CLASSROOM CRUNCH

A new school year brings larger class
sizes in local schools.

BY JULIE WOOTTON
jwootton@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • Third-grade teacher Christy Swafford started her school year by fitting 10 more desks in her classroom. “We’re more cramped than we have been in the past,” she said.

Swafford — who has taught at Oregon Trail Elementary School for 16 years — has 30 students. That’s 10 more than last year.

“It’s been very challenging to accommodate the number of students this year,” she said.

This year, all four third-grade classes at Oregon Trail Elementary have either 29 or 30 students.

Swafford said school employees are being creative and using all the resources available to give students individualized help.

“We’re doing the best we can with the number of students we’re given,” she said.

Swafford isn’t alone in seeing her classroom’s ranks swell.

Most of the Twin Falls School District’s seven elementary schools have at least a few classes with 28-30 students.

That’s based on enrollment data from the fourth Friday in September.

Oregon Trail Elementary School third-grader Maddie Bowman reads in class Friday at the school in Twin Falls. The school district has 350 more students than expected this year.

Superintendent Wiley Dobbs said class sizes at some schools are “a little higher than what we’d like to see.”

“Sometimes, it shakes out that some teachers in some grade levels have more students,” he said.

ELECTION 2012

Shotswell, Kauffman
Vie for Idaho House

BY MELISSA DAVLIN
mdavlin@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • No matter whom they choose, voters in Idaho’s District 25 will have a new person representing them in the House next year.

But then, District 25 has taken new shape itself this year — after redistricting, it encompasses all of Jerome County and much of southern and eastern Twin Falls County.

Neither Republican Clark Kauffman nor Democrat Cindy Shotswell have served in the Statehouse before.

Shotswell is opposed to Students Come First, and hopes voters overturn the laws this November. She’s especially concerned about teacher retention, and would like to see more money go to teacher pay.

“There are a lot of teachers who I have spoken to personally, if they’re not contemplating finding better-paying jobs in other states, they already have. Or they’ve retired,” Shotswell said.

Kauffman said he sees problems with Students Come First, but supports the education reforms overall and hopes they’re upheld.

Meet the Candidates

Clark Kauffman
Age: 62
Town: Filer
Party: Republican
Occupation: Farmer
Education: High school
Government experience: Kauffman has served on the Filer Highway District board.
If elected: Kauffman wants to focus on transportation.
In his words: “I read and I listen, and there’s two sides to every story, I know. At least that many. I’m willing to listen and learn.”

Cindy Shotswell
Age: 47
Town: Jerome
Party: Democratic
Occupation: Social worker
Education: Master’s in social work from Boise State University
Government experience: Shotswell first ran for the Legislature in 2010.
If elected: Shotswell said she wants to work on education.
In her words: “My thing would be to put people before politics, people before parties. The people in Idaho is why I’m running.”

Candidates

Patrick and McClure
Contend for Senate Seat

BY MELISSA DAVLIN
mdavlin@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • Two newcomers to the Idaho Senate seek the voters’ nod in the new District 25 this fall.

Scott McClure and current Rep. Jim Patrick are running for the open Senate seat in the district, which encompasses all of Jerome County and much of southern and eastern Twin Falls County.

Both candidates have strong business backgrounds: Patrick is the owner of Patrick Farms, and McClure is the owner of McClure Engineering.

Patrick has experience in commerce and agriculture. One of his biggest concerns is water.

“Water is the number one issue in this area,” he said. He hopes to work on aquifer recharge and water transfer issues.

Patrick supports a personal property tax repeal and a restoration of some higher education funds that have been cut in recent years.

McClure’s top priority is education, he said.

“We all know that things have been tight economically, nationally and certainly for the state

Meet the Candidates

Scott McClure
Age: 65
Town: Jerome
Party: Democratic
Occupation: Engineer
Education: Bachelor’s in mechanical and general engineering Government experience: McClure ran a write-in campaign against U.S. Sen. Mike Crapo in 2004, and has run for both state House and Senate.
If elected: McClure hopes to address education and infrastructure.
In his words: “They’ve got their priorities wrong... I think they’re damaging our state economically and our citizens in the long run by the approach they’re taking to state government.”

Jim Patrick
Age: 67
Town: Twin Falls
Party: Republican
Occupation: Farmer
Education: Bachelor’s of agriculture business and economics, University of Idaho Government experience: Patrick served 3 terms in the Idaho House of Representatives. This is his first time running for state Senate.
If elected: Patrick plans to introduce multiple pieces of legislation, including a bill that would address agricultural liens.
In his words: “When I work on a bill, I’m going to get a coalition of people together to make it work.”

T.F. Council to Hear
Rec Center
Report

BY NATE POPPINO
npoppino@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • Nearly two years ago, the Twin Falls City Council tasked a committee of public officials and private citizens with examining ways to create a city recreation center.

Today, the council will hear the results of that work as committee members offer a set of design and funding proposals. As a next step, the council may then choose a funding option to pursue — assuming the rest of the proposal meets with the council’s approval.

The idea of the rec center grew in large part as a response to the city’s lack of consistent practice and play areas for city-league volleyball and basketball teams. The committee’s proposal focuses on a center 50,000 to 55,000 square feet in size, offering

- A request to approve a new Halloween event sponsored by Amazing Grace Fellowship — a 32-school dodgeball tournament in Twin Falls City Park.

Buhl Woman
Dies in Crash

TIMES-NEWS

BUHL • A 23-year-old Buhl woman died early Sunday after her sport utility vehicle veered off of a county road and rolled.

Claudia Urias, of Buhl, was pronounced dead at the scene after being flung out of her 2001 Mercedes SUV, said Lori Stewart, Twin Falls County Sheriff’s Office spokeswoman.

Though sheriff’s deputies were called about the incident at 5 a.m. Sunday, the crash could have happened anytime between 2 and 5 a.m., Stewart said.

Urias was apparently driving east on 3700 North. At about 1775 East — several miles southeast of Buhl — her SUV crossed the westbound lane of traffic and ran off the road to the north side, Stewart said. The SUV then rolled several times and landed on its side, Stewart said.

Urias was not wearing a seatbelt and was ejected from the SUV. She was found 75 feet from the vehicle, Stewart said.

Investigators are still figuring out what led to the accident, but so far have listed speed as a contributing factor, Stewart said.

Learning to Relax

I have a couple of friends who hang out in the cafe at Barnes and Noble where they read and visit with friends. They are experts on robbing banks and dodging bullets. Bonnie and Clyde (oops, I mean Norm) are retired teachers who are in recovery from the classroom and learning to relax. Bonnie relaxes with yard work and reading and Norm enjoys a good book as well.

Inattentive drivers are also hazardous to one's health. Dakota, one of my teen friends, could have been killed recently when someone plowed into him while texting.

I tense up driving down Blue Lakes during the rush hour. Just loosening my grip on the steering wheel helps. The secret of relaxation is a controlled state of mind.

We reduce stress and its effects by learning to relax. The most mindful form of stress coping is relaxation. The key word of encouragement today is to slow down and relax. You might even sleep better.

Try these techniques: Focus on the present moment. Don't let the failures of yesterday and the worries of tomorrow keep you from being able to relax.

Our environment affects our state of mind. This is a tough one for me. If I don't keep my office clean, it tends to spread to other rooms. But, tidying up my workspace creates a more pleasant atmosphere and enables me to be more productive and relaxed.

Meditation helps silence the mind and control the relentless flow of thoughts. The more we keep the mind still, the more clarity and inner peace we experience. It frees us from the relentless worries and anxieties of our own making. We are worth 10 to 15 minutes a day to detach ourselves from the pressures of the world.

Prioritize the things to be done. This is organization. Take one thing at a time until the job is finished. This enables the enjoyment of success without feeling guilty.

The opinion of others is not what matters, but our own integrity. Do your best and stop worrying about pleasing everyone else. Develop an attitude of detachment to both praise and criticism. Relaxation occurs when we're not constantly thinking about what people are saying and doing.

I schedule personal time. Slow down and enjoy a sunset or watch the floating cloud. Chat with a friend. Read a good book or pet the dog. There is more to life than increased speed.

"Variety is the spice of life." Break routine and do something for fun. Go for a walk or engage in a sporting activity. The change of scenery will help you relax and get away from the monotony and frustration of daily humdrum.

Breathe naturally and gently, and feel the powerful, calming influence on your mind. We breathe in to feel the inner peace and breathe out to exhale our anxieties and worries. Relaxation can be as simple as letting go and trusting God.

With Wildfire Contained, Rock Creek Road Reopens

TIMES-NEWS

ROGERSON • An area closure around a 150-acre wildfire in the South Hills is expected to be lifted today, according to fire officials.

The Thompson Creek Fire — believed to be human-caused — forced the closure of several roads and other areas around the Magic Mountain Resort after it sparked Wednesday.

Sunday, the fire was contained and Rock Creek Road was reopened between Porcupine Springs and the Third Fork Trailhead, Forest Service spokeswoman Julie Thomas said. Managers expect to release some firefighting resources today, and the fire should be fully extinguished and under control Tuesday.

The closures include roads west of Magpie Basin to Lava Springs, south to Wagon Spring and then back down to Rock Creek Road.

The fire was at one point estimated to cover 650 acres — roughly one square mile — but saw a dramatic drop in size once fire crews could better measure it.

“If you just wholesale throw it all out, then we’re right back where we were two years ago and we haven’t solved any of the problems that we had before,” he said.

When it comes to the budget, both said the Legislature needs to work within its means while addressing the state’s needs, though the two had different opinions on where money should go.

“I’m a saver and I believe in filling those rainy day funds back again,” Kauffman said.

He would also like to see the state pay more attention to local roads and highways.

“You can have all the commerce in the world, but if you don’t have infrastructure you can’t move it,” Kauffman said. “Local infrastructure is so important, and it needs to be properly funded.”

In addition to education, Shotswell said she would like to see more money go into Medicaid.

“The cuts to Medicaid were huge. That impacted a lot of disabled adults,” she said.

First education reform laws.

McClure criticized the Legislature for what he called short-sightedness concerning appropriations and tax cuts. Programs cut to higher education – like mining at the University of Idaho – will cost the state in the future, he said.

“You may have saved yourself a few dollars in the process, but in the long run you’re going to lose,” McClure said.

Oregon Trail Elementary School third-graders work on projects on Friday at the school in Twin Falls. The school district has 350 more students than expected this year.

ASHLEY SMITH • TIMES-NEWS

Classes

Over the past five years or so, there have been a handful of larger classes each year. In 2006, for example, each second-grade class at Oregon Trail Elementary had 32 students. It's the largest elementary school class size on record in recent years. This year, Dobbs said larger class sizes are a result of less state funding for employee salaries and benefits. The state shifted 1.67 percent of those funds to pay for the Students Come First education reforms. Dobbs said there haven't been any layoffs in the school district during the economic downturn, but some job positions have been left vacant. With fewer employees and about 350 more students this year, that has led to some larger classes. But Dobbs said it's not the case across the board. Class sizes are about the same — or even smaller — than the past few years at some schools. At Bickel Elementary School, there's an afternoon kindergarten class with just 13 students. All five second-grade classes at I.B. Perrine Elementary School have either 20 or 21 students. Dobbs said overall, the school district has done well with class sizes. Looking to the future, the school district is bringing back a committee this year to look at possible building needs. The facilities planning committee will look at projected student numbers for the coming years. "That's going to drive the recommendation as to whether or not we need new buildings," Dobbs said. What about Other Districts? Twin Falls schools aren't the only ones with larger classes this year. In Kimberly, seventh- and eighth-grade core classes — such as math and English — are a little larger than last year. Superintendent Luke Schroeder said there are 29-32 students in each class. That's two or three more students per class than last year. For the Jerome School District, first- through third-grade classes are a little larger. Superintendent Dale Layne said there are two or three more students per class.

Classes are also larger in seventh grade and at Jerome High. It's a result of higher student numbers. In Cassia County, there are 30 more students this year across the school district. Superintendent Gaylen Smyer said that doesn't normally have a significant effect on any particular school or classroom. It does this year, though. There are 20 fewer teachers in the school district than three years ago, which has impacted class sizes. Some south-central Idaho schools still haven't seen a significant change in class sizes. Filer Superintendent John Graham said there was an influx of kindergartners this year, but his district hired another teacher to keep class sizes in check.

space for both those programs and other recreational activities. In January of this year, the council asked the committee to develop five-year ongoing cost estimates for maintaining the facility and a slate of recommended funding options. As part of the request, council members suggested the recreation center should not seek to compete with private businesses and should not require any new taxes on city residents. A six-page report included in today's meeting agenda lays out the committee's proposal. The group suggests two locations for a center: on Maxwell Avenue next to the city's Parks and Recreation Department in downtown Twin Falls, or on Victory Avenue next to the animal shelter and the Twin Falls Golf Club in an area being vacated by the city's public works crews.

Maintenance and operation estimates built off of the Jerome Recreation District's 32,000-square-foot building suggest the Twin Falls center would cost the city $330,000 in its first year to operate. That could rise to $371,000 in the fifth year, according to the projections. To help with that cost, the committee recommends building a full-size fitness area that the city could then base rec center memberships around — even though a fitness area may conflict with private companies' offerings. None of those projections, of course, address the actual construction of the building. For that, the committee developed three options: forming some sort of partnership with the Boys and Girls Clubs of Magic Valley, putting a roughly $7 million bond before city voters, or forming a recreation district. The committee doesn't see the third as a viable option, according to the report.

Idaho Woman Sues Teens

SANDPOINT (AP) • A northern Idaho woman who was brutally beaten last year after picking up a pair of young hitchhikers is suing the teens who pleaded guilty to attacking her. Vera Gadman filed the lawsuit Oct. 3 in 1st District Court. She is seeking no less than $10,000 in damages for medical expenses, future lost earnings, and pain and suffering. Marshall Owens Dittrich and Joseph John Martin, both 17 at the time of the July 2011 attack, were charged as adults and both pleaded guilty to battery with intent to commit robbery. Martin in June was sentenced to up to 15 years in prison and will be eligible for parole in about three years. Dittrich in September was sentenced to 10 years by 1st District Judge Steve Verby, who retained jurisdiction.

T.F. Woman Rescued after Canyon Fall

TIMES-NEWS

TWIN FALLS • Search and Rescue crews and paramedics converged on the Snake River Canyon Sunday afternoon to rescue a 26-year-old woman after a fall. Erica Hawkins, of Twin Falls, was taking photographs down by the waterfall caused by the Perrine Coulee when she apparently slipped and fell, said Lori Stewart, Twin Falls County Sheriff's Office spokeswoman. Hawkins only fell about 20 feet. Her leg caught under a rock and she came to rest with some water hitting her, Stewart said. Twin Falls County's Search and Rescue team and paramedics hiked to her location, carrying her out on a board, Stewart said. Hawkins was taken to St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center with a leg injury, and cold because of the water, Stewart said. The rescue took about 45 minutes.

Fifteen hundred sheep from John Peavey's Flat Top Ranch near Carey amused parade-goers during Sunday's Trailing of the Sheep Parade in Ketchum.

Sheep and Sheep-watchers Flock Together for Festival

BY KAREN BOSSICK
For the Times-News

KETCHUM • Anne McClain didn't know a thing about spinning. But she knew she had to learn after her mother bought a sack of mohair, not realizing she would have to spin it before she could use it.

On Saturday at Hailey's Sheep Folklife Fair, the Gooding woman showed dozens of others how to use a spindle — a wooden spike that resembles a large top and has long been a part of myth and legend, including the Greek Fates, and the goddesses Artemis and Athena.

"Hand spinning is still an important tool," McClain said as she spun the spindle alongside Ilse Hylton, of Twin Falls, who was demonstrating the art of spinning wool on the more familiar spinning wheel.

McClain and Hylton were among dozens of Magic Valley residents who headed north for the 16th annual Trailing of the Sheep Festival in Hailey and Ketchum Friday through Sunday. They joined hundreds of people who'd come from places like Sacramento, Calif., and Eugene, Ore., for the festivities.

"We wanted to take in the fall colors," said Linda and Wilson Gray of Jerome as they stood in line at Cristina's Restaurant for a free sample of lamb curry. "We love watching the sheep dog trials, especially the young dogs who don't know what to do."

Lonna Alexander-Steel explained to passersby how Native Americans layer alpaca fur into the soil around their corn because it holds water and fertilizes the soil with nitrogen.

And Linda Cortright, the founder of Wild Fibers magazine, regaled audiences with tales of rounding up renegade sheep in New Zealand's mountains by helicopter. The herders would jump out of the helicopter onto the sheep, tie them up and transport them by helicopter — the sheep folded into little balls of wool beneath the chopper.

Sheep penned alongside the sea in Scotland have learned to thrive on the seaweed the tide brings in, she added.

But Cortright cautioned against taking fiber-producing animals out of their natural environment. Musk oxen taken from the barren Arctic to lush green pastures get parasites that kill them. And cashmere goats raised in lush environments develop a coarse fiber rather than the soft cashmere that makes them the "ultimate luxury fiber," she said.

The four-day event designed to celebrate the heritage of sheepherding in the Wood River Valley culminated with 1,500 sheep from John Peavey's Flat Top Ranch near Carey parading down Ketchum's Main Street as they made their way from Corral Creek north of Ketchum towards winter pastures down south.

The sheep apparently failed to hear their alarm clock earlier that morning, delaying the parade by a half-hour.

It didn't seem to faze too many people who sat on the curbs enjoying warm fall sunshine.

"You could be in New York watching the Macy's parade," said Chris Millspaugh. "But, hey, this is living history"

New Idaho Geologic Map Due Out Friday

BY WILLIAM L. SPENCE
Lewiston Tribune

LEWISTON (AP) • Idaho's geological history will be on vivid display this week, when the Idaho Geological Survey releases the first new geologic map of the state since 1978.

The map goes on sale Friday, just in time for the Earth Science Week Geologic Map Day celebration.

The 36-by-48-inch chart uses 75 colors to identify different types of rocks and rocks of different ages. The colors are draped over a shaded relief map that highlights mountain slopes and other surface features in sharp detail.

"It's really a piece of art," said IGS Director Roy Breckenridge. "You don't have to be a geologist to be drawn to it. It encourages inquiry and discovery of the land we live in."

The map illustrates Idaho's multibillion-year rock record, a grand narrative that includes rifting and colliding continents, global catastrophes, rising and falling sea levels and eons of slow, steady erosion.

A spattering of green and brown splotches in the Idaho Panhandle, for example, mark the Belt Supergroup, a collection of rocks that formed when fine-grained sediments flooded into a huge rift basin.

Found in Idaho, Montana and British Columbia, the roughly 1.45-billion-year-old deposits measure as much as 18 kilometers thick — more than four times the average depth of the Pacific Ocean — and host one of the largest silver deposits in the world, in Idaho's Silver Valley.

A dark charcoal-brown is used to identify the oldest rocks in the state, including a relatively small plug of 2.7-billion-year-old gneiss in the Pioneer Mountains southwest of Mackay and a large swath of 2.67-billion-year-old granitic gneiss, schist and quartzite located between Bovill and the St. Joe River. They date from a time when modern-style plate tectonics may not have operated, when Earth's mantle was much hotter and continental crust may have been created in enormous melting events.

At the opposite end of the geological time scale are the roughly 15,000- to 17,000-year-old Lake Missoula and Lake Bonneville flood deposits. They're found in the Rathdrum Prairie and along the Snake and lower Clearwater River drainages, marked in yellow.

"The geological record is more complete in some places than others," Breckenridge said. "That's part of the beauty of Idaho. It's at the juncture of a number of interesting geological provinces and has a relatively complete record from about 2.6 billion years onward."

Idaho rocks haven't changed much since the last statewide map was produced in '78, he said, but a substantial amount of new mapping has been done since then. The work provided details in areas that were previously just conjecture.

Age-dating technology has also improved dramatically, so the new map provides more accurate information about when various rock units formed.

"Technology allows us to learn more about the geological underpinnings of the state," Breckenridge said. "Geologists have an interpretive view of our surroundings, and the interpretations change with modern technology."

Sen. Arlen Specter, D-Pa., leads a Senate field hearing, in March 2012 in Philadelphia. Former U.S. Sen. Arlen Specter, longtime Senate moderate and architect of the one-bullet theory in JFK's death, died Sunday. He was 82.

Longtime GOP Senate Moderate Arlen Specter Dies

BY PETER JACKSON
Associated Press

HARRISBURG, Pa. • For most of his 30 years as Pennsylvania's longest-serving U.S. senator and prominent moderate in Congress, Arlen Specter was a Republican, though often at odds with the GOP leadership.

He helped end the Supreme Court hopes of former federal appeals Judge Robert H. Bork, who was nominated by President Ronald Reagan. Decades later, he was one of only three Republicans in Congress to vote for President Barack Obama's economic stimulus.

His breaks with his party were hardly a surprise: He had begun his political career as a Democrat and ended it as one, too.

In between, he was at the heart of several major American political events. He rose to prominence in the 1960s as an assistant counsel to the Warren Commission, developing the single-bullet theory in President John F. Kennedy's assassination. He came to the Senate in the Reagan landslide of 1980 and was a key voice in the Supreme Court confirmation hearings of both Bork and Clarence Thomas.

Specter died Sunday died at his home in Philadelphia from complications of non-Hodgkin lymphoma, said his son Shanin. He was 82.

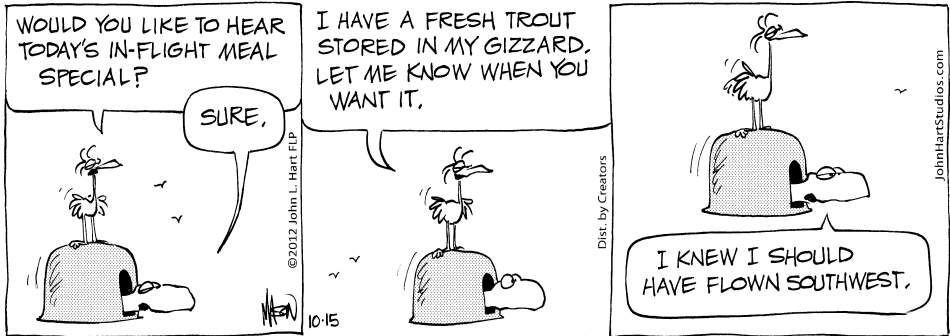

Over the years, Specter had fought two previous bouts with Hodgkin lymphoma, overcome a brain tumor and survived cardiac arrest following bypass surgery.

Intellectual and stubborn, Specter took the lead on a wide spectrum of issues and was no stranger to controversy.

In one of his last major political acts, Specter startled fellow senators in April 2009 when he announced he was joining the Democrats. He said he was "increasingly at odds with the Republican philosophy," though he said the Democrats could not count on him to be "an automatic 60th vote" that would give them a filibuster-proof majority.

Why Didn't More Women Make Idaho 100?

The most frequent specific reaction to the book Martin Peterson and I just released, “Idaho 100: The people who most influenced the Gem State,” is this: Only five women out of 100 people? Really?

The same thought occurred to us as we populated the list. Were we, for some reason, just missing a lot of women who really ought to be on the list? We concluded we weren't, at least not by the criteria we set for the book. The reasons say something about the actual past and actual present of Idaho.

We weren't saying women collectively didn't influence the course of Idaho. Idaho became civilized as the female population increased; in politics, women were the main backers of prohibition, education and temperance, among other things. Many of the men on our list were strongly influenced by women, one way or another, and many women had a lot of specific, individual effect.

But individual leaders among women, especially early in Idaho's history, are harder to find.

This is the history. Men led the original expeditions into what's now Idaho. They scouted the trails, started the trading camps, found the precious metals, built the mining camps and boom towns and mapped their locations. In the early agricultural developments, women were more likely to be present, but men (like Charles Rich, Thomas Ricks, William Budge and William McConnell) were the leaders and founders of the early farm communities. Men designed the early roadways, specified boundaries on maps, designed and built the early water and transport systems on which the core of Idaho's settled civilization was built. Men founded the major businesses — mining, timber, agricultural, communications and transportation — that formed the economic basis of Idaho in its early decades and beyond. The people who did these things account for many of the spots on the 100.

Idaho today has many prominent women in its business community, but that was not always the case, and in the context of two centuries of history, it's a recent development. You'll search in vain for the women who founded or controlled major Idaho businesses in the 19th century, or even the early 20th. (This isn't necessarily true elsewhere, but it was in Idaho.) The first major female entrepreneur in Idaho with major reach and influence was Georgia Davidson, the key founder of Idaho's television (and to a degree radio) industry, and she is on our list, but her greatest influence didn't begin until 1940s and '50s.

It's more stark on the government side. Idaho has never had a female governor, lieutenant governor, secretary of state, attorney general or U.S. senator, and just two representatives in all these years to the U.S. House. Idaho territory elected no women at all (so far as I can tell) to any territory-wide or legislative office. The Idaho State Legislature was all-male well into the 20th century; the first female Idaho state senator took office in 1937, and the numbers did not rise substantially for more decades. Idaho did start electing women as superintendent of public instruction in 1898 (with Permeal French, listed in the 100), but decades passed before they reached any other statewide office.

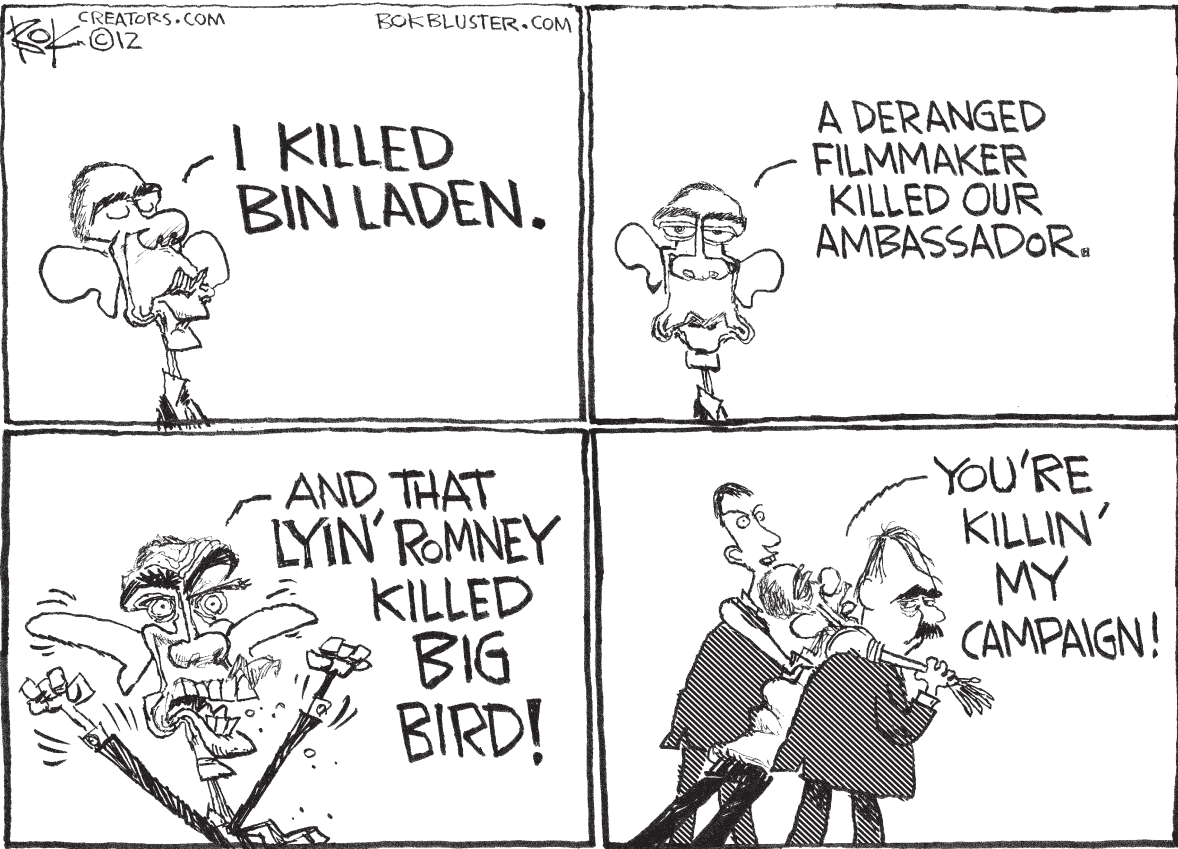

When more recently women have argued that they long have been underrepresented in the state's support political, economic and social ranks, they have been right — and that has changed, to some degree at least, in recent decades. But what has preceded this last generation or two is much of Idaho's formative history. We didn't argue that's the way it should have been, or should be in the future. But we'd be dishonest to argue it's not the way it actually was.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Editor's note: The Times-News will accept election-related letters until Friday, Oct. 26, at 5 p.m. The word limit for letters to the editor is 300.

Donna Pence Dedicated to Working for her Constituents

Donna Pence has the experience, the work ethic and the energy that will allow her to best represent District 26 in the Idaho Legislature.

Donna has ably represented the citizens of Gooding, Camas, Lincoln and Blaine counties for the last eight years in the House of Representatives. With an estimated 47 percent of the Legislature retiring or moving from the House to the Senate this year, it is important we retain our seasoned legislators who will provide leadership and make sure things run smoothly.

Donna, Wendy Jaquet and Michelle Stennett have a well-deserved reputation for keeping their citizens informed about what is happening in the Legislature. They hold town meeting in our communities before, about halfway through and after Legislature adjourns. Each sends out individual weekly email “Legislative Updates” that provide us with special insight into the legislative process.

I have contacted Donna about issues and get quick replies and, where warranted, action is taken. As a former city council member, I know the amount of work that is involved with following up on these issues and I appreciate Donna's dedication to working for her constituents.

Donna has knocked on around 2,000 doors in this district to find out what the patrons want to see the legislature work on this next session. So far this has meant spending three or more hours in the hot sun for days on end to accomplish. Stamina is not only important in this aspect of her job but also in the long hours of the Legislative session.

Donna is the active and involved legislator this district deserves, and my vote will be for her this Nov. 6.

Support Jack Nelsen for CSI Board of Trustees

I am writing to endorse the candidacy of Jack Nelsen for Seat 3 of the College of Southern Idaho Board of Trustees.

I have known Jack personally and professionally for many years. I have always been impressed with his honesty and integrity. His service to Jerome County for many years as a member and chairman of Jerome County Planning and Zoning Commission have been invaluable. His opinions have been intelligent and well reasoned, and I would expect that he will bring the same qualities to the CSI Board of Trustees.

I would urge everyone to join me in supporting Jack for Seat 3 on the CSI Board of Trustees.

Who in Their Right Mind Would Want To Be President?

Political observers are discussing the reason that the president was apparently distracted during the first debate. Please consider the following: It's not unlikely he was distracted by all the decisions he has to make regarding what to do next about joblessness; what Syria's next move will be; what to do about the murder of the ambassador and five assistants in Libya; what to do about Iran's effort (or not) to develop — what many of Iran's enemies have already developed — a nuclear bomb; what to do about our military and civilian casualties in Iraq and Afghanistan; and what to do about critical matters of which only the president and a few others have intelligence. If that's not enough, consider the threat to his person and family by unbalanced home-grown terrorists tormented by racial hatred of him. Anyone would likely be distracted by so many alarming situations.

Who in their right mind would want to be in the president's shoes? Consider that he was politically forced at this time to participate in the debate, an outdated ritual that has become just another football game. “Fans” appear to be more interested in who makes the most “touchdowns” rather than learning anything that would help them choose the best candidate for president.

All Gov. Romney had to do — while the president was preoccupied with so many situations crucial to our well-being — was memorize lines for the debate and count his money by checking its stock market value. Taking care of such personal business — and formerly, Massachusetts' business — was perhaps good experience. However, those two jobs were relatively easy; taking care of a nation's business and well-being is a far more complex job. Why elect a person of lesser experience now?

Three Democratic Candidates Have Experience to Represent Idaho

Good news for Magic Valley voters. Two great local candidates are running for the state Legislature on the Democratic ticket this November. Former Times-News award-winning journalist and writer Patricia Marcantonio faces incumbent Lee Heider and Rosemary Fornshell is running for a House seat against Stephen Hartgen. As a woman and as a minority, Pat will bring a perspective of the 11 percent of the state's Hispanic population and a much needed balance to the State Legislature. She knows the issues intimately and will do the work and research needed to restore some balance to a one-sided Legislature that spends its time with in-fighting and extreme positions.

Rosemary's experience as head of human resources at the local hospital and as an educator at CSI and nonprofit board member gives her a heart for students and the under-served. I am proud to support these two women as well as Nicole LeFavour, who is running for congresswoman.

Please support your children and educators by voting no on Propositions 1, 2 and 3. Remember that these three candidates have the experience and passion to represent all Idahoans. As nonsense like invasive vagina probe bills and the bullying tactics of Luna and Vandersloot dominate our state politics, I am thrilled to imagine a more balanced group in the Statehouse.

Take a look at the faces at the DNC convention. What party represents the diversity of our country? Voters, consider picking the party that truly represents all people. The far right conservatives have taken over our state GOP and could care less about the middle class and those who are struggling to find jobs and educate their children. Please join me in voting for these passionate and well-qualified candidates.

Sincerely,
BRAD SIEGEL

Who Do You Trust with Your Children's Education?

One of the inflammatory headlines on the community page ads paid for by Melaleuca asks, “Who ya' gonna believe ... the Governor, the Superintendent of Schools and the State Legislature or the Union?” knowing the word union instantly conjures up a bad image in people's minds.

What they fail to mention is that the IEA president is a former middle school teacher and that the Idaho union is comprised almost solely of teachers. Teachers belong to a union so they have someone to lobby for them and to present their views to the Legislature, thus allowing the teachers to remain in their classrooms and teach. Teachers are not forced to belong. The Idaho Education Association recommends candidates that are pro-education, but they respect the teachers' rights to vote for the candidates of the teachers' choice.

So how would you answer Melaleuca's question? Who do you believe and who do you trust with your children's and grandchildren's education? Is it the Governor, State Superintendent of Schools and the State Legislature who have never taught in a classroom and who do not know your children or is it teachers who have earned a degree in education, continue to take credits to stay current on education trends and, most importantly, know and love your children whom they see on an almost daily basis?

Don't fall for the propaganda you read and hear in the ads. Research the issues yourself and go to your schools to see what is happening. Then I hope you will join me in voting no for Props 1, 2 and 3.

Utah Colleges Mull Impact of Mormon Policy Change

SALT LAKE CITY (AP)

• Utah State University has formed a special task force to weigh the impact of the Mormon church's new lower minimum age requirements for missionaries.

The University of Utah and Brigham Young University also are monitoring how the historic change will affect enrollment said.

Thomas S. Monson, president of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, announced at the faith's 182nd semiannual General Conference on Oct. 6 that the church will lower its minimum age requirements for missionaries from 19 to 18 for men and from 21 to 19 for women.

James Morales, vice president for student services at Utah State and the head of its task force, said the age change represents a potentially major shift in the way Utah high school students apply for college admission and scholarships.

He said the key issue the task force will examine is the short- and long-term effects the change will have on enrollment. The change is expected to have an immediate impact on freshman enrollment at USU, he said, but student numbers should eventually return to normal as students complete their missions.

"The impact is going to be broad so I suspect the task force membership will also be broad to address the needs of the university," Morales said.

New Lawsuit Latest Step in Idaho Schools Battle

BY REBECCA BOONE
Associated Press

BOISE • A lawsuit over Idaho's system of funding public schools is growing, with the former school superintendent who is pressing the case reviving the claims made in another lawsuit that plodded through Idaho's courts for 15 years.

Russell Joki, a former Nampa Schools superintendent who teaches graduate-level classes to aspiring school administrators at the University of Idaho, sued the state this month in Ada County's 4th District Court, contending that student fees for things like chemistry and art supplies violate Idaho's constitutional promise of a free public education.

Now he's adding a second cause of action to the lawsuit, contending that Idaho lawmakers have ignored an Idaho Supreme Court ruling from 2005 that found Idaho's school funding system didn't pass constitutional muster.

"Despite the clear ruling of the Idaho Supreme Court, the Legislature has not introduced a single piece of legislation to comply with the Supreme Court mandate," Joki's attorney, Robert Huntley, wrote in the amended lawsuit.

In fact, Huntley and Joki maintain, not only has the Legislature failed to enact any legislation to make the state's funding system constitutional, it's further eroded the current funding system by cutting money for schools and moving some of the revenue stream from property taxes — considered a fairly stable source of funding — to sales and use taxes, which fluctuates depending on the economy.

Besides, Joki contends, the property tax funding system means that students in poor regions get dramatically less than their peers in more robust parts of the state.

If successful, the lawsuit could lead to dramatic changes in the way the state pays for schools. But if recent history is any indication, it could also be just another skirmish in a battle that has bounced between the courts and the Legislature for decades.

Huntley, a former Idaho Supreme Court justice, first sued the state over poor education funding and crumbling schools in 1990 on behalf of several school districts, mostly in northern Idaho. Around the same time, attorney Merlyn Clark also sued the state on behalf of some other school districts, including Pocatello and Meridian, contending the districts needed state help to improve teacher salaries.

The court consolidated those two cases, but four years later Clark and his school districts agreed to drop their portion of the lawsuit when the Legislature changed the funding statutes to provide an allowance for staff salaries as part of a package totaling about $100 million.

But Huntley's districts persisted with their case, eventually narrowing the lawsuit to focus on the dilapidated state of school buildings, some of which were partially condemned, infested with black mold and had broken heating systems and leaking roofs.

The lawsuit bounced between the state court and the Idaho Supreme Court about three times on various issues before it finally went to trial before 4th District Judge Deborah Bail in 2001. She ultimately ruled that Idaho's school funding system, as it stood at the time, was unconstitutional because it didn't provide enough money.

She retained jurisdiction over the case so she could act if the Legislature failed to address her ruling. But that step also prevented the Idaho Supreme Court from reviewing the decision until 2005.

When the state's highest bench finally did hear the matter, the justices decided Bail was right — Idaho's system was unconstitutional. But though the Idaho Supreme Court agreed the system was broken, the justices said they wouldn't tell the Legislature how to fix it — that was for lawmakers to decide.

In the meantime, lawmakers had made several changes to the funding scheme. One of the most notable came in 2006, when Rep. Scott Bedke, R-Oakley, successfully pushed a bill that created a $25 million revolving loan fund to fix unsafe or insufficient schools and gave matching cash to districts that passed levies for new facilities.

"There have been many, many improvements to the system" since 2001, said Deputy Attorney General Mike Gilmore, one of the attorneys who has represented the state in both the older lawsuit and Joki's new filing. "There have been changes. The issue now is whether enough has changed, and that's why there's a lawsuit."

Gilmore said he didn't want to get into the specifics of the state's stance until he files Idaho's response to Joki's new claims, likely sometime in the first half of November. Still, he said, the Idaho Supreme Court was correct — the Legislature has the authority to create and modify Idaho's school funding system, and the courts do not.

But the courts can weigh in on whether the system, as it stands now, is good enough. Huntley maintains the answer to that question is a clear "no," despite the changes made over the past decade.

"None of those things fixed the things that were wrong in the system," Huntley said. "Also, those things ran out of funds and the Legislature didn't refund them."

Joki and Huntley claim in the lawsuit that because schools are still funded primarily through an unequalized property tax system, students in poor regions get dramatically less funding than students in wealthier areas.

They cite the Snake River School District, where the market value of property is about $154,000 per student and no levies have been passed. The district spends more than $5,300 per student per year, entirely from the state. In the McCall-Donnelly District, by comparison, the market value of property is about $4.6 million per student and levies produce more than $6,600 per student, giving the school more than $13,000 to spend for each pupil.

"The Idaho economy depends on our educational system," Huntley said. "And over the past 15 to 20 years, we have been destroying the foundation of our system, which is proper funding."

But even if Huntley convinces the courts of all of Joki's claims, what makes him think a win this time will result in anything different?

"I think it can be different if the people of Idaho unite and support schools," he said. "Until the people of Idaho become involved, the Legislature will not change. When the public becomes aware of the fact that we are now the Mississippi of the West and that we are making a lesser effort for our schools than any other state in the nation, we will become ashamed and alarmed."

ENDEAVOUR'S FINAL MILES TURN INTO ALL-NIGHT AFFAIR

BY ALICIA CHANG
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES • In thousands of Earth orbits, the space shuttle Endeavour traveled 123 million miles. But the last few miles of its final journey are proving hard to get through.

Endeavour's 12-mile crawl across Los Angeles to the California Science Museum hit repeated delays Saturday and Sunday, leaving expectant crowds along city streets and at the destination slowly dwindling.

Officials estimated the shuttle, originally expected to finish the trip early Saturday evening, would not arrive at the museum until early Sunday afternoon.

At times it has seemed the only thing moving was the shuttle's fast-changing ETA.

Saturday started off promising, with Endeavour 90 minutes ahead of schedule. But accumulated hurdles and hiccups caused it to run hours behind at day's end. The problems included longer than expected maintenance of the rig carrying the shuttle and physical obstacles within the shuttle's wingspan including light posts, building edges, and most of all trees.

In a scene that repeated itself many times, a small tree on the narrowest section of the move brought the procession to a stop, forcing crews to find creative ways to dip a wing under or raise it over the tree without having to cut it down.

Some 400 trees had been removed to avoid such situations, but officials said most of the trees that gave them trouble could not be cut down because they were old or treasured for other reasons, including some planted in honor of Martin Luther King Jr.

The crowd had its problems too. Despite temperatures in the mid-70s, several dozen people were treated for heat-related injuries after a long day in the sun, according to fire officials.

But it was a happy, peaceful crowd, with fire-fighters having only to respond to a sheared hydrant and a small rubbish fire, and no reports of any arrests.

And despite the late problems the mood for most of the day was festive.

At every turn of Endeavour's stop-and-go commute through urban streets, a constellation of spectators trailed along as the space shuttle ploddingly nosed past stores, schools, churches and front yards as it inched through working-class streets of southern Los Angeles.

Along the 12-mile course, thousands marveled at the engineering. Some rooted for Endeavour when it appeared it might clip a light post.

"This is great for the city as a whole. It makes us proud," said Dean Martinez, a project director for a nonprofit who began waiting before dawn to get a glimpse of Endeavour.

Unlike other high-profile events like the Academy Awards or the Rose Parade, the procession was centered in some of the area's most economically downtrodden and troubled places. The shuttle passed several gritty areas and shuttered businesses, and rolled down many streets that were aflame two decades earlier during the 1992 riots brought on by the verdict in the Rodney King case.

"Having a shuttle come through this area of high poverty, it can only be a good thing" for the community," said Damian Pipkins, a volunteer at Eso Won Books.

Fewer Qualms for Gun-rights Groups Over Romney Now

BY BRIAN BAKST
Associated Press

ST. PAUL, Minn. • Gun-rights groups perceive President Barack Obama as a threat to unfettered access to firearms. They once had qualms about Mitt Romney, too.

But times and circumstances have changed for Romney, the GOP presidential nominee now in tune with the National Rifle Association and similar organizations, whose members are motivated voters.

In the tight White House race, every bit of support helps, especially in the most closely contested states and particularly from groups that claim millions of members nationwide.

Romney's prior embrace of weapon-control proposals had put him crossways with the NRA and others. These days, Romney is on their good side by opposing renewal of a federal ban on semiautomatic weapons, additional regulations on gun shows and suggested federal gun registration requirements.

The NRA and some less prominent organizations are spending big money on mailings, radio ads, TV commercials and booths at game fairs to promote the former Massachusetts governor and portray Obama as hostile to gun rights.

Gun groups are an important part of an outdoor enthusiast network that neither side is willing to concede.

There are "Sportsmen for Romney" and "Sportsmen for Obama," all playing to the largely male hook-and-bullet crowd that is protective of recreational passions. Neither candidate is considered an avid outdoorsman, though each has made mention of fishing rods or been photographed casting a line.

Romney and his allies underscore his hands-off stance when it comes to guns, and say he would move to open more public land to hunting. They also promote the bona fides of running mate Paul Ryan, who has a permit for just about every season in Wisconsin, his home state.

Last month, Ryan reminded a gathering of sportsmen in Ohio of the hours he has logged in duck blinds, deer stands, pheasant fields and fishing boats. Then came his critique of Obama: "I wonder, I shudder as a gun owner, seeing his record when he was in the Illinois state Senate, what would he do if he never has to face the voters ever again?"

It's the type of message that resonates with voters such as Stan Glover

ASSOCIATED PRESS

This undated image shows Paul Ryan, now vice presidential running mate to Republican Mitt Romney, after a hunt. Romney is on the good side of the National Rifle Association, which once had qualms about him, because he's opposing renewal of a federal ban on semiautomatic weapons, additional regulations on gun shows and suggested federal gun registration requirements.

of Bowerston, Ohio. Glover said Romney's past stands gave him pause, but he's more nervous about Obama.

"The uncertainty of politics in Washington, as regards hunters/gun owner rights, has caused undue fear amongst folks that enjoy the shooting sports," said Glover, a manufacturing plant sales director who plans to vote for Romney.

The Obama campaign emphasizes steps by his administration to promote habitat conservation, set aside land and preserve access to land used for recreation. Supporters point to Obama's "American Great Outdoors Initiative" to coordinate conservation and natural resource efforts in all 50 states, whether it's restoring wetlands in Iowa's duck-rich Prairie Pothole Region or filtering phosphorous harmful to fish and fowl in Grand Lake St. Marys in Ohio.

For Obama, minimizing Romney's apparent advantage among voters who place a premium on outdoors issues is the name of the game.

In Iowa and other states, that task falls to people such as Dick Dearden. He's a Democratic state senator and leader of a group of pro-Obama outdoors enthusiasts working to combat negative portrayals of the incumbent among the shotgun crowd.

"The president is not a threat to people who hunt and fish. He's an asset," Dearden said. "I'm a member of the NRA and they are beginning to more and more embarrass me. I'm a Second Amendment person, but I have not seen anything this president has done for the last four years that has hurt anyone's Second Amendment rights."

Obama's campaign highlights a law he signed in his first year as president that allows people with weapons permits to bring loaded guns into national parks and wildlife refuges. The change drew rebukes from gun-control advocates.

But groups working to defeat Obama sound alarms about his support of reinstating an assault weapons ban if one made it through Congress. They also are stoking fears that the president would use a second term to appoint federal judges with restrictive views toward gun ownership. The Supreme Court has been closely divided in recent gun cases, and the balance could shift if Obama had the chance to pick any new justices.

Romney told the leader of the NRA's lobbying arm in a question-and-answer piece published last month that he would appoint "wise, experienced and restrained judges" and fill his Cabinet with "people who agree that the Second Amendment guarantees a fundamental, individual right."

Magic Valley's Athletes of the Week

11-man football: John Hohnhorst, Twin Falls. Hohnhorst was a ballhawk in the secondary, picking off two Canyon Ridge passes on Friday, one of which went for the opening score in a 27-0 win.

8-man football: Caleb Aoi, Shoshone. Aoi rushed for 276 yards and five touchdowns as the Indians kept their playoff hopes alive with a 56-6 win over Hansen on Thursday.

Boys soccer: Jorge Valera, Wendell. In a do-or-die match with Buhl on Friday, Valera scored three goals and assisted on another as the Trojans won 4-0 to reach the 3A state tournament.

Girls soccer: Sarah Walker, Jerome. Walker had a hat trick to lead Jerome past Canyon Ridge on Tuesday, lost her mother suddenly on Wednesday, but still played Thursday and assisted the Tigers' only goal in a 4-1 loss to Wood River on Thursday.

Volleyball: Annie Lauda, Buhl. Lauda had a match-high 18 kills and 14 digs to lead the Indians to a win over Filer in Saturday's opening round of the 3A District IV Tournament.

Boys cross country: Jeremy Stark, Twin Falls. Stark led the way in Wednesday's Canyon Ridge Run at Rock Creek Park, finishing the course in 17:10.

Girls cross country: Rachel Youren, Gooding. Youren had the top time this week, crossing the finish line in 20:09 to win the Senators' home pre-district meet on Tuesday.

Sportsweek for Oct. 15

If you can only attend one sporting event per day, here's what you simply cannot miss this week:

Monday

4A volleyball takes center stage as Twin Falls plays host to the District IV Tournament. All six teams from the area will be in action, beginning at 5 p.m. in both the main and auxiliary gyms.

Tuesday

Every district volleyball tournament is in action today, with the most interesting matches taking place at the 3A meet in Kimberly (Buhl-Kimberly) and the 4A semifinal at Twin Falls (winner to state). Both start at around 6:30 p.m.

Wednesday

Cross country takes its turn at districts, with two sites holding the events. The 4A District IV meet will be held in Sun Valley, while the 2A and 3A meets will be staged in Gooding.

Thursday

Sixteen soccer teams from around the state, including the boys from Gooding and Wendell and the girls from the Community School and Bliss, play at Sunway Soccer Complex for the 3A state tournament, which starts at 11 a.m.

Friday

It's not often a marquee nonconference football game shows up this late in the schedule, but Lighthouse Christian got a great replacement for Jackpot: Butte County, which comes to town for a 7 p.m. game.

Saturday

It's championship day at Sunway Soccer Complex, home to the 3A state tournament. The boys championship game gets started at noon, with the girls kicking off around 2 p.m.

Canyon Ridge's Edgar Ramirez goes to stiff-arm Twin Falls' Chris Patterson as he carries the ball during Service Bowl IV Friday night at Canyon Ridge High School in Twin Falls.

What We Learned: Week 7

This Friday marks the last week of the regular season for three of our five football divisions (3A, 2A, 1A-I), while the other two have one more week before the playoffs begin. That means this is our last regular-season look at about half our coverage area in terms of football. Some clear signals were sent last week, both by choice and by chance. Here's some of what we got out of Week 7.

1. It's still a blue town. Twin Falls left little doubt of this fact with a systematic 27-0 dismantling of Canyon Ridge, in which the Bruins' control finally began to show on the scoreboard in the fourth quarter. Twin Falls flexed its muscle defensively and adopted a heavy-run scheme offensively, essentially whipping the Riverhawks at their own game. It'll be interesting to see how Canyon Ridge bounces back from this game, because its playoff hopes are now on life support. Twin Falls, however, is 4-0 against its crosstown rival and with a trip to Burley this week, things are looking up again for the blue half of Twin Falls.

2. Hagerman-Kamiah isn't quite the foregone conclusion we expected. Kamiah is an obvious favorite to make the 1A-I championship, and Hagerman is still expected to survive its much tougher half of the bracket. But Friday's game against Butte County was a little tighter than I anticipated, which gives me a little pause - reminds me, in fact, of Grace two years ago, which Hagerman fended off in the regular season but lost to in the state semifinals that year. That said, this Hagerman team is better, more confident and more experienced - it currently holds sole possession of the state's longest active win streak at 19 - but it'll have to be on its guard.

3. Gooding just isn't the same without Cole McGinnis. The Senators' prized left tackle is the linchpin of their offense, unusual for a football team. But McGinnis is an unusual talent who's earning major Division I attention. When the stud junior went down with a knee injury early in Friday's 29-22 win over Homedale, you could tell the gut-punch that the Senators took. They fell behind 14-0 before Josh Faulkner and Josh Finley put the team on their backs. Whether McGinnis can return for the playoffs is questionable, but if he does, 70 percent of McGinnis is better than a lot of people's 100 percent. That could make the difference if Gooding wants to challenge Shelley, Fruitland or hard-charging reigning champ Snake River for top billing in the 3A hierarchy.

4. There are offensive juggernauts, and then there's Declo. Seriously, 696 yards of offense? That was my reaction when I came across the stat file in my inbox late Friday night. And against a Glenns Ferry team that, despite its poor record, has generally hung its hat on defense? Nobody's going to confuse the Pilots for Grangeville or Firth, but Glenns Ferry has typically been able to keep the score down on potent offenses over the years. What makes Declo's yard total particularly staggering is that there wasn't imbalance, as quarterback Kai Garner threw for 290 of those yards. Make no mistake, the Hornets have a tough playoff road, including a quarterfinal trip to Grangeville looming on the horizon, but I don't know whether there's a team that can take everything away from Declo.

COLLEGE FOOTBALL

Boise State's Shane Williams-Rhodes (11) runs for a gain against Fresno State during the second half of an NCAA college football game on Saturday in Boise. Boise won 20-10.

BSU Ranked No. 22 in BCS Standings

ASSOCIATED PRESS

Boise State has placed in all four college polls - AP Top 25, Harris, USA Today and the BCS standings - after a win against Fresno State on Saturday. The Broncos are ranked No. 22 in both the BCS standings and the USA Today coaches' poll. BSU fell down a spot to No. 23 in the Harris Interactive poll. The Broncos didn't budge in the AP poll, sticking to the No. 24 spot. The top five in The Associated Press college football poll has been rearranged for a second straight week, with Florida, Kansas State and Notre Dame moving up in the rankings. No. 1 Alabama and No. 2 Oregon hold the top two spots for a fourth straight week. The changes came behind them, where the Gators move up one spot to No. 3, and the fourth-ranked Wildcats and fifth-ranked Fighting Irish both jump two places. The shuffling comes after a second straight Saturday in which multiple top-five teams lost. South Carolina fell 23-21 at LSU on Saturday night and drops from No. 3 to No. 9. West Virginia slides from No. 5 to No. 17 after getting routed 49-14 at Texas Tech. The Red Raiders move into the rankings at 18th.

Seattle Seahawks quarterback Russell Wilson scrambles with the ball in the first half of an NFL football game against the New England Patriots on Sunday in Seattle.

Wilson Leads Seattle Past Patriots 24-23

ASSOCIATED PRESS

SEATTLE • Russell Wilson found Sidney Rice behind the secondary for a 46-yard touchdown with 1:18 remaining, and Seattle rallied for 14 points in the final 7:31.

The matchup between the Patriots' No. 1 ranked offense and Seattle's No. 1 defense instead turned in to a starring performance for Wilson — and a shocking rally.

Wilson hit Braylon Edwards on fourth down for a 10-yard TD to get the Seahawks' within 23-17. After a pair of holds by Seattle's defense, Wilson found Rice open on a double move. Steven Hauschka's extra point gave Seattle the lead.

Tom Brady and the Patriots (3-3) were then stopped on fourth down at their 28 when Wes Welker came up 2 yards short, and the Seahawks (4-2) were able to celebrate the unlikely comeback.

LIONS 26, EAGLES 23 PHILADELPHIA • Jason Hanson kicked a 45-yard field goal in overtime and the Detroit Lions rallied for a 10-point fourth-quarter deficit to beat the Philadelphia Eagles 26-23 on Sunday.

Held in check most of the game, Matthew Stafford led Detroit to 17 points in the fourth quarter. He threw a TD pass and ran for a score.

The Eagles (3-3) head into their bye week with two straight losses.

REDSKINS 38, VIKINGS 26 LANDOVER, Md. • Robert Griffin III ran for 138 yards and two touchdowns, including a 76-yard scamper with 2:43 to play, and Washington snapped an eight-game home losing streak.

One week after he left the game early with his first NFL concussion, Griffin also completed 17 of 22 passes for 182 yards with one touchdown and one interception.

The Redskins (3-3) feasted on a Minnesota team that had not allowed more than 23 points in a game this season. Minnesota's three-game winning streak ended. The Vikings are 4-2.

FALCONS 23, RAIDERS 20 ATLANTA • Matt Bryant kicked his second game-winning field goal in three weeks, a 55-yarder with 1 second remaining.

Overcoming Matt Ryan's three interceptions, the Falcons (6-0) extended the best start in franchise history. But it wasn't easy against the pesky Raiders (1-4).

Atlanta pulled ahead when Asante Samuel returned an interception 79 yards for a touchdown with 2:40 remaining, only to wind up tied again when Carson Palmer led Oakland down the field for a tying score. Darren McFadden powered in from the 2 with 40 seconds left.

That was just enough time for Ryan and Bryant to pull off another fourth-quarter victory. Ryan completed four passes to set up the winning kick.

BILLS 19, CARDINALS 16 OT GLENDALE, Ariz. • Jaiirus Byrd's second interception of the game set up Rian Lindell's 25-yard field goal 3:50 into overtime.

The loss ended Arizona's eight-game home winning streak.

Byrd picked off a pass from John Skelton, who had replaced the injured Kevin Kolb, and returned it 29 yards to the Arizona 6 to set up the winning kick.

Arizona's Jay Feely kicked a franchise-record 61-yard field goal with 1:09 left in regulation to tie it 16-16, but his 38-yard attempt to win it as the fourth quarter ended careered off the left upright. Feely says someone tipped the attempt.

The Cardinals (4-2) lost their second in a row after a 4-0 start. The Bills (3-3) won after allowing 1,201 yards and 97 points in their previous two games.

GIANTS 26, 49ERS 3 SAN FRANCISCO • Antrel Rolle intercepted two passes by Alex Smith, Prince Amukamara picked off another for New York in a rematch of last season's NFC championship game.

After outscoring the Bills and Jets by a combined 79-3 the last two weeks, the 49ers (4-2) met their match again with Eli Manning and New York's top team. No overtime needed this time, and not much of Manning either.

Manning threw for 193 yards and one touchdown, Ahmad Bradshaw ran for 116 yards and a score and the Giants (4-2) rode a dominant defense and four field goals by Lawrence Tynes to hand outspoken 49ers coach Jim Harbaugh the most lopsided loss of his tenure.

RAVENS 31, COWBOYS 29 BALTIMORE • Jacoby Jones tied an NFL record with a 108-yard kickoff return and Baltimore won its 14th straight regular-season home game

Dallas ran for 227 yards, most ever against the Ravens, and totaled 481 yards offense. But the Cowboys (2-3) missed a 2-point conversion after closing to two points with 32 seconds left.

Dallas recovered the onside kick, and Dan Bailey was wide left on a 51-yard field goal try with 6 seconds left.

Ray Rice scored two touchdowns and Joe Flacco threw for a score to help the Ravens

(5-1) secure their fourth consecutive victory and enhance their grip on first place in the AFC North. Baltimore's home winning streak is the longest current run in the NFL.

BUCCANEERS 38, CHIEFS 10 TAMPA, Fla. • Josh Freeman threw for 328 yards and three touchdowns and Ronde Barber scored on a 78-yard interception return.

Freeman teamed with Mike Williams on a 62-yard scoring play in the first quarter and threw TD passes of 19 and 17 yards to Vincent Jackson in the second half as the Bucs (2-3) stopped a three-game losing streak.

The Bucs intercepted Brady Quinn — starting for Matt Cassel (concussion) — twice in the Kansas City quarterback's first start in nearly three years. They also limited NFL rushing leader Jamaal Charles to 40 yards on 12 carries.

BROWNS 34, BENGALS 24 CLEVELAND • Rookie Brandon Weeden threw two touchdown passes and Cleveland snapped an 11-game losing streak that dated to last season.

Cleveland had not won since Nov. 20, matching a franchise record for consecutive losses. But for the first time this season everything fell into place for the Browns (1-5).

Montario Hardesty, filling in for injured rookie Trent Richardson, scored on a 1-yard plunge and cornerback Sheldon Brown intercepted Andy Dalton and returned it 19 yards for a touchdown in the fourth quarter as the Browns outscored the Bengals (3-3) in the second half 27-10.

JETS 35, COLTS 9 EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. • Shonn Greene ran for a career-high 161 yards and three touchdowns, Mark Sanchez was efficient and Tim Tebow made a few big plays.

Even the Jets' maligned defense was able to shut down Andrew Luck and the Colts' offense as New York snapped a two-game losing streak that had many wondering if the season was about to spiral out of control.

For a week, at least, Sanchez was in total control and the Jets (3-3) had their best overall performance — save for a handful of personal foul penalties — since an opening-week rout of Buffalo.

DOLPHINS 17, RAMS 14 MIAMI • Ryan Tannehill threw two touchdown passes and Miami withstood a late rally.

The Rams faced a fourth- and -8 at the Miami 48-yard line with 30 seconds left, and rather than go for a first down,

Explanation Key
The BCS Average is calculated by averaging the percent totals of the Harris Interactive, USA Today Coaches and Computer polls. Team percentages are derived by dividing a team's actual voting points by a maximum 2875 possible points in the Harris
Interactive Poll and 1475 possible points in the USA
Today Coaches Poll.
Six computer rankings are used to determine the overall computer component. The highest and lowest ranking for each team is dropped, and the remaining four are added and divided to produce a Computer Rankings Percentage. The six computer ranking providers are Anderson & Hester, Richard Billingsley, Colley Matrix, Kenneth Massey, Jeff Sagarin, and Peter
Wolfe. Each computer ranking accounts for schedule strength in its formula.

New York Yankees shortstop Derek Jeter injures himself fielding a ball in the 12th inning of Game 1 of the American League championship series against the Detroit Tigers early Sunday in New York.

October Not the Same without Yanks' Missing Man

ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK • A player stood at shortstop at Yankee Stadium, yet the shortstop was missing.

For 16 years and 158 consecutive games, Derek Jeter had been in the New York Yankees' postseason lineup, the Lou Gehrig and Cal Ripken of October.

"When you think of postseason, you think of Derek Jeter," Detroit manager Jim Leyland said.

And now Jeter was absent for Game 2 of the AL championship series against the Tigers on Sunday, off undergoing tests after his left ankle cracked during another stressful moment in another sapping game. Taking the captain's place was Jayson Nix.

Jeter's body gave out Saturday on one of those autumn nights that has defined him, transformed him from a strong-willed student to revered statesman.

Trailing the Tigers one game to none, the Yankees faced the troublesome task of regrouping without their longtime leader.

First Mariano Rivera, whose knee tore during batting practice in May. Then Jeter.

Not since Game 6 of the 1981 World Series had the Yankees played in the postseason without both Jeter and Rivera

"We had to move on from a lot of different things this year," manager Joe Girardi said. "We've lost the greatest closer of all-time, where people left us for dead. People left us for dead in August and September, said we were panicking. And we laughed at it, and we said no, we're going to be fine. We won more games in the American League than anyone."

NEW YORK • Anibal Sanchez and the Detroit Tigers made the plays, benefited from an admitted missed call by an umpire and delivered during their few good opportunities at the plate.

The reward: a commanding 2-0 lead in the AL championship series, and a trip home with their ace ready to start.

Sanchez shut down a Yankees lineup minus injured Derek Jeter, and Detroit won without any drama this time, beating New York 3-0 Sunday.

Yankees starter Hiroki Kuroda pitched perfect ball into the sixth inning. But the slumping New York hitters looked lost a day after their captain broke his ankle in the 12th inning of a 6-4 loss.

Making his second postseason start, Sanchez threw three-hit ball deep into the game to make Tigers manager Jim Leyland's job much easier. A day after closer Jose Valverde gave up four runs in the ninth, Leyland said the righty wouldn't close Game 2.

"I thought we hung in there and took advantage of a couple of things," Leyland said. "And those are some of the things you need in postseason play. You never know how it's going to play out."

The Tigers scored twice in the eighth after second base umpire Jeff Nelson missed a call on a two-out tag at second base. Yankees manager Joe Girardi argued, and was ejected on his 48th birthday.

"The hand did not get in Detroit Tigers' Omar Infante dives back into second as New York Yankees' Robinson Cano reaches to tag him in the eighth inning of Game 2 of the American League championship series Sunday in New York. Infante was called safe on the play by umpire Jeff Nelson.

before the tag," Nelson said after seeing a replay. "The call was incorrect."

Game 3 in the best-of-seven series is Tuesday night in Detroit, with reigning AL MVP Justin Verlander starting for the Tigers against Phil Hughes. Verlander went 2-0 in the division series versus Oakland, including a four-hit shutout with 11 strikeouts in the decisive Game 5.

The Tigers led 1-0 in the eighth and had Omar Infante on first with two outs. Austin Jackson singled and when Infante took a wide turn at second, right fielder Nick Swisher threw behind him.

Robinson Cano made a swipe tag as Infante made a head-first dive back to second. Cano missed Infante's arm but brushed his body, replays clearly showed. But Nelson called Infante safe.

Cano and Girardi pleaded the call to no avail. Boone Logan replaced Kuroda and gave up an RBI single to pinch hitter Avisail Garcia to make it 2-0.

"It's frustrating. I don't have a problem with Jeff's effort, I don't, because he hustled to get to the play. But in this day and age when we have instant replay available to us, it's got to change," Girardi said.

CARDINALS 6, GIANTS 4

SAN FRANCISCO • The San Francisco Giants are showing how little home-field advantage matters in the baseball playoffs.

Madison Bumgarner allowed two homers and got knocked out early for the second time this postseason and the Giants once again got off to a bad start to a series at home, losing Game 1 of the NL championship series 6-4 to the St. Louis Cardinals on Sunday night.

The Giants have lost all three home games so far this postseason, with Bumgarner taking the defeat in two of them. They managed to overcome that in the first round against Cincinnati by becoming the first team ever to win the final three games of a best-of-five series on the road.

But if San Francisco is to make it back to the World Series for a second time in three years, the team must win at AT&T Park at least once this series against the wild-card Cardinals.

Game 2 will be Monday night with San Francisco's Ryan Vogelsong taking on St. Louis' Chris Carpenter.

Today is Monday, Oct. 15, the 289th day of 2012. There are 77 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight:

On Oct. 15, 1917, Dutch dancer Mata Hari, convicted of spying for the Germans, was executed by a French firing squad outside Paris.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:

In 1858, the seventh and final debate between senatorial candidates Abraham Lincoln and Stephen Douglas took place in Alton, Ill.

In 1860, 11-year-old Grace Bedell of Westfield, N.Y., wrote a letter to presidential candidate Abraham Lincoln, suggesting he could improve his appearance by growing a beard.

In 1928, the German dirigible Graf Zeppelin landed in Lakehurst, N.J., completing its first commercial flight across the Atlantic.

In 1937, the Ernest Hemingway novel "To Have and Have Not" was first published by Charles Scribner's Sons.

In 1945, the former premier of Vichy France, Pierre Laval, was executed for treason.

In 1946, Nazi war criminal Hermann Goering fatally poisoned himself hours before he was to have been executed.

In 1951, the classic sitcom "I Love Lucy" premiered on CBS with the episode "The Girls Want to Go to the Nightclub."

In 1964, it was announced that Soviet leader Nikita S. Khrushchev had been removed from office.

In 1969, peace demonstrators staged activities across the country as part of a "moratorium" against the Vietnam War.

In 1976, in the first debate of its kind between presidential nominees, Democrat Walter F. Mondale and Republican Bob Dole faced off in Houston.

In 1991, despite sexual harassment allegations by Anita Hill, the Senate narrowly confirmed the nomination of Clarence Thomas to the Supreme Court, 52-48.

In 1997, British Royal Air Force pilot Andy Green twice drove a jet-powered car in the Nevada desert faster than the speed of sound, officially shattering the world's land-speed record. NASA's plutonium-powered Cassini spacecraft rocketed flawlessly toward Saturn.

Ten years ago: ImClone Systems founder Sam Waksal pleaded guilty in New York to charges stemming from the biotech company's insider trading scandal. (He was later sentenced to more than seven years in prison.) Iraqis turned out for a national referendum on whether Saddam Hussein should remain their president for another seven years; Saddam won with a reported 100 percent of the votes cast. Five Japanese kidnapping victims who'd been abducted in their youth by North Korean spies finally returned home, tearfully hugging their aging parents for the first time in nearly a quarter century.

Five years ago: Americans Leonid Hurwicz, Eric S. Maskin and Roger B. Myerson won the Nobel economics prize. The Colorado Rockies beat the Arizona Diamondbacks 6-4 in Game 4 to sweep the NL championship series and advance to the World Series for the first time in franchise history.

One year ago: Italian riot police fired tear gas and water cannons in Rome as violent protesters hijacked a peaceful demonstration against corporate greed, smashing bank windows, torching cars and hurling bottles. Iran's Foreign Ministry dismissed U.S. accusations that Tehran was involved in a plot to assassinate the Saudi ambassador in Washington, saying the claims had no "legal logic." The Texas Rangers finished off the Detroit Tigers to become the American League's first repeat champion in a decade with a 15-5 win in Game 6 of the ALCS. Former Hollywood superagent Sue Mengers, 81, died in Beverly Hills, Calif.

DEAR ABBY: I work in a professional office where nearly all my co-workers are married and live rather uneventful lifestyles. I was divorced a few years ago and have not remarried.

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

I have dated a lot of women, and it has become an issue with my co-workers. They insist on hearing about the dates I go on and ask for the details of what took place, and I usually oblige them.

Lately, there has been more and more gossip about my so-called “wild lifestyle,” and I have become the talk of the office. Some co-workers have called me names like “skank” because I refuse to settle down with one girl. I’m looking for the right one, and it may take many wrong ones to get there.

I think my co-workers are jealous. I’m living my life to the fullest and having fun and because they can’t do what I do, they resort to gossip and name-calling. It really frustrates me. How can I make this stop without causing unnecessary tensions in my workplace?

— MAN IN MOTION

IN INDIANA

DEAR MAN IN MOTION: You are not a “skank.” You are a bachelor. I hope you realize that you started this by regaling your co-workers with the intimate details of your “adventures.” None of it was appropriate workplace conversation. If you want this to stop, you’ll have to draw an iron curtain between your work life and your social life. Start today.

DEAR ABBY: I am engaged and have been for a while. From the beginning I knew my fiancé and I would have to pay for our own wedding. During a recent discussion with my father (who is divorced from my mother), he offered to chip in a reasonable amount and asked me to see if my mother would match it. My mother thought it was a great idea and agreed. A week or so later she wrote me a check for the amount and I deposited it into my savings account.

At the time, I had a high-paying job and a “round-about” wedding date set. I have since left my job and the wedding has been postponed indefinitely. My mother has now requested that I return the money because she’s behind on bills.

Frankly, I think it is inappropriate for her to ask me to return “her” money when it was a gift that I did not request at the time. Am I wrong, or should she leave the money be?

— ENGAGED

IN VIRGINIA

DEAR ENGAGED: When your mother gave you the money toward your wedding, BOTH of your financial situations were different than they are today. This isn’t a question of etiquette. Because you won’t be needing it in the near future, return the money to your mother so she can pay her bills. It’s not as if she’ll be using it for a Caribbean cruise. She needs the money!

DEAR ABBY: My daughter and her husband have a wonderful little boy, “Matthew,” who is 3. They say they don’t plan on having any more children. I am upset that they won’t be giving my grandson a sibling. They claim the reason is to be earth-friendly, but I think it is selfish. I know my urging won’t change the situation, but it weighs heavily on my mind and makes me sad for Matthew.

My daughter has a brother she is close to. Her husband has two siblings. I think the main reason they don’t want any more children is my son-in-law is 17 years older than my daughter. Is there any good way for me to tell her how upset this makes me?

— DISAPPOINTED

IN OREGON

DEAR DISAPPOINTED: No, there isn’t. There may be reasons that go beyond your son-in-law’s age for their decision to limit the size of their family to one child. And they are none of your business.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

“It is commonly said, and more particularly by Lord Shaftesbury, that ridicule is the best test of truth.”

— Lord Chesterfield

While a fair percentage of the North-South field reached four spades on this deal from a major pairs game, with mixed success, two spades was a sensible part-score.

The club six was often the lead from West, and declarer usually put up dummy’s king to muddy the waters. When East took the ace, he had the problem of whether to play for a ruff or to cash the hearts. It looked reasonable to return a club, and now declarer was in with a shout to make his game.

However, when he takes the club jack, he has to decide what to do next. Obviously, he has two potential winners in dummy for his heart losers. And, indeed, if diamonds are 3-3, he might emerge with 11 tricks, but if he plays for the diamond break, he might finish with only nine winners. For example, if he tests diamonds after cashing the top spades and the suit breaks 4-2, he might not get the club discard in time.

The best play is to enlist the opposition’s help by leading the diamond queen before cashing the spade ace-king. Both defenders can be expected to give honest count, perhaps each assuming their partner has the diamond ace. Now when the suit seems to be 3-3, declarer can cash the top spades, unblock the diamonds, and follow up with the club queen. When the same hand is long in both black suits, declarer can next play the 13th diamond and get both his hearts away for an additional, and valuable, over-trick.

ANSWER: This is a simple choice between the majors. Is a spade lead more likely to give declarer something he cannot do for himself, given that partner rates to be 5-5 or 5-4 in the majors (and unsuitable for a reopening double)? I lean toward a heart if only because this might go some way to insuring a ruff or overruff for our side.

Times-News Classifieds 208-733-0931 ext. 2

IF OCTOBER 15 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: You are inspired to reach higher during the next six to eight weeks. Existing relationships seem just a little bit sweeter, so take a vacation or plan a weekend away to an exciting location. Your social life could get a shot in the arm as you meet new contacts though clubs, community events or even business meetings. You might not meet a soul mate but you could meet a new best friend. Make major financial and career decisions in January when your street smarts are in full flower. Plan ahead so that you put your most important projects into motion next May when Lady Luck smiles on almost everything you do.

HOROSCOPE
Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Any job worth doing is worth doing well. Don't cut corners to get a project finished fast. Take the time to make sure you've done the best you can do. Do your homework before entering into agreements.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Rely on your own good judgment. You may be receiving conflicting information from various sources, so you'll need to do a bit of detective work to get to the facts. Discern between solid facts and spin.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Commit to be noncommittal. You may feel pressure to make a choice right away, but conditions may be too unsettled to provide a clear view of the matter. Let things settle down for a day or two.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): What goes up must come down. It could be tough going to get a grip on a situation if conditions are constantly changing. Stay objective and let matters unfold before making any decisions.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Take things in moderation. Find the happy balance to efficiency by not overdoing it or doing too little. Patience and careful thought will be all it takes to get the job done. Avoid projects with a time limit.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): If you can't make up your mind, then don't. Unless you are a head of state, there's no decision facing you today that can't wait until tomorrow. Those who hesitate will get a better understanding of all sides.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Face down your fears. You may drag your feet when asked to perform an unpleasant task, but the dread you feel today is nothing compared to the sense of relief you'll have once it's all behind you.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Only an octopus can handle eight things at once. Delegate authority to ease your workload and to make sure the job gets done on time. Prioritize what is most important and don't worry about trivial details.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Don't try to swim upstream. You may want to buck conformity, but you'll find life much easier if you just go along with everyone else for the time being. Treat yourself to an inexpensive treasure.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Don't fall for the hype. Avoid getting drawn into what is little more than shameless promotion when you have more tangible and realistic goals to achieve. Take advice from others with a grain of salt.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Good friends are always there when you need them. Someone close to you may need your encouragement to lift them up out of the dumps. Offer as much help as you can as long as it doesn't cost anything.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): The odds are not in your favor. Taking a gamble with finances now is a sure way to lose your shirt. Play it safe and leave matters as they are. Hold off on raising a romance to a higher level or starting a new project.
