Jail, Personal Conduct Feature in Sheriff's Race

BY ALISON GENE SMITH
alismith@magicvalley.com

JEROME • Two men dedicated to Jerome County are vying to be its residents' sheriff.

Doug McFall, the Republican incumbent, said he deserves another four years while Ken Rushing, a former Jerome police officer, said a change is needed in the sheriff's office.

The county sheriff's position is a four-year elected term with an annual salary of $52,584.

Rushing said he voted for McFall four years ago. But since then, he said, McFall has changed and is no longer good for Jerome County.

During his campaign, Rushing is raising allegations that McFall has been under the influence of alcohol while on the job, based upon incidents he claims to have personally witnessed.

Rushing resigned from the Jerome Police Department in May following an investigation into him campaigning and making the allegations about McFall while on duty — actions that would violate city policy.

Rushing said he resigned prior to a final decision on the investigation because there was no way to stay at the department without continuing to violate the policy.

McFall calls the allegations from Rushing about him drinking on the job "bogus" and "disheartening," and said he rarely drinks at all.

Rushing also said McFall uses a county-owned vehicle when not

Idaho Schools Go HP

The tech giant received an eight-year, $180 million contract Tuesday to provide laptops to public high schools.

BY JULIE WOOTTON
jwootton@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • State officials have awarded Hewlett-Packard Co. an eight-year, $180 million contract to provide laptop computers to high schools.

Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter and public schools chief Tom Luna announced the partnership Tuesday from HP's Boise campus.

"With this device, broadband Internet in every high school and the expansion of a wireless learning environment to every classroom, Idaho is finally on a path to providing equal access to the best educational opportunities to every student, no matter where a child lives in our great state," Luna wrote in a statement.

Under Luna's Students Come First education reforms, every high school teacher and student will receive a laptop — a HP ProBook Notebook 4440s.

Please see SCHOOLS, A5

The Contract Details

According to the Idaho State Department of Education, the contract with HP includes:

- Extra laptops (3 percent of contract amount) in case a student loses or damages a device and it needs to be repaired.
- Batteries that last all school day — online, the basic ProBook 4440s is rated at up to 7 hours battery life.
- Wireless Internet access for every Idaho high school by December 2013.
- HP — through collaboration with the Idaho Digital Learning Academy — will provide training for high school employees.
- Microsoft Office Professional software on each laptop computer.
- Content filtering and anti-virus software.
- 7 GB of cloud storage and collaboration space per device.
- Four-year warranty on each laptop.

A Dream No Longer Deferred

Undocumented individuals in Magic Valley apply for Deferred Action.

BY MELISSA DAVLIN

Jerome Adds 'Event Center' to Zoning Ordinance

TIMES-NEWS

JEROME • Jerome County residents wanting to host large-scale events on their property will now have to apply for a special use permit.

After a public hearing Tuesday, commissioners voted to amend a Jerome Planning and Zoning ordinance to include regulations for "event center" use.

Commissioner Charlie Howell said the change came about after a

What is Deferred Action?

Deferred Action doesn't provide a path to citizenship nor give students legal immigration status. Instead, it labels qualifying individuals as low priority cases, preventing them from being deported for a period of two years. That period is subject to renewal. During that time, Deferred Action students may receive employment authorization.

Who is eligible?

Applicants must:
Be younger than 31 years old as of June 15, 2012;
Be at least 15 years or older, unless currently in removal proceedings;
Have come to the United States when 16 years old or younger;

Have lived in the United States continuously for at least five years;
Have graduated high school, be currently enrolled in school, or earned a GED, or have been honorably discharged from the Coast Guard or Armed Forces of the United States;
Not have a significant criminal record.

How do I apply?

Attorney Jeremy Pittard recommends contacting an immigration attorney who, like Pittard, is a member of the American Immigration Lawyers Association. A lawyer can provide you with advice specific to your case, he said. You can also find information at uscis.gov

Stocks Hammered by Weak Earnings Reports

NEW YORK (AP) • Stocks opened sharply lower Tuesday, driving major indexes to their lowest point since early September, after big-name companies reported weak quarterly earnings and lowered their expectations for the rest of the year.

The Dow Jones industrial average sank 245 points, or 1.8 percent, to 13,102.53 in the first hour of trading. The Standard & Poor's 500 index fell 24 points to 1,409. The Nasdaq composite index was off 39 points at 2,977.

Perrine Bridge Speed Limit Going Back to 50 mph

TIMES-NEWS

TWIN FALLS • If you have a lead foot when you drive, getting out of Twin Falls may get a little easier.

Traffic officials are increasing the speed limit to 50 mph on U.S. 93 across the Perrine Bridge through the signal at Golf Course Road, according to a news release from the Idaho Transportation Department.

The speed limit was reduced to 45 mph in late 2011 when a traffic signal was installed at Golf Course Road. However, an engineering study affirmed that higher speeds are safe for the highway segment.

ITD is also reducing the length of the 45 mph speed zone north of the Interstate 84 junction. The reduced speed zone will now end near the Flying J.

"Generally, we see a shift in speed limits to slow traffic for reasons of safety or due to increasing roadway access," said Bruce Christensen, ITD district traffic engineer. "This is one of those cases where safe operation by drivers and the speed of traffic has led to a minor increase of the speed limit."

The new speed limits will go into effect when the new signs are installed.

From the Notebook

Ivan Sarabia, Internet Star

Gooding sophomore Ivan Sarabia knew he'd scored a great goal, but he had no idea it would get this kind of attention.

"It was so crazy, when everyone told me it had gotten onto YouTube and everything," Sarabia said of his bicycle kick goal last Thursday against Weiser in the quarterfinals of the 3A boys soccer state tournament.

It didn't just stop with thousands of views on YouTube. Sarabia's goal made its way through Twitter to ESPN, which tweeted the video and then aired it as part of SportsCenter's top plays of the evening.

Sarabia's strike checked in at No. 9 during the first edition of SportsCenter, immediately after Thursday's Oregon-Arizona State college football game, then was No. 10 in the next hour.

Twitter reacted too, impressed that a soccer player from little ol' Idaho could do something that impressive. As I liked to tell people, if a world soccer superstar had scored that goal, Twitter would have gone into "Fail Whale" mode.

A bicycle kick isn't easy. The pass to you has to be perfectly high, and you still need enough coordination to vault yourself into the air with one leg and then swing that same leg overhead and make solid contact with the ball, while you land on your back or side. "I mess around in practice all the time, trying those," he said. "That was the first one I scored in a game before."

If he never scores another bicicleta in his life, becoming an Internet sensation, however brief, is well worth the tradeoff.

Who Are Our Next Hunters?

At the Idaho Department of Fish and Game's youth pheasant-hunting clinic last weekend, only three of the 17 teen and preteen hunters were girls.

But veterinarian Paul Biagiotti was heartened to see those three.

"The sport will survive if we can recruit more females," Biagiotti told me, as we watched pairs of young hunters trailing bird dogs for a chance to shoot at live pheasants. Biagiotti was there handling the dogs with other members of the High Desert Pointing Dog Club.

Farmer Tom Billington, too, is interested in nurturing a new generation of hunters. Billington and his son, Matthew, hosted the Fish and Game pheasant clinic on their private land. And they've enrolled those acres in a Fish and Game program that reimburses landowners for allowing access to youth hunters.

"We want our kids to carry on the tradition, what these old gray-hairs are doing," Billington said.

Inspired by a Bike Tour

While reporting for the "Share The Road" story on what it would take to make south Idaho cities more cycle-friendly (Oct. 21), I dug out my hand-me-down mountain bike and went on a tour of Twin Falls with Cycle Therapy owners Bob and Robin Seastrom and Twin Falls City Council members Suzanne Hawkins and Rebecca Mills-Sojka.

It helped give us a cyclist's view of the city. And when I struggled with the few uphill areas of the ride (don't laugh too hard — I was recovering from being sick), Bob Seastrom gave me a push from his own bike.

Despite not feeling 100 percent that night, I had enough fun that I'm considering buying a road bike. Thanks, Seastroms, for the tour. And if you missed the article on Sunday, check it

ELECTION 2012

Magistrates on Ballots in 2 Counties

BY ALISON GENE SMITH

alismith@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • Two magistrate judges are up for a vote this election.

In Twin Falls County, Magistrate Judge Roger Harris is up for a retention vote.

In Jerome County, Judge Thomas Borresen is on the ballot.

Magistrate judge positions are nonpartisan. On each ballot, voters must answer "yes" or "no" whether the judge should be retained in office.

Magistrate judges must be reelected every four years. A simple majority vote is required for a magistrate judge to retain their position.

Magistrate judges hear infractions, misdemeanors, felony preliminary hearings, probation hearings, guardianships, conservatorships, divorces, adoptions termination of parental rights, habeas corpus cases, juvenile cases and civil cases where the amount of disputed money does not exceed $10,000.

Judge Charged with DUI to Retire in January

CALDWELL (AP) • A state judge who is facing a drunken driving charge says she will retire effective Jan. 4.

The Idaho Press-Tribune reports 3rd District Judge Renae Hoff has announced her retirement. Seven candidates have submitted applications for the vacant position. Applications are being taken until Nov. 9 by the Idaho Judicial Council.

Hoff was arrested and charged with misdemeanor DUI on Aug. 25. She was removed from presiding over criminal cases until her DUI charge is resolved. She pleaded not guilty and her trial is set for Dec. 4.

The judicial council is scheduled to meet at the Canyon County Courthouse Dec. 6 to interview the candidates.

Pets Displaced after House Fire

BY KIMBERLEE KRUESI

TWIN FALLS • A Twin Falls couple, six parrots, five cats and a dog evacuated their home after a house fire ignited in their attic early Tuesday morning.

Derek Rider said he woke up to the smell of plastic burning at around 6:30 a.m. He got up to find the source of the smell and quickly saw that the paint on the walls of the kitchen was bubbling.

"It looked like it was something out of a movie," he said. "It was scary."

Derek and his wife, Rose, quickly rushed to move their 12 pets to a safer environment. Neighbors took in the parrots and dog while the cats remained in a room away from the flames, he said.

Fire crews responded to the incident at approximately 6:30 a.m. and left around 10 a.m., said Ron Aguirre, battalion chief for the Twin Falls Fire Department. The cause of the fire is still being investigated.

Damage to the home — which the couple rent — is estimated at roughly $15,000, Aguirre said.

Derek and Rose are now staying at Derek's parents' house. While the two haven't received any financial assistance, they are hoping to get some soon, he said.

"Our new bed that we just bought is now ruined," he said. "I just keep hoping this is a bad dream that I'll wake up from. I can't believe this happened."

Man Accused of Lewd Conduct

BY ALISON GENE SMITH
alismith@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • A 29-year-old man has been accused of having a sexual relationship with a 15-year-old girl.

Ty David McMillan was arraigned in Twin Falls County 5th District Court on Monday on three charges of lewd conduct with a minor under 16.

He was held at the Twin Falls County Jail on a $50,000 bond.

On Aug. 28, Twin Falls County sheriff's deputies contacted Twin Falls police about a possible lewd and lascivious conduct incident that happened at the Weston Inn at 952 Blue Lakes Blvd. N., a police report states.

The deputies had a report of a 15-year-old girl who left home Aug. 23 and was later found at her grandmother's home in Hebert City, Utah, the report states.

According to the report, the girl said she was having a sexual relationship with McMillan.

In another interview, the report states the girl said she had a sexual relationship with McMillan when she lived in Texas. He then followed her back to Idaho to be closer to her, according to the report.

The report states the girl said she would sneak out of her home and have sex with McMillan at the hotel.

In August, the two decided to go to Utah together and stayed in a friend's camper.

The report states police attempted to reach McMillan several times before he was arrested over the weekend.

A preliminary hearing is scheduled for Nov. 2.

OUR VIEW

Remington the Best Choice to Replace Jaquet

Neither Republican candidate Steve Miller of Fairfield nor Democrat John Remington of Ketchum considered running for the District 26 House seat when it was held by Wendy Jaquet, D-Ketchum. When Jaquet announced that she would not seek re-election that changed for both of them. Miller is a farmer and rancher, a former Camas County commissioner, and an articulate spokesperson for Republican ideals and viewpoints. In an interview with the Times-News editorial board, Miller said he “applauds what Texas and Florida have done in saying ‘no’ to Obamacare” and went on to say that states needed to get more involved in things that have become federal issues. Yet he subscribes to the Republican “let’s wait it out and hope” approach to setting up a state health exchange — risking the implementation of a federal plan. Miller is a former President of the Idaho Association of Soil Conservation Districts. Of his time in that capacity, Miller said, “I got sweeping legislation passed and got to know a lot of folks” in the legislature. That “hands on” experience would be valuable in a house member.

Miller supports “Students Come First” legislation although he would like to see some tweaks in the Pay for Performance measure. He would support some sort of “worker program” that would allow immigrants to legally work in the state — “especially the dairy industry” — and considers it a priority to reduce the state’s business tax to better compete with “Wyoming, Nevada and everyone who has oil, gas or gambling revenue.” When asked what it would be like to represent the Democratic majority in Blaine County, Miller pragmatically answered, “I know what it’s like to represent people that I disagree with.”

Despite Miller’s experience and proven ability to get things done, we believe that John Remington is the best choice to represent residents of the 26th District. Remington is a former athletic commissioner at the Community School in Ketchum and taught current issues classes for more than 15 years. In order to better expose his students to the reality of current events, he said, “I regularly brought in 12-15 civic leaders every year.” And yet Remington admitted “it’s a completely different scenario” teaching about the legislature and getting to know how things work.

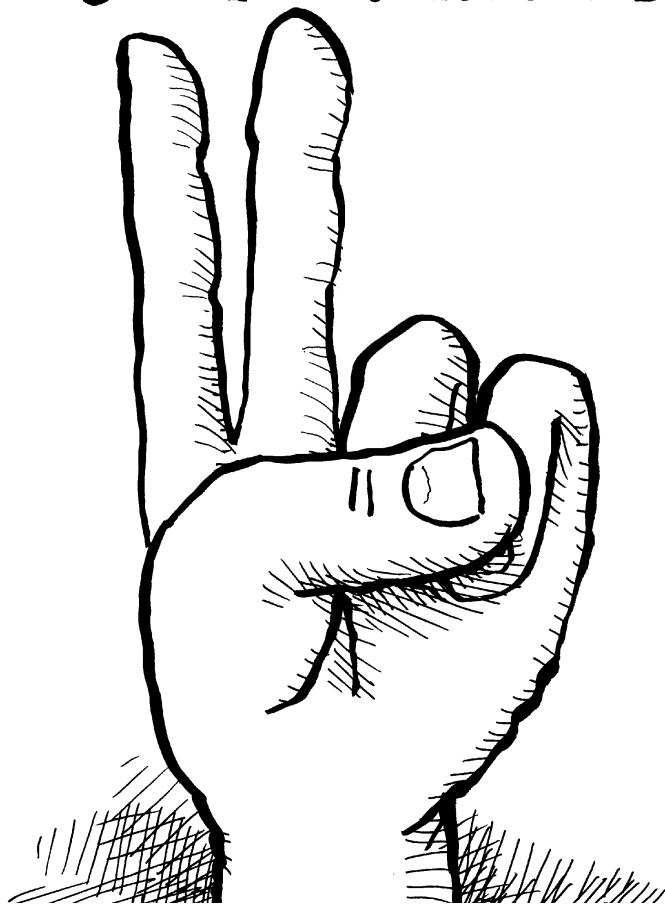

Remington said the current legislature’s refusal to set up a state health exchange was the wrong way to go about things and said “access to affordable health care is a right.” He said that the most frequent concern he’s heard from area voters is that they “resent the closed primary.”

Remington lists education among his top priorities and would like to see more support for public K-12 schools and for higher education. He presented the most compelling arguments we’ve heard in opposition to Propositions 1, 2 and 3.

In regards to Proposition 1, Remington said, “Teachers are the best people to negotiate their own contracts” and admitted that he was “fundamentally opposed to ‘at-will’ contracts.” In explaining his opposition to Proposition 2, Remington said that “merit pay has no part in educational philosophy” and that he would work to restore teachers to a position of respect in the state. “Many cultures throughout the world respect teachers,” Remington said, clearly indicating his belief that the United States is not among them. His opposition to Proposition 3 (technology; laptops, online classes) is based upon what he feels would be far better uses of state education funding. He mentioned the Gooding and Bliss school districts being forced to go to four-day-a-week school weeks and indicated that increased funding for technology should wait until students are back in the classroom five days a week. Well said.

In a race in which both candidates are credible and able to articulately portray the ideologies of the political parties they represent, we believe John Remington will best represent District 26 voters.

Time for Idaho to Build Its Own Insurance Exchange

As much as Idaho’s business community reaches for national and international markets, we still rely most on the perspectives and input of our local business partners. It’s a significant part of Idaho’s economic success. Business leaders here know that the solutions we identify here in Idaho will suit our particular state best.

Now, we have an opportunity to apply this philosophy to a critical part of our economic well-being: health care and, more specifically, health insurance.

The federal government’s health care reform act now requires Idaho to make an important decision about how we manage our health insurance market. The federal Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act requires Idaho and other states to create a health insurance exchange. A health insurance exchange is essentially an online marketplace, where health insurance options are displayed in a fashion that makes it easy for consumers to contrast, compare and purchase health insurance coverage. The health insurance exchange will effectively create a competitive marketplace for insurance policies.

But the federal act requires Idaho to either build its own exchange, or the federal government will do it for us. The law prompts a decision from Idaho’s leaders, and I’m writing in support of an Idaho-based health insurance exchange that will serve Idaho businesses and consumers best. I am confident that Idaho is better suited to manage this important job for its citizens.

I’m grateful that Gov. C.L. “Butch” Otter has directed the Idaho Health Insurance Exchange Work Group to study this question. The group has received some very compelling testimony. The group recently heard from a national health care policy expert, Jack Rovner of The Health Law Consultancy, who said that Idaho could create a free market solution to address the situation. There’s a lot to like about this model. A nonprofit corporation could apply the same free-market principles that we pursue in our company every day, looking for the best solutions at the least amount of cost. Best of all, this model would require no Idaho taxpayer dollars to establish or run the exchange.

The other appealing part of this solution is the way it would allow for more local control, engaging the good perspective of Idaho business leaders we now trust for input on these matters. Business costs would be reduced, and we get to avoid the looming threat of a new bureaucracy that the federal government would impose upon our state. We don’t have much time. The federal government’s deadline is just over the horizon. By November 16, the state needs to declare its intent to create its own health insurance exchange. If we do nothing, the federal government will create one for us, using a one-size-fits-all model that is unlikely to benefit Idaho businesses and consumers. That’s an outcome worth avoiding.

One of the best parts about doing business in Idaho is the state has kept business costs low. This gives us an edge over many competitors in other areas, and it’s an edge worth maintaining. Idaho has consistently sought solutions that will benefit our state first. I am writing today to encourage our leaders to use these same principles to guide their decision about a state health insurance exchange. Time is of the essence; Gov. Otter’s work group will be making its decision Friday, Oct. 26.

That’s why I’m joining many others across Idaho, including the Idaho Health Exchange Alliance, a coalition of leaders in the health care industry and other businesses across this state, including ours, in encouraging Idaho to build its own health insurance exchange.

For more information about the Idaho Health Exchange Alliance and a state-based insurance exchange, visit www.keepinginidaho.com.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Obama Deserves Second Term to Finish What he Started

We are roughly 15 days from electing the next president. Remember that when the current president took office, the country was in a mess and, shortly thereafter, the opposing party said that they would do everything they can to make sure that he was a one-term president. They didn’t say that they would work with him to try and resolve the problems of the nation. What they said was that they would work for the next four years to defeat him, suggesting that they were unwilling even to try and help to resolve the problems of the nation.

Oh, by the way, have you noticed a complete and total absence of any mention of their past president in this campaign? I’ll let you, the reader, think about that. Some things have been said by constituents and leaders of the opposing party which should be of concern to anyone voting in this election. Some have threatened to fire or lay off people if the current president is re-elected. They are using language like class warfare. If they are going to use that term they should take a good look at themselves.

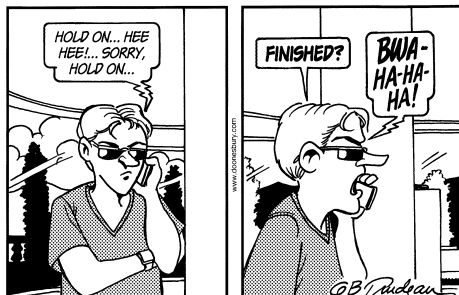

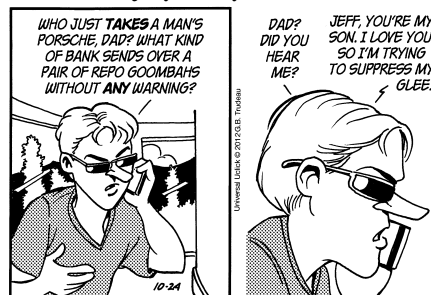

I don’t resent or envy the wealthy. For the most part, they have earned (on the backs of labor) what they have got. What I do resent is them saying that they pay their fair share.

It seems to me that if the middle class got a little bit of a tax break, they would in turn spend that money on things that they need and hence, companies would have to produce more to meet demand, creating more employment which in turn would be good for the wealthy.

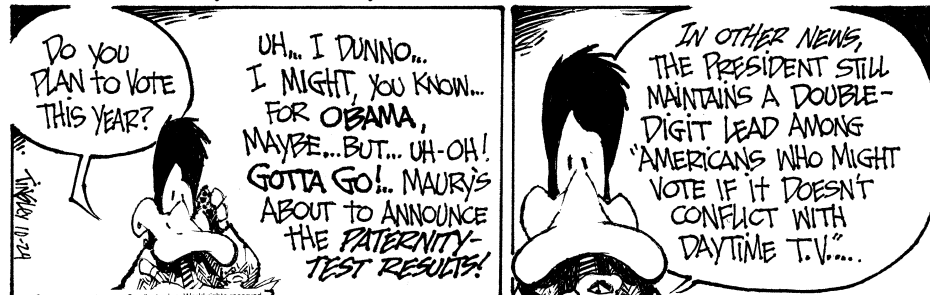

When you vote this year, remember the shape this country was in, a housing bust, economy in shambles caused by greedy bankers and wars on two fronts. If you think these problems could have been solved in four short years, you are giving all of the leaders of this great nation more credit than they deserve.

Weather Closes Roads in Yellowstone

YELLOWSTONE NATIONAL PARK, Wyo. (AP) • Winter weather has forced the closure of several roads in Yellowstone National Park. The National Park Service reported road closures on Monday included Craig Pass between Old Faithful and West Thumb and the park's east entrance to Fishing Bridge. The Park Service in-

But voters will decide during the Nov. 6 election whether to keep the law, which is on ballots as Proposition 3.

If the law is overturned, the contract is void.

The eight-year contract with HP — one of the state's largest employers — was signed Tuesday.

The contract includes the laptops, implementing a wireless network in every Idaho high school, maintaining the devices, security, technology support and training school employees.

On Tuesday, HP's website cited a starting price of $559 for an individual Pro-Book 4440s.

Under its contract, the Idaho State Department of Education will pay $249.77 per student or teacher.

If wireless infrastructure and training for employees is factored in, the cost to the state rises to $292.77 per device.

After delays in the bidding process, the state's purchasing division was still negotiating with vendors earlier this month.

Originally, teachers and school administrators were supposed to receive laptops this month or in November.

Melissa McGrath, spokeswoman for the Idaho State Department of Education, said about 6,500 laptops will now go out for the educators early next semester.

Then, one-third of high schools at a time — with about 27,000 students in each round — will receive laptops starting during the 2013-14 school year. Once again, that assumes voters uphold the law this fall.

building a life in America, Ramirez has applied for Deferred Action for Childhood Arrivals.

Deferred Action, established through executive order by President Barack Obama, defers prosecution for qualifying undocumented students, allowing them to remain in the United States while pursuing education.

But without a law passed by Congress, the future is uncertain for Ramirez and other undocumented residents brought to Idaho as children.

Undocumented in the Magic Valley

Cesar Perez, director of the College of Southern Idaho Advising Center, said he has worked with students who hope to apply for Deferred Action. Though CSI has always allowed undocumented students through their open door policy, the Deferred Action allows them to stay in the country.

But there are hurdles, Perez said. Because these students don't have Social Security numbers, they're not eligible for federal aid for which they would otherwise qualify.

"Some of these students may take a class or two instead of going full-time," because they can't afford otherwise, Perez said.

Ramirez paid for school with scholarships through student senate and by working at a farm during the summer. Perez has talked to other students who get financial support from family members who take on extra shifts to pay for classes.

Undocumented individuals also can't pursue fields of study that require background checks, such as law enforcement or nursing. Those background checks also require Social Security numbers, Perez pointed out. The best law enforcement or health care hopefuls can do is take program prerequisite classes and hope their immigration case goes forward in time for them to enroll in the program.

Ramirez's case is moving ahead.

"I already got the notice saying that they received my application, and I already went to Boise to the immigration center to get my fingerprints done," he said.

The Gamble

Applying doesn't come without risks.

Immigration attorney Jeremy Pittard said he tells clients that with their Deferred Action application, students are admitting to the federal government they are in the country illegally.

"It's a self-reporting program. That's the danger of it," Pittard said.

That's not stopping students from applying. Pittard, who practices in Jerome and Twin Falls, said when Deferred Action was first announced, his office received two calls about Deferred Action per day. Now that school has started, inquiries have dropped off to two or three a week, he said.

Though another president could do away with Deferred Action — or Obama could change his mind — Pittard said he doesn't think that is likely.

"Frankly, I don't think it would happen, because just the political backlash that would happen would be incredible," Pittard said.

What's Next

Deferred Action is a good start, Pittard said, but it's not the end game. He would like to see Congress solidify the process into law — perhaps with the DREAM Act, a proposed piece of legislation that would give conditional permanent residency to qualifying individuals who were brought to the United States as children.

"I'm with everybody else. Have a secure border and make it fair," Pittard said. "But also I think we are a compassionate nation that needs to understand that there are people here that have been here since they were 2 years old or 6 months old, and this is their life."

As for Ramirez, if Deferred Action is overturned and he is in danger of being deported, he's still happy with what he has achieved.

"Even if the DREAM Act didn't pass, I would have still gone to school and finished school," he said. "That's pretty much what's important to me right now, is having an education. That's something that they cannot take away from me."

working. Rushing added that if elected, he'll keep his personal time and county vehicle use separate.

"I'm on duty 24/7," McFall countered.

McFall said he never uses county equipment for personal gain and said, he's had to respond to an emergency in his own personal vehicle.

"When something happens, I'm there," he said.

McFall said it's important for him to have the equipment in his sheriff's vehicle available while he's driving around town in case something comes up.

If he becomes sheriff, Rushing said he would work to increase the number of solved crimes and put away long-term criminals.

"People I was chasing around 15 years ago are still doing the same thing," he said. McFall said his deputies are constantly busy and work to solve as many crimes as possible.

"The deputies who are out there, they put their heart and souls into this job," McFall said.

In the next four years, McFall said his main goal is keeping the county's jail open by meeting all of its insurer's core standards for jails.

"We need to do a better job of making sure we don't have overcrowding," McFall said.

Another place that can be improved is the jail's emergency evacuation plan and practicing fire drills, he said.

Rushing said he wants to see a plan for the jail that doesn't cost taxpayers more money. The jail McFall and the county commissioners asked county residents to vote on in May would be full in just a few years, Rushing said. A 200- or 300-bed jail would not fill up so fast and

Greenberg Appointed to Blaine County Commission Vacancy

BY MELISSA DAVLIN
mdavlin@magicvalley.com

HAILEY • Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter has appointed Jacob Greenberg to fill a Blaine County Commission vacancy.

Greenberg, 59, was one of three candidates submitted to Otter by the Blaine County Democratic Central Committee, according to a press release from Otter's office. He replaces Tom Bowman, who resigned in late September. Greenberg will complete the final two years of Bowman's term.

Greenberg is an accountant and financial analyst. He owns Shorty's Diner in Hailey.

"I'm honored and humbled by this appointment to the Board of Blaine County Commissioners," Greenberg said, according to the press release. "Thanks to Governor Otter and his staff for the exemplary work they did in vetting all the candidates, and thanks to all of those who supported me throughout the process. This wouldn't have been possible without them."

"My intention is to direct resources in an effective and efficient manner to ensure the health, safety and welfare of the community."

Twin Falls Police Offer Prescription Drug Disposal

TIMES-NEWS

TWIN FALLS • The Twin Falls Police Department has created a year-round prescription drug disposal location.

It will provide community members a safe and secure site to get rid of unwanted prescription drugs.

The drop-off location is at the police department's front lobby, 356 Third Ave. E. in Twin Falls.

Residents can dispose of prescription drugs at any time. The lobby is open 24 hours a day.

The bin is for prescription pills and patches only. No liquids, syringes or other forms of controlled substances are allowed.

The U.S. Drug Enforcement Agency has hosted a bi-annual Prescription Drug Take Back event in Twin Falls.

However, citizens voiced concerns about the lack of a year-round place to securely dispose of unwanted prescription drugs.

Improper disposal of prescription drugs can lead to several health hazards, according to a statement from the city of Twin Falls.

Environmental damage can occur when drugs are flushed down toilets. Drugs can also end up in the hands of those who seek drugs for illegal use.

CenturyLink to Provide $30K for Student-led Philanthropy

TIMES-NEWS

BOISE • Middle-school teachers are invited to submit applications to participate in the 2012-13 CenturyLink Middle School Philanthropy Program.

The purpose of the program — led by CenturyLink and the Idaho Community Foundation — is to increase awareness among middle school students about the needs within their community.

Up to 10 classrooms will each be given $3,000 to spend as grants to support nonprofit organizations.

Teachers will lead students in the process of researching local organizations, presenting their findings and deciding how to distribute the money.

The project culminates with a check presentation to selected charities in the spring.

Woman Sentenced after Crash Killed Husband

POCATELLO (AP) • A woman was sentenced to at least five years in prison after pleading guilty to vehicular manslaughter and driving under the influence in a crash that killed her husband and led to the death of her best friend.

Sobbing and emotional in the Pocatello courtroom, defendant Constance Rae Weiser said Monday she was still grieving over the deaths, The Idaho State Journal reported.

"I know I hurt everyone," she said. "I am hurting too. I have lost my husband and my best friend. I am suffering a great deal of grief. I am human, too. Just have mercy on me, your honor, please."

The judge said Weiser had to live with the consequences of driving drunk.

"My job here is not to inflict suffering," 6th District Judge Stephen Dunn said. "What you are experiencing is a natural consequence of your actions and has nothing to do with what is going on today. I cannot minimize the sentence because you are suffering."

Weiser, a Forth Hall resident, pleaded guilty in August to one count of vehicular manslaughter and one count of driving under the influence.

On Sept. 6, 2011, she was driving a car in Pocatello when it hit the median, went airborne and slammed into the side of a hill before tumbling 150 feet, authorities said.

Killed in the crash was her 47-year-old husband Desmond Craig Weiser. Her friend, Tamara Medicinehorse, 33, later died from injuries.

Defense: Man Charged in Triple Murder Not a Killer

BOISE (AP) • A man charged with murdering his girlfriend and her two young sons fled from Idaho in 2002 but is not a killer, his attorney said at the start of his trial.

Suspect Jorge Alberto Lopez-Orozco left Idaho because he was in this country illegally and someone shot at his car, lawyer Terry Ratliff told an Elmore County jury Monday.

The shooter may have been the same person who killed Rebecca Ramirez and her two sons, ages 4 and 2, Ratliff said.

Lopez-Orozco has pleaded not guilty to three counts of first-degree murder.

The FBI had listed him as one of its most-wanted felons in 2002 after fishermen discovered the abandoned, burned-out shell of a car he had been driving near the Snake River in a remote part of southern Idaho.

The charred remains of Ramirez and her children were found inside, and investigators later determined they had been shot in the head or chest.

Lopez-Orozco was captured in 2009, as he delivered metal to a Mexican scrapyard, then extradited to Idaho in 2011. Mexico's policy is not to extradite suspects who might face execution, so prosecutors agreed not to pursue the death penalty in the case.

"Jorge is an undocumented alien who has no right to be here, and that is the reason he left, aside from being shot at," Ratliff told the jury.

Candidates Race Across the Map

BY DAVID LIGHTMAN

McClatchy Newspapers

DELRAY BEACH, Fla. • The campaign sprint to Election Day began Tuesday, promising to follow a changing path to victory that's winding through states where President Barack Obama's once-healthy lead has been shrinking.

With 13 days left and the final debate over, 14 states could swing either way, according to polls and analysts. Obama carried 12 of them in 2008, and the issue most on voters' minds is the economy, an issue where Republican challenger Mitt Romney has an edge.

A candidate needs 270 electoral votes to win, and two of the biggest prizes, Florida and North Carolina and their combined 44 electoral votes, are trending toward Romney. Five others Obama badly needs — Virginia, New Hampshire, Iowa, Colorado and Nevada, with 38 electoral votes — are too close to call.

The president is maintaining his lead in Ohio, which every president since 1964 has won. But his lead for its 18 electoral votes is shrinking.

More troublesome for Obama could be tightening races in states with 56 electoral votes he counted heavily on winning: Pennsylvania, Michigan, Wisconsin and possibly Minnesota. Romney faces that kind of threat only in Arizona and Montana, which have 14 electoral votes.

Obama is still in a good position to win most or even all of these battlegrounds, but at the moment the Romney crowd is more upbeat. Senior Romney adviser Kevin Madden talks about how Pennsylvania is "coming into view," and how Minnesota is "one we have to watch closely."

In the Obama camp, senior adviser David Axelrod is almost defiant. "No, no, no," he said when asked about Minnesota and Pennsylvania. "Will we win some states by the same margins as last time? No. But in about every case in those battleground states, you'll find conflicting polls."

Axelrod called the final days largely an organizational test. In Florida, for instance, Obama campaign officials note they have 106 offices throughout the state, up from 58 four years ago.

But Romney — and independent analysts — maintain that what also matters is an intangible: How do people feel about how things are going? Can they trust the new guy to do the job?

"You win by creating momentum," said Sen. John McCain of Arizona, who failed to produce much momentum in the closing weeks of his 2008 Republican presidential campaign.

The biggest trouble sign for Obama is his job approval rating's struggle to top 50 percent. That signals political danger, said David Paleologos, director of the Suffolk University Political Research Center in Massachusetts.

The economy is by far the campaign's biggest issue, and "the economy has not changed significantly," he said. The fight between Obama and Romney has become "the economy versus the other issues."

So as long as the housing market remains dismal in Nevada, blue-collar workers in the Rust Belt remain insecure and middle-class voters in Iowa see their retirement nest eggs stagnant, Romney has a shot.

"The states in play are moving to Romney," Paleologos said.

A look at the map:

—The toughest to predict: Virginia, New Hampshire, Iowa, Colorado and Nevada all fall into this category, and all except Iowa share one characteristic: They're diverse states full of new voters who are scrambling the traditional political equations.

The influx of white-collar suburbanites into northern Virginia helped Obama win the state in 2008, the first time since 1964 that a Democrat has carried Virginia. In New Hampshire, a similar suburban influx has helped break the Granite State's Republican lock.

Colorado and Nevada could depend on turnout by Hispanic voters, who polls show prefer Obama overwhelmingly.

In Iowa, the middle class is the group to watch.

"We have low unemployment. And it's not farms, because Obama has been good for agriculture," said

Sen. Tom Harkin, D-Iowa. "It has to do with the loss of wealth by the middle class, and that's not unique to Iowa."

—Slipping away from Obama? Florida and North Carolina. Privately, Obama supporters bemoan a struggling effort in Florida, though the president held a raucous rally Tuesday in Delray Beach that drew 11,000. Romney has been slowly gaining and was up 1.8 percentage points Tuesday in poll averages reported by RealClearPolitics, a non-partisan website.

"Florida's one of those states, it's like a freight liner, and once it turns — and I think it's turned — it's hard to turn back," Madden said.

North Carolina appears to be heading out of Obama's reach. The campaign insists it has thousands of volunteers stumping hard, but Romney averages nearly a 6 percentage point lead in the latest polls.

—Ohio: A political world of its own, the state is always an election year puzzle and will be visited frequently by the candidates because its diverse population largely mirrors America.

Egypt's Top Court to Rule on Constitutional Panel

CAIRO (AP) • An Egyptian court on Tuesday asked the country's highest tribunal to rule on whether to disband the body tasked with writing a new constitution. The delay in a ruling is a possible blow to liberals, since it could give Islamists time to finish drafting the contested document.

The referral of the case to a higher court is the latest twist in a bitter struggle between Islamists and their secular rivals over Egypt's first constitution since it set out on a path to democracy, following the ouster of longtime President Hosni Mubarak last year.

Islamists, who dominate the constitutional assembly, are racing to put a draft to a public referendum before the judges rule, while leading members of the panel appealed for dialogue to overcome the divisions.

The work and the composition of the 100-member constitutional assembly have been the subject of fierce debate. The focus is the potential for stricter implementation of Islamic law, or Shariah, and empowerment of religious scholars that liberals fear could signal a turn toward a theocratic state.

Along with the contentious role of religion in the nation's affairs, Islamists and liberals are haggling over other proposed articles relating to women rights, freedom of worship, presidential powers, immunity for the military from civilian oversight, and undercutting the powers of the Supreme Constitutional Court.

A new constitution would be a key step in establishing a democracy to replace the Mubarak's regime, ousted last year in an uprising led by progressive, secular activists.

Instead of ruling on a petition submitted by liberals challenging the legitimacy of the panel, Judge Nazih Tangho of the High Administrative Court on Tuesday sent the case to Egypt's Supreme Constitutional Court.

The decision sets up a new showdown between the Supreme Constitutional Court, packed with secularist judges, and Egypt's ruling and powerful Brotherhood. The same court dissolved the Brotherhood-led parliament, ruled the election law unconstitutional and turned down Morsi's attempt to restore it upon his election in June.

Last week, the Constitutional Court criticized the panel's move to strip the court's power right to rule on laws passed by parliament. The proposed articles also maintain the president's grip over the court, as he appoints its head and members. The panel drafting it said it could be ready for public discussion as early as the first half of November. The new constitution then will have to be put to a public referendum within 30 days.

Former President Jimmy Carter said it has become clear that the secular versus religious aspects of the constitution remain the crucial questions, but he said he was "gratified" with the panel's work.

Government to Examine New Technology for Automated Cars

WASHINGTON (AP) • Cars that drive themselves may hold the potential to save thousands of lives, an Obama administration safety official said Tuesday, as the government prepares to launch a research initiative to determine the safety and reliability of automated driving technologies.

Automated vehicles are the next "evolutionary step" in car technology, David Strickland, head of the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, told an industry gathering sponsored by Swedish automaker Volvo and the Swedish Embassy in Washington. He said his agency has held extensive discussions with automakers and Google about what needs to happen before automated cars can be safely introduced to consumers.

"Automated vehicles offer an important and challenging method for reducing crash risk that we believes holds great promise," Strickland said. He noted that human error was a factor in about 90 percent of the over 33,000 traffic deaths recorded in 2010. "We have the chance of ... saving thousands and thousands of lives as" cars in use today are replaced with automated vehicles, he said.

In a fully-automated vehicle, the driver would program a destination into the car's computers, but would not be expected to control the vehicle, he said. Key questions will be whether the software in automated cars will be able to handle complicated driving situations and whether there will always need to be a human driver paying attention and ready to step in.

Besides reducing traffic deaths, automated cars may be an alternative for people like the elderly and the blind whose mobility is limited because they don't drive, he said.

Over the past decade, automakers have been gradually introducing automated safety features into cars, especially high-end vehicles. Forward-collision warning systems, for example, alert drivers when they are likely to crash into a car in front of them and, in some cases, will briefly take control of the vehicle away from the driver to apply the brakes.

Still, automated cars "are not around the corner," Peter Mertens, Volvo's senior vice president of research and development, said. "There is more (public) acceptance needed."

iPad Mini Pricier Than Rivals

SAN JOSE, Calif. (AP) • Apple Inc.'s pencil-thin, smaller iPad will cost much more than its competitors, signaling that the company isn't going to get into a mini-tablet price war.

The company unveiled the iPad Mini on Tuesday, with a screen about two-thirds the size of the full model, and half the weight. Customers can begin ordering the new model on Friday. In a surprise, Apple also revamped its flagship, full-sized iPad just six months after the launch of the latest model.

Apple's late founder Steve Jobs once ridiculed a small tablet from a competitor as a "tweener" that was too big and too small to compete with either smartphones or tablets.

Now Apple's own Mini enters a growing small-tablet market dominated by Amazon.com Inc.'s Kindle Fire.

Apple is charging $329 and up for the Mini — a price that fits into the Apple product lineup between the latest iPod Touch ($299) and the iPad 2 ($399). Company watchers had been expecting Apple to price the iPad Mini at $250 to $300 to compete with the Kindle Fire, which starts at $159. Barnes & Noble Inc.'s Nook HD and Google Inc.'s Nexus 7 both start at $199.

"Apple had an opportunity to step on the throat of Amazon and Google, yet decided to rely on its brand and focus on (profit) margin," said Bill Kreher, an analyst with brokerage Edward Jones.

Calif. Surfer Killed in Shark Attack

VANDENBERG AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (AP) • A surfer was killed Tuesday by a shark off a beach at coastal Vandenberg Air Force Base following a summer of shark sightings along California's Central Coast, authorities said.

Francisco Javier Solorio Jr., 39, of Orcutt was killed in the attack off the coast of Surf Beach in Lompoc, the Santa Barbara County Sheriff's Department said in a statement.

He was bitten by the shark in his upper torso.

Solorio "had a friend who he was surfing with who saw the shark bite or hit the man," said sheriff's Sgt. Mark A. Williams. "His friend ended up swimming over and pulling him from the water where he received first aid."

The friend started first aid while another surfer called for help, but Solorio was pronounced dead by paramedics at the scene.

The Air Force said he was not affiliated with the base, which allows public access to some of its beaches.

The type of shark involved and other details were under investigation.

It was the latest shark attack fatality at Surf Beach, about 150 miles northwest of Los Angeles.

In October 2010, Lucas Ransom, a 19-year-old, died when a shark nearly severed his leg as he body-boarded.

CHINA LEADER'S PERSONALITY FORGED BY HARSH EARLY LIFE

LIANGJIAHE, China (AP) • The next leader of China spent much of his youth living in a dug-out cave.

Xi Jinping's seven years in this remote northern community meant toiling alongside villagers by day and sleeping on bricks by night, in stark contrast to his pampered early years in Beijing. He was born into the communist elite, but after his father fell out of favor with Mao Zedong — and before his later rehabilitation, the younger Xi was sent to a rural hinterland to learn peasant virtues at age 15.

The Liangjiahe years are among the scant details known about Xi's life and personality partly because he himself chronicled them as a formative experience. They are part of the vague picture of a man who has drawn little attention during much of his political career but is poised to become ruling party chief next month and president next year of an increasingly assertive China.

What is clear is that Xi has excelled at quietly rising through the ranks by making the most of two facets: He has an elite, educated background with links to communist China's founding fathers that are a crucial advantage in the country's politics, and at the same time he has successfully cultivated a common man mystique that helps him appeal to a broad constituency.

He did not at first come willingly to Liangjiahe, a tiny community of cave dwellings dug into arid hills and fronted by dried mud walls with wooden lattice entryways. He tried to escape and was detained.

"He was always very sincere and worked hard alongside us. He was also a big reader of really thick books," said Shi Chunyang, then a friend of Xi and now a local official.

Court Blocks Defunding of Planned Parenthood

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) • Indiana stepped between women and their physicians when it enacted a law that blocked Medicaid funds for Planned Parenthood just because the organization provides abortions, a federal appeals court ruled Tuesday.

The 7th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Chicago upheld a lower court's finding that Indiana violated federal regulations when it enacted a law that denied Planned Parenthood Medicaid funds for general health services including cancer screenings.

The ruling is the latest setback in conservative efforts in several states to cut off funding for providers.

On Friday, a federal judge blocked Arizona from applying a similar law to Planned Parenthood. Also last week, Texas released rules for a state women's health program requiring officials to shut down the program entirely if a court asks the state to include providers tied to groups like Planned Parenthood.

Guantanamo Court Stalls over the Right to Boycott

GUANTANAMO BAY NAVAL BASE, Cuba (AP) • A dispute over whether a defendant must be present during a military tribunal brought proceedings to a halt Tuesday in the case of a Guantanamo prisoner accused in the attack on the Navy destroyer the USS Cole.

Defendant Abd al-Rahim al-Nashiri decided to boycott the pretrial motions hearing to protest the use of belly chains to move him from his cell at the Guantanamo Bay prison.

Prosecutors wanted the 47-year-old prisoner brought to court to explain his reasoning on the record before any discussion of other motions in the case. The defense objected, saying any use of force could traumatize a man who they say was tortured in U.S. custody.

The judge, Army Col. James Pohl, decided after more than 90 minutes of debate that al-Nashiri must come to court Wednesday.

"Tomorrow, weather permitting, your client is coming," Pohl said, referring to Tropical Storm Sandy, which was forecast to grow into a hurricane and strike eastern Cuba, potentially near the U.S. base early Thursday. The judge then adjourned the hearing for the day.

U.S. officials had considered canceling the remainder of this week's pretrial hearing, which is scheduled to run through Thursday, but had decided to go forward as of late Tuesday, said Kelly Wirfel, a spokesman for the Navy base.

The military was forced to postpone hearings and evacuate officials and visitors who came to Guantanamo for proceedings in August because of Tropical Storm Isaac.

Whether a defendant must attend sessions of the tribunal has been a recurring theme with al-Nashiri, who is accused of orchestrating the deadly 2000 bombing of the USS Cole in Yemen.

Colorado Conducts More Citizenship Tests

DENVER (AP) • There are 300 more suspected noncitizens on Colorado's voter rolls, Secretary of State Gessler said Tuesday in the latest chapter in a contentious national debate over what Republicans say is vulnerability in the voting system.

The latest figures are from the 3,903 people who received letters from Gessler's office questioning their citizenship in August. During a first round of checks, Gessler said 141 others were found to be possible noncitizens.

Critics of Gessler, who is a Republican, have questioned his political motives and argue the checks have the potential to disenfranchise eligible voters. Some of the people who have received letters questioning their citizenship have turned out to be U.S. citizens, and a few of the original 141 have maintained they are citizens.

The majority of the people who are suspected to be noncitizens and on the rolls are unaffiliated voters and Democrats, according to Gessler's office.

State election officials did additional checks this month after obtaining immigration identification numbers from the state division of motor vehicles for more of the people who received letters. They received letters because at one point they showed proof they weren't U.S. citizens, such as a green card, when obtaining a driver's license.

The latest figures mean that out of the 3,903 who received letters, 441 are believed to be noncitizens, according to the federal database, which has normally been used to check the status of legal immigrants.

OBITUARIESBrian Vern Rodig

March 9, 1962-Oct. 21, 2012

BUHL • Brian Vern Rodig, 50, of Buhl, Idaho, peacefully passed away in his sleep Sunday, Oct. 21, 2012, at his home.

He enjoyed success in golf tournaments and even carded two holes-in-one (of which he was very proud). Brian worked for Clear Springs Foods for more than 30 years, developing numerous lifelong friendships which he cherished to his last day. Brian will be truly missed. He was a loving father, husband, son and brother as well as a very special friend to all that knew him.

Brian is survived by his wife, Mylyn; two sons, Colby and Payton; daughter, Brandy (TJ) Wetherbee; parents, Vern and Beverly Rodig; mother-in-law, Debbie Parker; father-in-law, Myron (Kim) Parker; brother, Kim (Linda); sisters, Pam (Randy) Clark and Dina (Brian) Tadlock; brother-in-law, Pete Parker; nieces and nephews, Brandon (Stephanie) Clark, Jameson Clark and Braden Tadlock; and numerous extended family. He was preceded in death by his nephew, Aaron Tadlock.

The service will be held at 11 a.m. Friday, Oct. 26, at the First Christian Church (Broadway and Poplar streets) in Buhl, Idaho. A graveside service will follow at the West End Cemetery.

In lieu of flowers the family requests donations be made to the Brian Rodig Memorial Athletic Participation Fund to help less fortunate students participate in Buhl School District Athletic programs (in care of Buhl Public School Foundation, P.O. Box 108, Buhl, ID 83316).

Brian was born March 9, 1962, in Twin Falls, Idaho, to Vern and Beverly Rodig. He was a special gift to his mother, being born on her birthday. He was the third of four children, Kim, Pam, Brian and Dina. He was raised in Buhl and graduated from Buhl High School in 1981. While in school, he was always very active in multiple sports, excelling in track and field and winning the state title in the high jump as a freshman. Following high school, he married Toni Janssen, and from that union came a beautiful daughter, Brandy Michelle. They later divorced. Brian then married Mylyn Parker in 1996, and they were blessed with two sons, Colby and Payton.

Brian dearly loved his children and tried to spend every spare minute with them. He enjoyed being involved in all their activities, including rodeo, soccer, T-ball, football, basketball and baseball. Brian was always very involved in Buhl School District sports programs as both a coach and helping with the football chain crew. He was also very influential in promoting Buhl Youth Sports Programs. Brian had a hard time saying no when people asked him for help.

Brian enjoyed many outdoor hobbies, including hunting, camping and golf.

Joyce Osterhout Pinther

June 30, 1942-Oct. 20, 2012

Joyce Osterhout Pinther, our loving mother, grandmother, great-grandmother, sister and friend, returned to her Heavenly Father on Saturday, Oct. 20, 2012, after a long and happy life.

Joyce was the third of 14 children born to Milton Osterhout and Vera Pauline Larson-Osterhout. She was born June 30, 1942, at their home in Declo, Idaho, and was delivered by her Aunt Sarah. The doctor arrived 30 minutes after she was born. Joyce was always close to her sisters and brothers. They loved each other unconditionally and were always very supportive of one another. Joyce was raised on the family farm, where she developed and cultivated her work ethic that she taught to her own children by her amazing example.

Joyce was married to Raymond Sweat in 1960 and to this union was born Robin Anderson and Tina Roseborough. They divorced and Joyce met and married Howard Ross in 1966. To this union was born Natalie Wilson, Becky Konrad, Jacqi Norton, Howie Ross, Brad Ross and Nicke Cutler. They later divorced and Joyce met Ernest Curt Pinther and was sealed to him in the Logan LDS Temple. In marrying Curt, Joyce was finally cared for the way she deserved to be. Joyce's children will be forever grateful for the love and security that she enjoyed because of him. Joyce was very active in the LDS Church and had a strong testimony of the gospel. She loved serving in the church. Her work schedule was not always conducive to church attendance, but she did not allow that to hinder her faith. She often would finish work for the day and would rush to church to attend sacrament meeting in her work clothes.

Joyce was a very active person. She loved to create and share the things she made with her hands. She was an avid gardener and always had a very large garden. She loved to work in her garden and share the fruits of her labors. She would spend hours and hours canning and preserving the vegetables and fruits she grew and loved to share her famous salsa. She loved to crochet and could always be found with a crochet hook and a skein of yarn. She was an avid collector, and her family and friends loved to bring her souvenir spoons from all over the world to help grow her collection. Her family was always the most important thing to her. She was a very dedicated mother and worked endlessly to provide for her children. She loved her children so very much and taught them that hard work always equals happiness.

The funeral will be held at 11 a.m. Saturday, Oct. 27, at the Rupert LDS Stake Center, 324 E. 18th St. in Rupert, with Bishop Rick Larsen officiating. Interment will follow at the Rupert Cemetery. Friends may attend the viewing from 6 until 8 p.m. Friday, Oct. 26, at the Hansen Mortuary, 710 Sixth St. in Rupert, and from 10 to 10:45 a.m. before the funeral Saturday at the church.

Joyce made this world a more beautiful place and her absence will be felt every day. She was loved by all and will be deeply missed.

Debra Ann Blecher

Nov. 22, 1966 Oct. 21, 2012

TWIN FALLS • Debra Ann Blecher, 45, of Twin Falls, passed away Sunday, Oct. 21, 2012, in Burley after a valiant fight with Lou Gehrig's disease.

She was born Nov. 22, 1966, in Pocatello, the daughter of Evan and Hazel Henson Wall. Debra was raised in McCammon, Idaho; Quartzite, Ariz.; and Jerome, Idaho. She spent many years working as a CNA and driving truck, which she enjoyed immensely. Debra loved photography, traveling, arranging flowers and especially helping others. She will be remembered for her infectious smile and her heart of gold. Debra is survived by her husband, John Blecher of Twin Falls; her brother, Terry (Sharon) Wall of Hailey; in-laws, Harmon Blecher, Jenny (Soren) Jensen, Tim (Jessie Ann) Blecher and Vernon Blecher; and many extended family members and friends. She is preceded in death by her parents; and two sisters, Marlene Wall and Sherry Lee Hamilton.

A celebration of Debra's life will be conducted at 4:30 p.m. Thursday, Oct. 25, at Farnsworth Mortuary, 1343 S. Lincoln in Jerome, with Pastor Steve Bartlett officiating.

NC Airborne Museum Plan for ExpansionsFAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP)

Fort Bragg officials are quietly working on a plan to expand the Airborne & Special Operations Museum.

Each year, more than 170,000 people tour the Army-owned museum, which opened in 2000. The museum is widely viewed as a catalyst for downtown Fayetteville's revitalization that has resulted in new restaurants, shops, residences and parks.

Now, Fort Bragg is developing a five-year strategic plan for the museum that may include expanding its exhibits and adding on to the building. Army planners are not discussing any details publicly until they complete a plan, perhaps by next year.

The history of the airborne forces and the Army's special operations continues to be written, and the museum's mission is "to relay that history to the public, and periodically we have found it necessary to look at ways of expanding our display, preservation and educational areas." Fort Bragg spokesman Tom McCollum said in a statement.

Mike Lynch, director of plans, training, mobilization and security at Fort Bragg, is leading the plan.

"We are currently in the preliminary stages of looking at that now," Lynch said in an email. "Before moving beyond the initial stages, we need to address a large number of areas, such as funding, our current available space within the footprint of our building and, if necessary, our ability to increase by expanding our building."

It's unclear how much space the Army would like to add to the 59,000-square-foot building, which is on a 1.67-acre tract at Bragg Boulevard and Hay Street. The tract does not include the parking lot, which is on city-owned land and is shared by the museum and North Carolina Veterans Park, which opened last year.

Lynch said that before any final decision is made, "we'll coordinate this with city and military officials to ensure we have a plan that can be supported."

The museum features a helicopter hanging from overhead and a diorama depicting a Special Forces hide-site during the Persian Gulf War. Visitors can stroll through a French village replica from the Normandy Invasion of June 1944 and watch videos of a changing collection of stories about the airborne and special operations.

The museum foundation's board of directors last received an update on the Army's expansion plans in May, according to minutes of the meeting. Board members were told to "digest the information and send feedback" to others, including Paul Galloway, director of the museum foundation.

Galloway said he cannot discuss the plan. It's not completed, he said, and the effort is being directed by Fort Bragg, not the foundation.

The museum's nonprofit foundation, which helped raise money for its construction, partners with the Army to operate the building and provide programming for it.

Services Planned for Former AIM Activist, Actor Russell MeansKYLE, S.D. (AP)

Russell Means' family is planning four services to honor the American Indian Movement activist and actor.

Means, an Oglala Sioux Tribe member, died at home on the Pine Ridge Indian Reservation on Monday. He was 72. There will be four services because the number is significant in Lakota culture, representing the four seasons. The first ceremony is scheduled for Wednesday at the Little Wound School in Kyle, on the Pine Ridge reservation. Three more ceremonies will take place next year. One will be at the site of the 1973 Wounded Knee occupation.

Another will be at Wind Cave National Park. Means' ashes are to be privately scattered Thursday in the Black Hills, which are sacred to the Lakota.

OBITUARIES

Evelyn Marie Campbell

Sept. 8, 1919-Oct. 20, 2012

HAGERMAN • Evelyn Marie Campbell, age 93, loving mother, grandmother and great-grandmother, of Hagerman and formerly of Prescott, Ariz., and Wendell, Idaho, passed away Saturday, Oct. 20, 2012, at Stonebridge Assisted Living in Hagerman.

Evelyn was born Sept. 8, 1919, in Novelty, Ohio, to the late Harry and Bessie (Winkler) Beighley. She married the late Donald S. Beverly in June of 1944 in Toledo, Ohio. This marriage was blessed with a son, Philip (Donna) Beverly of Gooding, Idaho. Her grandchildren and great-grandchildren from Phil and Donna are grandson, Bill Beverly; granddaughter, LaDawn (Dave) Saxton; great-grandchild, Cedar Rose Saxton; granddaughter, Lisa (Brandon) Mosher; great-grandchild, Grace Joanne Mosher. Evelyn married the late F.W. Campbell Jr., (Bill) on July 2, 1960 in Las Vegas, Nev. This marriage was blessed with two sons, Ian Lee (Mary) Campbell of Rupert, Idaho, and Hugh Scott of Wendell, Idaho. Her grandchildren from Ian and Mary are grandson, Jeffery (Heather) Campbell; granddaughter, Tiana (Chad) Beckett; granddaughter, Danielle Campbell. Evelyn was preceded in death by two brothers and two sisters.

Evelyn was raised in Ohio and graduated from Rawson High School in 1937. She began her nurse's training in September of 1941 in Toledo, Ohio. She graduated as a registered nurse at the top of her class from Mercy Hospital Nursing School. She worked at the Mercy Hospital and was transferred to east Toledo to the new St. Charles Hospital in 1952; she was the night supervisor until 1956. In 1956, Evelyn moved with her son, Phillip, and parents to Prescott, Ariz., where she became the director of nursing at Prescott Community Hospital until 1960.

She met Bill Campbell through the Mile High Square Dancing Club in 1958. Evelyn and Bill owned and operated the CF Ranch located in Seligman, Ariz., until 1968; they then moved to Wendell, Idaho, and lived north of Wendell on Desert View Ranch. In 1972, Bill Campbell served as president of the American International Charolais Association. Evelyn and Bill, as representatives of the AICA, traveled extensively that year, including travels to the Far East.

Evelyn served on the Wendell School Board for two terms during the 1970s. She returned to her nursing career as the nurse supervisor at Magic Valley Manor until her retirement. In 1978, Evelyn moved with her family to the farm near Tuttle, Idaho. One of the many of Evelyn's activities was sewing. She was an accomplished seamstress. Evelyn enjoyed the outdoors, camping and fishing with her husband. They enjoyed "rock hounding" for many years and spent several winters in Arizona. Evelyn's main hobby was painting, and she displayed many of her beautiful oil paintings throughout her home.

A private family service will be held, with burial taking place at the Wendell Cemetery in Wendell. Arrangements are under the care and direction of Demaray Funeral Service, Gooding Chapel. Condolences may be sent to the family by visiting the obituary link at www.demaryfuneralservice.com.

"Bless this house, O Lord we pray. Keep it safe both night and day." AMEN.

Charles 'Chuck' Paul Shirey, Sr.

Nov. 20, 1943-Oct. 19, 2012

WENDELL • Charles 'Chuck' Paul Shirey Sr., 68, a resident of Wendell, passed away Friday, Oct. 19, 2012, at Overland Court Assisted Living in Boise, with his daughter, "Boo," holding his hand.

He was born Nov. 20, 1943, in Youngstown, Ohio, to Hal and Gert Shirey. Chuck met the love of his life, Linda Donkersloot, in California, and they married on March 18, 1966. Chuck worked hard his entire life - from his first job at age 10 selling newspapers at Disneyland to owning and operating a dairy farm of 2,000 cows. Once he retired, he enjoyed spending time at the Pit Stop meeting his friends for coffee and conversation.

He is survived by four kids, two sons, Steve Shirey of Twin Falls, Idaho, and Chuck Shirey Jr. (Heather) of Jerome, Idaho; and two daughters; Jodi M. Rowe (Shaun) of Boise, Idaho, and Kristen Shirey of Corvallis, Ore.. Chuck six grandchildren, Doug and Nathan Shirey of Jerome, and Preston, Dillon, Abby and Jackson Rowe of Boise, Idaho. Chuck is preceded in death by his parents; his wife, Linda; and brother, Richard.

His grandchildren will miss the way Grandpa Chuck would make bird chirping noises and then look around like a bird was flying by. Chuck had a way of joking with people that made everyone get a laugh; his sense of humor made him quite a character.

Visitation for family and friends will be held from 4 to 7 p.m. Friday, Oct. 26, at Demaray Funeral Service, Wendell Chapel. A graveside service will be held at 3 p.m. Saturday, Oct. 27, at the Wendell Cemetery in Wendell. A reception will follow the service Saturday at the Wendell Housing Senior Recreation Hall, 105 W. Ave A. in Wendell. His family encourages friends to gather with them and share their favorite stories of Chuck.

He had a soft spot for animals; in lieu of flowers, the family requests memorial donations be made in Chuck's name to the Idaho Humane Society, Attn: Chris Moore, 4775 Dorman St., Boise, ID 83705.

Special thanks to Legacy Hospice and Overland Court Assisted Living for the care Dad received while residing in Boise.

Arrangements are under the care and direction of Demaray Funeral Service, Wendell Chapel. Condolences may be sent to the family by visiting the obituary link at www.demaryfuneralservice.com.

Pin Your Pretty Potato Pics

TIMES-NEWS

TWIN FALLS • Is your potato photography pin-worthy?

The Idaho Potato Commission now hosts its "Recipe of the Month Photo Contest" on Pinterest.

"It's really the perfect platform for us to engage consumers who are passionate about food and photography. Not only will folks be able to proudly showcase their dishes to thousands of other foodies, they'll have a chance to win $250," president Frank Muir said in a commission release.

Since its 2011 launch, the contest has drawn home cooks and amateur photographers. At the beginning of every month, the commission posts a recipe on idahopotato.com, and participants have up to three weeks to submit their photos. The contest rules haven't changed, but now entrants can get their friends involved with repins and likes on Pinterest.

October's recipe is Idaho Potato Nachos, by chef Greg Hardesty of Recess and Room Four in Indianapolis. The photo contest deadline is Oct. 29.

To compete for the monthly $250 prize, follow the commission's boards on Pinterest at www.pinterest.com/idahopotato. Click on the "Recipe Photo Contest" pinboard, or visit pinterest.com/idahopotato/recipe-photo-contest/ to find the month's featured recipe. Prepare the recipe and take an original, digital photograph of your dish.

From your Pinterest home page, pin the photo with #photatocontest and tag the IPC at @IdahoPotatoes in the description. Post a link to your pin in the comment section on the contest announcement pin, or email it to famousidahopotatoes@gmail.com.

Billy Elser of Cactus Grill in Twin Falls holds a cake he makes for friends and family at Halloween. It looks like cat litter but has white and spice cake, instant vanilla pudding, green food coloring and ladyfinger cookies.

DISGUSTING!

A Twin Falls man's messy cake recipe is both a trick and a treat.

BY ANDREW WEEKS
aweeks@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • For some people, this is the best time of year — when they dress in costume, carve pumpkins and decorate their homes with ghosts and witches. And when it comes to ghoulish foods, these Halloween lovers are just as creative.

Take Billy Elser, for instance. His scary Halloween recipe is something that sends shivers down the spine if you just think about tasting it. His dish, which is just as much a trick as a treat, is something he calls Kitty Litter Cake.

"It's pretty nasty looking," he said.

Yes, it is.

The crumbly cake, which resembles cat litter, is topped with spots of green food coloring and half-buried brown lumps.

You know what those brown lumps represent, he said. But don't worry, they're just reshaped Tootsie Rolls.

Elser came up with the recipe years ago when he and his sister used to compete to see who could come up with the best, ickiest homemade Halloween dish. It was a fun way for the siblings to celebrate the ghoulish day, and they'd always try to outdo each other.

Elser's cake was a win.

These days, an Internet search will turn up recipes for similarly disgusting litter box cakes.

Elser, who owns Cactus Grill on Home Depot property in Twin Falls and plans to open a restaurant south of Hansen along Rock Creek Road in November, said Halloween is one of his favorite days. The cake is not something he serves at Cactus Grill, he said, but it's always a hit at Halloween parties and family gatherings. It draws plenty of "ewws" and "yucks" — it's presented in a real cat litter box and served with a kitty litter scoop.

Don't worry: The box and scoop are always new, never-used items.

Billy Elser mixes ingredients for his Kitty Litter Cake.

Kitty Litter Cake

Recipe courtesy of Billy Elser.

- 1 spice cake mix
- 1 white cake mix
- 2 packages instant vanilla pudding mix
- 1 (12-ounce) package ladyfinger cookies
- 6-8 drops green food coloring
- 1 (12-ounce) package Tootsie Rolls
- 1 new, never-used cat litter box
- 1 new, never-used cat litter scooper

Prepare cake mixes as directed on box, let cool. Prepare pudding mix as directed on box. Put ladyfingers in

Still, the gross factor abounds.

His wife, Laurie, remembers the first time she saw the cake. She wouldn't walk with him into a party. He went in first, and she followed a few minutes later.

"I didn't want to be seen with it," she said.

food processor or crush in a plastic bag.

Crumble both cakes and mix together, then mix in pudding a little at a time; you don't want it too wet, just enough to moisten it.

Then add crumbled cookies, setting aside half a cup. Mix that half-cup with the food coloring, then mix in with other ingredients.

Place Tootsie Rolls in microwave for 10 seconds, take them out and roll them between your fingers, then pinch the ends to make them look like real kitty poop. Place all ingredients in the litter box with the scoop, and there you have it: Kitty Litter Cake!

What did the partygoers think of the cake? The same thing everyone else thinks when they first see it, Laurie Elser said.

"It's a pretty icky, disgusting cake," she said. "But if you can get past the visual, it does taste good. ... It really is just a cake."

Restaurant Cellphone Distractions Still Irritate

BY MICHAEL HILL
Associated Press

The digital divide is wider than ever between diners who talk, tweet and snap pictures mid-meal and those who wish they'd just shut up, shut down and be present.

Caught at the center of the discord are restaurant owners and chefs, who must walk the careful line of good customer service for both those who dine under the influence of smart phones, and those who won't. But as the devices have morphed into an unrelenting appendage for texting, photography and games, more restaurateurs are challenged to keep the peace.

Owners who once relied mostly on "no cellphones, please" signs, increasingly are experimenting with everything from penalties for using phones, discounts for not and outright bans on photography.

"There's no place to get away from the chatter," said Julie Liberty of Miami, who started the Facebook page "Ban Cell Phones From Restaurants" earlier this year. "Everything has a soundtrack, including when you go into the ladies room. That's just not right!"

It's a touchy issue. Consider the crush of news coverage Eva Restaurant in Los Angeles generated when it began offering patrons a 5 percent discount if they leave their phone at the door. Online

"There's no place to get away from the chatter. Everything has a soundtrack, including when you go into the ladies room. That's just not right."

Julie Liberty of Miami, who started the Facebook page 'Ban Cell Phones From Restaurants' earlier this year

comments ranged from cheers of "YES!" to others who said their phones would have to be pried from their cold, dead hands.

The policy is working, though. Eva's Rom Toulon said about 40 percent of our customers will leave their cellphones at the door.

"After a few cocktails and glasses of wine, it can be challenging to remember that you left the phone behind," he said.

The burst of headlines for Eva came after a Burlington, Vt., deli took on cyber-folk hero status for posting a sign informing customers that $3 will be added to their bill "if you fail to get off your phone while at the counter. It's rude." Disgusted diners are doing their part too with games like "phone stack," in which everyone places their phones in a stack in the middle of the table. The first person who reaches for their phone pays the bill for all.

These are more creative approaches to the no cell-phone signs now common in restaurants ranging from highbrow to quick-eats. The landmark Boston restaurant Locke-Ober asks diners — in language appropriate for a place with a dress code — to "kindly refrain from using cellular phones." In Albany, N.Y., the Hamilton Street Cafe has a more direct, hand-drawn "No cell phones at the counter" sign with a phone with a red "X" through it.

Owner Sue Dayton said the sign by the counter helps keep the lunch line moving.

"You get a half-hour for lunch. You walk up here and you have to stand behind someone not paying attention enough to say what kind of bread they want on their BLT because they're on their cellphone," Dayton said.

Irritation over distracted dining has broadened with the rise of photo-sharing apps like Instagram. The popular online scrapbook Pinterest is clogged with pictures of everything from pan fried noodles to routine snapped moments before digestion. Chefs — who, as a rule, put a premium on control — don't always take kindly to their dining rooms becoming shooting galleries.

Grant Achatz, the famous Chicago-based molecular gastronomist, wrote a much-forwarded post several years ago grousing about diners who snap the meal away and even try to video his staff without asking permission. "I can't imagine how celebrities feel," he wrote. "No wonder they punch the paparazzi out when they get the chance."

Some restaurateurs go with the digital flow. Sarabeth Levine, of New York City-based Sarabeth's, said she's perfectly fine with people chatting, playing games or even taking pictures. It's free advertising, after all.

"I'm happy to have our customers," Levine said. "They come, they tweet, they Facebook, they bring their children. It's high energy to begin with. I mean, people are noisy even in the way they speak today."

How Much Is Too Much Dessert for Kids?

CASEY SEIDENBERG

Special to The Washington Post

My oldest son started at a new school where every single day he is offered a sugar-laden dessert with lunch. I have a beef with this. Kids shouldn't be taught that every meal, dinner or lunch ends with something sweet. This creates a habit and a craving that can be challenging to break later in life.

So how often should kids be given dessert?

There really isn't one right answer, because not all children are the same. Some are more susceptible to a sugar addiction, some eat healthfully throughout the day while others do not, and a toddler is a different creature than a teenager.

Let's first look at sugar sensitivity. Some kids are just more sensitive to sugar than others. According to Kathleen DesMaisons in her book "Little Sugar Addicts," "Certain people ... are born with an imbalance in three parts of their brain and body chemistry: They have low serotonin (the chemical that "quiets" the brain and helps with saying no), low beta-endorphin (the brain's own "painkiller"), and volatile blood sugar. These three disturbances set them up to react profoundly to the druglike effects of sugar." So pay attention to your child when she consumes sugar. A child who exhibits a negative response to too much sugar should have less, and probably shouldn't regularly have dessert.

A child who eats well on his own all day can probably have a sweet snack more often than a child who isn't getting enough nutrients in his body. Protein and healthful fats slow down the effect of sugar and simple carbohydrates, so a child eating well throughout the day might be less affected by any sugar consumed.

Age should also be taken into consideration when deciding how often a child should have dessert. To sum it up: Little people need little desserts. And dessert should be a completely foreign concept to really little people. My 18-month-old daughter doesn't yet know about dessert. She will learn about it soon enough from peers, school and her brothers, but for now, I see no reason to tell her about it.

Assuming your child eats healthfully all day, doesn't seem to be overly sensitive to sugar and is old enough to ask for dessert, why shouldn't she have dessert every night? Here are a few reasons:

Dessert has become a bargaining chip for getting children to eat dinner. It is tempting for parents to rely on dessert as a bribe or incentive to get dinner down. This sets up an unhealthy message that dinner is dreaded and dessert is to be desired.

Raising blood sugar before bedtime can inhibit a child's ability to fall asleep, and when the resulting sugar drop occurs, the body releases adrenaline so the child might experience a disruption in healthful sleep.

More than Just Another Sausage: A Chorizo Primer

BY J.M. HIRSCH

Associated Press

Chorizo is a bit like pornography. You'll know it when you see it, but it's a bit hard to define in the abstract.

That's because there are several hundred varieties of this sausage made across at least three continents, and many bear little resemblance to the others. Making matters worse, chorizo makers in the U.S. are a pretty freewheeling bunch. No matter what the packages say, it can be hard to know what you're getting.

The good news is that you don't need to sift through all that to understand why this meat is well worth working into your dinner repertoire.

At its most basic, chorizo is a sausage made from chopped or ground pork and a ton of seasonings, often including garlic. The flavors are deeply smoky and savory, with varying degrees of heat. Most are assertive and peppery, but not truly spicy.

The three main producers of chorizo are Spain, Portugal and Mexico. Spanish and Portuguese chorizo (the latter known as chourico) are most common in the U.S., but for many of the products sold here that's a distinction without a difference. In Spain, chorizo has a distinct red color thanks to ample seasoning with paprika. It is available in two main varieties — cooking and cured.

Cooking chorizo is coarse, crumbly, deliciously fatty, and jammed with spices (which vary by region). The meat can be smoked or plain. To use cooking chorizo, the casing must be removed. The meat then is crumbled and added to other meats or soups, or sauteed.

Cured chorizo is similarly seasoned — including the paprika — but is cured for at least two months. During this period, bacteria and salt work their flavor magic on the meat. The result is a salami-like sausage with big, bold, peppery flavor. Cured chorizo traditionally is thinly sliced and eaten at room temperature. It also can be finely chopped and cooked. Most chorizo sold in the U.S. is the cured style.

Portuguese chourico adds wine to the flavoring mix, and often is smoked. Most varieties can be thinly sliced and eaten as is, though it also can be cooked.

Mexican chorizo is made from fresh (not smoked) pork, and generally sports the seasonings we associate with Mexican cuisine, including chilies and cilantro.

While there are some cured varieties of Mexican chorizo, most should be cut open (discarding the casing), crumbled and cooked. Use the meat in just about any Mexican dish calling for meat (and big, big flavor), including nachos.

For more ideas for using all manner of chorizo, check out the Off the Beaten Aisle column over on Food Network: <http://bit.ly/O3jNHu>

Roasted Chicken with Chorizo and Root Veggies

Sometimes it's best to not overthink things. As in this basic roasted chicken, my take on a simple French classic. I love that everything is just tossed into a pot, put in the oven and ignored until done. The recipe calls for a cast-iron Dutch oven. These really are indispensable for making all manner of roasts and stews. And they are as happy on the burner as in the oven (where, when covered, their heavy lids seal in moisture). Start to finish: 1 hour (15 minutes active). Servings: 6.

1 teaspoon garlic powder
1 teaspoon kosher salt
3- to 4-pound whole chicken
1 tablespoon olive oil
1 pound cooking chorizo, casing removed and discarded, meat finely chopped
4 sprigs fresh thyme
3 sprigs (each about 4 inches long) fresh rosemary
1 medium yellow onion, quartered
12-ounce bag baby carrots
1 pound new potatoes
1 lemon, quartered
6 cloves garlic, peeled but left whole
Ground black pepper, to taste

Heat the oven to 350 degrees.

Combine the salt and garlic powder, then rub the mixture over and under the skin of the chicken. Set aside.

In a 5 1/2-quart (or larger) Dutch oven over medium-high, heat the oil. Add the chicken and sear for 5 minutes per side. Transfer the chicken to a plate.

Add the chorizo to the pan, then saute for 4 minutes. Add the thyme and rosemary. Heat for 30 seconds.

Return the chicken to the pan, breast up. Arrange the onion, carrots, potatoes, lemon and garlic around the chicken, then place the lid on the pot. Transfer to the oven and roast for 45 minutes, or until the breast reads 160 F on an instant thermometer.

Transfer the chicken to a platter and tent with foil.

Use a slotted spoon to transfer the vegetables and chorizo to a serving bowl. Cover to keep warm. Discard the lemon quarters and any herb stems.

Place the pot over medium heat and bring to a boil. Cook until reduced and thickened, about 3 to 4 minutes. Adjust seasoning with salt and pepper. Serve the sauce drizzled over the chicken.

Wine Gets in the Spirit with New Liquor Blends

BY MICHELLE LOCKE
Associated Press

Cognac blended with moscato? Pink wine mixed with port? And how about a mashup of sparkling white wine and vodka? Hard liquor is showing a softer side as producers shake things up with new blends that put wine and spirits in the same bottle.

"Companies are going out of the box," observes Ted Carmon, spirits buyer for the Bev-Mo! liquor chain.

There's no official category name so far — Spirited wines? Laid-back liquors? — but Carmon traces liquor's "anything goes" movement to Pinnacle Whipped, the wildly popular whipped-cream flavored vodka that came out a couple of years ago. "That really rewrote the rules on what kind of flavors could be used."

Bill Newlands, president of Beam Inc., which bought Pinnacle Vodka earlier this year, sees the intensely flavored Whipped as playing into a trend of consumers "whether it's an alcohol beverage or anything else, looking for more flavor reward." They're looking for two things, he says, "flavor and flavor intensity."

That quest influenced Beam's latest product, Courvoisier Gold, which blends French cognac with moscato wine from the South of France. Research indicated customers, particularly women, wanted a cognac with less alcohol but more flavor, and Gold answers on both counts coming in at 36 proof, or 18 percent alcohol by volume, well below the 40 percent (80 proof) of traditional cognac. Suggested retail for a 750-milliliter bottle is $24.99.

Gold follows last year's introduction of Courvoisier Rose, which blends cognac with French red wine grapes. Both blends can be drunk on the rocks or mixed into cocktails.

Gold and Rose are both grape-on-grape affairs since cognac, a type of brandy made in the Cognac wine region in France, is a distilled grape spirit.

But TUNE, a new product from ABSOLUT, goes in a different direction, blending grain-based vodka with a sparkling white wine, New Zealand sauvignon blanc to be precise. It comes in a Champagne-style bottle decorated with gold stars, swirls and other patterns which has an outer wrapper of silver, black and gold that "unzips" for presentation pizzazz. TUNE, so named for the dual notes of vodka and wine, is 14 percent alcohol by volume and has a suggested retail of $31.99.

Another beverage taking a lighter touch is Croft Pink, which is a port (not a liquor but wine that's been fortified by addition of a spirit). Croft traces its roots to 1588, making classic ruby and tawny ports. Croft Pink is made from traditional port grapes but with light contact between the wine and the grape skins, resulting in a light ruby color. It was made with cocktails in mind to introduce port to a new audience. Alcohol content is 19.5 percent by volume, similar to traditional port. Suggested retail is $19.99 for a 750-milliliter bottle.

Pot au Feu Updated (and Healthy) for Modern Cooks

BY SARA MOULTON
Associated Press

This is my untraditional weeknight version of the traditional French stew known as pot au feu, a dish that dates back to medieval times. I decided it was time for an update.

Called "the perpetual stew" by the English, the dish was "an ever-changing broth enriched daily with whatever was available," according to Reay Tannahill in "Food in History." "The cauldron was rarely emptied out."

French chef Raymond Blanc described it with a little more love in a recent interview with the London Observer: "Pot-au feu, the quintessence of French family cuisine, is the most celebrated dish in France. It honors the tables of the rich and poor alike."

The problem for a home cook in the 21st century is that it took — and takes — a long time to make a traditional pot au feu. Alexandre Dumas, in his 1873 "Dictionary of Cuisine," stipulated that you had to simmer the beef for seven hours in the bouillon you'd simmered for seven hours the day before.

You can knock out my variation in about 40 minutes.

You start with root vegetables, chicken stock and flank steak garnished with wasabi instead of mustard. I enlisted three root vegetables that play very nicely together: carrots, parsnips and turnips. (The two sweet ones tame the funky turnip, and you're welcome to toss some beets into the mix, too.) What's great is that the root vegetables perfume the broth in a mere 15 to 18 minutes.

Meanwhile, you don't braise the steak, as you would in pot-au-feu. Instead, you saute it in a skillet and cook it to medium-rare. Then you thinly slice it and top it with the hot broth and some wasabi "cream." This cream is wasabi combined with yogurt. If you don't have a can of dried wasabi powder at hand, Dijon mustard or bottled horseradish will certainly do. Beef loves any and all of these spicy members of the brassicaceae family.

Please note that powdered wasabi is not true wasabi. It is horseradish, powdered and dyed. But actual fresh wasabi, a very perishable rhizome, is hard to find and very expensive. And powdered wasabi does pack its own unique heat and flavor, so don't feel bad using that.

Its distinguished lineage notwithstanding, I think of pot au feu as a cross between a clear soup and a thin stew, a French version of Jewish chicken soup, only made with beef. It's wonderfully homey and restorative, exactly the sort of dish I'd like to be served on a cold blustery day or when I was feeling a bit under the weather. Try it and see for yourself.

Steak in Autumn Broth with Wasabi

Start to finish: 40 minutes
(20 minutes active). Servings: 4.

6 cups low-sodium chicken broth
2 medium carrots (about 6 ounces), peeled and sliced 1/2 inch thick
2 medium parsnips (about 10 ounces), peeled and sliced 1/2 inch thick
2 small turnips (about 8 ounces), peeled, quartered and sliced 1/2 inch thick
1 medium leek, white part only, halved lengthwise, sliced 1/2 inch thick and rinsed well
2 cloves garlic, minced
1 sprig fresh thyme (or 1 teaspoon dried)
1 bay leaf (preferably Turkish)
2 teaspoons olive oil
1 pound flank steak
Kosher salt and ground black pepper
1/3 cup fat-free plain Greek yogurt

1 teaspoon prepared wasabi
Chopped fresh chives or parsley, to garnish

In a large saucepan over medium-high heat, combine the broth, carrots, parsnips, turnips, leek, garlic, thyme sprig and bay leaf. Bring to a boil and simmer for 15 to 18 minutes, or until the vegetables are tender.

Meanwhile, in a large skillet over high, heat the oil. Season the steak with salt and pepper.

When the oil in the skillet is hot, reduce the heat to medium-high and add the steak. Saute until well browned on both sides and medium-rare at the center, 8 to 10 minutes total. Transfer the beef to a plate, cover loosely with foil, and let rest 5 minutes. After 5 minutes, thinly slice the beef against the grain.

In a small bowl, stir together the yogurt, wasabi and any juices from the beef plate. Season with salt and pepper. Discard the thyme sprig and bay leaf, then divide the vegetables and broth among 4 soup bowls. Arrange a quarter of the steak in the center of each bowl and top each portion with a spoonful of the wasabi cream and a sprinkle of chives.

Refreshed Cocktails Overcome Sour Memories

JASON WILSON

Special to The Washington Post

I have two indelible scars from the tart, citrus-inflected family of drinks we call "sour."

New Year's Day, New Jersey, 1979: I am 8, searching the refrigerator for a morning beverage. I see what looks like our regular plastic juice pitcher — the one Mom usually dumps the frozen concentrate in, then stirs with water. On this day, the juice smells a little funny, but I pour some anyway for me and my 5-year-old brother. We take a gulp. Yuckiest O.J. ever!

Just then, my mother groggily pads into the kitchen and, with alarm, registers what is happening: "No! Spit it out! That's the whiskey sour from last night!"

Spring Break, Florida, 1992: I am at a beach bar. The sunshine is bearing down on my pasty-white posse of college boys and girls from Vermont. A Jimmy Buffett-esque musician plays guitar and sings, badly. He breaks into the Eagles' "Tequila Sunrise" and someone decides to order a round of the bartender's "signature" tequila sunrise, heavy on the orange juice (from concentrate) and fluorescent grenadine. And then they order another. And another. Maybe a few more.

The next morning, the damage is tallied: a lost wallet, a lost camera, a lost relationship, lost dignity, at least one raging headache. "I can never drink orange juice ever again," someone says.

Suffice to say my early introduction to sour was less than successful. But it stands to reason. By the late 20th century, the sour — along with its cousins, the Collins, the fizz and the daisy — had become a collective abomination. The major reason, of course, was the creation of artificial sour mix to replace fresh-squeezed citrus.

The sour once occupied a place of pride at the bar. "When American meets American then comes the whiskey sour," declared the Atlanta Daily Constitution in 1879. From the 1860s into the 1960s, the sour was "one of the cardinal points of American drinking," according to historian David Wondrich in his 2007 book on early American cocktails, "Imbibe" (Perigee Trade).

A sour is a simple drink: base spirit, citrus juice and a sweetener, such as simple syrup. Within cocktail circles, there is much discussion over small points of taxonomy between sour and similar drinks. To wit, a Collins is a sour that is built over ice, with soda water; a fizz is a Collins that is shaken, often with egg white; a daisy uses a liqueur or grenadine as a sweetener, rather than simple syrup.

A true tequila sunrise, for instance, is simply a tequila daisy. The original, served in Prohibition-era Tijuana, used lime instead of orange juice and creme de cassis instead of grenadine. If we think about the Spanish word for daisy, then we can begin to understand how another very famous drink evolved from the sour family. Just switch out the creme de cassis for an orange liqueur like Cointreau, and the margarita is born.

The introduction of orange juice into sour cocktails — into any cocktail, really — has always been a source of consternation. As Wondrich writes, in pre-Prohibition days it was "not an acceptable cocktail ingredient." Perhaps it is my own history, but orange juice has never been my favorite ingredient, either.

But a few weeks ago, I rummaged around a used-book sale and came across a 1995 edition of Charles Schumann's "American Bar." What makes Schumann's cocktail guide a curious American classic is that Schumann is German, owner of a famed bar in Munich. The mid-1990s were pretty dark days for American cocktails. They followed a bad decade of drinks such as Fuzzy Navels and Amaretto Sours and Redheaded Sluts — and lots of orange juice and sour mix and peach schnapps.

It was interesting to see how Schumann was a man of his era, yet able to elevate his drinks to something higher. For instance, his Apple Brandy Sour is a perfect marriage of spirit and fruit: a fresh autumn day in a glass.

Even more surprising is his Apple Sunrise, an apple-brandy-based take on the old tequila sunrise. Schumann calls for orange juice, which is a very 1980s choice. He then eschews grenadine, opting for creme de cassis. The result is surprising and delicious. It made me rethink a number of things beyond the tequila sunrise. My childhood. The '90s. Orange juice.

Apple Brandy Sour

1 serving. This rich, autumnal rendition is made with apple brandy: either Calvados from France or a good domestic apple brandy, such as Clear Creek or Laird's 7 1/2 Year Old Apple Brandy. Rather than use one of those too-sweet, neon-colored maraschino cherries from a jar, try making your own. See Todd Thrasher's recipe for Preserved Cherries in the Recipe Finder at washingtonpost.com/recipes. Adapted from "American Bar," by Charles Schumann (Abbeville Press, 1995).

Ice

1 ounce freshly squeezed lemon juice
1/2 ounce simple syrup (see note)
1 1/2 ounces apple brandy
Preserved or maraschino cherry, for garnish

Fill a cocktail shaker

halfway with ice. Add the lemon juice, simple syrup and brandy. Shake well, then strain into a rocks or old fashioned glass. Garnish with the cherry.

Note: To make simple syrup, combine 1/2 cup of sugar and 1/2 cup of water in a small saucepan over medium heat, stirring until the sugar dissolves. Bring to a slow, rolling boil, then reduce the heat to medium-low and cook for 5 minutes. Transfer to a heat-proof container and let cool to room temperature. It can be refrigerated, covered, for several months.

Apple Sunrise

1 serving. Here's an apple-brandy-fueled twist on the classic Tequila Sunrise. Look for creme de cassis from Dijon, France. For the apple brandy, use Calvados from France or a good domestic version, such as Clear Creek or Laird's 7 1/2 Year Old. Adapted from "American Bar."

Ice cubes

1/4 ounce freshly squeezed lemon juice
1/4 ounce creme de cassis
1 1/2 ounces apple brandy
2 ounces freshly squeezed orange juice

Fill a highball or Collins glass with ice. Pour the lemon juice into the glass, then the creme de cassis, then the brandy and finally the orange juice. Stir gently.

A Primal Experience: Chicago-style Barbecue

THE WASHINGTON POST

Barbecue is often referred to as a primal experience. And there's nothing more primal than pork rib tips: short, meaty sections of rib that are attached to the spare ribs. Ask a butcher to cut off the rib tips for you; or buy 2 full spare ribs racks and use a cleaver to remove the tips. You'll need to soak 1 cup of hardwood chips in water for 1 hour.

The rib tips need to rest in their spice rub for at least 1 hour and up to overnight.

Adapted from "America's Best BBQ: 100 Recipes from America's Best Smokehouses, Pits, Shacks, Rib Joints, Roadhouses, and Restaurants," by Ardie Davis and Paul Kirk (Andrews McMeel, 2009).

Chicago Rib Tips

6 servings.

1/4 cup packed light brown sugar
2 tablespoons salt
1 tablespoon chili powder
2 teaspoons finely ground black pepper
1 teaspoon cayenne pepper
1 teaspoon Old Bay seasoning
1 teaspoon rubbed sage
1 teaspoon onion powder
4 pounds (2 racks) pork rib tips

Combine the brown sugar, salt, chili powder, black pepper, cayenne pepper, Old Bay, sage and onion powder in a medium bowl. Stir well, making sure there are no clumps.

Rub the spice mixture onto the rib tips. Set the rib tips aside for at least an hour at room temperature; or wrap them in foil and refrigerate overnight.

Prepare the grill for indirect heat: If using a gas grill, preheat to 250 degrees; for a two-burner grill, use one burner and leave the other unlit; for three or more burners, leave the center burners unlit. If using a charcoal grill, light the charcoal or wood briquettes; when the briquettes are ready, distribute them on one-half of the grill.

When the fire is ready, drain the wood chips and add them to the coals. If using a gas grill, use a smoker box or make an aluminum foil pouch and set the chips inside it; puncture the pouch on top with a few fork holes to release smoke. Place the pouch or smoker box on the flavorizer bars.

Place the rib tips directly over the heat source for about 3 minutes, then turn them over and grill for 3 minutes. Use tongs to move them to the cool side of the grate.

Close the grill lid. Smoke the rib tips at 225 to 250 degrees for 4 to 5 hours, until the meat tears easily. If you like, add sauce during the last 30 minutes of cooking. Chop the rib tips into individual pieces. Serve with Chicago-Style Rib Tip BBQ Sauce.

Chicago-Style Rib Tip BBQ Sauce

Chicago-style rib tip sauce tends to be a little thin and kind of funky – in a good way. It isn't hot, but it has a little sting. It practically dissolves into the meat and makes for a beautiful mess. The sauce can be refrigerated in a sealed container for up to 1 week. Makes about 1 cup.

1/3 cup ketchup
1/3 cup pineapple juice
1/4 cup packed light brown sugar
2 tablespoons granulated sugar
2 tablespoons apple cider vinegar
1 teaspoon Tabasco or similar hot sauce
1 tablespoon chili powder
1 teaspoon powdered mustard
1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce
1 teaspoon kosher salt
1/2 teaspoon finely ground black pepper
1/2 teaspoon garlic powder
1/2 teaspoon ground celery seed

Combine the ketchup, pineapple juice, the sugars, vinegar, hot sauce, chili powder, powdered mustard, Worcestershire sauce, salt, pepper, garlic powder and ground celery seed in a small saucepan over medium-low heat. Cook, stirring occasionally, for 30 minutes, adjusting the heat so the mixture is barely bubbling at the edges. Let the sauce cool to room temperature. Serve at room temperature, or cover and refrigerate for up to a week.

Say 'NO' to abusing the Constitution Vote NO on HJR 2!

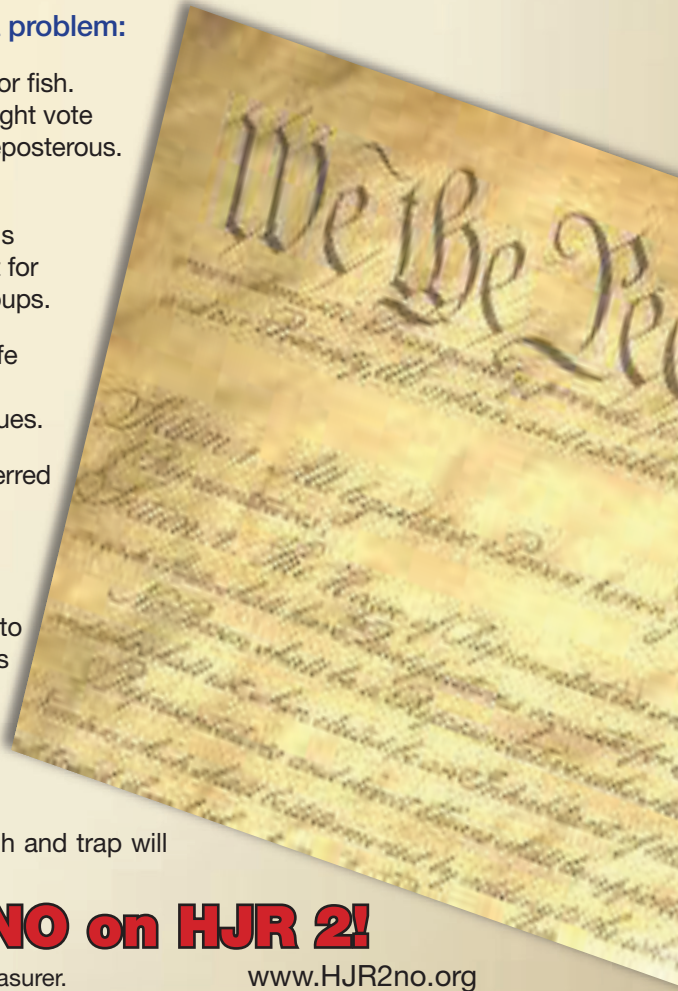

HJR 2 is a misguided solution looking for a problem:

- There are no threats to Idahoans' rights to hunt or fish. The claim that the Legislature or Idaho citizens might vote to ban fishing or deer hunting or elk hunting is preposterous.
- The Idaho Constitution should be reserved for protecting basic democratic rights. Passage of this proposed amendment would set a bad precedent for changing the Constitution to benefit particular groups.
- If HJR 2 is passed, new laws pertaining to wildlife would be challenged as unconstitutional. Idaho taxpayers would spend money litigating these issues.
- By making hunting, fishing and trapping a "preferred means of managing wildlife," HJR 2 would hinder the Department of Fish and Game in its use of other management tools.
- HJR 2 includes a perpetual guarantee of a right to trap wildlife. Unlike hunting and fishing, trapping is a cruel and prolonged way to kill animals, as well as a threat to pets and hunting dogs. Passage of HJR 2 would interfere with future regulations regarding trapping.
- If HJR 2 is defeated, existing rights to hunt, fish and trap will remain in effect.

Please vote NO on HJR 2!

Paid for by No on HJR 2, Carol Comtaruk treasurer.

ISU Suspends Kramer for Montana Game

ASSOCIATED PRESS

POCATELLO • Idaho State football coach Mike Kramer has been suspended for his team's game at Montana on Saturday for violating the university's conduct policy, athletic director Jeff Tingey said Tuesday.

The suspension came as Kramer was being investigated by the university and Pocatello police after wide receiver Derek Graves reported that Kramer shoved him to the ground during practice on Oct. 3.

Video obtained by ESPN shows Kramer running toward a player on the field, putting his face close to the player's helmet and shoving him with two hands. The player falls to the turf. Graves' attorney, Don Jackson, said his client suffered neck and back spasms after the fall.

Graves reported the incident to Pocatello police on Oct. 14, saying he missed two games and hadn't been cleared by doctors to play yet. He missed his third game Saturday as the Bengals fell 52-14 at Northern Colorado.

Idaho State associate head coach Don Bailey will serve as the acting head coach on Saturday as Idaho State (1-6, 0-4 Big Sky) takes on Montana (3-5, 1-4) in Missoula.

The university said it would have no further comment because the matter was a personnel issue.

was not immediately returned Tuesday.

Pocatello City Attorney Dan Tranmer told the Idaho State Journal on Monday that the police investigation is wrapping up. He said the city legal department has yet to determine whether any charge may be filed against Kramer.

Kramer is in his second season at Idaho State. Before that, he had been out of coaching for four years. He was fired by Montana State in 2007 following at least five drug-related arrests of current or former players.

Kramer later settled a wrongful discharge lawsuit filed against Montana State.

DECLO • At Declo High School, volleyball is all about fundamentals.

Specifically, the "fun" and the "mental" parts.

Since Keri Wilson took over as head coach of the Declo volleyball program three years ago, she hasn't just taught technique, like digging or hitting a ball.

More than anything, she's worked on the mental aspect of the game.

"I think volleyball is 95 percent mental and five percent physical," Wilson said.

Through various methods and goal-setting exercises, Wilson has improved the Hornets' mental toughness, which the players themselves attribute to the team's back-to-back 2A District IV championships.

"We work on it every day," said senior setter Kelcie Carpenter. "She always tells us to be positive and keeping positive really helps us play because when we're down on ourselves we play like crap."

The results are evident — on and off the court.

Declo, which had had only made one state tournament appearance in the decade previous to Wilson's tenure, plays in its second consecutive state tourney this weekend at Hillcrest High School in Ammon. The Hornets open against Nampa Christian at 8 a.m. Friday.

What's more, Declo's volleyball team is the 2A academic state champions with a 3.83 team GPA.

Wilson said she's prouder of the academic state title than any trophy the team might earn on the court this weekend.

"It says a lot for these girls and how hard they work," Wilson said.

BSU Defense Continues to Dominate Opposition

BOISE • Defensive back Dextrell Simmons is reluctant to call No. 21 Boise State's near-collapse in the second half against New Mexico four weeks ago a turning point.

Yet by nearly any measure since the Lobos rushed for 330 yards and put up 29 points in a second-half rally that fell short, the Broncos defense has been as tough as any in the nation at keeping foes out of the end zone and been the driving force behind the team's six-game winning streak.

The Broncos (6-1, 3-0 Mountain West) have muscled their way into top 10 slots for several defensive categories, including pass defense (158 yards per game), pass efficiency defense (95.6) and points allowed (13.5). Their 22 turnovers rank second among FBS schools, three behind takeaway leader SMU, and three times this season they have held opposing quarterbacks to fewer than DECLO • With just over two minutes remaining in Declo's 52-0 win at Oakley last Friday, Hornets head coach Kelly Kidd made a gesture of appreciation to one of the team's unsung heroes.

Senior offensive lineman Jack Darrington lined up at quarterback, took the shotgun snap, dropped back and fired a perfect pass for a 36-yard touchdown.

"I know the plays. If worse came to worse, I'm probably third or fourth quarterback on the depth chart," said Darrington, only half-joking.

It's not the first time Kidd has allowed one of his linemen to play a skill position. Over the years he's been known to allow a lineman to carry the football or catch a pass.

"You block your entire life, sometimes you need a little fun," Kidd said.

It was a reward well earned. Darrington and his fellow linemen are the biggest reason Declo averages 518 yards of offense per game — and most of that has come in three quarters of work as the Hornets blew out seven of their eight opponents.

Darrington's career QB passer rating is an impressive 158.3, but now all the fun and games are over as Declo (8-0) prepares for the 2A state playoffs, beginning Friday at home vs. Aberdeen.

Does the team feel different practicing this week?

"It got cold," said Darrington. "It got cold and all of the sudden stuff got real. We're excited. The community is excited to see us really start to play."

It's already been a record-shattering season for the Hornets, and running back Jason Gillette is closing in on another school mark. He has scored 25 touchdowns, three shy of Jason Webb's record set in 1998.

Gillette has rushed for 1,076 yards this season, but his production only accounts for 38 percent Declo's total rushing output of 2,808 yards. Add in another 1,335 yards passing, and it's easy to recognize why the Hornets average 53 points per game.

Akey Speaks After Firing

BY JOSH WRIGHT

For the Times-News

MOSCOW • Robb Akey sent a text message to his assistants early Sunday morning to give them a heads up: They were going to meet that afternoon to regroup after Idaho's blowout loss the night before and talk about recruiting during the Vandals' bye week.

Akey had no idea then the meeting would end up becoming a tearful goodbye.

Akey said Tuesday that he was blindsided when athletic director Rob Spear called him into his office to talk about the program and then alerted him that he was being dismissed.

Spear and Idaho president Duane Nellis "had made the determination it was time to split ways, and they were doing it now," Akey said in a phone interview from his home in Moscow. "I was to have my office cleaned out by Monday at 5 o'clock."

Akey said he understands his won-loss record at Idaho — 20-50 in five-plus seasons — "wasn't good enough." But he also suggested Idaho's timing to let him go midseason was done in part for financial reasons.

Akey was set to receive $105,000 of his roughly $375,000 salary at the end of the season. By being let go Sunday, with a month of the season remaining, he won't see that money — though he will be paid his base annual salary ($165,796) through the end of 2014 if he doesn't find a job before then.

"If I had coached four more games," he said, "they would have had to pay me a third of my salary. You lose a third of your salary it affects your ability to feed your family, so it's a little disappointing."

After he and Spear had a short conversation, Akey described the rest of the day as "very, very, very emotional." He went home to tell his wife, Molly, and two sons, Jack and Daniel. Then he headed back to the Kibbie Dome to inform his staff and players.

"I told them, 'I'm not quitting on you, but they've decided you guys are better without me through the end of the season,'" Akey recalled.

Akey said his relationship with Spear, who hired him before the 2007 season, was businesslike.

"We talked about what needed to be talked about it, and that's about it," he said.

"That was our relationship. It's been that way for awhile."

Asked about Idaho going independent next years and the challenges the new coach will face, Akey said, "Those are going to be hard battles to win in recruiting when you don't have a conference to back you up and the things that's come being in a conference — being an all-conference player, play for bowl games and those types of things. Those are some of the challenges I thought that were going to be out there for us."

Akey, a longtime defensive assistant at Weber State and Washington State before coming to Moscow, said he would be open to taking a job as an assistant next season.

For now, he wants to enjoy his family. But he's also itching to get back to work.

"I know I'm bored to death right now," he said. "It didn't take long. I don't know how to do nothing."

But Declo's dominance doesn't end on the offensive side of the football. The Hornets' starting defense has only allowed two touchdowns — both to Buhl — all season.

"The biggest thing for our defense is remembering there are 10 other really good players on the field. You don't have to be the one to make every play, just do your job," said Darrington.

But perhaps the most telling statistic, the one that could be the difference-maker in this team's quest for a state championship in November, is Declo's grade point average. With a collective 3.45 GPA, the Hornets are the 2012 2A academic state champions.

Kidd said he has seen the players' intelligence translate to the field, as they often take initiative and can process things quickly. They recognize situations and problem-solve on the fly. They retain information, think critically and are dedicated to finishing what they start.

"We have progressed further with scheme than we ever have in the past," Kidd said. "... I think that's what sets this team apart from some of the other teams we've had. These kids are so bright. They're so football savvy."

CSI, which defeated Lamar, Otero and Sheridan colleges but lost to Casper in the two days of scrimmages in Casper, Wyo., is hoping to show fans how much they've improved since the Basketball Bash two weeks ago.

"I thought the games we won (in Casper) we ran the offense and we guarded," CSI head coach Steve Gosar said. "When we lost to Casper we didn't execute. We broke off plays and we let the ball pressure get to us."

The Golden Eagles hope to show a lot of ball and player movement, the wares of a fully-implemented motion offense.

"Motion is always tough early, but it gets better as time goes on and it gets really good late," Gosar said. "We've put a lot of stuff in with these guys. More than we have in the past."

University of Utah transfer Kareem Storey will make his first appearance for the Golden Eagles.

lessons are paying big dividends now.

"This year the standards are the same. We still want to win ... and be the best defense," said Simmons. "Last year we had big-name guys and you come in and think there are no big-name guys this year. But it's the same guys that were under those big-name guys and now they're just taking it to a whole new level."

The Broncos, locked in a tie atop the conference with Nevada, are getting ready to travel to Wyoming on Saturday. The Cowboys (1-6, 0-3) will be without head coach Dave Christensen, who was suspended for one week and fined $50,000 Monday for his actions following an Oct. 13 loss to Air Force.

Christensen confronted Falcons coach Troy Calhoun on the field after Air Force's 28-27 victory. He accused the Falcons of faking an injury to their starting quarterback in the fourth quarter so they could set up the next play without taking a time out. Air Force took the lead on the next play when backup quarterback Kale Pearson scored on a bootleg.

a fumble and scampered 16 yards for a touchdown to give Boise State a 25-0 halftime edge. The defense also accounted for the only touchdowns in a 17-13 season opening loss at Michigan State and a 7-6 victory two weeks later against BYU.

The performance of the defense has been a pleasant surprise.

The defense was expected to be in a rebuilding mode following the graduations of eight starters, including players like Shea McClellin, Billy Winn and Tyrone Crawford, all stalwarts on the defensive line who are now playing the NFL.

But as Simmons and his teammates have pointed out for weeks, Boise State's rotation system enabled many of the players wreaking havoc this season to get valuable experience last year. And those

Way back in spring training, Hunter Pence hit a wicked grounder that smacked Miguel Cabrera in the face. A few months later, Pablo Sandoval launched a bases-loaded triple off Justin Verlander in the All-Star game.

Here they all are again, with everything at stake. Tigers-Giants in the World Series.

A driven team from Detroit, loaded with power bats and arms, guided by wily Jim Leyland and coming off an impressive sweep. A surging squad from San Francisco, boosted by its rotation and talented catcher Buster Posey, fresh from a Game 7 win over defending champion St. Louis.

A Triple Crown winner in Cabrera versus a perfect-game pitcher in Matt Cain. The Motor City vs. the City by the Bay, starting with Game 1 today in the California twilight.

"I'll have to learn a lot about them real soon, to be honest," Giants manager Bruce Bochy said.

"I know what a great club they are. And we know all about the guy we're going to be facing opening day and their whole staff," he said. "They swept the Yankees. That tells you how good they are."

Verlander will throw the first pitch for the Tigers. Bochy said he hasn't looked that far in advance.

It's certainly a unique pairing. Both franchises have been around for well over a century and are stacked with Hall of Famers — Willie Mays, Ty Cobb, Carl Hubbell, Al Kaline and many more — yet they've never faced each other in the post-season.

Not too much recent history, either. The clubs have played only 12 games since interleague action began in 1997, most recently last year at Comerica Park. That series was notable because the Tigers fired pitching coach Rick Knapp following the final game, a day after Barry Zito and the Giants trounced

Max Scherzer in a 15-3 romp. "From Day One of spring training, we're getting ready for this," Giants center fielder Angel Pagan said. "We're going to be ready. We're going to just keep playing baseball like we do."

Much has changed since then.

Prince Fielder arrived in Detroit this year after a season-ending injury to Victor Martinez, and teamed with Cabrera as a most formidable tandem in the middle of the lineup.

Melky Cabrera joined the Giants and won MVP honors at the All-Star game. A month later, he was suspended 50 games by Major League Baseball for a positive testosterone test. He isn't on the postseason roster.

The Giants bolstered their infield by trading for scrappy Marco Scutaro in late July, and he became the MVP of the NL championship series. They fortified their outfield a few days later by getting Pence from Philadelphia.

Earlier this year, Pence's bad-hop grounder broke a bone below Cabrera's eye and caused a bloody gash that needed eight stitches to close. Cabrera recovered fine, and will be the first Triple Crown winner to play in the World Series since Carl Yastrzemski and Boston lost in 1967.

There's been a lot of shuffling in the bullpen this year.

Closer Brian Wilson helped San Francisco win the 2010 World Series, but is out this season because of an elbow injury. The bearded reliever became a loud cheerleader in the dugout as the Giants overcame a 2-0 deficit against Cincinnati in the best-of-five division series, then rallied from a 3-1 hole to beat the Cardinals in the NLCS.

San Francisco closed out the Cards 9-0 on Monday night, getting the final out in a driving rainstorm at AT&T Park.

The Tigers, back in the World Series for the first time since 2006 and trying to win their first crown since Sparky Anderson's gang in 1984, relied on excitable closer Jose Valverde until the playoffs. But when he struggled against the Athletics and Yankees, Leyland looked for other options.

Leyland has clearly had time to prepare for this matchup — not that it's a good thing. The Tigers will have had five days off since dismantling the Yankees, and the 67-year-old manager has done more than figure out how to use ALCS MVP Delmon Young when there's no designated hitter at in San Francisco.

The Tigers also had nearly a week off before starting the 2006 World Series, and the team from the Rust Belt looked rusty. Detroit pitchers made five errors in a five-game wipeout by the Cardinals.

A troubling trend, perhaps: Three previous times one LCS ended in a sweep while the other went seven games, and each time the team that played Game 7 easily won the World Series.

Then again, the Tigers have Verlander totally rested for the opener.

The reigning AL MVP and Cy Young Award winner is dominating this postseason, going 3-0 with a 0.74 ERA, striking out 25 in 24 1-3 innings. Hardly the form he flashed in the All-Star game, when he couldn't control his 100 mph heat and Sandoval's triple highlighted a five-run first inning.

Cain wound up with the win, the NL romped and earned home-field advantage in the World Series.

Zito is likely to pitch Game 1 for Bochy's bunch. Left off the postseason roster in 2010 — his poor pitching didn't fit with the Giants' self-described group of "misfits" — he has resurrected his career this year and made a key start in the NLCS.

Not so sure is what will become of Tim Lincecum. A star on the title team two years ago, the shaggy-haired two-time Cy Young winner struggled this season. Bumped from the playoff rotation, he excelled in the bullpen and earned a start, but was shaky in Game 4 against St. Louis.

Detroit Tigers pitcher Justin Verlander.

ANSWER: Even though you have only three spades, this hand is ideal for a takeout double. Here, when you double one no-trump, you show an opening hand and the values to double one heart for takeout. Partner will either pass with a penalty double of hearts or describe his hand appropriately.

C 539-2447 / 539-3227

Today is Wednesday, Oct. 24, the 298th day of 2012. There are 68 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight:
On Oct. 24, 1962, a naval quarantine of Cuba ordered by President John F. Kennedy went into effect during the missile crisis; the blockade was aimed at interdicting the delivery of offensive weapons to the island.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:
In 1537, Jane Seymour, the third wife of England's King Henry VIII, died 12 days after giving birth to Prince Edward, later King Edward VI.

In 1648, the Peace of Westphalia ended the Thirty Years War and effectively destroyed the Holy Roman Empire.

In 1861, the first transcontinental telegraph message was sent by Chief Justice Stephen J. Field of California from San Francisco to President Abraham Lincoln in Washington, D.C., over a line built by the Western Union Telegraph Co.

In 1901, widow Anna Edson Taylor became the first person to go over Niagara Falls in a barrel.

In 1939, Benny Goodman and his orchestra recorded their signature theme, "Let's Dance," for Columbia Records in New York. Nylon stockings were first sold publicly in Wilmington, Del.

In 1940, the 40-hour work week went into effect under the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938.

In 1945, the United Nations officially came into existence as its charter took effect.

In 1952, Republican presidential candidate Dwight D. Eisenhower declared in Detroit, "I shall go to Korea" as he promised to end the conflict. (He made the visit over a month later.)

In 1962, "The Manchurian Candidate," a Cold War thriller starring Frank Sinatra, was first released.

In 1972, Hall of Famer Jackie Robinson, who'd broken Major League Baseball's color barrier in 1947, died in Stamford, Conn., at age 53.

In 1987, 30 years after it was expelled, the Teamsters union was welcomed back into the AFL-CIO. (However, the Teamsters disaffiliated themselves from the AFL-CIO in 2005.)

In 1992, the Toronto Blue Jays became the first non-U.S. team to win the World Series as they defeated the Atlanta Braves, 4-3, in Game 6.

Ten years ago: Authorities apprehended Army veteran John Allen Muhammad and teenager Lee Boyd Malvo near Myersville, Md., in the Washington-area sniper attacks. (Malvo was later sentenced to life in prison without the possibility of parole; Muhammad was sentenced to death and executed in 2009.) The San Francisco Giants defeated the Anaheim Angels, 16-4, to take 3-2 lead in the World Series.

Five years ago: Rapidly rising Internet star Facebook Inc. sold a 1.6 percent stake to Microsoft Corp. for $240 million, spurning a competing offer from online search leader Google Inc. The Boston Red Sox flattened the Colorado Rockies in their World Series opener at Fenway Park, 13-1.

One year ago: President Barack Obama offered mortgage relief to hundreds of thousands of Americans during a visit to Las Vegas. Defense Secretary Leon Panetta, visiting Yokota Air Base in Japan, lashed out at North Korea for "reckless and provocative" acts and criticized China for a secretive expansion of its military power. The Texas Rangers beat the St. Louis Cardinals 4-2 for a 3-2 World Series edge.

IF OCTOBER 24 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Between now and January, you could find that ambitions are spurred on and you may be offered many chances to upgrade your future through hard work. You may even assume extra obligations in an effort to enrich your life, perhaps taking night classes or shouldering extra duties at your job without compensation. In late December and throughout January, you may feel buoyant and full of confidence and your popularity and personal charisma will grow by leaps and bounds. That is when you have the best possible assistance from the stars to land the job of your dreams, find the special someone you have always wanted to meet or to make any important commitment.

HOROSCOPE
Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Don't let a phantasm of negativity spoil your most treasured image of the future. Keep your eyes fixed on the destination and don't be distracted by petty annoyances. Save a few dollars for a rainy day.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Develop ingenious methods to banish a creative block. It might be that you are stumped because you don't have a viable outline. Get out the pencil and prioritize your needs, hopes and activities.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Whistle while you work. Exercise your mind or your body for the best results. You might find an opportune time to rid your home or office those things that have accumulated but aren't necessary.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): It may be difficult to strike the perfect balance in social settings. You could be overly anxious to please others and waver about decisions, or too aggressive when you should politely wait your turn.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Get organized. When the going gets tough, the tough get going. You are at your best if given the time to think things through without interruptions or input. Intense insights can help you solve problems.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Know your limits. You can't push forward when held back by relentless pressure from outside forces. Take your lessons to heart by paying attention to those areas that cause disapproval or admonitions.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Wrestle with your reservations. Tiresome relationships might be given the boot. Good relationships aren't likely to experience any permanent disturbances if they are worth having in the first place.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Early to bed, early to rise, makes you healthy, wealthy and wise. Don't waste energy on regrets or plot revenge. A good night's sleep is the best antidote to banish insecurities and aggravations.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Caution doesn't cost anything, even when money changes everything. Being brave and fearless is wonderful, but it isn't going to gain you applause today. Listen to your intuition and wait.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Patience is sometimes your best friend, but it won't lick you in the face. There could be a stalemate taking place. Don't allow resentment to poison your day, as things will improve soon.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Get all your ducks lined up in a neat little row. Wait a few days to get up to speed before making your move. Late night meetings could be counterproductive, or even confuse you, so get to bed early.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Breaking up might be "hard to do," but could be necessary. Old habits and patterns can be easily shed under these planetary conditions. Partnerships that are rigid, however, can crack under the strain.

Sudoku is a number-placing puzzle based on a 9x9 grid with several given numbers. The object is to place the numbers 1 to 9 in the empty squares so that each row, each column and each 3x3 box contains the same number only once. The difficulty level of the Conceptis Sudoku increases from Monday to Sunday.

Pearls Before Swine By Stephan Pastis

HERE'S THAT BOOK YOU LET ME BORROW. THANKS.

WHAT THE @#%? YOU UNDERLINED SENTENCES.

OH, YEAH, SORRY, I'M ONE OF THOSE PEOPLE WHO LIKES TO UNDERLINE AS I READ. IT'S JUST PENCIL, THOUGH. I CAN ERASE IT IF IT UPSETS YOU.

I SENSE IT UPSETS HIM.

PEARL, I WISH YOU'D TRY TO BE NICER TO EARL.

YOUR HUSBAND IS VERY ANNOYING.

I KNOW HE CAN BE ANNOYING, BUT HE ALSO HAS HIS GOOD POINTS.

WHONK

YO, FAT BOY, YOU LOSING WEIGHT?

PROBABLY.

THERE HASN'T BEEN A TOURIST AROUND HERE FOR DAYS.

I'M WASTING AWAY TO NOTHING. I'M ALL SKIN AND BONES. I LOOK AWFUL.

I WAS JUST KIDDING ABOUT LOSING WEIGHT. YOU LOOK JUST AS CHUBBY AS EVER.
