Thompson Creek Fire Dies Down

The Forest Service revises its figures to say the fire burned 150 acres, not 650.

BY KIMBERLEE KRUESI

ROGERSON • With the help of cold weather and plenty of firefighting resources, activity on the Thompson Creek Fire has died down, according to fire officials.

“The fire went to sleep last night and never woke up,” said Julie Thomas, spokeswoman for the U.S. Forest Service.

The only drastic change in the fire is the estimated size. Fire officials now estimate it burned 150 acres, not 650 acres as was announced Thursday, Thomas said.

“We were going off on estimations,” Thomas said. “Sometimes that happens when you don’t have a good view of the damage.”

While firefighters still have hot spots to put out, Thomas said almost half the fire is contained. Full containment is still scheduled for Sunday.

How the fire started is still under investigation, but fire officials expect that it was caused by humans.

Road closures will remain in effect for another two days until firefighters finish containing the fire, Thomas said. This includes Rock Creek Road between Porcupine Springs and the Third Fork Trailhead, and roads west of Magpie Basin to Lava Springs, south to Wagon Spring and then back down to Rock Creek Road.

The closure includes stopping traffic on Rock Creek Road between Porcupine Springs and the Third Fork Trailhead. Roads will be closed west of Magpie Basin to Lava Springs, south to Wagon Spring and then back down to Rock Creek Road.

VIDEO BACKLASH HARMS DAIRY

BY KIMBERLEE KRUESI

MURTAUGH • Just days after an animal-rights activist group released hidden camera footage of his dairy, Luis Bettencourt’s future in the dairy industry remains uncertain.

“I don’t know what’s going to happen to us,” he said. “If we can’t sell our milk, I don’t know how we’re going to feed our cows.”

On Wednesday, Los Angeles-based Mercy for Animals released footage showing several of Bettencourt’s employees punching and stomping on milk cows. The video was filmed by an employee hired by the dairy who was also employed by Mercy for Animals. The footage also included employees using a tractor to drag a cow on slippery concrete by a chain wrapped around its neck, and an employee beating a cow with a pink cane.

The video was quickly shared by news organizations and activists across the United States. Since the date of the filming, Bettencourt has fired five of the employees linked to the video. But Mercy for Animals is demanding companies to stop using products made from Bettencourt milk.

According to an Los Angeles Times article, Wendy’s, In-N-Out and Burger King Worldwide have announced they will stop purchasing milk products from Bettencourt dairies.

“We have instructed Wendy’s supplier to disassociate with Bettencourt immediately,” Wendy’s officials said in a statement.

However, since Bettencourt doesn’t

Rock Creek Food Pantry Looking for a Home

TWIN FALLS • Robyn Moss has worked with Magic Valley’s hungry residents for almost four years, helping to coordinate monthly food distributions that serve food-insecure households in small communities.

She hopes to increase that aid by finding a building to store food.

But that will cost about $1,000 per month or more, depending on the need. Currently, Moss is visiting city councils, civic clubs and churches, and asking them to consider making donations to sustain the food pantry.

The Rock Creek Food Pantry serves households outside of Twin Falls, Moss said, including people from Hansen, Kimberly and Murtaugh.

The food pantry serves about 175 households, up

Idaho’s Hungry

In Idaho, food stamp growth has skyrocketed since the 2008 recession. In fiscal year 2011, 96,372 Idaho households received food stamps. That’s up from 35,990 in fiscal year 2007. From March 2009 to March 2010, Idahoans’ participation in the federal SNAP program increased by 42.5 percent.

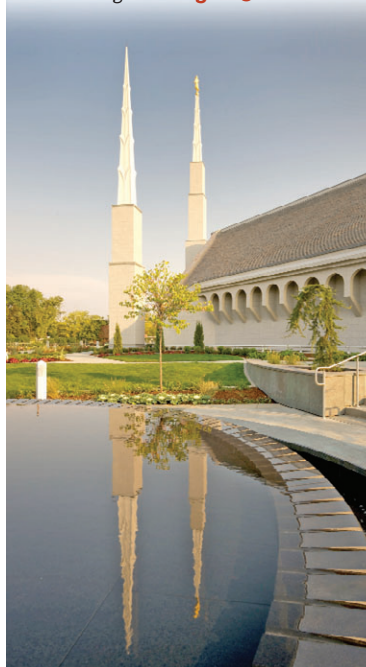

Seeking Members

The Rock Creek Food Pantry is seeking members for its board of directors. Applicants should live in east Twin Falls County. Information: Robyn Moss, 0787 The food bank is also holding a fundraiser from noon to 4 p.m. every Saturday in October at Crossroads United Methodist Church, 131 Syringa Ave., Kimberly. Volunteers are selling jackolanterns and squash to raise funds for the food bank.

ASK ST. LUKES

STAYING SAFE THIS HALLOWEEN

I am a mother of three elementary-aged children. I want to make sure my kids stay safe this Halloween season. Do you have any suggestions?

- Katie, Twin Falls

Halloween should be a night for fun, costumes, harvest parties and trick-or-treating, but not tragedy. Did you know that on average, twice as many kids are killed while walking on Halloween compared to any other day of the year?

It is very important to review safety tips before you head out into your neighborhood trick-or-treating with your children.

Children will be out after dark, which makes it harder for drivers to see them. Because they're excited about getting candy, they may not be watching out for cars. Parents and drivers need to do their part to help kids stay out of the emergency room on Halloween. Emphasize safe pedestrian behaviors to kids before they go out trick-or-treating.

Drivers must slow down and watch out for trick-or-treaters, especially around crosswalks and driveways.

For parents and children:
• Children under 12 should trick or treat and cross streets with an adult.

• Always walk on sidewalks or paths. If there are no sidewalks, walk facing traffic as far to the left as possible.

• Cross the street at corners using traffic signals and crosswalks. Parents should remind children to watch for cars that are turning or backing up.

• Look left, right and left again when crossing. Keep looking as you cross. Walk, don't run across the street.

For drivers:

• Slow down and be especially alert in residential neighborhoods. Children are excited on Halloween and may move in unpredictable ways.

• Anticipate heavy pedestrian traffic and turn your headlights on earlier in the day so you can spot children from greater distances.

We Can Help

Have a burning question about your health? Need assistance navigating the sea of insurance options out there? Send your questions to welness@magicvalley.com and we'll answer them in a future column.

• Remember that costumes can limit children's visibility and they may not be able to see your vehicle.

• Reduce any distractions inside your car so you can concentrate on the road and your surroundings.

About costumes and treats:

• Costumes can be both creative and safe. It is best to look for ways to use reflective materials as part of the costume and treat bags.

• Try to choose light colored costumes to improve visibility.

• Choose face paint and makeup instead of masks, which can obstruct a child's vision. Look for nontoxic designations when choosing Halloween makeup.

- Avoid carrying sticks, swords or other sharp objects.
- Have kids carry glow sticks or flashlights in order to see better, as well as to be seen by drivers.
- Liquid in glow sticks is hazardous, so parents should remind children not to chew on or break them.
- Check treats for signs of tampering before children are allowed to eat them. Candy should be thrown away if the wrapper is faded or torn, or if the candy is unwrapped.

MAN ESCAPES FROM RV FIRE

TIMES-NEWS

JEROME • A man sleeping inside a motor home parked in Jerome woke up to see it on fire Friday morning.

The man was able to escape the 1975 Dodge motor home safely, but it and an adjacent 1977 Dodge van were destroyed, said Jerome Deputy Fire Chief Jack Krill.

Jerome firefighters responded to the fire in the 500 block of Fifth Avenue West at about 5:20 a.m. When they arrived, the two vehicles were fully engulfed, Krill said.

It took firefighters about five minutes to get the fire out, Krill said. Crews then started the investigation and spoke with witnesses, he said.

Woman Sentenced for Growing Pot

TIMES-NEWS

TWIN FALLS • A 56-year-old woman who was turned in by her granddaughter in June has been sentenced for growing 40 marijuana plants in her garage.

Vernice Tucker, 56, was originally charged with trafficking in marijuana between one and five pounds or between 25 and 49 plants. The charge was amended to manufacturing a controlled substance.

In June, police spoke with Tucker about the plants and she said she was selling marijuana for extra income to care for her ailing mother-in-law.

Tucker was sentenced Tuesday to two to five years in prison but the sentence was suspended for three years of probation. She was also fined $765.50.

According to a police report, Twin Falls County sheriff’s deputies found 43 live marijuana plants, more than four pounds of dried, harvested marijuana and about 44 grams of marijuana seeds in Tucker’s home.

Jerome County Residents To See Sanitation Fee Increase

TIMES-NEWS

JEROME • Jerome County residents will soon see higher sanitation fees.

Commissioners approved the fee increases during a Tuesday meeting.

Commissioner Cathy Roemer told the Times-News that part of the reason for the increase is that partners in the Milner Butte Landfill must retain at least a six-month back-up fund.

The fund, she said, has been depleting.

“It’s necessary to raise fees slightly to keep the backup,” she said.

Private companies collect garbage from residential and commercial customers.

Then, Southern Idaho Solid Waste collects garbage from transfer stations around the region — including Jerome County — to deposit in the landfill.

The higher fees will go into effect Jan. 1.

Here’s information about the new annual base rates:

- Commercial: $152 ($20 increase)
- Residential: $76 ($10 increase)
- Circuit Breaker: $38

($5 increase)

- Exempt Property: $152 ($86 increase)

- Apartments: $76 ($10 increase)

CAN TECH MAKE UP FOR TIGHT FUNDS?

BY JULIE WOOTTON
jwootton@magicvalley.com

CASTLEFORD • For Castleford biology students, a photosynthesis lesson doesn't involve cracking open a traditional textbook.

As an animated explanation of the topic played on a classroom screen, 11 students in Art Watkins' classroom each had an iPad on their desk.

The school district bought 100 iPads this fall — one for each high-schooler and teacher.

With a tight budget over the last few years, the district has cut back the number of school days.

Castleford Superintendent Andy Wiseman said he's looking at ways to maximize the classroom time they do have.

"The iPads are highly engaging," he said, noting that students spend more time on schoolwork.

Wiseman said students have easily adapted to using iPads since they received them Sept. 5.

Students take the devices to their classes and then home at night.

Although mobile devices were already used in some Castleford classrooms, it's the first large-scale implementation.

The district is ahead of a statewide plan under Students Come First to provide each high-schooler with a mobile computing device, starting during the 2013-14 school year.

Since Castleford high school students each have their own iPad, Wiseman said the state will give the school district a check instead.

In addition to the 100 iPads, the school district bought 25 MacBook Air laptops for kindergarten through 12th-grade teachers.

The total price tag? $72,488.

Instead of paying that sum all at once, the district is leasing the equipment and paying for it over a three-year period.

Funding for this year's payment will come from a federal grant.

For now, the iPads are school property. Arena Elsner, 17, said graduating seniors this year may have the option of buying their iPad at the end of the school year.

Wiseman said a decision hasn't been made yet.

The idea of having more iPads in classrooms came after Wiseman — along with a few school board members and teachers — visited a school in March in Canby, Ore.

The Castleford team saw how teachers and students used iPads in classrooms.

Wiseman said he came away thinking, "Wow, this is what we need to do."

Then, he started exploring the possibility of digital textbooks.

This year, the district used $40,000 in supplemental levy money to buy digital science textbooks and e-curriculum for third through 12th grades.

What Do Students Think?

Wiseman said just four years ago, students weren't allowed to have their cell phones turned on at school. Now, they can use iPads throughout the day.

Wiseman said teachers are still in control, though. If students are distracted, teachers can tell them to put their iPads away.

"The teachers still have authority in the class," he said.

Senior Mike Wiersma, 17, said it's a lot quieter in his classes when they're using the iPads.

"In our English class, we use them to read a whole lot," he said.

Sophomore Dylan Bothaf, 15, uses the iPad to take notes.

In geometry class, he puts in headphones and listens to music while he works on math problems.

Senior Arena Elsner, 17, said she sometimes takes a picture of the whiteboard during math class. It's easier than writing down all the information, she said.

But students aren't just using the iPads for schoolwork.

Sophomore Michael Niell, 15, said a lot of students use the iPads to play games before the bell rings each morning.

Students also sometimes download their own music onto the iPads.

Wiseman said he has heard students use their iPads at home, but only about one-third of that time is spent doing homework.

That's better than nothing, he said, and students are doing a good job of being responsible with the devices.

"We're trying to teach them responsible use," he said.

What About Other Schools?

Around south-central Idaho, many schools already have classroom sets of iPads.

And this fall, a handful of school districts purchased more devices for students to use.

In Murtaugh, there are new iPad labs at the elementary school and high school — each with 30 iPads.

"There are a lot of educational applications that students are using for enrichment and remediation," Superintendent Michele Capps said.

The school district also bought five iPads for the preschool program. In May, each teacher in the district received an iPad.

Funding for the purchases came from a school improvement grant.

Capps said she'd like to have a set of iPads in each elementary school classroom in the future.

In Paul, school employees are getting ready for the roll-out of an iPad pilot program later this month.

About 450 kindergarten through fifth-grade students — and their teachers — will receive the devices.

Scott Rogers, superintendent of the Minidoka County School District, said Paul Elementary teachers started an intensive three-day training session Wednesday.

In Gooding, the elementary school found out earlier this month it'll receive a classroom set of 12 iPads.

The school was a winner in the Idaho Leads Project's "MyFuture Student Tech Contest." Idaho students and teachers created videos about their dream 21st century classroom.

Food

from 110 when the pantry first formed in January 2009.

Looking for a Home

Right now, the Idaho Food Bank provides food for the Rock Creek Food Pantry, bringing boxes in monthly deliveries to Crossroads United Methodist Church in Kimberly.

The monthly drop makes it hard to personalize aid for families, Moss said, because volunteers have to distribute all the food boxes in one day. Finding a permanent location would allow volunteers to store donations and distribute throughout the month.

Moss asked Hansen's City Council for a monthly donation of $100, and Kimberly's City Council for $225. She also plans to approach churches and civic clubs for help with organizing annual fundraisers for the pantry.

It may be awhile before Moss gets an answer, as Idaho's cities have already set their budget for fiscal year 2013. The Hansen council put off making a decision until next month, and Kimberly's council took her request under advisement.

At Monday's monthly Hansen City Council meeting, Councilor Thomas Kennedy expressed concern that people would take advantage of the charity and take food boxes even if they didn't really need them.

"Most of the people are on food stamps already," he said.

But Moss said many of those who receive food boxes don't receive enough aid to feed themselves for the month.

SNAP benefits are based on a sliding scale, depending on a person's income. Some people receive small amounts of food stamp assistance, Moss said, but because of other expenses, they may not have enough income and food stamps to fill their own pantries.

"Really, if you saw the people that are there getting those food boxes, you wouldn't question the need.

You really wouldn't," Moss said.

Need Hard to Track

The Idaho Department of Health and Welfare tracks food stamp use by county. But the department doesn't track food stamp use based on rural versus urban communities, said department public information officer Tom Shanahan.

The county-by-county numbers offer a glimpse into the state's varied needs. Canyon County — one of the state's most urban communities — has the highest percentage of food stamp users, with 22.2 percent receiving some form of Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program aid. Camas County, one of the most rural counties in the state, also has the lowest percentage of residents on food stamps, with only 5.6 percent receiving the aid.

But urban areas have more resources for the hungry, Moss pointed out. Twin Falls has a food pantry and a couple soup kitchens where individuals can go for hot meals. Smaller communities like Hansen, Kimberly and Murtaugh don't have regular offerings.

Those who live in smaller communities also struggle with pride, Moss said. Sometimes, people drive from Jerome

"Not everyone wants their neighbor to know that they need to stand in line to get a food box," she said.

Those in Need

In a Friday phone interview, Moss said there is a small core group of households who have come nearly every month since the pantry began, but there is also a high turn-over. Often, households ask for food boxes during times of need, then leave after getting back on their feet.

Some of those who needed assistance return to volunteer or donate. One family who lives near Moss needed assistance from the monthly food pantry for a short period. Now that the family is back on its feet, they donate when they can, she said.

Moss has big plans for the Rock Creek Food Pantry, including setting up households with food stamp assistance information and personalizing aid for families.

But first, they need to find the building, and the funding.

"There's so many things we can't do until we get there," she said.

Bettencourt

it's still unclear in which way fast-food chains like Wendy's or Burger King will follow through with their promises.

Bettencourt sells his milk to Jerome Cheese Co., which is owned by Davisco Foods International Inc. Davisco Foods sells its products to suppliers that then sell to another supplier or to companies such as In-N-Out.

So far, no one has asked Davisco to stop purchasing from the Magic Valley dairyman, said Jon Davis, the company's CEO.

"The most direct contact I've had with Burger King is the fish sandwich I bought from them yesterday for lunch," Davis said.

However, the company is investigating all of its dairy suppliers' animal welfare policies to make sure they fall in line with Davisco's policies, Davis said.

That hasn't kept Bettencourt from worrying about his 500-employee dairy operation, which includes 50,000 milking cows and 34,000 replacement heifers.

"I know Jerome Cheese is under a lot of pressure right now," he said. "But if I can't sell my milk there, I don't know what I'm going to do. No one wants to touch our milk right now?"

Tales by the Brothers Grimm Were Not Always Child Friendly

BY NEELY TUCKER
Washington Post

Once upon a time, fairy tales were not as nice as they are now. Mother and Daddy dear — not an evil stepmom — take Hansel and Gretel out in the woods and leave them to starve. Little Red Riding Hood does a striptease for the Big Bad Wolf. Cinderella's stepsisters cut off parts of their feet to force the mangled stumps into the glass slipper.

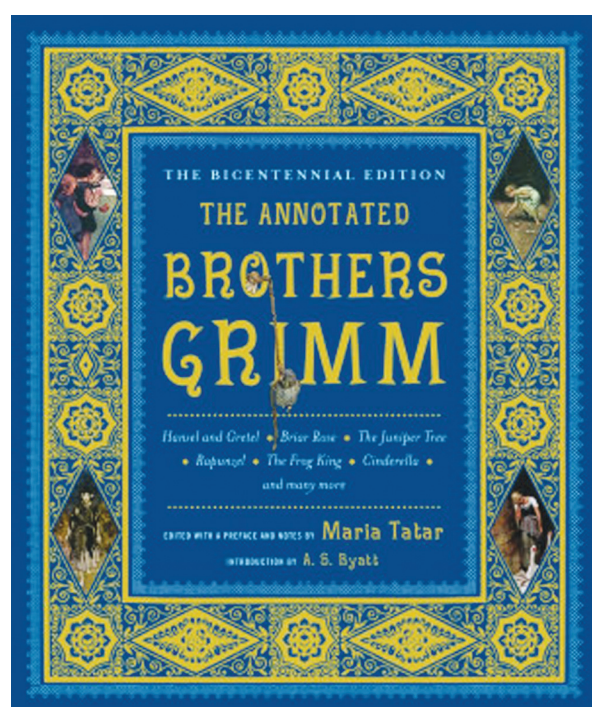

It has been 200 years since the German siblings and folklorists published their landmark first volume of "Children's Stories and Household Tales," and it becomes clear in scholar Maria Tatar's "The Annotated Brothers Grimm," published this week for the bicentennial, that the modern tellings of fairy tales have gone soft.

Tatar, a veteran editor of fairy tale collections and John L. Loeb Professor of Folklore and Mythology and Germanic Languages and Literatures at Harvard, has chosen 52 of the 210 stories included in 1857's seventh and final edition of the "Tales" for this beautifully illustrated edition. In it, she relates that (a) there aren't many fairies in fairy tales, (b) the once-upon-a-time genre is as old as "humans forming sentences" and (c) these were not originally understood to be stories for the tykes at tuck-in time. In an essay in the book, Tatar adds that the plots are "fraught with merciless aggression, vicious brutality, and deadly hostility."

There is no definitive version of any of these stories, as they stem from oral traditions the world over, and the characters are more archetypes than individuals. This proliferation of these tale is in no small part due to Jacob and Wilhelm Grimm. Academics from a learned background, they set out to collect oral tales from unlettered peasants. It was to be a scholarly endeavor, designed to preserve what they said were inherently German tales from encroaching industrialization. They were still in their late 20s when they published the first volume of "Tales," in 1812, the first of a two-volume collection of 156 stories.

Once published, the stories began to have a slow but steady rise in popularity, with an English translation in 1823. The brothers had anticipated an audience of fellow scholars. They were alarmed when they learned that parents were reading them to children — and they put out an abridged edition, just for children, of 50 stories. And over the course of six more editions and 40 years, they further rewrote the sex out of the stories, polished the prose, and made the once-oral tales into increasingly longer, literary flourishes of adventure, magic, cruelty and heroism.

By the dawn of the 20th century, the stories were hugely popular. It set into play a new canon of literature: stories for children that featured all the terrors of childhood, set into short, sharp tales that are filled with poison apples, magic spells, talking wolves and cannibals lurking in the shadows. "It's really the beginning of children's imaginative literature," Tatar says. "[It's] the kind of book you might find in the Hogwarts library."

"The Annotated Brothers Grimm," by Maria Tatar in this bicentennial edition, tells the darker side of some beloved fairy tales. Published by W.W. Norton & Co.

Romney Criticizes Biden on Consulate Attack

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) • Broadening his attack on administration foreign policy, Mitt Romney accused Vice President Joe Biden on Friday of "doubling down on denial" in a dispute over security at a diplomatic post in Libya that was overrun by terrorists who killed the U.S. ambassador and three other Americans.

"The vice president directly contradicted the sworn testimony of State Department officials," the Republican presidential candidate said, eager to stoke a controversy that has flared periodically since the attack on Sept. 11.

White House press secretary Jay Carney defended Biden's assertion in a campaign debate Thursday night that "we weren't told" of an official request for more security at the site. The spokesman rejected Romney's claim of a contradiction. Biden "was speaking directly for himself and for the president. He meant the White House," Carney said.

With his accusation, Romney once again pushed for a race that has largely returned to the competitive situation in effect last summer. Now, many of the same surveys show a very tight race nationally and in most of the competitive states.

Romney began the campaign week with a speech that criticized the Obama administration for showing a lack of leadership around the globe, particularly in the Middle East. He chose to end it with a direct challenge to Biden's candor about the attack on the consulate in Benghazi, Libya.

"When the vice president of the United States directly contradicts the testimony, sworn testimony of State Department officials, American citizens have a right to know just what's going on," he said, referring to a hearing earlier in the week in a Republican-controlled House committee.

Turkey's Frustration with Syria Leads to Plane Action

ISTANBUL (AP) • The interception of a Syrian passenger plane from Russia, allegedly carrying military gear to Damascus, is a sign of Turkey's mounting frustration at the drawn-out conflict and its inability to hasten regime change in its neighbor, according to analysts.

Recent cross-border shelling from Syria that killed five Turkish civilians near the countries' 566-mile common frontier may have forced Turkey to act, but its options were limited.

"There's nothing magical about the timing. It's a coincidence resulting from the build-up of frustration in Ankara," said Fadi Hakura, a Turkey analyst at the Chatham House think tank in London. "Turkey wants to hasten the demise of the Assad regime in Damascus, but really its hands are tied."

Turkish Prime Minister Recep Tayyip Erdogan has been at the forefront of international efforts to put pressure on the Assad regime and end its 19-month crackdown on the opposition. Last year, Ankara began allowing members of the rebel Free Syrian Army to operate in Turkey and now Syria's civil war has reached a stalemate. "Given the current international impasse over the conflict in Syria, practical measures such as the interception of aircraft will become increasingly important for states seeking to restrict Syrian government forces' access to military-related goods from external sources," said Edin Omanovic, a researcher with the Stockholm International Peace Research Institute.

Turkish fighter jets on Wednesday intercepted the Syrian Air plane they said was carrying Russian ammunition and military equipment destined for the Syrian Defense Ministry. Syria branded the incident piracy and Russia said the action endangered the lives of Russian citizens aboard the aircraft.

The exact contents of the cargo are still unclear: Turkey's prime minister described it as "ammunition," while Yeni Safak, a newspaper close to the Turkish government, reported Friday that the cargo contained 12 pieces of missile parts and "trigger devices" and that intelligence received was that it could be used by Syria against Turkey. Russian Foreign Minister Sergey Lavrov said late Friday that the plane was carrying radar parts for Syria, that the shipment complied with international law and that there was no weapon on board.

Russia has been one of Syria's main weapons suppliers, and it has also been shielding the regime of Syrian President Bashar Assad from U.N. sanctions.

Mehmet Yegin, an analyst with the Ankara-based International Strategic Research Organization, said that it was not yet clear whether the decision to force down the Moscow to Damascus plane was part of a larger drive to change the dynamic of the war. "If it is acting with its allies, it's a clear message to Russia to get out of the picture and stop arming Syria," he added. "It is such a bold move, that one wonders if Turkey acted alone."

U.S. State Department spokeswoman Victoria Nuland declined Thursday to comment on Turkish media reports that the intelligence on the plane's contents had come from the United States. But she told reporters that Washington backed Turkey's decision to intercept the plane. "Any transfer of any military equipment to the Syrian regime at this time is very concerning, and we look forward to hearing more from the Turkish side when they get to the bottom of what they found," said Nuland.

Fyodor Lukyanov, editor-in-chief of Russia in Global Affairs, said the plane incident showed that Turkey is "getting really nervous" with hostilities raging near its border. "Turkey is trying to demonstrate how tough and capable it is."

Chile's Enormous Open-Pit Copper Mine Goes Underground

CHUQUICAMATA, Chile (AP) • From above, it looks like a colossal amphitheater carved from rock, or the vast crater from a meteorite that crashed into Chile's Atacama desert ages ago.

Inside the world's largest open-pit copper mine, dump trucks as big as two-story houses work around the clock to haul hundreds of tons of rock and minerals 2,790 feet to the surface of this elliptical, seemingly endless, man-made hole.

But the open pit has run its course at Chuquicamata — the storied mine that woke the political awareness of a young Ernesto 'Che' Guevara in the 1950s, inspired Marxist President Salvador Allende to nationalize the copper industry in 1971 and generated decades of prosperity for Chile.

After a century of exploitation, Chuquicamata has become too big, too deep and too old to continue digging in the open-pit method. The giant trucks that carry copper ore each guzzle 819 gallons of fuel a day driving 7 miles to the surface with ever-poorer loads as ore grades decline and copper yields fall. Chuquicamata produced 443,000 tons of copper last year, but experts say that by 2019 it will be unprofitable.

So state-owned mining company Codelco is trying to head off closure by taking the daring step of converting the open pit into the world's largest underground mine.

"This is not what a real recovery looks like."

CHEERS AND JEERS

CHEERS to Jimmy Taylor for the creation of the Downtown Art Alley Project in Twin Falls.

Located behind the Historic Ballroom, the outdoor art project features the work of local artists on the alley's brick walls and will give people a new way to interact with downtown and with each other. Artists are required to submit proposals of their ideas for Art Alley. Once an artist's concept is approved, the finished product can be displayed in the alley for free for a year.

Jimmy Taylor has been a vocal and passionate advocate for this community, especially the downtown. This project is also an example of the saying, "Be the change you want in the world." If there's something that you think is missing in community, don't wait for someone else to create it.

To learn more to get involved with the downtown art project, visit www.artalley.org.

CHEERS to Terence "Bo" Jones. It's been an inspiration to watch his tenacity and sense of humor in dealing with adversity. The U.S. Army private from Twin Falls was serving in southern Afghanistan when he stepped on an antipersonnel mine while on foot patrol in early February this year. He lost his legs and almost lost his left arm.

Eight months later, Jones told the Times-News, "I'm not letting anything stop me."

"As long as I can ride motorcycles, shoot animals and have fun that's good enough for me," he said.

Bo said he never hunted back home, but has connected with several people in Texas where he is recovering who have taken him out a few times and recently bagged his first deer.

The next big goal for Bo and his family is to visit home in Twin Falls for Christmas. We're looking forward to having him home.

JEERS to another wildfire. Really? It's October.

The Thompson Creek Fire broke out Wednesday long after wildfires across the state were out and the temperatures have been dropping to freezing. Without a lighting strike in recent memory, the fire burned 150 acres as of Friday (down from initial estimates of 650 acres, roughly one square mile).

Fire crews worked to protect homes. Roads were closed. Planes dropped red fire retardant. It felt like August.

A Norfolk Southern Railroad train pulls transport cars full of coal through Illinois Tuesday near Goodfield, Ill.

Dems Fight White House on Coal

ST. CLAIRSVILLE, Ohio (AP) • Friends of coal are certain they know the enemy.

They fault President Barack Obama and his Environmental Protection Agency for new clean air rules they deride as a devastating blow to a multibillion-dollar industry. The agency standards imposed earlier this year tightened limits on existing coal-powered-plant emissions.

Along the rolling hills of this tiny Ohio town — population just over 5,100 — campaign signs for judges, state legislators and county officials crowd the neat lawns. One banner overshadowed them all: “End the war on coal. Fire Obama.”

Barb Swan, who runs Swan’s Sport Shop on West Main Street, is a registered Democrat and daughter of a coal miner. She won’t be voting for Obama and she won’t back Democrat Sen. Sherrod Brown, whom she contends puts the president’s energy policies over the interests of his constituents.

“If you have a district that’s coal, you fight for coal,” argued the 67-year-old Swan.

Obama’s moves on clean air and fossil fuels have complicated the lives of Democrats in coal-rich states that count on mining for jobs and economic growth.

In West Virginia, Sen. Joe Manchin boasts about his opposition to the EPA and his confrontations with the administration. In his latest campaign ad, Manchin alludes to a previous commercial in which he shoots Obama’s bill to cap greenhouse gases.

In Republican-leaning Indiana, Democrat Senate candidate Joe Donnelly ignored Obama’s objections and embraced a House GOP bill to undo the EPA rules.

The White House, for its part, insists that the criticism of its record on coal is unfounded.

“The president has made clear that coal has an important role to play in our energy economy today and it will in the future, which is why this administration has worked to make sure that moving forward we can continue to rely on a broad range of domestic energy sources from oil and gas, to wind and solar, to nuclear, as well as clean coal,” said Clark Stevens, a White House spokesman.

Wolf-trapping Rules Open for Public Comment

HELENA, Mont. (AP) • Montana wildlife regulators have given initial approval to wolf-trapping rules meant to reduce the chances of dogs, lynx and other animals from being caught.

The Great Falls Tribune reported the Fish, Wildlife and Parks Commission took a preliminary vote Thursday on the proposed rules, which will now go to the public for a 30-day comment period before a final vote is taken.

The proposal includes setting the tension on trap pans at a minimum of eight pounds. The tension setting is the amount of weight it takes to spring a trap, Wildlife Bureau Chief Ken McDonald said.

“The proposed rules mandate a trap pan tension setting. Wolves happen to be larger than most fur bearers, and a higher trap pan tension setting increases the amount of weight it takes to trip the pan on a trap and set it off,” McDonald said.

Opponents say the proposed setting is not enough to prevent the inadvertent trapping other species. Kim Bean of Helena said the proposed setting could be tripped by her 70-pound dog or by the mules she travels with in the backcountry.

Other wildlife, such as protected lynx, also could set off the traps, and conflicts are more likely to occur when inexperienced trappers head to the backcountry, she said.

“Trapping is dangerous to those of us who utilize this land,” Bean said. “I’m not feeling very safe doing what I love to do best. Make no mistake, this is not keeping me out of the backcountry, but I’m not going to believe this is the best idea you have in preventing non-target deaths and injury.”

Montana is looking to Idaho as a model by adding trapping to its wolf hunt for the first time this year. Commissioners approved expanding the hunt after the wolf population grew to at least 653 predators at the end of last year.

Montana’s archery season closes Oct. 14. The general rifle season for wolves runs from Oct. 20 to Feb. 28 and trapping is allowed from Dec. 15 to Feb. 28.

FBI Seek Help Finding Wyoming Kidnap Suspect

CHEYENNE, Wyo. (AP) • The FBI on Friday asked people in Wyoming and surrounding states for help in finding a man suspected of kidnapping a girl from the town of Cody and sexually assaulting her earlier this week.

The man lured the 11-year-old girl into his SUV on Monday evening by claiming he needed help finding a missing puppy, Cody police said.

He later threatened her with a pistol.

A group of hunters found her in a rural area outside the town several hours later.

Based on witness statements and video footage from cameras around Cody, investigators believe the vehicle to be a 2004 or 2005 white Toyota 4-Runner, said Dave Joly, an FBI spokesman in Denver.

Footage shows a removable, silver and black Thule rooftop cargo box on top of the vehicle.

Investigators found such a box abandoned near where the girl was released and were processing it for any evidence, Joly said.

The suspect is a white man, between 55 and 60, weighing 185 to 200 pounds, with short, light hair and trimmed facial hair, authorities said.

Surveillance photos weren’t of high enough quality to discern a license plate number or see what state the plate was from, Joly said.

Federal authorities have authority over the case under federal kidnapping laws — even if the perpetrator didn’t cross state lines in commission of the crime — because of the age of the victim, Joly said.

Plan to Streamline Solar Development in West OK'd

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) • Federal officials on Friday approved a plan that sets aside 445 square miles of public land for the development of large-scale solar power plants, cementing a new government approach to renewable energy development in the West after years of delays and false starts.

At a news conference in Las Vegas, Interior Secretary Ken Salazar called the new plan a "roadmap ... that will lead to faster, smarter utility-scale solar development on public lands."

The plan replaces the department's previous first-come, first-served system of approving solar projects, which let developers choose where they wanted to build utility-scale solar sites and allowed for land speculation.

The department no longer will decide projects within the zones on a case-by-case basis as it had since 2005, when solar developers began filing applications. Instead, the department will direct development to land it has identified as having fewer wildlife and natural-resource obstacles.

The government is establishing 17 new "solar energy zones" on 285,000 acres in six states: California, Nevada, Arizona, Utah, Colorado and New Mexico. More than half of the land — 153,627 acres — is in Southern California.

Interior also established 19 million acres — nearly 30,000 square miles — of so-called "variance zones" that will allow developers to propose solar projects in those areas. Environmental and other review of projects proposed in variance zones will be handled on a case-by-case basis.

The Obama administration has authorized 10,000 megawatts of solar, wind and geothermal projects that, when built, would provide enough energy to power more than 3.5 million homes, Salazar said.

Secretary of Energy Steven Chu said the effort will help the U.S. stay competitive.

"There is a global race to develop renewable energy technologies — and this effort will help us win this race by expanding solar energy production while reducing permitting costs," Chu said in a statement.

The new solar energy zones were chosen because they are near existing power lines, allowing for quick delivery to energy-hungry cities. Also, the chosen sites have fewer of the environmental concerns — such as endangered desert tortoise habitat.

Lawyer Wants To Drop Tamarack Case

BOISE (AP) • The lawyer for a would-be Tamarack Resort buyer under federal indictment wants off the fraud case.

The lawyer cited deep communication problems over legal strategy and a potential conflict of interest.

Eagle-based lawyer Dennis Charney filed paperwork late Thursday in U.S. District Court in Boise.

Hutcheson was charged earlier this year with diverting $5 million to help finance his failed bid to buy Tamarack, a struggling resort 90 miles north of Boise.

Charney says he and Hutcheson disagree over "strategy and presentation" ahead of a scheduled Nov. 27 trial.

Hagerman Holds Off Butte County

BY MARLOWE HEREFORD
Post Register (Idaho Falls)

ARCO • In the game dubbed “The Pirate Bowl” for two Class 1A-I football teams that share the same mascot and black and orange colors, Hagerman had a scare from Butte County before the reigning champions emerged with a 38-26 win Friday.

Butte County (5-2, 4-2 Snake River) stayed within two touchdowns of Hagerman (7-0, 5-0) throughout the entire game and briefly led at one point, but committed the lone turnover of the contest in the fourth quarter to set up favorable field position for Hagerman to put the game away with one final touchdown.

With the win, Hagerman maintains sole possession of Idaho’s longest active winning streak at 19 games, after the team it shared the mark with last week, Blackfoot, lost.

The contest was nothing short of what both coaches expected.

Butte County was coming into our conference, we pegged this game,” Hagerman coach Mark Kress said. “They are dang tough. It was every bit of the battle we thought it’d be.”

Butte County, which is in its first year of 8-man football after advancing to the 2A quarterfinals last year, entered the game anticipating a competitive contest that would give it a clearer picture of the measuring stick for 1A-I.

“I knew it would be close right down to the end,” Butte County coach Sam Thorngren said. “That game could’ve gone either

TWIN FALLS • Despite three fumbles and a turnover on downs inside Canyon Ridge’s 30-yard line Friday, Twin Falls eventually ran away from the Riverhawks, winning 27-0 and keeping its playoff hopes intact.

The Bruins self-destructed on offense throughout the first half, but scored when safety John Hohnhorst nabbed a tipped pass on third down and returned it 30 yards.

The Riverhawks, who’ve struggled all year to generate offense from single- and double-wing formations, tried to run plays from five-receiver sets with four bunched to one side. It wasn’t a look the Bruins expected.

“They were bunched to the other side and I was thinking they’d do something quick,” Hohnhorst said. “I bit up on it and (the Riverhawk receiver) fumbled it.”

Hohnhorst had two interceptions in the game, and the Bruins defense held stout throughout, holding the Riverhawks to just two plays that went more than 10 yards until midway through the fourth quarter — though Riverhawk drops and penalties disallowed longer plays.

If not for the shutout, the story of the night would have been the return of running back Anthony Archuleta, who ran for 157 yards and a touchdown in his first game

Minico Holds Off Jerome in Nail-biter

RUPERT • Jerome had the Spartans right where it wanted them.

Trailing by six with 3:36 to go, the Tigers had three timeouts in its pocket and 71 yards to drive for the winning touchdown.

Like they’d done most the night, their offense moved the ball with ease to midfield, clock ticking down to 2:19. But then, Jerome put the ball on the turf — its third fumble of the game.

Minico’s Matt Harper and Will Morgan were both there to pounce on it and the Spartans sighed in relief of their 32-26 Great Basin Conference victory.

“This was huge. At Minico, we don’t like Jerome very much. Conference championship on the line, we’ve never lost a conference game at home and we had to win,” said Minico strong safety Jake Beamer. “It was a fist-fight, it was physical. A little trash talk going on, but not much. It was a clean fist-fight.”

With two weeks remaining in the regular season, Minico (5-2 overall, 3-0 Great Basin) takes sole possession of first place in the conference, while Jerome (3-4, 2-1) drops a spot behind with its first league loss.

“We’ve been talking about it all week that this is probably one of the biggest games of the year so far be-

Gooding Loses McGinnis, Escapes Vs. Homedale

TIMES-NEWS

GOODING • Josh Faulkner accounted for more than 400 yards between rushing and passing, and Gooding finished the regular season undefeated with a 29-22 win over Homedale on Friday.

The Senators (8-0) did it without star lineman Cole McGinnis, who went down with a knee injury in the opening stages of the game.

Gooding fell behind 14-0 in the first quarter but rallied on the heroics of Faulkner and Josh Finley.

Head coach Cameron Andersen was optimistic that his prized lineman might be able to play in the team's playoff opener in two weeks' time.

"We're not in panic mode yet, but we've got some good guys (beyond McGinnis)," he said. "We needed this game. We needed to get down 14 and go get it, and our guys showed tenacity and mettle."

move the ball, Lighthouse was back at it. This time the big play was Bosma to Philip DeMello for a 36-yard gain while Taylor finished it off for the quick 14-0 advantage.

Taylor surpassed the 200-yard mark despite suffering from cramps for most of the second half.

"I had really good downfield blocks and the line was fighting so hard, I just found the holes," said Taylor, who also tallied double digits in tackles. "This was the biggest game we have had on this field and we knew Castleford would play hard."

While the Wolves tried the pass early, they went back to their bread and butter: Ty Zimmers running the ball. The Lion defense bent a few times — like a 38-yard pass from Mike Peckham to Zimmers on a fake punt — but did not bend, keeping Castleford off the scoreboard.

Another big run by Taylor led to a Bosma to Eli Berndt touchdown. Late in the half Berndt returned an interception 59 yards leading to Bosma's third TD pass of the half, this time to Dillon Wilson from 16 yards out putting the Lions up 28-0 at the half.

DeMello patrolled the outside for the Lions, taking out the legs of the bigger runners.

"We worked on shutting down their running all week. We had a player with number 33 (Zimmers) and focused on him," said DeMello. "We took good angles and tied up their legs so they would go down."

While the score was lopsided, the yardage wasn't. In the first half Lighthouse Christian tallied 151 yards of offense compared to 106 for the Wolves. The difference was field position and converting on third down.

"They executed better than us and came up with the big play every time they needed it," said Castleford coach Tracy Vulgamore. "They are solid all the way around."

Both defenses ruled after the break, with more turnovers than first downs in the third quarter.

After yet another big run by Taylor, Dillon Wilson broke free early in the fourth from 26 yards out for the final score of the night.

Zimmers was held to 41 yards rushing while Peckham tallied 33. Peckham and Rylee Reynolds both played quarterback and compiled 93 yard through the air.

Lighthouse Christian goes out of conference next week to battle Butte County while the Wolves take on North Gem in hopes of securing the second seed into the state tournament.

pounding wing-T running attack were both on full display.

Minico piled up 405 yards rushing, led by Jordan Browning's 164 yards on 20 carries and two touchdowns. Taylor Seaton also ran for two scores, carrying 22 times for 143 yards. Dansie picked up 93 yards on 15 rushes and scored a touchdown.

way. Our kids, I couldn't be more proud of them. We were in a position to win. There's a good chance we'll see them again."

Touchdowns by reigning 1A-I player of the year Kade Kress and Dillan Hensle within the first seven minutes of regulation put Hagerman ahead 12-0 early. The contest became only tighter from there.

Butte County made it a four-point game five minutes into the second quarter when Tommy Kern rushed for a five-yard touchdown and fellow senior Randy Hjelm successfully completed a two-point conversion run seconds later.

Hagerman took a 19-14 half-time lead, but Butte County struck first in the third quarter with a Tyler Andreason 13-yard touchdown to seize a 20-19 advantage.

The scoring frenzy continued and Hagerman maintained a one-touchdown lead for much of the rest of regulation before recovering a Butte County fumble with less than five minutes remaining. Hagerman took over possession at the Butte County 35-yard line and Justin Arriaga delivered with a five-yard touchdown to put the contest away.

Tigers' quarterback Zach Thibault completed 23 of 33 passes for 308 yards, two touchdowns and no interceptions. He threw a 52-yard touchdown pass to Kolton Parsons and a 15-yard scoring strike to Cody Bowman. Thibault completed passes to seven different receivers, led by Bowman's five grabs for 78 yards.

Minico led 20-7 at halftime, but Parsons returned the second half's opening kickoff 94 yards for a Jerome touchdown.

"That was a big momentum changer," Perrigot said. Browning bulldozed his way for a 14-yard touchdown to put Minico ahead 26-13, but Jerome responded with two unanswered scores — Thibault to Parsons and Bowman — to tie it 26-26 with 7:55 remaining in the game.

But Minico put together what proved to be the game-winning drive. The Spartans marched 80 yards in 10 plays

BOUNTY PLAYERS FILE APPEALS TO NFL

ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW ORLEANS • All four players punished in the NFL's bounty investigation have filed appeals with the league. People familiar with the situation say the players have asked Commissioner Roger Goodell to remove himself as arbitrator because they do not believe he can be impartial.

One of the people also says New Orleans linebacker Jonathan Vilma expects to play at Tampa Bay on Oct. 21 while his appeal is pending. The people spoke to The Associated Press Friday on condition of anonymity because the appeals were filed as private documents with the league.

NFL spokesman Greg

Aiello confirmed Friday that all four players had filed appeals, but said the league would decline comment on the substance of those documents.

This marks the second round of appeals by the players.

About a month ago, a three-member appeal panel created by the NFL's collective bargaining agreement vacated initial disciplinary rulings handed down by Goodell. Then Tuesday, the commissioner upheld his initial suspensions of Vilma and Saints defensive end Will Smith, and revised his suspensions of Cleveland linebacker and former Saint Scott Fujita and free agent defensive lineman Anthony Hargrove.

Utah Jazz guard Mo Williams poses for photographs during NBA basketball media day Oct. 1 in Salt Lake City.

Williams Unafraid to Speak His Mind

ASSOCIATED PRESS

SALT LAKE CITY • Mo Williams leaned over and made sure the young one knew what to expect. Only in this case, he wasn't offering guidance to one of his youthful Utah Jazz teammates, he was talking to his fifth son, still in the womb and due on Feb. 1. "I'm not missing any games," Williams said of conversations he's had when his wife tells him their unborn child is kicking and can hear him. "I already talked to (him) and we agreed it's going to be on the All-Star break. "Obviously, I'll have to buy him a better car when he's 16. All my other kids get something like I had, a Ford Taurus or something. But it's a good deal." The Jazz certainly are hoping the one they made for Williams is good as well and provides them with an upgrade over point guard Devin Harris. One thing is already clear even if the Jazz are just a few days into preseason: Williams is a talker. "He's not afraid to express himself, let people know how he feels," said Paul Millsap, the team's elder statesman and the only player remaining from Utah's 2010 playoff run. "That's good. That's a good trait to have at the point guard position." Williams' journey back to Salt Lake City already has been well-documented.

The Jazz drafted him No. 47 overall in 2003 and, in what personnel guru Kevin O'Connor still calls "my worst mistake," allowed Williams to leave for Milwaukee after just one season. In late June, the Jazz got their man back, acquiring Williams in a multi-team deal that also sent Lamar Odom to the Clippers. Williams makes his preseason home debut Friday night against Oklahoma City. O'Connor cited Williams' toughness, aggressiveness and work ethic and said he was a capable scorer, shooter and could provide leadership to a group that features four talented players 22 or younger in Derrick Favors, Gordon Hayward, Enes Kanter and Alec Burks.

Williams is confident he can be all of the above. "It's just a little more learning the guys and chemistry, and obviously I'm still learning what they want because I want to be an extension of them. I want to be that coach on the court," he said. There's no question Williams is a different person from the one who arrived in 2003 with a single suitcase after being bypassed in the first round. "As a rookie, I was just happy to get five minutes a game," he said. "I was happy to be in the NBA. Now it's trying to win a championship, and my overall goal is when I see these young guys out there, to try to help them."

No Winner for Past Tours if UCI Strips Armstrong

ASSOCIATED PRESS

PARIS • The Tour de France will have no official winner for the seven races from 1999-2005 if Lance Armstrong is stripped of his victories by the International Cycling Union. In an interview with The Associated Press on Friday, Tour director Christian Prudhomme called the U.S. Anti-Doping Agency's report on Armstrong "damning." It raises doubts, he said, about "a system and an era." Tour officials are still waiting on the UCI's decision on whether to go along with USADA's decision to ban Armstrong for life and erase his racing results. A spokesman for the sport's governing body, Enrico Carpani, said it was "too early to say" what would happen. The UCI must decide by the end of the month whether to appeal USADA's ruling. UCI President Pat McQuaid declined to comment on USADA's report but defended his organization's efforts to catch drug cheats. The report cost Armstrong's former team manager, Johan Bruyneel, his job as general manager of RadioShack Nissan Trek. The team said Friday the decision was taken by "mutual agreement" and that Bruyneel "can no longer direct the team in an efficient and comfortable way." The Belgian has his own legal battle with USADA and has opted for arbitration to fight charges that he led doping programs for Armstrong's teams. If Armstrong's Tour victories are not awarded to other riders, that would leave a gaping seven-year black hole in Tour de France record books. It would also mark a shift in how Tour organizers treated similar cases in the past. When Alberto Contador was stripped of his 2010 Tour victory for a doping violation, organizers held a ceremony to award the race winner's yellow jersey to Luxembourg's Andy Schleck. In 2006, Oscar Pereiro was awarded the victory and a place in the record books after the doping disqualification of American rider Floyd Landis. Prudhomme wouldn't address the differences in approach. McQuaid said inadequacies in the anti-doping system were failing to catch drug-using athletes. The UCI tests athletes repeatedly for doping, he said, but the federation can do little if the results are negative. He insisted the anti-doping system had improved since the 1998-2009 period of Armstrong's career examined in the report. For Frankie Andreu, the report offered relief. A former Armstrong teammate, he had previously admitted doping. "We're kind of getting to the end of this, where we can have some closure on this," Andreu said. "There's more riders, more people out there, talking about what happened in the past."

COLORS OF FAITH

Sybil MacBeth's prayer shows the names of family and friends of retreat participants.

Sybil MacBeth teaches retreat participants how prayers can be illustrated in shapes, colors.

BY TETONA DUNLAP

JEROME • How do you pray? I've never been asked this question before. It took me a moment to answer this question as I sat in a room at the Monastery of the Ascension in Jerome.

I don't really pray in the traditional way one might picture praying. I don't kneel at the edge of my bed, fingers crossed, head bowed.

Sometimes I find myself saying a quick prayer when I am driving or sitting at my desk at work. Most times I just find myself thinking about someone, hoping they are well, and whatever troubles they may be having at the time are fading away.

I never considered those times when I randomly doodled someone's name as prayer — but according to "Praying in Color" presenter Sybil MacBeth — it's prayer.

I shared a table with two other women, white pieces of paper and colored markers sat in front of them. There were 28 people from Episcopal church's across Idaho — Boise, Meridian, Fort Hall, Burley, etc. — attending the Oct. 6 Bishop's retreat.

They were all here to learn how to pray, not with words, but with color.

MacBeth developed the curriculum for "Praying in Color" during a time when several of her friends and family members were receiving serious medical diagnoses. MacBeth and her husband Andy, an Episcopal priest in Detroit, travel the country teaching others about this type of prayer.

"My words felt puny compared to the seriousness of the people's sickness," MacBeth said.

One day she said she retreated to her back porch and just started to draw. She drew a shape, put the name of her friend inside, and added color. Then she added another shape and added detail. Before she knew it the page was covered with names. MacBeth said she real-

"Praying in color is a way to pray if you have a short attention span. If your antsy or fidgety," MacBeth said to the group.

Sneak Peak inside Renovated Boise LDS Temple

BY ANDREW WEEKS
aweeks@magicvalley.com

BOISE • The building might have changed its look, but its holiness remains.

Members of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints are celebrating the remodeling of the Boise temple with a month-long open house beginning today.

On Wednesday, the church invited media to tour the temple and ask questions about the 35,868-square-foot building. It is roughly 6,300 square feet larger than it was previously, contains new detailing and has a granite exterior (formerly marble). The statue of the angel Moroni, which sits atop most LDS temples, also was replaced.

Elder William R. Walker of the church's First Quorum of Seventy conducted the media tour, showing visitors rooms inside the renovated temple and explaining the doctrine behind LDS temples.

In a nutshell, he said, the church builds temples to "seal" families together for eternity and not just until "death do they part."

Temple worship existed in biblical times, Walker said, quoting Bible verses and saying that Jesus called Jerusalem's temple in his day "my Father's house."

The church, he said, holds open houses at its temples before they're dedicated to give the public a chance see and learn about the importance of temples to Latter-day Saints. The Boise temple serves thousands of LDS in the Treasure Valley.

"I think you may be aware that there are 420,000 members of our church that live in the state of Idaho," Walker said. "And we have well over 100,000 in the Boise metropolitan area, which is probably over 100 congregations in the greater Boise area every Sunday."

But it is not just Treasure Valley residents who are excited about the renovations. Before the Twin Falls temple opened in 2008, LDS faithful in the Magic Valley attended the Boise or Idaho Falls temples for weddings and baptisms.

Gooding resident Eileen Shaffer, who was at the Twin Falls temple with her ward's Relief Society on Thursday, said she used to go to Boise once a week. Clive and Vivian Pope, also of Gooding, would travel the 100 or so miles every Friday to serve in the temple.

"We did that for about eight years," Vivian said.

Though the couple is happy for a temple in the Magic Valley, Vivian said she has fond memories of attending the one in Boise.

"I have only pleasant and good memories," she said. The Popes plan to attend the open house to see the changes.

After the Boise temple is dedicated on Nov. 18, only faithful Latter-day Saints with a recommend card will be permitted to enter.

Tour the Temple

The public may attend an open house of the Boise LDS Temple, 1211 Cole Road, through Nov. 10. Guided tours are available 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Mondays, and 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. Tuesdays-Saturdays.

Walker held up a recommend card to media, explaining it is signed by an ecclesiastical leader and the individual, attesting that the holder is living in harmony with the church's teachings.

"We don't drink, take drugs, carouse," he said. "Our leaders will ask us if we are faithful to our spouse, if we attend church on Sundays, pay a tithe."

The focus of the temple, he said, is Jesus Christ.

Many paintings depicting the life of Christ hang in the Boise temple. Some of them are by LDS artists; others are by painters of other faiths such as Danish artist Carl Bloch.

One of the first paintings a temple visitor sees is one by Bloch — a portrait of Christ, a halo about his head, standing next to a child. "That's one of my favorites," Walker said. "I just love that one."

The temple is adorned with elaborate chandeliers, stained glass, expert woodwork, gold leafing and an elegant decor that, Walker said, honors the ones to whom the temple was built: God the Father and his son Jesus Christ.

According to Mormon belief, God and Jesus are two separate beings.

MacBeth is a dancer who describes herself as a non-artist.

This method of praying was a way for her body to be a part of the prayer.

"It's not about art, it's about spending time," she said. "This is the day, be brave, none of us know what we are doing."

To start off the workshop, MacBeth asked for names people use when directing their prayers. She wrote them one by one on an easel holding a pad of paper.

The words — Lord, God, Great Mystery, Creator, Father, Beloved, Mother Father God — soon filled the blank page.

As a challenge she told people to write a name they are not used to addressing and see where it led them.

"When the words stop just keep drawing," MacBeth said.

She said one tip for those who don't know what to draw is to use U's and V's as a framework to forming a pattern.

MacBeth asked for people to call out names of family and friends they would like to say a prayer for.

The names — Karen, Susie, Casey and Joni — soon took shape on 28 pieces of paper in hues of blue, pink, green and orange.

The room with high vaulted ceilings was silent, only the scratching sound of marker felt on paper could be heard.

In increments of three minutes participants cleared their minds and let their hands do all the work. When MacBeth tapped a bell, the rich sound broke the stillness and you could hear the tapping of colored pencils being set aside.

Everyone took a deep breath, filling their lungs, then exhaling and reciting, "You strengthen me more and more. You unfold me and comfort me."

"This is totally new to us all," said Helen Morgus from Hailey. "I've always like writing and playing with writing" Morgus looked at her page, which was all in black pen.

"I like how it turned out and I was going to come back and color it later but I don't think I want to," she said.

Paula Dodd said this type of prayer fits her type A personality.

"I'm a good multi-tasker," Dodd said, her short blond hair tinged with pink, purple and blue.

She said she found this method of prayer as a good way of expressing herself and her thoughts.

MacBeth said a pen in the pews can be used as a focusing tool much like prayer beads, so rather than just sitting, you can be engaged.

For the last exercise before lunch, Macbeth had everyone write a name and practice all we just learned.

I found myself writing my little sister's name in cursive with the black pen I was using to write my notes. Then I went over the black with a pink and purple marker.

My sister has had health problems all her life and recently has had to travel to Denver every other week for doctors checkups on her heart, which was transplanted in 1999.

I don't consider myself an artist. I'm decent at re-creating the basic look of objects so you can tell what they are.

I started drawing the outline of a large rose and then a smaller one. I colored the big one green and yellow and the other pink.

Earlier in the day, we were all asked to write in three sentences how we pray. I thought Bishop Brian Thom of Boise's response was the most beautiful.

"I mean well, God. I try so hard in different ways. When I stop trying so hard, I hear you," Thom said.

I kept that in mind as I picked up a green marker and started making swirls and loops around my sister's name.

Temple

much everything, Walker said, noting that he visited the temple during the renovation and saw it "down to the concrete."

K. Brett Nattress, an Area Seventy of the church, said the renovation is important to him because it's where he brings his family. One thing he appreciates about the renovation: a new entryway near the baptismal font, where youth enter to do proxy baptism.

Mormons come to the temple to baptize for their ancestors who, Walker said, did not have the chance to hear the gospel in this life. They can accept or reject the work done for them in the spirit world, he said, noting the work done in temples is one of love for members of the church.

The baptismal font sits on a circular base of 12 oxen, which represent the 12 tribes of Israel.

One reporter asked: How about the stained glass behind it?

The glass depicts a forest of trees and flowers, which, Walker said, represents the many creations of God. The glass was in the temple before its renovation.

Unlike the Twin Falls temple, which has rooms painted with Magic Valley geography such as the Snake River Canyon and Shoshone Falls, the rooms inside the Boise temple are modestly decorated with elegant drapes.

Outside on the 4.8-acre property is a 112-foot tower, atop which stands a new gold-colored statue of a figure Mormons call Moroni.

According to Mormon belief, Moroni was a prophet who lived in ancient America and was a principle historian of the Book of Mormon. He appeared to Joseph Smith in 1823 as a resurrected being, directing Smith to the ancient plates from which the Mormons' holy book was translated.

There's a rumor that Boise's former Moroni statue once was struck by lightning, but that story was unconfirmed. The statue was, however, replaced, Nattress said.

OBITUARIES

Richard 'Dick' Arthur Beem

Jan. 29, 1938-Oct. 10, 2012

BUHL • Richard 'Dick' Arthur Beem, 74, of Buhl, Idaho, passed away Wednesday, Oct. 10, 2012, surrounded by family at Bridgeview Estates after a long battle of many medical problems. Dick was born Jan. 29, 1938, in Ontario, Ore., to Darrold and Marjorie Beem. He was the middle son with an older brother, James (Jim) Beem, and younger sister, Linda Childers.

Dick graduated from Ontario High School in 1956. After graduating high school, Dick attended the College of Idaho and graduated with a bachelor's degree in education in 1963. While attending high school and college, Dick was active with the varsity basketball and golf teams. During the summer months, Dick and his brother, Jim, spent time in McCall, Idaho, competing in water ski tournaments and operating a boat touring business on Payette Lake.

He married Jackie Richmond in 1958. They raised three children, Debbie Klug and Stacie Beem of Buhl, Idaho, and Eric Beem of Boise.

After Dick graduated from college, he went into partnership with his father and opened Beem's Food Centers in Caldwell and Nampa, Idaho. After selling the business, he sold cars for many years for Burn's Chevrolet in Caldwell. In the early 1980s, the family moved to Buhl and Dick was the owner/manager of the Arrow R Mobile Home Park.

He was preceded in death by his parents, Darrold and Marjorie Beem, and his brother, Jim Beem. He is survived by his wife, Jackie, of 54 years; his two daughters, Debbie (Dave) Klug and Stacie Beem of Buhl; son, Eric (Elizabeth) Beem of Boise; grandson, Justin Novacek; granddaughter, Grace Beem; and his sister, Linda (Charles) Childers of Nampa.

A funeral service will be 10 a.m. Saturday, Oct. 13, at the First Christian Church in Buhl. Arrangements are under the direction of Farmer Funeral Chapel in Buhl.

Dick's wish was that in lieu of flowers, donations can be made to the Buhl QRU, the Buhl School Foundation for Activities Scholarships (Dick loved to watch high school sports) or the charity of your choice.

Colleen Hill

Dec. 22, 1932-Oct. 10, 2012

EAGLE • Colleen DeLapp Hill, age 79, passed away Wednesday, Oct. 10, 2012, surrounded by her family at the home of her daughter and son-in-law, Jan and Eric Hove, after a short struggle with cancer. She appreciated the visits, cards and calls of friends and family, and kept a sense of humor to the end.

The third of five children, she was born Dec. 22, 1932, in Jerome, Idaho, to Bruce and Idella DeLapp. From a young girl, she loved playing the piano, dancing and singing. She sang Alto for many years in the choir at the Rupert Methodist Church. Later she enjoyed knitting and crocheting, but her true life's passion was reading. We all remember accompanying her to the Rupert Library, every two weeks, to get four books at a time. Even after blindness from macular degeneration, she continued to listen to hundreds of books on tape, provided by the Commission for the Blind. She had a generous spirit, and a sensitive soul. Her friendships were few and deep. We all are richer for having her in our lives.

After completing only eighth grade as a child, she was very proud to receive her GED in 1995. She was very well read and equally as well spoken. We all were taught to use proper English, even correcting our letters once we left home. We will all remember her dry wit and sense of humor, often not knowing if she was joking or serious. She worked throughout her life as a mom and wife, waitress and cashier, and in advertising at the Burley South Idaho Press.

She was married to Karl (Kelly) Harman on June 15, 1954. They enjoyed 31 years of marriage, until he preceded her in death on Oct. 3, 1983. She then married John Hill on July 9, 1985, who also preceded her in death on Feb. 13, 2000. After John's death, a light went out in her life, and she missed him until her dying day.

She is survived by children, Jan (Eric) Hove of Eagle, Karla (Marybeth) Harman of Spokane, Wash., and Kristy (Glenn) Lewis of Pocatello; a grandson, Dustin Shelton of Boise; and a great-grandson, Evan Wilson of Boise. She is also survived by siblings, Darlene Day of Boise, Stan DeLapp of Star and Sheila Evans of Longview, Wash., as well as several nieces and nephews.

She was preceded in death by her parents; brother, Marsden; son-in-law, John Scribner; and nephew, James Edward Stricker.

An open house to honor her will be held from 3 to 5 p.m. Saturday, Oct. 13, at the home of Eric and Jan Hove, 845 N. Nicklaus Lane in Eagle, Idaho. Friends and family are welcome to join us.

A special mention of the Springcreek Assisted Living staff and residents, where she resided until recently. Legacy Hospice was phenomenal in the care they provided while at her daughter's home the last few weeks. Thank you all so much.

Wesley Eugene Murphy

July 9, 1957-Oct. 10, 2012

JEROME • Wesley Eugene Murphy, 55, of Jerome, Idaho, went home to be with his Heavenly Father on Wednesday, Oct. 10, 2012, after his battle with cancer, surrounded by his loving family; listening to the song, "Jesus I Lift Your Name On High."

Wes was born July 9, 1957, in Jerome, Idaho. He grew up on his parents' farm in Jerome, graduating from Jerome High School Class of 1977. Wes was employed at Longview Fibre for 30 years. He attended the River Christian Fellowship for many years and loved to talk about Jesus.

On June 7, 2000, in Twin Falls, Idaho, Wes married the love of his life, Linda Patton Murphy. Together they lived, laughed and loved, spending time with their children and their grandchildren. He enjoyed four-wheeling with his three granddaughters, camping with his family and friends and riding his Harley with his wife. He loved to go to Arizona to visit his mother-in-law, Marie, and his brother-in-law, Dan. Rocky, his beloved cat, was always by his side.

Wes had a huge heart and was always thinking of others first. He brought his family great joy. He was the love of his wife, Linda's life and she adored him. As a caring father, he always put his kids first. He was an awesome grandpa, a wonderful son, brother and friend. We will forever miss his sweet smile and sense of humor. His beautiful blue eyes will shine forever in Heaven; his warmth and memory will remain in our hearts until we meet again. We find comfort in knowing that he loved Jesus. Never to be forgotten, Wes was that precious person you could never forget. We will cherish our memories and are grateful for the time we had with him.

Surviving Wes is his loving wife, Linda Murphy of

Jerome; children, Jamie (Clint) McKinnon, Sky Wilcox and Bo (Dzenana) Crisp, all of Twin Falls, and Tony Cooper of Boise, Idaho; his parents, Frank and Bobbie Fish of Jerome; sisters, Lois (Dave) Landers of Arizona, Beulah (Bob) O'Conner and Kathy (Robert) Blunt, both of Twin Falls, and Chris Dumas of Eden, Idaho; and brothers, Raymond (Suzanne) Fish of Jerome and Dave Murphy. Also surviving are three beautiful granddaughters, Ariana McKinnon, Heaven Wilcox and Taylor McKinnon, as well as many nieces and nephews, cousins and numerous other family members.

Wes was preceded in death by his father, Wesley Murphy; his grandparents, Fish, and grandparents, Johnsons and Murphys; and his special Grandmother Bertha Johnson.

A memorial service for Wesley will be held at 7 p.m. Thursday, Oct. 18, at the River Christian Fellowship at 4002 N. 3300 E. in Twin Falls, Idaho, with Pastor Mike Kestler officiating. Those wishing to send flowers or donations may be sent to the River Christian Fellowship at the above address.

The family wishes to express their gratitude to the following organizations, a special thank you to Hospice Visions wonderful care team, a special thank you to the loving River Christian Fellowship family, special thanks to the great employees at Longview Fibre and especially to all of our supportive family, friends and neighbors for their love and kindness during this difficult time.

All services and arrangements are under the direction of Parke's Magic Valley Funeral Home of Twin Falls Idaho. Those wishing to share memories or condolences may do so at www.magicvalleyfuneralhome.com.

Auschwitz Survivor Shlomo Venezia Dies

BY EMILY LANGER

Washington Post

Shlomo Venezia, a survivor of the Auschwitz concentration camp who came forward decades after the Holocaust with a rare eyewitness account of the inner workings of the gas chambers, where Nazis forced him to help shepherd thousands of victims to their deaths, died Oct. 1 at his home in Rome. He was 88.

He had a respiratory ailment stemming from tuberculosis, which he contracted at the end of World War II, said his wife, Marika Kaufmann.

Venezia was among the few people to emerge alive from Auschwitz's Sonderkommando — the special detail of inmates forced to carry out the last step of Hitler's Final Solution. Under threat of execution, the Sonderkommando helped usher new arrivals into the gas chambers, where they died en masse. The Sonderkommando then disposed of the corpses in crematoria and prepared the chamber for another use.

His memoir, first released in French in 2007, has been translated into nearly two dozen languages. An English-language edition, "Inside the Gas Chambers," was published in association with the United States Holocaust Memorial Museum in Washington.

Many survivors kept silent after the war because they feared no one would believe them. Some felt burdened by guilt. An Italian Jew, Venezia began talking about his experience only in the early 1990s, when he sensed a resurgence of anti-Semitism in Europe.

Upon his arrival at Auschwitz on April 11, 1944, Venezia quickly learned the Nazis' murderous routine. Prisoners selected for gassing were gathered in a large room and ordered to disrobe and proceed to a "shower." A meal awaited them after they bathed, they were told. Sometimes Nazis gave the duplicitous instructions; other times the task fell to the Sonderkommando. Once full, the chamber was sealed. Prisoners from the Sonderkommando lifted an overhead trapdoor. "Sometimes, it was me, sometimes others," Venezia recalled. "It's painful to admit that we had to lift the lid and put it back, once the gas had been introduced. But that's how it was."

Salome Venezia was born Dec. 29, 1923, in Thessaloniki, Greece, in a poor Jewish-Italian community. His family called him Shlomo. Many of his relatives, including his mother and sisters, died at Auschwitz. In January 1945, Venezia left the camp in one of the Nazis' infamous death marches. He subsequently was interned in Mauthausen, Melk and finally Ebensee, a concentration camp in Austria that was liberated on May 6, 1945.

After the war, he settled in Rome and spent his career working in hotels and as a store manager. Besides his wife, whom he married in 1956, survivors include three sons, who all reside in Rome; his brother, who also worked in the Sonderkommando; and six grandchildren. In the past two decades, Venezia returned to Auschwitz dozens of times with students and scholars.

Today is Saturday, Oct. 13, the 287th day of 2012. There are 79 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight:
On Oct. 13, 1962, Edward Albee's searing four-character drama "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?" opened on Broadway with Arthur Hill as George, Uta Hagen as Martha, George Grizzard as Nick and Melinda Dillon (whose 23rd birthday it was) as Honey.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:
In A.D. 54, Roman Emperor Claudius I died, poisoned apparently at the behest of his wife, Agrippina.
In 1307, King Philip IV of France ordered the arrests of Knights Templar on charges of heresy.

In 1775, the United States Navy had its origins as the Continental Congress ordered the construction of a naval fleet.

In 1792, the cornerstone of the executive mansion, later known as the White House, was laid during a ceremony in the District of Columbia.

In 1843, the Jewish organization B'nai B'rith (buh-NAY' brith) was founded in New York City.

In 1845, Texas voters ratified a state constitution.

In 1932, President Herbert Hoover and Chief Justice Charles Evan Hughes laid the cornerstone for the U.S. Supreme Court building in Washington.

In 1944, American troops entered Aachen, Germany, during World War II.

In 1960, John F. Kennedy and Richard Nixon held the third televised debate of their presidential campaign (Nixon was in Los Angeles, Kennedy in New York).

In 1972, a Uruguayan chartered flight carrying 45 people crashed in the Andes; 16 survivors who resorted to feeding off the remains of some of the dead in order to stay alive were rescued more than two months later.

In 1981, voters in Egypt participated in a referendum to elect Vice President Hosni Mubarak the new president, one week after the assassination of Anwar Sadat.

In 2010, rescuers in Chile using a missile-like escape capsule pulled 33 men one by one to fresh air and freedom 69 days after they were trapped in a collapsed mine a half-mile underground.

Ten years ago: Serbia's first presidential elections since the ouster of Slobodan Milosevic failed because of a low voter turnout. The Anaheim Angels routed the Minnesota Twins 13-5 to win the American League Championship Series in five games. Best-selling historian Stephen E. Ambrose died in Bay St. Louis, Miss., at age 66.

Five years ago: Secretary of State Condoleezza Rice, after meeting with human-rights activists in Moscow, told reporters the Russian government under Vladimir Putin had amassed so much central authority that the power-grab could undermine its commitment to democracy.

One year ago: Raj Rajaratnam, the hedge fund billionaire at the center of the biggest insider-trading case in U.S. history, was sentenced by a federal judge in New York to 11 years behind bars. American drone-fired missiles killed a ranking member of the militant Haqqani network in northwestern Pakistan. The Detroit Tigers took a 3-2 lead in the AL championship series, defeating the Texas Rangers 7-5. The Milwaukee Brewers tied the NL championship series at two games apiece with a 4-2 win over the St. Louis Cardinals. American Jordyn Wieber won another gold medal, beating Russia's Viktoria Komova for the all-around title at the world gymnastics championships in Tokyo.

Don't Miss Out On These Great Houses!!

DEARABBY: I'm 17 and go to a high school with drug addicts and girls who are lucky they aren't pregnant. (Some are.) My father thinks I'm like them even though I have proven time and again that I'm not. I have a 4.0 GPA and have never done drugs or had sex.

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

I'm not allowed to drive anywhere without my mother accompanying me. If I want to go on a date with my boyfriend, my parents must be present. I have lost friends who are tired of having to hang with my parents and me. I have tried telling my dad this, but he claims I'm being ridiculous and then picks a fight with me. I suggested family counseling, but Dad refused. He says we don't have the money.

What do I do? I just want to be a normal teenager who can hang out without my parents following me everywhere.

- TIRED TEEN IN WYOMING

DEAR TIRED TEEN: You have my sympathy. You have caring and conscientious parents, who appear to have gone overboard in trying to shelter you. By age 17 — and with a 4.0 GPA — you should have been allowed to socialize without a constant chaperone. That's how teens learn to develop relationships and make mature decisions.

In another year you will be 18 and an adult. If there is an adult relative in whom you can confide, ask that person to please speak to your parents on your behalf. You should be experiencing more freedom than you have been allowed.

DEARABBY: I have known my boyfriend, "Kyle," for eight years. We have been dating more than two years and living together for seven months. We have an amazing relationship. We love to laugh and make each other laugh. That's a "quirk" we share.

This morning, Kyle woke up, went straight to his dad's house without saying why and returned with his hair cut, beard trimmed and looking well-groomed. He seemed kind of "off," though — almost nervous. He then went to his mom's to help with some yard work and when he came home, he snuck up behind me and slipped a ring on my finger. I got a little teary-eyed and asked where it came from. He said from his mom. He acted shy, wouldn't say much or look right at me. Then, after a moment, he shouted, "Just kidding! I wanted to make you laugh and freak you out a little!"

I don't think there was malicious intent on his part. He's a sweetheart, but I don't know how to tell him how badly he hurt me emotionally. I thought he was proposing. What should I do?

- UNENGAGED IN NEW HAMPSHIRE

DEAR UNENGAGED: Sit Kyle down and tell him the effect his "joke" had on you. After a couple has started living together, a proposal of marriage is no laughing matter unless both partners are in on the joke.

P.S. If you talk to him in all seriousness, you may find that he DID propose, but then got cold feet.

DEAR ABBY: I'm in my early 60s and have no plans to retire. I raised a child on my own and wasn't able to save much for retirement, and my office retirement plan disappeared during the recession in 2008.

Because of my age, people young and old often ask when I plan to retire. I don't feel I owe anyone an explanation as to why I continue to work, and I plan on working as long as I can. I usually say I can't afford to retire, but then I get a response like, "I sure hope I'm not working at your age," or "You can get Social Security," etc. Any idea how I should respond to let these people know it's none of their business?

- MIFFED IN MENLO PARK

DEAR MIFFED: All you have to do is smile and say, "Retire? I'm just getting started!"

THE ACES ON BRIDGE® Bobby Wolff

"And who's of this or that estate
We do not wholly calculate,
When baffling shades that shift and cling
Are not without their glimmering."
— Edwin Arlington Robinson

In the 2011 Bermuda Bowl Seniors match between France and Poland, both tables defended four spades. Jerzy Russyan for Poland led the spade five to the nine and queen, and Francois Leenhardt took the heart finesse at trick two, losing to the queen. Krzysztof Lasocki led the diamond king back, and Leenhardt won the ace, drew trumps, and tried to split the hearts. When that failed, he tried a club to the king and was one down when that suit too was unfriendly: minus 50.

For France, Philippe Vanhoutte led the diamond seven to the queen and ace and Apolinary Kowalski drew trumps in three rounds, ending in dummy. Now he led a diamond toward his jack, which East had to duck. (Had he taken his queen, he would have built a discard for declarer's heart loser.)

Kowalski now followed up by cashing the heart ace and king. When the queen appeared, two more rounds of hearts (with the diamond loser being pitched) employed Vanhoutte to concede a trick to the club king. That was plus 450 for 11 IMPs to Poland.

Given that diamonds were 4-2, Kowalski understood that if the heart finesse was working, he did not need to take it — at least if the hearts were breaking 3-3 or 4-2. Had the heart queen not appeared, he could have played a third heart anyway. Even if West could win cheaply and play the fourth heart, Kowalski would simply discard his diamond loser, and the endplay would still ensure the contract.

ANSWER: Three diamonds. Although I'm loath to suggest additional conventions for the intermediate player, I believe that a raise to three diamonds should be forcing now. With a weak hand here, South should bid either fourth suit or two no-trump (whichever is cheaper) as an artificial statement of weakness, denying five cards in his original suit. Repeating his own suit should simply show five cards and be a one-round force.

IF OCTOBER 13 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: You will get by with a little help from your friends during the next six to eight weeks. Even when you feel burdened by responsibilities, a congenial group of like-minded people can keep you upbeat and optimistic. February is a good time for making financial decisions and focusing on your career ambitions. If you are sitting on the fence about a significant relationship, wait until May to make a serious commitment, crucial change or decision. The people who really care about you, and can be counted on in a pinch, will be by your side during that month.

HOROSCOPE

Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You may be fascinated by fantasies. Your judgment of a person, place or thing might be weighted by what you want to see rather than by reality. An autumn carnival, an art gallery or party will fit your mood.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Spoil your special someone by making one of his or her fantasies come true. Everyone would like to enjoy life without any strings attached, but the strings of a relationship anchor you to reality.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Inspiration makes your creative efforts sparkle like diamonds. You can fine tune an artistic endeavor or perfect a public presentation this weekend. Expectations will be met where a loved one is concerned.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Bend like the willow tree in the breeze. When faced by small changes, you must make small adjustments to remain firmly rooted in the most important things. Exercise tact and diplomacy.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Speak from the heart. You can understand what is left unsaid. Because your intuition and imagination are better than usual, this is a fine day to have deep and frank discussions about your hopes and dreams.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): It may be hard to settle down to routines. The moon is now in your sign, so fleeting emotions, daydreams or talkative companions could prevent you from applying yourself to the job at hand.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You might be expecting skyrocketing when there is only a fireplace. Your fantasies may be bigger than reality. Rekindle warm feelings with your favorite partner and enjoy quiet amusements tonight.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Perception is everything. Your business judgment is just a bit better than usual; trust it and stand firm. Don't allow yourself to be prodded into premature actions. Risk taking does not suit your personality.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Ignore the brass ring. Don't bother chasing an impossible dream when a sure thing is under your nose. Make the most of every opportunity to pursue creative activities and make inspired choices.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): There is extra energy at your fingertips and the ability to put a pleasant facade on the most menial tasks. This might be a good time to start an exercise program if you use common sense and start slow.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Less is more. A dash of salt highlights the flavor, but an entire box can spoil the dish. Don't waste your time or resources trying to improve something that is already operating at its best.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Keep your hair pinned up. A sense of humor is appreciated. Others enjoy your creativity, viewpoints and ideas, but it's wise to show appropriate respect when dealing with an older, more sedate crowd.
