TWIN FALLS • Shaking hands, attending meetings, testing ballot machines.

With less than 24 hours to go before polls open, candidates and county elections workers spent their Monday preparing for today's elec-

At the Twin Falls County Courthouse, election workers spent three hours on Monday morning unfolding absentee ballots after taking them out of envelopes.

It was a time-consuming task. Each absentee ballot, whether cast in person or mailed in, had to be put in two envelopes, said Twin Falls County Clerk Kristina Glascock.

At 2 p.m., election staff tested the ballot counting machines. Those folded absentee ballots have to be as flat as possible, and workers have to be extra careful if it's humid, said Sharon Lancaster, chief deputy clerk.

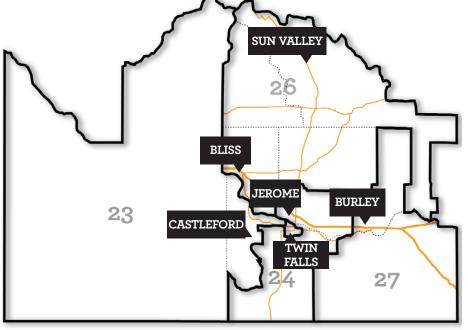

Most of the Magic Valley's legislative candidates had a more relaxed day.

Rep. Donna Pence, D-Gooding, spent her afternoon knocking on doors and meeting voters in Bellevue.

"You gotta get out and campaign on a day like this," Pence said. Her challenger, Republican Lee Barron, campaigned in Dietrich, Shoshone and Richfield.

Incumbent Rep. Stephen Hartgen, R-Twin Falls, said he did "light campaigning" on Monday, which included going to a meeting and shaking Please see COUNTDOWN, A5

TWIN FALLS • Utility workers from Idaho are now part of the effort to get New York back on its feet this week.

Idaho Power crews hit the road Monday morning headed for the East Coast. The crews hope to arrive Wednesday night in Old Bethpage, N.Y., and then receive further orders to help repair some of the damage done by Hurricane Sandy.

"They're from all different cities from the western part of the state to the eastern part," said Kevin Winslow, a communication specialist for Idaho Power.

Schools Kick Off Parent Conferences

BY JULIE WOOTTON jwootton@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • Now that the school year has been in full swing for a couple of months, it's time to check on how students are doing.

Around south-central Idaho, many schools are having student-led or parent-teacher conferences this week.

For the Twin Falls School District, students lead the conference and explain their work to their parents.

"With a student-led conference, it puts a lot of responsibility back on the student," Twin Falls High principal Ben Allen said.

About four years ago, the district switched from parent-teacher conferences to a student-led format.

At the elementary school level, teachers help their students get ready to lead their own conference.

"I actually practice with the child," said Tammi Stanley, a first-grade teacher at Sawtooth Elementary School. "And I think a lot of teachers do that."

Stanley said children will read a written passage to their parents and demonstrate a few math tasks they're

They'll also tell their parents about what they're doing well and how they could improve, which Stanley said is challenging for a first-grader.

Stanley then goes through the child's report card with the parents.

THE MARKET AT A GLANCE

Stock Market Edges Up a Day Ahead of Election

NEW YORK (AP) • On the day before the U.S. presidential election, stock indexes managed slight gains in thin trading.

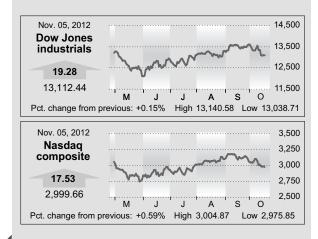

After wavering between small gains and losses, the Dow Jones industrial average ended with a gain of 19.28 points to start the week, closing at 13,112.44 on Monday.

Uncertainty surrounding the election will prevent most investors from making any big moves before it's over, said Randy Frederick, managing director of active trading and derivatives at the brokerage Charles Schwab.

National polls show President Barack Obama and Mitt Romney locked in a tight race. The two candidates are spending the final days of the campaign holding rallies in Ohio and other states considered crucial to winning the White House.

"I honestly think the markets are going to sit here and mark time," Frederick said. "The markets have a tendency to trade sideways before big news events, and nothing is bigger than a presidential election."

Frederick said he believes that no matter who wins, the stock market will likely surge once it's over for the sole reason that investors will know the name of the next president.

Police Ask Help Locating Car Involved in Rollover

TIMES-NEWS

JEROME • Idaho State Police are asking your help to find a car suspected of triggering an interstate rollover Sunday.

The rollover occurred shortly before 4:30 p.m. at milepost 161 of Interstate 84, just west of Jerome, according to ISP.

Marcette M. Makay, 35, of Kimberly, was eastbound in a 1998 Ford Explorer when a small, light-colored passenger car that had been headed west used the emergency crossover and drove into the eastbound lanes.

According to ISP, Makay lost control of the Explorer while trying to avoid a collision. The Explorer then rolled into the median.

Makay and her passenger, Patricia A. Makay, 60, of Twin Falls, both wore their seatbelts. They were taken to St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center.

ISP asks anyone with information about the passenger car or its two female occupants to contact dispatchers at 208-736-3060.

Twin Falls Council Hears Presentations on Grants, Chobani

mdavlin@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • If you had thousands of dollars with which to improve your community, how would you spend it?

On Monday, the Twin Falls City Council heard presentations from community organizations on how they spent grant money awarded earlier this year.

At the April 2 council meeting, the council awarded $100,000 in municipal outsource grants. The money was given to programs that the city government might otherwise provide.

Some organizations, like Trans IV, received matching federal funds. Others, like Crisis Center of Magic Valley, didn't receive their annual federal grants. Here is how the organizations spent the money:

The Boys & Girls Club; $21,500; transportation, family enrichment programs and parenting class-

Criss Center of Magic Valley; $11,000; food, counseling

Magic Valley Arts Council; $9,000; art programs, facility expenses, staff

Southern Idaho Tourism; $4,000; tourism marketing, outreach

Trans IV, $30,000, public transportation

Twin Falls Municipal

Band, $20,000, support for concerts and band members

Twin Falls Senior Center, $4,500, computer operating systems and software City attorney Fritz Won-derlich said that next year applicants should make more clear the relationship between city departments and the organizations.

Also on Monday, the council adopted an ordinance to create a modified local improvement district for Chobani. The council also heard a presentation on construction progress on Chobani.

Ex-Idaho Prosecutor To Defend Himself

BOISE (AP) • Usually, defendants go on the witness stand to speak up for themselves. But former Canyon County Prosecutor John Bujak is standing up in front of jurors every day in his felony misuse of public funds trial in Canyon County.

Bujak has opted to represent himself in a strategy that in some lawyers' view is as unconventional as it is risky. Former Idaho attorney general David Leroy said that Bujak, as both the defendant and counsel, runs the risk of allowing his emotions to get the better of himself as he seeks to avoid a prison term.

"I think there is a role for enthusiasm and earnestness in presenting every case, but without an objective base and a critical analysis of both the facts and the law, that emotion can be misplaced," said a friend of Bujak's.

As his trial enters its second week, Bujak concedes there are risks but believes he's the best person to defend himself against charges he diverted $236,000.

Clayton Gardner of Independent Meat prepares to brine pork for bacon on Friday at the Twin Falls facility.

T.F. Meat Company Gears Up for the Holidays

BY ANDREW WEEKS aweeks@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • Crates of smoked turkey, boxed and waiting for pickup, sat in the shipping and receiving room at Independent Meat on Friday.

The last two months of the year are the only times the company has poultry at the meat-processing facility in south Twin Falls. Pork, on the other hand, is a staple in demand all year at the 108year-old plant.

The season is picking up, said sales and distribution manager John Howard.

"Some of our guys will be working six days a week," he said. Besides the turkeys, which are sold at local grocery stores, Howard said, people love their Christmas hams.

"We sell a lot of those this time of year," he said.

Things might be different in 2013 with the possibility of rising pork prices. According to Britain's National Pig Association, pig herds in Europe have been shrinking. The trend, the association reported in a September news release, is "being mirrored around the world," while drought conditions in the U.S. and Russia have spiked prices for grain crops used for pig feed.

What's more, higher beef prices over the past several months have increased demand for pork and poultry, Howard said.

The average price of ground beef hit a record high in the United States in July, according to the Bureau of Labor Statistics. Prior to June, according to the BLS, the average cost of 100-percent ground beef in the U.S. had never topped $3 a pound. It remained around $3 per pound in October, according to the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Howard said he doesn't foresee a shortage of pork at his plant, but prices could spike in the

"You'll still find bacon in the grocery stores next year," he said, "but if beef prices remain high you might be paying a little more

The food service didn't escape the effects of a dour economy. "Everybody's been hurt by it," he said. "But it helps to be a little diversified. You don't want to put all of your eggs in one basket at one retailer."

Independent Meat, which owns

Falls Brand, sells to a number of retailers including Albertsons, Kroger and locally owned stores like Swensen's Markets.

About 600 hogs are processed at the plant every week, Howard said. The animals come from clients all over the country, many from the east, and are treated humanely from the time they leave the truck until they're butchered. The meat, which is "minimally processed" at the plant without a lot of additives, is cut and packaged by hand -a pride and joy of the company, he said, ensuring jobs for workers.

Despite a tough economy, the facility, which employs around 300, has avoided layoffs. Employees work anywhere from eight to 10 hours a day, five days a week — though that could change for some folks as the holiday season picks up.

Thousands of smoked turkeys, between 10 and 12 pounds each, are being readied for shipment to grocery stores for Thanksgiving and Christmas. And then there's the Christmas ham.

"We see hams everywhere," said Roy Molsee, a plant supervisor. "We dream about hams."

FDA Chief Will Testify at First Meningitis Hearing

WASHINGTON (AP) • House lawmakers investigating a nationwide outbreak of deadly meningitis have summoned the head of the Food and Drug Administration to testify at the first congressional hearing on the issue next week. The Energy & Commerce Committee said Monday that FDA Commissioner Dr. Margaret Hamburg will appear before the committee on Nov. 14. The following day she is scheduled to appear before the Senate health committee, which is also probing the outbreak.

The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention has reported 419 cases of meningitis illness linked to contaminated steroid shots distributed by New England Compounding Center. Thirty people have died as a result of the outbreak, the agency reported Monday.

Committee staffers said they have also invited Barry Cadden, co-founder of the specialty pharmacy linked to the outbreak. Also invited is James Coffey, director of the Massachusetts Board of Registration in Pharmacy. Staffers say they are awaiting replies from Cadden and Coffey.

Compounding pharmacies traditionally fill special orders placed by doctors for individual patients, turning out a small number of customized formulas each week. But some pharmacies like the NECC have grown into much larger businesses in recent years, supplying bulk orders of medicines to thousands of doctors and hospitals across the country.

In recent weeks, inspectors from the FDA and Massachusetts department of health have reported unsterile conditions at the Framingham, Mass. pharmacy's facilities. The most recent inspection from the FDA uncovered green and yellow residues, water droplets and standing water in or around production rooms that were supposed to be

Sheriff: Fierce Wounds Complicate MT Mauling Probe

BILLINGS, Mont. (AP) • An animal trainer mauled to death while cleaning the Montana pen of two, 500pound captive brown bears used for filmmaking suffered extensive wounds that make it impossible to determine if he was conscious before the attack, authorities said Monday.

There were no defensive wounds on the hands or arms of 24-year-old Benjamin Cloutier when his body was pulled from the pen Sunday and he apparently had no used the bear spray he was carrying, said Demetri Price, head trainer at Animals of Montana near Bozeman.

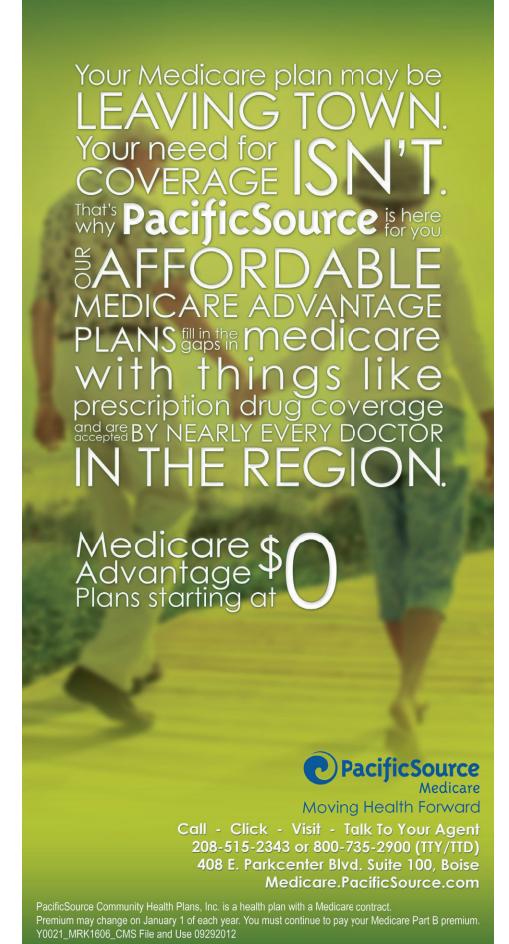

As a result, Price speculated Cloutier might have fallen and hit his head be-

Gallatin County Sheriff Brian Gootkin confirmed the absence of defensive wounds and that the mace-like bear spray had not been used. But he said there was no way to prove Cloutier was unconscious when the attack began.

"The body had been attacked so fiercely, there were so many injuries that there was no way — that's why we're not going to speculate," Gootkin said.

However, he said it was clear that Cloutier died of bite and claw wounds that hit major arteries.

Dad was born Dec. 6, 1939, in Jerome, Idaho, to Cleo and Ola Sarah Jane (Tipton). As a baby, his family moved back to Green Forest, Ark., before returning to Jerome when Dad was in the second grade. He lived in Jerome until he joined the U.S. Army in 1956. Dad served just shy of four years as an MP, including a tour in the Korean War. Dad was very proud of his military service and would tear up when talking about his buddies he lost in the war.

In 1962, Dad married the love of his life and together, they raised three kids in various places in Idaho. In 1982, they settled in Dietrich, where Dad was living at the time of his death. Dad worked several different jobs throughout his life; cowboying, packing for the Forest Service, and the Big Wood Canal Co., where he retired from in

ESPN Radio Announcer Jim Durham Dies at 65

BRISTOL, Conn. (AP) • ESPN radio announcer Jim Durham, who called NBA games for the network, has died. He was 65.

ESPN said Monday that Durham died over the weekend at his home in Tomball, Texas. A cause of death was not announced.

In 2011, Durham received the Curt Gowdy Media Award from the Naismith Memorial Basketball Hall of Fame for his contributions to the sport.

Durham was the lead play-by-play commentator for NBA games on ES-PN Radio since its inception in 1996. His last assignment for ESPN was Tuesday's season opener between Boston and Miami. A Chicago native, Durham called Bulls games during Michael Jordan's first seven seasons. He also served as a broadcaster for the Dallas Mavericks, Chicago White Sox and Houston Astros.

How can I know...how can I compare the quality of the different nursing homes in my area? It is such a difficult and confusing decision.

A. Let us introduce you to Nursing Home Compare; a webbased tool that rates each Medicare and Medicaid certified nursing home in the country. To find it, go to Medicare.gov Click on the "Resource Locator Tab", and then click on "Nursing Home Compare.'

Every nursing home in the nation must meet over 180 regulatory standards of care that are designed to protect nursing home residents. These standards cover a wide range of topics, from proper management of medications, the care of residents and the processes used to give that care, how the staff and residents interact, protecting residents form inadequate care, the safe storage and preparation of food, to the general nursing nome environment overall. Each State employs a health inspection team that performs in-depth inspections, called "surveys" and rates and ensures compliance with these standards of care. "Nursing Home Compare" converts the State's findings into a five star rating program. A "5" given for those facilities that are much above average in their provision of care, and a score of "1" given for those facilities that are much below average. We encourage you to access this tool and compare the scores of the nursing nomes in the Magic Valley area. This tool can be a great resource in this difficult time.

Legalizing recreational use of marijuana in Washington, allowing same-sex marriage in Maine and permitting physician-assisted death in Massachusetts top a list of ballot measures in 38 states on Tuesday.

Marijuana, health, marriage and taxes are the dominant themes of the 176 statewide measures, according to a report by the Los Angeles-based Initiative & Referendum Institute at the University of Southern California.

"There are always a lot of social issues on the ballot," said Jennie Bowser, a senior fellow at the Denver-based National Conference of State Legislatures. "This year, there's a little bit of a twist with change in the same-sex marriage issue and the prevalence of the marijuana issue without requiring the medical piece."

Voters in Colorado, Washington and Oregon will decide whether to make their states the first to legalize the recreational use of marijuana, seeking to build on measures that allow it for medical purposes in onethird of states. Voters in Maine will consider whether to allow same-sex marriage, among four states taking up the issue and the first to consider legalization without initial action by a court or state lawmakers.

"Multistate issues can take on life and spread across the country if they meet with voter approval initially and reveal unexpected popular support for an issue," according to the USC report. "For this reason, multistate issues are worth watching as possible leading indicators of national trends."

Voters from San Francisco to Boston will consider proposals to require labeling of genetically modified food, defy President Obama's health-care law and increase sales taxes to support schools. The 176 ballot measures outnumber the 159

Six states will consider ballot measures dealing with marijuana for recreational or medical purposes. California, whose voters rejected a measure to legalize recreational use in 2010, was the first state to allow medical use in 1996.

Massachusetts Arkansas will consider legalizing medical marijuana.

"At some point we're going to reach a tipping point where the federal government has to cede to the states," Allen St. Pierre, executive director of the National Organization for the Reform of Marijuana Laws.

OBAMA

Obama ends campaign where it all began.

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) • For President Barack Obama, it's ending where it all began.

Obama closed his 2012 campaign with a nighttime rally Monday in Iowa, where his 2008 caucus victory jumpstarted his road to the White House. The president reflected on the state's pivotal role in his political rise during remarks delivered at the site of his first Iowa campaign headquarters.

But it's more than just nostalgia that is bringing Obama back to Iowa one more time. The president's team is seeking to hold off Republican challenger Mitt Romney by sweeping the Midwest, including Iowa's relatively small prize of six Electoral Col-

Obama will be joined by his wife, Michelle, rocker Bruce Springsteen and a cadre of longtime advisers and friends who have been with him for the final stretch of his final campaign.

"I think tonight is going to be a fairly profoundly emotional night, to be there where it all started and nobody really saw how we could put it all together," said David Plouffe, Obama's senior adviser.

Obama's 2008 win in Iowa has taken on almost mythical proportions among aides who spent months here with the then-unknown U.S. senator from Illinois, urging voters in the largely white state to put a black man on the path to the presidency.

They recalled on Monday how much has changed since then, reminiscing about the president calling to introduce himself to everyone from Iowa's church leaders to high school students.

Obama campaign strategist David Axelrod said Obama, after having been told by one young woman that she was in yearbook class and needed the candidate to call her back, told his aides: 'You know, running for president can be a humbling experience,"

Axelrod said. Axelrod and Plouffe wore matching '08" fleece pullovers "Obama

Monday. Two other fixtures from the 2008 campaign also made special appearances: Robert Gibbs, a longtime Obama aide who was Obama's first White House press secretary, and Reggie Love, Obama's former personal assistant. "It's like the end of a long-running series and all the characters are coming back to be here," Axelrod said. He and Plouffe spoke to reporters during Obama's first rally earlier in the day in Madison, Wis.

Obama's team is projecting confidence, but the outcome of Tuesday's election is far from certain. Polls show Obama and Romney locked in a tight race nationally, though the president appears to have an edge in key battleground states.

Iowa plays a key role in the campaign's Midwestern firewall strategy. Victories in Iowa, Wisconsin and Ohio would put Obama over the required 270 Electoral College votes.

ROMNEY

Romney makes final campaign sprint.

SANFORD, Fla. (AP) . No longer does Mitt Romney tout himself as "severely conservative," as he did last winter and into the spring. And no longer does Romney hail his running mate, House Budget Committee Chairman Paul Ryan (Wis.), as first and foremost a conservative icon. Rather, the GOP challenger to President Barack Obama has pitched himself and his vice-presidential pick as pragmatists willing and eager to work across the aisle on righting the economy, rising above the gridlock in Washington by being "happy," as Romney told a crowd at a hangar in this town near Orlando on Monday morning, "to sit down and discuss this with anyone who'd like to." The former Massachusetts governor made a furious final sprint through the electoral battlegrounds Monday, with five events in four states, including all-important Florida, Virginia and Ohio. The schedule originally said he would finish the campaign with an appearance in the battleground state of New Hampshire, where Romney owns a vacation home and where he launched his candidacy on a sunny Thursday in June

But with less than 24 hours to go until the polls are open on Election Day, campaign officials said Romney's expected final stop — a late-night homecoming rally in Manchester, N.H., headlined by Romney and his wife, Ann, as well as musician Kid Rock - would not be the last one af-

Romney is now set to make a final swing state trip on Tuesday to Cleveland and Pittsburgh.

The last-minute decision is in keeping with a campaign that has continually pushed to find new openings and has edged up relentlessly in the polls, with Romney essentially deadlocked with Obama over the past two weeks in most nationwide surveys. Romney bested challengers Newt Gingrich, Rick Santorum and a host of others from his party's conservative wing in large part by making the case that he was the candidate with the strongest resume and the best organization to take on Obama.

On Tuesday night, the polls will tell whether Romney's assessment was

The campaign has seen its share of ups and downs since the party conventions. There was the release of a hidden video of the candidate's "47 percent" remarks at a closed-door fundraiser, a development that at the time appeared to spell doom for the campaign; the GOP nominee's triumph over Obama in the first presidential debate, a moment that – if Romney wins — is likely to be viewed as a turning point for his candidacy; and Romney's scathing criticism of Obama's response to the Sept. 11 terrorist attack that left four Americans dead in Benghazi, Libya, an episode that has since energized the conservative grass roots.

Prosecutor: U.S. Soldier Had Blood of Victims on Him

JOINT BASE LEWIS-Mc-CHORD, Wash. (AP) • A caped figure captured on surveillance video came running out of the darkness to the edge of a remote Army outpost in southern Afghanistan. Blood was smeared on his face, prosecutors said, and soaked into

"When I woke up, I was like, 'It's freezing.' And I thought, 'This can't go on too much longer.'"

Sara Zavala, a Staten Island resident in comments about overnight temperatures sinking into the 30s while hundreds of thousands of homes remain without power.

The Morning after the Morning after here are two things I'll predict about today's election: One is that the United States' biggest voting bloc - the center-right/center-left will win; the other is that there's going to be a big civil war within the Republican Party and a small civil war within the Democrat Party starting the day after the election, as they're each forced to accommodate this center-left/center-right victory.

By now, it should be obvious how much the U.S. is a center-right/center-left country and how much this center - not the extremes - has dominated this election. IfMitt Romney wins Tuesday, it would be because he moved from the far-right, tea party-dictated nonsense that he used to win the GOP primary to the center-right. Had Romney not "rebranded" himself a centrist Republican in the last month, this election would have been over long ago in President Barack Obama's favor. Conversely, had Romney run as an authentic center-right former Republican governor of Massachusetts from the start, this election might long ago have been over in his favor. Had Obama, though, embraced the Simpson-Bowles deficit-reduction plan and run from the center from the start, Romney would have been locked out on the fringes long ago and never been able to pull off his "born again" move to moderation. Obama may still squeak by, though, by stressing his "balanced" approach to lowering the deficit and pragmatic foreign policy, while downplaying his more leftward initiatives like health care.

The reason the center-left/center-right bloc is dominating this election is because it intuitively knows that the only way our country can progress is with some grand bargains forged at the center. One is a package deal that slows entitlement and defense spending, raises taxes, invests in infrastructure, education and research and institutes tax reforms that unleash more entrepreneurship all in the right sequence and scale — so the economy is nursed back to health. Another is a deal on immigration reform. And a third is a deal that opens the way to exploit our newfound bounty of natural gas, but with a plan that is environmentally sound and doesn't divert us from our long-term goal of a clean-energy economy that mitigates climate change. If Romney wins, it would be because the center-right/center-left concluded that he would approach these grand bargains with the moderate Republican instincts and willingness to compromise that he has been either faking or sincerely projecting in the last month - and would be able to impose that moderation on his party. If Obama wins, it would be because the centerright/center-left concluded that he has been trying to govern from the center.

A lot has been written lately about how, given these two options, we'd be better off going with Romney, because he supposedly can control the crazies in his party to deliver his side of these grand bargains — but, by sticking with Obama, we'd only get more gridlock. I don't buy that for two reasons. First, it would be saying that since Republicans on the far-right managed to obstruct Obama on many fronts, and held the economy hostage, we should let them rule because otherwise they'd do it again. That would only invite Democrats to behave the same way, which would leave us nowhere. I also don't buy it because I think the GOP has gone so much farther to the right than the Democrats have gone to the left. I do not trust that Romney will be able to tame the radical GOP base without making concessions to it on the environment, the Supreme Court and foreign policy that are not in the nation's long-term interest. I think the best thing for the country today would be if the Republicans lost the presidency twice in a row, the way the Democrats did under Ronald Reagan, and then had to undergo the same kind of rethinking and reformation that Democrats did under Bill Clinton, which moved their party solidly into the centerleft. Parties learn from defeat, not from victory — especially two defeats in a row.

Granted, the morning after an election defeat, angry GOP hard-liners would surely vow to obstruct Obama more than ever. I'm not afraid. Because the morning after the morning after, GOP governors, mayors and business leaders would see where the country really is and finally do what needs to be done: either crush or separate themselves from a radical base that has forced Republican candidates into a war against math, physics, biology, Hispanics and gays and lesbians — all at the same time.

Their party has no future if it has to cater to or disguise that narrow base. And the country's future is hampered if we don't have a responsible center-right conservative party, offering market-based solutions and a spirit of compromise to solve our biggest problems - not a radical right-libertarian-tea party coalition that is leading the GOP around by the nose, purging unbelievers and signing loyalty pledges to self-appointed conservative ayatollahs.

A truly center-right GOP would force the Democrats to have their own civil war — the center-left versus the rest largely over tax/entitlement reform and defense spending. Obama has never fully tested where the Democratic base is on these issues, but that's coming. The Democratic civil war will encompass fewer issues than the GOP's, but it will be intense and unavoidable – if we are to forge the Grand Bargains that the center-right/center-left majority clearly wants and the country clearly needs.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Quote Used in Times-News Didn't Tell Whole Story

Times-News reporter Kimberlee Kruesi misrepresented my comment Saturday (Oct. 27) regarding the federal government and Japanese internment camps during World War II.

My point was this: Those who support implementing Obamacare generally will say, "The U.S. Supreme Court settled the issue. It's time for us to stop fighting the law and make the law work for us."

Here is my point: Back in 1942, President Roosevelt signed an executive order that led to Japanese-Americans being rounded up and placed in internment camps. Indeed, Magic Valley residents are well aware of this history because there was an internment camp near Minidoka. Japanese-Americans had no choice in the matter. What some may not know is that an American named Fred Korematsu challenged the president's decision and the forced relocation and confinement of people based on ancestry.

Here's the kicker: The U.S. Supreme Court ruled that the federal government's actions were proper. Indeed, the precedence created by the case has never been revisited. But most of us today would agree that the government's action of the time violate what we consider to be a reasonable course of action for a civilized society.

My point simply is this: Yes, the U.S. Supreme Court ruled that the federal government can make people buy a commodity, in this case, health insurance. Yes, Obamacare is the law of the land. Yes, part of that law says the states are to develop health insurance exchanges or the federal government will do it for us. That does not mean we should stop thinking for ourselves, that the cause of freedom is no longer valid or worth fighting for, or that we should scurry about and rush to implement a law we know to be wrongheaded.

For those people who do not know what the Jubilee House is and why it needs your support:

The Jubilee House is a place where women with drug and/or alcohol problems can go to fight their additions. The women are given free room and board for the full year that they are in the program. The program has been available for more than four years. The number of ladies at the house at any time ranges from six to 12 plus staff.

Because it is based on God and a fullyear program, its success ratio is 88 percent, compared to government programs which have a success rate of just over 2 percent. Because the program is based on God, there is no government money available to help with expenses. It is a 501(c) 3 program, which means any contributions you give to it are fully tax deductible.

The house and all of the expenses are paid for from donations and grants. The cost of operating the house, staff and taking care of the ladies in the program costs less than $100,000 per year. It needs your help so that it can continue helping these ladies beat their problems and become productive citizens after they graduate from the program.

Idaho's Suicide Hotline Returns after 5 Years

BOISE (AP) • Five years ago, Idaho became the only state without a certified, statewide suicide prevention hotline.

Residents in crisis still had a number to call, but the voice on the other end was 400 miles away in Portland, Ore. That meant it wasn't someone familiar with the isolation that comes with living in a rural region where mental health services are few and far-flung, said Idaho Suicide Prevention Hotline Director John Reusser.

Over the next few years, the economy worsened. Soldiers, troubled by the stresses of war, came home. And Idaho's suicide rate — consistently among the highest in the nation climbed. "We consistently hover between fourth and sixth in the country for rates of completed suicides," said John Reusser, director of the new, soon-to-open Idaho Suicide Prevention Hotline, which can be reached at (800) 273-TALK. "I know the national hotline was better than nothing, in terms of a resource for people to call, but I don't think it's as effective as a hotline that's dedicated to the state of Idaho."

The last statewide hotline closed in the spring of 2007 as funding dropped. At the time, Idaho's suicide rate was nearly 15 completed suicides per 100,000 people, compared to the national average of 11 per 100,000 people, according to the Suicide Prevention Action Network of Idaho. By 2009, the number of Idaho suicides had climbed to nearly 20 per 100,000 residents, compared to the national average of 12.

"When the last hotline shut down, there really wasn't the sort of broadbased support and momentum to have one here. We're kind of a frontier state, and we have a big ethic of self-reliance here, encouraging people to rely on their community supports," he said. "Idaho is 49th in the nation for mental health funding. And ironically, a hotline is one of those things that allows people to get more help for themselves."

Jeret "Speedy" Peterson, who grew up in Idaho and trained at Bogus Basin Mountain just outside of Boise, shot himself to death in Utah last summer. Authorities said he called 911 shortly before his death, and a suicide note was found nearby. Peterson's family and friends established The Speedy Foundation in his memory, raising money to prevent suicide and support education. All of the money The Speedy Foundation raises in Idaho goes to the hotline, Reusser said.

Peterson's death, combined with an increase in suicides among veterans, increased awareness in Idaho, Reusser said. Lawmakers gave the hotline their support and $110,000 of the state budget, and the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare and Division of Behavioral Health contributed another $175,000. That money, combined with another $53,000 from the United Way of Treasure Valley, gave the organization enough for startup costs and two years of funding, said Reusser.

The new hotline was originally slated to open Nov. 12, but that date has been pushed back because the organization that grants accreditation is based in Manhattan and dealing with the effects of Superstorm Sandy. The hotline is still expected to be running before the end of the year, he said.

The Portland call center was averaging between 10 and 15 calls a day from Idaho residents. Reusser said he expects the statewide hotline to field more calls as the advertising campaign takes effect.

BILLINGS, Mont (AP) • A decision to allow migrating bison to roam freely across 70,000 acres outside Yellowstone National Park goes before a Montana judge Monday, as local officials and ranchers press for restrictions on the animals' movements.

State officials opened the Gardiner Basin just north of the park to migrating bison last year after they had been barred for decades.

It was an attempt to curb periodic slaughters that have killed thousands of the animals to prevent the spread of the disease brucellosis to cattle. However, few cattle remain in the disputed area, and federal agriculture officials have eased sanctions when brucellosis infections occur.

But Park County officials say the bison threaten the safety of residents in the basin, and local ranchers and the Montana Farm Bureau Federation say brucellosis remains a danger.

In two separate lawsuits, the county and ranchers have asked District Judge Wayne Phillips to block bison from the basin. A trial in the case that began earlier this year is expected to conclude Monday when state veterinarian Marty Zaluski is scheduled to testify.

Zaluski said he will address the risk of brucellosis from bison and whether that's changed with the decision on the Gardiner Basin. Also lined up to testify is and Brian Mc-Closkey, former regional director for the U.S. Agriculture Department's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Ser-

Hundreds of bison flooded into the basin two winters ago, before the state formally lifted restrictions in the area.

During prior testimony in the lawsuits, an undersheriff from Park County said dozens of complaints came in from residents worried about their safety. Plaintiffs in the case also said there should have been more studies done on the potential for brucellosis exposures and other problems before the free-roaming policy was adopted in April 2011.

Idaho Power lineman Greg Nichols is seen Monday morning as the utility's convoy prepared to leave for New York.

According to a release from Idaho Power, two sixman crews will take part in the effort. They'll be using two line-bed trucks for digging holes and replacing poles, four bucket trucks for lifting workers to high-up places and four pickups to haul additional materials as needed.

Idaho Power didn't have many details about the work crews would be assigned to perform, but Winslow said the Long Island Power Authority has asked for help in rebuilding its power distribution system.

The crews will hold a safety meeting Thursday morning before they meet with Long Island Power Authority representatives to find out exactly where they're headed.

"Their system is similar to ours," he said. "It's a good task for our crews."

Employees from throughout the company, including the legal department, fleet services, mechanics, travel coordinators and warehouse workers, came together to ensure the lastminute trip started without any hiccups, the release stated.

Having crews back east won't hurt service here at home, said Matt Smith, Idaho Power's manager of delivery construction who is coordinating the aid afford.

"We'll continue to respond to our own customers' needs," he said. "But we want to be good neighbors and lend a helping hand where it's needed. Our crews are eager to step up and help folks, and we take great pride in our ability to go and help out."

Winslow said this is the first time Idaho Power crews have been so far away from home. Some crews helped out in Oregon a few years ago, but this is the first time aid this far away has been delivered, he said.

Conferences

She said most parents want interaction with the teacher, especially in first grade since it's the first time their child is in a classroom all day.

At Kimberly Elementary, principal Craig Maki said it's important for parents to communicate with their child's teacher on a regular basis.

"We certainly don't want any surprises when it comes to parent-teacher conferences," he said.

For middle and high school conferences, Allen said students "generally know why they're doing well in a class or pot"

To get ready for conferences, Twin Falls middle and high schoolers put together a folder with samples of schoolwork and a self-evaluation for each of their classes.

Instead of going around to seven different classrooms, students lead the conference while their advisory teacher is there to answer any questions parents may have.

Allen said for parents who have a student doing well in school, they'd sometimes rather visit directly with each teacher.

But for parents who have a struggling student, he said, they tend to prefer student-led conferences.

"They like this process a little better because it's actually their son or daughter explaining it to them," Allen said.

Tips for Parents

Tammi Stanley, a first-grade teacher at Sawtooth Elementary School, shares some suggestions for how parents can get the most out of student-led conferences.

Come up with questions ahead

Stanley said it's helpful to come prepared so you don't feel on the spot when the teacher asks if you have any questions.

Go through your child's schoolwork before the conference.
It's helpful to have a good idea of how your child is doing on school assignments and daily practice.
Know what to ask your child before the conference.

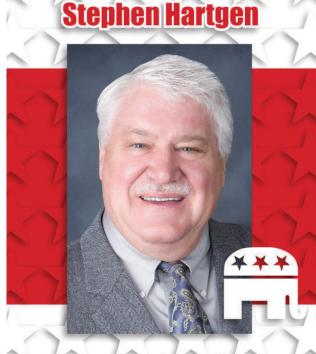

• Here's one question to ask: "Is there anything the teacher is going to tell me that I don't already know?"

• Be aware of the timeframe.
At the elementary school level, most teachers only have 15 or 20 minutes to talk with each student's parents. Sometimes, that timeframe is even shorter at the middle or high school level.
• Ask "what can I do to help my child at home?"

• End the conference on a positive note.

It's good for both parents and teachers, Stanley said.

Keep.

TWIN FALLS • It's time for some home cooking, even if it's against an "all-star" team.

The College of Southern Idaho women's basketball finally plays another team at home - Idaho Select tonight at 7:30 p.m.

Having lost their first two regular season games against Casper College (68-53) and Gillette College (74-72), the Golden Eagles will have a short stint in Twin Falls before heading back onto the road for the Midland NIT tournament in Midland, Texas, next week.

Through two games, CSI has three players averaging double digits: Cassidy Skidmore (10.5), Patrice Toston (10.5) and Sarah Viehweg (10.5). Viehweg leads the team in rebounds with 24 in 44 minutes, while Skidmore has nine assists in 65 minutes.

football and had the fifth best boys tennis team.

An Occam's razor explanation cuts could the success have its genesis in like a knife: The Bruins were better something more intentional than gesimply because they played lesser competition. But that doesn't explain the fact that Twin Falls hasn't managed to reproduce the success it had immediately after dropping classification, even as participation in athletics has increased since.

"We had really solid coaches," Bruins athletic director Mike Federico said. "Our coaches understood you are only going to go as far as your expectations, and I don't think the expectations changed from 5A to 4A. It was always that we wanted to be the best we could and it didn't matter who we were playing. It wasn't necessarily about winning or losing; it was about performing to our potential."

But is having expectations the only thing necessary for building a program? Twin Falls is working on it. Federico believes one of the keys to long-term success, which is not just winning but developing student athletes, is building strong continuity with middle-school feeder programs like Vera C. O'Leary. That's why head

BOISE • The injury news keeps getting worse for Boise State and its highly ranked defense.

Coach Chris Petersen confirmed Monday that senior nose tackle Mike Atkinson will miss the rest of the season after tearing an ACL in Saturday's 21-19 loss at home against San Diego

State. All season, Atkinson has been one of the on-field leaders and a consistent and disruptive force for a defense that is very young up front. His 37 tackles rank sixth on the team and he has two forced fumbles and one interception return for a touchdown, the only score in Boise State's 7-6 win over BYU back in September.

"I still think we've got a good core of defensive linemen," said Petersen. "You lose a guy for the season whenever it is, that's hard. He's a good tough, true nose tackle, and those guys are hard to find."

Ricky Tjong-A-Tjoe, who has played extensively at tackle this season, is projected to take over at nose tackle, while Darrin Koontz will move into the void at tackle when Boise State (7-2, 4-1) Mountain West plays at

"We don't lose too much around here. When it does happen, people seem to kind of hang onto it a little longer. In the locker room, especially in the past, we've had to learn that next Saturday comes around quick."

Things went from bad to worse for Boise State on Monday. Two days after a loss to San Diego State, it was confirmed that defensive tackle Mike Atkinson (not pictured) tore an ACL in the loss and will be out the rest of the season.

Starting safety Lee Hightower is on track for missing a third straight game for violating team rules. Petersen did not address the status of Hightower during his regular meeting with reporters Monday.

Defensive tackle Greg Grimes and nickel Dextrell Simmons are questionable, though Simmons is listed as the starter on the depth chart.

Despite the injury woes, the defense kept the Broncos close in Saturday's rare home loss. Petersen cited some costly penalties and missed tackles that kept

Grizzlies Beat Jazz in Home Opener

MEMPHIS, Tenn. • Zach Randolph had 16 points and 18 rebounds, Marc Gasol added 22 points and the Memphis Grizzlies capped a day of celebration featuring the introduction of their new owners with NBA commissioner David Stern on hand by beating the Utah Jazz 103-94 Monday night.

Mike Conley added 16 points, Rudy Gay had 15 and Quincy Pondexter 14 for Memphis, which won its second straight this season after opening up with two games in California.

The Grizzlies also picked up where they left off last season by winning their 12th straight regular season game and extending their franchise record. They haven't lost at home in regulation since the Jazz beat them Feb. 12.

Gordon Hayward led Utah with 19 points, 13 in the first half. Mo Williams added 17 points, Paul Millsap and Derrick Favors each

The Knicks busted the game open in the third quarter, stretching the lead to 21 points. They got a surprising third from 38-yearold Rasheed Wallace, who scored eight points and hit a couple of 3-pointers, in-buzzer to end the quarter.

After a solid first, the Sixers fell apart, and got nothing going with their set offense. Jrue Holiday led them with 17 points.

HEAT 124, SUNS 99 MIAMI • LeBron James had 23 points and 11 rebounds, Dwyane Wade scored 22 points and Miami beat Phoenix.

Chris Bosh finished with 18 points and Ray Allen had 15 for the Heat, who are averaging 111.8 points in their first four games. Allen became the 24th player in NBA history to eclipse the 23,000-point mark when he made a free throw with 1:01 left in the third quarter.

Shannon Brown led Phoenix with 18 points off the bench, making five 3pointers. Luis Scola had 15 points, Goran Dragic finished with 13 points and nine assists, and Marcin Gortat scored 12 for the Suns.

The Heat put the game away with a 23-6 run in the third, a spurt fueled by 10 points from James and five 3-pointers in a span of less than 5 minutes.

TIMBERWOLVES 107, NETS 96

NEW YORK • Rookie guard Alexey Shved and Chase Budinger led a furious rally from 22 points down, and Minnesota stunned Brooklyn.

Shved made the go-ahead basket with 2:35 remaining and had a pair of 3-pointers in the fourth quarter after going scoreless for the first three. The Timberwolves scored the final 11 points in an impressive rally on the second night of back-toback games. Seemingly out of the game early in the second half, they overwhelmed the Nets in the fourth quarter with a brilliant effort from their bench.

Shved, a point guard from Russia, hit from in the lane, then Nikola Pekovic scored inside and Budinger made a 3-pointer with 38 seconds to go, making it 103-96 in front of a stunned crowd in the second game at the new Barclays Center.

NEW YORK • The NHL and the players' association stuck to their word and made quick plans to get back to the bargaining table.

After all-day negotiations Saturday, the sides agreed Monday to resume talks today in New York. Both sides weekend were good, creating some optimism that perhaps a deal could soon be reached to save the already truncated hockey season. The NHL and union hadn't met since Oct. 18 when each side turned down offers. NHL deputy commissioner Bill Daly and players'

Steve Fehr got together by themselves Saturday in an undisclosed location and held productive talks. "We had a series of meetings over the course of the day and had a good, frank discussion on the most important issues separating us," Daly said Sunday.

A lot of 'yessir' and 'no, sir' and not much All of those things comelse. But he said, 'No, I bined don't quite explain don't! I told him, 'Dang, you're good!" Sam Pagano knows plenty about talking to a team. He delivered 200 speeches and more during 21 years as the coach at Fairview High in Boulder, where he won two state titles and split a third. He spent time abroad and even took a team with limited English-speaking skills to the Italian Super Bowl. Both Chuck and another son, John, who's the defensive coordinator of the San Diego Chargers, played for him. And neither got the playing time they deserved, Sam says now, because he treated them more like a father than a coach. "Like the dad with the kid in right field who's praying the ball doesn't get hit there," he said. His wife, Diana, even called the principal once to ask him to make sure Sam played his

"You know how far that got?" he laughed. But Sam also realized about the time both were bouncing from the ranks of graduate assistants into full-fledged jobs on good college and NFL staffs, that the boys had no problems fending for themselves.

"It's painful, just painful, to watch him go through this — the suffering, how awful it is. ... That's the word he used, 'awful' - and to be so far away;" Sam said. "But I just couldn't believe how elegant and truthful he was, talking about his vision and being around for his daughters' weddings. You can tell he's a fighter."

What's that worth? Bruce Arians, the interim coach and a close pal of Chuck Pagano, won't even pretend he's done any calculations.

Pagano was in the locker room before the game, too, and sneaked into the coaching booth five minutes before kickoff to watch the players. They knew it.

"I don't know how you put that into any form of value," Arians said Monday, when asked what Pagano's presence meant to the team. "It was very special to have him walk through that group of guys and see their reaction to it and take that message. Obviously, in the second half we played with that same fight?" But a moment later, he slipped back into coach speak and reminded us why NFL coaches watch so much film. They can afford to believe in only those things they can actually see. "We did a great job two weeks in a row, defensively, of swinging the tempo from a first-half basically average performance, to a really good second-half performance," he said. "The young offensive guys battled their tails off with a bunch of injuries during that game. At one point in time, we had a rookie flanker, a rookie split end, rookie tight end, rookie running back and rookie quarterback fighting on third down against the number one third-down defense, and I thought they did a good job."

Good enough, anyway, that it didn't come as much of a surprise back in Boulder. The Paganos knew sorrow years ago, when their daughter died accidentally. They learned that by honoring something or someone with your effort, some good is guaranteed to come of it. "Like I said, he was a coach's kid. Always asking, 'What do you want me to do? What's my next move?' He always put a lot of thought into things, but he didn't really come out of his shell until college," Sam said. He paused and added, "Isn't he something now?" Jim Litke is a national

Seats Getting Hot for Some NFL Coaches, GMs

ASSOCIATED PRESS

FLORHAM PARK, N.J. • Titans owner Bud Adams laid down the challenge to his entire organization after Tennessee's brutal loss to Chicago, creating the latest NFL hot seat for coaches and general managers.

Things aren't any more comfortable in Kansas City, San Diego, Cleveland, Buffalo, Jacksonville and Dallas halfway through the season. And, of course, in Philadelphia, where there always seems to be a campaign to get rid of Andy Reid, and the shouting has become louder this year.

Although Adams may have gone overboard by saying in his 50 years as a team owner he couldn't remember a worse home loss, his message rang loud and clear from the Grand Ole Opry to the Smoky Mountains: everyone is on the clock.

Nowhere is the clock ticking louder than in the AFC West, particularly in KC. Romeo Crennel inherited the head coaching spot on an interim basis in 2011 when Todd Haley was fired after 13 games and the Chiefs won two of their last three, handing Green Bay it's only loss of the season, falling in overtime to Oakland, then beating playoff-bound Denver on the road.

General manager Scott Pioli, reasoning the team was ravaged by injuries to key starters throughout the season, gave Crennel the fulltime job. Now, with most of those important players back, the Chiefs are 1-7, ranking at the bottom of the AP Pro32 for good reason. They are last in the league in turnover margin at a ludicrous minus-20, with 29 giveaways, including 15 lost fumbles.

And get this: Kansas City has not led in regulation all season. Not for one tick of the clock.

Crennel, who fired himself as defensive coordinator Monday, has little chance of keeping his coaching position. The same, perhaps, for GM Pioli.

"Well, hey, I grade my performance by the record, and the record's not very good, so you'd have to say I haven't been very good," Crennel

San Diego is 4-4 and only one game behind Denver in the division. But does anyone give the Chargers a reasonable shot at beating out the Broncos?

More likely is yet another mediocre record, just bad enough to miss the postseason. With that could be the end for Norv Turner as coach, despite a 56-38 record with the Chargers, and A.J. Smith as GM.

One major problem with the Chargers is their talent base has been eroded in recent years. Once considered on a level with New England, Pittsburgh, Baltimore and Indianapolis, the Chargers no longer keep company with the most skilled rosters of the Offseason moves seemed to upgrade the talent level in Buffalo, but that hasn't materialized. The defense, even with Mario Williams, is a sieve under new coordinator Dave Wannstedt — only the Titans' historically bad numbers are worse, and they've played one more game. The offense is sporadic despite a solid running game. That falls on coach Chan Gailey, considered an offensive wizard.

GM Buddy Nix, who gave Gailey a vote of confidence last week, signed Williams to the richest contract in NFL history for a defensive player. Few of his other moves have panned out, either, and the Bills have that embarrassing string of non-playoff years, 12 and counting, longest in the league.

"I hope I can put that to rest," Nix said of supporting his coach. "It's the age-old thing, and they've done it around here for years. They start over about every three years. What that does is make sure that you don't make it."

Nix might not be around to protect Gailey or Wannstedt if the losing continues.

Some progress has occurred in Cleveland, but the Browns have a new owner, new president and, in 2013 likely a new coach. It might be unfair to Pat Shurmur, who in his third season in charge has a roster filled with youngsters, some of them very promising: Trent Richardson, Joe Haden, Brandon Weeden, Josh Gordon. Barring a second-half surge into contention - two matchups with Pittsburgh and one with Denver say it won't happen a whole new management team will be hired. The same thing could happen in Tennessee and Jacksonville, even though Mike Munchak is in only his second season as coach of the Titans, and they went 9-7 in 2011. Mike Mularkey is in his first season at the Jaguars' helm, but they could be headed for their worst record since entering the NFL in 1995. Adams has quickly forgotten the work Munchak, one of the franchise's greatest players and a Hall of Famer, did last year. He's the same owner who pretty much forced out Jeff Fisher, the most successful coach the team has had since the AFL alive San Diego State scoring drives. But the Aztecs only gained 269 yards on offense and two of their three touchdowns were directly attributable to poor special teams by the Broncos. The Aztecs returned the opening kick for a touchdown then a blocked punt in the third quarter set up the San Diego State offense at the Broncos 8-yard line.

The Boise State offense didn't help much, either. After a productive first half, the Broncos gained only 26 yards in the third quarter before scoring on fourth quarter to pull within 21-19. The defeat marked the second year in a row that a November loss at home cost Boise State its lock on the conference title and shot in a BCS game. Coming into the game, Boise State had a 71-1 record in Bronco Stadium dating back to Sept. 22, 2001.

"We don't lose too much around here," said senior receiver Chris Potter. "When it does happen, people seem to kind of hang onto it a little longer. In the locker room, especially in the past, we've had to learn that next Saturday comes around quick."

coaches at Twin Falls are involved in the hiring process of middle school coaches and work with them to ensure there are similarities in style and philosophy. Federico also works with the Twin Falls School District to increase middle school athletic participation. By splitting teams in cut sports so that the most talented players are spread out, it's allowed more kids to play in games. Federico found that athletes tend to stay interested in sports longer if they have a chance to play.

"I hated the idea of cutting a kid in seventh grade who happened to be a late bloomer," Federico said. "They will never come out again if they are cut, even if they are a little awkward at that age."

Twin Falls also stresses multi-sport participation, which Federico, a former scout, believes benefits the athlete and helps build school spirit.

"Our coaches have made a commitment to share kids," Federico said. "We are not fighting each other for kids, because once you start competing for kids it puts them in bad position and can really harm your programs. It takes sacrifice to stay away from the specialization but it works."

But Federico doesn't have all the answers.

In 2008-09, Kimberly won the 3A state softball championship, the boys track state championship and had the second place team in girls track. Four other programs advance in their state tournaments.

"We had a class of juniors and seniors that just had that chemistry and sold out for each other," Kimberly football coach and athletic director Kirby Bright said. "They just gelled. When kids move up from middle school, they have to be welcomed, brought into the fold and accepted. When you have chemistry, the kids fight for each other and win games they shouldn't."

Bright emphasizes teambuilding through creative get-to-know-your-teammates-better activities.

Gooding football takes that concept to a whole different level. In Cameron Andersen's tenure as head coach, the Senators went from two wins in 2009 to four in '10, five last season, to 10 so far this year. Sure, Andersen acknowledges a key factor is the development of the strength and conditioning program -

"I encourage kids to be the best they can, to let them know it's okay to be great, but the losses don't bother me. I don't care that they lose the game as long as they give me their best."

Roger Johnson, Gooding boys soccer coach

two-way lineman Cole McGinnis is as strong as an ox and is getting wooed by some of the best college football programs in the country.

But Andersen knew that in order to get more kids out participation has nearly doubled - he couldn't turn football into boot-camp.

So he started teaching ... Tazzercise?

"We have Zen master Mondays where we don't do regular exercise," Andersen said. "We do stuff like water aerobics, Jazzercise, and then after practice we take the kids to bowling and pizza. We compete in all of it. It makes kids excited to come into the Monday practice and then they get into the rhythm. We try to get the boys as passionate about football as we are. You can't get to 10-0 without having as much passion as our team has."

If Zen happens Monday, then winning spreads through the universe on Saturdays. Andersen believes that winning and success is not just great in itself - it is - but it's theperception of success that creates future success.

" "When little kids come into the game and see a 10-0 football team and for the first time in 27 years, people are going to see a trophy," Andersen said. "When they see that and feel the atmosphere, it makes them want to put on a helmet. Some kids want to be a part of it and don't even want to play."

Creating and sustaining a winning program may seem like a chicken and egg paradox for teams that win infrequently. Andersen believes winning not only spreads from year-to-year, but from team-to-team.

"Success breeds success, and failure breeds failure," Andersen said. "Many programs have an expectation of failure. But many kids here want to win really bad. And when they do that for six months in football, when they go to basketball and wrestling they have the same feeling."

Gooding promotes individuality within a team concept. Athletic director Iack Nelson doesn't want robots.

"The thing that makes every program unique is the kids, not the coach," Nelson said. "I think it is important to let the kids be the personality of the team. At the end of the day, if we don't teach our athletes that hard work is fun and if they don't have any fun along the way, it makes for a very long sea-

Gooding promotes diversity. It's long partnered with the Idaho School for the Deaf and the Blind, whose students play sports for the Senators.

Roger Johnson was at IS-DB for nine of his 15 years coaching at Gooding. Nationally, it was the first such school to have a soccer pro-

Perhaps the experience has made Johnson more approachable to all groups. When he arrived at Gooding, there were no Latino players on the team. There were 25 on his state championship team this year.

Johnson remembers the day his team became ethnically enriched.

"There were two boys, Robert Martinez and Cesar Hernandez," Johnson recalled. "On the first day of tryouts they were there before practice. They both kicked a ball at me. I chest trapped one, dropped it on the ground, fired it back and then another was shot at my head and I headed the ball back to him. They dents. smiled and introduced themselves, like I might actually know how to coach." Many of the Latino players for Gooding play yearround on indoor club teams. Some play on 18- to 25year-old teams. By being accepting and open to all, the Senators have fielded the best high school soccer players from the area.

"If my kids are playing soccer, then they aren't getting in trouble," said Johnson, who is also a pastor at the First Baptist Church in Gooding. "I have been very fortunate. They have all responded well, and parents have been very nice."

Buy-in has a different meaning for Johnson's stu-

"I encourage kids to be the best they can, to let them know it's okay to be great, but the losses don't bother me," he said. "I don't care that they lose the game as long as they give me their best."

Winning in the case of all three schools is certainly a matter of chemistry and talent, but also the result of a higher set of guiding principles. Winning happened at Gooding when — and perhaps because - winning wasn't the only thing.

Keep Carter For Sheriff

As Twin Falls County Sheriff, my term has been filled with overcoming challenges and re-establishing relationships. With an eye toward maintaining our past accomplishments, my talented staff and I will continue to work toward progress and have set many goals for the next four years. We will focus on the increased protection of our more vulnerable citizens by seeking enhanced sentencing for crimes against the elderly. Additionally, we would like to make increased opportunities for health and fitness available to all county employees. As always, keeping a strict handle on the budget, preserving cooperation among departments, fighting hard against drug use and distribution, and providing resources to our schools and young people will continue to top our list of priorities. I am grateful to be part of this department and look forward to another four years serving this great community.

THAT SCRAMBLED WORD GAME

by David L. Hoyt and Jeff Knurek

— David Hume

Bobby Wolff

"Custom, then, is the great guide of human life."

North's first-round call was a negative (takeout) double, suggesting the unbid suits. South responded with a cue-bid in the enemy suit to show a strong hand and eventually came to rest in the 5-2 heart fit.

How would you play four hearts when West starts with three rounds of spades? Let's say you ruff the third spade, reducing yourself to four trumps, the same number as West. How should you play the trump suit now? Remember not to make the rote play!

West is the danger hand — the defender who can force you again in spades and thereby promote the setting trick in trump if either defender started with four trumps. You should therefore play the heart suit so that West cannot gain the lead. You lead the trump jack from your hand and run it into the safe (East) hand.

When the cards lie as in the diagram, the finesse will win. You play a second trump to dummy's king, return to your hand with a diamond, and draw a third round of trumps.

West is left with a trump winner, and you hold one low trump, but that is no problem. You simply play your minor-suit winners and West can take his master trump when he wishes.

You can see what would happen if you miss this avoidance play. West would gain the lead with the trump queen and play yet another spade, setting up a second trump trick for the defense.

ANSWER: If facing a third-inhand opener, you should take care when raising with three small trumps and minimum values. Here your cards appear to be working, so I would bid two spades, but with my heart king in the diamond suit, I might judge to pass. If you have a defensive hand, your partner is entitled to assume you have either at least moderate trumps, or a nonminimum, when you raise.

DEAR ABBY: I have a close friend who is obsessed with selling "finds" on eBay. I often give her little items that she has mentioned she liked — or outright asked for. I always thought she wanted to keep them for herself. Recently I saw some of the things I gave her for sale under her eBay account.

DEAR ABBY Jeanne Phillips

I am dismayed that she is taking advantage of my generosity to make a few bucks. No, she is not desperate. And no, I don't feel comfortable saying something unless it's clever and I won't appear to be jealous or petty.

> - TRACI IN PENNSYLVANIA

DEAR TRACI: You don't have to say anything clever. What you should do is tell your friend that you were hurt when you saw the items she had requested up for sale on her eBay account. Period. And in the future, be a little less generous about providing stock for her retail venture.

DEAR ABBY: Over the years, I have seen many letters from soon-to-be-brides asking if they should include their husband's sister or other female friend in their bridal party, even if they don't know them. There is a solution.

This summer, I was honored to be the best man at the wedding of a close friend. He had a female friend, "Liz," whom he wanted in the wedding party. Liz didn't know the bride, so instead of having her be a bridesmaid, Liz was a groomswoman. She stood in photos with the groomsmen, and even wore a matching outfit — a lovely gray dress with a red ribbon to match our gray suits and red ties.

- BEST MAN IN REDMOND, WASH. DEAR BEST MAN: That is certainly an appropriate solution to something that shouldn't be a problem in the first place. Women have also occasionally served in the capacity of "best man." I'm glad you mentioned it.

DEAR ABBY: I have seen letters in your column referring to not being invited to children's birthday parties and the hurt that follows. It's amazing to me that some adults have also never learned the importance of being sensitive to the feelings of others.

We recently moved into an established neighborhood where a group of adults go on trips, out to dinner, etc. I am old enough to realize that my husband and I will not be invited to everything. But I am not "old enough" not to feel a stab of pain and isolation when group plans are discussed in my presence and we are not invited. Somewhere along the line, people need to learn not to discuss group activities in front of those who are not included. No one wants to feel left out.

- NEWCOMER TO MINNESOTA

DEAR NEWCOMER: You've said it well. While I don't think the offenders are being deliberately cruel, if people would think before opening their mouths, a lot of hurt feelings could be avoided.

DEAR ABBY: I'm just wondering what you and your readers think about this: If you see your doctor only once a year (or less if you are well), but you have been going to that doctor for five years or so, should that doctor remember you?

- LOUISE IN ARIZONA DEAR LOUISE: It depends on the volume of patients the doctor has in his (or her) practice. However, before seeing you, the doctor should certainly familiarize himself (or herself) with your file so you are not being seen "cold."

IF NOVEMBER 6 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: You will find you are wiser than usual during the next several weeks. This is a god time to consult with professionals and obtain advice or counseling. Don't go overboard in December and January with exercise or competitive situations because you might rub people the wrong way. Things will go your way and unexpected assistance will appear in April. That is an excellent time to launch new projects, enter into new commitments and make crucial promises. Because there will be plenty of support from others, you will be able to turn shifting conditions to your advantage in a big way.

HOROSCOPE Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Circulate and fan enthusiasm. Enlist the support of those in high places and clarify their expectations. Focus on being open to new methodology and technical advances, but don't tread on tradition.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): The big wheel keeps on turning. Wheeling and dealing flow easily like water across a riverboat paddlewheel. Make key decisions; helpful information is at your fingertips and intuitions are on target

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Maintain an open-door policy. Lay your cards on the table and strike an accord on crucial issues. Make sure to insist on your fair share while people are in a generous mood and willing to compromise.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Listen well to the wise counsel of those you respect. Even when everyone is in a merry mood, it will pay to keep your nose to the grindstone. Your daily grind might revolve around achieving financial security.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Glow and go. You are a bit wiser than usual where spending is concerned or can receive helpful advice. Your social instincts are right on target for making the hit parade with new business acquaintances.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Lucky breaks are in the stars. Chance meetings could put dollars in your wallet and a smile on your face. Impulse purchases could be based on hopeful fantasies rather than logic and necessity.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Romantic fantasies can keep you floating on cloud nine through most of the day. Since you are appealing to others, this is the time to make important phone calls or simply flirt your way to success.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Be willing to compromise on shared goals and objectives. Partners will be willing to give an extra inch if they understand your true purpose. Be open and forthright about what you hope to achieve.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Sort the wheat from the chaff. Getting along with others is easier than usual, but you might mistake enthusiasm and cooperation for facts. An agreement made today must live up to its promise.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Try asking nicely, instead of telling, for the best results. Listen to others and absorb their wisdom. Some days you are unaware of how forceful your attitude is toward getting things done efficiently.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A chance morsel of knowledge could light a fire under a creative idea or provoke the urge to gamble with money. Get helpful counsel form a trusted companion before you dive into investments.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Dam up the babbling brook. Choose a more reflective path, as communications take on deeper meaning and significance. Family members can field messages or assist you in successful career moves.

Sudoku is a number-placing puzzle based on a 9x9 grid with several given numbers. The object is to place the numbers 1 to 9 in the empty squares so that each row, each column and each 3x3 box contains the same number only once. The difficulty level of the Conceptis Sudoku increases from Monday to Sunday.
