Insanity Defense Ban Challenged

Defense attorney for accused murderer says Idaho's ban on the ability to use an insanity defense deprives him of his constitutional rights.

TWIN FALLS • The defense attorney for murder suspect Damon Azure has filed a motion seeking to overturn Idaho's ban on using an insanity defense.

But Marilyn Paul, Twin Falls County's chief public defender, faces a high hurdle for her arguments: The Idaho Supreme Court has already upheld the ban as constitutional in at least five rulings since 1990.

Azure, 32, of Rupert, is accused of Twin Falls County sheriff's deputies were called to 3500 E. 4070 N. at about 11:20 a.m. Feb. 12 to check on a report of a possible vehicle-pedestrian accident. When they arrived, they reportedly found Seanachan Azure lying in a pool of blood. Damon Azure was allegedly in a nearby car, where deputies reported finding a handgun and ammunition.

TWIN FALLS • First Federal hopes to expand its downtown Twin Falls office and consolidate its operations. On Tuesday, the Twin Falls Urban Renewal Agency will consider a development agreement with First Federal to purchase a parking lot and use it for additional employee parking af-

In May, the Twin Falls City Council declared its intent to sell a littleused, city-owned lot. The URA bought it, then asked for proposals on how to use it. First Federal was the only entity to submit a proposal. First Federal wants to buy the parking lot for $60,000 - about $2,000more than what the URA paid.

According to the agenda packet for the Twin Falls Urban Renewal Agency's Tuesday meeting, First Federal is proposing to expand its current operations. The new facility will be approximately 20,000 square feet, and will be located adjacent to its current building on 4th Avenue North.

That will allow the bank to consolidate its operations onto one campus. "In summary, First Federal would use the former parking lot as a parking lot in the future for its employees and customers," the agenda says. According to the agenda, First Federal expects to invest a minimum of $1 million into the project, which in-

Heidi Heil, funeral director at Serenity Funeral Chapel, pauses for a portrait at the corner of Dierkes Street North and 2nd Avenue North on Friday in Twin Falls. Heil is hoping the highway department places a crosswalk for students behind Magic Valley High School.

Business Owner Hopes to Add Crosswalk Near High School

BY MELISSA DAVLIN mdavlin@magicvallev.com

TWIN FALLS • Every school morning, Heidi Heil watches Magic Valley High School students dodge traffic while crossing 2nd Avenue

"I've been here six years," said Heil, who owns Serenity Funeral Chapel. "It's been a problem all along."

Heil hopes to convince the Idaho Transportation Department to add a crosswalk behind Magic Valley High School on 2nd Avenue North. But ITD has considered doing so in the past and said it's not needed.

Magic Valley High School is located on Main

Avenue, but its back faces 2nd Avenue North. Heil, whose business is located across the street, said she sees multiple students cross before and after school.

In Idaho, school zones with slower speed limits and crosswalks must exist in front of a school, but aren't required behind the build-

Currently, motorists on 2nd must slow down for a school zone for Lincoln Elementary, located down the street, but not until after they've passed Magic Valley High School.

That upsets Heil.

"Are the alternative high school students not as important?" she said.

What You Can Do

If you see a traffic problem in your neighborhood, what can you do?

It depends. If you live in city limits, call City Hall and ask who may be able to help. If you live in the county, contact the county commissioners' office. Each office can tell you who to contact.

If it's a main artery, the street may be under the jurisdiction of Idaho Transportation

In all cases, a change in speed limit or addition of a crosswalk will likely require a safety study.

The Twin Falls students are getting more active through the Fuel Up To Play 60 program.

Students who are on their best behavior at school can earn a little extra recess time. And if they take part in a lunchtime walking club, they earn tickets to redeem for prizes. Next week, students will be asked to sign a pledge that they'll try to get one hour of physical activity each day.

Another piece of the Fuel Up to Play 60 program is introducing students to healthy foods such as low-fat dairy products, fruits, vegetables and whole grains.

"The food piece is big," Lincoln Elementary vice principal Angela Hild

A few times a year, the school hosts tasting events during parent nights.

Children try foods – such as kiwis and bite-size peppers – that are sometimes new for them.

"It's things that students might not normally see," Hild said. It's also a chance for parents to learn about different, cost-effective food choices for their children, she said. Lincoln Elementary is one of 12 south-central Idaho schools to receive Fuel Up to Play 60 funding for this school year.

Another five area schools are still using funding they received in previous years.

Fuel Up to Play 60 was founded by the National Dairy Council and National Football League, in collaboration with the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

At Jerome Middle School, part of the money this year will be used to purchase disc golf equipment.

High Wastewater Project Bill Surprises Wendell Council

BY BLAIR KOCH

WENDELL • Summit Excavation, of Twin Falls, must now wait on payment for lagoon construction in Wendell until city leaders and J-U-B Construction, which is overseeing the wastewater project, discuss how to handle a nearly $19,500 cost overrun by the contractor.

During Thursday's meeting, the council considered a bill of about $415,500 from Summit for work completed on the city's ongoing waste water improvement project. Payment was tabled after Mayor Brad Christopherson explained why the city didn't feel it should "leave city taxpayers on the hook," for the $19,500 change order submitted for rock excavation.

Christopherson said since that portion of the project was bid as "lump sum," and the extra cost incurred should be the contractor's burden.

He said he was "worried" about the city approving change orders for lump sum bids after researching the is-

Christopherson pointed out the contractor would likely make up the difference with lower-than-actual costs incurred for things like traffic control, which were also bid in lump-sum amounts.

"We agreed to $15,000 unit price for traffic control and after a couple of days the road has been closed. Although he'll have to pay wages for the couple of days there were flaggers out it seems that's where you'll hope at the end to have made more," he said. J-U-B Engineer Rob Hegstrom proposed the city could "approve the payment application" but deduct the item in dispute. Instead, the council tabled the request.

Christopherson said the city may end up paying the cost overruns, but it will meet with J-U-B managers next week to sort the matter out.

"We need to wrap our arms around what we can really do and what the law is," city treasurer Deborah Gibbs said. "Once that is complete the council can approve payment."

The sewer project is near "substantial completion," Hegstrom said, although it remains unknown if the new sewer lagoons will be fully operational by year's end.

FIRE RESTRICTIONS LIFTED

TIMES-NEWS

TWIN FALLS • State and federal wildfire officials are lifting the Stage 1 Fire Restrictions on all lands in south-central Idaho by the end of today.

The ban was originally set in place in response to this summer's rapid growth of wildfires across the state. Lifting the restrictions allows the public to build campfires and use charcoal barbecue or sheepherder stoves. However, the public is urged to use water to put out all fires and soak all charcoal and hot ash from barbecues and stoves.

The restriction was enforced throughout all of Cassia, Gooding, Jerome, Lincoln, Minidoka and Twin Falls counties, and portions of Blaine and Camas counties. Restrictions in Sawtooth National Forest lands within Elmore, Camas and Blaine counties are also lift-

"We recognize vegetation conditions are still dry, but cooler temperatures and shorter days are bringing relief," said Boise National Forest Fire Management Officer Bob Shindelar.

the case and that he wasn't competent enough to make his own treatment decisions. At the time, documents showed the court ruled Azure was dangerously mentally ill and presented a substantial risk to other people.

Azure was sent to the Idaho Security Medical Program and held for 90 days in a maximum security environment. In June, a Twin Falls County 5th District judge determined Azure was fit enough for the case to continue after reviewing a psychological evaluation.

Decades of Debate

The Idaho Legislature abolished the insanity defense in the state in 1982.

On Sept. 27, Paul filed a motion asking Judge Randy Stoker to declare the ban on the insanity defense unconstitutional.

In her argument she wrote, "insanity as a defense to criminal conduct is deeply rooted in the history and current legal and societal morals of this and most other countries." Idaho's ban on the ability to use an insanity defense deprives Azure of his constitutional rights, specifically due process and the prohibition against cruel and unusual punishment, Paul wrote. She also argued that the inability to use an insanity defense denies Azure his fundamental right to present a complete defense to his charges. The argument included pieces of a ruling from 2011, when the Idaho Supreme Court rebuffed a challenge to the law by John Joseph Delling. Delling killed two people and attempted to murder a third, then pleaded guilty to two counts of second-degree murder on the condition that he be able to appeal the matter to the Supreme Court.

In the Delling ruling, the five justices unanimously upheld the ban, repeating several past arguments including that the state's current system still has protections for people too mentally ill to truly understand their actions.

"For example," Chief Justice Roger Burdick wrote, "a person who has committed a criminal act without being conscious of it is legally incapable of committing a crime?

Paul and Azure are also seeking to set aside the murder indictment against him, alleging that six of the grand jurors had some kind of family or friend connection to law enforcement. These jurors' potential bias should have been examined more closely, another motion by Paul alleges.

The motion also argues

one juror was previously on a grand jury, another may have known one of the witnesses in the proceedings, and that the defense believes there was not enough instruction given to the jury. And, Paul asked Stoker to move the proceedings outside of Twin Falls County to ensure a fair and impartial Paul also filed requests to seal each motion. Stoker denied those requests, but has not yet ruled on the motions themselves.

Azure's trial is scheduled to begin Dec. 3.

classes are indoors during the winter. Students can also use it to get in some activity during lunchtime.

"We're trying to increase opportunities for students to be active during the day," Stump said.

On the nutrition side, the school had a "grab and go" breakfast in the past about once a month.

The school has received $4,800in funding over the past three or four years.

At Lincoln Elementary, it's the second year students have participated in the program. This year, $800 in funding will be split between nutrition and physical activity initiatives. "This year, we're looking at Frisbee golf," Hild said, and the plan is to put in at least two holes. Later this year, Lincoln Elementary will also offer four-ounce yogurt smoothies to students on Friday mornings. Hild said in past years, students have "vied for it" and saw who could get into line first. Fourth and fifth-graders in the school's "Pride Patrol" leadership group get involved in helping organize Fuel Up to Play 60 activities.

Later this school year, the group plans to organize a basketball tournament. When it comes to getting parents involved, there's a schoolwide wellness plan at Lincoln Elementary. For special events like birthdays and Halloween, parents are encouraged to bring in healthier foods in addition to treats.

Nathan Jerke, public information specialist for the Idaho Department of Transportation, said the department didn't feel the crosswalk was required behind the high school.

When Heil requested the crosswalk before, ITD did a traffic study and talked to the school district about their thoughts. ITD's traffic safety officer concluded a crosswalk wasn't necessary, Jerke said, though he couldn't recall discussion about extending the school zone.

There is a crosswalk the next street over at Lincoln Elementary School, Jerke pointed out. And technically, motorists must stop for pedestrians at every intersection, regardless of whether there are two lines painted on the ground.

"Even if it's not marked, it's still a crosswalk," Jerke said.

But Heil said that doesn't happen in practice. Walking to the elementary school crosswalk would adds five minutes to students' trip across the street. And when they do try to cross at Dierkes Street, motorists don't always stop.

On April 2, a 17-year-old cyclist was hit while trying to cross.

The cyclist was cited for failing to yield, said city of Twin Falls public information officer Joshua Palmer.

Regardless of the cause of the April accident, Palmer said the city supports adding a crosswalk behind the school. "We're concerned about citizen safety, and any way we can encourage that is honestly something we're for," Palmer said.

But the issue is in ITD's hands. Heil hopes to convince the department the crosswalk and school zone are needed.

"We're talking about the safety of our children and pedestrians here," she said.

SYRIAN REGIME OPENS NEW URBAN FRONT

BEIRUT (AP) • The Syrian military opened a second urban front Friday, attacking the rebel stronghold of Homs with the most intense artillery barrage in months and putting opposition fighters there and in Syria's largest city, Aleppo, increasingly on the defen-

Syria's civil war has been locked in a bloody stalemate, and embattled President Bashar Assad could extend his hold on power if he retakes Aleppo and Homs. Amateur video from Homs, a symbol of resistance, showed black columns of smoke rising from the city, as loud explosions went off every few sec-

While Assad stepped up attacks at home, tensions with neighboring Turkey flared again Friday, reviving fears that the 18-month-old conflict in Syria could ignite a regional conflagration.

The crisis began on Wednesday, when a Syrian shell killed five civilians in a Turkish border town and triggered unprecedented artillery strikes by Turkey, coupled with warnings that Turkey would no longer tolerate such acts. On Friday, a Syrian mortar round again hit inside Turkey, causing no injuries, and Turkish troops returned fire, the state-run news agency Anadolu

In the past, Turkey did not respond to stray Syrian shells, but Turkish Prime Minister Recep Tayyip Erdogan suggested Friday that those days are over. "I once again call on Assad's regime and its supporters: Do not try to test Turkey's patience, do not try to test Turkey's limits," Erdogan said. Earlier in the day, Turkey had deployed more troops on its border with Syr-

The U.S sided with Turkey, condemning what White House spokesman Josh Earnest called the "aggressive actions of the Syrians." Earnest said Turkey's response was appropriate and that the U.S. stands by Turkey, a NATO ally.

Still, there were signs that both sides are trying to defuse the situation. Since Wednesday's deadly shelling, Syria has pulled tanks and other military equipment away from the border, a Turkish Foreign Ministry official said, speaking on condition of anonymity in line with government regulations. He said the weaponry was moved far enough to remove the "perception of threat."

Turkey, along with other countries siding with the rebels, is averse to intervening militarily, while Assad has also tried to avoid provocations he believes would trigger a foreign intervention. Undeterred by its troubles with Turkey, the Syrian regime on Friday launched a new offensive against Homs, unleashing heavy shelling and air attacks. The attack is the worst Homs has seen in five months, said the Britain-based Syrian Observatory for Human Rights, which relies on a network of activists on the ground.

"Around dawn, the regime went crazy and started shelling hysterically," Homs-based activist Abu Rami told The Associated Press via Skype from rebel-held Old Homs. "An average of five rockets a minute are falling," he said, asking to be identified by his nickname for fear of reprisal. Most residents who still live in rebel-held areas around the city were hiding in shelters, he said.

Turkish military posted early Friday near the Turkey-Syria border in Akcakale.

Some Find Unemployment Drop Hard to Believe

WASHINGTON (AP) • Conspiracy theorists came out in force after the government reported a sudden drop in the U.S. unemployment rate one month before Election Day. Their message: The Obama administration would do anything to ensure a November victory, including manipulating unemployment data.

Officials at the Labor Department said the jobs figures are calculated by highly trained government employees without any political interference. Democrats and even some Republicans said they also found the charges im-

Yet that didn't stop the chatter. The allegations were a measure of how politicized the monthly unemployment report has become near the end of a campaign that has focused on the economy and jobs.

The conspiracy erupted after former General Electric CEO Jack Welch, tweeted his skepticism five minutes after the Labor Department announced that the unemployment rate had fallen to 7.8 percent in September. "Unbelievable jobs numbers...these Chicago guys will do anything...can't debate so change numbers," Welch tweeted, referring to the site of Obama campaign headquarters. Republican Rep. Allen West of Florida soon announced via Facebook that he agreed with Welch.

"Somehow by manipulation of data we are all of a sudden below 8 percent unemployment, a month from the presidential election," West wrote.

BO TALLIES 2012 DEFICIT AT $1.1T

WASHINGTON (AP) • A new estimate puts the deficit for the just-completed 2012 budget year at $1.1 trillion, the fourth straight year of trillion dollar deficits on President Barack Obama's

The result was a slight, $207 billion improvement from the 2011 deficit of $1.3 trillion. The bleak figures from the Congressional Budget Office, while expected, add fodder for the heated presidential campaign, in which Obama's handling of the economy and the budget is a main topic. Friday's release came as the government announced that the unemployment rate dropped to 7.8 percent last month, matching the rate when Obama took office.

"President Obama once promised to cut the deficit in half by the end of his first term, but ... he's broken that promise, and has presided over his fourth straight trillion-dollar budget deficit," said GOP vice presidential nominee Rep. Paul Ryan, R-Wis. "The President's reckless spending habits have burdened the American people with another $5.4 trillion in debt while failing to bring a real recovery for the 23 million Americans struggling for work or the 15 percent of Americans living in poverty."

The 2012 deficit was 7 percent of the size of the economy, an unsustainably high level. The figure is lower than the first three years of Obama's presidency, but higher than any other year since

The administration will release the official deficit numbers around mid-October, but they should line up closely with the CBO estimate, which showed that the government borrowed 31 cents for every dollar it spent.

The CBO estimate predicts a modest 3 percent increase over 2011 in both income tax and payroll tax receipts, reflecting the sluggish economic recovery. Corporate income tax receipts are way up - almost 34 percent - but most of that is a result of tax rules governing write-offs of business equipment.

Spending fell across a broad array of categories, the CBO said, but not Social Security and Medicare. Social Security payments rose by 6 percent, while Medicare grew by 3 percent, slightly less than in prior years.

Lower war costs meant a 3 percent decline in defense outlays, however, and the cost of unemployment benefits dropped 24 percent because fewer people have been receiving benefits recently. Medicaid costs dropped as well, because the federal government stopped paying a higher share of the program's costs.

Obama inherited an economy in recession and a deficit in excess of $1 trillion. He promised to cut the deficit in half by the end of his first term, but deficits have instead remained at eyepopping levels, including a record $1.4 trillion deficit in 2009 and deficits of $1.3 trillion in each of the past two

In Wednesday night's debate, Obama said he has a budget plan to shave $4 trillion from the deficit over the coming decade, but he counts $1 trillion from savings already accomplished in budget deals with Republicans last year and $848 billion from winding down wars in Iraq and Afghanistan.

Republican presidential nominee Mitt Romney promises to balance the budget within eight to 10 years, but hasn't illustrated how he would do so.

Test Scandal School Chief Gets 3.5 Years

EL PASO, Texas (AP) • A federal judge sentenced the former superintendent of El Paso Independent School District to more than three years in prison Friday for his participation in a conspiracy to improve the district's high-stakes tests scores by removing low-performing students from classrooms.

Garcia's Lorenzo scheme to prevent hundreds of sophomores from taking the accountability tests fooled authorities into believing that academic standards had improved in his West Texas district – resulting in a boost in federal funds and personal bonuses totaling at least and another in which he misled the school board so that his lover would receive a $450,000 no-bid contract to produce school materials.

On Friday, federal judge David Briones sentenced him to 31/2 years in prison on each fraud count, to be served at the same time. Garcia also was ordered to pay $180,000 in restitution and fined $56,500 the amount he received as a bonus from the district for its success on test scores.

"As superintendent, I am responsible for everything that went on in my district," Garcia said before the sentence was read facility. to him by federal judge David Briones.

Court documents indicate at least six other people helped Garcia organize the testing scheme

CHEERS AND JEERS

CHEERS to the cashier and customer at the EZ Money Payday Loans in Twin Falls who dealt with a Sept. 29 robbery.

Cool heads prevailed this past Saturday during the armed robbery at the store. The cashier attempted to act normal and began to help a customer who came in during the robbery. The cashier used a pen to write "911" on the palm of her hand and showed it to the customer, who then called the police.

The alleged robber fled on foot. Police responding to the 911 call stopped him and found the gun and the stolen money.

JEERS to irresponsible gun owners.

In the past week, the Times-News has published two articles about people who brought guns with them to a bar, got intoxicated and ended up in trouble. In one instance, a man — who admitted he was already in an emotional state after his girlfriend broke up with him - brought a gun to a bar and pulled it out during an argument. In another story, two men — who were reportedly extremely intoxicated - tossed their guns into the bushes when they heard the police were on their way.

In the words of Johnny Cash, "Don't bring your guns to town, son." And if you do, do so responsibly.

CHEERS to the Valley School District for resurrecting its Hazelton middle and high school music program after a five-year hiatus.

Kindergarten through 12th grade music teacher Robbie Hanchey was hired last year to bring the music program back to life.

The Valley School District's parent-teacher group raised money to get school musical instruments repaired and back into use.

Community members have also donated old instruments to the school that are in good condition.

"I've never seen a community so excited about music," Hanchey said.

Under Hanchey's leadership, the music program has taken off. There are 60 middle and high school band students this year. With just 600 students in the Valley School District, that's 10 percent.

It's a great success story and encouraging to see a school district investing in music programs at a time when schools are cutting the same across the nation.

UNION BOSS: FRIENDLY FIRE POSSIBLE IN BORDER SHOOTING

PHOENIX (AP) • The shooting of two U.S. Border Patrol agents near the Arizona-Mexico border may have been a case of friendly fire, a union chief for border agents and law enforcement officials said Friday.

The development could shake up the investigation into the death of one of the agents that re-ignited the political debate over security on the border.

George McCubbin, president of the National Border Patrol Council, said Friday he has learned new details from Border Patrol administrators that make him believe friendly fire could have played a part in the shooting.

"The only thing I can say is that the possibility of friendly fire is a higher likely scenario," McCubbin said, declining to elaborate on the new details.

Two law enforcement officials also told The Associated Press that the FBI is investigating the possibility that the fatal shooting of 30year-old Agent Nicholas Ivie and the wounding of another agent early Tuesday five miles from the border was a case of friendly fire.

The probe is examining whether the two agents exchanged gunfire Tuesday in the mistaken belief that each was being fired on by a hostile gunman.

The officials spoke on condition of anonymity because the matter is under investigation.

FBI officials in Washington and Phoenix declined to comment.

Investigators trying to determine whether friendly fire occurred in a shooting involving police would compare the ballistics of officers' guns with bullet slugs that were either recovered from or passed through an officer's body, said David Klinger, a criminology professor at the University of Missouri at St.

Louis and an expert in police shootings.

The officers involved in the case and any known witnesses also would be asked to provide accounts of such a shooting during interviews with investigators. And investigators would try to establish where officers and witnesses were positioned at the time of the shooting, Klinger said.

Conservation Group To Buy Wyoming Gas Lease

CHEYENNE, Wyo. (AP) • A land conservation group has reached a long-sought agreement with a petroleum company to prevent a controversial gas drilling project inside a national forest by buying out a vast area of federal oil and gas leases in northwest Wyoming.

The Trust for Public Land announced in Jackson on Friday that it plans to pay $8.75 million for nearly 58,000 acres of leases from Houston-based Plains Exploration and Production Co. The deal would end PXP's plans to drill 136 gas wells near the Hoback River headwaters inside Bridger-Teton National Forest.

"We have a deal to save the Hoback!" Deborah Love, the conservation group's Northern Rockies director, said to loud applause.

Never before has drilling occurred in the headwaters of a federally designated Wild and Scenic River such as the Hoback, she said.

"It's not that Wyoming residents oppose drilling. Folks recognize Wyoming is benefiting from the extraction economy. They just don't want large-scale industrial development in places that are frankly too special to drill," Love said.

The agreement made financial sense while allowing PXP to refocus elsewhere, a company official said.

"PXP has repeatedly stated our willingness to consider a buyout of our lease position if a valid offer was tendered. Today's announcement fulfills that pledge," PXP vice president Steve Rusch said in a state-

The announcement opens a fundraising effort by the trust. The trust has secured $4.5 million for the deal but needs to raise the other $4.25 million by Dec. 31.

"We still have the last chapter to go. This is where all of you come in and you can help write a happy ending to that story," Love told the audience at Snow King

Opponents of the Eagle Prospect/Noble Basin project said it would pollute the air, harm wildlife and taint pristine streams in a landscape of rolling meadows and forest.

The drilling project was located near a southern approach to Jackson Hole used by many visitors to Grand Teton and Yellowstone national parks.

Eighty-five percent of the buyout acreage is within an area protected by the 2010 Wyoming Range Legacy Act. The act prohibits future oil and gas development on 1.2 million acres in the mountain range that parallels Wyoming's boundary with Idaho. The law doesn't apply to the PXP leases.

The company acquired the drilling leases a few miles south of Bondurant in 2005. As existing leases, they were grandfathered in under the act, although the act provides for remaining leases to be donated or bought out.

Upon acquiring the leases, the Trust for Public Land intends to turn them over to the federal government to permanently retire them.

"This story represents a respect for the valid lease rights and a respect and recognition of the value of conservation," Gov. Matt Mead said at the news conference. "What this is, is a local idea, a local passion, that created a Wyoming cure."

Mead's predecessor, Gov. Dave Freudenthal, was there, as was Susan Thomas, widow of Sen. Craig Thomas, who authored the Wyoming Range Legacy Act before his death in 2007.

"There is no doubt that Craig believed in energy development and exploration," Thomas said. "He also believed in special places that help give the balance that Wyoming people wanted."

Citizens for the Wyoming Range, which opposed the gas project, endorsed the

State Notifies Patients Who Received Meningitis Steroid

BOISE (AP) • State health officials say a hospital in southwest Idaho and a private clinic in the eastern part of the state are the only two medical facilities that received shipments of a recalled steroid linked to a deadly outbreak of meningitis.

The Idaho Department of Health and Welfare identified the facilities Friday as the Walter Knox Memorial Hospital in Emmett and Idaho Fallsbased Pain Specialists of Agency Spokesman Tom Shanahan said doctors at both locations are working to notify patients who may have received an injection of the recalled drug.

So far, there are no illnesses reported in Idaho patients who received the shots taken for back pain.

Nationally, 47 people in seven states have been diagnosed with infection, and five have died from the rare fungal meningitis.

This file photo shows the former home of billionaire J.R. Simplot in Boise that he donated in 2004 to be used as a governor's mansion.

IDAHO FINDS IT'S TOUGH TO GIVE A MANSION BACK

BY JOHN MILLER

Associated Press

BOISE • The hilltop mansion was a gift to Idaho from potato magnate J.R. Simplot, meant as a residence befitting the governor.

Instead, it's become a money pit, costing more annually to maintain than the median price of a Boise-area home. What's more, Idaho's current governor won't even live there.

Public outery was on display this week at a hearing over the house's future, where a majority of those who spoke recommended either selling the place or returning it to Simplot's 2008 at age 99 don't want it.

"The family's position hasn't changed," David Cuoio, a Simplot spokesman, on Wednesday, referring to an earlier statement. "J.R.'s home was given to the state with the understanding that it would be used as the governor's house."

The place, along with its 30-by-50-foot American flag, was erected by Simplot back in 1980 not simply as a residence.

Connected to the Boise Valley floor by a narrow serpentine drive, the 7,100square-foot home is meant to be noticed.

In real estate parlance, location is everything, but that's also the reason the "the mansion on the hill" sticks in the collective craw of many Idaho residents.

"The governor of Idaho should be a person that the citizens can relate to," said Robert Fries, a Boise resident. "The governor of Idaho should not be placed on a pedestal on a hill, looking down on everyone."

Simplot handed over the keys in 2004, but it took just two years for its lofty perch to become an issue in the 2006 race to be governor: The Democratic candidate promised he'd never live in a house that seemed to elevate a politician above the ranks of the common man.

Current chief executive C.L. "Butch" Otter won, but the Republican also eschewed the mansion, preferring his riverside ranch west of Idaho's capital. There's some personal baggage, too: Otter is Simplot's former son-in-law, having divorced his daughter back

Bear Wounded

BOISE (AP) • Authorities in eastern Idaho are still searching for a grizzly bear they believe is roaming the woods with a gunshot wound two weeks after a run-in with hunters.

Idaho Fish and Game officials say the bear was shot Sept. 22 by hunters trying to retrieve an elk in the woods in Fremont County.

The hunters say they fired at least 12 shots at the grizzly after the bear charged. The bear then left the scene, but left a small blood trail.

Investigators have posted warning notices and have assigned officers to patrol and alert the public.

Fish and Game officials say the encounter shows guns can turn a charging bear, but firearms also create lingering concerns if the bear is only wound-

They say bear spray remains the most effective.

Two Men Charged in Shooting Plead Not Guilty

NAMPA (AP) • Two men charged in the August shooting death of a Nampa man whose body was found near Lake Lowell have pleaded not guilty.

The Idaho Press-Tribune reports 33-year-old Gregory Raymond Higgins pleaded not guilty in District Court Friday to first-degree murder and first-degree kidnapping in the death of 27-year-old James Groat.

Co-defendant Christopher Michael Duran pleaded not guilty to aiding and abetting both murder and kidnapping.

A judge has sealed the court file for 21-year-old Cruz Flores, the third man arrested after Groat's death.

Investigators said they learned Groat was asked to provide assistance to Duran and Higgins on an alleged drug transaction, and Higgins confronted Groat with allegations that Groat was an informant for law enforcement.

Southern Miss Hosts Still-potent Boise St. Broncos

ASSOCIATED PRESS

HATTIESBURG, Miss. • It's widely viewed that Boise State's powerhouse football program has taken a slight step backward this season.

Southern Miss coach Ellis Johnson isn't buying the supposed decline.

'Don't be fooled — this is a top 20 football team;" Johnson said. "When you watch them on film, there is some really impres sive execution."

The Golden Eagles (0-4) host the Broncos (3-1) today at Roberts Stadium. The two programs have been among the best in the non-BCS category over the past several years, but while Boise State is still chugging along with buckets of victories, Southern

Miss has fallen on hard times. The Golden Eagles are winless through September for the first time since 1976. But last week's 21-17 loss to then-No. 19 Louisville provided some hope that things will get better soon. Southern Miss led for much of the game, but Louisville rallied in the second half.

Boise State coach Chris Petersen said Johnson — the first-year Southern Miss coach - has the Golden Eagles headed in the right direction.

"You watch a team and see if they're getting better, what their skill level is, and this is maybe a team that has as many athletes as any team we've seen so far," Petersen said. "Sometimes when it's a new system ... it takes a game or two for things to kind of start clicking. You can tell that they're growing and getting it figured out."

Maybe so, but the Golden Eagles still have issues. Especially at quarterback.

Redshirt freshman Ricky Lloyd will likely get his second straight start. He was a non-factor in the Louisville loss, completing just 2 of 8 passes for 25 yards.

But those numbers were skewed because the game was played in a downpour that greatly curtailed passing > opportunities for both teams. Johnson has said Lloyd is a capable passer, and will have a better opportunity to show it against Boise State.

The Broncos have won three straight games, but the past two have been a struggle. They nearly lost on the road at New Mexico last week, holding on a for 32-29 victory. The Lobos had just a 1-11 record last season.

Boise State is still adjusting to life without four-year starting quarterback Kellen Moore, even though junior Joe Southwick appears to be improving. He completed 24 of 34 passes for 311 yards and three touchdowns against New Mexico.

"They are probably not as flexible and as versatile and wide open as they were, but they still give you a multitude of formation movement and motions that make it very difficult for a defense to adjust to," Johnson said. "They've still got talent. They are very aggressive in their play calling."

The Broncos will have to adjust to an early wake-up call for today's game. It's an 11 a.m. CDT kickoff in Mississippi, but will feel like 10 a.m. for Boise State, which is coming from the Mountain Time Zone.

Petersen has moved many of Boise State's practices to 8:30 a.m. this season, and hopes the adjustment will help. "Those early-morning games, we've done one of them," Petersen said. "They're very awkward. Hopefully, (the early practices) help us somehow, some way, and at least they're used to getting up early."

Bruins Bounce Back, Beat Wood River

nruland@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • Twin Falls head coach Allyn Reynolds knew that if his team had any chance of making the playoffs, it couldn't afford the kind of letdown it suffered in giving up 27 unanswered points in its loss to Jerome last week.

After a week of practice in which Reynolds conditioned his players prior to team drills, the Bruins kept the throttle down on Wood River Friday, beating the Wolverines 41-13 and improving to 1-1 in the Great Basin Conference (2-4 overall).

"We just played hard," Reynolds said. "I've been hard on these kids all week. I've been tough on them, and they probably don't like me much now. But I'm going to continue to be hard on them because it's not going to get any easier."

The Bruins offense saw quarterback Thomas Corr complete 8 of 10 passes, including two scoring strikes to Jason Byce, from 49 and 36 yards respectively. Jacob Johnson finished with 101 yards on 23 carries, while Corr ran for another 55.

In the second quarter, the Wolverines' Quinn Guthrie was carted off the field into an ambulance after receiving an apparent head or neck injury during a kick return. Guthrie moved his hands and feet prior to entering the ambulance. According to Reynolds, who was triangulated information directly from a doctor who

After a near half-hour delay, it appeared as though Wood River (0-2, 1-4) used its fallen teammate as inspiration, forcing a three-and-out on the Bruins and driving the ball 44 yards to midfield on its ensuing possession.

But Wood River was intercepted deep down the sideline by John Hohnhorst, and the Bruins scored to end the half up 20-0 instead of potentially being up only a touchdown. The Bruins marched 83 yards on 13 plays to start the second half and cruised thereafter, pulling starters early in the fourth.

The Wolverines managed far more yards then they had the prior week against Minico, but saw their drives stall time and again with penalties. Wood River was whistled for more then ten penalties on the night, which in combi-

DECLO • From the time they were in peewee, all the way through junior high, JV and now varsity football, this group of Declo seniors has played a lot of impressive games on the Declo stadium grass.

In Friday's 67-8 victory over Valley on Friday, the 17 seniors capped it all with a record-breaking perform-head coach Kelly Kidd. Senior running back Jason Gillette rushed for 131 yards and broke the single-game school record for rushing touchdowns with six. The previous record was five, shared by Jason Webb (1998), Kyler Heward (2000) and Mark Knobbe (2010).

Vandals, Aggies Prep for Last WAC Opener

BY JOSH WRIGHT For the Times-News

MOSCOW • In the 22 seconds it took New Mexico State coach DeWayne Walker to answer a question Monday about his team's matchup with Idaho, he described the Aggies and Vandals as "starved," "aching" and "desperate" for a victory.

For two programs that have had tumultuous seasons – not to mention offseasons - Walkersummed up their respective situations well.

Idaho is 0-5. New Mexico State is 1-4. And the only difference between the beleaguered football teams is that the Aggies beat their lone FCS opponent to start the year and the Vandals didn't.

The teams meet today in the Kibbie Dome in their last Athletic Western Conference opener before both are likely to experiment with FBS independence next year.

Walker and Vandals coach Robb Akey have stressed to their players the need to focus on the rest of the season, not their programs' uncertain futures. But the fallout from major conference realignment is felt perhaps most acutely in Moscow and Las Cruces, N.M. After the WAC fell apart, neither school was able to secure a spot in an FBS conference. Now both are scurrying to line up opponents in 2013 and 2014 as independents. Akey said this week that being in flux has had a "tremendous impact" on his year. Walker, meanwhile,

was even more specific in tying the lack of a conference to go to (next year) and the resources and all those things continue to build," said the Aggies' fourth-year coach. "Robb and I, we're in tough situations, but at the same token, the most important thing for both of us is we're both starving for a program that has lost 15 of 17 games since the start of last fresh start for Idaho in at least one respect. "It's the last new beginning we have," said Akey, whose team is favored by 91/2 points. "We're going into Week 6 looking for our first win, but we're also 0-0, untied, unscored upon going into conference play."

Suspended Coaches to Watch Brees

ASSOCIATED PRESS

Somewhere in a private box at the Louisiana Superdome, Sean Payton, Mickey Loomis and Joe Vitt will sit and watch Drew Brees try to set an NFL record for consecutive games with a touchdown pass.

Not to mention get the Saints out of their worst slide in years.

That suspended trio – coach Payton is sidelined for the season, general manager Loomis for eight games, interim coach Vitt for six for their roles in the bounties scandal - was given permission by the NFL to attend Sunday night's game against San Diego, but can't interact with Brees or the other play-

Brees tied Hall of Famer John Unitas' mark of 47 straight, set from 1956-60 by throwing for three scores in a loss at Green Bay last weekend. Then he asked Commissioner Roger Goodell about allowing the coaches and GM to attend on Sunday.

"It would mean a lot, and that's why I asked," Brees said. "Of course they know how this team feels about all those people and what a big part they are in our journey despite the circumstances. And the fact that we have the opportunity to break the Johnny Unitas record, and I say 'we' because it is a team deal, and Joe Vitt is a part of that, Sean Payton is a part of that and Mickey Loomis is a part of that. They are all a part of that, and I felt like they certainly deserved the opportunity to be there in attendance and share that moment with us."

While the Saints are one of two 0-4 teams, along with Cleveland, the Chargers (3-1) are on top of the AFC West. Their three wins are over Oakland, Kansas City and Tennessee, all 1-3. When they played a contender - at home – the Chargers were routed by Atlanta.

So this could be something

New Orleans quarterback Drew Brees can set a new NFL record for consecutive games with a touchdown pass this week against San Diego.

of a proving ground for San Diego, because beating even a winless Saints squad in New Orleans never is a Big Easy. And with emotions running wild over Brees' pursuit of Unitas' record and with Payton, Loomis and Vitt on hand — the Chargers' challenge is amplified.

"It's the same team that's made deep playoff runs and it's the same team that's won Super Bowls," said Chargers quarterback Philip Rivers, who replaced Brees as the starter in 2006, when Brees headed to New Orleans as a free agent. "We know what we're in for Sunday night. I know just from the few guys that were on this team a few years ago and are now there, it's a tough and resilient group. We're going to have to play at our best if we expect to win on Sunday."

Houston is at the New York Jets on Monday night.

The week's action began Thursday night with St. Louis' 17-3 home victory over Arizona. The Rams improved to 3-2, and the Cardinals dropped to 4-1.

Off this week are Dallas (2-2), Detroit (1-3), Oakland (1-3), and Tampa Bay (1-3).

Jeff Fisher Regime Quickly Producing Results for Rams

ASSOCIATED PRESS

ST. LOUIS • Jeff Fisher began rebuilding the St. Louis Rams' confidence when he was hired in mid-January. Now they've got the results to back it up.

Heading into a three-day break and a 10-day gap between games, the Rams (3-2) have more to savor than just knocking off previously unbeaten Arizona. They've already topped their win total from the dismal 2011 season with 11 games to go, and they're 3-0 at home for the first time since 2003.

"To be in this position and to have this franchise above .500 is a beautiful thing," middle linebacker James Laurinaitis said. "I'm happy to be a part of it."

Far from satisfied, too. Never too early to start thinking about next weekend's game at Miami.

Cornerback Cortland Finnegan and Laurinaitis, an Ohio State alum, are driving to Columbus, Ohio for the Ohio State-Nebraska game on Saturday.

"But I'm downloading all the Dolphins stuff," Finnegan said. "So, football won't be too far away from me."

The key to the 17-3 victory over the Cardinals was a fastimproving defense that sacked Kevin Kolb nine times, the Rams' best total in 14 years, with very little blitzing. End Robert Quinn, one of three first-round picks on the line, had a career day with three sacks.

The Rams, who totaled six sacks the first four games, stopped Arizona twice inside the 20 in the final minutes.

"It's a new mindset overall," Ouinn said. "We knew we had it in us, it's just really fitting the pieces and getting them to click together. Everything is starting to jell."

On his third sack, Quinn stripped Kolb and Williams Hayes recovered at the Arizona 47 with less than two minutes to go to stop the Cardinals' final chance. "We knew they were going to come," Fisher said. "I hope keep coming."

Rookie corner back Janoris Jenkins had his best game of the year with three pass breakups, and also filled in ably on punt returns after Amendola was injured in the second quarter. "He's just coming right along," Finnegan said. "It's just exciting to have somebody like that you can mentor to, but doesn't really need Amendola could be out several weeks with what the Rams have described vaguely as a shoulder injury. Amendola, who was second in the NFL with 31 receptions after Week 4, was seen pointing to his right collarbone before leaving for X-rays and could be out a month.

"Obviously, losing Danny is big," quarterback Sam Bradford said. "Everyone knows that he's a big part of our offense. A lot of what we do runs through him."

Fisher was mum on the injury, saying he'd have an injury report on Wednesday. Amendola showed his emotion before heading in for Xrays when he flung his helmet into a wall with his left

"I'm not commenting on any injuries from the game," Fisher said. "It's a competitive issue. If Danny's going to miss a game, I'll discuss the timing, which I'm sure that he's going to miss a game."

The defense took the pressure off an offense that's scuffled lately. Tight end Lance Kendricks' first-quarter touchdown reception was the first TD for the offense in three games.

Bradford had one of the worst days of his career, completing only 7 of 21 passes for 141 yards and enduring an 0-for-12 funk that included an end zone interception by Patrick Peterson. There were some drops, but he also threw too high, led receivers by too much, or not enough.

"A lot of little things. It was nothing major," Bradford said. "We just never really got ourselves in rhythm. Fortunately, our guys up front were able to get the run game going in the second half when we needed it."

Bradford emerged in time to hit rookie Chris Givens, the fastest player on the team, in stride on a 51-yard touchdown pass that put St. Louis up by 14 points early in the fourth quarter. Givens had a few drops earlier in the

"I told him I was going to come back to him," Bradford said. "I'm never going to lose confidence in those guys. He's young, he's learning.

"Obviously, he made a great play for us when we needed it?

Cold Facts of NFL: Coaches Icing Kickers

ASSOCIATED PRESS

Andy Reid stood in the middle of the Eagles' locker room after his team barely survived against the New York Giants last weekend, and apologized.

"I owe you one," he said with a smile.

Reid wouldn't have been smiling and almost certainly still would have been apologizing had New York's Lawrence Tynes nailed his second attempt at a 54-yard field goal in the final seconds Sunday night. A nanosecond before Tynes booted his first try, Reid called timeout to ice the veteran kicker.

It wasn't the first time a coach tried the ploy and it won't be the last. Yes, it sure has gotten cold on a bunch of NFL fields this season, with winter still far away. But some say icing should be reserved only for hockey.

Including Reid's own quarterback, Michael Vick.

"I don't believe in icing the kicker," Vick said. "You give everything. You let them kick it and if it's good it's going to be good. If not, you can't play games. I don't know who started that, but we have to end that tradition."

Reid seemed well aware of how the home fans would have reacted if his decision backfired.

"Yeah, when you're surrounded by 66,000 that probably want to rip your throat out at that time, that's about twenty-fold what Custer felt," he said.

Tynes probably was kicking from beyond his range - he's never connected from 54 yards — so he appreciated the chance to get in a "practice kick," which sailed wide left. The one that counted came up a few yards short.

"I would never let a guy kick it," said Tynes, whose resume includes kicks that won two NFC title games. "I would call it even before, well, after he gets lined up. I don't understand the wait till the last second thing.

"It's part of the game now, so you know it can happen. I don't think you should worry about it."

Nor does David Akers, the All-Pro kicker of the 49ers who has spent 14 seasons kicking footballs through uprights — icing

"I just go out and try to kick every time," he said. "If the whistle is blown, I step back and I still approach the ball again as if I was walking on the field. It's basically the mentality I've always had on it.

"Does it affect anyone? I don't know. I guess it depends on the individual and circumstance and environment."

Eagles specials teams coordinator Bobby April sees the value in the strategy, but only to a point. He equates to onside kicks, recalling that the Saints won a Super Bowl in part because they recovered such a kick to start the second

"Icing the kicker is like trick plays or fakes," April said. "You're brilliant if they work and you're something else if they don't."

Minn. Lawmakers Want Lou Gehrig's Medical Records

ASSOCIATED PRESS

MINNEAPOLIS • Some Minnesota lawmakers hope to force the release of Lou Gehrig's medical records, saying they might provide insight into whether the Yankees star died of the disease that came to take his name or whether repetitive head trauma played some kind of role.

Their effort comes despite opposition from Mayo Clinic, which holds the records, and skepticism from experts that the records alone would prove anything.

Rep. Phyllis Kahn, a Minneapolis Democrat and selfdescribed baseball fanatic, conceded that the records "probably won't show any-

"But just in case they might it's ridiculous not to look at them," she said Thursday.

Gehrig's death is attributed to amyotrophic lateral sclerosis, or ALS, a debilitating neurological disease that after his death in 1941 became commonly known by

Kahn said she became intrigued after reading about a widely publicized study in 2010 that suggested a potential link between repetitive brain trauma in athletes and ALS. She noted that Gehrig suffered several concussions during his career, in which he set a record for the most consecutive games played, and that he played football at Columbia University. Given all information that's emerged in recent years about the long-term effects of head trauma in athletes, she said, it would be useful to know what Gehrig's records

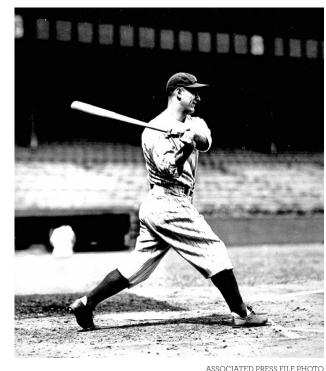

Kahn said she and some other lawmakers hope to change state law to allow release of health records of patients who have been dead more than 50 years, unless descendants object or the patient signed a will or health care directive to the contrary.

Gehrig has no living relatives to give consent. Mayo Clinic spokesman Nick Hanson said the clinic can't discuss a patient without their consent or permission from a legally authorized decisionmaker such as family or an estate administrator.

"Mayo Clinic values the privacy of our patients," Hanson said in an email. "Patient medical records should remain private even after the patient is deceased."

Several medical experts say they strongly doubt the records would shed any new light on the theory that Gehrig might have died from something other than ALS. That includes the author of the study that caught Kahn's eve, Dr. Ann McKee.

"I don't think the medical records would be helpful," said McKee, chief neuropathologist for the National VA Brain Bank and co-director of Boston University's Center for the Study of Traumatic Encephalopathy. "It really requires looking at the tissue and he was cremated, so it's not possible."

The president of the foundation that holds the intellectual property rights to Gehrig's legacy agreed.

"I fail to see what virtue this would have," said Dr. Rodney Howell, president of the Rip Van Winkel Foundation, which was founded by his father-in-law, Dr. Caldwell Esselstyn Sr., who was Gehrig's personal physician. Howell is also chairman of board of the Muscular Dystrophy Association, which funds ALS research.

Even today, Howell said, ALS is diagnosed primarily by its symptoms and by signs of deterioration in the nerves that control voluntary movement. He said his views are guided heavily by the work of Dr. Stanley Appel of the Methodist Neurological Institute in Houston, one of the world's leading ALS researchers, who was dismayed to hear that the lawmakers are questioning whether Gehrig died of Lou Gehrig's

"Whether head trauma may have played a role in Gehrig's development of ALS can never be verified, but it is a complete disservice to his place in history as an icon for ALS to suggest that his disease was not ALS," Appel wrote in 2010 editorial for the journal Muscle & Nerve that took issue with McKee.

McKee's study didn't mention Gehrig but she raised his case in subsequent media interviews that left ALS patients "distraught" the implication over might have been they misdiagnosed, Appel recalled Thursday.

Appel said he agreed with Mayo that Gehrig's records should remain private. He said there's no way the limited data in records that old could yield any new scientific knowledge about whether his condition was linked to his concussions because the consequences of repeated head trauma in athletes have become understood only re-

Kahn, a state lawmaker for 40 years, has a background in biophysics and a reputation for longshot legislation. Some of her past proposals have included a push to lower the voting age to 12 and to make the Minnesota Twins publicly owned. Given that Gehrig attended Columbia University, Kahn said, he clearly had a good education and a lot of intellectual curiosity.

"It seems to me that if he were alive he would be authorizing it," Kahn said.

Gehrig biographer Jonathan Eig thinks so, too.

Eig said he tried unsuccessfully to get Gehrig's medical records while researching his 2005 book "Luckiest Man," but said he was able to interview Mayo Clinic doctors who saw the records, including one who knew a doctor who treated Gehrig. He said they confirmed that the ballplayer had the classic symptoms of Gehrig was a strong supporter of ALS research, Eig said, and submitted himself to all kinds of experiments. And since Gehrig is still the ultimate symbol of ALS, he said, opening up the files would help the public learn more about the disease, even if they don't prove anything about his potential head in-

"My hunch is that he would be all in favor of public disclosure," Eig said.

Longtime Friend Helped Sell Roy on T-Wolves

ASSOCIATED PRESS

MANKATO, Minn. • When Minnesota Timberwolves President David Kahn made his pitch to Brandon Roy, he had a glaring need at shooting guard for him to fill, an accomplished coach who could put Roy in the right positions on the floor and a two-year contract all on his side to woo the former All-

He also had Will Conroy. Kahn and Conroy go way back, to their time together in the NBDL when Kahn was the GM of the Albuquerque Thunderbirds and Conroy was his point guard. Conroy goes back even farther with Roy. The two were teammates at Garfield High School in Seattle and at the University of Washington, and have been the closest of friends for years.

also played Conrov briefly in Houston with Timberwolves coach Rick Adelman. So when it came time for Roy to decide where to start his comeback after sitting out a season with chronic knee pain, the Wolves had a strong voice in Roy's inner circle that may have made the difference.

"When Minnesota was one of the teams that stepped forward to being on his radar, I said 'B, you've got to go to Minnesota," Conroy said. "Now the weather is a little different. But you'll love playing there. You'll love playing for the coaching staff. He had a couple of teams with some nice cities like Dallas, Golden State, Chicago. He chose Minnesota, which is a big testament to the coaching staff and our front office."

And to the trust that Roy has in Conroy. Along with fellow Seattle native Jamal Crawford, another occasional Timberwolves freeagent target who signed with the Los Angeles Clippers this summer, the three have a tight bond that is years in the making. They rely on each other for career advice, moral support and everything else. So it's no surprise that when Roy was making a big decision, Conroy was in on the discussion.

"We're best friends," Conroy said. "We try to tell each other the best things possible as far as our careers and guiding our careers and stuff like that. If it wasn't a good situation, I wouldn't have told him to come."

Getting a playmaking veteran with prototypical size at shooting guard was a priority for the Timberwolves entering the offseason. Wes Johnson had difficulty handling the ball and was traded to Phoenix, leaving Adelman with undersized point guards Luke Ridnour and J.J. Barea and Russian import Alexey Shved as the main options alongside Ricky Rubio in the backcourt.

"He was actually the one that kind of helped me talk to David Kahn and get that relationship," Roy said of Conroy. "He just really enjoyed the team. He said Kevin Love, Ricky Rubio were all good players. So when I told him I was going to come back, he thought Minnesota was a team I'd fit good with." The Wolves knew Roy would be a little bit of a gamble because of his knees, which forced Portland to use the amnesty clause on his contract and cut him loose. But Roy had a procedure done in June to try to address the bone-onbone issue in his knees and worked out with Wolves assistant Bill Bayno, who had previously coached Roy on the Blazers staff. Bayno saw glimpses of the old Roy, and the courtship was on.

"Whenever you're recruiting a player, there's a lot of hands on deck and a lot of helpful things you can draw upon and (Conroy) was one of them," Kahn said.

Now Conroy is hoping to be Roy's teammate once again. After college, Roy became a franchise player for the Portland Trail Blazers and Conroy set about on a basketball journey to keep the dream alive. He's had several 10-day contracts with Memphis, Houston and the Clippers and made stops throughout the D-League and Europe.

"I always used to joke around with (Kahn)," Conroy said of his time in Albuquerque. "I said, 'David once you get yourself a real general manager job in the league you have to give me a job. He said, 'We'll see. We'll see."

Dale Earnhardt Jr. Racing for Win at Talladega

ASSOCIATED PRESS

TALLADEGA, Ala. • Dale Earnhardt Jr. knows exactly what strategy he needs at Talladega Superspeedway.

He needs to go for broke and get a win.

His championship hopes fading, Earnhardt is among a handful of drivers who believe Sunday's race could be the one that lifts them back into title contention. There's some separation in the Chase for the Sprint Cup championship field, and three drivers at the front are pulling away after three races.

Earnhardt, who sits seventh in points, knows chipping away probably won't get the job done. He's 39 points behind leader Brad Keselowski, with Jimmie Johnson and Denny Hamlin keeping pace at the

"We're in a position where it really doesn't matter . we can't be conservative at all," Earnhardt said. "We really got to, you know, take a lot of risks. With just a few races left, as good as everybody's running, as good as Brad and Jimmie and the 11 car (Hamlin) have been running, we have to get pretty aggressive and that should play right into this race track's hands."

It's the same attitude Clint Bowyer, the two-time defending race winner, will take into Sunday. He's fourth in the points but thinks Talladega could shake up the standings and change the complexion of the Chase.

"We have to use this weekend to put ourselves back in the hunt," Bowyer said. "There's three cars that have been breaking away here and this is the one track, the one opportunity that can change things. I'm looking forward to going there and seeing how it all shakes out. We all know what we're getting into going into this race.

"This is a track that can really swing the points 20-30 points one way or another. So in my situation I have to use this as an opportunity. This is a race that can win the championship for somebody."

Earnhardt hopes he's that somebody.

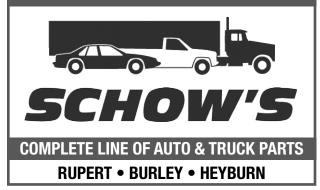

He used to be an oddson favorite at Talladega, where he's got five career victories. But the racing has changed, the strategy is different, and Earnhardt hasn't won at Talladega since 2004.

He admitted Friday he doesn't like riding around in the back waiting to make a late charge to the front, and the unpredictability of the race makes it difficult to plot a plan.

"You really don't know what things are going to go down or what's going to happen," he said. "Sometimes it happens with the usual suspects and sometimes it's a surprise of even who would be involved in it. I've been on the receiving end of some wrecks here and I've started a few myself.

"So you just go out there and try to run as hard as you can and try to put yourself around people you like to work with and benefit from having people around you that you trust and that usually pays off."

Overcoming a Troubled Heart

n this world, we often find ourselves engaged in some sort of anxiety. It seems like every day a portion of our time is engaged in some sort of worry. These worries overwhelm us and consume our minds and hearts with untamed emotions. They demand our attention, and, unfortunately, we give it to them.

They cause us to have heavy, troubled hearts. We may try to hide them from others, thinking that they will just disappear. Or we might seek peace and comfort in something or someone, trying to overcome them.

No matter what we do, these worries seem to pop up all over the place. We worry about the government, the economy, jobs, money or lack of money. We worry about flying, health, and family (some parents worry about their children, especially their children who are driving). We worry about the past, the present, and most assuredly the future. There doesn't seem to be any areas our lives are immune to worries or troubled hearts. All of us have certain things that cause our hearts to be heavy and troubled.

And so the question is how we respond to anxiety or worry. How are we to live for Jesus in light of our troubled hearts? Or better vet, how do we OVER-COME a troubled heart? Well beloved, in the words of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, He gives us the answer. Not only does Jesus know that our hearts will often be troubled, but He gives us resounding truth to overcome any anxiety in any situation. And He does this by focusing our hearts and minds – now get this – ON HIM.

What washes away the consuming nature of worry and anxiety, as well as any troubled heart, is to be a Christian who is submersed in Christ. Beloved, Jesus is the answer for any troubling situation that we find ourselves in. ANY! But the problem is that we often allow our worries or troubles to seem bigger than our Lord. The danger we find ourselves in is allowing our situations to overcome the reality that is Jesus Christ.

Our relationship with Jesus Christ is vital to overcoming troubled hearts. We need to remember that Jesus is just as real now as when we received Him as Lord and Savior, and He wants to minister to our souls. Jesus desires to comfort our hearts through our faith in Him. Did you get that, beloved? As life and its worries pelt us like the prevailing Twin Falls wind, we need to turn our attention to Jesus.

Listen to what Jesus says in John 14:1, "Do not let your heart be troubled; believe in God, believe also in Me." Simple truth, isn't it?

The Greek word translated troubled here means disturbed, unsettled, and confused. Can you see it there, beloved? What comforts a troubled, worrisome heart? What cures a heart that is troubled? It is BELIEF or what we call FAITH.

Beloved, it comes down to faith. Jesus is talking to His disciples here, and this faith that He is talking about is not saving faith they have already come to that in Him — the faith that Jesus is talking about here is a living faith, a present-day faith in Him. It speaks of an ongoing faith in Him. He wants us to live by faith. What helps us to overcome our worry is to have our hearts resting in Jesus Christ, today, at the present, in the moment. Our minds are to get off the ever-consuming worry and instead be focused on Jesus. It was the Puritan, Jonathan Owen, who said, "A sense of God's presence in love is sufficient to rebuke all anxiety and fears; and not only so, but to give, in the midst of them, solid consolation and joy."

Jesus says, "Believe in God and believe also in Me." And how do we do that? How do we grow and walk in the faith of our God and our Lord? Now this is very simple. Write this down: READ THE BIBLE!

Beloved, we grow in our understanding and faith in our Lord when we understand Him, when we get to know Him. And as we read His inspired word and study it and meditate on it, it has a calming effect on our souls that deepens our faith. Why? It is because we accept it as truth. The Bible reveals the care and nature of God.

What we read about Him there is not some story or suggestion; it is eternal truth. And it affects our souls. It helps our hearts.

This is beautiful. The more we grow in our understanding of the living God and find our confidence in Him, the easier it will be to face those worrisome situations.

The annals of Christian biographies and the tales of the heroes of the faith are littered with this resounding fact. As they read the Scriptures and believed what they read, their hearts were comforted, and their troubles were washed away. The more they were absorbed with the inspiration and eternal nature of the Word of God, the more they saw God move in their lives.

The simple truth is that the more we walk by faith the more our worries disappear. Why? Because God is sovereign, and His ways are fixed. May we learn to walk by faith in Jesus Christ and not be overwhelmed by our worries and anxiety.

Looking to a worry free life in Jesus Christ, Pastor Bear.

100 YEARS OFSERVICE

June Waters places special napkins on tables Thursday at Burley First Christian Church.

A Burley church celebrates its centennial - and its role in members' lives.

BY ANDREW WEEKS aweeks@maaicvallev.com

BURLEY • Marie Smith has been a member of Burley First Christian Church for 52 years — most of her life and more than half of the church's existence.

This weekend, the church will celebrate 100 years in the Magic Valley.

Members will celebrate with a dinner today at Burley Best Western Inn and Convention Center and a special worship service Sunday featuring two of the church's former pastors, with a potluck brunch afterward at the church.

On Thursday, members gathered at the church to decorate.

Miniature lighthouses became centerpieces on the tables, reflecting the theme of the church's ministry, said pastor John Marshall.

"The church is like a lighthouse," he said. "We're a servant to the community and bring the message of Christ to Burley and beyond."

Marshall, who's been pastor of the church since 2006, said the church is part of the national Disciples of Christ and the restoration movement that began in the early 1800s with Alexander Campbell. That movement wasn't without its trials, however, and was reorganized in the 1960s due to funding issues. It did little to affect the Burley church, though, which has remained focused on its primary mission since its establishment in 1912, said lifelong church member Suzie

McCall. In 1912, she said, the new church's members met in their homes. It was a cozy gathering that allowed the few members to bond through their faith and prayers. It didn't take long before members looked to build a worship facility of their own and chose a site at 1401 Oakley Ave. With help from Rupert First Christian Church, the two-story building was completed in 1914.

Over the years, members have added onto the building, moving the sanctuary to the newer part of the building and adding classrooms to accommodate a growing membership.

The church today averages about 50 members, McCall said, but at one time had more than 400. Black-and-white photos hung on a bulletin board at the church Thursday, depicting a time that no longer exists.

Times have changed in Burley and modern America, but the church has tried to remain a focus in its members'

"Back in the '50s and '60s," Marshall said, "if you didn't go to church, you were almost like an outcast. Now it's just the opposite. Back then if you were going to go out to have a good time, it was probably going to be at church. Churches were the centers of community."

It doesn't seem to be that way nowadays, he said. "But it is still the center for Christians."

A special part of our service is when we pray for our little children before they go to children's church. The most important part of our service is the sharing of the word of God. We promise that will be inspiring, relevant and Christ-centered.

It is a national day on which we stand up and speak out to restore the fundamental freedoms of speech and religious rights in America's pulpits without fear of losing the church's tax-exempt status. Our sponsor is the Alliance Defending Freedom, a group of more than 2,200 lawyers working in our behalf to defend the constitutional right of free speech from the pulpit.

Learn to Overcome Negativity Bias at Unitarian Universalist

TWIN FALLS • Julie Merrick will discuss "Overcoming the Negativity Bias" when the Magic Valley Unitarian Universalist Fellowship meets at 10:30 a.m. Sunday at the Twin Falls Senior Center, 530 Shoshone St. W.

Negativity bias is the name for a psychological phenomenon by which humans pay more attention and give more weight to negative rather than positive experiences. Joy, happiness and well-being expand when we learn to overcome this bias and begin tipping the scales of our attention toward that which is uplifting and pleasing in our lives. As we shift our perceptions, consider our values and make a conscious decision that we will put greater emphasis on what is good in this world, we are changed and become better able to embrace and appreciate the fullness of our life experience. Newcomers are welcome. Child care is available. Information: Ken Whiting at 734-

Vietnamese Dissident Poet Nguyen Chi Thien Dies

LOS ANGELES (AP) • Nguyen Chi Thien, a Vietnamese dissident poet who spent nearly 30 years in communist prisons in his native country, died in a Southern California hospital Tuesday after a long bout of lung illness, according to a close friend. He was 73.

Thien contracted tuberculosis while in Vietnamese prisons and doctors were investigating a large mass in his lung in the days before he died, his close friend Hanh Thang-Thai said. The actual cause of his death was unclear. "It's like the passing away of a great symbol for the so-called free Vietnam, people who still believe in freedom and democracy for Vietnam," Nguyen Bich, Thien's former translator said.

Thien was first imprisoned in 1960, after telling Vietnamese high school students that, contrary to their textbooks, the end of World War II was not the result of a Soviet attack, but rather U.S. nuclear attacks in Japan. He was later imprisoned again because of poems he wrote that decried communist oppression. But due to a lack of evidence, he never went to trial.

In 1977, Thien was released from prison and wrote down poems he had memorized in captivity, a manuscript that became known as "Flowers of Hell." The poems were published in Vietnamese after he hand-delivered them to British diplomats at their embassy in Hanoi, Vietnam.

When he exited the embassy, security agents were awaiting him and he was promptly sent back to prison. While he was still imprisoned, Thien won the International Poetry Award in Rotterdamin 1985. He was released from prison in 1991 and traveled to the United States in 1995, eventually settling in Orange County's Little Saigon.

Thien's friend Thang-Thai saidshe and a group of women cared for him, cooking for him and buying him clothes when he needed it, and that he led a humble life.

Shirley Mae Jeske

Jan. 22, 1941-Oct. 2, 2012

TWIN FALLS • Shirley Mae Jeske, 71, of Twin Falls, passed away at Ashley Manor in Kimberly on Tuesday, Oct. 2, 2012, after a courageous battle with Alzheimer's.

Shirley was born Jan. 22, 1941, in Ogden, Utah, to Roy and Opal Wilson. On Nov. 29, 1956, she married Fred Jeske, and together they raised five children. Shirley enjoyed bowling, reading, gardening, visiting with her friends, and her greatest passion was time spent with her grandchildren. "Grandmothers like letters. Even if they just consistent of a squiggle and a dirty finger mark."

Shirley is survived by her children, Mitchell Jeske, Mark (Lorie) Jeske, Michele (Daks Clark) Jeske and Matt Jeske; her grandchildren, Melissa Rowe, Kurtis (Kim) Day, Danielle (Tyrell) Munger, Daysha Jeske, Autrey Jeske, Morgan Jeske, Brett E. Clark and Ryne Clark; and her greatgrandchildren, Sarah Day, Samantha Day, Madison Bauman, Tay Munger and Kristopher Day. She was preceded in death by her parents; her husband, Fred Jeske; her son, Michael Jeske; and her great-grandson, Chance Michael Rowe.

A memorial service will be held at 10 a.m. Saturday, Oct. 6, at the LDS Church located at 680 Hankins Road N. in Twin Falls. A viewing will not be held. Interment will follow at the Filer Cemetery. Services are under the direction of Dustin Godfrey and the staff at White Mortuary "Chapel by the Park."

The family would like to give a special thanks to the staff at Ashley Manor in Kimberly and Guardian Home Health and Hospice.

Robert F. Christy, Manhattan Project Physicist, Dies

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) • Robert F. Christy, a former California Institute of Technology professor who helped design the trigger mechanism for the atomic bombs used in World War II, died Wednesday. He was 96.

Christy died of natural causes at his home in Pasadena, surrounded by his family, according to Caltech spokeswoman Deborah Williams-Hedges.

Christy was one of the early recruits to the Manhattan Project at Los Alamos Laboratory, a U.S. government research project to develop atomic weapons during the war. He was hand-picked to join by his University of California, Berkeley, professor J. Robert Oppenheimer, with whom Christy studied quantum mechanics.

The Canadian native devised what came to be known as the Christy bomb or Christy gadget, a plutonium implosion device.

Born in Vancouver, Christy showed mathematical prowess early in his schooling and skipped grades to graduate from the University of British Columbia when he was 19, according to a 1994 interview recorded in Caltech's archives.

Before the Manhattan Project began, Christy researched with the era's leading physicists, including Italian Enrico Fermi and Hungarian Eugene Wigner.

"What I was told was that they were trying to make a chain reaction. And the purpose of the chain reaction—well, it might be to drive submarines, or whatever. I was not told about bombs at the time," Christy said in the 1994 interview.

When the first bomb was tested at Los Alamos, Christy said everyone was pleased to have succeeded in the experiment, but a month later, when the atomic bomb was dropped on Hiroshima, it was a very sobering experience. "There had been bombs dropped on cities. There had been firestorms, and so forth. I believe people nowadays don't realize that in war your objective is to beat the enemy. And unfortunately, mostly that involves killing a lot of the enemy to do that. So war is a very bloody thing," Christy said. "I felt then that although this was a terrible event, it probably saved many, many more Japanese lives. They probably would have lost millions if they had had to defend themselves against an invasion."

Later in life, Christy opposed the further development of nuclear weapons. He became a member of the National Research Council's committee on dosimetry, which studied the radiation effects of the Hiroshima and Nagasaki bombs.

At Caltech, Christy taught theoretical physics, nuclear physics and astrophysics and went on to serve as faculty chair, vice president and provost, and acting president.

While at Caltech, he investigated pulsations in the brightness of stars, which are used to measure cosmic distances. Christy was awarded the Royal Astronomical Society's Eddington Medal for his work.

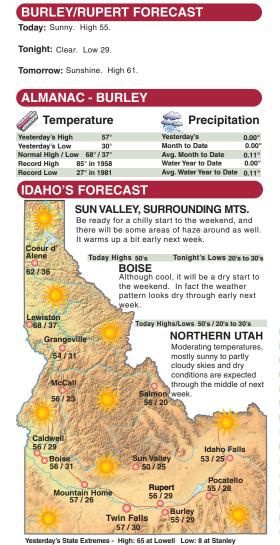

He was elected to the National Academy of Sciences in 1965.

Caltech Physics, Mathematics and Astronomy Chair B. Thomas Soifer said Thursday that Christy was a major figure at the private university and a founder of a very important area of astrophysical research.

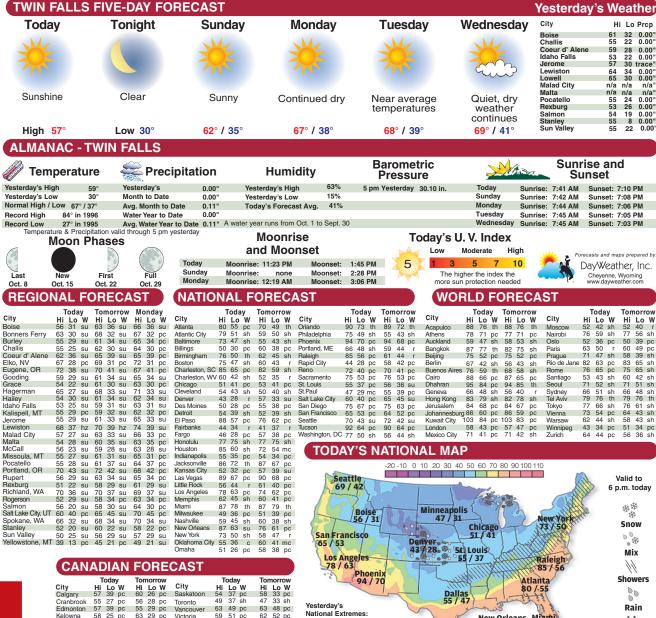

"Bob was an outstanding theoretical physicist; his contributions to scientific research, to public policy and his leadership helped in shaping what Caltech is today," said Soifer.

DISCOVERED IN SIBERI

(AP) teenage mammoth who once roamed the Siberian tundra in search of fodder and females might have been killed by an Ice Age man on a summer day tens of thousands of years ago, a Russian scientist said Friday. Prof. Alexei Tikhonov of the

Zoology Institute in St. Petersburg announced the finding of the mammoth, which was excavated from the Siberian permafrost in late September near the Sopochnaya Karga cape, 3,500 kilometers (2,200 miles) northeast of Moscow.

The 16-year-old mammoth has been named Jenya, after the 11-year-old Russian boy who found the animal's limbs sticking out of the frozen mud. The mammoth was 6 feet 6 inches tall and weighed 1,100 pounds.

"He was pretty small for his age," Tikhonov told The Associated Press. But what killed Jenya was not his size but a missing left tusk that made him unfit for fights with other mammoths or human hunters.

Bin in Hawaii Confirmed to be Japan Tsunami Debris

HONOLULU (AP) • A large plastic bin is the first confirmed piece of marine debris from last year's Japan tsunamis to arrive in Hawaii, the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration said Friday.

Japanese consular officials confirmed that the blue bin found earlier this week floating in the ocean is from Fukushima, said Ben Sherman, a NOAA spokesman in Washington, D.C.

It's the 12th confirmed piece to hit U.S. or Canada waters, he said.

The bin was spotted off Waimanalo, on the southeast coast of Oahu, by Makai Ocean Engineering staff and was retrieved by the Hawaii Undersea Research Laboratory. Used for transporting seafood, the 4-by-4-foot cube bears the name Y.K. Suisan Co. Ltd., the state Department of Land and Natural Resources said.

Nikolai Maximenko, a University of Hawaii researcher and ocean currents expert who is studying the trajectory of the tsunami debris, said the bin's arrival is consistent with his predictions for when the first pieces would get to Hawaii.

"It came at the right time, according to our model," he said. "But in some sense, it could just be a coincidence."

One million to 2 million tons of debris remain in the ocean, but only 1 to 5 percent of that could reach American and Canadian shorelines, Maximenko has said. Crabs and barnacles were found on the bin, the state said, along with five local

Today is Saturday, Oct. 6, the 280th day of 2012. There are 86 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight: On Oct. 6, 1927, the era of talking pictures arrived with the opening of "The Jazz Singer," starring Al Jolson, a movie that featured both silent and sound-synchronized sequences.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:

In 1536, English theologian and scholar William Tyndale, who was the first to translate the Bible into Early Modern English, was executed for heresy.

In 1683, thirteen families from Krefeld, Germany, arrived in Philadelphia to begin Germantown, one of America's oldest settlements.

In 1884, the Naval War College was established in Newport, R.I.

In 1928, Chiang Kai-shek became president of China.

In 1939, as remaining military resistance in Poland crumbled, Adolf Hitler delivered a speech to the Reichstag blaming the Poles for the Nazi-Soviet invasion of their country.

In 1949, U.S.-born Iva Toguri D'Aquino, convicted of treason for being Japanese wartime broadcaster "Tokyo Rose;" was sentenced in San Francisco to 10 years in prison (she ended up serving more than six). In 1958, the nuclear submarine USS Seawolf surfaced after spending 60 days submerged.

In 1973, war erupted in the Middle East as Egypt and Svria attacked Israel during the Yom Kippur holiday. In 1976, in his second debate with Jimmy Carter, President Gerald R. Ford asserted there was "no Soviet domination of eastern Europe." (Ford later conceded he'd misspoken.)

In 1979, Pope John Paul II, on a week-long U.S. tour, became the first pontiff to visit the White House, where he was received by President Jimmy Carter.

In 1981, Egyptian President Anwar Sadat was shot to death by extremists while reviewing a military parade.

In 1989, actress Bette Davis died in Neuilly-sur-Seine (nu-yee-sur-sehn), France, at age 81.

Ten years ago: Pope John Paul II elevated to sainthood Josemaria Escriva de Balaguer, the Spanish priest who'd founded the conserative Catholic organization Opus Dei. The French oil tanker Limburg was attacked by a small explosives-laden boat off Yemen's coast, killing one Bulgarian crew member. Prince Claus, the German-born husband of Queen Beatrix of the Netherlands, died in Amsterdam at age 76.

Five years ago: Pakistan's Gen. Pervez Musharraf won a presidential election boycotted by most of his opponents. British adventurer Jason Lewis finally returned home, completing a 13-year, 46,000-mile human-powered circumnavigation of the globe at Greenwich, England.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

"Nothing has scathed me, Nothing ever, nor ever will. I have touched pitch, I have reveled in it and rolled in it ..." — Orrick Johns Per-Olav Sundelin, known universally as P.O., was not playing for his native Sweden in the 2008 European Championships. His duties as Vugraph commentator, Daily Bulletin journalist and proofreader precluded this. P.O.'s command of English is such that he is able to correct not only the analysis but also the grammar of the native English-speaking scribes. Additionally, he wrote a series of bridge problems for the bulletins. Here is one of them, perhaps the hardest of the fortnight.

West leads the spade king against five diamonds, East contributes the jack, and you play your ace. On a diamond to dummy's ace, East shows out, discarding a club. What continuation guarantees your contract?

Answer: Play a top club, and regardless of what card East contributes, even the ace, discard your losing spade! Should the club hold, give up a heart, then cash the ace and king of that suit. If West trumps in at any point, ruff the spade return, cash the diamond king, and ruff the fourth heart in dummy. If West has the club ace and takes it, win the major-suit return, give up a diamond, then draw the last trump and discard the two losing hearts in hand on the queen and jack of clubs.

And if East plays the club ace, discard a spade, win the return, and give up a trump. The trap is that should you mistakenly ruff the club ace, West can overruff, then play a low spade to East for another club ruff.

ANSWER: I don't advocate rebidding one no-trump with three hearts and a side-suit small doubleton. Equally, raising with three small trumps is not ideal. Here you can also rebid clubs which might get you to no-trump the right way up, plus your clubs are almost as good as a sixcard suit. In favor of the raise is that if you always support with three trumps and a doubleton, partner will have strong negative inferences when you don't raise. I call it a tie!

"Wouldn't IT BE EASIER TO BUY SOME EGGS FROM THE GROCERY STORE?

WILEYS DICTIONARY Beetle Bailey Bizarro By Mort Walker

I married "Bill" for all the wrong reasons. I never truly loved him the way a woman should love a man. I have remained in the marriage because I am "supposed to." I was brought up to obey the Commandments and do what is right. Bill is a wonderful husband and father. He has a steady job that pays well; I work part-time. Bill and I get along just fine. He is easy to talk to, and we're very good friends. I don't want to lose that. But there is absolutely no passion in our relationship and never was.

I married Bill because it "was time." He feels more like a brother than a husband. I don't want to hurt my children, but I can't pretend any longer. I am attracted to other men. I'm afraid I'm going to start hating him because I feel so trapped.

I don't know what to do. I just want to stop pretending. We have both spoken to professionals and I have talked to my priest. I told Bill a little about how I feel — that I don't love him the way a woman should love a man. He just keeps on trying buying me flowers, doing all the right things. It doesn't matter. It just makes me angry. Could you please offer me some suggestions? I have read your column since I was a teen, and I value your opinion. Thanks.

- HADITIN HARTFORD, CONN.

DEAR HAD IT: Let me get this straight - you married your husband under false pretenses and have lied to him for 20 years. Both of you have my sympathy.

The best advice I can offer is to think long and hard about what you have now and what you "might" have in the future. Believe me, there are NO GUARANTEES and expectations have changed a lot since you were in the dating and mating market. If you really cannot love your husband the way he should to be loved - and counseling won't help - then let him go. He deserves better.

DEAR ABBY: My mother died recently after suffering a stroke. Immediately following her death, one of my father's more painful tasks was notifying various agencies: Social Security, retirement benefits and so on. Dad shook his head in amazement as all but one of the people he notified simply fired off a series of questions, thanked him curtly and hung up. Only one civil servant proved to be truly civil, prefacing the conversation with, "I'm sorry for your loss."

Abby, I know people who work in government and private pension departments receive many calls about deaths every day. That doesn't make each death less sad, or each call less difficult for the person picking up the phone and dialing. We can connect on a human level even through layers of officialdom and technology. A few simple, sympathetic words can make a world of difference in the dark days following the loss of a loved one.

- NANCY IN OAKLAND, CALIF. DEAR NANCY: Perhaps

it's a self-protective mechanism when people who work with case numbers, files and statistics lose sight of the fact that behind that information are broken hearts and grieving families. Thank you for the reminder. I'm sure no one meant to be cruel. What you have described is an example of people who have become desensitized.

Dear Abby is written by Abigail Van Buren, also known as Jeanne Phillips, and was founded by her mother, Pauline Phillips. Write Dear Abby at www.DearAbby.com P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA 90069.

IF OCTOBER 6 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: The next four to six weeks is a superb time to cash in on new opportunities, ask for favors or to make and launch important plans. Your judgment is at its best and if you need assistance, the universe will send you exactly what you need. In January you might get caught up in a passing fling. April offers a period of good judgment and reflection when you will see who really has your best interests at heart. The "real thing" might arrive in May or June, so if you have your eye on a permanent personal commitment just wait until then to change jobs or to pop the question.

HOROSCOPE Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Forgive and forget to free up your time for fun. Bury the hatchet and get out the ratchet; use your weekend to tinker around with your favorite hobby. Widen your horizons through study or sports.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): All you need is love. Today you will find time to spend with that certain special someone and make beautiful music together. Adopting a spirit of give and take will put you at the front of the class.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Even the grouchiest of the seven dwarfs could be an optimist today. Take advantage of the fact that people are willing to give you the benefit of the doubt. This is a good time to ask for forgiveness.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): More than one of your prayers will be answered. Without letting go of grudges and forgetting unpleasantness, forgiving is almost impossible. Shove your fondness for flawlessness to the background.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You may receive opportunities for second chances over the weekend. Although you are anxious to succeed in the outside world, you may be reminded that you can plan for the future with the help of loved ones.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Rub that lamp until it shines. The genie is standing by to grant your wishes. There is no reason to feel limited to just one simple request. Go ahead; make as many wishes as there are stars in the sky.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Rather than banging your head against the wall, try knocking on a door. People are more likely to help you out if you go through proper channels. Get key relationships back on track by offering sincere apologies.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You might find new ways of feathering your own nest. A jiggle in your walk and giggle in your talk is all you need to attract someone's attention. Lighthearted banter might turn on someone's passions.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): The keys to success have merely slipped into the crack in the couch cushions. A little cleaning and straightening up of your surroundings might reveal hidden strengths or offer time for insights.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): One person's ceiling is another's floor. You are prone to being overly ambitious and might be stymied by a glass ceiling. This is a good time to contact higherups and ask for a few favors.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Be positive about achieving your purpose. Don't let the fear of rejection stop you from pursuing dreams. Even if someone has said no, someone else will say yes, at the most advantageous time.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Apologies and compromises pave the road to success. Join with a special someone for sports, travel or games of chance. Call on a friend "in deed" to help you out when an extra pair of hands is needed.

The Romney of 2012, said biographer Ron Scott, is tougher, shrewder, better prepared and better organized, with rigid discipline, a clear sense of mission and a tendency to be 'annoyingly on message.'

MITT & MORMONISM

How religion shaped candidate Romney and may affect his presidential chances.

BY CODY CLARK

Daily Herald

OREM, Utah • With the cheers of the Republication National Convention still ringing in the ears of the electorate, it's hard to remember that roughly a year ago, Republican presidential nominee Mitt Romney was like the nerdy middle-aged dad of the Republican Party, someone who made the cool kids roll their eyes and whose presidential potential was exciting and galvanizing mostly to his existing sup-

Rick Perry, Ron Paul, Newt Gingrich, Herman Cain, Rick Santorum and even non-candidates like Chris Christie or Sarah Palin got people fired up. Romney elicited the sort of descriptions normally reserved for things like broccoli and dental floss — useful, advisable, practical.

In a word, boring. Or is that boring like a fox? Journalist Ron Scott, author of the biography "Mitt Romney: An Inside Look at the Man and His Politics" (Lyons Press, $16.95), said he thinks at least some of the blandness of candidate Romney's steady march to the nomination was by design, a lesson-learned strategy prompted by the failures of his bid for the nomination in 2008.

The Romney of 2012, Scott said, is tougher, shrewder, better prepared and better organized, with rigid discipline, a clear sense of mission and a tendency to be "annoyingly on message." No distractions. No grandstanding. "That's what got him the nomination," Scott

The newfound practicality and poise may also just be part of who Romney is. On a superficial level, Romney might appear to be a carbon copy of his father, Michigan governor and former presidential candidate George Romney. Scott said that George Romney's influence certainly helped steer Mitt Romney into politics, but that the son probably also learned to avoid some of the things that were an impediment to his famous father. While the elder Romney was a fearlessly plainspoken man of the people, Scott said, the younger Romney has always been more aloof, cerebral and unswervingly focused. Where George Romney had a little Rocky Balboa in him, Mitt Romney is perhaps more one-dimensionally noble. Scott compared him to cartoon do-gooders Fearless Fosdick and Dudley Do-Right - in a good way. "People respect his earnestness," Scott said, even when they don't connect with him on a personal lev-

Mitt, not Billy

Of course, a great many assessments of Romney are based on his public persona. Michael Bush, a professor of French and instructional psychology and technology at Brigham Young University, served an LDS Church proselytizing mission to France at the same time as Romney and knew and interacted with him

Last year, Bush and a fellow former missionary, Dane McBride, launched a website, Mitt the Man (www.mittheman.com), to directly combat the perception of Romney as being, in Bush's words, "plastic, robotic and stiff." The Romney he knows, Bush said, is a loving family man with a goofy sense of humor. "He's a fun guy to be around," Bush said. "His kids talk about how he has all these crummy jokes."

And the leadership qualities trumpeted by Romney's campaign staff are real, Bush said: "Mitt is a good person. He is everything he seems to be. He's going to be the smartest, hardest working guy in any room he enters."

The youngest of George and Leonore Romney's four children, Mitt Romney has deep roots in The Church of Jesus Christ of Latterday Saints. Two of his great-great-grandfathers, St. George colonist and temple architect Miles Romney and missionary and apostle

Once a Parent...

Trust, respect essential for strong relationships with your adult children.

BY BREANNA OLAVESON For the Daily Herald

OREM, Utah • As children grow from babies to kids to teenagers to young adults, the parent-child relationship constantly evolves. But when children leave and establish homes of their own, parents' roles change and the dynamics of the relationship adapt accordingly.

Licensed marriage and family therapist Darren Adamson has practiced since 1987 and earned master's and doctorate degrees from Brigham Young University. He practices at the Leavitt Institute for Marriage and Family in Provo. Here he shares seven tips for strengthening relationships with your adult children that will help you adapt to changing circumstances while staying close to those you love most.

Accurately perceive who your children are. "They're God's children, and we're all on the same journey here," Adamson says. Part of that journey involves making mistakes, and Adamson says understanding that children don't have to be perfect will help you find your role in their lives. "Keeping in mind that mistakes are part of life makes it easier to perceive our children accurately instead of expecting them to be perfect or seeing them as a reflection of us as parents," Adamson says. "It's not so much about commanding and controlling as it is about guiding and mentoring."

Accurately perceive the relationship you have with them. Once you see your children for the people they are, the next step is to understand your relationship to them. "Our children are our spiritual brothers and sisters," Adamson says. "If you accurately perceive that, it changes the dynamic of your relationship." He points out that treating children like they are inferior is contrary to that understand-

Start when they're young to cultivate the attributes of a healthy relationship, especially trust, mutual respect and communication. The sooner you begin to cultivate these attributes, the better, but it's never too late. "There has to be trust both ways — from parent to child and child to parent," Adamson says. "There also has to be mutual respect. If I make a mistake, I should say 'I'm sorry' just like the child." He adds that respecting your child's right to make his own choices is essential for building a good relationship that lasts through your child's adult years. And if you're not sure how to improve communication with your children, Adamson says a good way is to reduce the number of statements you make and increase the number of questions you ask.

Accept the changes that must naturally occur in the relationship. "It's really hard to let your children grow up and leave, but we need to accept it," Adamson says. "We are taught to leave our fathers and mothers and cleave to our spouses." Adamson says parents who try to prevent that separation can limit their children's happiness. "We need to make sure to not get in the way," he says. "Unfortunately, I see a lot of couples whose parents have gotten in the way, and it's very destructive."

BIBLE VIDEO PROJECT CONTINUES

Daily Herald

OREM, Utah • After building its own film production facility near Goshen last year, The Church of Jesus Christ of Latterday Saints embarked on an ambitious project: To film the ministry of Jesus Christ. Not as a single production, but in bits and pieces, working through the four gospels story by story. Forty-six videos were completed in 2011, and 50 more are in the pipeline in 2012.

Viewers can watch the videos at www.lds.org/bible-videos, but church officials aren't waiting for the world to come to them. There's a custom app for what's become formally known as "The Life of Jesus Christ -

In recent weeks, new videos have focused on Jesus's Sermon on the Mount (presented in four segments), Jesus's forgiveness of the woman taken in adultery, the calling of the Twelve Apostles, and the miraculous healing of the woman who touched the hem of Jesus's robe. The First Presidency formally announced the Bible videos as a free gift to the world at last year's First Presidency Christmas Devotional.

In describing the series, President Henry B. Eyring said, "Like the scriptures which these short films follow faithfully, they may seem to you quiet. Your faith and the Holy Ghost will create the emotion these world-changing events deserve."

"If you want to attract someone in your life, you need to be the best partner, friend, parent or neighbor you can be."

Respect boundaries while inviting connections. This balance can be tricky, but connections will be more meaningful if you respect boundaries - which, Adamson says, are determined by the person setting them. "If my adult children want to have Sunday dinner with their family, I can't throw a tantrum because they're not coming to my house," he says. "They're setting a boundary and I really need to respect that. I can't disrespect my children's wishes if I want a healthy relationship with them."

Modify language and expectations to reflect an adult-toadult relationship. The words we use are powerful indicators of the dynamics of our relationships, so use words that show respect for your children. "When your child is 7 years old, it's OK to say, 'You have to eat all of your food; " Adamson says. "But when they're adults, you don't use that same language. 'You should' can be replaced with 'My opinion is: 'That's a bad choice' becomes 'Let's talk about other options: " When considering the language you use, it's important also to avoid bribery, manipulation and unreasonable expectations. "I see parents who think they can force a connection, but it doesn't work. The only way your children will want a relationship is if you invite the connection through respect."

Focus on changing yourself, not your child. This principle applies in all relationships and is an important key to connecting positively with your adult child. "If you want to attract someone in your life, you need to be the best partner, friend, parent or neighbor you can be," Adamson says. "Then they want to have a relationship with you. It never works to expect others to change or behave a certain way for you."

Parley P. Pratt, were prominent early Latter-day Saints. Romney's given name, Willard, was bestowed in honor of hotel mogul and family friend J. Willard Marriott, while the middle name Mitt came from a cousin, Milton "Mitt" Romney, who was a quarterback in the early history of the Chicago Bears. Family members report that Romney switched from "Billy" to "Mitt" while in kindergarten and never looked back.

After attending public school through the sixth grade, Romney completed his secondary schooling at the exclusive Cranbrook School in the Detroit suburb of Bloomfield Hills. Cranbrook also was the site of a $bullying\ incident-brought$ to light earlier this year in a story in the Washington Post - in which Romney led a group that forcibly cut the hair of Cranbrook student John Lauber.

The Romney campaign first said that the story had likely been exaggerated, and that Romney had "no memory of participating" in the Lauber bullying. Shortly thereafter, Romney indirectly acknowledged the incident and apologized for his role in pranks that "might have gone too far."

Man on a Mission

Though it quickly died down, the bullying brouhaha illustrated in part that there's a learning curve even for presidential candidates. Scott said he seriously doubts Romney has truly forgotten the incident, and that it would have been far less damaging if he had volunteered the information before being called to account for it. "I think he has gotten some really bad advice along the way," Scott said.

On the other hand, an ability to move forward without dwelling on missteps or tragedy — is something that Romney has shown in the past. Bush pointed to an oft-told tale of Romney's missionary service, in which Romney was driving a mission vehicle that was struck head-on by an out-of-control driver. The collision injured Romney's mission president, H. Duane Anderson, and killed Anderson's wife, Leola. (Romney himself sustained injuries - French authorities initially thought he had died - but bounced back surprisingly quickly.)

Romney, a mission AP (or assistant to the president) at the time, took charge of the mission while Anderson recovered. "The mission president from the adjoining mission came to visit and said, 'I'm not needed here;' " Bush said, adding that, with Romney in charge, the mission met and exceeded its proselytizing goals.

As Scott put it, Romney "took control of the situation, as a mission president's assistant should ... and ran the mission effectively, possibly more effective than [Anderson] himself." The pattern, Scott said — take charge, size up a situation, then act quickly and decisively to correct it - can be seen in Romney's business career, as well as in his tenure as head of the Salt Lake City 2002 Winter Olympic Games.

Following his return from France, Romney married Ann Davies, his high school sweetheart (who had converted to Mormonism while he was away) and earned a bachelor's degree in English from BYU before moving on to a joint Juris Doctor and Master of Business Administration program at Harvard University.

He began his career in business as a management consultant at Boston Consulting Group before switching to Bain & Company, from which he eventually spun off Bain Capital. His political ambitions first rose to the fore in 1993, when he joined the Republican Party (after previously being a registered independent) to unsuccessfully challenge the late De-Romney's success in guiding the Salt Lake Olympics to fruition over a three-year period from 1999 to 2002 helped him become a oneterm governor of Massachusetts from 2003 to 2007. In an August 2004 interview with the Daily Herald following the publication of his Olympics-recapitulating memoir when asked whether he intended to seek the presidency in 2008.

"In the job I've got, you fo-Massachusetts," Romney said, adding that he hoped to paperwork to form a presidential exploratory committee on his last full day in office as governor.

For almost the duration of that first campaign, Romney was dogged by the question of how much his Mormonism would impact a potential presidency, an issue that has greatly receded in 2012. Joanna Brooks, a professor of literature at San Diego State University and national commentator on Mormon issues, said that Romney has himself to thank for the dramatic ebb in the hue and cry over his religious leanings. "Mitt Romney has carried an unusual burden in having to stand in as the object of America's national fascination with Mormonism," Brooks said, adding that first-time presidential candidate Romney submitted himself to the harsh glare of the national media spotlight well before the LDS Church's substantial push in recent years to reinvent its public

Church Continues to Make Progress on Utah Temples

BY CODY CLARK Daily Herald

OREM, Utah • At some point in the next two years, Utah Valley will double its total number of temples of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, going from two (in Provo and American Fork) to four.

For now, progress is being made on construction of both the Provo City Center Temple and the Payson Utah Temple, but neither sacred edifice is expected to be completed before 2014 at the earliest.

In Provo, construction crews have removed the signature cupolas from the corner towers of the old Provo Tabernacle — the cupolas are now resting on the lawn north of the construction site — while continuing to reinforce and rebuild the walls of the historic structure, which was gutted by fire in 2010. Progress is also being made on clearing and preparing the adjacent sites that were purchased by church officials in 2011.

In Payson, the foundation of the new temple has been poured and the first-floor walls have begun to rise.

Meanwhile, the newest temple in the Beehive State, the Brigham City Utah Temple, held its open house Aug. 18 to Sept. 15. During the open house period, the temple was open to the general public, with tours conducted by church volunteers. The Brigham City Temple was dedicated Sept. 23 in three separate sessions by President Boyd K. Packer of the Quorum of the Twelve Apostles, a native of Brigham City.

In observance of the dedication, all church meetings in Utah, as well as in some areas of southeastern Idaho, were canceled to permit members to participate in the dedicatory services via satellite broadcast to stake centers and other church facilities. The Brigham City Temple is the church's 139th operating temple and the 14th operating temple in

For church members who missed the Brigham City Temple open house and are not averse to a little driving, there will be two temple open houses in relative proximity to Utah in October and November. The newly renovated Boise Idaho Temple will open to the public Oct. 13 and remain open through Nov. 10 before being rededicated Nov. 18.

The Boise Temple, originally completed in 1984, was closed for renovation in July 2011. The interior was fully renovated, and all of the furnishings replaced, while the variegated-marble facing of the exterior walls was replaced with white granite, and a new Angel Moroni statue was installed atop the temple's main spire.

OREM, Utah • There's always something new in the realm of Latter-day Saint books, films and music. Here's a small sampler of some of the latest developments. Maybe some of these items will help to fill up the idle hours between, before and after general conference sessions.

FILMS

"Redemption": Monterey Video, PG for thematic material, some violence and mild language, $26.95

The stranger-than-fiction story of this colorful, thoughtful Western is straight out of the pages of Utah history: An odd-duck immigrant and gravedigger steals the burial clothing of bodies turned over to his care. His crimes come to light when family members attempt to reclaim the body of a bandit shot and killed while fleeing from the scene of a stagecoach robbery. Marshal Henry Heath shields Jean on an island in the Great Salt Lake, but Baptiste's crimes may have wounded Heath more deeply than anyone. Filmed in Utah and featuring a sprinkling of Hollywood talent, "Redemption" views it protagonists and their unlikely bond from all angles. Writer and director Tom Russell, a Brigham Young University film professor, gets a lot of bang for his filmmaking buck, with authentic and richly detailed costumes, props and sets.

"Unicorn City": Deep Studios and Salt Lake Film Productions, PG for language, $11.95; Online: www.unicorneity.com Even if you've never sat at a table and let a series of random dice rolls determine the fate of your afternoon, you can probably still enjoy the humor in this tale of a tabletop gamer who attempts to bring his fantasy to life in the real world. Besides, where else are you going to hear someone bring the full weight of affronted dignity to bear on a line like, "I'm a bardladin, OK? Slaying and singing is what I do." Filmed in Utah with a (mostly) Utah cast and Utah crew, "Unicorn City" rocked the LDS Film Festival at the SCERA Center for the Arts in Orem before rallying its forces into theaters for a couple of weeks at the end of February.

the world one "Undercover Brother," but there's always room for one more, apparently. In "Undercover Saint," square-jawed Matthew Knight is an antiterrorist agent - just like Claire Danes in "Homeland" – whose next assignment will take him deep into a dangerously seething hotbed of anti-American sentiment: a Mormon singles ward in Salt Lake City! One of the wacky characters he meets there is an ex-Marine (a highly decorated one, no doubt - that which we call "Homeland," by any other name ...), and there's also a hot-to-trot 75-yearold who openly views our Knight in Shining Armor as first-rate marriage material. It's either a novel-length reiected screenplay for a second sequel to "The Singles Ward," or Tom Clancy using a pen name to launch a new line of LDS comedic-romantic espionage thrillers. Or maybe this is just what comes of mixing a 12-pack of decaf Diet Coke with a Hayley Mills/Jason Bourne movie marathon.

"The Rent Collector" by Camron Wright; Shadow Mountain, hardcover, 304 pages, $22.99

"Well it, isn't much, but it pays the rent." Most people have heard somebody say something like that, usually in reference to this or that needed but somehow not entirely fulfilling job. Now imagine that you had to pay the rent by roaming a giant landfill and picking through the trash for recyclables. That's the situation in "The Rent Collector," which places its characters on the fringes of the largest municipal waste dump in Cambodia, where many people's trash literally is their treasure ... such as it is. The real problem for Ki Lim and Sang Ly is that they don't just need money to pay the landlord — their infant son is sick, and each newer, more expensive medicine they try seems not to work. Author Camron Wright was inspired to tell a fictional story about actual events after seeing documentary footage (collected by his son for the film "River of Victory") of people, including a woman named Sang Ly, who live on the outskirts of the actual Stung Meanchey landfill.

Food Storage 101

Quick tips for saving money while stocking your pantry.

PROVO, Utah • A big part of provident living is self-reliance. Now is the time to prepare so that in an emergency or financial hardship, you won't have to rely on your parents, your neighbors, your church or the government to rescue you.

"Some people think that if there is a disaster in the world, the [LDS] Church is going to take care of them," or the government or their neighbor will, says Jeannie Dayton, co-owner of the local instructional baking company Pantry Secrets. "But what will you tell your kids if you aren't prepared, and they are hungry?

Even if you don't have children at home, there is a peace of mind that comes from being prepared for whatever the future may hold. With that in mind, here's a quick primer on food storage, excerpted from the book "Happy Homemaking: An LDS Girl's Guide" (Cedar Fort, $16.99) by Natalie Hollingshead and Daily Herald features editor Elyssa

First Things First: Water

So where should you start? With water, says Don Pectol, vice president of customer service for the Utah-based retailer Emergency Essentials. "In terms of your storage plan, the number one thing is water. A person can live up to a month without food, but within days, you may have damage to vital organs without water."

How much water do you need to store? The Federal Emergency Manage-ment Agency recommends storing at least a three-day supply of water per person. Households should store a minimum of one gallon of water per person per day. "A normally active person needs at least one gallon of water daily just for drinking," says the agency on its website, www.fema.gov.

A three-day supply of drinking water is the minimum you should store, of course. It's ideal to store more if you can. Pectol of Emergency Essentials recom-mends storing at least a two-week supply of water for each person in your household (one gallon per

A Three-Month Supply of Food

In its 2007 "All Is Safely Gathered In" Family Home Storage pamphlet, the LDS Church says the following about a three-month supply of food:

"Build a small supply of food that is part of your normal, daily diet. One way to do this is to purchase a few extra items each week to build a one-week supply of food. Then you can gradually increase your supply until it is sufficient for three months. These items should be rotated regularly to avoid spoilage."

No matter what stage of life you are in, you probably have a pretty good idea of what you like to eat. The trick is to just keep a little extra of it on hand. The following suggestions will help you save money while you are acquiring it.

Make a list. You may find it helpful to make a list of a handful of favorite family meals and all of the ingredients that go into them. That way, you will know what sales to watch for at the grocery store. If, say, your family likes a lot of Mexican food, you can look for sales in the Hispanic foods aisles for sales on chiles, salsa, beans, sauces and so forth.

Watch and record prices: Keep your list in a notebook and record the ingredients' regular prices at the grocery store where you shop. Then watch coupons and ad circulars for items to go on sale. Remember, if you don't want to buy one can of peaches at full retail price, you most certainly don't want to buy 20. (You may find it helpful to sign up for some sort of couponing service, such as Daily Herald's SavvyShopperDeals.com.)

Don't break the bank. Set an amount for food storage in your grocery budget and stick to it. At first, it may only be $10 or $20. Use that money to buy in bulk the best deals you can find on non-perishable items. And then use them! It's so much better to pay 40 cents for a can of beans than $1. As you build your pantry, you'll hopefully get to the point where you are buying the majority of nonperishable items at their lowest prices.

Because you will already have a supply of items you commonly use on hand, your weekly gro-cery bill should decrease. This extra money can then go toward more food storage items. It's a positive cycle.

Think about meat. Remember vou can stockpile meat when it goes on sale as well. Meat is typically the most expensive item in any meal, so taking advantage of a good meat sale means extra savings. If space permits, it's helpful to have an extra chest or freestanding freezer in your home for storage. If that's not possible, purchase as much meat as you can store and afford.

Rotate, rotate, rotate. To keep items from going bad, start using them immediately. When you put items away, put the newest items at the back of the pantry so that older items get used up first. It's also helpful to write the purchase date on everything you store.

Case lot sales! In Utah, many grocery stores hold case lot sales around general conference time, where they sell units of food by the case. These are often offered at deeply discounted prices, and it's a great way to quickly build your pantry. Even if you can only afford one case of food — typically between $10 and $30 - it's a great way to get started.

Store to serve. Storing items for ready-to-assemble meals will allow you to be ready to serve at a moment's notice, and it will reduce the cost of providing a meal to someone. Jeannie Dayton, of Pantry Secrets, says she keeps "brown bag" meals in her pantry with all the items she would need for something like a soup or casserole. These supplies are ready to go as soon as they are needed.

Y Drink Caffeine?

Church clarification causes small ruckus in Provo.

BY CODY CLARK Daily Herald

PROVO, UTAH • The saying goes that if you give a weed an inch, it will take a yard. The same is apparently true of caffeine, the mild-mannered stimulant that gives coffee its kick and has been a key ingredient in numerous soft drinks for years.

A number of pulses began to pound at the end of August when church publicists, responding to the NBC "Rock Center" report "Mormon in America," posted a clarification at MormonNewsroom.org indicating that "the church does not prohibit the use of caffeine."

Because consumption of caffeine has been a "gray area" for many years, with rank-and-file church members continually debating whether official church policy does or does not frown on the likes of Coca-Cola and Mountain Dew, the clarification touched off a small hue and cry after various news organizations brought it to light.

Church officials quickly retracted their tacit endorsement of caffeine, clarifying the Mormon-Newsroom.org clarification to read that "the Church revelation spelling out health practices (Doctrine and Covenants 89) does not mention the use of caffeine."

The brouhaha got new life from the creation of a Facebook group for Brigham Young University students called "BYU for Caffeine." It flared up even more after spokeswoman Carri Jenkins told the BYU student newspaper, The Universe, that BYU's longstanding policy of not selling or serving caffeinated soda drinks on campus was not on account of any prohibition by either BYU officials or LDS Church leaders.

"This decision has been based on what our customers want, and there has not been a demand for caffeinated beverages," Jenkins said. "Dining Services is constantly evaluating the needs and desires of its cus-

An online petition urging BYU to change its stance on caffeinated beverages popped up, and activity on "BYU for Caffeine" surged, with debate on the site becoming so heated that its creator, BYU senior Skyler Thiot, closed it down. Thiriot posted a farewell message that read in part, "The page was never meant to be a debate, but just showing if there was a de-
