Video Leads to Animal Cruelty Charges

Five Dry Creek Dairy employees were fired after an animal-rights group filmed at the location.

BY KIMBERLEE KRUESI kkruesi@magicvalley.com

MURTAUGH • An investigation of a Twin Falls County dairy operation has resulted in video footage of animal cruelty and the termination of five employees.

Luis Bettencourt, who has more than 50,000 milking cows and 34,000 replacement heifers, said he fired the employees in August after watching the footage of cows being beaten and dragged, filmed on his Dry Creek Dairy southwest of Murtaugh.

The video was filmed by a former employee who also works for Los Angeles-based Mercy for Animals, Bettencourt said. The group is an animal rights advocacy nonprofit that leads cruelty investigations across the nation, according to its website.

Three of the five terminated employees are currently being investigated by the Twin Falls County Sheriff's Office, according to court documents.

Jesus Garza is charged with animal cruelty and a pretrial conference in his case has been set for Oct. 16, according to court documents. Javier Victor Rojas-Loayza and Jose Acensio both have warrants out for their arrest for ani-

"It was devastating to us when we found about this," Bettencourt said. "We do not condone this type of behavior."

Security cameras have been installed in the barns and an additional supervisor has been hired to make sure this never happens again, Bettencourt said. The video was also shown to all the employees.

Voters to Decide on Education Laws

BY JULIE WOOTTON

jwootton@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • While Idaho educators and students continue to adjust to education reforms, voters will have their say next month.

The three laws that make up Students Come First will each appear as a proposition on ballots. Voters will decide whether to approve or reject each Proponents and opponents of the laws are passionate.

Public schools chief Tom Luna told the Times-Newsthat if the laws are repealed, it will "unravel everything done in schools over the past two years."

"We recognize that it will be very disruptive if the laws are overturned,"

Luna said the election won't be the last word on the reforms, though.

Education reform laws in other states, he said, have ended up in court regardless of how referendum votes turned out.

"Even if we win these measures, I'm confident that the next step is that the union will go to court," Luna said.

Opponents of Students Come First gathered enough signatures to place the laws on next month's ballots. "We'd like to see all propositions with a 'no' vote," said Mike Lanza, chairman of the "Vote No on Propositions 1, 2, 3" campaign. The Idaho Education Association - the state's teachers union — is supporting the Boise-based campaign. Lanza – who has two children in elementary school - said he's not a teacher and doesn't have any teachers in his family. Why did he get involved? "The laws just seem intuitively bad," he said.

There were objectives behind the laws, he said, but the implementation process was flawed.

Luna said voters should consider that opponents haven't brought forward an alternate plan.

Lanza said he'd like to see the process of education reform done over again in the correct way, with "all parties to the table and good ideas shared."

It's also important, Lanza said, to identity exactly what problem state

URA Approves Plan for Bank's Expansion

BY MELISSA DAVLIN mdavlin@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • First Federal Savings Bank officially announced plans Tuesday to expand its downtown operations and consolidate offices onto one property.

The plan was unveiled at a Twin Falls Urban Renewal Agency meeting, where board members unanimously approved a development agreement with the bank under which it will buy land from the URA for the project.

The expansion includes con-

In May, the Twin Falls City Council declared its intent to sell a little-used, city-owned lot. The URA bought it, then asked for proposals on how to use it. First Federal was the only entity to submit a proposal and plans to pay $60,000 plus closing costs for the lot.

First Federal currently employs about 129 employees spread through several different

Castleford Brings $2M Bond to Voters

BY JULIE WOOTTON jwootton@magicvalley.com

CASTLEFORD • Castleford voters will decide on a $2 million bond next month for improvements to the city's wastewater system.

The current system was installed in 1974 and hasn't been updated since then.

"There are components that are out of compliance or need help," project engineer Don Acheson said.

He works for Riedesel Engineering, a Twin Fallsbased company that's Castleford's city engineering firm.

The city's wastewater facility is a "simple system," Acheson said. Wastewater is collected in the city and drained into evaporative lagoons.

If approved by voters, part of the bond funding would go toward fixing the lagoons.

"The lagoons are leaking," Acheson said. "They need to be rebuilt."

The city of Castleford has a compliance agreement with the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency to address issues with the wastewater lagoons.

Castleford Mayor Twila Crawford said if the bond doesn't pass in November, the city will try again.

It would likely come back during the May election, Acheson said.

Crawford said the city has to take care of problems with the wastewater system.

"We're hoping people will know that it's not our requirement," she said. "The EPA informed us we'd have to do this."

If the bond passes, sewer rates will go up for residents and businesses.

Acheson said he doesn't have details of exactly how much rates will increase. It also depends partly on pending grant applications that could cover a portion of the project cost.

For the small town, just a handful of people will make a decision about the bond ordinance.

Twin Falls County Clerk Kristina Glascock said there are 81 registered voters in Castleford.

If voters approve the bond, a portion of the funding would also be used to replace the lift station for the city's wastewater treatment plant.

Acheson said the lift station is "well beyond its design life."

"It needs to be completely replaced," he said.

Also, bond funding would be used to make some repairs to the wastewater collection system.

The system of pipes and manholes drain waste from individual homes and businesses to the lift station.

"That collection system was recently camera-inspected and cleaned," Acheson said.

But that revealed some defects in the collection system and he said spot repairs need to be made.

Issues include cracks, debris in pipes and "repairs that weren't done properly over the years," Acheson said.

The city of Castleford is partnering with the U.S. Department of Agriculture Rural Development — as well as the Region IV Development Association and other agencies — for the wastewater facility project.

"There's a lot of people

About the Measure

The issue: The city of Castleford is taking a $2 million bond to voters to make improvements to the wastewater treatment facility.

What it's about: The city needs to fix wastewater lagoons under a compliance agreement with the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency. The bond would also pay for other repairs, such as to the wastewater collection system.

What a "yes" vote means: The city can move forward with the repairs. Also, it would mean a yet-undetermined sewer rate increase for Castleford residents and businesses.

out there helping the city," Acheson said.

It's not unusual for small, rural communities to have challenges financing large projects.

"It's a struggle to build the infrastructure that's required," Acheson said.

Moscow Police Chief David Duke said police got a call from a third party at about 1:45 a.m. Sunday from a person reporting the rape.

Police met with the alleged victim. Duke said she was interviewed and said she attended a party and the Sigma Chi fraternity house at 735 Nez Perce Drive in Moscow.

The woman said Jesse Vierstra, a former University of Idaho student, asked her to go for a walk outside. She went with him and the two went to a small bench behind the fraternity house, Duke said.

According to Duke, the Vierstra then forced her to the ground and sexan ually assaulted her, Duke said.

During the alleged attack, the woman was able to get away, Duke said.

Police received information about where Vierstra might be. When he was found he agreed to come to the police station where he was informed of his rights, Duke said.

Duke said police allowed Vierstra to make a phone call, then Vierstra asked for an attorney.

Police got a warrant and seized several pieces of clothing from the location where Vierstra was staying, Duke said.

Duke said the alleged victim said she knew Vierstra from working together at a Twin Falls restaurant.

Buhl Cuts City Projects to Avoid Budget Trouble

BY BLAIR KOCH

For the Times-News

BUHL • Postponing yearly road maintenance isn't optimal, but necessary to keep the city of Buhl's budget in the black.

That was the message from Mayor Tom McCauley during Monday's council meeting. He said a few streets planned for repair won't be done this year.

City Treasurer Elizabeth Barker told the Times-News budgeted tax revenue fell short.

"Every department was affected but the street department was where the major savings could be found," Barker said.

The initial budget supported things like the library, streets and airport to the tune of about $3.39 million in tax revenue. But a couple of months ago, it became clear spending would have to be curtailed as revenue fell short.

"We stopped spending," McCauley said, commending department heads for keeping an eagle eye on expenditures.

That said, Barker indicated remaining fund balances will approach zero as the fiscal year comes to a close.

"There won't be big fund balances to carry forward," Barker said, adding that on a positive note, the general fund won't be drawn down to cover department deficits.

McCauley did caution the stoppage of spending was "at the expense of infrastructure," and something the city would need to look at further.

In other business, the council approved a lot-line variance for a property with two established homes. The property owners, who want to split the property and sell one of the homes, approached the city's planning and zoning department. The department then recommended the council approve the variance.

City Attorney William Nungester said "somewhere back in history" the city allowed the homes to be built, despite one of the structures not meeting the 10-foot lot line requirement.

It was reported that the homes are in good shape and the fire department gave its nod of approval to the variance request.

ITD Responds to Crosswalk Story

In response to the Oct. 6 article, "Business owner hopes to add crosswalk near high school," Idaho Transportation Department spokesman Nathan Jerke wrote the following clarification:

"1. In 2010, ITD met with school district official, including the school district facilities manager (Who I incorrectly called the school district safety officer). It was they who told ITD the crosswalk markings were not necessary at that time. ITD does not have a safety officer.

"2. ITD has not received a request for crosswalk markings to be placed at the intersection from the school district or the City of Twin Falls Traffic Safety Commission.

"3. (Heidi) Heil recently contacted ITD with a request for crosswalk markings. The request is under consideration."

TFSD Foundation Kicks Off Fundraiser

BY JULIE WOOTTON

TWIN FALLS • It's time to bring out the cows.

The Twin Falls School District Education Foundation is hosting its largest yearly fundraiser Friday—the COW P.I.E. (Partner in Education) Challenge.

"We wanted to get an activity that's unique and different," executive director Linda Watkins said, noting it's not a normal fundraising activity. Events will kick off before the varsity football game between cross-town rivals

Twin Falls High School and Canyon Ridge High School

On Friday, gates open at 5 p.m. and cows will be released at 5:30 p.m. at Canyon Ridge High.

Two cows — one representing Twin Falls High and another representing Canyon Ridge High — will be brought out to the center of the field to see which "relieves" itself first.

"The kids will be cheering for their cows," Watkins said.

The winning school's booster club will receive $500.

The foundation is also selling tickets for $25 for one square or $100 for five squares. If a cow does his business first in the square a person has chosen, he or she will win a prize.

The first-place prize is a ticket to a football game between the Seattle Seahawks and New York Jets, $500 for travel expenses and a Twin Falls School District all-seasons athletic pass.

The second-place prize is a ticket to the taping of The Ellen DeGeneres Show or The Late Show with David Letterman, $500 for travel expenses and a school district all-seasons athletic Money raised from the COW P.I.E. Challenge will go toward the foundation's three main areas — academics, student activities and technology.

Over the past few years, the foundation has focused on a three-phase technology campaign. Watkins said every Twin Falls School District classroom will have a projector and interactive whiteboard by the end of the school year.

During the Friday night

During the Friday night events, service members including police officers and firefighters — will be the judges for the activities.

Twin Falls and Canyon Ridge high schools will also compete for the "spirit cowbell" that will reside at one of the schools all year.

Other Friday night activities include cheer and dance contests between the two high schools, as well as a battle of the bands.

Times-News Should Give More Coverage to School Music

We, your readers, are most grateful for the Times-News coverage of the area sports programs of every type. Probably the best I have experienced over the years and many other local papers. It would be further appreciated if a somewhat equal coverage could be accorded the wonderful music programs and talent that we are blessed with from the elementary school bands and choirs up through the symphonies, choral groups and soloists.

While sports can be enjoyable and healthy, for the most part we are relegated to being spectators following college and middle age. Musical participation, on the other hand, only improves in quality and enjoyment as time goes by, witness the ages of the many local teachers and participants.

There are award winning teachers, soloists and groups, competitions, locals touring and/or studying in Europe, beginners in need of encouragement, volunteers worthy of recognition and elders just having a good time. All of interest to the communi-

Between the schools and community, there would surely be enough interesting musical news to fill a weekly page or two. You might even be able to better use some of the current non-interest news fill-in space from Sandpoint and other distant locations.

Idaho Legislature Needs Some New Ideas and Energy

Students have returned to school, so now it is time for voters to study to make informed choices at the Nov. 6 general election.

In a primary election, voters are required to vote a straight party ticket but to do so in a general election is lazy and irresponsible. No one party has all the good ideas, and we benefit when various ideas are debated. Could it be that the other side might at least sometimes be right?

Democracy is based on informed, educated citizens who take their civic duty seriously. We need to listen to multiple sources of information, not just one TV station, for example or one fear-mongering movie. Seek different viewpoints and become comfortable with new ideas (and maybe a new identity for yourself).

Listen " with an open mind to the presidential debates Oct. 16 and 22; and the vice presidential debate on Oct. 11. Do you realize that, in Idaho, six names will be on the ballot for president? Do you know who all six are and what and who they represent?

Also, look at the new local faces who have put themselves out there to run for political office. They are not doing it for the money (Idaho is a low-wage state, even for politicians), but because they have something to contribute, and as new, not entrenched, public servants, they are open to listen to everyone.

Our Idaho Legislature needs some new ideas and energy, and we all would benefit from that. The ballot will also present two proposed changes to the Idaho Constitution and the three Luna education laws. When the Times-News presents pro and con arguments on issues, determine that you will read both sides, not just the one that you already think you believe.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Mitt Romney Needs Your Vote

Did you ever have a relative, friend or neighbor that would listen to what you had to say? We have a good neighbor that listens, the Times-News.

I listened to Mitt and Ann Romney when he said Ann Romney was sick and down with MS. I suppose the treatment and physical therapy for Ann Romney was very expensive. Our governor, Butch Otter, listens to people because he stopped in Buhl and had time to talk. Mitt Romney said he's going to spend less time raising money and more time with voters. I guess he's going to listen to the people. I listen to people talking about Bain and the Olympics, where he worked. I listened to President Obama when they bail out Sylvana and auto bailout. I still respect President Obama, but he is responsible,

George Washington appointed Samuel Osgood as the first postmaster general of America for U.S. government. At the time, there were 75 post offices. Now there are post offices all across the United States. What? No bailout for the U.S. Postal Service that has been in business for 223 years? President George Washington was in the war and military for America. So the military is U.S. government. No bailout for the military. President Obama is the commander in chief, but money is going overseas again.

I used to drive at truck across Balanced Rock Canyon to Castleford. When going down the hill, you want to use a lower gear to control the speed because of the heavy load of spuds pushing the truck forward. And when going up hill, the truck has to have the power again to pull the grade. The trucks made in the United States are built and designed to handle those big loads. The farmers need these kinds of trucks and so does the United States to haul freight.

President Obama's jets need this power to have lifted off in the air and have the power to land. President Obama's airplane needs jet fuel. The trucks need diesel fuel and Mitt Romney needs your vote.

Thank you for listening to me. BONNIE LEE MILLER

Hartgen Represents a Fiscally Responsible Approach to Government

Steve Hartgen has a long list of community accomplishments: threeterm member of the Idaho Capitol Commission, a founding member of the Southern Idaho Economic Development Organization, a longtime Chamber of Commerce member and a former vice-chairman of the Idaho Association of Commerce and Industry.

Since retiring from Lee Enterprises in 2005, Steve has been involved in a wide array of business activities, political campaigns, public service and community affairs. Gov. Otter calls him one of the most accomplished and civic-minded citizens of southern Idaho. He is active on the GOP State Central Committee, was a delegate to the 2008 Republican National Convention and is finishing his second term in the House after serving on the House Education, Environment, and Human Resources/Commerce committees. He chaired the Human Resources Committee and helped pass a state employee pay raise of 2 percent. In addition, he worked on an ad hoc committee to reform judicial pensions and add more financial stability.

Steve supports our Second Amendment right to own and carry firearms, prayer in schools, right to life and multiple use of public lands. A strong supporter of property rights, he sponsored a bill in 2012 to correct taxation on undeveloped lands. Steve represents a conservative, fiscallyresponsible approach to government. He will be an effective voice for southern Idaho in Boise with his respect for traditional values, thoughtful analysis, and sound, common sense decisions.

Ballot Measures Don't Have to Be Controversial to be Important

When Idaho voters go to the polls, they'll be asked to decide the fate of an important measure that would preserve local control of a key feature of our justice system. It's called SJR 102. There hasn't been much talk about it because it's not controversial. Just about everyone who's taken a close look at the measure agrees it's a good SJR 102 would assure misdemeanor probation services in Idaho don't get swallowed up by the state of Idaho. Right now, Idaho's counties employ 108 well-trained, professional probation officers who use evidence-based best practices to supervise about 14,000 offenders who are on probation for misdemeanor crimes.

This arrangement works well because it just plain makes sense. We have county probation officers working with county-based magistrate judges to make sure misdemeanor offenders obey the law. If they don't, they face the possibility of doing time in a county jail.

We don't need to outsource misdemeanor justice to Boise. We need to keep it in our county courthouses where it belongs SJR 102 does that by simply inserting the word felony into the Constitution. That one word would limit the State Board of Correction's power to supervising only adult, felony probationers and parolees, and it would keep misdemeanor probationers under the jurisdiction of the

Just about every lawmaker, judge and county commissioner that I've talked with supports SJR 102. I hope you will, too, because on Election Day, ballot measures don't have to be controversial to be important.

Is Moving Burley Airport Now the Best Use of Resources?

The Burley Airport has not been without controversy and misinformation. Friends of the Burley Airport formed a user's association to vocalize the importance of having a municipal airport for our counties in the upper Magic Valley and to correct many false claims being made by those pushing to build a new airport. Our current airport is not unsafe and adequately meets the needs of the majority of users that include life flight, charter flights, search and rescue, firefighting, crop dusters, repair and freight. It is a vital part of area commerce and growth. The two fatal accidents that occurred over a 40-year period were not due to runway length but rather pilot error. Although an extended runway would better accommodate heavier jet aircraft, it is not necessary for the piston and turbo-prop aircraft. A single longer east-west runway would be less safe in requiring cross wind landings when landing with north-south winds.

I do not oppose relocation of the Burley airport in general. In fact, I compliment our community leaders for being forward thinking. But I ask if moving the airport now is the best use of resources that could be better used to update the flight planning and restroom areas of the current airport at a fraction of the cost. This small investment would have an immediate influence on those expanding businesses that look at investing in our counties.

education reform laws will

Luna said he's the first to admit that "the laws that we passed two years ago weren't perfect."

Changes were made to the laws last year, he said, and more changes will be brought up during the next legislative session.

It's just the second school year the laws - passed by state legislators in spring 2011 - have been in place.

"We've seen the impact of the laws and the good things that have happened in our schools," Luna said.

He cited changes including merit pay for teachers, more classroom technology and the ability for highschoolers to earn college credits for free.

"I don't think anyone will want to go back to the system we had before," Luna said, noting it was rigid and incapable of adjusting to a changing world.

Here is a look at each of the laws:

Proposition 1

Proposition I is the law that covers teacher contracts and negotiations.

One component of the law is phasing out a form of contracts that essentially acted as tenure for teachers. Now, new teachers have one or two-year contracts.

Luna said what will happen with teacher contracts "is a question that will probably be decided in the courts." "Contracts that were in place two years ago could possibly come back into play," he said.

If voters overturn the law,

The law also limits the scope of negotiations between school districts and teachers unions. Negotiations now focus on employee salaries and benefits. In past years, other items such as the school calendar or bell schedule could be negotiated. Negotiated agreements can now only stay in effect for one year. And negotiations must take place in public – a change from when talks happened behind closed doors. Other items in the law include eliminating early retirement incentives for teachers, allowing school boards to reduce salaries or length of terms of certified employees with renewable contracts, and eliminating the practice of firing the last teacher hired if layoffs need to be made.

Also, at least 50 percent of teacher and administrator evaluations are tied to how students are performing.

Proposition 2

Last school year, Idaho educators worked for the first time toward earning a payfor-performance bonus.

That meant meeting both state and local benchmarks.

The Idaho State Department of Education estimates the average bonus for teachers will be about $2,000 per year.

Starting during the 2013-14 school year, teachers will also be eligible to receive a bonus for taking on a leadership role or hard-to-fill position. Educators don't know yet if they'll receive a bonus based on last year's work - or how much. Idaho's Secretary of State Ysura told The Spokesman-Review that bonuses have to go out by Nov. 15 regardless of elec-

Come First

The issue: In spring 2011, Idaho legislators passed a package of three education reform laws called Students Come First. Opponents gathered enough signatures to place the laws on next month's ballot.

What it's about: Voters will decide whether to approve or reject the three laws. Proposition 1 mostly covers teacher contracts and negotiations. Proposition 2 covers pay-forperformance, while Proposition 3 covers technology-related changes.

What a "yes" vote means: The Idaho State Department of Education will continue to implement the laws in public schools statewide.

Results, he said, won't be certified until Nov. 21.

Luna said if educators are told they've earned a bonus, "it's absolutely critical that they get it."

But when money goes out to school districts in November, "it still doesn't guarantee that teachers who earn the money are going to receive it," he said. A total of about $38 million is going to school districts - not directly to teachers. Then, districts

If voters repeal pay-forperformance, Luna said there won't be any law to direct school districts to distribute the bonuses.

will send out payments to teachers after Dec. 15.

Proposition 3

The focus of Proposition 3: technology.

Under the Students Come First laws, the state plans to fund a mobile computing device for every Idaho public high school student and teacher.

Luna said even if voters overturn the technology law, more classroom technology and mobile devices have already become part of the education system.

"It's just become organic," he said.

Under the law, the state also distributes $9 million per year to school districts for classroom technology. Another large part of the law is the requirement that students have to take at least two online credits in order to graduate.

Lanza said he questions why the state now requires students to take online classes.

"There's nothing out there that shows their educational outcome would be improved by this," he said.

Other components of the law include the Dual Credit for Early Completers Program, which allows high school juniors and seniors to earn up to 36 dual or technical credits at no cost.

That's available if they meet state graduation requirements early.

When it comes to mobile devices, one-third of high schools at a time will receive devices at a time starting in the 2013-14 school year.

Luna said 85 percent of the state's high schools applied to be included in the first round of mobile computing device distribution. This fall, high school teachers are also scheduled to receive a mobile computing device. The ISDE plans to upgrade wireless Internet in school buildings and provide training for teachers on how to use the device

FFA Students Get Sense of the Land in State Contest

BY LAURIE WELCH lwelch@magicvalley.com

DECLO • FFA teams from across the state took a hard look at the land Tuesday east of Declo.

Qualifying FFA soils teams from across the state and other teams who wanted to participate in the rangeland evaluations converged on the Skaggs family's 6S ranch with their hoods pulled up over their ears and clipboards in hand.

"It is fun, but it's really chilly," said Danya McGregor, student at Filer High School. Lauren Gleed, state FFA treasurer from Preston, said the students can take what they learn in the field during these events right into a career. "The entire curriculum that we learn in the classroom can be applied out here," Gleed said. Jerome High School FFA adviser Tom Clifton said the state holds five regional contests and the top two qualifying teams from that event progress to the state contest. Locally, Jerome, Filer and Gooding schools made it to the state event, with Jerome placing fifth overall.

"We learn what good land is," said Kylee Clifton, senior at Jerome High School.

The students evaluate a plot of land to determine the soil texture, slope, erosion, climate and surface runoff, among other things.

"I'm hoping the slope doesn't mess me up," said Jerome student Gretchen Hansten.

Clifton said the students then come up with a land classification, determine its value and recommend a land use.

Jerome High School students Kylee Clifton, right, and Gretchen Hansten check the slope on a parcel of ground east of Declo Tuesday during the state FFA rangeland and soils career development event.

Clifton said the evaluations encompass all aspects of the land, including whether building a home on the property would be a good choice and where the best location for a sewage lagoon would be. "It's about more than just growing crops or raising animals," Clifton said.

Prosecutor: Facts Justify the Charge

Loebs said the voluntary manslaughter charge is correct in light of the known facts.

"As in every case, the whole point of what we do and what the police do is, with an unbiased eye, look at the facts." Loebs said. "We believe the correct charge was filed with facts we have."

No other significant eyewitnesses have come forward besides Paiz's girlfriend and a taxi driver at the scene. Prosecutors and police have also reviewed surveillance footage.

"We don't believe there's anything that shows this event," Loebs said.

Loebs said he's never seen such a large group come to the courthouse for a hearing.

"No, I think this is a little different than usual," he said. Loebs said people should keep in mind there hasn't been a trial yet and the legal process will continue to move forward.

"Obviously Mr. Lish is innocent until proven guilty,"

The Incident

In court documents, Twin Falls police detectives state they were dispatched to Canyon Crest for a report of a stabbing at about 12:56 a.m. Saturday.

When officers arrived, they spoke with Paiz's girlfriend, the report by police states. According to the report, she and Paiz were waiting for a taxi when Paiz and Lish had a verbal confronta-

At that point, the taxi driver told Lish to get out because he didn't want the two to fight in the vehicle, the report states. Then, Lish got out and the driver pulled away, the report states.

According to the report, Lish and Paiz continued fighting until Lish stabbed Paiz multiple times, resulting in Paiz's death. The report states Paiz's girlfriend later identified Lish in a photo lineup as the person who stabbed Paiz.

If additional facts come in that would support a different charge, Loebs said the charges could be amended.

The prosecutor's office is working with Paiz's family as the legal process moves forward, he said.

"I did have a long, and I believe cordial and productive meeting with Paiz's family and discussed with them how the system works," Loebs said. "They're obviously going through a lot of turmoil right now. Obviously I respect that.

Felix Baumgartner steps into his capsule before his mission was aborted due to high winds during the final manned flight of Red Bull Stratos in Roswell, N.M.

Skydiver Cancels Supersonic Jump Try

ROSWELL, N.M. (AP) • Extreme athlete and skydiver Felix Baumgartner canceled his planned death-defying 23-mile free fall on Tuesday into the New Mexico desert because of high winds.

The 43-year-old former military parachutist from Austria had hoped to become the first skydiver to break the sound barrier and shatter three other world records.

But the weather forced his team to cancel his planned ascent in a 55-story, ultrathin helium balloon that was to take him to the stratosphere.

Because the balloon is so delicate, it could only take flight if winds were 2 mph or

Those plans were in question before sunrise, when winds at 700 feet above ground — the top of the balloon – were 20 mph, far above the 3 mph maximum for a safe launch, mission meteorologist Don Day said.

With winds calming, they began the launch process, with Baumgartner suiting up and entering the capsule. During the inflation, an live online feed showed winds the balloon whipping

The balloon had been scheduled to launch about 7 a.m. from a field near the airport in a flat dusty town that until now has been best known for a rumored 1947 UFO landing.

Baumgartner was to make a nearly three-hour ascent to 120,000 feet, then take a bunny-style hop from a pressurized capsule into a near-vacuum where there is barely any oxygen to begin what is expected to be the fastest, farthest free fall from the highest-ever manned balloon.

Baumgartner spent Monday at his hotel, mentally preparing for the dangerous feat with his parents, girlfriend and a few close friends, his team said. He had a light dinner of salmon and a salad, then had a massage. He spent Tuesday morning resting in an Airstream trailer near the launch site.

Among the risks: Any contact with the capsule on his exit could have torn the pressurized suit. A rip could have exposed him to a lack of oxygen and temperatures as low as 70 degrees below zero. It could have caused potentially lethal bubbles to form in his bodily fluids, a condition known as "boiling blood."

He could also have spin out of control, causing other risky problems.

The energy drink maker Red Bull, which is sponsoring the feat, has been promoting a live Internet stream of the event. But organizers said there will be a 20-second delay in their broadcast of footage in case of a tragic

Idaho Has No Time to Set Up State Insurance Exchange

BOISE (AP) • Idaho has run out of time to establish a state-run insurance exchange that's required by President Barack Obama's health care overhaul, meaning working with the federal government on an alternative is virtually unavoidable.

That's according to a consultant advising a 13-member panel organized by Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter to gather information on what Idaho should do.

At this point, it's too complicated and risky to launch a state-run exchange, like neighboring states Washington and Oregon plan, said Robert Mitchell, a Denver-based consultant with KPMG LLC hired to help the state make its choice. Those states decided long ago to move ahead with their own online marketplaces for individuals and small businesses to buy insurance by 2014.

What likely remains for Idaho, Mitchell told Otter's Health Insurance Exchange working group on Tuesday, is to choose between a hybrid, state-federal exchange combination, like states like Arkansas have opted for - or cede control of an insurance exchange to federal officials, as Texas and Louisiana are doing.

"There's a whole bunch of deadlines that are looming," Mitchell said. "No matter what you choose, if you go federal, if you go hybrid, you're still going to be interacting with the federal government."

KPMG estimates that only seven or eight states will initially get their own exchanges, while the rest will be working in some fashion with the federal government.

In conservative Idaho, members of the Republican-dominated Legislature have been among the nation's most vocal opponents of Obama's Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act. GOP lawmakers including House Speaker Lawerence Denney, R-Midvale, argue against doing anything. They'd been counting on a favorable U.S. Supreme Court decision, which didn't materialize.

They're now hoping GOP presidential candidate Mitt Romney wins on Nov. 6, then follows through on promises to block the president's reforms.

Meanwhile, insurers like Blue Cross of Idaho have engaged a squadron of lobbyists to argue that Idaho should establish its own exchange offering insurance plans crafted by state leaders, rather than simply relying on the courts or presidential politics to intervene.

GUNMEN STEAL THE BODY OF CARTEL LEADER

MEXICO CITY (AP) • Mexican marines gunned down one of Mexico's most feared drug lords outside a baseball game near the Texas border, then handed over the body to local authorities in a town where it was snatched by armed men in a pre-dawn raid on a funeral home, officials said Tuesday.

The theft of the body believed to belong to Zetas founding member Heriberto Lazcano adds a bizarre and embarrassing twist to one of the most significant victories in Mexico's militarized battle with organized crime, two months before the man who sharply expanded it, President Felipe Calderon, leaves office.

Officials said that, with the body missing, the remaining evidence of Lazcano's fall consists of three fingerprints and a few photos of the army special forces deserter whose brutal paramilitary tactics helped define the devastating six-year war among Mexico's drug gangs and authorities.

Calderon said in a speech Tuesday that the evidence clearly indicated that Lazcano had been killed, and he praised the marines' action, though the president stopped short of an unqualified declaration that the Zetas' leader was dead. Coahuila state Attorney General Homero Ramos said two men were killed outside a baseball game in the town of Progreso Sunday in a gunfight with Mexican marines, the force that has carried most of the recent high-profile operations against drug lords. Many of those operations were launched in cooperation with U.S. officials, who see the marines as more trustworthy and competent than other military and law-enforcement

Ramos and the Mexican navy said the fingerprints of one man matched the records of Lazcano. Early Monday morning, Ramos said, a group of armed men raided the funeral home where the bodies were kept, and forced the funeral director to drive the hearse with the corpses to another location. He did not offer details. The U.S. Embassy in Mexico City said in an emailed statement that, "We have seen reports of the possible death of Heriberto Lazcano. We are awaiting confirmation of those reports."

Lazcano, who is also known as "El Verdugo" (the Executioner), was credited with bringing military tactics and training to the enforcement arm of the once-powerful Gulf Cartel, then splitting from his former bosses and turning the Zetas into one of the country's two most potent cartels, with a penchant for headline-grabbing atrocities and control of territory stretching along the U.S. border and at least as far south as Guatemala. The Zetas have carried out some of Mexico's bloodiest massacres, biggest jail breaks and fiercest attacks on authorities. Most recently, the cartel was linked to last week's assassination of the nephew of the governor of Coahuila, a slaying that prompted the federal government to dispatch additional troops and criminal investigators to the state.

Grabbing the bodies of fallen accomplices is a trademark of the Zetas, who have retained some of the tactics and institutional culture of the military deserters who founded the group, said George Grayson, an expert on the Zetas and co-author of "The Executioner's Men: Los Zetas, Rogue Soldiers, Criminal Entrepreneurs and the Shadow State They Created."

"The Zetas take care of their dead," he said. "El Lazca was special forces. There is an esprit de corps, like the Marines. They never leave a comrade

Civil War Leaves Syria in Ruins

BEIRUT (AP) • In Syria's cities and towns, entire blocks of apartment buildings have been shattered, their top floors reduced to pancaked slabs of concrete. Centuries-old markets have been gutted by flames and gunfire in places like Aleppo and Homs — an irreplaceable chunk of history wiped out in a few hours of battle. And then there are the many factories, oil pipelines, schools, hospitals, mosques and churches that have been systematically destroyed in nearly 19 months of violence.

Aside from the human tragedy of the many lives lost in Syria's civil war - activists estimate the death toll has now passed 32,000 killed - there is the staggering damage to the country's infrastructure, economy and cultural treasures.

Syrian Prime Minister Wael al-Halqi said last week that the economic losses from the ongoing conflict have cost the country about $34 billion, with the figure rising daily, while the opposition estimates the loss at about $100 billion. Experts say the real figure cannot be measured with any accuracy, given the continuing nature of the raging violence and the difficulties involved with getting independent observers into the country to assess the damage. Although there are some pockets of Syria that have been relatively shielded from the conflict, the destruction in most of the country's major cities is staggering. Experts warn that whenever the civil war ends, it will take a monumental international effort, and perhaps a generation of Syrians, to rebuild what has been broken. "In terms of infrastructure, major parts of Syria have effectively been bombed back to Ottoman times," said Ammar Abdul-Hamid, a Syrian activist and a Washington-based fellow at the Foundation for Defense of Democracies.

The London-based Syrian Network for Human Rights, which compiles statistics from the conflict, said in a Sept. 28 report that 589,000 buildings - including residential homes, schools, mosques, churches and hospitals - have been destroyed, with thousands more severely damaged. The group said it used specialized civil engineers to come up with its damage estimate and put the cost of reconstructing residential properties and other buildings at about $40 billion. Aleppo, Syria's largest city and its commercial and cultural center, has been hit hardest by the violence, along with the central industrial city of Homs.

When the uprising began, inspired by Arab Spring revolts that brought down longtime dictators in Tunisia, Egypt and Libya, Syrian forces used light weapons to disperse largely peaceful protesters. As armed elements began to fight back, the Assad regime began using heavy machine guns, artillery and tanks against them.

Al-Qaida Makes Comeback in Iraq

BAGHDAD (AP) • Al-Qaida is rebuilding in Iraq and has set up training camps for insurgents in the nation's western deserts as the extremist group seizes on regional instability and government security failures to regain strength, officials say.

Iraq has seen a jump in al-Qaida attacks over the last 10 weeks, and officials believe most of the fighters are former prisoners who have either escaped from jail or were released by Iraqi authorities for lack of evidence after the U.S. military withdrawal last December. Many are said to be Saudi or from Sunnidominated Gulf states. During the war and its aftermath, U.S. forces, joined by allied Sunni groups and later by Iraqi counterterror forces, managed to beat back al-Qaida's Iraqi branch.

But now, Iraqi and U.S. officials say, the insurgent group has more than doubled in numbers from a year ago from about 1,000 to 2,500 fighters. And it is carrying out an average of 140 attacks each week across Iraq, up from 75 attacks each week earlier this

Taliban Shoots 14-year-old Activist

MINGORA, Pakistan (AP) • Fourteen-year-old Malala Yousufzai was admired across a battle-scarred region of Pakistan for exposing the Taliban's atrocities and advocating for girls' education in the face of religious extremists. On Tuesday, the Taliban nearly killed her to quiet her message.

A gunman walked up to a bus taking children home from school in the volatile northern Swat Valley and shot Malala in the head and neck. Another girl on the bus was also wounded.

The young activist was airlifted by helicopter to a military hospital in the frontier city of Peshawar. A doctor in the city of Mingora, Tariq Mohammad, said her wounds weren't life-threatening, but a provincial information minister said after a medical board examined the girl that the next few days would be crucial.

Malala began writing a blog when she was just 11 under the pseudonym Gul Makai for the BBC about life under the Taliban, and began speaking out publicly in 2009 about the need for girls' education which the Taliban strongly opposes. The extremist movement was quick to claim responsibility for shooting her.

"This was a new chapter of obscenity, and we have to finish this chapter," Taliban spokesman Ahsanullah Ahsan

The shooting provoked outrage across the country, angering Pakistanis who have seen a succession of stories about violence against women by the Taliban. "This attack cannot scare us nor the courageous Malala. This cowardly act cannot deter Malala to give up her efforts," said Azizul Hasan, one of the girl's cousins. Prime Minister Raja Pervaiz Ashraf condemned the attack and called her a daughter of Pakistan. State Department spokeswoman Victoria Nuland called the shooting "barbaric" and "cowardly."

In her BBC blog, Malala wrote about not wearing her uniform to school after officials warned it might attract the Taliban's attention, and how many other students moved out of the valley after the Taliban issued an edict banning girls from school.

While chairing a children's assembly supported by UNICEF in the valley last year, the then-13-year-old championed a greater role for young people. "Girl members play an active role," she said, according to an article on the U.N. organization's website. "We have highlighted important issues concerning children, especially promoting girls' education in Swat."

7..... William D Larsen

April 4, 1920-Oct. 5, 2012

BURLEY • William D Larsen, age 92, of Burley, passed away Friday, Oct. 5, 2012, at Parke View Rehabilitation and Care Center in Burley of causes incident to age.

The ninth child of William E and Dora May (Davis) Larsen, D was born April 4, 1920, in Clifton, Idaho, where he spent the first few years of his life. Moving was common place to the Larsen family as they struggled to make ends meet in hardscrabble times. D lived in Clifton and Fairview, Idaho, Logan and Brigham City, Utah, and Jerome and Burley, Idaho, where he graduated from Burley High School in D served in the 341st Company, F Corps of Engineers during World War II, which involved even more moving as he built bridges and roads on the Al-Can Highway and later moved across Europe with the Allied Forces. He and his company constructed roads and bridges for the troops as they fought to defeat Hitler. During that time, he moved more times than he cared to count.

After returning home from the Army, D bought his father's farm and vowed never to move again - a promise he kept until age necessitated more care. He farmed with horses for several years before buying his first tractor. Horses were a great love of D's, and he later maintained he should have continued farming with them.

Choice family memories remain of horseback rides, buggy rides, exploring the Oregon Trail with D's wagon and participating in a wagon train re-enactment. There are also memories of learning to work, water fights, bowling, fishing, hunting, camping, family reunions and lots of visits. Family was important to D, and he kept current with his children's, grandchildren's and great-grandchildren's activities and loved their visits. D was never in a hurry to die, but he has recently missed his parents; four sisters; and seven brothers, all of whom preceded him in death. We know he is enjoying a great reunion with them and a fishing trip or two.

In 1947, D met Marjorie Wixom at the Y-Dell dance center. She soon became his eternal companion on July 3, 1947. They shared 65 years here and look forward to eternity together. To this union were born five children, DeAnn Baker (Dale) of Chubbuck, Idaho, Kathy Warnick (Jerry) and Carolyn Peterson (Nordell), all of Layton, Utah, Brent Larsen (Holly) of Burley, Idaho, and Reed Larsen (Linda) of Pocatello, Idaho. D was active in the LDS Church and served in several callings, including teaching positions, High Priest group leader and service missions to the Employment Center and the Canning Center.

D is survived by his wife, Marjorie of Burley; his children; 21 grandchildren; 45 great-grandchildren; a sister-in-law, Verda Larsen; and his wife's siblings, Helen Ivie (Russ), Clyde Wixom (Bennetta), Verna Dean King and Paul Wixom (LaRae).

The funeral will be held at 11 a.m. Saturday, Oct. 13, at the Burley LDS 3rd and 7th Ward Church, 2200 Oakley Ave. in Burley, with Bishop Steve Garn officiating. Military rites will be provided by the Mini-Cassia Veterans Organization. Burial will be in Pleasant View Cemetery. Friends may call from 6 until 8 p.m. Friday, Oct. 12, at Rasmussen Funeral Home, 1350 E. 16th St. in Burley, and from 10 until 10:45 a.m. Saturday at the church.

The family suggests memorials be directed to the LDS Church Perpetual Education Fund.

Long-Missing Colo. Marine Buried with Full Honors

DENVER (AP) • A Colorado family's years of waiting ended Tuesday when they finally buried a fallen Marine who had been missing since a helicopter crash during the rescue of an American ship crew seized by Cambodia's Khmer Rouge in 1975.

Pfc. James Jacques was laid to rest with full military honors at Fort Logan National Cemetery in Denver on what would have been his 56th birthday.

About 50 Vietnam War veterans holding American flags lined a street in the sprawling hilltop cemetery. Doves were released after three volleys were fired into the air. "We never lost hope that he would come home, and that day has come," said Delouise Guerra, Jacques' older sister. "Now we all have Jacques, then 18 years old, was on a helicopter that crashed during the rescue of the cargo ship S.S. Mayaguez crew in May 1975. Of the 26 people aboard the helicopter, 13 were rescued and the other 13 were declared missing, including Jacques. Jacques was among hundreds of Marines and airmen sent to storm Koh Tang Island, about 60 miles off the coast of Cambodia, to rescue the Mayaguez crew. The helicopter carrying Jacques crashed into the surf off Koh Tang Island amid unexpectedly heavy fire from Cambodian fighters. All 39 crew Mayaguez members were released safely by Cambodia, but some 40 U.S. servicemen were killed. A Cambodian had turned over the remains to a U.S.-Cambodian search team in 2007. Newly available DNA technology allowed researchers to confirm the identity this year.

Betty Mink Oct. 2, 1918-Oct. 5, 2012

WENDELL • Elizabeth Jane "Betty" Mink passed away Friday, Oct. 5, 2012, three days after her 94th birthday. She was loved by everyone she touched and will be greatly missed by her family and friends.

In celebration and joy of the life of Betty Mink, our beloved Mom and Grandma, a funeral service will be at 11 a.m. Saturday, Oct. 13, at the Wendell United Methodist Church. Internment will be at the Wendell Cemetery following the service.

Betty was born Oct. 2, 1918, to Mary Jane and David Powell in a small farm house west of Wendell. She joined sister, Dillis; brother, Emlyn; and sister, Doris. In the next few years followed brothers, Jack, Howard and Glen; and two sisters, Gwen and Mary. A close family, they worked hard and played just as hard together. There was not a lot of money, but a great deal of love.

Betty attended school in Wendell and graduated with the class of 1936. Soon after graduation, she met a young farmer named Masten Mink. They married July 1, 1937, and settled in Gooding, where they farmed and milked cows and raised three sons, Jack, Tyke and Dale. When Masten retired, Betty began a new career working at Idaho School for the Deaf and the Blind. For Betty it wasn't a job but a labor of love.

She formed many close friendships with those she worked. She retired in May 1984.

Betty and Masten enjoyed playing pinochle with family and friends, a tradition she continued the remainder of her life. After Masten passed away in 1996, Betty sold the farm and moved back to Wendell. She enjoyed gardening, playing pinochle all over the valley with "great friends" and time with her grandkids. Betty was a hospital auxiliary volunteer and an active member of the Rebekahs for many years.

Betty is survived by her sons, Jack and his wife Debbie of Buhl, and Tyke and his wife Marla of Bellevue; and brothers, Glenn and his wife Lillian of Meridian, and Howard and his wife, Jeanne of Wendell. She was preceded in death by her parents; husband, Masten; son, Dale; sisters, Dillis, Doris, Mary and Gwen; and brothers, Emlyn and Jack.

We would like to thank Jeannie Benson, Shirley Carpenter, Amber and Kristi from Alliance Home Health and Hospice for their compassionate care of Betty during the time of her illness.

In lieu of flowers, please make donations to your favorite charity. Arrangements are under the direction of Rost Funeral Home, McMurtrey Chapel in Mountain Home.

Leo Thomas Knowles

Nov. 25, 1924-Oct. 7, 2012

SHOSHONE • Leo Thomas Knowles, an 87-year-old

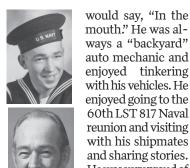

Shoshone resident, passed away Sunday, Oct. 7, 2012, with his family at his side at the Twin Falls Care and Rehabilitation Center.

He was born Nov. 25, 1924, in Emmett, Idaho, the first born child of Leo Osborne and Isabelle (Pitman)

Knowles. In 1935, he moved to Dietrich, where he attended schools. In 1943, he enlisted in the U.S. Navy "until the war was over." He received his naval training at Farragut Naval Training Center in Idaho. He was eventually sent to Evansville, Ind., where he was assigned as a motor machinist's mate, a member of the "Black Gang," for the landing Ship Tank (LST) 817. Dad always joked that LST stood for "Large Slow Target," since the top speed of the LST was about 11 knots, depending on which way the wind was blowing. LSTs transported tanks and other heavy equipment for the war's effort, and they were always an easy target for enemy submarines.

During the spring, summer and early fall of 1945, the LST 817 made four trips from the Philippines to Okinawa during the Battle of Okinawa. Okinawa was the largest amphibious invasion of the Pacific Campaign and the last major naval campaign of World War II. He left the navy in 1946 with an honorable discharge and returned to Dietrich. He married Gloria Holt of Shoshone in Elko, Nev., in 1947. They were later divorced. Leo lived in Shoshone for the last 65 years of his life. He worked for the Idaho Department of Transportation, where he was the parts and supply foreman until his retirement in 1986.

Leo was an avid hunter and fisherman and enjoyed gardening up to the time of his death. When asked where he caught his latest big fish he mouth." He was always a "backyard" auto mechanic and enjoyed tinkering with his vehicles. He enjoyed going to the 60th LST 817 Naval reunion and visiting with his shipmates and sharing stories. He was very proud of his military service and those he served with in the heat of battle.

He is survived by his three children, Dennis Knowles of Cary, Ken (Ruth) Knowles of Burley and Debbie Keller of Twin Falls; five grandchildren and their families, Jessie Knowles (Dave) Pelham of Royal City, Wash., Justin (Sandy) Knowles of Palmdale, Calif., Heather (Ben) Felix of Grand Junction, Colo., Trevor (Erin) Knowles of Broken Arrow, Okla., and Hillary (Scott) Johnson of Dallas, Texas; 15 great-grandchildren, Ashlyn, Johnathan, Cody, Cami, Kyle, Ryan, Dylan, Jaden, Josh, Brendon, Morgan, Andrew, Sarah, Tate and Cole; and his sister, Edith Ward of Twin Falls. He was preceded in death by his parents; his brother, Don Knowles; his nephew, Leo Donnavon Knowles; and his niece, Connie Jean Knowles Smith.

The funeral service will be held at 11 a.m. Saturday, Oct. 13, at the Shoshone LDS Church, with Bishop Wallace Bingham conducting. The burial will follow at the Shoshone Cemetery, with full military honors under the direction of the Idaho National Guard Honor Guard. A visitation for family and friends will take place from 10 until 10:45 a.m. Saturday at the Shoshone LDS Church.

Donations can be made to any veteran's organization. Funeral arrangements are under the care and direction of Demaray Funeral Service, Shoshone Chapel. Condolences may be shared with the family by visiting the obituary link at www.demarayfuneralservice.com.

I know that eyesight is precious. What can I do to protect mine? I am 62.

Have your eyes checked regularly by an eye care professional—an ophthalmologist or optometrist. Yearly eye exams are suggested for people over age 60. Be aware that during the exam the eye care professional may put drops in your eyes to dilate the pupils. This way he or she can look at the back of each eye. Remember to bring another driver to get you home safely. While a little inconvenient, dilation is the best way to find eye diseases that have no early signs or symptoms. Have your eyeglass prescriptions checked during this visit. Seek professional help right away if you: suddenly can't see or things look blurry; have eye pain, double vision or see flashes of light; or, experience redness or swelling of your eye or eyelid. See your doctor about diabetes and high blood pressure, which can cause eye problems if not treated.

CRAZY FOR KALE

BY ANDREW WEEKS

aweeks@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • As soon as the temperature drops, some folks start thinking of ways to stay healthy during the cold months. Think kale: a leafy green vegetable that resembles wild cabbage and is full of antioxidants.

There's a lot you can do with kale in recipes, too.

Twin Falls resident Jane McCarron has been eating kale since she was a child and now uses it in salads and a Dutch kale hash called Boerenkool.

"We have some Dutch in our family," she said. "This comes from that line."

A particularly popular way to use kale: "Take the leaves and coat them with olive oil and sea salt," McCarron said. "And then bake them in the Crunchy kale is trendy. "Kale can be boiled, which decreases its cancer-fighting ability, stir-fried, steamed or microwaved," the Chicago Tribune wrote. "But the way to make a can't-stop-eating-'em treat the whole family will crave is to bake it until crispy and crunchy. The sturdy leaves hold their shape better than other leafy vegetables when baked."

When McCarron's California sister-in-law visits, McCarron makes sure she has plenty of organic kale at the house.

"She puts it in rice," Mc-Carron said. "There's a lot of vitamins in kale; it's really good for you. A lot of vegetarians will eat it."

Kale has hit the headlines in recent months, with kale lovers and nutritionists touting its healthy benefits.

"Like most people," the same Chicago Tribune article stated, "healthy eaters get the munchies too. ... Crispy kale snacks are the most fun food you can eat while giving a gift to your body. Kale contains tons of nutrients, adds few calories and, if prepared right, delights your taste buds." Please see KALE, F2

From an Oct. 9 New York Times article: "Like its cousins, kale is packed with health-promoting sulfur compounds, and it has been found to have the greatest antioxidant capacity of all fruits and vegetables. It's an excellent source of vitamins K, A and C, as well as manganese, and a very good source of dietary fiber, calcium, iron and potassium. All of this nutritional value comes in a low-calorie package."

Television personality Mehmet Oz – better known as Dr. Oz — touts kale, too.

"The best way to infuse your body with vitamin K," Oz writes on his website, "is through the leafy green like kale. One cup of kale has an incredible almost 700 percent of the daily recommendation of vitamin K."

He recommends kale salad, offering a simple recipe: "Strip the kale leaves off the dense middle stalk, tearing them into small pieces (which makes for easier digestion). For one head of kale, use a dressing of 2 tablespoons of nutritional yeast, fresh lemon juice and half an avocado, mashed up (which also contains potassium and fiber), to serve as the fat in lieu of oil. Mix these three ingredients together then work through the kale."

You can eat kale raw, but to McCarron it tastes better when cooked or mixed with other foods. "It doesn't taste that good to me unless you put stuff with it."

She does, however, like it in salad with apples and walnuts.

McCarron co-owns Rock Creek Grill in Twin Falls and said her restaurant currently uses it just as a garnish. Rock Creek Restaurant does the same, said coowner Terry Hancock.

But Gretchen's restaurant in Sun Valley uses kale in some of its dishes, while The Ram restaurant, also in Sun Valley, recently put kale on its menu. "We use it mixed in with parts of other dishes," said server Deborah Fox, noting that a recent side dish is kale sauteed "for just a minute" with a little garlic and chili flakes. "It's deli-

Michelle Rehwalt said she uses it in smoothies. Mary Jones Burkhardt said the same, while Deborah Hudson said her brothers eat it raw or fry it in onions, olive oil and seasonings.

These, of course, are just some of the ways to get kale into your diet.

Soda Industry: Vending Machines Will Show Calories

BY CANDICE CHOI

Associated Press

NEW YORK • As criticism over sugary sodas intensifies, Coke, Pepsi and Dr Pepper are rolling out new vending machines that will put calorie counts right at your fingertips.

The move comes ahead of a new regulation that would require restaurant chains and vending machines to post calorie information as early as next year, although the timetable and specifics for complying with that requirement are still being worked out.

"They're seeing the writing on the wall and want to say that it's corporate responsibility," said Mike Jacobson, executive director of the Center for Science in the Public Interest, which advocates for food safety and nutrition.

The U.S. Food and Drug Administration has proposed a less-stringent amendment that would allow vending operators to post the information on a poster on the side of the machine, Jacobson said. But he said the industry's announcement Monday shows posting calories right on machines is perfectly feasible.

"This would be an important step forward," he said. "Currently, people don't think about calories when they go up to a vending machine. Having the calories right on the button will help them make choices."

The American Beverage Association, which represents Coca-Cola Co., Pepsi-Co Inc. and Dr Pepper Snapple Group Inc., said the calorie counts will be on the buttons of the machines, which will also feature small decals reminding the thirsty that they can choose a low-calorie drink.

The vending machines will launch in Chicago and Antonio municipal buildings in 2013 before appearing nationally.

Applesauce Good Enough to Be at the Dinner Table

BY ELIZABETH KARMEL

For The Associated Press

Each fall, I can't help myself from buying apples by the bushel. I get so excited by the crisp air and the fresh-fromthe-orchard fruit that I inevitably buy way too many.

So I end up baking pies and apple cakes. I even saute fresh sliced apples for breakfast the way my mother did when I was a child. But my hands-down favorite thing to make with my abundance? Homemade applesauce. I love to make homemade applesauce when I want to perk up a less-thanexciting meal and impress my dining companions with something unexpectedly de-

I remember my first taste of what has become my goto recipe. My mother was making Julia Child's French apple tart. Child's recipe has a bed of well-seasoned applesauce on the bottom and a fan of apricot-jam glazed apples on the top. When I tasted Child's brandy-laced applesauce, I quickly decided that was the best part of the tart. Since then, I have used a variation of that applesauce as my own.

I love the process of peeling the apples, cutting them into rough chunks and placing them in my heavy enameled Dutch oven. I use whatever apples I have on hand. Sometimes they are all the same variety and sometimes they are a mix.

I toss the apples with lemon juice, a little sugar and cinnamon to season them and keep them from turning brown. I add lemon zest for zing and salt for balance. Then I put the lid on the pot and wait patiently while the apples cook and give up their natural juices. In just 15 to 20 minutes, they are ready to mash and give way easily with a fork or a spoon.

You could serve the applesauce at this stage, but the next step is what makes it exceptional!

Once the apples are cooked down to a rough mash, I add just enough sweet butter to round out the tart acidity of the apples. Then I add a splash of cognac or apple brandy to add a depth of flavor. The mixture is then brought to a boil and simmered for 5 minutes until all of the raw alcohol is cooked away, leaving just the fabulous flavor. And that is the secret to the best homemade applesauce you've ever

It's old-fashioned and new-fangled all at once and every time I serve it with roasted chicken or grilled pork chops, the resounding opinion is that the applesauce was the best part of the meal.

This recipe is easily halved or doubled. What you don't eat warm, you can refrigerate and eat "leftover" for a week. It is the perfect recipe for all those leftover apples from your applepicking adventures.

Spiked Side Dish

Applesauce I like to cook the apples until they are tender, but still irregular in shape and a bit chunky. And since this is a side dish and not a dessert, I don't use very much sugar, just enough to pull out the flavor of the apples. Start to finish: 45 minutes. Servings:

4 pounds tart apples, such as Granny Smith or Pink Lady (a combination is great)

1/2 to 1 cup sugar (depending on desired sweetness) 1/4 teaspoon salt

Zest and juice of 1 lemon (about 1/4 cup juice) 1 teaspoon cinnamon 1/4 cup (1/2 stick) unsalted butter 1/4 cup apple brandy (such as Calvados)

Peel, core and quarter the apples, then place them in a heavy-bottomed Dutch oven or large saucepan. Sprinkle 1/2 cup of the sugar, the salt, lemon zest and juice, and the cinnamon over the apples. Toss gently. Cover the pot and set over low-medium heat. Every 5 minutes, stir the apples until they begin to release their juices and start to break down, about 15 to 20 minutes. If the apples seem too dry, add water a couple tablespoons at a time, and continue to cook until tender. Taste. If the apples are too tart for you, add more sugar. Add the butter and apple brandy. Stir vigorously until the apples are the texture of a rough applesauce. You want it to be chunky. Bring to a boil, then reduce to a simmer for 5 minutes. Taste again. Adjust seasonings if necessary, and serve hot, room temperature or

Massive Flavor in a Little Bottle: A Hoisin Primer

BY J.M. HIRSCH

Associated Press

Mmmm. Nothing says good eats like soy residue.

Except that in Chinese cooking, it really can. And you very likely have enjoyed that soy residue, many times and in many ways.

I'm talking about hoisin, a classic ingredient for sauces both for dipping at the table and basting during cooking - in China. Hoisin is a thick, dark red-tobrown sauce that blends sweet-spicy-savory flavors, a profile not all that different from ketchup.

It is made from the leftover mash of fermented soy beans produced when making traditional soy sauces. That mash is combined with sugar, chilies, garlic, vinegar, salt, sometimes five-spice powder and either flour or cornstarch (to thicken). Though hoisin is widely used on grilled meats (as a barbecue sauce) and in dipping sauces, it's best known for a starring role in Peking duck and moo shu pork.

The trick with hoisin is to use it sparingly. Unlike ketchup (which I firmly believe should be served by the gallon), a little hoisin goes a long way.

To make a dipping sauce, thin a teaspoon or so with sesame oil and soy sauce.

Uncut, it can be brushed directly onto meats for grilling. You'll usually find hoisin in glass jars amongst the grocer's other Asian ingredients. Refrigerated after opening, it should last months. For more ideas for using hoisin, check out the Off the Beaten Aisle column over on Food Network: http://bit.ly/QTxLLa

Hoisin Turkey Meatball Grinders with Spicy Tomato Relish

Start to finish: 30 minutes. Servings: 4.

2 tablespoons finely chopped fresh cilantro 2 scallions, finely chopped 2 cloves garlic, minced 2 tablespoons grated fresh Zest of 1 lime

1/4 cup hoisin Salt

1 1/3 pounds ground turkey 3/4 cup panko (Japanesestyle) breadcrumbs 4 tablespoons butter, divided

2 plum tomatoes, diced 1/2 cup creme fraiche 1 teaspoon hot sauce Four 6-inch sub rolls

Heat the oven to 425 degrees. Coat a baking sheet with cooking spray. In a large bowl, combine the egg, cilantro, scallions, garlic, ginger, lime zest, hoisin and 1/2 tablespoon salt. Mix well. Add the turkey, then knead well with your hands until evenly mixed. Add the breadcrumbs and mix again. Form the mixture into about 20 balls.

In a large skillet over medium-high, melt 2 tablespoons of the butter. Add half of the meatballs and brown on all sides, about 5 minutes total. Transfer to the prepared baking sheet, then repeat with the remaining butter and meatballs. Bake the meatballs for 7 to 8 minutes, or until cooked through and a thermometer inserted at the center of a meatball reads 165 degrees.

Meanwhile, in a small bowl mix the tomatoes, creme fraiche, hot sauce and 1/2 teaspoon of salt. Spread a quarter of the mixture down the center of each sub roll. When the meatballs are done, arrange 5 in each roll. Serve immediately. Taking the Slowly out of Slowly Simmered Beef Stew

BY J.M. HIRSCH Associated Press

Almost by definition, beef stew isn't a weeknightfriendly dish.

That's mostly a matter of the meat. Stew meat generally is tough and requires a long simmer to become tender. But who has time for a long simmer at the end of a long day at work?

But stews are so right for the season, it seemed a shame to give them up. Sure, you could plan ahead and make them on the weekend. But I'm guessing that I'm not the only person whose weekends rarely are relaxed enough to spend much time contemplating my dinners for the rest of the week.

Instead, I decided to come up with a beef stew that could be tossed together on a weeknight. It was easier than I expected.

The first step was replacing the meat. Stew meat was right out. But tender sirloin tips worked perfectly. But it was important to adapt the cooking technique to this cut of meat. If I just tossed it into the pot and let it cook with the rest of the ingredients, they would end up tough from overcooking. But I didn't want to add them only at the end, either, as this would prevent browning.

The solution was browning the meat first, then setting it aside while the other ingredients cooked. The meat then was returned to pot toward the end of cooking. The result was perfect taste and texture.

Speedy Beef and Butternut Stew

Start to finish: 45 minutes (15 minutes active). Serv-

2 tablespoons olive oil 1 1/2 pounds sirloin beef tips, cut into 1-inch chunks

3 cups cubed butternut squash (1/2-inch cubes) 1 cup baby carrots, halved 1 large yellow onion, diced 2 cloves garlic, minced 28-ounce can crushed tomatoes 2 cups beef broth 1 teaspoon smoked paprika 1/2 teaspoon dried thyme 1/2 teaspoon mustard powder

Salt and ground black pepper

In a large saucepan over medium-high, heat the oil. Add the beef, in batches if needed to avoid crowding the pan, and cook, turning, until browned on all sides but still rare at the center, about 5 minutes. Use a slotted spoon to transfer the beef to a plate.

Return the saucepan to the heat and add the squash and carrots. If the pan is too dry to easily saute the vegetables, you can add a splash of olive oil. Saute until the squash begins to brown, about 5 minutes. Add the onion and garlic, then continue to cook until the onion is tender, about another 6 minutes.

Add the tomatoes, broth, paprika, thyme and mustard powder. Bring to a simmer and cook until the carrots and squash are tender, about 15 to 20 minutes. Return the beef to the pot, as well as any juices that have accumulated on the plate. Simmer for 5 minutes, then season with salt and pepper.

There's More to Vinegar than Sour Grapes

BY KATHLEEN PURVIS

The Charlotte Observer

Question: I've heard that you can make wine vinegar from leftover wine. Do you just let the wine sit?

Answer: Making wine vinegar is as easy as letting wine ferment - and as difficult as letting wine ferment.

Pouring leftover wine in a jar may eventually get you vinegar, but it may take a very long time, and it may turn into a sour mess.

To make the wine into good vinegar, you have to add a bacterial culture. You can try to get what's called a Mother of Vinegar – a cloudy clump of cells that develops in vinegar - or you can get a live culture, called acetobacter, from a store that sells wine-making supplies. You also can go to a store and look for unpasteurized vinegar that has particles in it. That's acetobacter.

Next, save up enough wine to start a good batch. Combine 1 part vinegar culture to 3 parts wine to 1 part distilled water in a clean glass container (a crock with a spigot is handy). Cover the top with cloth or a loose lid to let air in while keeping bugs out. Then let it sit in a quiet spot for a month or two.

It should develop a mother, a big, floating cloud. When the mother drops to the bottom, that's a sign the vinegar is ready. Pour off the vinegar and bottle it. Save the mother to start the next batch. Clean the crock well, gather more wine and start another batch, returning the mother to the crock.

Pomegranate molasses, a concentrate of pomegranate juice, gives these pickled florets an elusive tart and fruity $flavor\ reminiscent\ of\ tamarind.$

It's helpful to have a jar lifter or tongs with rubberized/silicone ends for transferring the jars into and out of the hot-water baths.

For best flavor, store the jars in a cool, dry place for 6 weeks before using. The pickled cauliflower is good for up to 1 year. Once opened, refrigerate for up to 2 months.

Adapted from "The Pickled Pantry: From Apples to Zucchini, 150 Recipes for Pickles, Relishes, Chutneys and More," by Andrea Chesman (Storey, 2012).

Pickled Cauliflower With Pomegranate Molasses

Makes 1 quart or 2 pints. Pomegranate molasses is available at Middle Eastern markets and in the international aisle of some grocery stores.

- 1 1/4 cups distilled white vinegar
- 1 1/4 cups water
- 2 tablespoons pomegranate molasses 1/2 cup sugar
- 2 teaspoons pickling or fine sea salt 1 or 2 green cardamom pods
- 2 teaspoons coriander seed
- 3 to 3 1/2 cups cauliflower florets
- 1/2 white or yellow onion, cut into thin slices

Place a rack or towel inside a deep pot. Fill with water and bring to a boil over high heat. Add the jar(s) upright, making sure there is at least an inch of water over them, and boil for 10 minutes. Turn off the heat, leaving the jars in the water until you are ready to use

Soak new jar lid(s) and ring(s) in a small saucepan of hot, but not boiling, water, leaving them in the water until you are ready to use them.

Combine the vinegar, water, pomegranate molasses, sugar and salt in a medium saucepan. Bring to a boil, stirring until the sugar dissolves.

While the vinegar mixture heats, drain the jar(s), lid(s) and ring(s). Place the cardamom and coriander inside the jar(s). Mix the cauliflower and onion, then pack into the jar(s). Pour in the hot vinegar mixture, leaving 1/2 inch of headspace. Wipe the rim(s) to clear away any food particles or brine. Use a clean chopstick to stir/remove any air bubbles between the food and the sides of the glass. Seal with the lid(s) and ring(s), making sure the latter is gently tightened.

You can use the same pot used to sterilize the jar(s) (with rack or towel). Bring the water to less than a full, rolling boil over medium-high heat (adjusting as needed). Use a jar lifter or tongs to transfer the jar(s) to the water bath, making sure there is enough water to cover the jars by 2 inches. Process for 15 minutes. Transfer to the counter to cool undisturbed for 12 hours. The lid(s) should be slightly depressed at the center; that is a sign of a successful seal.

Store in a cool, dry place. Do not open for at least 6 weeks to allow the flavors to develop.

Dinner in the Rice Cooker in 40 Minutes

BONNIE S. BENWICK

The Washington Post

This recipe has been circulating on the Web for a few years. It seems like a good weeknight solution for busy parents and for those who appreciate minimal kitchen

You'll need a 7-cup (or larger) rice cooker, and you'll use regular liquid and dry measuring cups for this recipe, not the measuring cup that comes with most rice cookers.

We tested this several times and found that a bit more broth and a bit more attention during the cooking will prevent scorching on the bottom. Even if it scorches, though, think of it as adding texture to the

Serve with a salad. Adapted from "Weelicious: One Family, One Meal," by Catherine McCord (William Morrow, 2012).

Rice-Cooker Mac and Cheese

Makes about 6 cups (4 servings).

- 8 ounces dried shaped pasta, such as cavatappi, fusilli or mini-farfalle
- 2 cups homemade or no-salt-added chicken or vegetable broth
- 1 teaspoon kosher salt 1 to 2 cups broccoli florets, carrot coins, cubed butternut squash or
- frozen peas 1 cup whole milk
- 1 1/2 cups two- or threecheese blend, such as cheddar, mozzarella and Monterey Jack

Close the lid and cook for about 15 minutes (or until your rice cooker's regular cooking cycle completes), opening it quickly just to stir once or twice and make sure the pasta is not getting scorched on the bottom. The broth should be almost or completely absorbed.

Meanwhile, if you're adding vegetables, prep them as needed.

Once the pasta has cooked, open the lid to stir in the milk, cheese and any add-ins you like; reserve a little of the cheese and sprinkle it on the surface. Close the lid and cook for about 10 minutes (or the length of a short cycle on your rice cooker). The cheese should be melted, and the milk should be well incorporated. Feel free to open the lid once or twice to make sure the mixture isn't scorching on the

A Healthy Muffin with a Sweet (Potato) Side

BY SARA MOULTON

For The Associated Press

When I told my mother – a fiend for candied ginger - that I was testing a batch of these muffins, she said she wished she could fly right over and dig in. She's not the only one.

There's just something about the combination of sweet potatoes and sweet spices that makes us happy. Every time my grandmother Ruth made her signature spice balls wonderfully chewy cookies filled with every possible sweet spice - all the grandkids wafted into the kitchen from miles away.

These muffins start with cooked sweet potatoes, which not only provide great flavor and sugar, but also a tempting moistness. Slowly baking sweet potatoes in the oven intensifies their sweetness. For expediency, we chose to microwave them for this recipe. But if you'd rather do it the old fashioned (and tastier) way, plan to bake them for 1 to 11/2 hours at 400

However you cook them, consider making extra. You can freeze the pulp for future batches of muffins. And I don't bother to puree the potatoes; I just mash them. It leaves the texture slightly and pleasantly chunky.

By the way, if you're wondering about the difference between sweet potatoes and yams, don't expend much energy on it. In the United States, just about anything labeled a yam (or a sweet potato) is really just a sweet potato. True yams, a staple of the Caribbean diet, are roughskinned, starchy and not very sweet. The vegetable we love at Thanksgiving — and the right potato for this recipe - is the true sweet potato.

Though there still are plenty of die-hard devotees of white flour, I have snuck some whole-wheat flour into this recipe because it is a healthier choice. And the finished muffin's golden color will camouflage the whole-wheat flour. As a practical matter, when a baking recipe calls for white flour, you can almost always swap out half of it for whole wheat with little effect on the color, taste or texture of the finished product.

Another important player in this recipe is buttermilk, one of my favorite ingredients, especially for baking. I like buttermilk's creaminess and its tang. And, contrary to the impression made by its luxurious texture, it's actually very low in fat. Buttermilk is a great item to keep in the fridge; you can use up any extra by adding it to smoothies.

Finally, these bad boys are topped off with some chopped, crystallized ginger (also called candied ginger). But if for some reason you're not a fan, you can top these with the chopped nut of your choice. Just don't tell my mother.

Sweet Potato Buttermilk Muffins with Candied Ginger Topping

White whole-wheat flour is available in the baking aisle of most grocers. It has all the nutrition of regular whole-wheat flour, but it is made from a different variety of wheat that produces a flour with a lighter taste, texture and color. Start to finish: 1 hour (30 minutes active). Servings: 12 muffins.

3/4 to 1 pound sweet potatoes (2 small or I medium) 1 1/2 cups buttermilk 1 cup white whole-wheat flour 1 cup all-purpose flour 1 teaspoon baking powder 1/2 teaspoon baking soda 1/2 teaspoon table salt 1/2 teaspoon nutmeg, preferably freshly ground 1/4 teaspoon ground allspice 1/4 cup (1/2 stick) butter, room temperature

1/4 cup granulated sugar 1/4 cup packed dark brown sugar 1 large egg

2 teaspoons vanilla extract 1/2 cup chopped crystallized ginger

Heat the oven to 400 degrees. Line a 12-cup muffin pan with paper cupcake liners or lightly spray the cups with cooking spray.

Prick the sweet potatoes several places with a knife. Microwave on high (or on the baked potato setting) until tender, about 10 minutes. Let cool, then peel and, in a medium bowl, mash with a fork. You should have about 1 1/4 cups of mashed sweet potato. Mix in the buttermilk, then set aside.

Meanwhile, in a medium bowl stir together both flours, the baking powder, baking soda, salt, nutmeg and allspice.

In another medium bowl, combine the butter and both sugars. Use an electric mixer to beat until the mixture is light and fluffy, about 3 minutes. Using a spatula, scrape down the sides of the bowl. Add the egg and vanilla, then mix on medium speed for about 1 minute, until thoroughly combined. Scrape down the sides of the bowl.

Add half the flour mixture and beat the batter on low speed just until the mixture is partly mixed. Add half the buttermilk-sweet potato mixture and mix until combined. Add the remaining dry ingredients and mix until just combined, then mix in the remaining buttermilk mixture.

Divide the batter among the prepared muffin cups. Top it with the crystallized ginger and bake on the middle rack of the oven for 25 to 30 minutes, or until the tops are golden and a toothpick inserted at the center comes out clean. Remove the muffins from the pan and tip on their sides on a cooling rack; this prevents the bottoms from getting soggy. Let cool 10 minutes before serving. They are best eaten while still

Broccoli, Apples Make Tasty Fall Salad

THE WASHINGTON POST

Built on a framework of raw and nearly raw broccoli, this salad has a surprising amount of flavor and an ideal amount of crunch. It's equally at home at the dinner table or on a picnic table.

If you don't have a tool to julienne the stems and don't want to do it by hand, wellstocked markets sell broccoli slaw, which is the stems already shredded for you.

The salad needs to be refrigerated for at least 30 minutes before serving. Adapted from "The Sprouted Kitchen" by Sara Forte (Ten Speed Press, 2012).

wine vinegar Coarse salt (preferably Himalayan pink salt) Freshly ground black 1/2 cup unsalted sunflower seeds, toasted (see note) 1 apple, such as Gala, Fuji or Honeycrisp, cored and cut into small dice 1/4 cup finely chopped flat-leaf parsley

Cut the stems from the broccoli and reserve them. Cut the florets into bitesize pieces. Bring an inch of water to a boil in a large, lidded pot and steam the florets in a steamer insert for about 1 minute, just long enough to take off the raw edge. Transfer the florets to a colander and let them cool. Meanwhile, use a julienne peeler, mandoline or V-slicer to cut the broccoli stems into matchstick-size pieces (julienne). Whisk together the mustard, honey, oil and vinegar in a large mixing bowl. Season with a pinch or two of salt and a generous amount of pepper. Add the broccoli florets, broccoli stems, sunflower seeds, apple and parsley to the bowl, and toss to coat.

Cover the bowl loosely and refrigerate it for at least 30 minutes or until chilled. Serve cold.

Note: Toast the sunflower seeds in a small, dry skillet over medium heat for 5 to 8 minutes, until fragrant and lightly browned, stirring or shaking the skillet often to prevent burning. Cool completely.

Hagerman remained a sound No. 1 in the 1A-I poll, picking up 10 of the 12 first-place votes and appearing second on the other two ballots. Kamiah, entrenched at No. 2, picked up the other two top votes. Butte County was third, while Grace and Troy shared fourth.

In the 1A-II ranks, Dietrich's command of top spot loosened slightly, as Salmon River picked up one of its first place votes. The undefeated Blue Devils remained on top of Lighthouse Christian, with Garden Valley, Salmon River and Castleford following. Carey fell out of the poll from Please see POLL, S2

Web-based football film exchange services makes life easier for several southern Idaho programs.

BY NICK RULAND

nruland@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • There are few who can credibly make grand statements about high school football in Idaho. Tim Perrigot, with 17 years under his belt as the head football coach at Minico, is one of them. It's hard to imagine a grander statement than the one Perrigot delivered within 30 seconds of a recent interview with the Times-News.

"It's the best thing to have ever happened to high school football in Idaho," Perrigot said.

Perrigot was referencing Hudl, a subscription based film exchange service that is sweeping the state and country, even at the college and pro level. For at least all six teams in the Great Basin Conference as well as 3A Gooding - soon many more - film study will never be the same. But more than that, Hudl could drive significant improvement in the level of play at the high school level, according to local coaches.

At the very least it's freeing up hundreds of hours for coaches around the Magic Valley, allowing the mad scientists to put their lab coats back on and get back to X and O concoctions.

Bruins Repeat as District Champs

 $\textbf{TWIN FALLS} \bullet \textbf{The games keep get-}$ ting closer, but Wood River still hasn't figured out how to solve Twin Falls.

If the Wolverines get another chance, it'll be because they're playing each other for a state trophy, but it's back to the drawing board if they want to get back to the pinnacle of District

IV girls soccer. Twin Falls ended Wood River's reign at seven straight years last season, and on Tuesday made it two in a row of its own as the Bruins edged their guests in a nervy 2-0 contest at Sunway Soccer Complex.

"That was a big relief," said senior forward Jordyn Clark, whose 29thminute strike. "We just had to keep going, but that was the hardest they've played us this year. We've got some work to do ourselves."

Clark rifled home her own rebound after her initial shot stung the hands of Wood River keeper Kiana Chapman and bounced straight back to her.

JEROME • It was merely a soccer ball and Minico goalkeeper Juan Rodriguez in front of Jerome's Gerardo

Make and they could realize their dreams — a chance at a state playoff berth, a district championship, the opportunity to avenge a state play-in to Minico last season. For Gonzalez, it was the possibility to atone for all his misses in the first 85 minutes.

Faking to his left, Gonzalez let it go right, glancing it off the hand of Rodriguez - finally - squeaking through the corner of the goal, giving Jerome a 2-1 overtime victory and the district championship Tuesday af-

"I just saw a defender come behind me," Gonzalez said of his game-winning goal. "I was nervous but the goalie came out and I had to take it with my left, it's not my strong foot. I had to go for the shot and eventually it went in." Gonzalez scored in the first ten minutes, but he and his teammates were shut out until overtime, missing at least 15 golden opportunities from close-range. According to Jerome head coach Robert Garcia, the game-winner was the first time Gonzalez had converted on a 1-on-1 with the goalie, too.

their school worked," Perrigot said "I'd drive back home, make copies of it and give it to the players and coaches. It was extremely time-consuming and I had to spend gas money, food money and everything else. Now you don't even have to make a phone call. You just send a request to the other coaches on Hudl and it won't release your rights to the game until they send you there's. It's amazing."

For the high school teams with Hudl, which according to a recent story in the Spokesman-Review (Spokane, Wash.) has eclipsed 10,000 since it was created in 2006, there is no more cutting tape, burning DVDs, or searing the eyes after hours of film study trying to discern tendencies and notate formations. Hudldoes it all. And it's portable, downloadable on iPhones and iPads for deviceobsessed teens.

"You used to send a DVD home with a kid and you didn't know if it got used as a coaster for their Coca-Cola," Wood River head coach Kevin stilling said. "Now we can log into Hudl as coaches and see how much they watched. Yeah, big brother is watching, but at the same time you know if your kids have done thier homework Stilling was the first coach to bring it to southern Idaho. He saw it at a coaching clinic in Chicago.

It comes at a yearly price of between a few hundred dollars and over a thousand, depending on how many other sports use the service, Gooding has it for basketball, wrestling and volleyball according to head football coach Cameron Andersen.

According to all interviewed, it's well worth it. Time is money. Stilling recognized how much time it would save him, and didn't have to say much to convince his athletic director to add the expenditure.

"It really changed for me, (then) a defensive coordinator before head coach, the amount of time you spend breaking down film and doing tendencies and formations." Stilling said. "It allows you to make up play cards and those things that take so much time away from so many other things."

But it's not just that Hudl gives coaches the ability to instantaneously exchange game film, or allow players to watch from their phones within an hour after their contest ends, or even generate tendencies and scouting reports without the work.

For some schools, Hudl makes it easier for their kids to get noticed by colleges.

"There is one tool I wish I could use more," Stilling said. "Recruiting."

Andersen loves watching film of his potential NCAA Division I star Cole McGinnis, and given McGinnis dominance, it wouldn't take long to compose a highlight reel. But now Andersen lets his players create their college tapes.

"Last year it took me 15 to 20 hours to create the highlight films," Andersen said. "With an athlete watching game film, they can just touch a button and it uploads their game film and I can email it to all the college coaches in the country."

For players in Idaho, the ease of highlight creation could lead to more scholarship offers. But the access Hudl creates seems to be opening doors within the mind, too. Andersen, whose school purchased Hudl with the support of boosters, thinks the service has made a difference in the Senators conference-championship season.

"Their football IO has increased incredibly," Andersen said. "The guys show up to film study on Monday and already know what is going on. You can make comments, draw on film and the players have seen all the film we want them to see and all the comments we want them to go over. They are all watching film all weekend long. At first it's, 'Hey, come watch my cool play, but now it's like, 'How do we get better?""

It's the same question players on the Hudl-subscribed Boise State Broncos and New York Jets ask themselves.

"It's brought high school football to the same level of film breakdown and study that was seen at the colleges ten years ago," Stilling said.

Perrigot would sound like a paid spokesperson if it weren't for the fact that coaches around southern Idaho, and the country, weren't echoing his statements.

"It's mind-boggling and it's all happened within the last five years," Perrigot said.

"We are all seniors. We wanted this bad and have waited a long time for this. We've grown up together."

Minico's Geovanni Mendoza scored the game-tying goal midway through the second half on a corner kick his kick that bowed in untouched. Jerome played loose and Minico desperate up to that point, with both teams turning it up to the end.

"We wanted it more than them. You could tell."

Jerome midfielder Jose Hernandez

"We wanted it more than them," midfielder Jose Hernandez said. "You could tell."

There was proof of that statement beyond the scoreboard. Hernandez's teammate Jose Vidaca, who ran harder and faster than anyone on the field, could barely walk off it by the time the game ended, suffering what Garcia said was a panic attack. An ambulance had to be called, but in the end it appeared to be only precautionary.

It was not as though the Spartans left anything on the field either. A week after upsetting Wood River, Minico's players surged in the final 40 minutes as if they knew another upset was coming.

"It seems like it has been a battle the last three games," Spartans coach Armando Tapia said. "One goal was going to do it and unfortunately it happened to us. We'll be ready for Thursday."

Minico hosts Wood River then, for the second state playoff berth from the district.

Jerome plays third-place team from District III to open the state tournament next Thursday in Idaho Falls.

"I just tried really hard. I think it was the best game I've played," said Chapman, who hadn't played soccer before this year. "I think we're get-

Donovan Ruled Out of World Cup Qualifiers ASSOCIATED PRESS

MIAMI • Landon Donovan will not play for the U.S. national team in a pair of upcoming World Cup qualifying matches because of an injured left knee, adding to what will be a pressure-filled few days for the Americans.

U.S. Soccer said Tuesday that Donovan – who has more goals, assists and starts than any player in program history — will likely not be replaced on what was a 24man roster for the upcoming qualifiers, first on Friday on the road against Antigua and Barbuda, then in Kansas City on Oct. 16 against Guatemala.

Donovan was injured while playing Saturday for the Los Angeles Galaxy. He was selected by U.S. coach Jurgen Klinsmann for these qualifiers anyway, and the team's athletic trainers wanted him to be evaluated one more time before he started training.

Donovan had scrapped plans for an MRI in Los Angeles on Monday because he thought his knee had improved.

"Landon was very opticluding taking a point-blank nal minute of normal time. Chapman was the main place team from District III.

CINCINNATI • Hardly able to get a hit, the San Francisco Giants used a misplayed grounder to prolong their NL playoff series. Third baseman Scott Rolen's two-out error in the 10th inning gave the Giants the go-ahead run Tuesday night in a 2-1 victory over the Cincinnati Reds, who couldn't shake 17 years of home postseason futility. The Giants avoided a sweep in Game 3, cutting their division series deficit to Rolen, an eight-time Gold Glove winner, couldn't come up with Joaquin Arias' shorthop grounder, bobbled it and threw late to first.

"I've gone through the play many times in my mind between then and now, and I think I would play it the same way," Rolen said. "It hit my glove. I just couldn't get it to stick."

The Giants managed only three hits against Homer Bailey and Reds relievers, but got two of them in the 10th along with a passed ball by Ryan Hanigan — to pull it out. San Francisco won despite striking out 16 times.

"We kept scratching and clawing down two games to none," reliever Jeremy Affeldt said. "That's the way it is in the playoffs."

Cincinnati finished with four hits, just one after the first inning.

Left-hander Barry Zito will pitch Game 4 on Wednesday for the Giants, who have won the last 11 times he started. The Reds have to decide whether to try ace Johnny Cueto, forced out of the opener in San Francisco on Saturday with spasms in his back and side.

Manager Dusty Baker said after the game that they hadn't decided whether to let Cueto try it, bring back Mat Latos on short rest again, or replace Cueto with Mike Leake, who wasn't on the division series roster.

Replacing Cueto would leave the Reds ace ineligible to pitch in the championship series should the Reds get that far.

"It's very difficult, but it all depends on if your ace can't go or whatever it is," Baker said. "That's part of the conversation - us going without him. We realize what's at

Tiger Glad To Be in the 'Conversation' about No. 1

BELEK, Turkey • Tiger Woods isn't quite ready to move aside for Rory McIlroy just yet.

It may be four years and counting since winning his 14th and most recent major, but Woods said Tuesday that he's already taken on two generations in his 16-year pro career and is just happy to still be part of the "conversation" when up against younger "When I first came out here on the Tour, most of the guys I played against are now competing on the Champions Tour," Woods said. "Now the guys I've been going head-to-head for a decade plus are players like Goose (Retief Goosen), Vijay (Singh), Ernie (Els), Paddy (Padraig Harrington) and Phil (Mickelson) who are now all in their

"What I am going through now is a different generation for me. Rory is 23 and he's going to be around for a very, very long time - he's just getting started in his career. I've been out here for 16 to 17 years and I am still part of that conversation, which is good."

Woods' clubs didn't do much talking

Tuesday at the eight-player World Golf Finals in Turkey, losing to 2011 Masters champion Charl Schwartzel by one shot in the $5.2 million event at the Sultan course in Antalya. McIlroy fared even worse in the medal match-play format, going down by six strokes to Matt Kuchar.

McIlroy and Woods - ranked No. 1 and No. 2 - play each other today in the last of their three group matches, although both could be eliminated by then. Not what the organizers would be hoping for considering they promoted the tournament as "Tiger v. Rory."

"I have talked about this subject with Jack (Nicklaus) several times," Woods said. "It's really neat because he found it fun to be a part of that conversation when he was competing in the (Ben) Hogan days and all the way through (Tom) Watson and into an era when there were guys like Seve (Ballesteros) and all those guys in Europe.

"Jack played the Tour for 25-plus years and had to deal with the question as to who is the best player. If I could do something like that it would be neat, and so far I feel as though I have."

WAC Adds Cal State-Bakersfield, Utah Valley

ASSOCIATED PRESS

DENVER • The Western Athletic Conference is adding Cal State-Bakersfield and Utah Valley next year as it punts away football after a half-century on the gridiron.

The 50-year-old WAC is the first Division I conference to give up on football since the Southwest Conference dissolved in 1995, but the additions of Cal State-Bakersfield and Utah Valley assured at least for now that it won't also go the way of the SWC, and cease to exist altogether.

"I want to emphasize this is the first step of what I would anticipate to be a multi-step process," interim commissioner Jeff Hurd said Tuesday. "The WAC certainly has more work to do but we're pleased today that we're able to take this step and I think it sends a message that the WAC is here to stay, that we will be here not only in '13-14 but beyond as we in essence reinvent ourselves." Hurd said he will contin-

Goodell Re-issues Bounty Discipline

ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW ORLEANS • NFL Commissioner Roger Goodell upheld the suspensions of Jonathan Vilma and Will Smith on Tuesday for their role in the New Orleans Saints bounty scandal and reduced penalties for Scott Fujita and Anthony Har-

Though an appeal panel created by the NFL's labor agreement vacated the original suspensions on technical grounds, Goodell ruled he was sticking with his decision to suspend Vilma for the season and Smith for four games.

Hargrove, a free agent defensive lineman, will face a two-game suspension once he signs with a team. He originally was hit with eight games, but that was reduced to seven with five games already served. Fujita, who plays for Cleveland, will now miss only one game instead of three.

Despite Goodell's new rulings, the sevenmonth old bounty saga is not over.

Vilma offered a response on Twitter, that read, in part, "this is not news to me pride won't let him admit he's wrong." Smith issued a statement saying he will continue to explore his appeal options.

The players were implicated in what the NFL said was a bounty pool run by former Saints defensive coordinator Gregg Williams and paid improper cash bonuses for hits that injured opponents. The players have acknowledged a pool but denied they intended to injure anyone.

The players can delay their suspensions by appealing again through their labor contract, which they have three days to do. They could also ask a federal judge in New Orleans to revisit their earlier request for an injunction blocking the suspensions.

Texans a Strong No. 1 in AP Pro32 Power Rankings

ASSOCIATED PRESS

Idaho Falls

NEW YORK • With Arian Foster running and J.J. Watt swatting away passes, the Houston Texans remained unbeaten and tightened their grip on the top spot in the AP Pro32 NFL power rankings.

The Texans improved to 5-0 with a 23-17 win over the New York Jets on Monday night. They received 10 of the 12 first-place votes and 382 points Tuesday from the 12-person panel of media members who regularly cover the NFL.

Atlanta, the NFL's only other unbeaten team, held on to second with 336 points. San Francisco received two first-place votes and 333 points to stay third.

"The Texans are the class of the league right now with dominant players in J.J. Watt, Arian Foster and Andre Johnson," said voter John

"Losing Brian Cushing will hurt, although they have dealt well with injuries before," noted Clifton

Brown of Sporting News. Indianapolis jumped nine spots to 22nd after rallying to upset the Packers 30-27 on Sunday in its first game without coach Chuck Pagano, who is being treated for leukemia.

"A win for Chuck Pagano and the human spirit," said ESPN's Chris Berman.

Baltimore remained fourth, New England advanced to fifth and Chicago improved three places to sixth off its 41-3 win against Jacksonville.

"As long as they keep scoring TDs on defense, I'll keep moving them up the list," said CBS Sports/Sirius XM's Rich Gannon, who put the Bears seventh.

Also moving up the rankings were Minnesota and Pittsburgh. The Vikings, a surprising 4-1, advanced six places to eighth, and the Steelers moved up six spots to ninth after their win over Philadelphia.

Atlanta may be 5-0, but until the Falcons win a playoff game there will be questions.

Says Clark Judge of CB-SSports.com: "Let's just fast forward to the playoffs so we can see if Matt Ryan can do there what he does the first 16 games of the season."

The 49ers have a loss, but two voters had them first.

"Niners have outscored last two opponents by a combined 79-3. Right here, right now, they're the most complete team out there," Newsday's Glauber, one of the 49ers' backers.

Buffalo had the biggest drop, seven places to 27th after a 45-3 loss to the 49ers.

Cleveland, the league's lone winless team, is 32nd and last.

"As the NFL's only remaining winless team, they are now officially the favorite in the Geno Smith sweepstakes," said Dan Pompei of the Chicago Tribune.

Fans in Kansas City Cast in Disparaging Light

ASSOCIATED PRESS

KANSAS CITY, Mo. • There was a time when sports fans in Kansas City were considered among the best in sports, when Kauffman Stadium was the place to be during the sweltering summer months and tailgating at Arrowhead Stadium a rite of crisp autumn days.

Lately, the perception of Royals and Chiefs fans has taken a hit.

The latest and most volatile flashpoint occurred Sunday, when burly offensive tackle Eric Winston laid into the small percentage of Chiefs fans who cheered when embattled quarterback Matt Cassel sustained a concussion in the fourth quarter of a 9-6 loss to the Baltimore Ravens.

During a post-game diatribe that quickly went viral, Winston called the cheering "sickening" and said he'd never been more embarrassed to play pro football. Winston has since clarified his statement to say not all Chiefs fans were cheering the injury, but he's otherwise stood by his comments.

Words that have been dissected by people all over the country.

Former Chiefs quarterback Ron Jaworski, now an ESPN analyst, asked "Where's the civility?" "Good Morning America" and "Inside Edition" hosts chimed in, Donny Deutsch on the "Today" show bemoaned a "thug culture" in society and Star Jones opined, "We cheer bad behavior now."

Not exactly what people have come to expect of the heartland.

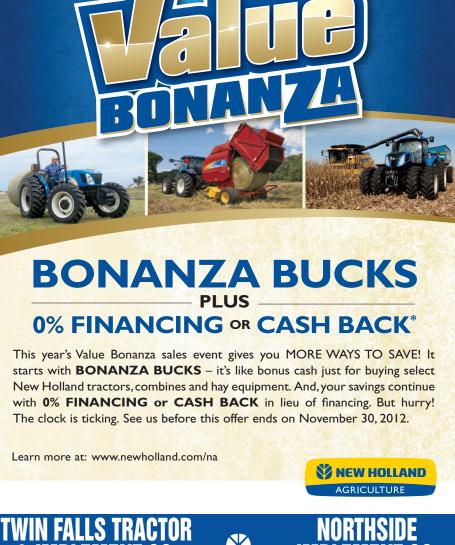

Right or wrong, Kansas City's reputation for fans who are devoted to their downtrodden franchises has been replaced with one of callousness - in some quarters, at least — no better than those Cleveland Browns fans who cheered when QB Tim Couch got hurt in 2002, or those Oakland Raiders fans who got into fistfights in the stands during a game against San Diego in 1999, or those Philadelphia Eagles fans who booed Santa Claus way back in 1968.

"I think it's a misperception, or a bad perception," said Bob Fescoe of 610 Sports Radio in Kansas City. "That's not Kansas City fans. They're loyal, they're dedicated, they're hard-working people.

here in Kansas City."

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

I left both ship and seas, and on Along the sacred valleys all alone Went in discovery."

- Homer's "Ödyssey," Edward Chapman, trans.

At last year's Bermuda Bowl in the match between Israel and Poland, the Poles showed their ability in defense.

After a simple auction, South ended up in three spades and West led his singleton diamond. Ophir Herbst won this in hand and went on to play spade ace and another spade. East won and thoughtfully shifted to the heart jack, ducked by West to leave the defenders' communications intact. Declarer could do no better than exit from dummy with a club. East won the ace (West giving reverse count by following with the seven) and gave his partner the diamond ruff.

West now did not know which of the club or heart winners were standing up. He solved his problem by underleading his hearts, his low card suggesting a remaining three-card holding. East won the 10 and knew to return another heart; thus declarer had to lose two hearts, a club and the diamond ruff for down one. Poland: plus 50.

Jacek Kalita was also in three spades against the lead of the diamond nine. He too won in hand, but immediately ran the spade iack. Of course, East won his king and could now give partner a diamond ruff, but the defense had only their two aces now. Had East returned a heart immediately, South would have won and played a club, and thus have been able to ruff the third heart with the spade ace. The fall of the spade 10 would have allowed declarer to come home.

ANSWER: Start by redoubling to show that you believe your side has the balance of power. At your next turn, you can raise spades. This route will suggest a doubleton trump and approximately a minimum for the auction thus far. Some people play the redouble as conventional here, but I believe it is far more valuable to show a decent hand than to show a top trump honor, for example.

and will not be conveyed in this exchange or donation. The acquisition of the non-Federal lands will consolidate land ownership for more effective and efficient management. The non-Federal lands contain important wildlife habitat; including preliminary priority habitat for sage-grouse, habitat for pygmy rabbits, crucial mule deer winter range, and deer, pronghorn, and elk migration routes. They also include wetland and riparian habitat. The acquired non-Federal lands would be managed by the BLM according to applicable Federal laws and regulations, and in conformance with the land use prescriptions established for the adjacent BLM-administered Federal lands in the Magic Management Framework Plan, as amended.

The Federal and non-Federal lands involved in the exchange have been appraised in accordance with the regulations in 43 CFR 2201.3. The approved appraised value of the non-Federal land included in the exchange is $700,000. The approved appraised value of the Federal lands is $700,000. This is an equal value exchange as defined in 43 CFR 2201.6.

The land exchange will be completed without compensation for any assumption of costs. Impacts associated with the exchange and donation are addressed in the environmental assessment (DOI-BLM-ID-T030-2012-0008-EA) prepared for the proposed land exchange. A copy of the decision to approve the exchange and donation as well as other information concerning the exchange may be obtained from the Shoshone Field Office, 400 West F Street, Shoshone, Idaho

Answer:

"SAIL" PRICE

DEAR ABBY: I am the single dad of two teenage boys (17 and 18) who are both in high school. I am wondering about something they do with their friends. The boys take showers in large groups. When they come in from running or sports, or if a group is spending the night, they shower in groups of two, three or four. It's not like we have a huge shower - it's normal size.

DEAR Abby Jeanne Phillips

I know there's nothing sexual going on because I can hear them talking and joking around. When I asked the boys about this, they looked at me like I had two heads. They said it was just a social thing and the same as showering together after football in the school gym.

They also "air dry" after showers by walking around in towels, sometimes watching TV or goofing off for hours while in their towels. When going out, they get naked in the bathroom, fixing their hair, shaving, brushing their teeth, etc. It's like a big "nude fest" with them and their friends.

While I'm glad they are comfortable with their bodies and who they are, it still bothers me somewhat. Am I being a prude in thinking this is unusual or inappropriate?

· STUMPED IN KENTUCKY

DEAR STUMPED: I see nothing inappropriate about what your sons and their friends are doing. Nor do I want to label you a prude. You are just not as comfortable in your skin as your sons and their "jock" friends are. Is it possible that they take after their mother?

DEAR ABBY: My best friend and I do everything together and I love her, so when she showed up at the gym in "booty shorts," I didn't say a word, even though they don't flatter her one bit. Heck, there's a mirror on every wall, so she must have liked what she saw, and it's none of my business.

When she wore them to a school sporting event, my husband accused me of being a "bad friend" for not telling her that her rear view was getting the wrong kind of attention. Some of the other parents in the bleachers were snickering.

I guess if the situation were reversed, I'd want my best friend to give me a hint, but I'm not exactly sure how to do it. Am I wrong to just keep my mouth shut and mind my own business?

- ANONYMOUS IN ASMALL TOWN DEAR ANONYMOUS:

Allow me to provide a couple of hints. First, tell your friend when you are alone and can't be overheard, which will spare her unnecessary embarrassment. Second, ask, "When you bought those shorts, did you get a look at yourself from the back?" If she says no, provide her with a mirror so she can look over her shoulder at herself. Then explain that at the school event, some of the other parents were staring, and not too

You will be doing her a favor to speak up. That is what friendship is all about. And if she's smart, she'll thank you.

IF OCTOBER 10 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Between now and late November, your spirits will be on the upswing as people demonstrate their appreciation of your leadership qualities and offer help when you need it the most. Concentrate on making improvements in your working conditions and forming alliances with key people between now and the end of December. In April, your selfesteem will soar when a partner or significant other gives you a vote of confidence; that will be a great time to make crucial decisions or to put important projects and plans into motion.

HOROSCOPE Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You possess a glamorous glow that grabs attention. This is a good time to be out and about if your aim is to receive publicity. Be frank, earnest and sincere and others will be honest with you.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): If you are dealt an ace, don't put it back in the deck and reshuffle. Just because you are more popular than usual and flattered by praise, doesn't mean you can take a chance on losing a winning GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Funnel fresh inspiration into a framework that can provide the building blocks of future success. A stroke of creative genius could set off on a successful new path. A costly purchase could offer lasting pleasure.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Raise the bar. It is time to visualize a better future. The only person who holds you back is yourself. Michael Jordan said, "You have to expect things of yourself before you can do them."

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): If vou have confidence, you have started to win before you have even started. If you use your imagination and ingenuity, you will be able to take advantage of an opportunity. You may need to read between the lines. VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Spend time with tried and true friends or loyal romantic partners. The new folks who turn up in your life might not be quite as fascinating as they seem at first glance, but will serve to keep you amused. LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Sometimes while enjoying sunny skies, an unexpected storm cloud may appear. The lesson to learn is that optimism is helpful, but you should often bring an umbrella. SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): If you need a diversion or entertainment, you can grab one of the romantic fantasies that pass by and try it out for size. Keep in mind that a momentary pleasure could lead to a permanent commitment. SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Never give up. Persistent people begin creating success where others end in failure. Vow to be disciplined about adding to your savings plan and dedicated to showing affection on a regular ba-

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): No one was specifically put here on this earth to make you happy. It is up to you to create your own happiness by developing relationships, maintaining a healthy lifestyle and building financial security.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Write down ideas for review. You might meet a new and very important friend. Don't let lust and desire get in the way of developing perfect attunement and lasting commitment.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Balance on your toes like a ballet dancer. You dream of achieving inner peace and serenity, but at the same time you are not afraid to face reality. Remain on your toes and follow the changing rhythms.
