Idaho has More Time for Health Care Plan

HEALTH CARE

BY MELISSA DAVLIN Times-News

RICARDO ALONSO-ZALDIVAR Associated Press

WASHINGTON • Idaho has newfound breathing room when it comes to one pending Affordable Care Act decision.

Trying to show flexibility without slowing down President Barack Obama's health care law, the administration said Friday states can have more time to work out their roles in providing health care to millions of uninsured Americans.

In a letter to governors, Health and Human Services Secretary Kathleen Sebelius said she still wants to hear by the end of next week if states will be setting up health insurance markets under the law. But governors can now take another month, until mid-December, to submit detailed blueprints. Please see EXTENSION, A4

TWIN FALLS • In the coming year, Twin Falls High School science teacher Jo Dodds will have an opportunity most other teachers can only dream about.

She'll work alongside professional astronomers as part of NASA's Airborne Astronomy Ambassadors program.

If You Go

What: A free community presentation by NASA astronaut Stephen Bowen When: 7 p.m. Thursday

Where: Twin Falls High School's Roper Auditorium, 1615 Filer Ave. E.

Part of the program includes organizing public outreach activities. One of those efforts started nearly a year ago when Dodds put a request to have a NASA astronaut come to Twin Falls.

And that dream has become a reality.

Astronaut Stephen Bowen is giving a special presentation Thursday night at Twin Falls High School's Roper Auditorium.

Dodds said she's excited about Bowen's visit next week.

"I think we're all going to benefit by his experiences when he comes," she said.

THE MARKET AT A GLANCE

Fearing 'Cliff,' Investors Finish Brutal Week

NEW YORK (AP) • Wall Street is peering over the "fiscal cliff" and feeling vertigo.

The stock market finished one of the worst weeks of the year Friday, pushing Washington to work out a deal to avoid the tax increases and government spending cuts set to take effect Jan. 1.

Remarks by re-elected President Barack Obama and House Speaker John Boehner on the looming deadline didn't do much to cheer the market.

The Dow finished up 4.07 points at 12,815.39. The S&P advanced 2.34 points to 1,379.85, and the Nasdaq composite gained 9.29 points to 9,204.87.

TIMES-NEWS ASK ST. LUKES Controlling Your Weight During the Holidays

DAVID HALL St. Luke's Magic Valley

Team Leader, Clinical Nutrition

Q. I have been on a weight loss program for the past year and have lost 40 pounds. I'll be going to a lot of holiday gatherings this season and would like to know how I can maintain my current weight loss.

Shirley, Gooding

A. First of all, congratulations on your weight loss. As the holidays approach us, it is good to be realistic about your expectations. It's best to not overindulge at any given time, but you will likely be eating more than you normally do. Maintaining weight is a good goal but if you do put on a pound or two, don't feel guilty and don't give up.

There are a variety of ways you can enjoy the holidays without overindulging. Remember, the main reason for holiday gatherings is the socialization part, getting together with family and good friends; so focus on that aspect, not just the food.

Before you go to a holiday party, make sure you eat a light snack, something with protein and maybe a piece of fruit. That way, you won't be starving when you get there. You don't want to skip a meal or meals the day of the party, that will only make you extremely hungry when you go, and you will likely overeat.

When you go to a party, offer to bring a tray of fruits or vegetables with a healthy dip, like salsa, instead of calorie laden mayonnaisebased dips. Other people will likely be glad that you brought some health snacks.

Drink plenty of water during your gathering. When looking for healthier appetizer choices, choose meats that have been grilled, broiled or broiled instead of deep fried.

If you like nuts, have just a handful - multiple handfuls can really add up to your calorie count! Many parties have cheese and cracker trays; again have just a few cheese cubes and crackers. Serving sizes at these gatherings are usually smaller, which can make overeating easier. Be mindful of what you are eating, but don't consume your thoughts with the food table, socialize and have fun.

You may also be attending dinners with family and friends. Pay attention to portion size and don't feel the need to fill your plate, especially if you are going to be expected to take seconds. If you are eating out, split your meal with a friend or family member. Or get a "to-go" box before you start your meal and put half in the box for another meal.

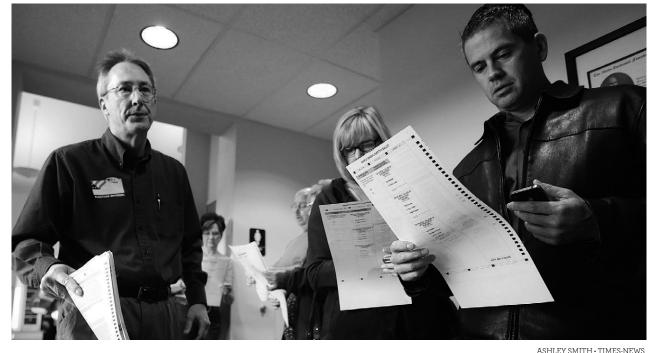

Even though it is colder and gets dark sooner, remember to incorporate exercise into your daily routine. A consistent exercise program can really help you cut down the potential for weight gain during this festive season.

The most important thing you can do is to remember your weight loss success and be proud of what you have accomplished. Keep your end goal in mind, have fun during the holidays, and get back on track after the first of the year.

t will feel very much like winter this weekend as we remain in a cold pattern. Highs today will only reach the mid-30s. We will have a mix of sunshine and clouds around the valley with just a small chance of an isolated to scattered snow shower. Winds will also make things feel colder as they could gust to near 30 mph. That will make the air feel like it is somewhere between 20 and 25 degrees.

Cold temperatures continue into Sunday, with the morning starting off in the upper teens. We won't warm up much by Sunday afternoon: Once again our afternoon temperatures will be in the mid- to upper-30s. The positive for Sunday's forecast is the sunny skies and less wind.

Looking ahead to early next week, Monday starts off dry with mostly sunny skies and a touch warmer with highs reaching the mid-to upper-40s. We will be tracking another storm system coming in off the Pacific Northwest for Tuesday and Wednesday. This could bring a chance of rain and some mountain snow to the region. Precipitation chances look low, but we will keep them in the forecast for now. Highs will also be a little warmer, in the upper 40s to near 50 degrees.

Idaho Power Crews Begin Work in New York

TIMES-NEWS

TWIN FALLS • After a trip totaling more than 2,500 miles, Idaho Power crews have safely arrived on Long Island. On Thursday they began assessing the damage caused by Hurricane Sandy.

"The drive out was long, but without incident," said Regional Operations Manager Bo Hanchey, the leader of the two six-man crews assisting Long Island Power Authority. "That said, the crews were ready to leave the trucks and get to work."

Three crew members are from Twin Falls and one is from Gooding. Other members are from Pocatello, McCall, Boise, Caldwell and Payette.

The crews will be stationed at Brightwaters Substation near Brookhaven, New York. On Thursday, Hanchey received crew assignments and was briefed on the storm damage and restoration efforts. The current expectation is that crews will be housed in trailers

Burley Murder Suspect Captured in Las Vegas

BY LAURIE WELCH

lwelch@magicvalley.com

BURLEY • A man suspected of murdering his boss at the Alpine Garden Inn in Burley has been arrested by Las Vegas police.

Cassia County Undersheriff George Warrell said a tip from a viewer of America's Most Wanted television show led police to James Duane Ambrose, 53, on Thursday. "The show aired on Oct. 12, and a woman called in and said she had seen him on the streets begging for money," Warrell said. Warrell said Ambrose was living on the streets when Las Vegas Metropolitan Police Department located him. Warrell said Ambrose was living under a different name.

Ambrose is a suspect in the May murder of Russ Taft, 54, who owned the inn. Taft was reported missing by motel staff along with Ambrose, who worked for Taft.

Taft's body was found a few days later in a crawl space in his apartment. He suffered bluntforce trauma to his head and a stab wound to his heart. According to the America's Most Wanted website, Ambrose was also wanted in Las Vegas for carjacking an 86-year-old woman.

According to a press release issued by the Cassia County Sheriff's office, Ambrose is wanted in Cassia County on warrants for 1st-degree murder and grand theft. There are multiple warrants for Ambrose's arrest in Las Vegas for robbery, kidnapping, burglary, battery and grand larceny.

Warrell said the Cassia County Sheriff's Office had investigators in Las Vegas to interview Ambrose on Friday.

According to the press release, Ambrose will be transported back to Cassia County after he faces charges in Las Vegas.

Bowen, a mission specialist, completed three spaceflights and spent about 40 days in space.

Dodds said community donors are covering the costs of the presentation.

It's free to community members to attend, which is normal for NASA-sponsored activities.

While Bowen is in the Magic Valley, he'll also visit four Twin Falls schools -Vera C. O'Leary Middle School, Oregon Trail Elementary, Twin Falls High and Canyon Ridge High - to give presentations to students.

Schools are trying to ramp up science, technology, math and engineering education. Dodds said NASA incorporates all of those areas.

Regardless of whether students decide to pursue a career in a STEM field, Dodds said it's always good to know more.

She said she's looking forward to hearing Bowen's stories about spacewalks and has a lot of questions for him.

Doing Research for NASA

Dodds will soon get a chance of a lifetime: to do research with NASA astronauts.

Last year, she was one of 26 teachers selected to participate in research flights aboard the Stratospheric Observatory for Infrared Astronomy.

SOFIA is a modified Boeing 747 that can reach an altitude of 45,000 feet.

The plane is equipped with a telescope 100 inches in diameter that is used for infrared observations.

They plan to put on educational programs at the Discovery Center of Idaho in Boise and the College of Southern Idaho's Herrett Center for Arts and Science.

Dodds said they will rewrite some astronomy-related curriculum for the Idaho Digital Learning Academy.

As for her classes at Twin Falls High, Dodds said she'll share her infrared astronomy research experiences with students and include more of that information in the curriculum. "I definitely want to incorporate more," she said.

"If we're going to have another entitlement program ... you're not going to get my support, nor do I think you'll get the Legislature's support," said Rep. Fred Wood, R-Burley, before agreeing to the expansion.

During Friday's meeting, Milliman Associates, a Seattle-based actuary firm, told the group that Idaho's cost of not expanding would total close to $285 million by 2024.

In order to make Medicaid expansion more appealing to states, the federal government has offered to pay 100 percent expansion's cost for three years beginning in 2014.

After that, the federal government will slowly reduce payments to 90 percent by 2020.

Federal funding current ly pays 70 percent of Idaho's Medicaid program.

According to Milliman's presentation, choosing to expand would cut state program costs by almost $290 million by 2024. Coupling the cost of expansion with the estimated saving, Idaho would save $6 million by 2024. By the time the group prepared to vote on a final decision, members stressed the importance of improving education of medical services to the public.

"If we don't do this, we do cripple Idaho," said Ted Epperly, director of the Family Medicine Residency Program in Idaho. "I think it's imperative that we have a program that focuses on health. I think we need to focus on what we can control. We can't control the ACA but we can control our benefit program."

Currently, uninsured Idahoans typically put off going to a doctor until it's absolutely necessary. By then, many are going to the emergency room, which is one of costliest medical services available, said Steve Millard, president of the Idaho Hospital Association.

While it would be wise to tuck the cost savings into a fund to cover the growing costs of Medicaid, that probably won't happen, Wood said.

"A good corporation would put that money away to help cover the growing costs. Politicians don't do that," he said. "Politicians never have enough spine to do that."

The recommendations will be submitted to the governor next week.

The new insurance exchanges will allow households and small businesses to buy a private health plan, and many will get help from the government to pay their premiums. Under the law, states that can't or won't set up exchanges will have theirs run by the federal government.

But many governors and state lawmakers were on the fence, awaiting the outcome of the presidential election. And the lost time left them fewer options.

Idaho has struggled with whether to set up the exchange. A bill that would set up the exchange – crafted by Rep. Fred Wood, R-Burley and Sen. Dean Cameron, R-Rupert - never made it to a print hearing in the 2012 legislative session.

After the Supreme Court upheld the Affordable Care Act, Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter appointed a working group to make a recommendation on whether the state should form its own exchange, or rely on the federal government to do it, as mandated by the Affordable Care Act. On Oct. 26, the group submitted its report to Otter, recommending the state run its own and not rely on the federal government.

Otter has yet to make a decision, said spokesman

Jon Hanian. On Friday, Wood said he didn't think the leniency would affect the governor's path forward. "It just makes it easier, but I don't think that affects what the state is eventually going to do," Wood said. In a concession to procrastinators, Sebelius said states considering a partnership with the federal government to run their exchanges can now have until mid-February to make a decision and submit their blueprints.

The partnership option allows states to handle consumer relations and oversight of health plans, while the federal government does the heavy lifting, taking care of enrollment, and figuring out any the taxpayer help that consumers may be entitled.

Sebelius stressed, however, that she is not waiving any hard deadlines under the law.

"Consumers in all 50 states and the District of Columbia will have access to insurance through these new marketplaces on Jan. 1, 2014, as scheduled, with no delays," she wrote. Open enrollment for exchange plans will start in about 11 months - Oct. 1, 2013.

CHEERS AND JEERS

JEERS to the day after Election Day statement from Superintendent of Schools Tom Luna. Teachers cheered, and anyone with a connection to teachers breathed a sigh of relief Tuesday night after Propositions 1, 2 and 3 were voted down — no, no and no.

It's back to the drawing board for education reform, but Luna's statement expressed very little understanding as to why the propositions ended up on the ballot in the first place.

His tone was defiant, and he noted only that Idahoans had "expressed concerns." His statement did not address the fundamental issue that Idaho does not properly fund education and siphoning what little money is available to laptops is not the solution.

The Legislature will revisit education reform in the next session. This time, we hope to see more people at the table.

JEERS to waiting. It was a tough night and early morning for anyone waiting to hear results from any of the races involving Blaine County.

According to the Idaho Mountain Express, "delays related to absentee ballots and high turnouts plagued the Blaine County Elections Office on Tuesday night, causing the first results to be released around 2 a.m. and the final results in the not-so-early morning hours."

More than 87 percent of registered Blaine County voters turned out for the elections. Blaine County Deputy County Clerk Leslie Londos told the Mountain Express that nearly 36 percent of those ballots were either mail-in or in-person absentee ballots.

County Clerk JoLynn Drage told the Mountain Express that the absentee ballots, which are folded and put into envelopes, had not been opened and weighed down in time to press out the creases, making it difficult for the counting machine to process them.

"The machine stopped every third piece of paper," Drage told the Mountain Express.

JEERS to typos. We are the first to admit that typos make it into the Times-News. He who is without sin cast the first stone, and all that. However, just as readers forgive us, so voters must have forgiven Maxine Bell, Clark Kauffman and Jim Patrick for their assurance in campaign literature that "stong rural vales have shaped their fiscal responsibilities."

LETTERS OF THANKS

Company Gave Genuine Customer Service Above and Beyond

This letter is to express my most sincere thanks to Microchips here in Twin Falls.

I was recently having some computer problems. Being advised by a friend, I took the computer to Microchips. Upon arriving there, I was greeted by a friendly young man, Brandon. My computer was serviced by a technician, Zack. Due to my own lack of extensive computer knowledge, I returned there for what I thought was to be additional service. At this point I met Cam, the office manager, who then suggested I leave it there again. On Oct. 28, a gentleman, Chris, re-

Thank You for Contributions to Scouting for Food

I would like to thank the communities of southern Idaho for their generous contributions in Scouting for Food. It was another wonderful event with great success.

Scouting for Food is a community building program that fills empty shelves so others can be lifted up and builds character and duty to God and We would like to thank Town Square Media and Bish's RV for putting on another outstanding Trick or Treat Street held in the Kmart parking lot Halloween night.

Local businesses set up in a train of recreational vehicle trailers brought in by Mark Kinnison of Bish's RV and handed out tons of candy and treats in a safe environment to kids dressed in Halloween costumes. This year, people brought more than 600 pounds of canned food to support the South Central Community Action Agency's efforts of helping economically disadvantaged families and kids.

The community generosity was apparent, as many who attended exceeded the requested number of cans needed for admission. Janice Degner, Amanda Miller and all the great radio personalities from KLIX, KEZJ, KOOL and The Snake did an awesome job promoting and participating in the event.

We are truly blessed to have these wonderful people and businesses in our community.

Boise Mulls Protection for Gays, Lesbians

BOISE (AP) • Boise could become the second Idaho city to pass an ordinance banning discrimination against people because of their sexual identities.

A pair of city councilwomen will propose the new ordinance at a meeting on Tuesday, The Idaho Statesman reported.

The tiny resort town of Sandpoint in northern Idaho has passed a similar ordinance. But statewide efforts have been met with resistance.

During the 2012 Legislature, Republican lawmakers once again balked at even holding a hearing considering a bill to add discrimination protections for gays, lesbians, bisexuals and transgender individuals to the Idaho Human Rights Act.

In Boise, councilwomen Maryanne Jordan and Lauren McLean say such protections become an important recruitment tool for businesses looking for qualified workers. Their proposal includes job, housing and other protections.

"When you drill down to the very core mission of any city, it's public safety," Jordan said.

Prospective employers considering a move to Boise might decide against Idaho's capital if they didn't feel their employees enjoyed the same protections from discrimination as everyone else, Jordan said.

Idaho law now forbids workplace and housing discrimination based on race, sex, religion, color, national origin and mental or physical disabilities.

Boise spokesman Adam Park said a recent survey commissioned by the city found that 86 percent of Ada County voters believe that firing someone for reasons involving sexuality or gender identity also should be illegal.

Boise likely won't be the last city to consider the matter.

Leaders in Pocatello, home of Idaho State University, are drafting a similar policy. And in southwestern Idaho, the city of Caldwell has added language to guard against discriminating against gays and lesbians applying for city jobs.

The American Civil Liberties Union of Idaho said many major corporations and national companies doing business in the state already have nondiscrimination policies for their own workforces.

Those firms include Micron Technology, Albertsons, Microsoft, Alaska Airlines and Starbucks.

Nevada Judge Sets May Hearing in O.J. Freedom Bid

BY KEN RITTER

Associated Press

LAS VEGAS • A Nevada judge set the stage Friday for former football star O.J. Simpson to testify for the first time in the Las Vegas armed robbery and kidnapping case that resulted in his conviction and lengthy prison sentence.

Simpson appeals lawyers Patricia Palm and Ozzie Fumo said following a brief date-setting hearing in Las Vegas that they anticipate Simpson will take the stand to testify that he was so poorly represented by his trial attorneys that he should be freed and get a new trial.

"He looks forward to defending himself," Fumo said. Simpson wasn't in the courtroom as Clark County District Court Judge Linda Marie Bell set the evidentiary hearing for May 13.

Simpson, now 65, was convicted at trial in 2008 of leading five men, including two with guns, in a September 2007 confrontation with two sports memorabilia dealers and a middleman in a cramped room at a Las Vegas casinohotel. He was sentenced to nine to 33 years in prison.

Simpson maintained he was trying to retrieve personal mementoes, photos and other items stolen following his 1995 acquittal in the Los Angeles slavings of his ex-wife, Nicole Brown Simpson, and her friend, Ronald Goldman. That televised proceedings were dubbed the "trial of the century" by some tabloid media.

Simpson never testified at the Los Angeles criminal trial, but memorably demonstrated in court that a glove found near the slaying scene didn't fit his hand. He testified at length in a wrongful death trial that led a Los Angeles civil court jury in 1997 to find him liable for damages in the case.

In Las Vegas, Bell agreed last month to hear evidence and consider 18 of 22 questions cited in Simpson's appeal for a new Nevada trial. The judge also granted a waiver of attorney-client privilege on questions in dispute between Simpson and his trial lawyer, Yale Galanter.

The appeal alleges that Galanter had personal financial and business interests that posed a conflict that should have precluded him from handling Simpson's case.

Galanter did not immediately respond to messages Friday. He denied during trial that he had anything to do with the ill-fated Las Vegas caper, but Palm asserts that the trial judge never fully explored the question.

Animals of Montana has about 50 captive predators and other animals used in photography shoots, motion pictures and television productions.

The mauling prompted state wildlife officials to prohibit the company from taking any animals off-site for filming while an investigation is pending. At the re-

The company's head trainer, Demetri Price, had warned that the suspension of off-site work threatened to scuttle a $1 million contract for a commercial using the company's animals that is due to begin filming soon.

Risely's letter identified those animals as a snow leopard, tiger and African leopard, and said they could be taken off-site only for "conditioning" of the animals in preparation for filming and for the filming itself.

Price declined to say what commercial they were being used in.

He said the public has been never at risk from the company's animals, which he described as being kept in secure compounds on a wooded, rural site north of Bozeman posted with no trespassing signs.

Storm Brings Snow to Sierras

BY MARTIN GRIFFITH Associated Press

RENO, Nev. • A storm has left up to 18 inches of snow in the Sierra Nevada and raised the hopes of skiers and snowboarders after a subpar snowpack last winter.

Frigid temperatures also have allowed ski resorts to crank up snow-making machines in advance of the Thanksgiving holiday period.

Mammoth Mountain Resort, just east of Yosemite National Park, reported Friday that the storm brought 6 to 12 inches of snow. It was the only resort open in California on Friday, a day after it began operations for the season with some 1,000 skiers and snowboarders on the slopes.

"Snow brings them out of the woodwork," Mammoth spokeswoman Joani Lynch said. "It's very nice to have an addition of natural snow for our opening this year, and it looks like it's setting up for a real nice Thanksgiving."

Boreal Mountain Resort, atop Donner Summit north of Lake Tahoe, plans to resume daily operations Saturday afternoon after receiving 8 inches of new snow. It opened for six days beginning on Oct. 26, then suspended operations due

"With this storm we hope to be up and running for the season," Boreal spokesman Jon Slaughter said, adding it was lightly snowing Friday afternoon with the resort's snow guns going at full capacity.

Filer City Council Wraps Up Loose Ends

TIMES-NEWS

FILER • Resolving a code violation in Filer may get a little easier by the first of the year.

During Tuesday's Filer City Council meeting, members discussed improving which entity should be in charge of code enforcement. Currently, if there's code violation in Filer, it's unclear if the jurisdiction lies in the city of Filer or with Twin Falls County.

"Right now if there's a zoning violation, then that's left to the building inspector," said Mayor Bob Templeman. "But we don't know who's in charge when it comes to code enforcement."

It's an issue that cities like Kimberly and Buhl have been forced to address and it's now Filer's turn, Templeman said.

No decision was made at the council meeting but members are hoping to have the issue cleared up by the beginning of 2013, he said.

In other council news, members created an official ordinance that defines library employees separate from city workers.

"Library employees have always been their own identity and all these years, we've been operating under the assumption that there was an ordinance," Templeman said. "When we couldn't find the ordinance, we decided to add it to the code."

TWIN FALLS • In an effort to raise money for cancer awareness, Twin Falls County Sheriff Tom Carter has signed a memorandum temporarily changing a policy at the sheriff's office.

Male employees aren't usually allowed to have facial hair besides well groomed sideburns or a mustache. But for the period of Oct. 25, 2012, through Jan. 31, 2013, employees will be allowed to grow a

Funds collected will be donated to local resident,

'This is a fun opportunity for our employees to participate and raise money and to see it help someone in our community," Sheriff Carter said.

CSI Men Roll in Home Opener

BY NICK RULAND nruland@magicvalley.com

TWIN FALLS • Judging by the amount of open shots the seventh-ranked College of Southern Idaho men's basketball had against a smaller, less athletic and relatively disorganized Impact Academy Friday night, its 114-65 win probably isn't a perfect indication of what the 3-1 Golden Eagles are, or will become.

But at this point in the season, coming off an opening road trip that had head coach Gosar Steve questioning his team's heart, the Golden Eagles were bat tling their biggest opponent to date themselves.

And the outcome in that contest was epitomized with CSI up 40 points midway through the second half. Scoreboard arithmetic was lost on Trevor Ritchie, who transferred from the turned it into transition points.

"That play right there is a testament to what we've been working on the last three months," Ritchie said. "Everyone is talented, but the team that is going to win ballgames, especially (by) 50 like that, is going to make all the little plays and will get after it every single play."

CSI outrebounded Impact 66-43 and had 16 more combined steals and blocks, all signs that it may win in the future even when they aren't supremely efficient on like offense they were Friday. "Going in, I just wanted my team to bring effort, to go after the ball," Alford said. "We lost last week and I had night-

Midway through the third quarter, Gooding faced a fourth-and-1 at its own 20, tied with mighty Shelley at 7-7. The Senators had struggled moving

The Russets scored four plays later, then poured it on as the Senators fell to Shelley in the 3A state football semifinals 47-7 Friday night.

BURLEY • Despite some first-game jitters, Friday's Burley-Filer girls basketball game didn't disappoint.

Burley rallied from a double-digit deficit, and then held off a late strong surge by Filer for a 58-43 home win.

Burley senior Aubrie Vale led all scorers with 23 to highlight the marquee early-season matchup between two teams that figure to be in the hunt for their respective conference titles by season's end.

"We knew it was going to be a good basketball game. Filer is a great, great team," said Vale. "We're a good team Chelsee Baker drove baseline to tie the game 26-26. Vale capped Burley's 9-0 run with a steal and layup to give the Bobcats a lead they never relinquished.

BOISE STATE SETS SIGHTS ON HAWAII

BY DAVE SOUTHORN Idaho Press-Tribune

BOISE • The Boise State football team has won one of its last three trips to Honolulu, and even though it faces a rebuilding Hawaii squad today, the long trek is an advantage for the Warriors.

"It's probably the toughest road trip we take, ever," Boise State coach Chris Petersen said.

The weather on Oahu is forecast to be a splendid 82 degrees, sunny, with a zero percent chance of rain. The beach at Waikiki will be right there beckoning the Broncos, as will many of the players' family members who made the trip.

Of course, none of that fun is allowed.

"Everyone's on vacation but you - it can be distracting at times," said receiver Chris Potter, who added that two members of his family went to Laramie, Wyo., on the Broncos' last trip, but 12 will be coming to Honolulu.

When the Broncos take the field at Aloha Stadium, they'll be facing a Hawaii team that has a whole new look after more than a dozen years utilizing the run-andshoot offense.

After throwing for at least 3,500 yards every season since 1999, the Warriors are running a pro-style offense, and are 105th nationally with 188 yards passing per game. They are averaging 15.7 points per game against FBS competition, certainly below the standard of coach Norm Chow, renowned as an offensive guru.

"I'll be very honest, it's hard," Chow said. "... We have a new offensive idea, a whole new defensive scheme, a new special teams scheme, so we expected the going to be tough – but the guys have bought in."

Chow, who oversaw high-powered offenses at BYU and USC, among others, before getting his first head coaching job at age 66, also noted the rash of injuries for the Warriors. Only five players have started all eight games, and Hawaii has five true freshmen starting.

Petersen said he knows of a few routes his receivers run that were taken from Chow's BYU system. With most players recruited to run a spread-based, pass-heavy offense, Chow is still some time away from getting the types of players he needs, but Petersen doesn't doubt it will come soon.

"That's hard to do," Petersen said. "If you've got the guys, awesome, if you don't - then you've got to go get them.

"Norm Chow, he's a great coach ... it's going to take a while for those guys to get just how he wants it done. They've got young guys, they'll get it, they'll keep improving - you just hope it's not too much this week."

Chow has found tough sledding back in his home state, as his defense is giving up 42.6 points per game (only Colorado is worse). He noted the challenges of having a lack of top-notch facilities, along with the trials of travel, and that as a head coach, he needs to answer questions he never had to as an assistant, adding "I'm not sure that head-coaching is all that it's cracked up to be?"

Still, Chow is optimistic, noting that despite some blowouts, the effort is at a high level.

"My whole story to them is I don't want them to look up at the scoreboard," Chow said. "We're beat up. We obviously have a tough time matching up physically with Boise State. That's obvious - just look at the tape, but the guys are very willing."

Feds Drop Sex Abuse Case against Syracuse's Fine

TIMES-NEWS

ASSOCIATED PRESS

SYRACUSE, N.Y. • Federal authorities have dropped their investigation into one of the sexual abuse claims that cost a Syracuse University assistant basketball coach his job, threw a topranked team into turmoil and threatened the career of Hall of Fame coach Jim Boeheim.

After a probe spanning nearly a year, U.S. Attorney Richard Hartunian said Friday there was not enough evidence to support a claim that Bernie Fine had molested a boy in 2002 in a Pittsburgh hotel room.

"The nature and seriousness of these allegations, which involved conduct typically committed in private with individuals who are reluctant to come forward, warranted a thorough federal investigation," Hartunian said.

It wasn't clear yet whether Fine, 66, could get his job back.

His lawyers, Karl Sleight, Donald Martin and David Botsford, said in a statement that they were not surprised by the decision.

"The damage inflicted upon Bernie and his family is simply immeasurable," the lawyers said. "Bernie hopes and prays that the lesson learned and remembered is that a rush to judgment has irreversible consequences."

POCATELLO • Prosecutors in Idaho have decided not to file criminal charges against Idaho State football coach Mike Kramer after a player complained that the coach shoved him to the turf during practice.

Pocatello City Attorney Dean Tranmer called it a difficult decision but said Thursday that investigators didn't believe Kramer had any intention of harming wide receiver Derek Graves or committing a criminal act.

"It was an unfortunate occurrence, which Kramer apologized for to Graves and the entire team a short time after it happened," Tranmer said.

Tranmer said another factor was the 11 days that elapsed between when Graves was pushed on Oct. 3 and when he filed the police complaint, as well as the fact that Graves released videotape of the altercation to ESPN.

On the recording, Kramer is seen running across the field during practice, stopping in front of Graves and apparently yelling at him before shoving him. Graves took a few stumbling steps backward before falling down. Graves said he injured his neck in the fall.

Graves hasn't played since the confrontation and was suspended indefinitely last week for violating team rules. Graves said the letter he received said he had been late for practice.

During the investigation, Tranmer said a charging decision was delayed because he wanted detectives to interview assistant coaches and players who were present and that investigators had a difficult time obtaining Graves' medical records relating to the injury.

The Idaho State team doctor attested to Graves' injury in writing in a statement supporting a medical redshirt and has refused to clear him for competition, Graves' attorney, Donald Jackson of Montgomery, Ala., said Friday in an email to The Associated Press. He called the incident a "black eye on collegiate sports."

"It is unfortunate, though quite expected, that law enforcement and a prosecutor would fail to see criminal conduct in a videotaped two-handed shove by a gentleman that weighs in excess of 250 pounds against a college student that he has an obligation to protect and instruct," Jackson wrote. "An apology does not lessen the impact of this coach's conduct nor does it lessen the university's responsibility to protect its students from this type of conduct or minimize the degree of culpability by this perpetrator."

Tranmer said the case was one best resolved internally at ISU.

Idaho State suspended Kramer for the game against Montana on Oct. 27. However, Kramer was allowed to coach the team during the week leading up to the game. The Idaho State Journal reports Kramer was given permission to travel to Missoula, but he chose not to.

Kramer has not commented publicly on the situation.

Steve Schaack, ISU's assistant athletic director for media relations, said Thursday the school would not comment on city attorney's decision.

"As an athletic department, because it is a matter investigated by the Pocatello Police Department, all questions are deferred to them," he said.

Both teams entered the game with perfect 10-0 records and played like it the first half.

After shutting down the Russets on their first drive, the Senators took little time getting on the board. First it was Josh Finley for 11 yards, then Torin Brunson escaped the Shelley defense and rambled 53 yards for the score.

That drive would account for almost a third of the Senators' total yards for the

Through most of the first half the Russets only offense came from the running of quarterback Chad Leckington. Shelley had a shot when a mishandled punt snap gave the Russets the ball in the red zone, but the Senators defense held tough.

Late in the half, Leckington finally used his arm connecting with Dalton Nelson to knot the score at the half. After the break Leckington would throw two more touchdowns passes, both to the tight end, and run for two.

"We wanted to stop McK-

Cannon's only score came on an interception return.

Gooding finished with 196 yards of offense (142 rushing, 54 passing).

"Their linebackers are really good, they flow so hard to the football. Their pressure made it tough to pass," Andersen said.

The Russets tallied 368 yards, most in the second half. Leckington tallied 166 yards in the air and 102 on the ground.

"When you look at our stat line, 26 assists and only 16 turnovers, that is what happens when you are making plays for your teammates," Gosar said. "When we do that we get good shots. When we have too much 1-on-1, that's when the stat line gets flip-flopped. We want to get shots that the whole team is happy with?"

NBA ROUNDUP

Miami Heat point guard Norris Cole (30) leaps to the basket against Atlanta Hawks shooting guard Louis Williams (3) in the second half of an NBA basketball game in Atlanta on Friday. Miami won 95-89.

JAMES PACES HEAT PAST HAWKS

ASSOCIATED PRESS

ATLANTA • LeBron James scored 21 points, including the clinching jumper with 13.6 seconds remaining, and Miami knocked off the Atlanta Hawks 95-89 on Friday for the Heat's fourth straight win.

Jeff Teague hit consecutive 3-pointers as the Hawks rallied from a nine-point deficit in the fourth quarter. But Josh Smith, on an awful night, missed two free throws with just over a minute remaining, and James finished off Atlanta after the teams traded turnovers.

Everyone in the building knew James would shoot, but it didn't matter. He muscled away from De-Shawn Stevenson, swished a 15-footer and hopped along the sideline in front of the Atlanta crowd. The Heat won without Dwyane Wade, who didn't play because of a cold.

KNICKS 104, MAVERICKS 94

NEW YORK • Carmelo Anthony scored 31 points and the Knicks improved their best start in nearly two decades to 4-0.

Reserve JR Smith added 22 points for the Knicks, the Budinger converted a layup on a feed from Andrei Kirilenko with 0.8 seconds to go, lifting Minnesota to the victory.

76ERS 106, CELTICS 100

BOSTON • Evan Turner scored 25 points, Jrue Holiday added 21 and Philadelphia held off several fourthquarter rallies.

NETS 107, MAGIC 68

ORLANDO, Fla. • Andray Blatche had 15 points, Brook Lopez added 14 points and 10 rebounds and Brooklyn never trailed while snapping a 10-game losing streak to Orlando that dated to 2009.

THUNDER 105, PISTONS 94 OKLAHOMA CITY .

Serge Ibaka scored a careerhigh 25 points, Kevin Durant chipped in a seasonhigh 25 points and 13 rebounds, and Oklahoma City broke in its new alternate jerseys by beating winless Detroit.

> alongside Kobe Bryant and Pau Gasol. But the Lakers went 0-8 during the preseason last month for the first time in franchise history before stumbling into the regular season with an 0-3 start, losing to Dallas, Portland and the Clippers.

After finally beating Detroit last Sunday for their first win, the Lakers looked listless again in a loss at Utah on Wednesday, dropping to last place in the Western Conference. Los Angeles' defense has been largely poor, and the players still haven't figured out the new offense installed by Brown during training camp.

Combined with their aging core of talent and a massive payroll, Kupchak and owners Jim and Jerry Buss decided they couldn't wait another game to start winning. Brown was dismissed in a morning meeting.

Kupchak announced the surprising move several hours before they hosted Golden State in a game that was in progress at press time. Assistant coach Bernie Bickerstaff coached the Lakers against the Warriors while the club's top brass searches for Brown's replacement after just 18 months in charge.

"The bottom line is that the team is not winning at the pace we expected this team to win, and we didn't see improvement," Kupchak said at the Lakers' training complex in El Segundo.

Halfway through Season, NFC Is Dominant

ASSOCIATED PRESS

Halfway through the season, something's missing - mostly - on a list of the league's elite teams.

The AFC.

It's difficult to make a case for including any team from the conference other than Houston among the league's best, while unbeaten Atlanta, San Francisco, Chicago, Green Bay and the New York Giants could be considered in that category from the NFC.

Coming off three straight Super Bowl wins and four out of the last five, the NFC is playing some dominant football on both sides of the line.

In interconference play, it's up 23-13 on the AFC, led by the Falcons sweeping the AFC West, and the Bears going 3-0 against the AFC South — with Chicago meeting the Texans on Sunday in the biggest matchup of the season so far. The Bears are slight favorites in the showdown of 7-1 teams.

That's not too much of a surprise, really. Chicago is home and only Pittsburgh, 3-0 against the suddenly vulnerable NFC East, has showed strength among AFC teams when crossing over.

The NFC has outscored the AFC 1,012-767 in head-to-head matchups, and has a plus-30 turnover margin in those games.

"The quarterbacks as a group are deeper in the NFC," says former NFL executive Pat Kirwan, who has looked extensively at the differences in the conferences. "The bottom teams in the NFL are all in the AFC: Jacksonville, Kansas City and Cleveland."

Just as pronounced are the statistical rankings, with six of the top eight defensive teams coming from the NFC. In a league where just about everyone can play offense – sorry Jacksonville, your 117 points wouldn't cut it in the ACC – the efficient defenses tend to swing the pendulum of power.

But if you want offense, something the league is providing plenty of once again this year, note that seven of the 11 highest-rated passers are from the NFC, as are eight of the top 11 receivers. The ground game? Try the top four, led by Minnesota star Adrian Peterson, and six of the first 10 are NFCers.

There's far more balance to NFC attacks.

"I think the balance has to be more maybe not weekly but over the course of the season," said Buccaneers coach AFG Greg Schiano, whose team has into averaged 36 points in winning 199 three of the last four, two of 33those victories against – you aro guessed it – the AFC.

"You have to take what the defense gives you. Different weeks the defense is going to afford you different opportunities. I think that's the hardest thing, coaches being able to recognize it and if it's different than what they've shown, being able to adjust. And for your players being able to get that communicated to them and having a system that is flexible enough to change the game plan because of the way they are playing the offense."

Back to defense, consider that seven of the top 10 players in sacks, and 11 of the first 15, are from the NFC. Six of the eight best sacks teams are from the conference.

Of the 19 players with at least three interceptions, 13 are from the NFC.

Get the picture? Well, half the picture considering we have eight more weeks left in the regular-season. Kirwan cautions that the AFC, which had the edge in interconference play from 1996-2010 (the NFC edged it 33-31 last season) could turn it around before January.

"I will say with Peyton Manning and John Fox in Denver, Andrew Luck in Indy and with the Steelers' strong push," Kirwan said, "they are helping the AFC close the gap."

Defenses have not closed the gap in what every year becomes more of an offenseoriented league. Games are averaging 705 yards gained, nearly 12 ahead of the record pace of last season. Yards through the air is rising to the stratosphere, more than 17 yards a game higher than the 2011 record.

The Bears' defense is adding significantly to the points totals, which are not quite on a record pace and might slow down as cold weather hits in many NFL cities. Chicago has seven interception returns for touchdowns and eight scores on defense already.

"At any given time on Sunday, anyone on this defense can score," said star linebacker Brian Urlacher, who did just that last Sunday. "We didn't have that back in the day."

Here's another wrinkle. Consider that the NFC has been dominant even though three teams usually among the contenders — New Orleans, Dallas and Philadelphia — have fallen into mediocrity. Or worse.

The Saints, of course, have been damaged by the bounties scandal that cost them coach Sean Payton for the season. Having a sieve of a defense has exacerbated their fall to 3-5, leaving them on the very outer fringe of the playoff race.

That's also where the Cowboys and Eagles have plummeted to through eight games. Dallas has issues with fundamentals such as receivers running the right routes and actually holding onto passes. Philly's defense can't tackle anyone and the offense, specifically Michael Vick, keeps turning over the ball.

Still, they tend to keep games close, as do most teams except the Titans, who have allowed a ludicrous 308 points in going 3-6. Already, 31 games have had the winning points scored in the final two minutes or in overtime. Eleven of those were decided in the last 10 seconds of the fourth quarter and 10 went to OT.

Among the players producing the heroics in those games have been a bunch of rookies in what might be the strongest freshman class in years. Five first-year quarterbacks have started and, generally, made an impact, with the Colts' Andrew Luck – top overall pick last April – noteworthy for his success. He's lifted Indianapolis into the playoff push after the team won two games last season.

Robert Griffin III in Washington and Russell Wilson in Seattle have provided all kinds of excitement at the position, but don't think only young QBs are making headlines. From running backs Doug Martin in Tampa and Trent Richardson in Cleveland to Bucs safety Mark Barron and Patriots DE Chandler Jones, it's been a rocking half-season for rookies. "I don't really know if there's something in the water or what. The rookies are definitely making a huge impact this year," Dolphins running back Reggie Bush said.

So are Manning and Peterson in their comebacks from major injuries and surgery. Now that Manning is approaching full health and a symbiotic relationship with his receivers, the Broncos have started looking like Super Bowl material. Peterson, coming off left knee surgery, returned to the lineup in less than nine months and has been, well, as sensational as ever.

For all the NFC superiority, the great comebacks, the offensive explosions and the remarkable rookies, the first half of the 2012 season might be most remembered for the opening three weeks of replacement officials. Indeed, if the Packers miss the postseason and the Seahawks make it, Seattle's 14-12 victory in Week 3 on a last-second desperation pass that sparked the end of the lockout of the regular officials will be revisited endlessly.

Chicago Bears cornerback Tim Jennings (26) celebrates with teammates Brandon Marshall (15) and Earl Bennett (80) after he returned and interception for a touchdown on Oct. 28 during the second half of an NFL football game against the Carolina Panthers in Chicago. The Bears has seven interception returns for touchdowns and eight scores on defense this season.

Love Your Neighbor

Practice the virtue of hospitality.

ractice hospitality." I've always thought the statement in Romans 12:3 was somewhat random and an afterthought for Christ followers. After all, there are far more significant challenges, beginning with the salvation of the world or radically imitating the actions and attitudes of Jesus. After all, what's hospitality have to do with those prime directives?

Ironically, it was that short phrase that came to mind a few weeks ago as I sat in the tent of a Bedouin sheikh. I was travelling with 36 other American Christians on a study tour through Egypt, Jordan and Israel. We had just descended the mountain called St. Katherine, the mountain adjacent the traditional Mount Sinai. We were tired and sweaty and ready to call it a day. Then to our amazement, we rounded a corner and our tour leader guided us to the tent of a Bedouin family. It was time for tea.

So there we were, 37 American Christians in the tent of Egyptian Muslims. It was a humbling moment as the skeikh graciously welcomed us into his open aired tent. As we sat in the cool of the shade, his family carefully poured and served tea reserved specifically for welcoming guests. There was a sacramental sense in the distribution of the tea as the Bedouin family stooped to serve each of us. Soon after they served us homegrown peaches. They were small peaches by our standards, yet had a special cross-cultural sweetness. Maybe it was the heat, hunger or exhaustion, but it had to be the best peach I've tasted. The sheikh unveiled his ancient lyre/guitar, and he and his family sang a couple of songs that were obviously special to them. We enjoyed together the simplicity of the moment as they sang the songs of the desert.

To the Bedouin people, and other cultures, hospitality remains the highest virtue. The sheikh admitted through an interpreter that if attacked, protecting his guests would be the top priority. That commitment to hospitality occurs regardless of personal cost, political persuasion or religious preference. It's what they do. It's what they expect of one another. They "practice hospitality."

I'm not sure when we devalued our practice of hospitality. Certainly there are still hospitality practitioners still at work. Perhaps more in semi-rural settings such as ours. My hunch is that someday we'll visit the Smithsonian Institution and gawk at "hospitality" in the "Extinct American Traditions" display and comment on that quaint, ancient practice.

As I sat in the shade of the Bedouin tent, the priority of hospitality became palpable — its' sights, tastes, sounds and sacrifices. I was convicted of how lightly I'd taken the value behind that simple phrase, "practice hospitality." For me at least, it's taken on new meaning. Perhaps the apostle

Paul recognized hospitality as the hub of all virtues. Perhaps Jesus' call to "love our neighbor" should have added the caveat — and practice hospitality.

After all, hospitality can't be that difficult. All we need is a little shade, a cup of tea and a peach.

CASTLEFORD • For more than 70 years, the Castleford United Methodist Church has been large part of Jeanne Quigley's life.

She joined the church in 1941 and has seen how the congregation has changed over the years.

"There's not many of us anymore, but we're loyal," Quigley said.

Members have kept the church building on Elm Street in good shape through repairs and maintenance, she said, so it has lasted for many years.

This year, the Castleford church turns 100. Members are celebrating Sunday with a special church service and activities.

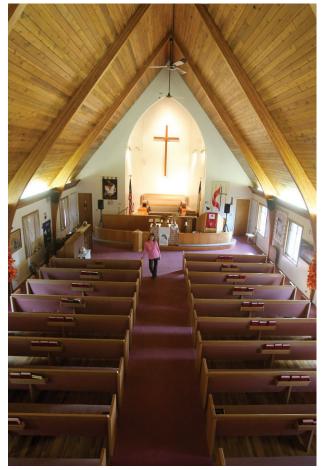

Pastor Jana Blick said the celebration is "going to recognize why we have been a house of God for 100 years."

Community members are invited to join church members in remembering the church's roots and looking to the future.

"We're going to celebrate this weekend," Quigley said.

Blick said there have been generations of families who have grown up in the church. "Small-town churches are just a lifeline to their community," she said.

The Past

Over the church's 100-year history, Sunday services have moved around to different locations.

The first Methodist church service in Castleford was Sept. 4, 1910 at the Poplar Grove School.

In the early 1900s, J.C. Gates and his family came to the area from Utah. Their home served as a community worship center.

Gates was a Christian Scientist and their church in Philadelphia mailed out the weekly church sermon.

In December 1911, a Sunday school program was formed.

The church also moved again – this time, to a room above the Castleford Mercantile that was shared with Please see HISTORY, S6

the Castleford School.

In September 1912, the church was officially recognized during an annual Methodist conference. Philo Barlett was also recognized as the church's pastor.

A couple years later in 1914, church services moved again to Castleford's new, larger elementary school. It's the same site where the current school building is located.

Sunday services were held at the school until 1927, when the church's fellowship hall was constructed.

The building also doubled as a community center and featured a half-basketball court.

Groundbreaking ceremonies were held in March 1958 for the current sanctuary, where services are currently held. The building was dedicated about nine years later.

Over the years, the church has seen 32 pastors.

Blick said the focus of the church is always to embrace traditions, but also to be on the move.

"We're a vital, vital church," she said.

The Church Today

Today, the Castleford United Methodist Church has nearly 70 members. On an average Sunday, 20-25 people come to church.

Blick said she's not into looking at the size of the congregation. She'd give the same church service for one as she'd give for one million.

"We don't look at numbers," she said. "We look at who is there."

What does she want people to know about the church? "Our doors are always open."

Blick said the church offers hands to hold, shoulders to cry on and a place to be loved and blessed.

While the church building is a gathering place, the Methodist denomination has an emphasis on mission work. So church members don't stay put inside the church building.

"The focus is always to bring the light of Christ out to our world," she said.

The church's outreach work includes a community Vacation Bible School in conjunction with the Castleford Baptist Church.

In addition, church members provide a children's Christmas program, community food boxes, new baby packages and prayer quilts.

Members of the Methodist church also run a community garden and orchard. Occasionally, church members walk door-todoor giving out produce.

"We not only give zucchini, but we give the message of God," Blick said.

Navy SEALs Punished for Secrets Breach

WASHINGTON (AP) • Seven members of the secretive Navy SEAL Team 6, including one involved in the mission to get Osama bin Laden, have been punished for disclosing classified information, senior Navy officials said Thursday.

Four other SEALs are under investigation for similar alleged violations, one official said.

The SEALs are alleged to have divulged classified information to the maker of a video game called "Medal of Honor: Warfighter."

Each of the seven received a punitive letter of reprimand and a partial forfeiture of pay for two months. Those actions generally hinder a military member's career.

The deputy commander of Naval Special Warfare Command, Rear Adm. Garry Bonelli, issued a statement acknowledging that nonjudicial punishments had been handed out for misconduct, but he did not offer any details.

"We do not tolerate deviations from the policies that govern who we are and what we do as sailors in the United States Navy," Bonelli said. He alluded to the importance of honoring nondisclosure agreements that SEALs sign.

He said the punishments this week "send a clear message throughout our force that we are and will be held to a high standard of accountability."

The two main complaints against the SEALs were that they did not seek the permission of their command to take part in the video project and that they showed the video designers some of their specially designed combat equipment unique to their unit, said a senior military official. The official was briefed about the case but was not authorized to speak publicly about it.

SEALs, including some of those involved in the bin Laden raid of May 2011, have been uncharacteristically prominent in the news this year.

Matt Bissonnette, who participated in the raid in Abbottabad, Pakistan, but later retired from the SEALs, wrote a firsthand account under the pseudonym Mark Owen, but he landed in hot water with the Pentagon even before it was published in September. The Pentagon accused him of disclosing classified information in violation of the nondisclosure agreements he had signed as a SEAL. He disputes the charge.

C.I.A. Director David Petraeus Quits Over Affair

WASHINGTON (AP) • David Petraeus, the retired four-star general renowned for taking charge of the military campaigns in Iraq and then Afghanistan, abruptly resigned Friday as director of the CIA, admitting to an extramarital affair.

The affair was discovered during an FBI investigation, according to officials briefed on the developments. They spoke on condition of anonymity because they were not authorized to publicly discuss the matter.

Petraeus carried on the affair with his biographer and reserve Army officer Paula Broadwell, according to several U.S. officials with knowledge of the situation. They spoke anonymously because they were not authorized to discuss the investigation that led to the resignation publicly.

The FBI discovered the relationship by monitoring Petraeus' emails, after being alerted Broadwell may have had access to his personal email account, two of the officials said.

Broadwell did not respond to voice mail or email messages seeking comment.

People wait in line for gasoline at a gas station on Sunday in Glen Rock, N.J. It has been a week after Sandy slammed into the New Jersey coastline in an assault that killed more than 100 people in 10 states.

stunningly successful, encountered a number of unexpected obstacles, including the loss of a stealthy helicopter that was partially blown up by the SEALs after making a hard landing inside bin Laden's compound.

The head of Naval Special Warfare Command, Rear Adm. Sean Pybus, responded to the Bissonnette book by telling his force that "hawking details about a mission" and selling other information about SEAL training and operations puts the force and their families at risk.

SEALs, both active duty and retired, possess highly sensitive information about tactics and techniques that are central to the success of their secret and often dangerous missions overseas. That is why they are obliged to sign nondisclosure agreements when they enter service and when they leave, and it is why the Pentagon seeks to enforce such written agreements.

The punishments were first reported by CBS News.

GAS RATIONING, SHORTAGE FRAY NERVES IN NEW YORK

NEW YORK (AP) • A gasoline shortage caused by Superstorm Sandy forced 1970s-era rationing on New Yorkers Friday, adding a fuel-gauge obsession to their frayed nerves and dwindling patience.

"I take passenger, I look at gas. I take another passenger, I look at gas," said New York City taxi driver Shi Shir K. Roy. "Tension all the time."

Though rationing that allowed private motorists to fill up only every other day seemed to help with gas lines, it didn't answer motorists' questions about why they had been waiting for days in hourslong lines to fuel up. The confusion led some, like Angel Ventura, to panic.

Ventura, who drives a delivery van for a camera rental company, has taken to hunting for gasoline every time his gauge drops below a quarter of a tank. "It makes me crazy, thinking I might hit empty and not be able to find it," he said.

As drivers waited on police-monitored lines, thousands more in the region got their power back for the first time since Sandy came ashore 12 days ago. More than 420,000 customers were still without power in New Jersey and the New York City area. President Barack Obama, who visited the battered Jersey coast two days after the storm, said he would survey the damage in New York next week from the storm, which the American Red Cross said will create its largest U.S. relief effort since Hurricane Katrina in 2005.

The gasoline rationing – the first in the nation's largest city since the 1970s Arab oil embargo – forced motorists to line up depending on whether their license plate ends with odd or even numbers.

Mayor Michael Bloomberg said one-third of the city's gas stations were open Friday, compared to 25 percent the day before, and cautioned, "there's no guarantee that odd-even is going to make a big difference." His estimate was countered by the Energy Department, which said that more than 70 percent of the city's stations have gas available for sales.

Industry officials first blamed the shortage on gas stations that lost power, but now say the problem has shifted to supply terminals, which are either shut or operating at reduced capacity. Drivers are also quicker to top off tanks because they're afraid gasoline won't be available, AAA spokesman Michael Green said.

Tom Kloza, chief oil analyst at the Oil Price Information Service, said the densely populated New York-New Jersey area has fewer stations per capita than any other major metropolitan area, making the shortage an even bigger problem. He said rationing earlier might have helped in New York City.

Gasoline moves millions of New Yorkers, just as the subway does. Hundreds of thousands of people drive to work, especially from the outer boroughs, and taxis and delivery vans are part of every gridlocked intersection.

OBAMA: COMPROMISE, BUT NOT ON TAX CUTS FOR RICH

WASHINGTON (AP) • An

economic calamity looming, President Barack Obama on Friday signaled willingness to compromise with Republicans, declaring he was not "wedded to every detail" of his tax-and-spending approach to prevent deep and widespread pain in the new year. But he insisted his reelection gave him a mandate to raise taxes on wealthier Americans.

"The majority of Americans agree with my approach," said Obama, brimming with apparent confidence in his first White House statement since securing a second term.

Trouble is, the Republicans who run the House plainly do not agree with his plans. Speaker John Boehner insisted that raising tax rates as Obama wants "will destroy jobs in America."

So began the "fiscal cliff" political maneuvering that will determine which elected power center — the White House or the House — bends more on its promises to voters. The outcome will affect tens of millions of Americans, given that the tax hikes and budgets cuts set to kick in Jan. 1 could spike unemployment and bring on a new recession.

An exhausting presidential race barely history, Washington was back quickly to governing on deadline, with agreement on a crucial goal but divisions on how to get there. The campaign is over, but another has just begun.

The White House quickly turned Obama's comments into an appeal for public support, shipping around a video by email and telling Americans that "this debate can either stay trapped in Washington or you can make sure your friends and neighbors participate." Obama invited the top four leaders of Congress to the White House next week for talks, right before he departs on a trip to Asia.

In laying their negotiating markers, all sides sought to leave themselves wiggle room.

"I don't want to box myself in. I don't want to box anybody else in," Boehner said at the Capitol.

Outside all the new the talk of openness, the same hard lines seemed in place.

Obama never expressly said that tax rates on top earners must return to the higher levels of the Bill Clinton era, leading to speculation that he was willing to soften the core position of his re-election campaign to get a grand debt deal with Republicans. "I'm not wedded to every detail of my plan. I'm open to compromise," he said.

BOSTON (AP) • Massachusetts congressman Joseph Early Sr. wasn't known as the most vocal of U.S. representatives during nearly two decades in Washington.

But the late Democrat was someone who wasn't afraid to speak against publican Peter Blute. But authorities cleared Early of any criminal wrongdoing.

U.S. Rep. Jim McGovern of Massachusetts said Friday that Early "fought tirelessly for working people" while championing economic development and advocating for medical research. Lt. Gov. Timothy Murray called Early a tenacious advocate who helped establish University of Massachusetts Medical School in Worcester and get federal money for health and science research in Massachusetts. Gov. Deval Patrick said Early's dedication to public service and central Massachusetts residents paved the way for many public servants who came after him. "His unwavering commitment to creating a better Commonwealth will be deeply missed by his former colleagues and constituents," Patrick said in a news release. Early's family said in a statement Friday that loved ones were very proud of his life's work. "He showed that helping people truly is a noble profession," they said.

Lee MacPhail, Oldest Hall of Famer, Dies at 95

COOPERSTOWN, N.Y. (AP) • Lee MacPhail, the longtime baseball executive who ruled in the celebrated Pine Tar case and later became part of the only father-son Hall of Fame pairing, has died. He was 95.

He was the oldest Hall of Famer, and he died Thursday night at his home in Delray Beach, Fla., the shrine said Friday.

"There's not much I haven't done off the field other than commissioner,"he said during a 1985 interview with The Associated Press when he retired after 4 1-2 decades in the sport.

In the second generation of one of baseball's most prominent families — his son, Andy, also was in the front office for several teams — MacPhail's most well-known moment in baseball came in 1983. He upheld Kansas City's protest in the Pine Tar Game against the New York Yankees, restoring a ninthinning home run to Royals slugger George Brett — also a future Hall of Famer.

"Lee MacPhail was one of the great executives in baseball history and a Hall of Famer in every sense, both personally and professionally," Commissioner Bud Selig said in a statement. "His hallmarks were dignity, common sense and humility. He was not only a remarkable league executive, but was a true baseball man." With MacPhail's death, Bobby Doerr at 94 becomes the oldest living Hall of Famer. "Baseball history has lost a great figure in Lee MacPhail, whose significant impact on the game spanned five decades," Hall chairman Jane Forbes Clark said. "He will always be remembered in Cooperstown as a man of exemplary kindness and a man who always looked after the best interests of the game." Lee MacPhail was the son of Larry MacPhail, a top executive with the Cincinnati Reds, Brooklyn Dodgers and New York Yankees. "Over his lifetime in baseball, Lee made many significant contributions that helped to make the game what it is today," former players' union head Don Fehr said. Said union founding executive director Marvin Miller: "Lee was a good man, trustworthy and honest, and I had a decent relationship with him over the years." Born Leland Stanford MacPhail Jr. in Nashville, Tenn., on Oct. 25, 1917, he was general manager at minor league Reading, went on to work for the Yankees in 1949 and spent a decade as farm director and player personnel director, with players he developed winning seven World Series titles.

years later returned to New York as chief administrative assistant for new baseball Commissioner Spike Eckert. He returned to the Yankees as general manager from 1967-73, and left after George Steinbrenner bought the team to become AL president in 1974.

A member of management's labor negotiating team along with NL President Chub Feeney during the 1981 midseason strike, he also headed the AL when it added the designated hitter for the 1973 season and expanded to Seattle and Toronto for 1977.

After he stepped down as league president following the 1983 season, he served two years as president of the owners' Player Relations Committee, overseeing bargaining during a two-day strike in 1985. He was elected to the Hall as an executive in 1998, 20 years after his father.

In the famed Pine Tar case, MacPhail overruled plate umpire Tim McClelland and crew chief Joe Brinkman and restored a home run to Brett. After Yankees manager Billy Martin argued that Brett's bat had excessive pine tar when he hit a two-run, ninth-inning homer at Yankees Stadium on July 24, McClelland called Brett out, the final out in a 4-3 New York victory. Brett stormed out of the dugout, eyes bulging, in one of baseball's most replayed arguments. Four days later, MacPhail upheld a protest for the first time as league president, said the home run counted and ordered the game to continue from that point. When the game was completed Aug. 18, the Royals held on to win 5-4. While the pine tar extended more than 18 inches past the handle, the limit set by baseball's rules, MacPhail said taking away the home run was improper. "The umpires' interpretation, while technically defensible, is not in accord with the intent or spirit of the rules and that the rules do not provide that a hitter be called out for excessive use of pine tar. The rules provide instead that the bat be removed from the game," he wrote. "Although manager Martin and his staff should be commended for their alertness, it is the strong conviction of the league that games should be won and lost on the playing field – not through technicalities of the rules." He retired at the end of that season. Son Andy became GM of the Minnesota Twins, president of the Chicago Cubs and president of baseball operations of the Orioles. From the next generation, Andy MacPhail IV worked for the Cleveland Indians and is a scout for the Orioles. The Hall said no services are planned and a memorial will be held later.

even his own political party when he believed in something strongly, a friend said Friday.

"It was all about his district, all about his people, all about his strong beliefs. He would not waiver," former Worcester mayor and radio host Jordan Levy said.

Early, who served in the U.S. House from 1975 to 1993, died Friday at his Worcester home after a brief illness. He was 79.

A spokesman for Early's son, Worcester County District Attorney Joseph Early Jr., confirmed the former congressman's death.

Early's political career started in 1962, when he won a state legislative race by a narrow margin. He then served six terms as a state representative from 1963 to 1974.

Before politics, the Worcester native served in the Navy for two years and worked as a Massachusetts high school teacher and coach.

As a student at College of the Holy Cross, he played for the 1954 squad that won the NIT basketball championship.

Following a House banking scandal involving bounced checks, Early lost his seat in the U.S. House in 1992 to Shrewsbury ReSurvivors include his wife, Marilyn, eight children and 23 grandchildren.

When officials dedicated a post office in his hometown in his honor about a decade ago, Early said he enjoyed the thought of his grandchildren passing by the building in years to come and knowing it had his name.

ORIGINAL MEMBER OF THE TUSKEGEE AIRMEN DIES AT 95

TUSKEGEE, Ala. (AP) • 1969.

Retired Lt. Col. Herbert Eugene Carter, one of the original Tuskegee Airmen who broke color barriers in World War II, has died after a long career in aviation and education.

Tuskegee Mayor Johnny Ford said Carter died Thursday afternoon at East Alabama Medical Center in nearby Opelika. He was 95.

The Tuskegee Airmen were the first black aviators in the U.S. military. During World War II they were trained as a segregated unit in central Alabama at Tuskegee Institute, now Tuskegee University. Carter was in the first group that trained for the 99th Fighter Squadron.

After being admitted to the Army Air Corps, they were prohibited from fighting alongside white counterparts and faced severe prejudice, yet went on to become one of World War II's most respected fighter squadrons, successfully escorting countless bombers during the war.

Carter flew 77 missions and crashed landed only once.

After the war, Carter served as a professor of air science and Air Force ROTC commander at Tuskegee University from 1950-1955 and as professor of aerospace studies from 1965"He fought for freedom from tyranny internationally and for freedom from discrimination at home in America. His commitment to excellence and determination to succeed will set the standard for the next generations of Tuskegee Airmen," university President Gilbert L. Rochon said Friday.

Last year, Carter was one of Tuskegee Airmen who helped producer George Lucas celebrate the opening of his movie about the pilots, "Red Tails."

"It's a wonderful feeling that finally there is some recognition that's being done in a manner that is credible to the Tuskegee Airmen," Carter said at the time.

According to the Tuskegee Airmen National Historical Museum in Detroit, 992 African-American pilots graduated from training at Tuskegee Army Air Field between 1942 and 1946. Fewer than 100 are still alive, museum President Brian Smith said Friday.

Smith said Carter enjoyed telling the story of the famed aviators. "It's a piece of history that is silent now," he said.

Carter's wife, Mildred Hemmons Carter, was also a pilot. She died in October 2011. He moved to the Baltimore Orioles as general manager in 1959 and six

DEAR ABBY: My daughter, "Renee," is 25 and is an intelligent and independent woman with a good job. She has been in a relationship with her boyfriend, "Bryan," for 6 1/2 years. They have been living together for the past two years.

Bryan is nice and has a decent job, and I like him. However, there is virtually no conversation between them about what their future together holds. Renee would like to get engaged, but she refuses to bring anything up to Bryan for fear that he will feel "pushed." She wants it to happen with no prodding. I maintain that it's perfectly acceptable to ask where he sees their relationship going.

At this point, I'd like to take Bryan aside and say that I love my daughter and would like to know what his intentions are. Is that totally inappropriate in this day and age? I worry she may be throwing away her best years on a dead-end relationship.

I know Renee would not be happy if I approached Bryan with this. Should I just keep my mouth shut and let her handle it?

– MAMA ON AMISSION

DEAR MAMA: You are well-meaning, but this is one mission your daughter must complete for herself. Please tell her that after a relationship of six years - and living together for two of them – having a rational discussion with Bryan would not be "pushy." In fact, it's the intelligent thing to do. He may have commitment issues. Or he may need the "nudge." And frankly, if the romance is leading nowhere, Renee needs to know that an engagement to him is not in her future before she invests any more time.

DEAR ABBY: My niece is engaged to a really nice guy who is obviously gay and in denial because of his religion. My brother and his wife ignore it because, according to them, being gay is a "sin." This couple has been out of high school for two years. They are also both virgins, which is unusual.

I had a gathering at my home, and some gay friends attended. They noticed that he was gay and mentioned it to me. Should I just stand by and keep my mouth shut?

- UNSURE IN NEW JERSEY

DEAR UNSURE: Yes, you should. Unless you are 100 percent sure the man is, in fact, gay, you should keep your feelings to yourself. Your niece's fiance may be an effeminate straight man. And your gay friends' "gaydar" may have given them a false reading at your gathering.

DEAR ABBY: I have developed a horrible crush on my kids' tennis instructor. I am very happily married and would never, ever cheat on my husband, but this man makes my heart race. My kids and I spend a fair amount of time with him, and I'm afraid it's starting to show.

By the way, I'm pretty sure my feelings are reciprocated. What to do?

- CRUSHING MOM IN THE SOUTH DEAR CRUSHING MOM:

It's not a question of what you should do, but rather what you should NOT do. Do not act on your feelings, do not spend time alone with him and do not tell anyone about it. Enjoy feeling like you are 16, and take your kids home after their lesson. In time, the feeling will fade particularly if they develop an interest in another sport.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

"Time has no flight — 'tis we who speed along; The days and nights are but the same as when The earth awoke with the first rush of song " — Thomas Collier

In today's deal, South played too fast and suffered the consequences. He didn't see the danger to his contract of four hearts when the defenders led and continued spades. He ruffed, then drew three rounds of trump, expecting them to break, or hoping that East has the long trump, in which case there would be no danger.

When West turned up with four hearts, South could do nothing else but try to build the tricks he needed by knocking out the diamond ace. However, the damage had already been done. East won the diamond ace and returned a spade, leaving West with the 13th trump and two master spades ready to cash.

By contrast, compare the strategy of ducking the second trick, pitching a small club. You will then ruff the third spade, stripping East of that suit. Now you draw three rounds of trump to find the bad news, but can then simply draw the last trump and knock out the diamond ace.

The difference between this position and the former one is that East no longer has a spade to lead. So he must lead back a minor suit, and your hand is high.

While you would have gone down if West had five spades, the fourth trump and the diamond ace, there was nothing you could have done in that position. Accordingly, you might as well try to make your contract whenever it is possible.

IF NOVEMBER 10 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: You may feel invincible during the next several weeks and this may give an advantage over more timid souls. Find suitable outlets for excess energy. By late December, however, your competiveness may cause you to promise more than you can deliver or take unnecessary risks. Late April or the first half of May are the best times to put crucial plans into motion or ask for favors. Lady Luck may shower you with blessings, but be sure that you do not take her kindness for granted. If you really need something, the cosmos will deliver it or at least provide the tools to achieve your aims.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Loose change adds up. You might be aggressive about making money work on vour own behalf. Matters of love and affection thrive, especially when you remember to employ understanding and tact.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Play follow the leader. Those in close connection will know how to grease the wheels of commerce or how to get things done. Follow their example or put plans into play and wait for support.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Tasty temptations make your mouth water. A box of chocolates might ruin your diet. You might find the perfect new outfit at the mall or a fascinating and attractive hookup in the express lane.
