed? One line would be to play three rounds of diamonds, discarding a heart from hand, then finesse East for the club queen. East was less likely to have the club ace as well as his strong heart holding, for then he might have opened one heart. And, indeed, that is how the play went at many tables.

However, Ekinci already knew that West held a singleton heart plus four spades, whereas East had six cards in the majors. If West also held four diamonds, he could be endplayed. So declarer cashed three rounds of diamonds, shedding a heart, then led dummy's fourth diamond, on which he pitched his last heart. West won, but was now endplayed in the black suits.

Incidentally, had East produced the fourth diamond, Ekinci would have ruffed high and played a low spade. He would still have come home had the club queen been well-placed for him.

ANSWER: It looks tempting to raise diamonds, but that underplays the strength of your hand. In many ways it is actually better to respond one no-trump, bypassing spades but getting the general strength of your hand across, or simply to bid one spade. The latter course risks being raised on a three-card suit, but the general strength of your hand should compensate for the weak spades.

IF OCTOBER 3 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: You understand the ways of the world of business and are willing to give tit for tat, so should do well in your job, career or business during the next four weeks. It isn't "all business" with you, however, as you are willing to be sympathetic when understanding and compassion are called for, too. You might be able to lay the groundwork for longterm success in late November or early December when you will get definite guidance from the universe. The people who have your best interests at heart will grow closer. Extreme ambition could tempt you to burn bridges after the first of the year, but wait until March, when your judgment and luck is at its best, to make crucial decisions or to launch important

HOROSCOPE Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): In the digital age, change occurs faster. You can spread the word over your social network with a click on a webpage or shoot an impromptu picture by picking up your phone. Embrace modern tools.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Forgiveness won't change the past, but it will brighten the future. You won't always be able to tell the difference between someone who will be a trusted friend and an acquaintance with an agenda.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Some people come into your life as blessings. Others come into your life as lessons. It is easy for you to see when you should be a team player and when you should stand up for principles independ-

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Let the sun shine in. It may not be possible to see positive changes in your life if you are surrounded by negative people who block the light. Win kudos from the higher-ups by showing that you are professional.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): The best journeys are not always traveled in a straight line. There is nothing wrong with a few side excursions to explore something new and wonderful. Give yourself permission to get sidetracked.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Due diligence turns dreams into reality. Don't take something as gospel just because that was what you were told. Dig beneath the surface to find the true story. Hold off on a major expenditure.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Kindness is the oil that takes the friction out of life. No matter what you imagine someone is thinking or what you guess might be happening outside your scope of vision, just believe and have faith in kindness.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Trust takes years to build, seconds to break, and forever to repair. Aimless bickering and nitpicking could lead you absolutely nowhere. Don't waste your time debating a meaningless and trivial issue.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Opportunities are lost in the blink of an eye, but regret can last a lifetime. You may make snap judgments regarding situations or people but intuitions are slightly off. Take time to gather more information.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Develop a positive presence. Every time you subtract a negative from your life, you make room for something more positive. Role models are fine, but you can't copy someone's style forever.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Grow upward by gravitating toward a guru. Be grateful, however, for the difficult people in your life. They show you exactly who you do not want to be and the behavior you do not want to emulate.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Being a success in life is like photography. Just focus on what's important, develop from the negatives and if things don't work out, take another shot. You will never succeed without trying.

SUDOKU

Sudoku is a number-placing puzzle based on a 9x9 grid with several given numbers. The object is to place the numbers 1 to $\frac{1}{2}$ 9 in the empty squares so that each row, each column and each 3x3 box contains the same number only once. The difficulty level of the Conceptis Sudoku increases from Monday to Sunday.
