After the election and defeat of Propositions 1, 2 and 3, legislators have a busy session ahead.

TWIN FALLS • After the celebrations and disappointments of Tuesday night election results, newly elected legislators in Magic Valley are looking to the 2013 legislative session.

They have a lot on the to-do list. In the next several months, elected officials have to make big decisions on education, Affordable Care Act options, the state budget and personal property tax.

Though voters defeated Propositions 1, 2 and 3, the Legislature can pass parts of the education reform package in different forms. Rep. Donna Pence, D-Gooding, said she hopes stakeholders — such as teachers, school boards and government officials — can sit down before the session begins and discuss common ground.

Pence said she can see Proposition 3 — which dealt with technology, laptops and on-line courses — coming back with more local control. Instead of giving every school district the same laptops or money for technology, for example, Pence suggested turning that money into technology grants and awarding money to districts that need it.

Senator-elect Jim Patrick, R-Twin Falls, said he could see open negotiations for teacher contracts making a comeback.

But Rep. Maxine Bell, R-Jerome, said legislators should have a cooling-off period before discussing re-implementation.

Bell did say she thinks teachers should receive their earned merit pay — which hasn’t yet been doled out.

Sen. Dean Cameron, R-Rupert, said the Legislature also has to consider issues related

Miller and Pence Win Legislative Races

HAILEY • After absentee ballots held up the counting process, Blaine County released its final election results early Wednesday morning.

Its votes determined the fortunes of two Idaho House races, as well as several ballot items within the county itself:

For the first time since 2004, District 26 residents will be represented by at least one Republican in the Statehouse.

Republican Steve Miller beat Democrat John Remington for the open House seat in the district — previously dubbed District 25, but still covering Blaine, Camas, Gooding and Lincoln counties.

TWIN FALLS • Now that voters have overturned all three Students Come First laws, educators are left with a lot of unanswered questions.

Voters voiced strong opposition to Propositions 1, 2 and 3 during Tuesday’s election.

Public schools chief Tom Luna released a statement Wednesday about the election results.

He wrote that although Idaho residents have “expressed concerns,” he said he doesn’t believe anyone wants to go back to the old educational system.

The contract with Hewlett-Packard is now void following Tuesday’s election outcome.

“I am as committed as anyone to finding a way to make this happen,” he said in the statement. “We must find a way because our children’s future is at stake.”

Melissa McGrath, spokeswoman for the Idaho State Department of Education, said the department wouldn’t comment further Wednesday.

Propositions 1 and 2 each failed by roughly 58 percent.

Proposition 3 — which would have provided a laptop for every public high school teacher and student — was rejected by nearly 67 percent of voters.

Earlier this month, the state announced an eight-year, $180 million contract with Hewlett-Packard to provide laptop computers to high schools.

The contract with HP is now void following Tuesday’s election outcome.

It also means a stop to the $9 million in technology funding per year to school districts, the online class graduation requirement and Dual Credit for Early Completers program.

In 2011, legislators passed the Students Come First package of education reform laws. It’s just the second year school laws were in place.

Despite Tuesday’s election results, area school district superintendents say it’s business as usual for teachers and students in classrooms.

The town of Rock Creek sat just north of the South Hills on what is now 3800 East Road, seven miles south of Hansen.

THE TOWN OF ROCK CREEK

BY MYCHEL MATTHEWS

Twin Falls County Historic Preservation Commission

ROCK CREEK • Yes, there was life here before I.B. Perrine and his irrigation system.

A town was born where Rock Creek exits the South Hills near the intersection of the Kelton Road and the Old Oregon Trail.

But this town may not be the Rock Creek you are thinking of.

In 1863, the Rock Creek Stage Station was established by the Ben Holladay Stage and Freight Line. The Rock Creek Store was built next to the station in 1965 by James Bascom. For a short time, the store was the only trading post on the Oregon Trail between Ft. Hall and Ft. Boise.

German emigrant Herman Stricker purchased the store from Bascom in 1876 and homesteaded the surrounding acreage on Rock Creek. The Stricker family operated the store until 1897.

A small piece of the property is now owned by the Idaho State Historical Society, and is known as Rock Creek Station and Stricker Homesite — or “Stricker Ranch” for short.

Meanwhile, about two miles upstream from Stricker Ranch sits what little is left of the all-but-forgotten town of Rock Creek.

According to most accounts, Rock Creek began shortly after the stage and freight line came through the area. The town had a post office by 1871, and a school by 1878. By 1900, 146 people lived in the greater Rock Creek area, including those at Stricker Ranch.

The area was populated mostly by cattle ranchers and farmers.

One notable resident was John F. Hansen, originally from Denmark. Hansen moved to Idaho in 1876, after reading a published letter written by local pioneer James Iverson.

“In this land of eternal sunshine lies opportunity for all in a health giving climate unequalled anywhere,” Iverson said of Rock Creek.

Hansen first settled in the Oakley area, where he taught school. He later farmed near Cottonwood Creek.

Eventually, Hansen moved to Rock

Creek, where he opened a store.

The town also boasted a pool hall, hotel and a candy store.

Just after the turn of the 20th Century, I.B. Perrine founded the city of Twin Falls and the Twin Falls Irrigation Tract. Soon, the railroad entered the area along the south side of the Snake River.

In 1905, a townsite was being surveyed along the railroad, seven miles east of Twin Falls and seven miles north of Rock Creek. Investors made Hansen an offer he couldn't refuse: if he would relocate his store from Rock Creek to the new town, they would name the town after him.

Hansen moved his store, and the investors made good on their promise.

JACKPOT RESIDENT DIES IN CRASH

TIMES-NEWS

ROGERSON • A Jackpot, Nev., man died Tuesday in a crash on U.S. Highway 93, according to Idaho State Police.

ISP responded at about 9:25 p.m. to the two-vehicle fatal crash at 1700 East and U.S. 93, north of Rogerson.

Lawrence Tiffany, 54, of Jackpot died from injuries sustained in the crash. According to a report from ISP, Tiffany attempted to turn left onto 1700 East in his 1996 Dodge pickup when he failed to yield to oncoming traffic.

Tiffany's vehicle was struck by a 1999 Freightliner semi driven by Chris Larson, 49, of Townsend, Mont.

Larson was headed south and Tiffany was driving northbound when the crash occurred, the report states.

Larson was not injured, according to the report. Traffic was reduced to one lane for nearly four hours as crews worked to clear the roadway.

ISP is still investigating the crash.

Goodbye Warm Temperatures, Hello Cold

BY BRIAN NEUDORFF

Chief Meteorologist

We are going to see a big change in our weather for the end of the week and into the weekend. After enjoyable temperatures in the upper 60s and low 70s, temperatures are going to fall into the 40s and 30s by the weekend. This is all thanks to the jet stream dipping south and an upper level storm system moving inland off the Pacific Northwest coast.

Today's forecast will feature a few scattered rain showers across the region and temperatures about five to 10 degrees cooler in the low 60s. Most of the colder air arrives Thursday night into Friday morning. A few lingering showers overnight could mix with some snow as snow levels go from 6,000 feet to the valley floor by Friday morning. Friday will feel more like winter with temperatures in the upper 30s and even a few snow showers possible through the day.

It appears that any snow that falls in the valley shouldn't amount to much. We don't expect much more than a coating and maybe a couple of inches in a few spots across southern Idaho between Friday and Saturday. In the South Hills and the Wood River region, snow amounts could range from 4 to 8 inches with some localized areas in the mountains seeing near a foot of new snow.

LINCOLN COUNTY SHERIFF KEEPS JOB, COMMISSIONER UNSEATED

BY ALISON GENE SMITH
alismith@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • Lincoln County voters decided to keep their sheriff Tuesday night, but unseated an incumbent county commissioner.

Republican Cresley McConnell unseated incumbent independent Charles Ritter from his county commissioner position.

McConnell, 44, said he shook a lot of hands and visited as many people he could during his campaign. As a county commissioner, McConnell said he hopes to work with fellow commissioners and Lincoln County residents to restore peace and good order to the county. McConnell said the county is facing lawsuits from former employees and he hopes to avoid more in the future.

"Counties have monies that are budgeted and any time there's a lawsuit and an over-expenditure, you've got to take some money from somewhere else," he said.

This is McConnell's first time running and first time serving in public office.

The 1987 Shoshone High School graduate said he's been married for 25 years and has two children, one who is a senior at Dietrich

High School and one who is serving in the military and stationed at Fort Drum in New York.

During his campaign, McConnell said he heard many problems the public has and he hopes they'll learn more about county government and attend commissioner meetings to try resolve the issues.

Ritter did not immediately return a phone call from the Times-News Wednesday afternoon.

Lincoln County Sheriff Kevin Ellis, a Republican, handily beat his two write-in competitors, Mike Bright, a Republican, and the county's emergency management coordinator, and independent candidate Daniel Ward, who got 9 and 4 percent of the vote respectively. Bright challenged Ellis in this spring's Republican primary, but also lost to the sitting sheriff then.

Castleford Sewer Improvement Bond Passes

BY ALISON GENE SMITH
alismith@magicvalley.com

CASTLEFORD • The handful of registered voters in Castleford passed the city's sewer improvement bond Tuesday evening.

Out of 62 people who voted on the bond, 44 said "yes" and 18 said "no."

The city brought the $2 million bond to the town's residents to make improvements to the aging sewer system as part of an agreement with the Idaho Department of Environmental Quality. The city will repair wastewater lagoons and make repairs to the wastewater collection system.

Don Acheson, the project's engineer, said the city agreed that the lagoons were leaking in excess of what is allowed.

According to the Idaho DEQ's compliance schedule, Acheson said, all repairs must be complete by June 30, 2014. A planning study was scheduled to be finished by March 31, 2013, but Acheson said it's already completed.

By passing the bond, Acheson said, the city is even further ahead of schedule.

"I'm proud of the community," he said.

Acheson said rather than ducking responsibility, the community has stepped up to the plate this year and in 2007 when the town voted to build an arsenic filtration system.

"They're so community minded," he said of the town's residents.

Acheson works for Riedesel Engineering, a Twin Falls-based company that is Castleford's city engineering firm.

Unofficially, Acheson said he estimates construction will start in Fall 2013.

"We're operating in a legal framework and we're doing better than that," he said.

Since the bond passed, sewer rates in Castleford will go up, but it's still unclear when that will go into effect.

OBITUARIES

Former Texas Coach Royal Dies at Age 88

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) • A son of Depression-era Oklahoma, Darrell Royal came to Texas to take over a sleeping giant of a football program. Over 20 years, his folksy approach to sports and life, his inventive wishbone offense and a victory in the “Game of the Century” — where a U.S. president declared his team national champion — made him an icon of college football.

Royal, who won two national championships and turned the Longhorns into a national power, died early Wednesday at age 88 of complications from cardiovascular disease, school spokesman Bill Little said. Royal also suffered from Alzheimer’s disease.

Royal didn’t have a single losing season in his 23 years as a head coach at Texas, Mississippi State and Washington. Known for their stout defenses and punishing running attacks, his Texas teams boasted a 167-47-5 record from 1957-1976, the best mark in the nation over that period.

“It was fun,” Royal told The Associated Press in 2007. “All the days I was coaching at Texas, I knew this would be my last coaching job. I knew it when I got here.”

It almost didn’t happen. Royal wasn’t Texas’ first choice.

Texas was coming off a 1-9 season in 1956 — still the worst in program history — and wanted a high-profile coach to turn things around. The Longhorns were re-buffed by Georgia Tech’s Bobby Dodd and Michigan State’s Duffy Daugherty, but both coaches encouraged Texas to hire the 32-year-old Royal, who was lying in bed the night he got the call summoning him to Austin.

“Edith, this is it, this is the University of Texas,” Royal told his wife.

Royal led the Longhorns to a 6-3-1 record in his first season, but he was so sickened by Mississippi’s 39-7 thrashing of his team in the Sugar Bowl that he gave away the commemorative bowl watch he received.

Under Royal, Texas won 11 Southwest Conference titles, 10 Cotton Bowl championships and national championships in 1963 and 1969, going 11-0 each time. The Longhorns also won a share of the 1970 national title, earning him a national stature that rivaled that of Alabama’s Paul “Bear” Bryant and Ohio State’s Woody Hayes. Royal was inducted into the College Football Hall of Fame in 1983.

A public memorial ceremony is scheduled for noon Tuesday at the Frank Erwin Center basketball arena. Royal will be buried at the Texas State Cemetery in Austin, an honor typically reserved for the state’s military and political leaders.

On Saturday, the Longhorns will honor Royal at their home game against Iowa State by wearing “DKR” stickers on their helmets and by lining up in the wishbone formation, which Royal used to such great success, for their first offensive snap.

As a player at Oklahoma, Royal was a standout quarterback, defensive back and punter, and he credited hard work and luck for his success on the field and later as a coach. He had a self-deprecating style and a knack for delivering pithy quotes — or “Royalisms” — about his team and opponents.

“Football doesn’t build character, it eliminates the weak ones,” was one of Royal’s famous lines.

“Luck is when preparation meets opportunity,” was another.

“He was a guy who was so strong and so determined and so direct about things,” said former Texas quarterback James Street. “He was that way to the very end.”

Royal and assistant Emory Ballard changed the football landscape in 1968 with the development of the wishbone, which features a fullback lined up behind the quarterback and a step in front of two other backs. The innovation nearly flopped. After a tie and loss in the first two games that season, a frustrated Royal inserted backup Street to take over. “Coach Royal grabbed me and he looked for a minute as if he were having second thoughts about putting me in. Then he looked me straight in the eye and said, ‘Hell, you can’t do any worse. Get in there,’” Street said.

Texas won its next 30 games. Soon, rival Oklahoma and other schools started using the wishbone as well. “The University of Oklahoma joins the rest of the nation in celebrating the life’s work of Darrell Royal,” said Oklahoma athletic director Joe Castiglione. “We’ve truly lost an icon — a champion, an innovator and an educator.”

The national title season in 1969 included what was dubbed the “Game of the Century,” a come-from-behind, 15-14 victory by the top-ranked Longhorns over No. 2 Arkansas to cap the regular season. In Texas lore, it ranks as the greatest game ever played. President Richard Nixon, an avid football fan, flew in by helicopter to watch. Afterward, Nixon greeted Royal with a plaque in the Texas locker room proclaiming Texas the national champion.

The Longhorns also were named national champions by United Press International in 1970, a year in which Texas lost its final game to Notre Dame in the Cotton Bowl and finished 10-1.

Royal was among the first football coaches in the nation to hire an academic counselor — sometimes referred to as a “brain coach” in that era — to ensure athletes went on to graduate. He also set aside a fund for a special “T” ring, which players received upon graduation. Royal also served as Texas athletic director from 1962-1979.

“I want to be remembered as a winning coach, but also as an honest and ethical coach,” Royal said in 1975.

The youngest of six children born to Katy and B.R. “Burley” Royal, he grew up in tiny Hollis, Okla., where he chopped cotton as a young boy for 10-cents an hour to help his family through the Depression. His mother died before he was 6 months old, and he lost two sisters to a fever epidemic.

LaVeta B. Montgomery

Oct. 28, 1919-Nov. 6, 2012

RUPERT • LaVeta Byrl Montgomery, age 93, a resident of Rupert, beloved mother, grandmother and great-grandmother, passed away peacefully in her sleep to return to her Heavenly Father on Tuesday, Nov. 6, 2012.

LaVeta was born Oct. 28, 1919, in Rupert, Idaho, to Walter A. and Jennie Brown Sweet Rice of Minidoka. LaVeta was the fifth of 12 children. She was the last living of the 12 children. LaVeta married Earl Morris Honsinger on Nov. 14, 1936. They were later divorced. They had four children, Walter Earl (who died in infancy), James LeRoy, Earlene and Jerry Glen. She married LaVern Montgomery on Oct. 16, 1948, in Pocatello, Idaho. LaVeta was baptized a member of the LDS Church on March 26, 1955, along with her children. Their marriage was later solemnized in the Idaho Falls LDS Temple on April 15, 1965.

She was a loving wife, mother and grandmother and was dearly loved by all her brothers, sisters, nieces and nephews. She was a wonderful homemaker, cook and quilter and was the quilt chairman at the church for many years. She enjoyed cooking for family, friends and especially loved cooking fried chicken for farm crews and cowboys at the cattle roundups on the desert.

LaVeta enjoyed the outdoors. She was very knowledgeable about plant life and wild flowers in the mountains, and would be the first one out of truck to hike up the mountain searching for wild flowers. She loved to tell stories around the campfire, and be the bear in the bush — shaking the branches to scare the grandkids in the wilderness. She will be remembered with fond memories.

LaVeta was preceded in death by her parents; her husband, LaVern, who died in 1995; her grandson, Monty LaVern Towell; and all of her brothers and sisters, James Rice, Dolly Nussbaum Dowell, Iris Olsen, Clara (Brownie) Rice, Walter Jere Rice, Hyrum William Rice, Lynn Rice, Dorothy Freiburger, Ruby Hutton, Olive Short and Bonnie Urban. She is survived by her children, James LeRoy Honsinger, Earlene (Robert) Hatmaker and Jerry Glen Honsinger; 13 loving grandchildren; 28 great-grandchildren; and four great-great-grandchildren.

The family expresses their sincere appreciation to the Kurt Harman family and the staff at Rosetta Assisted Living for the loving care and kindness shown to Grandma.

The funeral will be held at 11 a.m. Saturday, Nov. 10, at the Rupert LDS 1st Ward Church (the former Rupert LDS Tabernacle), 806 G St., with Bishop Mark D. Sanderson officiating. Burial will be in the Rupert Cemetery. Friends may call from 6 until 8 p.m. Friday, Nov. 9, at the Rasmussen Funeral Home, 1350 E. 16th St. in Burley, and from 10 until 10:45 a.m. Saturday at the church.

Eldon Lewis Lowder

July 5, 1927-Nov. 6, 2012

RIVERTON, Utah • Our dear and talented father left for his heavenly home Tuesday, Nov. 6, 2012, with loving family to see him off.

Born in Rockland, Idaho, to LeRoy and Myrtle Lowder on July 5, 1927, he grew up the son of a farmer in the Burley area. There he learned to work hard and to love work. He passed this love to his posterity. He loved animals, including his race horse, Rocket, and his dog, Cougar. He loved fishing and hunting with his slingshot. He had an inventive mind. During World War II, he invented and built the first potato columbine equipment design, due to the lack of manpower. This design appeared in the local newspaper shortly after his departure to the U.S. Navy. Upon coming home, he found his invention was everywhere on Idaho farms. He served a valiant LDS mission in Texas and Louisiana. He married his sweetheart and best friend, Maxine Clark, on Nov. 9, 1946. He leaves her, along with their children, Loni Lowder (Ana), Debi Poulsen (Bryan) and Larry Lowder (Jane); 18 grandchildren; and 27 great-grandchildren. He lived his life to serve those he loved. He held many LDS Church positions. His favorite calling was as a Sunday school teacher to the youth, who love him still for his efforts.

As a masonry contractor, Eldon built many beautiful structures, including many familiar buildings in Jackson Hole, Wyo. As a fiberglass designer, he built the first shell for the Disneyland Monorail, patented the first fiberglass tubs and showers and a colon hydrotherapy device, which benefits many around the world presently. Eldon was a fine artist. His beautiful work graces the homes of many friends and admirers.

Friends can meet family at a viewing from 5:30 to 8 p.m. Friday, Nov. 9, and from 9 to 9:40 a.m. Saturday, Nov. 10, at the River Rose LDS Ward Chapel, 13122 S. Herriman Rose Blvd. (approximately 5400 W.), prior to the funeral at 10 a.m. Saturday. Interment will be at the Herriman City Cemetery.

Services are under the direction of funeral directors Larry Hansen and Arvin Hansen of SereniCare Funeral Home in Draper, Utah.

Democrats Pleased They Didn't Lose Ground in 2012

BOISE (AP) • Idaho Democrats were happy with the 2012 election, a night when they suffered no numeric losses in the Legislature and when voters defeated public schools chief Tom Luna's Republican-backed education overhaul.

Minority party chairman Larry Grant said Wednesday that preserving the Democrats' 20 seats in the Capitol was an accomplishment, in a year when popular GOP presidential candidate Mitt Romney was on the ballot to woo faithful Idaho Republicans.

Democrats gained two Boise seats, but lost one each in rural south-central Idaho and Pocatello.

Boise Democrats Branden Durst and Janie Ward-Engelking bested Republican Sen. Mitch Toryanski and Rep. Julie Ellsworth, respectively.

But Republican Steve Miller of Fairfield won the District 26 House seat, while Republican Rep. Jim Guthrie captured the Senate seat vacated by Democrat Diane Bilyeu in Pocatello.

CSI Board Election Goes to Mittleider, Scholes, Stone

TIMES-NEWS

TWIN FALLS • Voters gave a nod of approval Tuesday to Dr. Thad Scholes, Jan Mittleider and Laird Stone for the College of Southern Idaho's board of trustees.

The tightest race was for Position 3. Stone, a Twin Falls attorney, won by 1 percentage point. He garnered just 244 more votes than his opponent Jack Nelsen, a Jerome County dairy farmer.

Although Stone received enough total votes to win the seat, Nelsen garnered substantially more support in Jerome County. He took about 56 percent of the vote in that county, compared with Stone's 23 percent.

But in Twin Falls County, Stone took the lead by nearly 10 percentage points.

Other opponents in the race were J. Pat Branch and Mike Tylka.

For Position 1, Mittleider — a wellness consultant who retired from CSI in the spring after teaching for 42 years — won the race against opponent Scott Tverdy. She won 56 percent of the vote in Twin Falls County and about 53 percent in Jerome County.

Scholes, longtime CSI board president, won 54 percent of the vote in Twin Falls County and about 52 percent in Jerome County. His opponents for Position 2 were E. Kay Cramer and Armand Eckert.

“On a day-to-day operation basis, nothing is different today than before the election,” Jerome Superintendent Dale Layne said.

Teacher Contracts

Since voters overturned Proposition 1 — which set new rules for teacher contracts and negotiations — it has left some uncertainty.

Wiley Dobbs, superintendent of the Twin Falls School District, said he’s not sure what’s going to happen with the teacher contracts currently in effect.

One component of the law phased out a form of continuing contracts that essentially served as tenure for teachers. New teachers have received one- or two-year contracts.

The law also limited the scope of negotiations between school districts and teachers unions to salaries and benefits. And negotiations had to take place during open sessions.

Dave Gibson, president of the Twin Falls Education Association, said the “no” vote on Proposition 1 will have a huge impact on negotiations and contracts.

Teachers union representatives and Twin Falls School District officials were already talking about the possible impact of the election during spring negotiations sessions.

Will Teachers Get Bonuses?

for-performance for teachers.

A timeline released last week by Luna’s office shows funding will go out to school districts and public charter schools Nov. 15.

Then, administrators are scheduled to distribute money to teachers from Nov. 15 to Dec. 15.

Luna told the Times-News last month that if educators earned a bonus, “it’s absolutely critical that they get it.”

But when a total of about $38 million goes out later this month, “it still doesn’t guarantee that teachers who earn the money are going to receive it,” he said.

In a Nov. 1 email to school districts, Luna said he was working with the Idaho attorney general’s office to answer whether districts will have the authority to distribute the bonus money.

In Jerome, Layne said the future of pay-for-performance is a big issue.

He said the district will have to get a legal interpretation about whether to move forward with distributing merit pay to teachers.

Gibson, also the co-chairman of the Twin Falls School District’s pay-for-performance committee, said the money teachers earned last year will still be paid out.

But Dobbs said he has heard it both ways — that payments will go out and that they will not go out.

Local Reactions

Gibson, a music teacher at Morningside Elementary School, said his initial reaction to the election results is that “we had essentially the result that we expected.”

“It seems to me that it was a pretty important issue on the ballot,” he said.

Gibson said Students Come First wasn’t just an issue for teachers or partisan voters.

It affected everyone, he said, and is an issue “about education and about children.”

“It should have been a clear message to the Legislature that they need to go about this in a different way,” he said.

He said he still wants to see education reform, and that union members want to work with legislators.

Jerome teacher Jay Ostler said he wasn’t surprised by Tuesday’s votes. He said it’s his personal opinion that everyone is on the same page as far as putting students first — and election results don’t change that.

But there’s obviously a difference in opinion about how that should be done, he said.

Ostler said there’s sometimes a tendency to forget that the people who know students best are the ones teaching them on a day-to-day basis.

Gooding Superintendent Heather Williams said the election results were consistent with what she was hearing in the community.

“We’re really uncertain about how it will impact a lot of day-to-day operations,” she said.

Dobbs said the main issue with the legislation among educators he talked with is “the way the laws were conceived in isolation.”

As for the coming weeks, Dobbs said school district administrators are waiting for direction from the state.

It’s unclear at this point what will happen with the money that’s attached to the Students Come First laws.

School districts are already in the middle of their budget years.

Dobbs said what happens with funding associated with Propositions 2 and 3 “has us more than a little nervous.”

He said he hopes there won’t be any drastic changes in funding, because it could be “very detrimental to the school system.”

In Castleford, Superintendent Andy Wiseman said they’re in a “wait and see mode” on direction from the state.

“I think at this point we’re a little bit unsure as far as what the state’s action might be,” he said.

The former Camas County commissioner won the seat by 305 votes. The seat was open after Rep. Wendy Jaquet, D-Ketchum, retired.

Incumbent Rep. Donna Pence, D-Gooding, beat Republican challenger Lee Barron to keep the other House seat in District 26. Pence won by 3,012 votes.

Both Barron and Miller had led in their races Tuesday night, with Camas, Lincoln and Gooding counties reporting.

With Blaine’s results, Pence gained the lead over Barron, while Miller maintained his over Remington.

Blaine County

In the Blaine County races, incumbent Sheriff Gene Ramsey beat challengers Steve England and write-in candidate Larry Clark.

Angenie McCleary retained her county commission seat against challenger Mickey Garcia.

Voters in Hailey and Ketchum rejected a 1 percent tax increase to benefit Hailey’s Friedman Memorial Airport, while voters in Sun Valley passed the measure.

The initiatives received simple majority approval in Ketchum, Hailey and Sun Valley, but only Sun Valley’s surpassed the 60 percent vote needed to pass.

The money was to be used as a minimum revenue guarantee for airlines — meaning the companies don’t lose money, even during slow seasons. That would encourage the airlines to add services to new cities.

It wasn’t clear Wednesday if the tax could still achieve its purpose if only passed by one city. A call to the Fly Sun Valley Alliance was not returned Wednesday afternoon.

BOISE • The former safety and security supervisor at the Idaho Department of Juvenile Corrections facility in Nampa has been charged with sexually abusing a juvenile offender.

Julie McCormick was charged with felony lewd conduct with a child under the age of 16 on Friday in Canyon County’s 3rd District Court. A statement from the Idaho Department of Juvenile Corrections said she was fired from her job at the Juvenile Corrections Center-Nampa in August after seven years with the department. The detention center is designed to house about 84 male and female juveniles between the ages of 13 and 20.

It was not immediately clear if McCormick had an attorney, and she could not be immediately reached.

Officials with the Idaho Department of Juvenile Correction declined to comment on the details of the case, saying it was a personnel matter. But spokesman Monty Prow released a prepared statement saying the charges came after the department asked the Nampa Police Department to investigate.

“IDJC is committed to providing safe and secure facilities for juveniles and staff that deliver the best opportunity for rehabilitation and competency development for juveniles committed to our care,” the statement said.

The department did not say if the investigation came as a result of allegations raised in a whistleblower lawsuit brought by a group of current and former department employees.

Feds Ask for Extension on Waste Cleanup at INL

IDAHO FALLS (AP) • The U.S. Department of Energy has asked Idaho officials for an extension of one year on deadlines involving cleanup of high-level radioactive waste at the Idaho National Laboratory in eastern Idaho.

The Post Register reports in a story published Wednesday that the federal agency failed to meet a September deadline to begin treating the waste at the Integrated Waste Treatment Unit, and it will also miss a Dec. 31 deadline to submit a schedule for processing the waste.

The 900,000 gallons of waste came from processing spent nuclear fuel from U.S. Navy ships. Plans call for converting the waste into a solid form and removing it from the INL. Currently it’s stored in tanks at the INL’s Idaho Nuclear Technology and Engineering Center.

“We’ve had technical issues” with the treatment of this waste, DOE spokesman Brad Bugger said. “We will eventually complete these milestones.”

Officials said the delay was caused because nonradioactive material clogged a filter at the Integrated Waste Treatment Unit.

The Idaho Department of Environmental Quality is taking public comments on the request for the extension.

“We recognize that this is a mixed-waste radioactive unit, it’s challenging to complete the process,” said Department of Environmental Quality spokesman Brian Monson.

Missing the deadlines means the state could start imposing fines of $10,000 a day, though Monson said no decision has been made on that.

“We’re very hopeful that the facility is going to get up and running,” Monson said. “That’s what everybody is looking for.”

Because the extension request is for a year or more, it automatically triggered the public comment period in Idaho.

“We remain optimistic that the extension will be granted,” Bugger said.

to the Affordable Care Act, including whether to expand Medicaid eligibility and implement a state-based insurance exchange.

And then, there’s “the 2,000-pound gorilla in the room,” Bell said: whether to repeal Idaho’s personal property tax on businesses.

Cameron, who co-chairs the Joint Finance-Appropriations Committee with Bell, said the Legislature needs to be careful moving forward with appropriations.

“I don’t know what this election now means for the economy,” Cameron said. “I think it means the Legislature will be very cautious.”

Voters Approve Amendment on Hunting and Fishing

BY TODD DVORAK

Associated Press

BOISE • Idaho voters have agreed to amend the state constitution to protect forever the right to hunt, fish and trap.

As returns trickled in Tuesday night, it was clearly early on HJR2 would gain wide support in a state where hunting and fishing are immensely popular and important drivers of local economies.

By early Wednesday morning, with 59 percent of Idaho’s 947 precincts reporting, the constitutional amendment had won support from 74.3 percent of voters. Results showed that not a single county came close to voting down HJR, though no results had been reported from central Idaho’s Blaine County, which served as the epicenter of some of the opposition generated by the measure.

Idaho now joins 13 other states that have added similar language into their state constitutions.

Idaho lawmakers have made several attempts to approve a constitutional amendment preserving the right to hunt, fish and trap. But each time, the idea was opposed by the Idaho Fish and Game Commission. This year, however, the commission endorsed it. The Idaho Department of Fish and Game did not take an official position.

The amendment, approved by Republicans and Democrats alike during the 2012 Legislature, is worded in a way that enables IDFG to continue managing hunting and fishing and to set regulations on trapping.

In making their case for the constitutional amendment, supporters claimed protections are essential to preserving the right to hunt, fish and trap for future generations. They also see a constitutional amendment as a necessary firewall against efforts by out-of-state animal rights activists or changing public attitudes to curtail those activities.

“We live here in Idaho because we like the outdoors ... and all this does is protects for future generations that ability to go out and hunt and fish or trap,” said Sen. Lee Heider, R-Twin Falls, who led the legislative effort to get the question on the ballot.

The amendment collected yes votes from more than 80 percent of voters in several counties, including Benewah, Bingham, Butte, Cassia, Clearwater, Franklin, Fremont, Jefferson, Jerome, Lewis, Lincoln, Madison, Minedoka and Oneida.

Despite the overwhelming support at the ballot box, the measure had detractors — especially with the inclusion of trapping.

Critics say trapping remains cruel and inhumane and a means of taking wildlife that doesn’t enjoy the same overwhelming public support as hunting and fishing.

On the other end of the opposition spectrum, academics said the Idaho constitution was never intended to protect activities like hunting, fishing or trapping. State or federal constitutions, they say, are best used to protect the rights shared by all citizens, such as voting or freedom of speech.

Woman Faces Intimidation Charge in Murder Case

BOISE • A woman who police say tried to harass a witness who testified against her mother in a murder trial faces a felony witness intimidation charge.

The Idaho Statesman reports that 39-year-old Stacie Lynn Duval was arrested Friday but left jail on a $50,000 bond.

She’s scheduled to appear in 4th District Court on Thursday.

Duval is the daughter of 59-year-old Katherine Lea Stanfield, who was convicted in June of first-degree murder for killing a 2-year-old Wyatt Fesler in the daycare she operated. The boy was the son of Duval’s boyfriend at the time.

Police say Duval tried to harass an 80-year-old witness who testified for the prosecution at Stanfield’s trial.

Stanfield in August was sentenced to life in prison, and must serve at least 10 years before the possibility of parole.

Prosecutors said Stanfield violently slammed the boy’s head into a hard object three times in December 2009, apparently over his unwillingness to take off his coat.

OPINION

“When you were elected in 2008, you inspired the world with a call to take responsibility for the problems we face as global citizens. Since then, you have made earnest efforts to live up to that great hope and trust placed in you by the American public.”

The Dalai Lama, in a statement of congratulations to Pres. Barack Obama.

OUR VIEW

Status Quo Preserved

WASHINGTON •

America's 57th presidential election revealed that a second important national institution is on an unsustainable trajectory. The first, the entitlement state, is endangered by improvident promises to an aging population. It is now joined by the political party whose crucial current function is to stress the need to reform this state. And now the Republican Party, like today's transfer-payment state, is endangered by tardiness in recognizing that demography is destiny.

Perhaps Mitt Romney lost the 2012 election on Sept. 22, 2011, when, alarmed by Texas Gov. Rick Perry's entry into the Republican nomination race, he rushed to Perry's right regarding immigration, attacking the DREAM Act. He would go on to talk about forcing illegal immigrants into "self-deportation." It is surprising that only about 70 percent of Hispanics opposed Romney.

As it has every four years since 1992, the white portion of the turnout declined in 2012. In 2008, Barack Obama became the first person elected president while losing the white vote by double digits. In 2012 — the year after the first year in which a majority of babies born in America were minorities — Hispanics were for the first time a double-digit (10 percent) portion of the turnout. Republicans have four years to figure out how to leaven their contracting base with millions more members of America's largest and fastest-growing minority.

Romney's melancholy but useful role has been to refute those determinists who insist that economic conditions are almost always decisive. Americans are earning less and worth less than they were four years ago; average household income is down $3,800; under the 11 presidents from Harry Truman through George W. Bush, unemployment was 8 percent or more for a total of 39 months but was over that for 43 Obama months. Yet voters preferred the president who presided over this to a Republican who, more than any candidate since the Great Depression, made his economic expertise his presidential credential.

Voters littered the political landscape with contradictions between their loudly articulated discontents and their observable behavior. Self-identified conservatives outnumber self-identified liberals 2-1 in a nation that has re-elected the most liberal president since Lyndon Johnson and his mentor Franklin Roosevelt. A nation said to be picnicking on the slope of a volcano, with molten anger bubbling just below its thin and brittle crust, has matched a rare record of stability in its central political office: For only the second time — the first was the Virginia dynasty of the third, fourth and fifth presidents, Thomas Jefferson, James Madison and James Monroe — there will be three consecutive two-term presidents.

A nation vocally disgusted with the status quo has reinforced it by ratifying existing control of the executive branch and both halves of the legislative branch. After three consecutive "wave" elections in which a party gained at least 20 House seats, and at a moment when approval of Congress has risen — yes, risen — to 21 percent, voters ratified Republican control of the House, keeping in place those excoriated as obstructionists by the president the voters retained. Come January, Washington will be much as it has been, only more so.

Obama is only the second president (Andrew Jackson was the first) to win a second term with a reduced percentage of the popular vote, and the third (after James Madison and Woodrow Wilson) to win a second term with a smaller percentage of the electoral vote. A diminished figure after conducting the most relentlessly negative campaign ever run by an incumbent, his meager mandate is to not be Bain Capital. Foreshadowing continuing institutional conflict, which the constitutional system not only anticipates but encourages, Speaker John Boehner says of the House Republican caucus: "We'll have as much of a mandate as he will."

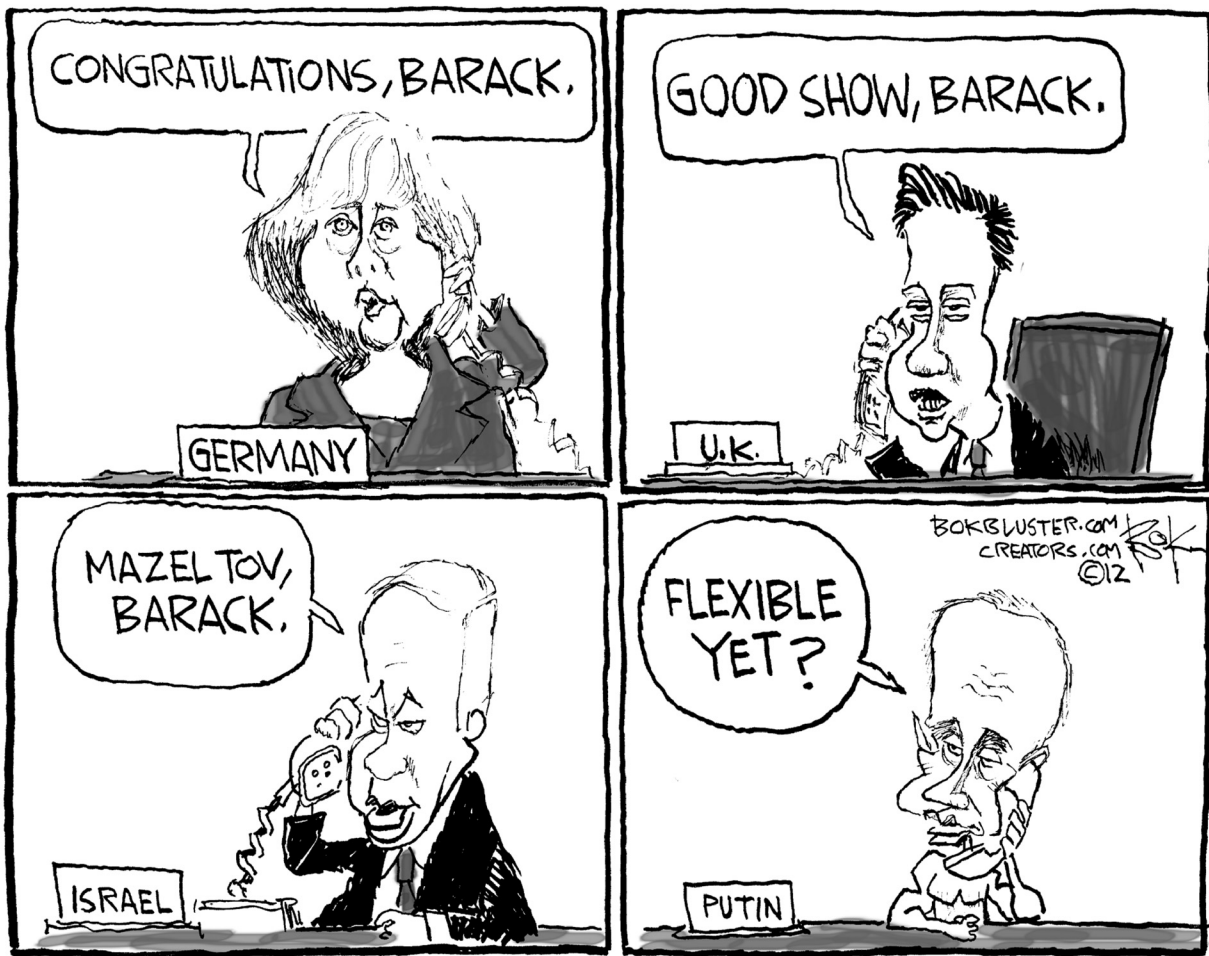

The electoral vote system, so incessantly and simply-mindedly criticized, has again performed the invaluable service of enabling federalism — presidents elected by the decisions of the states' electorates — to deliver a constitutional decisiveness that the popular vote often disguises.

Republicans can take some solace from the popular vote. But unless they respond to accelerating demographic changes — and Obama, by pressing immigration reform, can give Republicans a reef on which they can wreck themselves — the 58th presidential election may be like the 57th, only more so.

This election was fought over two issues as old as the Republic, the proper scope and actual competence of government. The president persuaded — here the popular vote is the decisive datum — almost exactly half the voters. The argument continues. As Benjamin Disraeli said, "Finality is not the language of politics."

ONLINE COMMENT

The conversation continues 24/7 on Magicvalley.com.

In response to the article, "Ed Reforms, Presidential Race Drive Turnout" an online reader wrote:

CJCarlin: How much longer are Idaho citizens going to vote for the people who keep us in the Dark Ages?

Right now, over two hundred thousand people in Idaho are receiving food stamps. That's more than sixteen percent of the population. How many of those people voted Republican last night?

Our median income is plummeting, poverty is on the rise, and unemployment is still higher than the national average (when you include those who have simply given up the search for a job). Meanwhile, our Republican state lawmakers are cutting funding, eviscerating critical social services, and writing off their own constituents in a political power play.

When Romney talked about "the forty-seven percent," he was talking about you. The working poor, who get a check instead of a bill come tax time. Idahoans who struggle to make ends meet and support their families are being crushed by Republican policies, but refuse to lay blame where it belongs.

Instead of throwing power at the people who don't care about you, who consider you beneath contempt and too dumb to see where your best interests are, why not vote for change? The Republican party has nothing for you. All we can look forward to in Idaho with them in power is more of the downward spiral.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Burley Airport Discussion Needs to be Open, Appropriate

Rich Simpson
Shooting the Bull

I am a pilot who owns an airplane and a hanger at the Burley Municipal Airport. In my 25 years owning two businesses in Burley, my airplane has been an invaluable tool to meet the needs of my family, friends and customers.

When I owned Payne Mortuary, I flew to many locations in Idaho and throughout the West to bring back home those who had passed away. I am also a professional aerial photographer, having taken pictures for clients like Pacific Ethanol, Exergy, General Electric, Pentad Properties, many farmers and ranchers, and others.

In addition to my personal use of the airport, 17 years ago, Life Flight flew my son, born with health complications, from Burley to Salt Lake City. The airport has been integral part my life and my livelihood in Burley. Hundreds of thousands of private and complex prop-driven and jet aircraft have come and gone from our Burley airport without incident. It truly has an impeccable safety record and having flown into many of the airports throughout Idaho, ours ranks among the best in the state.

In my present capacity as Cassia County clerk, I am the chief financial officer of the county and have a seat at the table when the county formulates its budget. The majority of our budget pays for law enforcement, the courts, the jails and all the staff required for the administration of justice. These services are mandated to be provided for the safety of the community. County officials have worked hard to be conservative with every dollar we appropriate and judicious with each decision we make concerning the new Cassia County Judicial Center. Moving our courts into the new facility was necessary due to the inadequacy of the security for all who use the court system with our current facilities. Decisions our local and municipal governments make concerning infrastructure must balance the needs of the community in a way least disruptive to the finances of each and every citizen.

Concerning the issue of displacing the Burley airport, I am concerned there have been far too many screened or veiled discussions and too many decisions made behind closed doors. As both a user of the airport and an elected official who represents the residents of Burley, I feel compelled to publicly point out the potential costs Burley residents may incur at a most difficult financial time to undertake a venture of this magnitude and to do it right.

I implore Burley city officials to please come forward with appropriate public dialogue regarding this potential change. We all need to know the reasons why, explore and discuss well-defined and documented costs, determine whether it is prudent in these difficult economic times, enumerate the impact to economic infrastructures, and discuss commercial gain to the area that the vacated airport property could bring.

Airport users then might be less reticent about relinquishing the extra measure of safety they have with two runways in favor of single long runway 20 minutes outside of Burley. After careful, considerate, truthful and open dialogue and if it is the prudent course, the majority will clearly give supportive voice to it. As a board member of the Burley Airport Users Association, I would then be more likely to heartily support it. Short of that, I simply wish the concept would rest in peace.

Joseph W. Larsen is the Cassia County clerk and a member of the Burley Airport Users Association.

MORMON LEADERS CONGRATULATE OBAMA ON RE-ELECTION

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) • Top leaders in The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints are congratulating President Barack Obama for winning a second term, and urging Americans to pray for him.

The Mormon church's First Presidency and the Quorum of the Twelve Apostles also said they commended Mitt Romney for engaging in the high levels of the democratic process, and said they wished him and his family success in the future.

The LDS leaders' statement Tuesday didn't mention that Romney was a member of the church.

The congratulatory memo says it's now time for Americans to come together after a long campaign. Church leaders encouraged prayer for the president, his administration, and the new Congress as they navigate "difficult and turbulent times."

Wyoming Gov. Disappointed For Coal After the Election

CHEYENNE, Wyo. (AP) • Wyoming Gov. Matt Mead said Wednesday he's disappointed in the re-election of President Barack Obama because he believes Republican challenger Mitt Romney had a better grasp of the importance of domestic energy production, particularly coal.

Wyoming, the nation's leading coal-producing state, draws most state income from energy production taxes. However, the state is projecting essentially flat revenues over coming years in part because of sagging demand for coal.

Mead, a Republican, is pushing ahead with 8 percent state agency budget cuts as he prepares to propose a supplemental budget bill to state lawmakers next month. He said he plans to trim his own office budget by 10 percent.

"It's a long list why I think (Romney) would have been better for Wyoming," Mead said. "As I viewed the presidential election, I saw that Congress hasn't passed a budget. Our debt and deficit continue to go up, unemployment remains too high. And I don't think the current administration has a full appreciation of what the value of affordable American energy is to the economy."

Mead said he had been impressed by Romney's emphasis on a sound energy policy, including his recognition of the value of coal.

Wyoming's in-house state fiscal analysts last month projected that coal production in the state is on pace to decline 8.7 percent, or about 40 million tons, in 2012. While coal from the Powder River Basin has a history of low-cost energy production, the analysts reported that it faces increased competition from natural gas while older power plants in the nation face increasing federal environmental regulations.

Federal figures released this summer projected that the share of U.S. electricity coming from coal was expected to dip below 40 percent this year, the lowest level since the government began collecting data in 1949. Four years ago, it was 50 percent, and by the end of this decade, it is likely to reach 30 percent.

Coal stocks fell Wednesday with Obama's re-election. His administration has proposed new environmental regulations on coal-fired power plants while Romney had proposed rescinding some restrictions on emissions.

Mead credited Interior Secretary Ken Salazar with releasing some coal leases in Wyoming in recent years, resulting in increased sales. But Mead said he doesn't believe the administration has done enough.

"The fact is, it's a fuel source that allows us to produce electricity at a very competitive rate," Mead said. "That is not only good for manufacturing within this country, and the jobs that are attached to it, but also it helps keep us globally competitive when a major cost driver for industry is energy costs."

The Sierra Club and other groups have pushed to try to block federal coal leases in the Powder River Basin on the grounds that burning coal mined there would contribute to global warming. The groups have failed to get traction in the courts so far.

Connie Wilbert, field organizer for the Sierra Club in Wyoming, said Wednesday her group fundamentally supports Obama's approach.

Mead also said he disagrees with Obama's signature health care overhaul, the Affordable Care Act. Mead led Wyoming to join other states in a federal lawsuit challenging the law that resulted in the U.S. Supreme Court's ruling this summer upholding most of the law.

Mead says he intends to decide by next month whether to recommend to state lawmakers that the state expand eligibility for Medicaid, a joint state-federal health program.

Charges Dropped in 1999 Killing of Utah Student

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) • Charges have been dropped against a man accused of killing a University of Utah student and injuring her friend in 1999.

Court records show 3rd District Judge Deno Himonas dismissed murder and eight other felony charges Monday.

Salt Lake County chief prosecutor Sim Gill says there were evidence issues and other inconsistencies that came up as the case progressed.

Twenty-two-year-old Amy Quinton died after someone broke into a Salt Lake City apartment and stabbed her and 19-year-old Erin Warn. The man had held three women in the apartment at knifepoint and stole their wallets.

Younger was sentenced to 31 years in prison in 2010 for the unrelated robbery and rape of another University of Utah student as she walked home from class in 1996.

Ex-prosecutor Gets Prison Deal in Vegas Drug Case

BY KEN RITTER
Associated Press

LAS VEGAS • A former prosecutor-turned-fugitive who once handled the high-profile Las Vegas drug cases of celebrities Paris Hilton and Bruno Mars was sentenced Wednesday to a reduced term of 12 to 30 months in prison term following his return from Mexico.

David Schubert, 49, fled there to avoid jail after pleading guilty in a crack cocaine possession case. In court Thursday, he didn't apologize as he stood for sentencing before Clark County District Court Judge Carolyn Ellsworth, defense attorney Louis Schneider said.

"He feels as if he shouldn't have even been there," Schneider said later.

Instead, Schubert told the judge he felt he'd been treated exceptionally harshly for his March 2011 arrest with $40 in rock cocaine and an unregistered handgun in his car.

Ellsworth revoked a sentence that she imposed in February that would have Schubert serve nine months in county jail as a requirement of probation. But she also cut his prison term from a possible 16 to 40 months, gave Schubert 40 days credit for time served and ordered him enrolled in a prison substance abuse program.

Schneider said Schubert was grateful for the reduced sentence and opportunity for treatment and said he hopes to resume practicing law in the future. Schubert's law license was suspended by the state Supreme Court just before he fled to Mexico on Sept. 21. He was arrested at the border Sept. 30 while re-entering the U.S. after spending time in the Mexican coastal resort towns of Rosarito Beach and Ensenada.

Thom Gover, the deputy Nevada state attorney general who prosecuted the case, called Schubert's revised sentence appropriate.

"If the interest of justice and rehabilitation is the goal, one to 2 1/2 years is enough," Gover said.

The sentence was first reported Wednesday by the Las Vegas Review-Journal.

Schubert resigned from the Clark County district attorney's office after his March 2011 arrest and pleaded guilty in September 2011 to felony unlawful possession of a controlled substance. Felony conspiracy, weapon and drug use charges were dropped under a plea deal that avoided trial.

Schubert expected mandatory probation and a chance to wipe the felony conviction from his record. But Ellsworth rejected the plea deal in February, berating Schubert as "a disgrace to his oath as a prosecutor and a lawyer" and declaring that Schubert wouldn't get special treatment.

Among the high-profile cases Schubert handled were plea deals that spared both Hilton and Mars from serving jail time.

Hilton, 30, was arrested in August 2010 after police said 0.8 grams of cocaine fell out of her handbag following a Las Vegas Strip traffic stop. The celebrity socialite successfully completed a year of probation on misdemeanor cocaine possession and obstruction charges.

Mars, 26, was cleared in January of a felony cocaine possession charge after staying out of trouble for a year and meeting other conditions of a plea deal. The Grammy-winning pop star, whose real name is Peter Hernandez, acknowledged in court in February 2011 that he had 2.6 grams of cocaine after a performance at a Hard Rock Hotel & Casino nightclub.

Schubert told the Review-Journal during a jailhouse interview last month that he was ready to accept responsibility in his case.

"I did what I did, and I accept the consequences," he said. "But I don't feel I was treated fairly by the system."

Utah Counties Count Provisional, Absentee Ballots

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) • Elections officials across Utah on Wednesday counted thousands of provisional and absentee ballots cast by voters in the general election — the results of which won't be known for two weeks — but said they doubted the election's winners and losers would change despite the sheer number of ballots still to be processed.

Two big Utah races were particularly close, with Democratic Rep. Jim Matheson declaring victory in the 4th Congressional District over Saratoga Springs Mayor Mia Love by just 2,646 votes. Utah voters also were divided over whether some of the state's severance tax revenue from mining, oil and gas companies should be deposited into a rainy-day fund, with 51 percent voting in favor.

How many ballots remained to be processed statewide wasn't known Wednesday, but in Salt Lake County, the number reached nearly 43,700.

Vote totals go before a canvassing board on Nov. 20.

Utah's general election ended with a Republican rout in just about every major race. The GOP secured wins for Gov. Gary Herbert, U.S. Sen. Orrin Hatch and three of the state's four congressional seats and expanded its already wide lead in the state Legislature, capturing four seats previously held by Democrats.

But in Utah's most hotly contested U.S. House race, Matheson and Love traded leads throughout election night before Matheson declared a narrow victory. Love conceded shortly thereafter, but The Associated Press has not called the race.

Thomas said he would be surprised if the results were reversed by the addition of provisional and absentee ballots, largely because of the high number of votes that remain to be counted in Salt Lake County.

"Love didn't do as well as she wanted to in Salt Lake County, and with the majority of ballots outstanding there, I would be surprised if those results make any difference," he said.

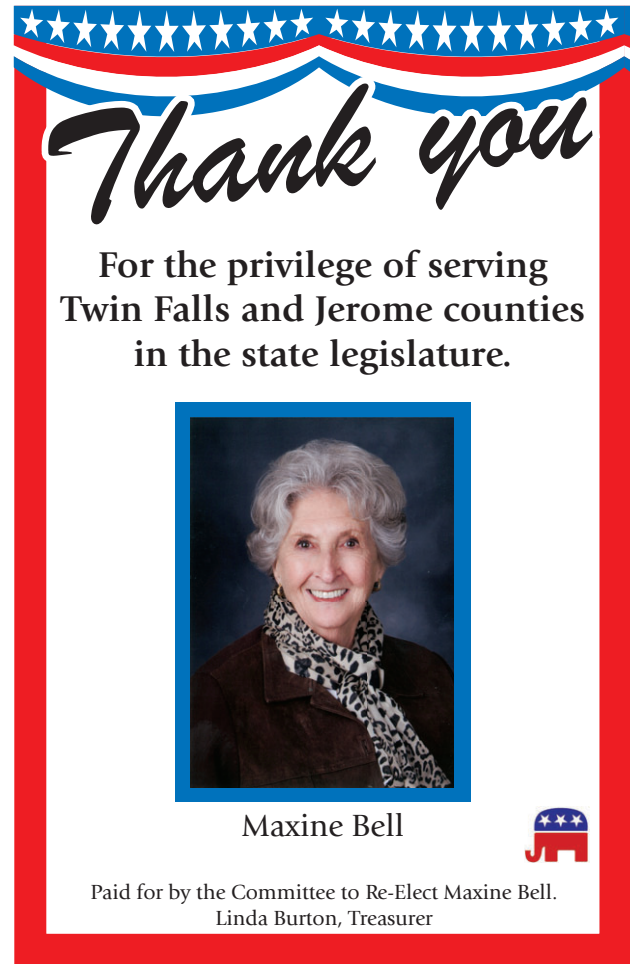

Nearly 12,000 provisional ballots remained to be counted in Utah County, where Love did very well, but only 2,184 of those are in District 4, according to Scott Hogensen, chief deputy clerk auditor.

The other two counties represented in District 4 — Sanpete and Juab — reported 691 ballots and 176 ballots still to be processed, respectively.

Salt Lake County Clerk Sherrie Swensen noted that so many people dropped off their vote-by-mail ballots at polling sites that the county had to send out additional ballot bags to collect them. At the main office, election workers fielded 12,000 telephone calls on Tuesday alone.

Overall, Salt Lake County saw a record number of people voting Tuesday, she said, even if the final number hasn't yet been tallied.

Hikers approach the historical mining district in Boulder Basin.

THE GHOSTS OF WEALTH

By foot or ATV, explore Boulder Basin's mining history.

BY MIKE COTHERN
For the Times-News

KETCHUM • Boulder Mountain rises majestically from the valley floor northwest of Sun Valley, its prominent summit a fixture among the rugged, multicolored mountain range carrying the same name.

As impressive as the peak is, however, discovering what lies behind it will easily become the highlight of any adventure into the area. An alpine basin there holds the remains of a ghost town that signify the earliest beginnings to the settlement of Blaine County and the Wood River Valley.

The dirt road that leads explorers to the historical mining district departs from Idaho Highway 75 innocently enough but soon turns into a narrow track that only smaller 4x4's and ATVs can negotiate.

My wife, son and I recently visited the area and opted to park at the trailhead and walk the route's four miles to what remains of Boulder City. Soon after the hike's onset, we received our first peek into the past when we found two log structures, walls still standing, nestled into the forest near Boulder Creek.

After hiking another mile through the trees, we followed the road as it leaves the creek, breaks out into the open and makes a couple of short switchbacks before angling upward along the drainage's west side. Jeff Gabardi, mining engineer for the Sawtooth National Forest, notes that the original road to Boulder Basin remained near the creek as it climbed upward, but in

Swap Your Old Ski Gear for Something New

TWIN FALLS • The 43rd annual CSI Ski Swap next week will kick off southern Idaho's ski season.

College of Southern Idaho's international business students will oversee the sale of new and used winter gear from 3 to 10 p.m. Nov. 16 and 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. Nov. 17 in the CSI Rec Center.

Though it's one of the oldest student-run events on the CSI campus, the Ski Swap took on a new look and feel a few years ago when it was taken over by the business students and moved to the Rec Center from its longtime home in the CSI Expo Center.

Anyone who has skis, snowboards, boots, clothing or other winter gear to sell may bring it to the CSI Rec Center between noon and 9 p.m. Nov. 15. Students will check the merchandise into the sale at an agreed price, then oversee the sale all weekend. A commission for the Business Club will be taken on all equipment that sells, CSI said. Whatever doesn't sell can be claimed at the Rec Center from 4 to 6 p.m. Nov. 18.

In addition to the used winter gear, the show features vendors including Claude's Sports, Idaho Watersports and Sun Valley, Pomerelle, Soldier Mountain and Magic Mountain ski resorts. There will be hourly drawings for day passes, discounts and other prizes.

Shoppers who want the best selection can buy "early bird" admission from 3 to 6 p.m. Nov. 16 for $5. Admission for the rest of the show will be $2.

TWIN FALLS • Twelve years ago, Mike Medberry thought he was going to die in the wilds of one of his favorite projects — the Craters of the Moon National Monument.

But Medberry, now 56, survived and lived to write about it. The memoir is titled "On the Dark Side of the Moon: A Journey Toward Recovery" (Caxton Press, $14.95), and Medberry will be in Twin Falls on Nov. 17 to read from the book.

In the spring of 2000, while hiking with friends on a rainy and blustery day, Medberry had a stroke that left him paralyzed and unable to speak, see or think clearly. Medberry said the stroke dropped him, and as he lay on lava rock, his friends hiked on unaware.

What unfolds is a blend of what Medberry remembers after waking up alone and unable to move, and flashbacks to his childhood.

"Inert on the lava, I tried to take inventory. I looked at the world with one good eye. Why was everything so blurry through the other? My right eye was wet and hurt like hell. It felt huge, like the monstrous eye of a Cyclops. I must have smashed it on the lava. How long had I lain there? Minutes, seconds, hours? I had no idea."

In one flashback, readers learn that Medberry's father had a stroke before he died.

The memoir also touches on the reason the hikers were there: to help ensure 750,000 acres would be added to the already designated 54,000-acre national monument.

Medberry was eventually rescued a day later. The same time he was flown to a nearby hospital, Interior Secretary Bruce Babbitt, on behalf of President Clinton, came to support the addition of the acres.

Medberry had followed a healthy lifestyle, he said, and the thought of having a stroke wasn't even a concern. "I didn't have any warning signs."

Medberry's recovery was intensive, and he said he had to learn how to walk, write and speak again.

"I realized what it was like to be paralyzed, and it's an awful experience, Medberry said. "Learning how to walk was the most joyous experience."

Three Meteor Showers Span the Holiday Season

While space is largely a vacuum, some places in the solar system are less empty than others. If you're thinking "asteroids," don't be misled by Hollywood's depictions: From the densest part of the main asteroid belt, odds are the nearest asteroid would be too far away to see with the unaided eye.

es Earth's, we plow into its debris trail annually, producing a meteor shower. Some showers originate with well-known comets, like last month's Orionids, from Comet Halley. Others come from more obscure parents, like next week's Leonids, issuing from Comet Swift-Tuttle.

While the Leonids will likely produce 20 meteors per hour at best, the timing of this year's shower is good. The peak will arrive around 1 a.m. next Friday night (just as Earth's rotation is turning Idaho into the oncoming stream), and the moon will have set hours earlier, leaving a dark sky for the fainter meteors.

Conditions are also favorable for the strongest shower of the year, December's Geminids. Although the peak arrives before sunset on Dec. 13, with up to two meteors per minute there should still be plenty to see in the pre-dawn hours of Dec. 14, again without a moon to interfere. The Geminids also tend to produce numerous bright meteors.

January's Quadrantids complete the trifecta. The peak, at 6 a.m. Jan. 3 (a half hour before the start of morning twilight), could rival the Geminids, although a last-quarter moon will interfere.

ON TARGET: YOUR WEEKLY HUNTING REPORT

Elk Remain Steady

"The late hunts are here, and although the temperatures have had an impact on success rates, we are still seeing good numbers of trophies coming into the shop," Jeff Frost of Intermountain Taxidermy & Worldwide Adventures said Tuesday.

"Whitetail deer are also starting to come in from eastern and northern Idaho. Elk numbers remain steady with excellent trophy quality coming out of the northern units still," Frost said. "As the rut is fully under way for mule deer, those who have late permits are welcoming the cold front that is due on Thursday."

Fish and Game Seeks Info on Bighorn Sightings

JEROME • The Idaho Department of Fish and Game wants information on any sightings of bighorn sheep in or near the South Hills.

Recently, bighorn sheep were observed moving south from their usual range, Fish and Game said Wednesday. These movements are likely due to this summer's Minidoka Complex fires, which burned more than 90,000 acres and started near Big Cottonwood Creek, where the bighorn sheep typically live.

Fish and Game biologists want to monitor the movements of this relatively small herd of bighorn sheep to better assess the fire's effects on this population. To report a sighting, call the wildlife staff in the department's Jerome office at 324-4359.

Wolf Trapping Seasons Open This Month

JEROME • Trappers and hound hunters will be out in the wilds of Idaho this month, so outdoorsmen with pets or bird dogs should know how to release a pet that is caught in a foothold trap or neck snare, the Idaho Department of Fish and Game suggests.

The state's wolf-trapping seasons open this month.

Wolf-trapping rules have changed since the 2012 Big Game Seasons and Rules brochure was published. For new trapping rules, see the 2012-13 Wolf Trapping Seasons and Rules pamphlet available at license vendors, Fish and Game offices and online (fishandgame.idaho.gov/public/docs/rules/wolfTrapRules.pdf).

Wolf-trapping seasons open Nov. 15 and run through March 31 in the Panhandle zone, except for units 2 and 3; in the Lolo zone; in the Dworshak-Elk City zone, except Unit 10A; in the Selway zone; in the Middle Fork zone; and in units 19A and 25 of the McCall-Weiser Zone.

Trapping season opens Feb. 1 through March 31 in Unit 10A of the Dworshak-Elk City Zone.

All other zones are closed to trapping, Fish and Game said.

Trappers must complete a required wolf-trapping class before they can buy wolf tags.

Licensed trappers may buy up to five wolf-trapping tags per season. In addition, up to five wolf-hunting tags may be purchased per calendar year. Unused wolf-hunting tags may be used to tag trapped wolves in wolf zones with an open trapping and hunting season, Fish and Game said. Bag limits are not the same for all the wolf zones.

Only three wolf-trapping tags may be used in units 19A and 25 of the McCall-Weiser Zone.

Wolf tags cost $11.50 for resident hunters, and $31.75 for nonresidents. Trapping tags are valid for the trapping season, but wolf-hunting tags are valid for the calendar year.

Times-News journalists blog on their outdoor adventures — and yours — at "Trails & Tales." A recent entry is from Tetona Dunlap:

"... When I visited Craters of the Moon National Monument and Preserve this summer, the heat radiating from the black lava rocks almost made me turn around and retreat to the air conditioning of my car. But I dragged on, my bottle of lukewarm water my only respite from the heat for yards until I was greeted by the cool air of a lava tube cave.

"This unique moonscape is one I want to revisit now that the temperatures have dropped.

"There is so much to see here I didn't get to the first time.

"I wanted to take a closer look at the intricate caverns and holes etched deep into the rocks as I climbed up a spatter cone without feeling like I was going to pass out from heat exhaustion. I also wanted to take a leisurely walk through the Devil's Orchard instead of merely driving through the parking lot..."

Tragedy

When he was able, he returned to Craters of the Moon.

"It was a place of refuge to go into the wild country and think," Medberry said. "I needed that solitude."

Hear Him

Idaho author and conservation advocate Mike Medberry will read from his memoir, "On the Dark Side of the Moon: A Journey Toward Recovery," at 2 p.m. Nov. 17 at Hastings, 870 Blue Lakes Blvd. N., in Twin Falls.

Wilderness Precautions

Mike Medberry hopes his book will help others take precautions in the wilderness.

- One of the things Medberry does now that he didn't before: carry aspirin with him.
- Though he prefers to hike with others, he said, if you are hiking by yourself be sure to let people know where you are going and when they should expect you back. He also leaves a note with this information in his car.
- Always stay well hydrated before and during a hike. A day before he went hiking at Craters of the Moon National Monument and Preserve in 2000, Medberry competed in a half-marathon. He suspects dehydration might have played a role in his stroke.
- Lennie Ramacher, interpretive park ranger and volunteer coordinator at Craters, said the best plan is the one made before you hike. Always tell someone where you are going if you are hiking alone, and it is a good idea to have first aid training and medical supplies.
- Pace yourself and watch the weather, Ramacher said, especially at the monument. During the summer the heat is amplified off the black lava rock, and in the spring and winter, storms can spring up quickly on the plains.

Ghosts

the 1950s it was re-routed along the rocky, open slope. This placement of the road on a steady grade was made to facilitate the hauling of large quantities of low-quality "waste" ore from the mines above for eventual delivery to Utah for processing. This venture essentially marked the last chapter in the region's mining history.

While the view along the open mountainside is superb, we ended up splitting our focus between the vista of the drainage and the anticipation of the occasional tree along the road that offered some respite from the warm September sun. The final steep section of the route offered much more shade; adding to the cooling effect was several hundred yards of road with spring water flowing down its cobble base.

The level terrain of the journey's final mile, even after noting the lack of contour lines on a topographic map, still came as a surprise — such broad, flat valleys are rarely found at 9,000-foot elevations. Rocky ridges surround but don't crowd the basin, with several connecting to Boulder Mountain, which now stood to our southwest, rather than to the north where we'd left the pavement a few hours earlier.

Soon after entering the valley, we spotted several crumpled piles of lumber, likely cabins, lying near the road along with an upright trough-looking feature. Just around the corner from those ruins stand the remains of a couple of other structures, log walls still interlocked but slumped by time and gravity. We speculated that a two-story building once featured some sort of commercial enterprise.

While we were unsure of the identities of this collection of a half-dozen buildings comprising Boulder City, several hundred yards away stands the area's most easily recognizable attraction. Built into the side of the mountain where rocky cliffs meet the basin's flat ground, an ore-processing mill still endures in testament to the mining district's heyday. While much of the structure's interior has collapsed, the building's skeleton remains in the form of solid beams, upright lumber and weathered outer walls. A cylindrical boiler sits adjacent to and in line with the mill, causing us to wonder about the difficulty of transporting such a heavy piece of equipment, even in sections, up the road nearly a century ago.

Two steel cables anchored near the mill are strung to the landscape above where a few mine tailing piles still dot the mountainside. Finally, after a closer inspection, we spotted several mineshaft openings, their tunnels punched into the mountain at hopeful angles for intersecting veins containing precious metals.

The quest for wealth buried inside the mountains at Boulder Basin dates back to 1879 with the filing of the first mining claim. In a re-

To reach Boulder Basin Road, drive 13 miles north from Ketchum on Idaho Highway 75. Turn right onto the dirt road and drive less than one mile before reaching a junction with a sign that reads "Boulder Basin-5."

The hiking trailhead lies one mile past this sign but can be accessed only by vehicles able to ford Boulder Creek.

After negotiating the three-mile climb into the basin, take the left fork to explore the ghost town and mill; the right fork enters a cirque holding Boulder Lake and a few other mining claims. Motorized vehicles accessing the region are required to remain on existing roads.

port written by Victoria Mitchell that the Idaho Geological Survey published 15 years ago, the total recorded production for the mines in Boulder Basin between 1884 and 1949 amounted to nearly 8,000 tons of ore and several hundred tons of old tailings. The processing of this raw material yielded 610 ounces of gold, 111,620 ounces of silver, 48,094 pounds of copper and 1.3 million pounds of lead. Between 1884 and 1894, one estimate put production value at $1 million for a block of claims known as the Golden Glow group.

The wealth didn't come without difficulty, however. The survey report notes that the area was characterized by "complex and divided ownership" and marked by complications brought on by litigation and bankruptcy.

In one instance, a partnership formed in the 1930s between J.A. Schultz and a Canadian firm ended in futility and rancor. Schultz, who at the time leased several claims, wrote that besides the foreign entity breaking Idaho business and mining laws, it "refused to give men a bathhouse or change house, kept powder in where the men eat, refused to pipe water for drinking." Amidst other assertions, "approximately 10 diamond drill holes were put down, all shallow holes, all missed vein except one, due to their engineers rotten figuring. All told, a waste of money."

The fact that Boulder Basin combines a scenic landscape with such rich history — part of which visitors can still put their hands on — makes the spot a unique locale.

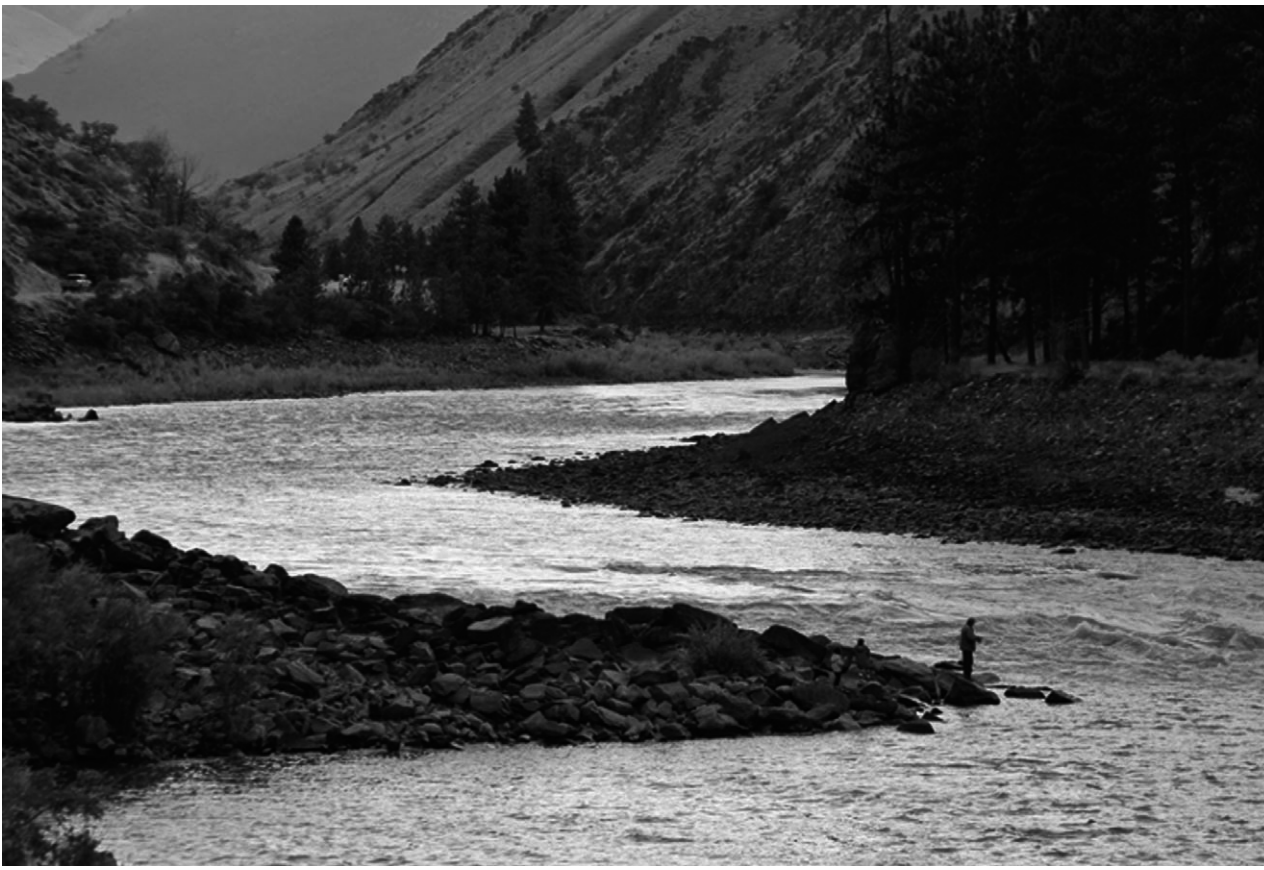

Ed Kennedy, backcountry recreation manager for the Sawtooth National Recreation Area, said the Forest Service is happy to offer the area to motorized and non-motorized users alike.

"It's a beautiful alpine basin, but the wet meadows and archaeological features are fragile," Kennedy said, reminding visitors to respect the environment and those seeking the same experience.

Spoons and Steelhead on Idaho's Salmon River

BY PETE ZIMOWSKY
Idaho Statesman

RIGGINS • The bright orange and brass spoon wobbled only for a few seconds along an eddy line in the Salmon River when it stopped dead.

Then, line began peeling off my level-wind reel at a sizzling speed as the drag sang.

“Steelhead on!” I yelled up the beach. My wife knew immediately to get the net out of the drift boat.

We had been pulling plugs from the boat, but I wanted to mix it up with a little spoon fishing while we stopped on a sandbar for lunch.

The steelhead made a run downstream and so did I, leaving a trench of deep footprints in the soft sand.

After a 15-minute battle that took me up and down the beach, the beautiful keeper steelie was in the net.

Fishing for steelhead with spoons and spinners is exciting but often ignored by anglers.

Plugs and Bait

Some anglers get bored pulling plugs in a drift boat. Others don't want to mess with bait, such as drifting shrimp. Others haven't taken the time to learn, or get outfitted, for fly fishing.

For a change of pace, that leaves tossing spoons and spinners for these rainbow-colored sea-run giants that migrate hundreds of miles to spawning grounds in Idaho's rivers.

From the Boat

You can be both a plug and spinner or spoon angler. Some anglers keep two fishing rods in the drift boat. One has a plug on it and the other a spinner or spoon.

If you finish plugging or Hotshotting an area and plan to drift downstream to another plug-pulling area, don't quit fishing. Pick up the spoon rod and cast and retrieve as you drift. You never know. Catching fish means having a line in the water.

Starting Out

“Spoons are an art form,” says Carmen Macdonald, a veteran salmon and steelhead angler and representative for Luhr Jensen lures.

“There's a pretty simple goal. You want to get the lure in the strike zone,” says Macdonald, who is familiar with Idaho's Salmon River.

When it comes to fishing spoons and spinners, you've got to pick apart the river pretty much the same way as plug and fly anglers.

Rivers, like the Salmon, pretty much have the same characteristics up and down the waterways.

Rapids to Tailout

You've got rapids and a pool with a bunch of roily water. Then it mellows out with a nice stretch of flatwater 4 to 8 feet deep above the tailout. The water just off the bottom in that flat section is the strike zone.

The tailout is the calm-water area at the horizon line just before another set of rapids or riffle.

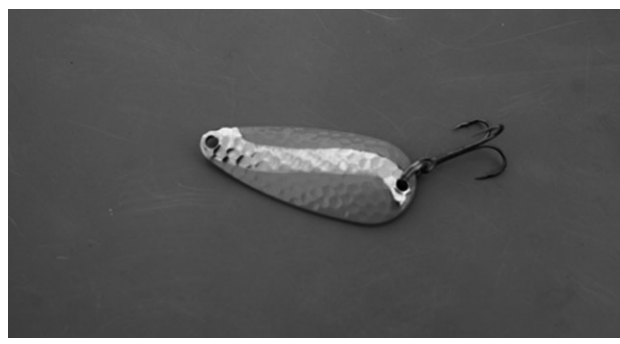

Both the stretch of flatwater and tailout are prime locations to fish.

“Day in and day out those flats will hold fish,” says Macdonald.

A lot of anglers also catch fish in the tailout, especially the first thing in the morning when fish are holding in that part of the river.

River Current

The key to fishing spoons and spinners is the speed of the river's current. You want walking-speed current, Macdonald says.

Anglers also need to get the lure within a couple of feet off the bottom of the river in the strike zone. It takes just the right kind of cast to do it.

OK, start out in that nice stretch of flat water after the rapids. Look straight out across the river at a right angle to the river bank.

Don't cast straight out. Look at the depth of the river first.

In shallow water, the lure will sink into the strike zone more quickly so you want to make your cast with more of a downstream angle, say around 45 degrees.

If you cast too far upstream in shallow water, you'll get hung up quickly and lose a $3 to $4 lure.

The deeper the water, the more upstream you want to cast so the lure has enough time to sink down into the strike zone before it begins to swing in the current. Adjust your cast maybe slightly less than a 45-degree angle upstream.

Adjusting your casts takes practice and maybe losing a few bucks worth of lures.

Easy Going Spinners

Spinners are easier to fish than spoons. You have to make sure you cast it properly and get it swinging in the current and going into the strike zone.

All you have to do is reel in the proper speed to have it make a good swing. The spinning blade produces the flash and action.

So, if you are just starting out fishing hardware, spinners will do the trick.

“Spoons are more challenging and more rewarding,” says Macdonald. “A good spoon angler takes into account water depth and speed.”

You've got to feel the wobble. If you just throw the spoon upstream with a slack line. The spoon will sink like a rock.

Cast out and tighten up on the line just enough to feel the wobble. You can also let line out to get the spoon to flutter into the strike zone.

Watch your rod tip. If it is vibrating as the spoon drifts, the spoon is working properly.

“Don't overwork the spoon,” he says. The wider the spoon, the more action. The thinner the spoon, the more current is needed for the action.

“It's a wonderful way to fish and the rewards are incredible,” Macdonald says.

However, if Macdonald had one lure to choose, it would be a spinner.

“It's got flash and vibration and it's easy to use,” he says.

Firefighters Ball Raises Money for Backcountry Rescue Equipment

SUN VALLEY • If you relish backcountry adventure, consider this: The Ketchum/Sun Valley Volunteer Firefighters Association will hold its only fundraiser of the year this month, the Firefighters Ball.

The ball — Nov. 17 at the Sun Valley Inn's Limelight Room — is open to anyone 21 and older, and tickets are $15. Doors open at 8 p.m., and the music starts at 9 p.m.

Karly Maratea, president of the Ketchum Volunteer Association, said the fundraiser is crucial to the fire department's training and operations.

“Funds raised from the ball are used to make our jobs safer by providing extra training and equipment,” she said. “In addition, most of our backcountry and technical rescue equipment has been purchased exclusively with ball funds.”

This summer, the Ketchum/Sun Valley Backcountry Medical Rescue Team rescued a climber who was injured while climbing the Elephant's Perch near Redfish Lake and several injured hikers and bikers. The ropes, Stokes litters and other backcountry equipment used had all been purchased with money raised from the ball over the years.

“We simply would not be able to support our mission of protecting our residents and visitors without the funds raised by the ball,” Maratea said in a press release. “The ball is also just a great time for us to get together and say thanks to those we serve as firefighters.”

Music will be by local band Old Death Whisper, followed by DJ Doc Rock and DJ Alien.

Tickets are $15 at firefighterball.org, Atkinsons' Market in Ketchum, at the door or at fire stations in Ketchum and Sun Valley.

Ariz. Game and Fish Intervenes in Lead Ammo Lawsuit

PHOENIX (AP) • The Arizona Game and Fish Department has filed a motion to intervene in a lawsuit seeking to regulate lead ammunition in the Kaibab National Forest.

Conservations groups contend the U.S. Forest Service has a duty to ensure that endangered California condors and other birds aren't killed by ingesting spent lead ammunition.

The Sierra Club, Grand Canyon Wildlands Council and Center for Biological Diversity want the Forest Service to place a mandatory ban on hunting with lead ammo in northern Arizona.

Arizona Game and Fish has been encouraging hunters to use non-lead ammunition. The agency says that is the best approach for long-term success of the condor program in the Southwest.

About 75 condors fly in a range that stretches from Arizona's Grand Canyon to southern Utah's Zion National Park.

Hualapai Seek Bids to Pave Road to Skywalk

PEACH SPRINGS, Ariz. (AP) • The road that leads to the Grand Canyon Skywalk might not be rough to travel too much longer.

The Hualapai Tribe says it expects to bid out a project this month to finish paving Diamond Bar Road.

The old ranch road twists around Joshua trees, dips into a local wash and ends up on the Hualapai reservation, west of Grand Canyon National Park.

Mohave County has maintained the 9-mile unpaved, gravel section using a motor grader and water truck.

The tribe says the paving project should take 15 months once it chooses a contractor. Previous estimates have put the cost at $30 million.

The Skywalk is a horseshoe-shaped glass bridge that extends 70 feet from the canyon's edge on the reservation in northwestern Arizona.

Few Things in Life Are as Satisfying as a Good, Sharp Knife

BY MICHAEL PEARCE
The Wichita Eagle

WICHITA, Kan. • My fourth-grade teacher, Mrs. Meisner, sometimes borrowed my pocket knife because it was the sharpest in her class.

Now, as then, I've considered a good knife as essential to my outdoors lifestyle as a nice gun or good fly rod.

That dedication to quality cutlery got a bit expensive lately, but more on that later.

I come from a family of knife-guys. Dad was seldom without his Barlow. Grandpa carried the same Old Timer for at least 35 years.

To them, knives were a basic and versatile tool, used for things like stripping the insulation from wire, cutting baling twine or peeling a pond-side apple.

Dad handing me my first knife was a rite of passage, one that came with the conditions I not use the knife unwisely, keep it clean and razor-sharp.

“A dull knife is just a stick,” is a family saying.

So for about three decades I lived up to those expectations, carrying any of the dozen or so knives I'd accumulated. But none were appreciated more than another.

That changed in 2000 when a friend at Remington sent me one of their famed Bullet knives. She said it was a highly-valued collectable to be stored away.

No chance.

To me collectable knives make as much sense as a collectable hammers. Both are tools made to be used, especially that particular knife.

It was love at first slice the first time I took the Bullet knife afield. With a four-inch blade it was big enough to do serious work but small enough to be easily carried in a front pocket.

When opened, the knife locked as tight as Fort Knox. The blade ends in a perfect taper and narrow enough for intricate cutting. It's a breeze to get to hair-shaving sharp.

So for about 11 years the knife was with me about any time I was afield.

The knife's versatility let it work well on everything from doves to bull elk and cut through everything from fine tippet to thumb-thick saplings.

I honestly appreciated the knife about every time I used it, too.

But in 2011 someone decided it should change owners.

So through the last hunting seasons and well into this summer, I made-do with those old knives I'd collected. All had their flaws when compared to the stolen knife.

Using them was like going stripper fishing with a Zebco 202 or trying to duck hunt with coon dog. Using a knife wasn't fun.

Off and on since the theft, I'd gone online to see if the same model of Bullet knife was for sale. They were, but at collectables prices.

But after trying to clean a batch of teal with an inferior blade in September, I pulled up a special knife site and paid just under $100 for a simple folding pocket knife.

I felt guilty when I hit “send,” and second-guessed the decision several times a day, until the knife arrived.

It is like the first in all ways, including how it makes me feel when I make a quick, clean cut through thick rope or trim unwanted fat from a piece of wild game.

I'm sure you don't understand, but it's like making a perfect cast with a good flyrod, and that good feeling that's an important part of whatever outing is at hand.

Like I said, I've always had an unusually deep appreciation for a very good knife.

A New Storm Bears Down On Sandy-Battered N.Y.C., N.J.

NEW YORK (AP) • A nor'easter blustered into New York and New Jersey on Wednesday with rain and wet snow, plunging homes right back into darkness, stopping commuter trains again and inflicting another round of misery on thousands of people still reeling from Superstorm Sandy's blow more than a week ago.

Under ordinary circumstances, a storm of this sort wouldn't be a big deal, but large swaths of the landscape were still an open wound, with the electrical system highly fragile and many of Sandy's victims still mucking out their homes and cars and shivering in the deepening cold.

Exactly as authorities feared, the nor'easter brought down tree limbs and electrical wires, and utilities in New York and New Jersey reported that nearly 50,000 customers who lost power because of Sandy lost it all over again as a result of the nor'easter.

"I know everyone's patience is wearing thin," said John Miksad, senior vice president of electric operations at Consolidated Edison, the chief utility in New York City.

As the nor'easter closed in, thousands of people in low-lying neighborhoods staggered by the super-storm just over a week ago were urged to clear out. Authorities warned that rain and 60 mph gusts in the evening and overnight could topple trees wrenched loose by Sandy and erase some of the hard-won progress made in restoring power to millions of customers.

"I am waiting for the locusts and pestilence next," New Jersey Gov. Chris Christie said. "We may take a setback in the next 24 hours."

Ahead of the storm, public works crews in New Jersey built up dunes to protect the stripped and battered coast, and new evacuations were ordered in a number of communities already emptied by Sandy. New shelters opened.

In New York City, police went to low-lying neighborhoods with loudspeakers, urging residents to leave. But Mayor Michael Bloomberg didn't issue mandatory evacuations, and many people stayed behind, some because they feared looting, others because they figured whatever happens couldn't be any worse than what they have gone through already.

"We're petrified," said James Alexander, a resident of the hard-hit Rockaways section of Queens. "It's like a sequel to a horror movie."

All construction in New York City was halted — a precaution that needed no explanation after a crane collapsed last week in Sandy's high winds and dangled menacingly over the streets of Manhattan. Parks were closed because of the danger of falling trees. A section of the Long Island Expressway was closed in both directions because of icy conditions.

Airlines canceled at least 1,300 U.S. flights in and out of the New York metropolitan area, causing a new round of disruptions that rippled across the country.

The city manager in Long Beach, N.Y., urged the roughly 21,000 people who ignored previous mandatory evacuation orders in the badly damaged barrier-island city to get out.

Forecasters said the nor'easter would bring moderate coastal flooding, with storm surges about 3 feet possible Wednesday into Thursday — far less than the 8 to 14 feet Sandy hurled at the region. The storm's winds were expected to be well below Sandy's, which gusted to 90 mph.

Puerto Rico Vote Raises Hopes, But Few Expectations, For Statehood.

Puerto Ricans have supported U.S. statehood in a vote that jubilant members of the pro-statehood party say is the strongest sign yet that the Caribbean island territory is on the road to losing its second-class status. But Tuesday's vote comes with an asterisk and an imposing political reality: The island remains bitterly divided over its relationship to the United States and many question the validity of this week's referendum. Nearly a half million voters chose to leave a portion of the ballot blank. And voters also ousted the pro-statehood governor, eliminating one of the main advocates for a cause that would need the approval of the U.S. Congress. "Statehood won a victory without precedent but it's an artificial victory," said Angel Israel Rivera Ortiz, a political science professor at the University of Puerto Rico.

Election Day Indicates Nation Is Deeply Divided on Politics, Issues

BY JOEL ACHENBACH
The Washington Post

This was another paradoxical election. An increasingly conservative Republican Party held onto the majority of seats in the House, while Democrats retained the White House and Senate, Wisconsin elected a gay senator, Maine and Maryland approved same-sex marriage, and Washington state and Colorado legalized marijuana.

The Democratic governor of Colorado, John Hickenlooper, said the will of the people has to be respected, but warned smokers not to celebrate: federal law still says marijuana is an illegal drug.

The people have spoken, but the messages of Election Day are not easily heard in the cacophony of our political culture. Americans have conflicting thoughts. If anything, our political divisions are deepening over time. We have a divided government because we are a divided people. This is who we are.

Contrary to what the president famously declared when he came to prominence in 2004, and which he echoed early Wednesday in his victory speech, there really does seem to be a Red America and a Blue America, each seeing a markedly different reality. That's why seven in 10 Democrats say the economy is getting better, while nearly six in 10 Republicans say it's getting worse, according to exit polls. Somehow, Vermont, which reelected a socialist senator, is part of the same country as Oklahoma, where voters on Tuesday passed a measure to eliminate all affirmative action in state hiring and contracting.

When President Obama took a stage in Chicago in the wee hours of Wednesday morning, he described the country's stark ideological disconnect as an outcome of our political blessings: "Democracy in a nation of 300 million can be noisy and messy and complicated," he said. "We have our own opinions. Each of us has deeply held beliefs. And when we go through tough times, when we make big decisions as a country, it necessarily stirs passions, stirs up controversy."

Global Candidate: Obama Was World's Clear Choice

LONDON (AP) • He won, and the word "phew" trended worldwide on Twitter. Despite a hard-fought campaign in the United States, there was never any contest overseas.

Gone are the days when President Barack Obama was seen as a youthful, messianic figure capable of magically curing the world's woes. But he remains widely popular, and his triumph reassured many who feared an abrupt change in U.S. policy could spell trouble. Even Tom McGrath, president of Republicans Abroad France, conceded: "It's clear that if they could vote, Europe would vote 80 percent for Obama."

Part of the reason is continuity. Challenger Mitt Romney is a little-known figure internationally with scant foreign policy experience, while Obama was seen — even by most critics — as a steady hand following a predictable course. If he hasn't brought peace to the world's fire zones, or done much to slow climate change, or sparked global economic growth, he is credited at least with having started no new wars, and having tried to heal relations with the Muslim world even while aggressively pursuing al-Qaida and its affiliates.

A BBC survey during the run-up to the election found remarkable support for an Obama second term. More than 21,000 people in 21 countries were questioned in July, August and September, with residents in all but one country backing Obama. Only Pakistan, where Obama's heavy reliance on drone strikes has been unpopular, preferred Romney.

Venezuelan President Hugo Chavez, a frequent critic of U.S. policy, did not comment immediately, but the state-run Venezuelan News Agency said Obama returns to power "with various promises unfulfilled," including what it described as his failures to close the prison at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, and set up a system to limit greenhouse gas emissions.

But the list of countries with a strong Obama preference in the BBC survey were as diverse as Nigeria, Panama, South Korea, Germany and Brazil.

In China, Obama's re-election was good news for people concerned about Romney's vow to label China a currency manipulator. Some feared that would ignite a trade war between the world's two biggest economies.

"His re-election is in line with what the Chinese people want," said Hong Zihan, a graduate student watching the results at a U.S. Embassy event in Beijing.

In Myanmar, which is opening to the world after five decades of isolating military rule, some said they were relieved Obama was re-elected because he had chosen to engage rather than sanction their country.

"President Obama is very flexible," said Thit Oo, a 42-year-old car mechanic, "and international relations have improved during his term."

Fiscal Cliff Combines Tax Hikes, Spending Cuts

WASHINGTON (AP) • So just what is this "fiscal cliff" that has the financial markets rattled and economists and policymakers alike in a tizzy over the potential for sending the economy into another tailspin?

It's a one-two punch of expiring Bush-era tax cuts and major across-the-board spending cuts to the Pentagon and domestic programs that could total $800 billion next year, based on Congressional Budget Office estimates.

The cliff is the punishment for previous failures of a bitterly-divided Congress and White House to deal with the government's spiraling debt or overhaul its unwieldy tax code.

the cliff comes with the expiration of tax cuts enacted in 2001 and 2003 and extended two years ago in the wake of President Barack Obama's drubbing in the 2010 midterm elections.

It also includes sharp spending cuts imposed as a consequence of the failure of last year's deficit-reduction supercommittee to reach agreement. There are other elements, chiefly a 2 percentage point cut in payroll taxes orchestrated by Obama and unemployment benefits for the long-term jobless that would disappear.

A Congressional Budget Office study in May estimated that the fiscal cliff would force tax hikes and spending

Escondido, California 92027

YOU ARE NOTIFIED THAT:

A Petition, a copy of which is attached, has been filed in the above-entitled matter in the Magistrate's Division of the District Court of Twin Falls County, Idaho, by the Prosecuting Attorney, alleging the above-named child come within the Court's jurisdiction under the Child Protective Act.

You are notified that service of the attached Petition upon you, as the parent(s), guardian, or custodian of these children, confers personal jurisdiction of the Court upon you and subjects you to the provisions of the Child Protective Act.

You are notified that if you fail to appear without reasonable cause, the Court may proceed in your absence or you may be proceeded against for contempt of Court.

You are notified that the parent(s), guardian, or a custodian may be financially liable for the support and/or treatment of the child.

Today is Thursday, Nov. 8, the 313th day of 2012. There are 53 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight:
On Nov. 8, 1932, New York Democratic Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt defeated incumbent Republican Herbert Hoover for the presidency.
On this date:

TODAY IN HISTORY

In 1889, Montana became the 41st state.
In 1909, the original Boston Opera House first opened with a performance of "La Gioconda" by Amilcare Ponchielli.
In 1913, the play "Woyzeck," by Georg Buchner, had its premiere in Munich, Germany, more than six decades after the playwright's death.
In 1923, Adolf Hitler launched his first attempt at seizing power in Germany with a failed coup in Munich that came to be known as the "Beer-Hall Putsch."
In 1942, Operation Torch, resulting in an Allied victory, began during World War II as U.S. and British forces landed in French North Africa.
In 1950, during the Korean War, the first jet-plane battle took place as U.S. Air Force Lt. Russell J. Brown shot down a North Korean MiG-15.
In 1960, Massachusetts Sen. John F. Kennedy defeated Vice President Richard M. Nixon for the presidency.
In 1972, the premium cable TV network HBO (Home Box Office) made its debut with a showing of the movie "Sometimes a Great Notion."
In 1980, scientists at the Jet Propulsion Laboratory in Pasadena, Calif., announced that the U.S. space probe Voyager 1 had discovered a 15th moon orbiting the planet Saturn.
In 1987, 11 people were killed when an Irish Republican Army bomb exploded as crowds gathered in Enniskillen, Northern Ireland, for a ceremony honoring Britain's war dead.
In 1988, Vice President George H.W. Bush won the presidential election, defeating Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis.
In 1994, midterm elections resulted in Republicans winning a majority in the Senate while at the same time gaining control of the House for the first time in 40 years.
Ten years ago: The U.N. Security Council unanimously approved Resolution 1441, aimed at forcing Saddam Hussein to disarm or face "serious consequences." President George W. Bush said the new resolution presented the Iraqi regime "with a final test."
Five years ago: The Senate confirmed President George W. Bush's nomination of Michael Mukasey to be attorney general, 53-40. President Bush suffered the first veto override of his seven-year-old presidency as the Senate enacted, 79-14, a $23 billion water resources bill despite his protest that it was filled with unnecessary projects. Dominican singer-songwriter Juan Luis Guerra swept the Latin Grammy Awards, taking home five musical honors including album of the year, record of the year and song of the year.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

"The past cannot be cured."
— Queen Elizabeth I

Against three no-trump, West leads the spade queen. How do you plan to make nine tricks?

Outside the diamonds, you have five top tricks. So you need a minimum of four diamond tricks to make your contract. Suppose you win the spade lead with the ace and finesse the diamond jack. If the finesse loses, the spade return will mean that you won't make nine tricks unless the diamond 10 drops. This would be the case even when the diamonds were 3-3, for the entry to the diamonds has been removed.

Accordingly, the best approach is to win the first spade (for fear of a club shift) and play a diamond to the king. Then continue by overtaking the diamond jack with dummy's ace, even if West has followed with a small card. Here, since the diamond queen has put in an appearance, you can simply dislodge the diamond 10 from East's hand and make nine tricks: two spades, two hearts, four diamonds and a club.

If the diamonds had been 3-3, the third round of diamonds would have established the suit, with the spade king as the entry to cash them. Notice that you will succeed when either defender begins with a singleton or doubleton diamond queen or 10. As we have seen, dummy's 9-8-7 is then good enough to allow you to knock out the remaining diamond honor, letting you collect four diamond tricks and the contract. This gives you a better than two-thirds chance to make your game.

ANSWER: Simplest might be to bid three spades (or four spades if you believe you have no slam interest). I have no great objection to bidding three spades. It is, of course, forcing, since you would have simply raised spades at once with invitational values. But given your excellent side-suit holdings, maybe you should rebid three no-trump directly and avoid risking a bad spade break in four spades.

DEAR ABBY: As Veterans Day approaches, may I share a few guidelines that can be helpful when interacting with veterans or service members?

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

1. It is never OK to ask a veteran if he or she has killed someone or to joke about it. If we have, we can't even talk about it with our spouses, much less a stranger.

2. When you thank us for our service or pay for our meal, it is really appreciated. We also appreciate packages and notes.

3. Please don't tell us that wars are a waste of dollars or lives or were fought for oil. What we hear is that, in your opinion, our best friend died for nothing. We know many people disagree with war, but it's better to keep your opinions to yourself.

4. Many of us now have PTSD. If you see us acting anxious or moving away from crowds, turning our backs to the wall or fidgeting, simple kindness or a little distraction will be appreciated. Talk to us about something interesting and give us some breathing room.

5. Please remember that 15 percent of those who serve in the military are women, and some have been in combat. It's better to ask, "Are you a veteran?" rather than, "Was your husband a soldier?"

6. As with any person who has a disability, please do not stare at us. We can be sensitive about our scars or injuries and would prefer not to be asked to relive a difficult experience by being quizzed about what happened. Please also understand that war injuries today are very different than in the past and are often not visible. It is not OK to tell someone they "don't look disabled" or appear to need help.

Those of us with disabilities appreciate light conversation and assistance if we look like we are in need.

It was my pleasure to serve our country.

— AMANDA C.,
U.S. ARMY
DISABLED VETERAN

DEAR AMANDA C.: Thank you for your service. And thank you, too, for your helpful suggestions, which are sure to be appreciated not only by civilians, but also by active and retired members of our military.

Readers, as the war in Afghanistan winds down, many thousands of service members are returning home and entering the job market. Please, if possible, honor their courage, dedication and sacrifice by doing your part and providing them with employment. Considering what they have done for us, it is the least we can do to show our appreciation.

DEAR ABBY: I'm afraid I'm an abusive girlfriend. When I get mad at my boyfriend, I yell at him and call him names. Sometimes I hit him. Even though he really makes me angry, I do love him.

I'm not crazy, but I don't know how to control myself. It's not like I'm threatening to kill him.

I don't want to go to counseling or group classes. I don't really hit him a lot. I yell more. I also have jealousy issues. What can I do?

— PROBLEM GIRLFRIEND

DEAR GIRLFRIEND: Your concern is justified, because you ARE an abusive girlfriend. While I applaud your growing self-awareness, it is very important that you understand the reasons you are behaving this way so you can stop. While you may not like the idea of counseling or group anger management classes, it would be much better if you went voluntarily rather than one day having them court-mandated.

IF NOVEMBER 8 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Your zest for life is obvious. Because you are more energetic than usual during the next few weeks, it's a good time to make your mark by demonstrating executive ability, start an exercise program or compete at a higher level. During late December and January, tone down aggressive behavior and be more polite. In April, you may receive the rewards you deserve as important doors open wide and invite you to set off on a new direction. You would be wise to accept whatever offers come your way; permanent improvements will be the end result. In May, cash in by using your business smarts.

HOROSCOPE

Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Perhaps early in the day you won't get your way. In group settings an excess of competitiveness might spoil the mood. Harmony is restored by the evening; you and a lover can set off some fireworks.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Team spirit lightens the load. It's a fine day to extend a helping hand or improve understanding with a loved one. Your sympathetic nature and gentle touch are in demand to deal with those in crisis.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Misunderstandings can be cleared up. The stars are perfect to unravel tangled knots of misapprehension between you and a worthy opponent. Offer apologies; embarrassing moments can be set straight.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You fail immediately when you quit. You must be like a little dog with a big bone; keep gnawing away and you will eventually get the job done. Pull an important project together at the last minute.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Once you light the fire, someone else will be willing to carry the torch. Enlist the help of a trusted associate to see a business project through to a successful completion. Stack your money up to earn interest.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Conflicts disappear as you start to see the whole picture clearly. You are more romantic and attractive than usual so do your utmost to draw others closer and straighten out lingering disagreements.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Pay your way to pave the way. People are in a generous mood, but you should still chip in on expenses and share the fare. It is better to stick with the crowd than to set off on adventures of your own.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Rely upon steely determination to achieve whatever you sincerely desire. Your energy and sex appeal are on the rise and you can juggle both business and romantic relationships with an adept hand.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): If you made a mistake, admit it. Circumstances may point out areas where you were overly optimistic so clear up possible areas of confusion. Making money can be a compelling incentive.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You are a powerhouse of energy and can score points on some playing field. Impress the boss with an ability to beat the clock or entice a partner with your romantic flair.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Love once given should be permanent. Ignore fleeting infatuations and concentrate on the real thing. Because you seem sympathetic and serene, others may confide in you or ask for advice.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Pair up to power up. A stroke of genius can put you and a partner on the same track and that can lead to financial success. It is a great time to discuss plans and to put ideas into action.

CSI Volleyball Handed No. 1 Tournament Seed

BY DAVID BASHORE
dbashore@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • The Golden Eagles are back where they started. On Wednesday the College of Southern Idaho volleyball team was handed the No. 1 overall seed for next week's NJCAA Division I Tournament, marking the Golden Eagles as the team to beat in the field of 16 that begins play in West Plains, Mo. "I had goosebumps during the whole practice after we found out. It's so exciting," said sophomore Liene Mellupe. "It's just nice to know that we were No. 1 in the beginning and we're No. 1 going into the end." In giving CSI the No. 1 ranking, the NJCAA broke from traditionally sticking to the final poll released a week before the region tournaments begin, and adjusting for losses during the region tournaments. In that poll CSI was ranked third, behind San Jacinto-Central — which lost one match in the double-elimination tournament for the eastern Texas region title — and Western Nebraska, which handed the Golden Eagles their only loss in the fifth match of the season. That left CSI thinking No. 2, but Christmas came a month and change early.

Reader Turning Things Around at CSI

BY NICK RULAND
nruland@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • Strep throat didn't keep a hooded Billy Reader from speaking. But strep throat wasn't what Reader wanted to talk about Wednesday at the College of Southern Idaho gymnasium as he watched his teammates practice. CSI's big man transfer for men's basketball had something to get off his congested chest. "I don't do well with losing," Reader said. "I'm a very sore loser and I have no problem admitting that." Reader was still showing symptoms — crankiness — from his team's opening-season, three-game set in Arizona, during which the Golden Eagles went an unconvincing 2-1. "Either we are going to be a team that knocks people down, or we're going to be the ones that get knocked over," he said. The statement also describes the fork in Reader's life. The 6-foot-9, 245-pound post player from Lake Oswego, Ore., was supposed to be a part of the future under coach Wayne Tinkle at Montana, the 2011-12 Big Sky Conference champions. Reader was the one to knock over himself. He barely skated by academically his redshirt year and was academically ineligible as a redshirt freshman. "I don't live life with regrets, but if I could go back and do it differently, I would," Reader said. "I made my mistakes in Montana and I'm living with those now. I've come to a great situation, a great community college where I can make a name for myself and turn it around. But I want to turn myself around as more than just a basketball player, as a person, too." After leaving home in Oregon and heading off to Montana, Reader went through what his long-time friend, former childhood opponent and current teammate Trevor Ritchie called freshman shock. "Once he left home, I think that was a big deal for him," Ritchie said. "That happens a lot with freshmen. I had my own problems at the Colorado School of Mines. It's not just on him, it's on the school, on the team and no one stepped up. But he dug himself a big hole. But since he's been here, he's done a great job of making good decisions and staying out of trouble and really trying to make something out of this basketball thing." In hopes he can alter his future, Reader became an open book about his past. "It was just personal choices I made, what I was doing at night,

CSI's Passi Commits to Hawaii

BY DAVID BASHORE

Passi

TWIN FALLS • Keani Passi left the islands in order to return. The sophomore right-sided hitter for the College of Southern Idaho has decided to return home after this season, committing her future to the University of Hawaii volleyball program. "I had always said that if Hawaii offered me there's where I wanted to be, but when it happened I couldn't really believe it," said Passi, who last week was named the Region 18 Player of the Year. "Every little girl growing up in Hawaii wants to play for UH one day. It's a dream come true." The Rainbow Wahine, as Hawaii's women's teams are known, are currently 21-2 and ranked seventh in the nation, according to the most recent AVCA coaches' poll. Hawaii competes in the Big West in all sports but football. Passi said she'll pay her own way and redshirt next season and has an understanding that she'll have a scholarship for her final two years of eligibility. That could be adjusted based on Hawaii's needs for next season, however. "There are a lot of great schools, and it's all about finding the right fit. This is a perfect fit," said CSI coach Heidi Cartisser. "We asked if she was really sure about it, but this is what she's always wanted to do." Passi is 10th on CSI's all-time kill list at 754 and sixth with 42 kills at get as high as counting with 42 kills at the national tournament. Her kills-per-set count of 3.33 is just outside the top 10 all-time, though her 3.83 this season is sixth on the single-season list.

Notre Dame in the Rose Bowl? Maybe

ASSOCIATED PRESS

College football's most storied program, playing on its grandest stage.

Notre Dame in the Rose Bowl. It could happen.

While most fans are focused on the four-team race to the BCS championship game, another intriguing Bowl Championship Series sidebar is developing. Will the Rose Bowl, if given the opportunity, invite Notre Dame? The Fighting Irish have only played in the Granddaddy of Bowls once before — in 1925.

"There is still so much that can happen, and of course the biggest story out there is whether we would take Notre Dame, but there is a lot to play out before it starts to become a serious conversation within our group," Rose Bowl spokeswoman Gina Chappin said Wednesday.

Here's how those conversations becomes serious.

If Oregon wins the Pac-12 and finishes first or second in the BCS standings, the Ducks will pay in the BCS national championship game.

Depending on where the Ducks finish, that would give the Rose Bowl either the first or second pick among the four BCS games to replace one of its contractually bound champions with an eligible at-large team.

The Big Ten and Pac-12 are longtime and lucrative partners with the Rose Bowl, and game organizers would prefer to keep their partners happy and dip back into those conferences for replacement teams.

"Whenever we can protect our relationship with the Pac-12 and the Big Ten, that is very important to us," Chappin said.

To be eligible for an at-large spot, a team must be ranked in the top 14 of the final BCS standings and have nine victories. No. 13 Oregon State (7-1) is in 11th-place heading into Saturday's game at No. 16 Stanford. The Beavers also play California, Oregon and Nicholls State on Dec. 1 (provided they aren't in the Pac-12 title game).

If Oregon State finishes 10-2, assuming a loss to the Ducks, the Beavers should have no problem being BCS eligible, very possibly in the top 10. And because Oregon State last played in the Rose Bowl in 1965, the Beavers would check a second important box for the selection committee.

"Have they played in our game recently?" Chappin said.

Bowl organizers love inviting teams who haven't been to their game in a long time, because fired-up fans gobble up tickets.

It would get interesting if Oregon State loses twice between now and the end of the season.

At 9-3, the Beavers could still slip into the BCS top 14. But at that point, they might not look so appealing to the Rose Bowl. Especially, compared to Notre Dame.

There are other factors that could influence the Rose Bowl's decision. If Wisconsin wins the Big Ten, the Rose Bowl would probably like to avoid a rematch of a regular-season game between the Badgers and Beavers.

Or, if not Notre Dame, how about this possibility: A Rose Bowl reunion of old conference rivals Nebraska and Oklahoma.

"There are so many variables that go into the conversation of the matchup. It's not a conversation we have a lot," Chappin said. "We're at a position right now where it's too early to focus on the what-ifs."

True, but they are interesting.

Surging Colts Show up in Prime Time

ASSOCIATED PRESS

Andrew Luck quickly is erasing the pain of the divorce with Peyton Manning for Colts fans. Now, he and the suddenly playoff-contending Colts head to Jacksonville, where just about everything about the Jaguars is painful.

The Colts (5-3) have won three straight and four of five to firmly plant themselves in the AFC wild-card picture. Luck comes off one of the great quarterbacking games for any rookie, ever — better, even, than Manning managed with Indianapolis in 1998. He completed 30 of 48 passes for 433 yards and two touchdowns for a 105.6 quarterback rating in the victory over Miami. The 433 yards set an NFL single-game record by a rookie quarterback, and Luck became the only rookie aside from Manning with four 300-yard passing games.

Indianapolis has risen to 12th in the AP Pro32 rankings and is a 3-point favorite against No. 31 Jacksonville (1-7).

It's a nice matchup for Indy, which has been stingy on defense lately and timely on offense. Defensive leader Dwight Freeney wants everyone, especially the younger players — and there are plenty of them on the roster — to take things in stride.

Jacksonville ranks last in total offense, has scored 117 points, 16 fewer than any other team, and has dropped five in a row. But the Jaguars, 6-21 in their last 27 games, have three of those wins against the Colts, including their only victory in 2012, 22-17 in Week 3.

Nearly three dozen Colts shaved their heads in a show of support for coach Chuck Pagano, who is undergoing treatment for leukemia. The best way to show support is to keep winning.

The Little Guys Could Rise up in 2012-13

ASSOCIATED PRESS

College basketball came down to the blue bloods last season, with Kentucky adding to its Hoops Rushmore resume in a Final Four that included Kansas, Louisville and Ohio State.

The mid-majors figure to play a major role this season.

While Indiana is the preseason No. 1 for the first time in 33 years and big names like Duke, North Carolina and Arizona are loaded with talent, it's the little guys who could make the most noise this season. Just look at the preseason All-America team. It features Creighton's Doug McDermott, Lehigh's C.J. McCollum and Murray State's Isaiah Canaan, players who could be stars anywhere.

The Top 25 also is littered with mid-majors, including Creighton, UNLV, San Diego State and always-there Gonzaga.

With so many good teams and players from smaller conferences, yeah, it should be a fun season.

Here's a few other things to look for.

TOP TEAMS

Indiana: The long climb from the embarrassment of an NCAA phone-call scandal appears to finally be over. The Hoosiers have 7-foot center Cody Zeller and the kind of team that could make a title run.

Kentucky: The Calipari Method: Sign future NBA players, win, lose them to the NBA, repeat.

Louisville: Rick Pitino flexed his coaching muscles with one of the best jobs of his career last season and may not be done with most of the players from that team back.

Ohio State: Jared Sullinger and William Buford are gone. Deshaun Thomas and Aaron Craft are not. Thad Matta rarely leaves the cupboard bare.

Michigan: Trey Burke and Tim Hardaway Jr. make up a backcourt that could help the Charlotte Bobcats win more games. They certainly will in Ann Arbor.

Creighton. Can't tout

the mid-majors and not include one team to watch. Coach's son Doug McDermott is an unstoppable force and the Bluejays have plenty of returning players to help him out.

Baylor (women). Britney Griner and company are good enough to be mentioned here. Might give a men's team or two a run for its money.

TOP PLAYERS

Cody Zeller, Indiana. Might be the best player in Clan Zeller, which is saying something coming from that family.

Tim Burke, Michigan. Led Wolverines in scoring and assists last season. Don't expect a sophomore slump. He's too good to have one.

Deshaun Thomas, Ohio State. Played in the shadow of Jared Sullinger last season. Won't this year, especially after a confidence-building run through the NCAA tournament.

Doug McDermott, Creighton. Missouri Valley player of the year, third nationally in scoring, preseason All-American — might want to keep an eye on this guy.

C.J. McCollum, Lehigh. Score, score and score some more. Pretty good rebounder and can dish as well.

Isaiah Canaan, Murray State. Not many players from Murray State can — at least realistically — say they bypassed the NBA to return to school. Canaan did and could be a national player of the year candidate.

BEST NON-CONFERENCE GAMES

Syracuse vs. San Diego State, Nov. 11, on the USS Midway in San Diego. The original Battle on the Midway was spectacular. This one might have a tough time matching the magic of that game — a president in attendance, that purplish twilight — but two ranked teams on an aircraft carrier just has to be cool.

Kentucky vs. Duke, Nov. 13, Atlanta. Two heavyweights get an early test in the season. It may not have a moment like Christian Laettner's jumper in the 1992 NCAA tournament, but there'll be enough talent to make this a must-watch game.

North Carolina at Indiana, Nov. 27. Another power-program showdown, this one will be a gauge for the Hoosiers to see if they live up to the hype.

Florida at Arizona, Dec. 15. They played a memorable overtime game at Florida last season, won by the Gators. This one will feature some of the best groups of big men in the country on the floor at the same time.

Kansas at Ohio State, Dec. 22. Rematch of last year's Final Four game won by Kansas will feature plenty of new players for the Jayhawks and a couple of familiar ones for the Buckeyes.

Kentucky at Louisville, Dec. 29. Another rematch of last year's Final Four with two teams who don't like each other will be a nice late Christmas present.

NEWCOMERS

Nerlens Noel, Kentucky. The bluest of coach John Calipari's blue chippers this season, the 6-foot-10 forward has an elevated game and the hair to match it.

Jahii Carson, Arizona State. Sun Devils fans have been waiting a year for Carson to be eligible and the sophomore point guard isn't likely to disappoint with that wicked crossover and super hops.

Shabazz Muhammad, UCLA. Bruins coach Ben Howland landed a stellar recruiting class this season, led by the left-handed Muhammad. The key is getting him on the court; the NCAA is still investigating whether he received improper benefits from boosters of an AAU team.

Grant Jerrett, Arizona. Arizona coach Sean Miller says Jerrett is as far along as any incoming big man he's seen — and he's seen a few good ones.

Steven Adams, Pittsburgh. The former rugby player from New Zealand should fit right in with the Big East bangers.

BASEBALL AWARD FINALISTS ANNOUNCED

ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK • Triple Crown winner Miguel Cabrera is one of five finalists for the AL MVP award in voting by the Baseball Writers Association of America.

The Detroit third baseman is joined by Texas' Adrian Beltre and Josh Hamilton, the New York Yankees' Robinson Cano, and Los Angeles Angels rookie Mike Trout, who also is one of three nominees for AL Rookie of the Year.

For the first time Wednesday, the BBWAA announced finalists for its awards. The winners will be revealed next week live on the MLB Network, beginning Monday with the two rookies of the year and concluding Thursday with the MVPs.

Milwaukee's Ryan Braun has a chance for a repeat as NL MVP. He's pitted against San Diego's Chase Headley, Pittsburgh's Andrew McCutchen, St. Louis' Yadier Molina and San Francisco's Buster Posey.

Mets knuckleballer R.A. Dickey is among the three finalists for the NL Cy Young Award. Washington's Gio Gonzalez and 2011 winner Clayton Kershaw of the Dodgers are also competing.

Detroit's reigning AL MVP and Cy Young winner Justin Verlander has another shot for top pitcher in the AL. Tampa Bay's David Price and the Angels' Jered Weaver are the other two finalists. The winner in each league will be picked Wednesday.

Trout is competing with two foreign-born stars Cuban outfielder Yoanis Cespedes of the Athletics and Japanese pitcher Yu Darvish of the Rangers for Rookie of the Year in the AL.

Washington's Bryce Harper, Cincinnati's Todd Frazier and Arizona's Wade Miley are the nominees in the NL.

Of the six finalists for Manager of the Year, only White Sox rookie skipper Robin Ventura is not a previous winner. He was nominated along with Bob Melvin (2007) and Buck Showalter (1994, 2004) in the AL.

In the NL, the Reds' Dusty Baker (1993, 1997, 2000), World Series champion Giants Bruce Bochy (1996) and Washington's Davey Johnson (1997) got the nod.

The two top managers will be announced Tuesday.
